A QUICK READ OF THE NEWS

Fireworks spook yaks

A Fourth of July fireworks display was just too much for three yearling yaks, who went missing during the Kalispell, Mont., celebration.

"The fireworks were just too loud," owner Rob Myers said. "It blew them right through a fence."

Half a dozen friends and family members were still helping Myers search the heavily wooded terrain Wednesday evening.

The yaks had been spotted in someone's yard after the fireworks, but no one knew where the animals belonged.

Myers recently bought the yaks as breeding stock. "You don't want to know what I paid for them," he said.

Towers mimic saguaros

Cellular telephone companies have disguised transmission towers as pine trees and hidden them in church steeples, but the latest camouflage has a decidedly Arizona twist: Several Phoenix-area towers are being built inside giant fake saguaro cactuses.

US West built the first along the Carefree Highway in 1998 and now Fountain Hills is asking AT&T to copy the technology for two new towers in town.

Sprint also will incorporate the design on a future tower.

Disguising the towers is a response to complaints by residents who think plain towers are plain ugly.

In Fountain Hills' case, the city council suggested the tower be dressed up as a cactus and built on a ridge so it would need to be only 25 feet tall.

The faux cacti are designed to blend with real ones, with sun-blotched paint, spiny arms and holes similar to woodpecker burrows.

They're made of fiberglass and cost $30,000 to $40,000.

Sheriff Plott quits, effective immediately

JOURNAL STAFF REPORT

Bailey County Sheriff Coy Plott resigned Thursday effective at midnight that day.

Texas Ranger Sgt. Dusty McChord, who is heading an investigation into possible misappropriation of funds in Plott's office, said Friday that he had discussed the sheriff's situation with Plott but that the resignation was not at the suggestion of the Texas Rangers and might be only partly motivated by the investigation.

The Bailey County Commissioners' Court meets at 10 a.m. Monday and will discuss appointing a replacement to serve out Plott's term, which expires at the end of the year. He had no opponent in the November general election.

Plott was appointed to the office by commissioners when former Sheriff Jerry Hicks retired.

Asked Friday whether the county would seek to consolidate city and county law enforcement under one administrator, County Judge Marilyn Cox said, "No."

Referring to rumors that such a plan would be put forward, she said, "I can understand how the community might think that, when they see city police cars parked around the sheriff's office. The city will help us out for the next few days, just as the county has helped the city before."

Cottonseed payments in pipeline

SPECIAL TO THE JOURNAL

Long awaited and sometimes doubted, the 1999 Cottonseed Assistance Program is finally a done deal.

Official announcement of the $79 million program was made by the U.S. Department of Agriculture on Friday.

According to Lubbock-based Plains Cotton Growers officials, the final payment rate — after all applications were filed — figured out to be $12.23 per ton of seed. Per-bale figures will vary based on the average bale weight at individual gin locations.

Area-wide, the average running bale weight was calculated at 490 pounds. Based on this weight, the cottonseed payment rate would come to about $4.77 per bale.

The payments will be made via direct deposit and should be at their final destinations by the close of business July 10.

The payment rate was determined using a five-year average seed-to-lint ratio of 159 percent.

Gins were asked to report the total pounds of lint ginned in 1999 for use in computing the amount of seed that payments would be made on.

A total of 1,012 gins participated in the program. Beltwide, only six gin locations, four USDA labs and two private labs opted out of the program.

Congressman visits area cotton growers

SPECIAL TO THE JOURNAL

Rep. Larry Combest, chairman of the U.S. House Agriculture Committee, paid a visit Friday to the offices of Lubbock-based Plains Cotton Growers.

The congressman visited with PCG President Ronnie Hopper, Vice President Mark Williams (of Farwell), Secretary-Treasurer Rickey Bearden, Board Chairman Don Langston and several staff members about a number of issues.

The growers' contingent discussed a number of issues with Combest, including cottonseed assistance and implementation of his newly approved crop-insurance reform package.

Combest and the growers' representatives also talked about what ideas needed to be explored in regard to the future of the farm program after expiration of the Freedom to Farm Act in 2002.

Combest said the nationwide series of farm-bill hearings conducted by his committee over the past several months had unearthed a surprisingly strong level of support for the basics of the Freedom to Farm program.

Among the strongest sentiments expressed was the need for a better safety net for times of extreme price declines or natural disaster.

White grubs need attention, Preston says

SPECIAL TO THE JOURNAL

Bailey County residents who want to protect their lawns need to keep a close lookout now for white grubworms, Extension agent Curtis Preston advises.

May or June beetles have been emerging from the soil and swarming in lawns in the evening, he said. Females have laid eggs that have hatched into white grubs.

These grubworms are beginning to feed on roots of home lawn grasses, Preston said.

"Once grubs begin feeding, control measures should be taken," he added.

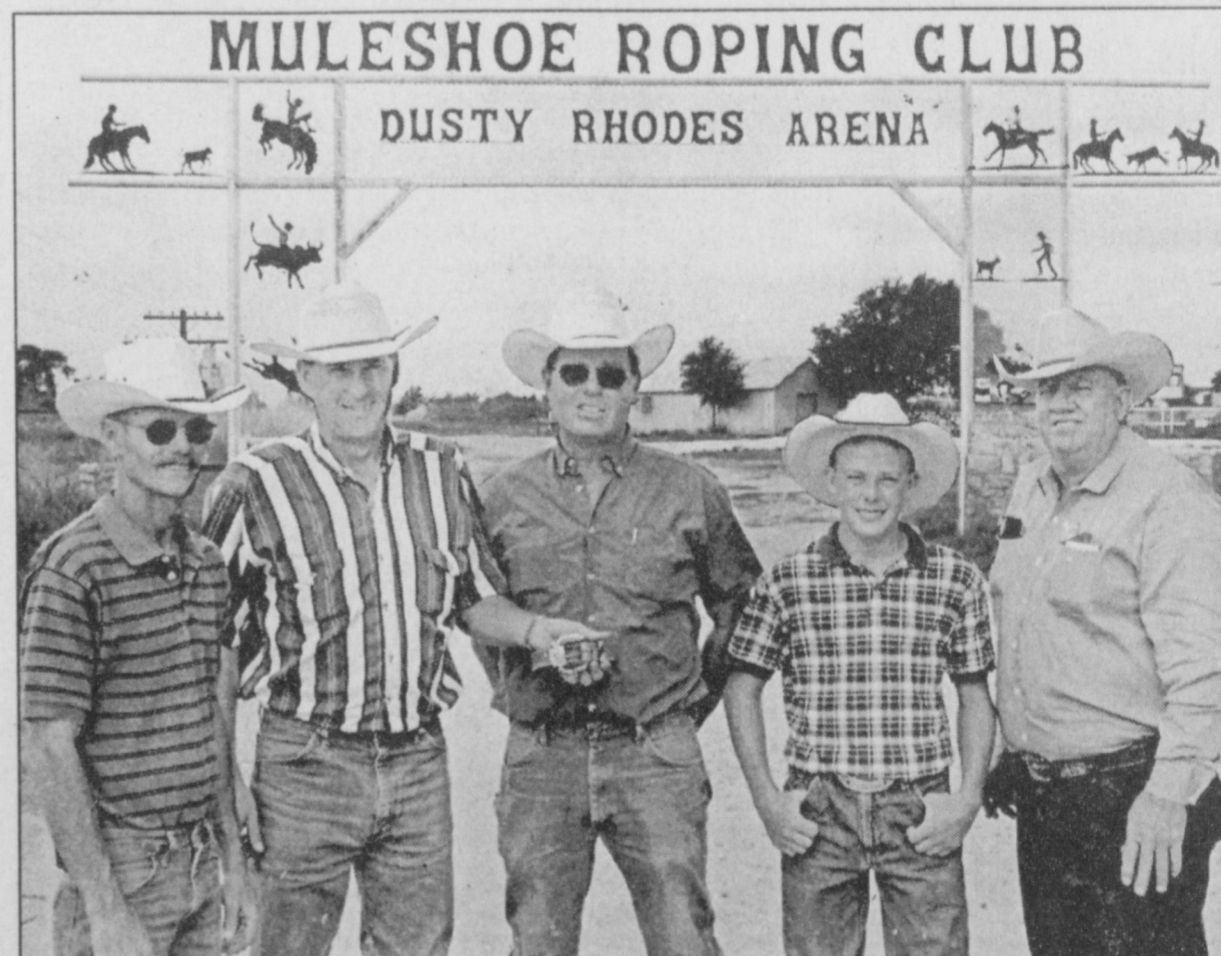

Treatment time varies with the area of the state.

Homeowners on the South Plains need to treat between mid-July and early August, Preston said. The timing of chemical applications is critical for adequate control of the grubs.

White grubs in excessive numbers can heavily damage lawns. Check for the pests by cutting a square-foot section of sod with a shovel and examining the roots and soil to a depth of 4 inches. Examine at least one square foot of sod for each 1,000 square feet of lawn, Preston advised.

Alternately, he said, examine nine to 16 3/4-inch

New cancer study aimed at Hispanics

SPECIAL TO THE JOURNAL
HOUSTON — Baylor University's College of Medicine will take the lead on one of the nation's most comprehensive initiatives in the fight against cancer in the country's Hispanic populations.

The five-year program, Redes en Accion: Cancer Training, Research and Awareness, will be directed by Dr. Amelie Ramirez, associate professor of medicine and deputy director of the Chronic Disease Prevention and Control Research Center at Baylor.

The goal of Redes en Accion (Networks in Action) is to develop a broad-based coalition of cancer research centers, community-based organizations and federal partners to foster a national infrastructure for Hispanic cancer prevention and control activities.

"This is a milestone event — a major commitment to setting, prioritizing and effecting an agenda of cancer issues impacting Hispanics all over the country," said Ramirez, principal investigator.

In addition to developing regional networks, Redes en Accion will establish training and research for Hispanics, and develop pilot projects on cancer issues affecting Hispanics.

Also participating as partners in the program are the National Hispanic Medical Association and the Cancer Information Service in San Francisco, Houston, Miami and New York.

"Redes en Accion represents the most ambitious effort ever to draw upon the expertise of local, regional and national groups and work together to reduce the burden of cancer among Latino populations," Ramirez said.

Not all species of willows have to be banned from yards

By RONN SMITH
Editor

Most people are by now knowledgeable enough about the weeping willows to avoid planting them in small yards.

Granted, they can be some of the most beautiful of all trees, but they are usually disastrous if planted where their prying roots can reach sewer lines — or water lines, if there is a joint involved.

Also, these trees get so big that they can easily overpower a small city yard. In the country, where they can be planted at some distance from underground lines, they can be spectacular — if not especially long-lived.

But the willow family (Salix) has about 250 members, with as many as 75 of them growing wild in North America.

They vary from groundcover plants only a few inches tall up to the various species that include weeping varieties. Some of the biggest can be 100 feet tall and quite broad.

One interesting branch of the family is the pussy willows. Now, I'm not going to tell you that these are always the most desirable of large shrubs or small trees — in fact, the true pussy willow (Salix discolor) is a lousy choice and should be avoided, although it is sometimes offered for sale at bargain prices.

The fact is that the true pussy willow is too susceptible to disease to be worth fooling with — especially when there are similar species that are less susceptible.

Quite similar is the goat willow (Salix caprea), which is sold as pussy willow. This would properly be characterized as a small tree, at 15 or 20 feet tall and 12 to 15 feet across.

The single reason for growing them is the catkins that form on branches in the spring. These are fuzzy, mainly gray, ovals up to half an inch long. They're not only attractive on the plant but are excellent for cutting — and even forcing, meaning that they can be cut very early in the spring before they "fluff out," and placed indoors to finish.

A radically weeping form of this species makes a distinctive groundcover when the catkins are present. It is known as the Kilmarnock willow or sometimes as Weeping Sally.

Considerably smaller (to maybe 10 feet high) and with more attractive catkins is the rosegold pussy willow (Salix gracilistyla). This species has catkins twice the size of the former, and their gray color is suffused with pink or red. This is very handsome when the catkins are present.

Also fairly common and very dramatic is the black pussy willow (Salix gracilistyla var. melanostachys), a 10-foot shrub that is a real eye-popper in early spring. The common name is not an exaggeration — in fact, it doesn't do the catkins justice. They are indeed black, and as they mature, red stamens begin to protrude from the black.

The giant pussy willow (Salix chaenomeloides) also looks just like it sounds: The catkins are 3 inches long, dwarfing the usual pussy willows. The buds are a sort of reddish color before they open, but emerge as a silvery white with pinkish overtones.

Needless to say, this is an attractive willow when in "bloom," and at 20 feet tall it is very noticeable in early spring.

Then we come to real royalty: Sometimes called "magnificent willow" but mostly without a common name in English, Salix magnifica has erect catkins up to 8 inches long. It is so unbelievable that the first European to see it in bloom reportedly thought he had discovered a species of magnolia.

This species has a little more problem with our climate than most willows because its leaves are large and subject to wind damage. A sheltered place would be advisable in growing it.

Not in any way similar to the pussy willows but of tremendous interest to floral arrangers is the Japanese fantail willow (Salix sakalinensis 'Sekka'). This also is a big shrub (to 15 feet tall occasionally), and its uniqueness lies in its stems, which are curled and twisted in the manner of some other shrubs — but these are also flattened. In the best specimens, the stems can be up to 6 inches across, so with their curled effect there really isn't anything else like them.

When planting any willow, it's good to be aware of the roots and plant away from sewer lines. It's also good to know that they are fast-growing, weak-wooded plants, so there is going to be pruning involved. But, in the case of pussy willows, the pruning would be good anyway to produce a good crop of catkins. Happy planting!

Portions of Texas still facing drought

SPECIAL TO THE JOURNAL
AUSTIN — Rainfall throughout June strengthened crops across the state, but an agronomist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service says drought conditions continue to prevail over much of the state.

"Two-thirds of the state is still in one level or another of drought," agronomist Travis Miller said.

Miller and other members of the Texas Drought Preparedness Council met Thursday for their monthly drought update.

According to weather forecast models, seasonal patterns of dry weather will continue throughout the summer in Texas.

"From the weather models I've seen, they are predicting near normal conditions," Miller said. "Of course, summer in Texas means dry. Even if you get rainfall in these really hot conditions, it doesn't last long. It dries out quickly."

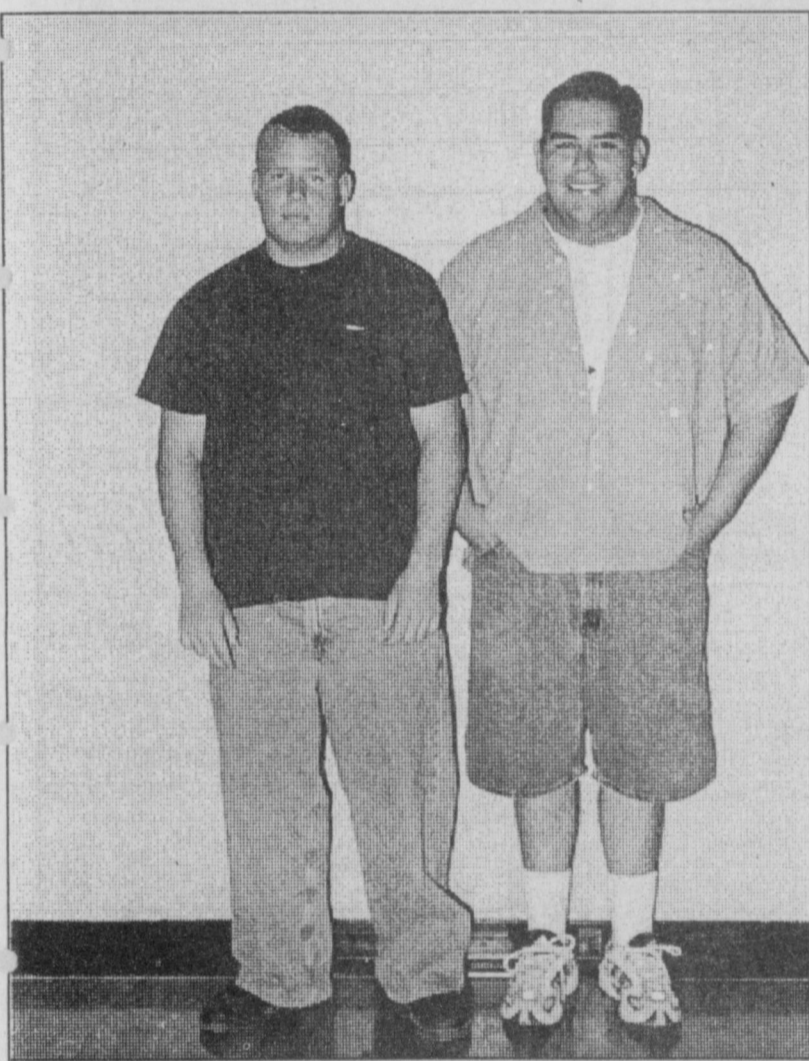

The Palmer Drought Severity Index, an index that factors in precipitation, evaporation and soil moisture, indicates the Edwards Plateau region of the state is in a severe drought, while South Central, South Texas and the Trans-Pecos regions are experiencing only moderate drought.

The North Central and Rolling Plains regions are in mild drought, while much of the High Plains is experiencing a wet spell. Near-normal conditions prevail in East Texas.

"June rains were beneficial to West Texas," Miller said. "San Angelo received 4 1/2 inches in June and Abilene received 4 inches. That improved a lot of things as farmers were able to plant cotton with that moisture in the ground. The plains received a lot of rain as well, but you have to consider that those farmers didn't get their cotton planted until late in the season because there just wasn't any moisture. They're going to have to have a good fall to make a good cotton crop."

The state's wheat harvest, much of which has been delayed by rain, is expected to be 70 million bushels, down from 122 million in 1999 and 136 million in 1998. Considerable amounts of wheat have been destroyed recently by violent storms.

Participants are sought for annual Cannonfest

SPECIAL TO THE JOURNAL

Flea-market and food vendors, classic car and motorcycle owners, and local entertainers are being recruited for the annual Cannonfest, one of the biggest events each year at Cannon Air Force Base near Clovis.

This year's event is scheduled for Aug. 26 at Doc Stewart Park in the Chávez Manor area outside the base's main gate.

Open to the public, the celebration will feature 12 hours of food and entertainment as well as shopping opportunities.

Cannonfest 2000 will include a classic car and motorcycle show; a flea market; golf, softball, volleyball and flag football tournaments; bingo; a medieval presentation; pony rides; and a number of demonstrations and displays.

The day will culminate with a performance by Tops in Blue, the Air Force's premier entertainment group.

Applications are being accepted from flea-market vendors. A 12'x12' space can be reserved for $18. Participants must furnish their own shade, tables and chairs. Those interested are asked to contact Pat Grah at (505) 784-6381.

Applications from non-profit organizations are being accepted for food and beverage concessions. The cost per space is $35 plus the services of a volunteer for four hours to help clean up the area at the end of the day.

Those organizations not wishing to provide a cleanup volunteer pay a flat fee of $50.

Anyone interested in a food or beverage space is asked to contact Jeff Gardner at (505) 784-2773.

Entry fees for the car and motorcycle show, which offers trophies in various categories, are $20 per vehicle. Anyone interested is asked to call Kurt Giddings at (505) 784-2170.

Entertainers interested in participating are asked to call Grah at (505) 784-6381.

Be Careful Whose Promises You Trust

The phone rang at the house the other evening for the umpteenth time. We were in a hurry to get ready to go to one of the most recent end-of-school activities, but we weren't out the door yet, and the phone caught us.

We're also at that stage of life where phone calls at our house are rarely for Mom or satisfied, I'd get to keep the coverage at a really wonderful price.

Hmm. We needed to leave, so I passed up this really wonderful offer pretty quickly. (If we'd all adopt the policy that we buy nothing that's hawked over the phone, we might have some hope of reclaiming "our" phones and more of our time.)

But I'd hardly hung up when I began to wonder. The devil's in the details, you know.

It seems to me that the only way to really adequately test your satisfaction with an accidental death policy is to, well, uh, accidentally die. And if you plan to test the policy ahead of time, that poses a bit of a problem since that sort of death is really ill-advised and hardly accidental. If by some stroke of amazing luck I really did happen to die really accidentally during that three month trial period, well, I suppose I'd be way ahead financially. But I would like to ask those folks what provisions they'd made to get in touch with me to see how satisfied I was with their service.

I see problems with this. I have a hard time trusting folks who, it seems to me, make promises they can't possibly keep. I'm thankful we serve a God who has never once failed to keep His.

But it was good news. Wonderful news, in fact, according to the disembodied voice on the other end of the line. I had been approved to receive for a free 90-day trial period $100,000 in accidental death insurance.

And the news got even better. If I wasn't completely satisfied at the end of the 90 days, all I had to do was tell them to cancel the policy. But if I was

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

ONE OF DAVID'S MIGHTY MEN!

ABISHAI WAS A SON OF DAVID'S HALF SISTER ZERUIAH, BROTHER OF ASAHEL AND JOAB, KING DAVID'S GENERAL (II SAM. 2:18). IT WAS ABISHAI WHO STOLE INTO KING SAUL'S CAMP IN THE DEAD OF NIGHT WITH DAVID AND FOUND SAUL AND HIS SOLDIERS ALL ASLEEP! (I SAM. 26:5-9) HE SERVED, ALWAYS BRAVELY, UNDER HIS BROTHER JOAB, IN DAVID'S ARMY (II SAM. 2:18, 10:10) AND WHEN ABNER, SAUL'S GENERAL, WHO WAS FLEEING FROM THE BATTLE AT GIBEON AND WAS COMPELLED TO KILL ASAHEL, IN ORDER TO ESCAPE, BOTH ABISHAI AND JOAB PURSUED THEIR BROTHER'S KILLER, HOPING TO AVENGE HIM (II SAM. 2:18-24).

ABISHAI WAS ONE OF DAVID'S MIGHTY MEN WHO HAD "LIFTED UP HIS SPEAR AGAINST 300 AND SLAIN THEM" (II SAM. 23:18; CHRON. 11:20) HE ALSO DEFEATED THE EDOMITES IN THE VALLEY OF SALT, HE AND HIS MEN SLAYING 18,000 AND GARRISONING THEIR COUNTRY (I CHRON. 18:12, 13)

A Great July 4th Celebration

Familiar sights in Muleshoe's Fourth of July parades include (clockwise from below right) the high school cheerleaders; retiree Hubert Kidd, the "quick draw" artist who managed to photograph the photographer photographing him; Andrew Santos driving for Higginbotham-Bartlett with his "escort vehicles"; and the Muleshoe Fire Department crew.
