Satellite changes cattle sale Legislation for DSGH changes is introduced

By JOHN BROOKS
Managing Editor
The sale ring will open at Schlabs-Hysinger in the Agri-Sciences Building on West Park Avenue in Hereford at 11 a.m. Thursday.
10,000 head of cattle, from young calves to 700-pounders, will parade through, open to any buyer ready to get into the market.
None of the cattle will be in the building, during the sale, some of the cattle will be in Texas. Some will be in Montana, some in Mississippi, some in points between.
They're all going to be on satellite. The sale will be conducted by Satellite Cattle Exchange, headed by Ronnie Mahaley of Amarillo.
Through a series of other brokers and agents scattered across the country, the company solicits cattle for the sale just like an order buyer goes through the country, looking for cattle in the field or a starter feedlot ready for sale to the next step up the ladder.
"With all of the other advances in the cattle industry, the way we sell cattle hasn't advanced much," said Mahaley as he adjusted his official American Quarter Horse Association Stetson. "We use all kinds of modern technology to raise tons and tons of beef."
"If we could bring back someone from 100 years ago and show 'em how we raise cattle, they wouldn't believe it. But we still sell cattle the same way."
"It's still, 'How much you gonna gimme?'"

The satellite cattle auction combines the best of all worlds for the buyer and the seller.
For the buyer, the cattle aren't moved off of the feed, whether its pasture or a feeding operation, and that saves dollars and headaches.
"Even if you take them to a sale ring close by, you're still out two or three days shipping and pen time," said David Schaeffer of Dimmitt, who is involved in the cattle feeding business. "You're going to lose a little when you have to take them to a sale ring somewhere."
"It's good for the buyer, too. You don't have to be out three or four days a week going from sale to sale, or even going out to the country. You can sit right there in your home or office, watch what you want, and bid on the cattle you want to bid on."
Once the agents or brokers have firmed up a deal with a seller, a videotaping crew goes to where the cattle are to tape them for the sale.
"Some people just use a VHS camera or something," Mahaley said. "We use state-of-the-art equipment to record those cattle. We try to present them as well as is possible."
"If it's done right, you get the confirmation and see just exactly what the cattle look like." He points to a nearby TV monitor, where a tape is rolling raw footage of some cattle that were taped Tuesday morning near Farwell.

"Now lookit that," Mahaley said. "I guarantee you if a fly flew off of that steer, you'd see it."
You can take average cattle, do a good production job, describe them as best as you possibly can, and get a top price. You can take the best cattle you can find, and if you do a halfway-good job, you're only going to get an average price.
At an auction like the one coming up Thursday, viewers will not only see the cattle roll by, they'll see the agent who made the deal for the company, the cattle owner, the auctioneer and a telephone bank where operators are taking bids over the phone.
Mahaley cuts no corners. He uses Kenny Wilcox of Amarillo, a former world champion auctioneer who is in the running for that honor again this year.
"You see the auctioneer there live, and you see those telephones going in the background," Mahaley said. "That way you know you don't just have someone bumping you up on the telephone."
"Sometimes it's exciting to watch those telephones going, with people from all over the United States, maybe even from Canada or Mexico, biddin' on cattle."
Mahaley tells a story of a seller from New Mexico who had a set of calves and a set of steers in one recent satellite sale.
"He sold his calves to his neighbor, and he sold the steers to a guy from Indiana," Mahaley said. "I got the neighbors together later, and neither one of them knew that their neighbor was interested in the calves.

"And how would he know that some guy in Indiana would be interested in his steers?"
"You see, we can find a market for the cattle. There's always someone out there somewhere who's lookin' to buy cattle. The market might be soft over here, but they might be needin' these steers in Iowa or Nebraska or somewhere."
Usually, he can find a good price for them, too.
"First off, we take the middle guy out of it, so the consignor is going to make all the money he can," Mahaley said. "And sometimes it gets pretty heated when they're biddin'. We've got 30 telephones in that phone bank, and people will be on there biddin' 'em up."
"And you don't know who you're biddin' against. It might be your neighbor, it might be some guy 500 miles away. If a couple of guys get on there and they both want the same lot, it can drive the price up."
"And I think the confidentiality is important in this. Heck, I'm sittin' there and all I know is a buyer number. Those guys biddin', they don't even know that. It keeps guys from monopolizing things like they can at a sale ring."
Mahaley claims very few non-sales with a 98.5 percent sale rate. "With the experience we've had with the concept, highly-trained agents that know how to describe these cattle to the fullest, and showing these cattle in the very best manner, we're able to sell what we get," Mahaley said.
"And we have the respect of the buyers. They trust us with our descriptions, and they know it's going to be right on every time."
While sale rings and order buying are still flourishing, Mahaley feels satellite auctions will take a bigger cut of the cattle-selling market in the future.
"The only thing that's holding us back now is that we don't have enough cattle, or feedyards would do all of their buying by satellite," Mahaley said. "I think the more aggressive order buyers will be hooking up with satellite companies in the future."
"And it helps with risk management. In these times, that's the name of the game. Video auctions are another form of risk management, just like the futures market."
"None of us are smart enough to know what the cattle market is every minute. We've got other things to do besides sit there and watch the market. You can be out there in the pasture with an order buyer, and you don't know what the market is doing at that moment, and neither does the order buyer."
"If you're watching it live on the satellite, you know exactly what the market is right now for these cattle. Both sides are protected, and it's best for everybody."

State Rep. John Smithee has introduced a bill in the Texas Legislature to make several changes in the enabling legislation of the Deaf Smith County Hospital District.
"The original legislation was pretty strict," Smithee said this morning in Austin. "This will update the legislation and allow the hospital to branch out into other health care-related fields."
The hospital board was approached last year with a proposal to buy or lease the building at Fourth and Miles Streets that formerly housed The Hereford Clinic.
Although the board listed other reasons for not considering the acquisition, the board was prevented, by its enabling legislation, from considering the building.
The bill introduced today would allow the district to do work and operate facilities at sites other than Deaf Smith General Hospital, including providing facilities for and managing physicians' offices.
The bill would also loosen up bidding requirements for hospital purchases, and would streamline the procedures for persons wanting to run for the hospital board.
Another change would allow the district to more freely spend its funds for recruitment of doctors, nurses and other workers, and for training and retraining of personnel.

Worker comp bill passes House

AUSTIN (AP) - A bill overhauling the state's workers' compensation system now goes to the Senate where it may be overhauled itself.
House Speaker Gib Lewis said a special session may be needed to iron out differences between the workers' comp bill approved Tuesday in the House, and expected Senate changes to the legislation.
The House approved the 200-page workers' comp bill after nearly seven hours of debate, 117-27.
"I think there is a good possibility we could go into a special session. That is one of the issues that could take us into a special session," Lewis, D-Fort Worth, said.
"If the Senate weakens the bill ... I don't think we will accept a weak bill," he said.
The bill's author, Rep. Richard Smith, R-Bryan, said he doesn't have a Senate sponsor for the bill yet. He said he expects the Senate to produce a substitute version of the bill.
Smith was pleased with House approval of his bill.
"I'm delighted with the way the bill went," he said. "We didn't have any crippling amendments. The amendments that went on in regard to rates I think were productive and helpful."

During debate, the House approved decreasing workers' compensation premiums by 15 percent over three years, but a provision tacked onto the rollback will guarantee the decrease will never take effect, opponents said.
The rate reduction would be contingent on the State Board of Insurance finding such a decrease would be fair and reasonable. Some legislators argued the Insurance Board regularly sides with the insurance industry and would be incapable of making such a determination.
Moves to reinstate jury trials of disputed claims, without regard of previous administrative rulings, and repeated attempts to beef up job-related worker safety provisions failed.
Smith presented the bill as a balance between competing and powerful lobbies for insurance, business, doctors, lawyers and labor.
"The fact of the matter is you can not preserve the interests of five groups simultaneously. There has to be give and take," he said.
The bill would expand the oversight and regulatory powers of the state's administrative agency for workers' compensation, raise some benefits for injured workers and lessen court involvement in the adjudication of disputed claims.

Labor groups and attorneys who represent workers in injury lawsuits, however, claim the bill weakens the rights of injured workers to get just compensation for job-related injuries. They are expected to launch a tough campaign in the Senate to change the bill.
With Lewis behind the bill, and dozens of co-sponsors, most amendments opposed by Smith fell by the wayside.
The major battles during House debate were on adding worker-safety provisions and reinstating a procedure by which a disputed claim goes to state district court without regard to previous administrative rulings.
"We appear eager to turn our backs on the Texas Constitution and particularly the Texas Bill of Rights," said Rep. David Cain, D-Dallas.
But Smith argued most states have removed this procedure - called trial de novo. Smith's bill would allow courts to only decide whether the previous administrative decision was fair.

Rep. Al Granoff, D-Dallas, tried several times to amend the bill to tighten safety guidelines for employers. "I think it's sad that a workers' compensation reform bill has less than one percent of its copy dedicated to safety," he said.
But Smith argued these guidelines were already in the bill.
Smith, however, suffered a defeat when a proposed $1.3 million per year workers' comp research center at Texas A&M University was shot down in dramatic fashion when one of the House's most conservative and veteran legislators dubbed the facility "pork barrel." A&M is in Smith's district.
"I'm disappointed that the research center became an issue," Smith said and promised "to try to find some way to settle that problem maybe later in the session."
Rep. Steve Wolens, D-Dallas, opposed the bill, saying it would not reduce workers' comp premiums, which have increased nearly 150 percent since 1984. In addition, he said the bill would create a new bureaucracy costing $40 million to $60 million per year and entail the hiring of an additional 900 employees.

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) - Former "Dallas" star Victoria Principal plans to begin filming a new television series in which she will play the mayor of a Southwestern city.

Nationwide study finds lifestyle, health related

People who regularly use artificial sweeteners are not the ones who tend to lose weight. Sleeping exactly seven hours per night may mean a longer life. Vitamins A and C are very important to the body's immune system. Staying out of the sun is the best way to avoid skin cancer.

These are just a few of the findings from an extensive nationwide study looking at lifestyles and health.

Although the study is being conducted by the American Cancer Society, persons filling out the extensive questionnaires since 1982 do not all have cancer, according to Maria Buckles, unit chairman for the study in Fort Worth and a professor of nursing at Texas Christian University.

"We were able to get a good cross section of participants so we could look at lifestyles in general to see if there was any correlation with a person's health," explained Buckles.

"One of the first findings from the study concerned diet," she said.

"The cancer society was able to identify five protective factors found among many people with good health. This included eating more vegetables in the cabbage family, increasing fiber intake, getting enough of vitamins A and C, maintaining your weight and staying away from foods high in fat or foods that are salt cured or smoked."

The next major education focus, set to begin this year, will deal with the importance of protecting skin from the sun, Buckles added.

Up to 11 full hides are used in the interior of every Rolls-Royce motor car, with the leather coming from animals pastured behind electrified fences rather than barbed wire to prevent abrasions and scratches.

BRASILIA, Brazil (AP) - British rock star Sting announced the start of a worldwide campaign to raise funds for creation of South America's largest native Indian reservation.

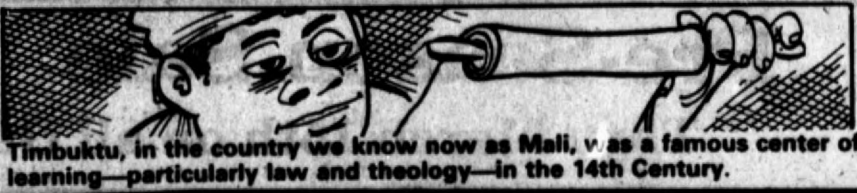

Sting, along with Indian chiefs Raoni and Megaron of the Trukahama tribe, has created the Virgin Forest foundation that will financially support a government Indian agency's efforts to expand a reserve.

The reserve, which covers 6.18 million acres inhabited by 2,700 Indians in 17 tribes, would be enlarged by nearly 29 million acres.

The rock singer said Wednesday the foundation would be apolitical.

"We don't want to interfere in the country's internal affairs," Sting said.

Herd stampedes by Dunbar, 11-1

Jason Scott pitched a five-hitter and the Whitefaces binged out 13 hits as defending 1-4A baseball champion Hereford opened league action Tuesday at Lubbock with a 11-1 win over Dunbar's Panthers.

Scott, 2-0 on the young season, got all the cushion he would need in the top of the fourth frame when Roger McCracken blasted a solo home run over the rightfield fence to break a 1-1 tie. Hereford is 1-0 in district play and 3-1 for the season.

Scott and Dunbar's John Herrera were locked in a pitching duel for five innings but the Herd broke it open by scoring nine runs over the last two frames. Scott retired 12 of the last 14 batters he faced. The senior right-hander struck out 11 and walked just three while going the route.

After McCracken's homer put Hereford ahead by 2-1 in the fourth, the Herd scored another run in the sixth. Consecutive singles by Russell Backus, Clint Cotten and Keith Brown and a wild pitch by Herrera plated the run. Hereford sent 13 batters to the plate in the seventh and a pair of two-run singles by Backus and pinch-hitter

George Jowell helped the Herd score eight runs.

Dunbar's lone run in the third inning came when centerfielder Donnie Hines walked, stole second and came home on a single by Arturo Rodriguez. The loss left Dunbar at 0-1 in district and 2-3 for the season.

Herrera, 1-1, held Hereford in check for six innings, striking out 10 and issuing only three walks before the Whitefaces broke it open in the seventh.

The Whitefaces are entered in the Dumas Tournament this weekend.

Mariners win fifth in spring baseball

By The Associated Press

The Seattle Mariners are missing a key player, but it's hardly been noticeable.

Shortstop Ray Quinones has refused to report to spring training without a contract and has remained in Puerto Rico.

But without Quinones, the Mariners have been perfect so far this spring, increasing their record to 5-0 Tuesday by defeating the San Francisco Giants 10-5.

The Mariners announced they have sent top scout Roger Jongeward and instructor Marty Martinez to Puerto Rico to search for Quinones, who was unhappy with his contract last season. The club said it hoped Jongeward and Martinez would return with Quinones to their Tempe, Ariz., training camp by the end of the week.

Jim Presley was the hitting star for Seattle against the Giants, going 3-for-5.

Elsewhere Tuesday, rain washed out five exhibition games in Florida: Houston vs. Boston, the New York Mets vs. Atlanta, Texas vs. Cincinnati, Montreal vs. Baltimore and Philadelphia vs. Minnesota.

In other games, it was Detroit 2, Pittsburgh 1; St. Louis 8, Toronto 3; Kansas City 8, the Chicago White Sox 3; California 9, Oakland 4; Cleveland 5, the Chicago Cubs 0; Milwaukee 3, San Diego 1; Los Angeles 7, the New York Yankees 0; and the White Sox 6, Cincinnati 5 in a split-squad game. Angels 9, Athletics 4.

At Phoenix, Jim Abbott, facing a big-league lineup for the first time, struck out Jose Canseco with two outs and runners on second and third as California defeated Oakland.

"He's legit," Canseco said. "Good fast ball, above average slider. He knows how to pitch."

Born without a right hand, Abbott gave up one hit, walked three batters and was slow fielding a potential double-play grounder, allowing a run to score. But he wound up the winning pitcher.

Indians 5, Cubs 0

At Tucson, Ariz., Mel Hall's two-run triple keyed a four-run fourth inning that led Cleveland over the Chicago Cubs.

DAD THE PUNTER

WARRENSBURG, Mo. (AP) — Dennis Farris, a punter for Central Missouri State last fall, was at 40 the oldest man on the squad by a number of years. He said the other players never gave any indication of the fact that he was old enough to be the father of all of them.

Farris, majoring in aviation, also is a jet-engine mechanic in the U.S. Marines. About the players, he said: "They never made me feel awkward despite the difference in our ages."

Ueberroth still has that 'Midas touch'

NEW YORK (AP) — They don't play baseball in Fort Knox. Peter Ueberroth just made it seem that way.

Ueberroth, the Goldfinger of the 1984 Los Angeles Olympics, kept his Midas touch during his four-year term as baseball commissioner. Major league baseball, a money-loser when he took office, made $209 million during his tenure and is on the verge of becoming a billion-dollar industry.

The 26 clubs posted their third consecutive profitable year in 1988, making a combined $100 million, according to a report prepared by the commissioner's office.

The report, based on preliminary figures, will be presented to owners Thursday and Friday in Fort Lauderdale, Fla. Details, however, were obtained last week by The Associated Press.

The clubs grossed a record $977 million during 1988, according to the figures, an increase of 7.4 percent from 1987. They had $877 million in operating expenses, an 8.7 percent increase. A record $322 million was spent on player salaries, according to a management study done last autumn.

In 1984, the year before Ueberroth took office, teams lost $40 million on revenues of $625 million, their 11th consecutive year of losses, according to management figures. In 1985 they lost $6 million and in 1986 they made $12 million.

In 1987 they made a record $103 million profit off revenues of $910 million. The figures are operating profits and do not include accounting deductions, such as depreciation.

For Ueberroth, it is his second great financial success in sports. As president of the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee, he took a project expected to lose millions and generated a $230 million profit.

However, the Major League Baseball Players Association claims that much of the baseball profits generated in the last four years resulted from a conspiracy by teams to hold down player salaries.

Arbitrators found owners guilty of collusion following the 1985 and 1986 seasons and a case covering the 1987 free agents is pending. Union economists said the conspiracy proven in the first two cases cost players as much as $90 million. Damages have not yet been determined.

"During his tenure, you have had an increase in revenues," said Don Fehr, players' association executive director, who believes owners have underestimated revenues.

"I can also tell you collusion is concurrent with his term. Would those revenues have occurred anyway? Or did he have a substantial part? I assume that the increases in revenue are not entirely divorced from the role he had to play."

Ueberroth, who last May refused a second term as commissioner, has said he does not know his future plans.

Ueberroth, through spokesman Rich Levin, declined to comment on baseball finances.

Johnson's coach testifies again

TORONTO (AP) — After five days of testimony about steroid use by Ben Johnson, the sprinter's coach says it's time to admit that illegal substances are pervasive in the top levels of international competition.

"We're awash in a sea of denials," coach Charlie Francis said Tuesday during testimony before the Canadian commission investigating drugs and athletics. "People have to recognize what's going on out there, admit the levels of performance are not possible without performance-enhancing drugs and get on with the process of trying to make some changes."

Francis has traced the decision to try steroids for Johnson to 1981 and said they were used to within weeks of the 1988 Olympics. The sprinter was stripped of his gold medal after a world record 9.79-second 100-meter dash because he tested positive for steroids.

But the coach concluded the sensational details of steroid use by Johnson and 12 other Canadian athletes for nearly a decade by saying that the only explanation for the positive test at Seoul was sabotage. Meanwhile, an Edmonton businessman has offered $10,000 to the person he believes spiked Johnson's drink in Seoul — provided the person testifies at the inquiry.

Hugh Burgess says he believes a story by Francis that a "Mr. X" slipped steroids into Johnson's drink after his record-setting run.

"I'm saying the mystery man at the Olympics or whoever he was that would have had access to Ben's drinking substances should make himself available to the inquiry and give his side of the story," Burgess said. "It would prove that on that day Ben was the fastest man in the world. It would prove he did it legally."

Francis said stanozolol, the substance for which Johnson tested positive, was last used in the spring 1987 training period, long before it could have been detected by the test after the race last Sept. 24.

Francis said repeatedly that the decision to use steroids despite their ban was made because of the need to stay competitive at the top levels of international performance where the prohibited substances are omnipresent.

He said, however, that it is a misconception to believe that Johnson was a chemical creation whose success can be dismissed as a product of steroids.

"Anabolics played a role, as they did with his competitors," Francis said. "I believe he was on a level playing field ... and he was winning."

"He is the best sprinter of all time. I'm convinced of that."

The coach is the first witness to appear at the track and field hearings called by the commission, which was formed after the Olympic scandal.

Romance, divorce of football recruit

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

The recruiting romance of Darren Krein was spirited, just as you would expect it to be for a blue-chip football player. The divorce, however, promises to be bitter.

When schools were pursuing him, Krein came under siege with the usual sea of phone calls and visits from assistant coaches. There were the requisite campus visits. He listened to the parade of head coaches, each selling his program, each sweet talking him, planting visions of national championships in his mind.

The finalists were Oklahoma, Arizona State, Colorado, Miami and Notre Dame, not a bad group for a football player to pick from.

Finally, the linebacker from Aurora, Colo. made his decision. He would go to the University of Miami and play the next four years for coach Jimmy Johnson. He signed the required letter of intent and was on his way to Coral Gables.

Unfortunately, Jimmy Johnson was on his way to Dallas.

This was not part of Krein's bargain. He signed with Miami because of Johnson. Now, almost before the ink was dry on the agreement, Johnson was gone, off to reconstruct the sagging fortunes of the NFL Cowboys.

And what about Darren Krein's fortunes?

He was left holding the letter of intent, which binds a student-athlete to the school with which he signs for at least one academic year.

He can ask for a release from his obligation - Miami already has said there would be none for its recruits - or he can leave without benefit of one. Leave without the release and Krein can play just two years in another program. Even with a release, he must surrender one year of eligibility.

Jimmy Johnson, however, can coach the Dallas Cowboys right now. This did not seem entirely fair to Darren Krein, who took his case to attorney Steven D. Dawson.

"We are reviewing our options," Dawson said. "A suit is one of them."

The letter of intent is not an NCAA program. It is administered instead by the Collegiate Commissioners Association and is an agreement by almost all of the nation's major schools that outlines the rights and obligations of recruits. The emphasis is on obligations.

The very first paragraph of the letter deals with any fancy ideas a recruit might have about changing his mind and trying to sign with another school. So does the 11th paragraph.

Fred Jacoby, commissioner of the Southwest Conference, explained the letter's rationale for permanently locking players into their commitment or inflicting a stiff penalty on them if they break it.

"Without it, schools could lose whole freshman classes," he said. "And when coaches are replaced, it could have a domino effect for other schools."

So, the letter says, if you want to play four years, you play them at the school that won the recruiting race, the coach notwithstanding.

Jacoby also questioned the rush to judgment by recruits who want out when there is a coaching change. "Who knows," he said, "they might like the new coach as well or better."

At Miami, the new coach is Dennis Erickson, imported from Washington State. One of his first tasks will be to pursue disenchanted recruits like Darren Krein.

"I'm sure they'll talk," attorney Dawson said. "That will be another consideration. For all I know, Darren will want to play for him."

"But right now his feeling is he was betrayed."

There are probably some football recruits in Pullman, Wash., right now who feel exactly the same way.

Getting ready

Matt Keenan of the Hereford High School tennis team advances toward the ball during Tuesday's matches against Tascosa at Whiteface Courts. Keenan and his partner, Derek Osburn, suffered an 8-5 loss in their match.

Kareem can still grab the spotlight

By BILL BARNARD
AP Basketball Writer

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, who made a career of responding to the spotlight, can still put on a show in his 42nd year.

Abdul-Jabbar, playing for a national television audience in his final game in Atlanta, scored 12 points in the first half and then hit a sky hook with 9:12 left in the game, giving Los Angeles the lead for good in a 106-97 victory over the Hawks on Tuesday night.

James Worthy led the Lakers with 24 points, and Magic Johnson added 21 points, 15 assists and nine rebounds.

In other NBA games, it was New York 124, Phoenix 119; Seattle 110, Indiana 92; Philadelphia 90, Chicago 88; Milwaukee 121, Washington 101; Portland 116, San Antonio 103; Golden State 138, the Los Angeles Clippers 112, and Cleveland 105, Sacramento 95.

76ers 90, Bulls 88

Chicago lost Michael Jordan for four days with a groin injury and lost the game when Derek Smith, making his first start in a Philadelphia uniform, hit a layup with one second remaining.

Warriors 138, Clippers 112
Golden State scored 50 points in a quarter for the second time in a three days as Chris Mullin, Mitch Richmond and Rod Higgins combined for 35 fourth-quarter points against Los Angeles.

Nicks 124, Suns 119

New York extended its home winning streak to 24 games as Patrick Ewing scored 18 of his 40 points in the fourth quarter against Phoenix.

Kevin Johnson scored 24 of his 31 points in the second half as the Suns, who trailed by as many as 17 points in the second period, rallied for a 110-106 lead with 4:47 left.

Cavaliers 105, Kings 95
Cleveland, with Brad Daugherty's arm injury and the birth of Tree Rollins' daughter depleting its center position, defeated Sacramento behind reserve John Williams' 24 points and 11 rebounds.

Mark Price had 23 points and Ron Harper 20 for Cleveland, while Danny Ainge topped the Kings with 19 points.

Bucks 121, Bullets 101
Milwaukee snapped Washington's four-game winning streak and won for the 13th time in 14 home games behind Terry Cummings' 26 points and Sidney Moncrief's 20.

Bernard King led the Bullets with 18 points, but had only four in the second half when Washington fell behind 94-78 after trailing by only three at halftime.

Trail Blazers 116, Spurs 103
Portland defeated San Antonio for the 10th consecutive time as Terry Porter scored 25 points and Clyde Drexler added 20 points, 12 rebounds and nine assists.

Ahead by five points with nine minutes left in the game, Portland outscored San Antonio 12-2 to take a 99-84 lead with 5:51 to play.

Frank Brickowski led the Spurs with a season-high 27 points.

Sonics 110, Pacers 92
Seattle, which lost at home to Indiana last week, reversed that outcome as Dale Ellis scored 13 of his 27 points in the fourth quarter.

The SuperSonics took command by scoring the first six points of the fourth quarter, opening an 84-74 lead on a pair of free throws by Nate McMillan with 8:25 to play.

Xavier McDaniel added 24 points for the Sonics, while Indiana got 23 points and 13 rebounds from Rik Smits.

ANTHONY'S

We're Good at Making You Look Great!

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I woke up with the world's worst hangover. I took a couple of aspirins, stumbled into the kitchen, made myself coffee and grabbed the morning paper. The headline seemed to jump off the page. It read:

2-YEAR-OLD AND MOTHER KILLED IN HIT AND RUN ACCIDENT POLICE ON STATEWIDE MANHUNT

Baptist revival continues

A revival meeting at Frio Baptist Church which began Sunday will continue through tomorrow, Thursday.

Services are held at 12:20 p.m. and 7:30 p.m. daily at the church, which is located seven miles south of Hereford on FR 1055.

Rev. Tom Orr is preaching and Larry Russell is providing special music and leading music in the evening services.

As I read the story, I got a sick feeling in my stomach. I couldn't remember anything about last night. I ran to look at my car. My heart sank to my knees. The bumper was twisted and the front fender was smashed.

I wouldn't leave the scene of an accident, no matter how drunk I was. Or would I? Chilling thoughts raced through my mind. What should I do? Call the police? Get a lawyer? I was petrified.

I reached for the phone and started to dial the police. Then I stopped. They would ask me all sorts of questions. What could I say? I was drunk. I don't remember. I could almost hear the jail door clang shut behind me.

Just then my brother-in-law walked into the kitchen. What did he know? Had the police arrived? I put down the phone and ran toward him in tears.

He said, "I'm sure it's upsetting to hit a deer, honey, but you'll get over it."

I couldn't believe what I had just heard. Did he say I had hit a deer?

I swear, with my hand on the Bible, I will never drive drunk again.—Lesson Learned in Des Moines

DEAR DES MOINES: It's not easy to share a nightmare. Thank you for doing just that.

I wonder how many people who are reading this column have driven drunk and made it home safely. If I am talking to you, please thank God for giving you a pass. And don't press your luck.

Betty Crocker's Cooking Tips

Q. How is kiwi fruit served? L.K., York, NE

A. Peel and slice fruit. Serve it alone in fruit salad, to decorate cakes or as a garnish. Don't use it in gelatin dessert because an enzyme in kiwi prevents gelatin from thickening.

Q. When a recipe calls for milk, does it matter if I use skim milk instead of whole? P.B., Cedar Rapids, IA

A. In most recipes, you can use skim, two-percent or whole milk. Whole milk will make recipes slightly richer. With skim milk, you save calories and can still have an acceptable product.

Hints from Heloise

DEAR HELOISE: I am on a low-fat, low-cholesterol diet and have had to give up all my favorite desserts because of the eggs, butter or shortening used in cakes, pies and muffins. I recently read that I can substitute two egg whites for each yolk. What I would like to know is can I substitute oil for butter or shortening? — P.C., New Haven, Conn. Yes, you can substitute vegetable oil for butter, margarine or shortening. You will need to use one-third less vegetable oil; for instance, substitute two teaspoons of vegetable oil for one tablespoon of solid shortening. There are a few recipes that you may have to experiment with to get the best results. A good vegetable oil is your best bet for low cholesterol, but as you know, oil is not low in fat. According to the American Heart Association, one's total fat intake should be no more than 30 percent of their daily diet and their cholesterol no more than 300 mg.
