Hospital Reports Gain in January

Deaf Smith General Hospital took advantage of influenza and pneumonia outbreaks in January to improve its average daily census over the previous month by nearly eight patients and wind up with $30,981 in revenue over expenses. Administrator Jim Bullard told hospital district directors Tuesday.

'We see a lot of flu and pneumonia this time of year, and, as a result, we see more patients, January was a good month,"

The hospital finished the month with an average daily census of 33.1 patients, compared to 25.3 in December. The hospital's average census for the fiscal year is 27.8, compared to 30.3 in Another factor contributing to the hospital's high January census was one of the biggest "baby booms" ever in Hereford. There were 57 births at the hospital last month, compared to 39 in January a year ago, Only six of those were drop-ins, which is good. January may be the best month for babies we've had in some time." Bullard In January, the hospital performed 4,875 laboratory tests, 66 surgical procedures, 434 Xrays, 29 ultrasound readings, 1,152 respiratory-therapy treatments and 732 physical-therapy Revenue exceeded expenses by $30,981, compared to $596 in January. 1979. The hospital showed a $133,000 gain in December, but most of that was due to tax money received by the county hospital district. Auditor Bill Allen reported to the hospital board that revenue exceeded expenses by $155,083 in the 1978-79 fiscal year. In the previous year, the hospital had a deficit of $285,059, according to Allen's audit report.

Dr. Duffy McBrayer, chief of the hospital medical staff, reported that physicians met recently to pass resolutions which would allow Deaf Smith General to comply with Joint Commission on Accreditation of Hospitals (JCAH) recommendations in the laboratory.

A JCAH survey team toured the hospital last year then awarded a two-year accreditation.

Attorney Jerry Smith, a member of the hospital board, reviewed with directors the forms required for the hospital to receive state funds for medical care rendered to victims of criminal acts. The bill authorizing funding for services to victims passed the state Legislature last year. The board also reviewed its policy dealing with releasing patient information to the news media. Directors agreed to continue the policy, which allows the hospital to give an accident victim's name, sex, age, occupation address and condition but withhold detailed information in the patient's medical records.

Directors, in other business, agreed to change their regular monthly meeting time from 7 a.m. to 12 noon.

WHEN THE FOOD STAMP PROGRAM was introduced by the late President Kennedy in 1963, it was estimated that it, would call for some $800 million in government expenditures. It would be worth it, claimed officials, because it would simplify welfare payments, insure that those actually hungry would be fed, and the program would serve to cut down of the troublesome stocks of surplus foods around the country.

However, the food stamp program grew and grew to many times its early projections. The USDA reports that food stamp shoppers bought more than $6.4 billion worth of food with stamps in 1979, and that the value of food stamps amounted to 5.9 percent of the total sale of food through retail stores.

Just shows what a modest government giveaway program will do if properly encouraged and promoted. And the beautiful part of it is that it doesn't cost anything--except to us hard-working taxpayers who foot the bill!

THE DECADE OF THE 70s saw a population shift in the United States to the south and west. Figures show the south gained 14 percent more people, and the west recorded an 18 percent growth. This compares with a gain of slightly more than 8 percent for the total U.S.

By The Associated Press Abolhassan Bani-Sadr, Iran's president and military chief, says Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini has approved the commission and will investigate charges against the shah. The panel may arrive in Tehran today, but the timetable for the release of the American hostages was still unsettled. After a Tuesday night meeting of the Revolutionary Council he heads, Bani-Sadr told reporters that Khomeini, country's ailing revolutionary leader, had approved final terms for the U.N .appointed commission and its convening in Tehran.

Bani-Sadr, who took over as commander in chief of Iran's armed forces on Khomeini's order earlier in the day, said U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim would be informed of the decision by cable.

"But in New York, spokesman for Waldheim said late Tuesday night that no cable had arrived and that commission members gathering in Geneva, Switzerland for a chartered flight to Iran could not leave until the cable was received.

"They can't go before they are appointed," the U.N. spokesman said, adding that Waldheim cannot announce their appointment until Iran formally confirms his choices.

Members are said to include French lawyer Edmond Pettiti: Algeria's U.N. ambassador. Mohammed Bedjaoui; former Venezuelan ambassador to Washington, Andres Aguilar; Sri Lanka lawyer Hector W. Jayewardene and Syrian iplomat Adib Daoudy.

It was still unclear exactly when and how the approximately 50 Americans would be released from the U.S. Embassy in Tehran, where they began their 109th day in captivity today.

Bani-Sadr's appointment as supreme military commander stirred speculation he might send troops to the embassy to replace the Islamic militants holding the hostages.

Waldheim also was quoted by Vienna's Die Presse newspaper as saying the investigation would take one to two weeks and the hostages would be freed in the course of the panel's

But that was disputed by Iranian Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh, who told reporters on his return Tuesday to Tehran following a European tour the Americans would not be freed u until the commission's work was complete. -

"The release of the hostages at this point is neither foreseen nor has it been discussed," Ghotbzadeh said, but acknowledged he had not discussed the issue with Bani-Sadr for three days.

The United States gave its approval to the commission's members Saturday and on Monday, Bani-Sadr also approved them in a telephone call to Waldheim from Tehran.

Carter Withholds Iran Apology

WASHINGTON (AP) -President Carter, reiterating his administration's stance, has told House members he will never apologize for U.S. actions

Such an apology is being sought by Iran as one of several conditions for the release of 50 American hostages held in Tehran since Nov. 4.

'But they (the congressmen) haven't listened," Meeks said. "So now we're going to try to slide in. We're going to work with them, lobby them, answer their questions."

The two-day meeting at the Commerce Department ends today, and will be followed by weeks of lobbying on Capitol Hill. AAM is seeking support for extension of the four cents-agallon federal fuel tax exemption for gasohol, a mixture of 10 percent alcohol and 90 percent gasoline. But the organization's primary goal remains the same as when AAM was founded three years ago - crop prices equal to 100 percent of parity. That would give farmers the same buying

Moslem Rebels Hold Off Army

KABUL. Afghanistan (AP) - Anticommunist Moslem rebels are virtually in control of Afghanistan's main supply route from Pakistan, attacking civilian traffic at will and outmaneuvering the ill-trained Afghan soldiers sent to "pacify" the area.

An Associated Press reporter and three other Western reporters traveled in a convoy of trucks and buses that was repeatedly ambushed by rebels last week in a gorge on the highway from Jalalabad to Kabul.

Only one bus passenger was injured by gunfire. Many others were robbed of all their cash and valuables. The rebels did not shoot to kill, but to halt the convoy.

Market Rallies

Due to Oil Issues

NEW YORK (AP) - Oil issues with exploration interests off the Newfoundland coast led a modest rally in the stock market today.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, off 27.82 points in the last three trading days, recovered 3.33 to 879.35 by noontime.

Gainers held a small lead over losers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Mobil Oil Canada reported this morning "certain zones of interest" at two wells off Newfoundland.

Mobil's stock led the active list, up 2 5/8 at 70. Among other issues with exploration interests in the area, Gulf Oil climbed 11/2 to 481/4 and Standard Oil of California 2 3/8 to 72.

Gulf Canada gained 61/4 to 136 on the American Stock Exchange.

The bond market, which has been taking a severe pounding lately, also recouped a few of its recent losses today. Analysts said traders in both stocks and bonds remained concerned over virulent inflation and expectations of a further rise in interest rates.

TRC Notes Savings Over Importation

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - Chairman John Poerner of the Texas Railroad Commission noted today a $11 million savings in the importation of foreign oil. Poerner said crude and petroleum products imports into the United States totaled 8,462,000 barrels a day for the four-week average ending Feb. 1, a decrease of 373,000 from the same period in 1979.

He said a commission staffer had figured this decline saved the United States $11 million-"certainly a significant

HOUSTON (AP) - At least five city councilmen say they will oppose a 10-cent property tax hike that is part of a record $763.7 million budget proposed by Mayor Jim McConn.

The proposed budget compares with the old record of $599.6 million set last year and is nearly twice the size of the $385.7 million 1976 budget.

McConn said the tax hike is needed to pay for higher salaries for policemen and firefighters who have been with the city more than five years and to finance a major street repair program.

Clayton Becomes Issue

State 'Turmoil' May Halt Special Session

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - Gov. Bill Clements says he may cancel his plans for a special legislative session as a result of the "turmo" over Speaker Bill Clayton's acceptance of $5,000 from a labor leader.

Clements told reporters Tuesday he was having second thoughts about calling a special session for August because he doubted lawmakers could keep their minds off Clayton and the FBI Brilab investigation. Clayton has admitted accepting $5,000 from L.G. Moore of Houston, who brought a man posing for the FBI as a Prudential Insurance Co. representative to Clayton's office. The speaker said the men discussed the possibility of landing a state employee group insurance contract, but he has denied any wrongdoing and said he had no intention of keeping the Clayton will appear before a federal grand jury in Houston in March. Some friends believe he will resign as speaker if indicted.

If he should resign, the first business of a special session would be to elect a new speaker.

Clements stated earlier he would call lawmakers into session to deal with proposed wiretap legislation and methods of bypassing the Legislature in enacting laws. In response to a question, however, Clements said he was "having some second thoughts" about the wisdom of a special session as a result of the Brilab investigation. Clements told an impromptu news conference he is conferring with legislators and "outside people" - such as editors and

He said House members' preoccupation with Clayton and a possible speakership race would divert attention from issues the governor wants legislators to consider.

"Everybody's still in a state of shock" over Clayton, the governor said. Clements said he still feels wiretapping in drug cases is an "absolute necessity if we're going to curb this very insidious situation." Asked what he thought of the FBI's "sting" operation, where the FBI informer posed as a representative of Prudential, the governor said undercover agents "are nothing new." The use of agents, he said, "puts the burden on all of us to conduct our business in a way that we have nothing to worry Clements said he told Clayton he was "very, very surprised" and "terribly disappointed" over the situation. Also, Clements said, "I think it is nothing less than a disgrace that information has been leaked prior to the grand jury investigation." Asked if Brilab had hurt chances for passage of his proposals, Clements said, "I think anything that brings about the kind of turmoil that exists today ... takes representatives' minds off my issues and puts foremost the issue of the speakership itself." Clements also was asked if he had considered calling two special sessions - one to deal with a possible speaker's race and another for legislation, and he replied:

"I'm getting enough flack over one without taking on a second

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Right hand to God. this is no joke. I am both mystified and burned up. Please give me your opinion. I can't go to anyone

I am 58 years old, married to a good woman for 34 years. Our marriage is not better or worse than most others. She's not perfect, but then neither am I. The problem: I'm a heavy sleeper and I snore. My wife says my snoring has gotten really bad this past year, and it interferes with her rest.

Last night she gave me a headband with a bicycle horn attached to it. The horn is in the back. When the snorer turns to sleep on his back, the horn blows and wakes him up. I asked her where she got it, and she said she read about the contraption in a magazine article and made one herself.

I tried the blamed thing on and it was very uncomfortable. Also, the horn is loud and it would scare me out of my wits if it blew during the night. I VFW Auxiliary Plans

My husband has a bad temper. It seems no matter what I say, I am in trouble with him. It is so frightening that I am afraid to open my mouth. He calls me awful names, and later when he sees how sad I am he tell me I must be more forgiving -- a better Christian. (He is an elder in the church.)

I have begged him to tell me what I do that makes him lose his temper with me. He says I "provoke" and "invoke." and it is natural for people to get mad under those circumstances. I still do not understand.

DEAR VAN NUYS: The part about three showers a day was the clue. People who feel "dirty" because of things that are said to them and try to become clean by washing are mentally disturbed.

Your hot-tempered husband may be the major reason for your disturbance. In any event, I' hope you will seek professional counseling. Your medical doctor can direct you. Or look in the phone book under "mental health clinics." (There are some excellent facilities in your area). Check the medical schools, also, and good luck, dear.

COMMENTARY Don Graff East Europe's middlemen

"The superpowers often behave like two heavily armed blind men feeling their way around a room." Henry Kissinger observes with vivid imagery in his "White House Years"

"Of course, over time even two blind men can do enormous damage to each other, not to speak of the room."

And not only to the room. The two superpowers may scarcely lay a serious glove on each other, but their feints can easily be knockout blows to third parties unfortunate enough to be in

Which is precisely the situation of Moscow's six East Euro-pean satellites. Short of escalation to the level armed conflict. they stand to suffer more than anyone save the Afghans in the new cool war developing between the Soviet Union and the United States.

East Europe has probably gained more, comparatively, than the Soviet Union during the decade of detente. The six nations today have a combined gross national products of almost $400 billion. That may be no great shakes by the standards of the democratic industrial powers, but it is considerably more than they had just a few years ago. They have forged travel, financial, cultural and trade links with the West that for most of them have become basic to a greatly improved quality of life and to continuing economic growth.

Half of Poland's trade, for example, is now with the West.

Rumania is not far behind. For all six combined, the proportion is about one-third. Three — Hungary, Poland and Rumania — enjoy most-favored nation status in trade with the United States.

And most are deeply in hock to Western banks and governments - the total bloc hard currency debt reached almost $50 billion in 1979. Most of that has gone into industrial modernization and expansion and more is needed to keep the effort going, particularly as the Marxist economies commence to suffer such typical capitalist ailments as inflation, trade deficits and energy shortages.

The traffic between East and West has also included ideas. East Europeans have been receiving more Western and themselves traveling more to the West, reading more Western publications and seeing more Western movies than they would have dreamed possible during the first, frigid postwar decades.

Their concern is not so much that all this is about to be denied them by the West, but that the Soviets will compel them to sever or at least sharply curtail Western ties. At a time of East-West confrontation, there must be cohesion and conformity within the bloc. And not only as concerns economic and cultural contacts with the outside world. Shaping up the satellite home fronts according to the Soviet pattern is also to be anticipated. The Kremlin is scarcely likely to ship its own Sakharovs off to Gorky while allowing outspoken Poles and Hungarians to go their dissident ways.

Even the Rumanian regime, which has pursued a provocatively independent foreign policy while keeping a grip on affairs at home sufficiently repressive to show even the Soviets a thing or two, is likely to feel the pressure to shape up and

From the Kremlin's point of view, it can scarcly do otherwise. Afghanistan, from whence the present chill is sweeping over the East-West landscape, is peripheral to Soviet interests compared to Eastern Europe.

The six nations are more than the spoils of World War II. They are the guarantee to the extent such is possible that that experience will not be repeated. They are the buffer that keeps German troops — or American or those of any grand alliance — several hundred miles distant from Soviet borders.

If the two superpowers find themselves with narrowing options in the contest in which they have become engaged, the East Europeans are even worse off. They find themselves

'Fascinating' Newsmen ABC broadcast six Olympics reports in prime-time during the Keep '60 Minutes' Tops

NEW YORK (AP) - Comic Steve Martin — tongue poked firmly in cheek - suggests that CBS-TV's "60 Minutes" got to be this season's prime-time hit by buying off the television ratings people.

Martin's innuendo, in a recent skit spoofing the journalistic technique of veteran "60 Minutes" correspondent Mike Wallace, does raise an intriguing question:

Why, in its 13th season, is "60 Minutes" - winner of 17 Emmys - the most-watched show on American television?

"I really don't know for sure, and I've thought about it a lot,' Don Hewitt, the program's executive producer from its start on Sept. 24, 1968, said in

"I do think that what's happened is our audience finds Wallace, Rather, Safer and Reasoner being themselves more fascinating than Redford and Hoffman playing Woodward and Bernstein.

Hewitt was quick to give credit to Wallace, Dan Rather, Morley Safer and Harry Reasoner, pointing to their offices adjacent to his and referring to his "Pittsburgh Steelers' bench."

But a good deal of the credit for the extraordinary success of '60 Minutes" belongs to Hewitt himself.

The selection of segments for broadcast each week is, ultimately, Hewitt's. A blackboard across the hall from his CBS' "Getting There" was office lists the stories each correspondent is working on.

"What three stories do I want for a week? That and that and that. No, that's two features, those two are too much alike. That's the idea," Hewitt explained.

"What we've done has never been done before," he continued. "In television, there's a fine line separating journalism from show business, and we've been able to walk up to that line and not cross it.

'Most shows of this type fall short of the line and are too dull, or cross it and lose their integrity."

There are other reasons for the show's success, of course, like its protected Sunday night time slot, a haven reserved for public affairs and children's programming, as well as a terrific lead-in from professional football during the fall.

The most recent edition of "60 Minutes," broadcast the evening of Feb. 18, was No. 11 in the week's ratings race, its lowest finish in some time. The show had stiff competition from the Winter Olympics on ABC, but still finished first in its time period. A 30-second commercial on

'60 Minutes" sells today for $150,000, top dollar charged for any prime-time news or entertainment program. By comparison, ABC is currently charging $130,000 for an average 60-second commercial during its Olympics coverage.

Competing networks have, in the last few years, sought to milk some of the CBS success -ABC with "20-20" and NBC the unsuccessful "Weekend" and then "Prime Time Saturday."

Only "20-20" has shown signs of life. But then "60 Minutes" also struggled near the bottom of the ratings in its early days.

In its first season, the show was broadcast alternate Tuesdays at 10 p.m., pulling an average rating of 13. That means that of all TV-equipped homes in the country, 13 percent tuned to the show. When the show was moved to Sundays at 6 p.m. in 1971, the average rating dipped to 12.7. It was only in late 1975, after "60 Minutes" was given the first hour of prime-time on Sunday, from 7 to 8 p.m., that it became one of CBS' most valuable properties.

"The fact is, '60 Minutes' has become a part of American living in the '70s and '80s, like Life magazine was in the '50s and '60s," said Hewitt.

Hewitt took on the "60 Minutes" project after 20 years as a producer-director-executive producer for CBS News.

Wallace and Reasoner were charter members of "60 Minutes," although Reasoner left for ABC New in 1970, to return to CBS eight years later. Safer came aboard in 1970, and Rather, a former CBS White House correspondent, joined up in 1975. Last week, CBS named Rather to succeed Walter Cronkite as "Evening News"

Fed-Funded Abortions Ordered

WASHINGTON (AP) - The federal government, ordered by the Supreme Court to once more pay for all medically necessary abortions for poor women, is moving quickly to adhere to the -

Within hours of the onesentence order Tuesday, the government took action to restore payments in a broad range of abortion cases. "Medicaid will pay for all medically necessary abortions," the Department of Health. Education and Welfare said in a notice sent to regional offices and individual states.

The notices, sent in English and Spanish, tell women to ignore the previous restrictions. which the court lifted pending a full hearing on the matter later

"The court has held that it is your right to seek a confidential Medicaid abortion and no benefits may be withheld from you for doing so," HEW said.

The court voted 6-3 not to overturn a decision by U.S. District John Dooling in New York City, who had ruled that the congressional restriction on abortion payments was unconstitutional.

The court also voted 6-3 to consolidate the New York case with another abortion case it accepted for review last November. The court ordered that all briefs in the New York case be submitted by April 10, setting the stage for a definitive ruling possibly by the end of June.

The old restriction, called the Hyde amendment, allowed Medicaid abortions only for women whose lives were endangered by their pregnancies or who were the victims of rape or incest.

After Tuesday's ruling, HEW said the determining factors in a Medicaid abortion will include the woman's physical, emotional and psychological condition. Teenagers and women over 35 would more likely be considered eligible.

The ruling was praised by the American Civil Liberties Union and the Center for Constitutional Rights as "a great day for liberty. Poor women all over the country can once again get Medicaid-funded abor-

But Rep. Henry Hyde, R-III., who sponsored the amendment, accused the justices of usurping congressional power and "abortion restoring

Looking ahead to the court's definitive ruling later this year, Hyde said, "I don't see a great cause for optimism when a majority of the justices reversed the status quo before a full hearing was held."

But he predicted the ruling would spur anti-abortion groups seeking a constitutional amendment to limit abortions.

The ruling, however, won't have much impact in 26 states, which already have been providing abortion payments. Another 23 states, however, will now have to make financed abortions available. One state, Arizona, does not participate in the Medicaid program.

Officials at HEW estimate that 470,000 abortions could be financed by Medicaid over the next year, at a cost of $88

Brand Sports Editor LUBBOCK -- It was the culmination of all the wrong things at the wrong time that eventually gave the Hereford Whiteface varsity basketball team its disappointing 52-51 overtime loss to the Coronado Mustangs Tuesday night. And it was a hard loss to swallow considering it was the finale of the season.

Namely, an unwholesome dry spell in the first quarter (the Herd held as much as a 13 point deficit in that period) and early foul trouble for Hereford's big man, Darrell Polk, were the factors that added up to an insurmountable disadvantage for the Whitefaces.

But, even with those obstacles to overcome, HHS still managed to make Coronado earn its gravy.

And as it turned out, the Mustangs almost ate their bisquits dry.

Hereford had come out intermission holding a 30-22 disadvantage.

With 6:35 remaining in the contest. HHS cager Gary Parman penetrated down the lane and chipped in a shot off the glass to bring the Whitefaces their first lead of the game (43-41), since a 6-4 advantage in the first quarter.

That's when the next rickety bridge appeared for Hereford to cross, because shortly after Parman's glass shot came Darrell Polk's fifth foul. It (the Polk ejection from the game) wasn't the end of the world, but it rated a close second with Hiroshima.

Following the removal of polk from the contest, CHS's

Heiden Claims Third Medal; Is Showcase of Games

By HAL BOCK AP Sports Writer

LAKE PŁACID, N.Y. (AP) -Skating with pure power and awesome ability, Eric Heiden has emerged as the unquestioned individual star of the 1980 Winter Olympics, an ice and snow festival that is becoming a one-man showcase of brilliance for the 21-year-old from Madison, Wisc.

Heiden claimed his third gold medal in as many races and stayed on target for an unprecedented five-event speed skating sweep, shattering another Olympic mark in winning the 1,000-meter test Tuesday.

And while Heiden dominates his events as few athletes ever have, these Olympics also are developing as the Get Even Games - one more chance for champions to claim the gold medals that have eluded them

It was super skier Ingemar Stenmark's turn for vindication Tuesday, and the Swedish star came through, capturing the men's giant slalom with a stirring second run down Whiteface Mountain that propelled him from third place to the gold medal he has been waiting four years to claim.

Stenmark's victory marked the second time this week that Whiteface's frozen slopes have surrendered Olympic gold to a veteran skier. Earlier, Austrian ski queen Annemarie Moser-Proell ended years of frustration by winning the women's downhill race.

East Germany dominated Tuesday's results, claiming three more golds and moving into a 16-16 tie with the Soviet Union in total medals. The Soviets have won seven gold Tuesday's East German golds went to veteran Ulrich Wehling, who captured his third straight Olympic Nordic Combined crown, Frank Ullrich in the 10kilometer biathlon and Hans Riin and Norbert Hahn, who successfully defended their twoman luge title.

The ice dancing gold medal was won by the Soviets' world champions, Natalia Linichuk and Gennadi Karponosov in a narrow and unpopular decision over Kritsztina Regoczy and Andras Sallay of Hungary. Irina Moiseeva and Andrei Minenkov of the Soviet Union took the bronze medal.

All but flying over the speed skating oval, Heiden blazed to a time of 1 minute, 15.18 seconds for the 1,000, well under the Olympic record of 1:19.32, set by his teammate, Peter Mueller, in 1976. Silver medalist Gaetan Boucher of Canada finished a full 11/4 seconds behind Heiden at 1:16.68. Frode Roenning of Norway and Vladimir Lobanov of the Soviet Union shared the bronze medal at 1:16.91.

Like Heiden, Stenmark has been pointing to these Games for some time, searching for Olympic revenge.

In 1976 at Innsbruck, Stenmark, then 19, was the gold medal favorite but managed only a disappointing bronze in the giant slalom. That gave him four years to prepare for Lake Placid and the gold he missed the first time around. This time, he got it.

Stenmark, who has won an amazing 14 consecutive World Cup giant slaloms, captured the Olympic race by three-quarters a second over Andreas Wenzel of Liechtenstein, the first heat leader. And, as he has in 10 of those World Cup races, Stenmark charged from behind to claim the gold.

"I put myself in a situation I shouldn't have," said Stenmark, who had trailed Wenzel by 32 hundredths of a second after the first heat on Monday. "It was a quite difficult course and I didn't race as well as I would have liked. You had to make a decision before every gate on whether to attack hard or take it easy through the gate. In the second run, I took many risks."

Stenmark's combined time was 2:40.74 with Wenzel taking the silver in 2:41.49 combined and Austria's Hans Enn claiming the bronze with a twoheat total of 2:42.51. Phil Mahre

The Beet Referendum

Don't be misled

It's not a government program. This is a producer program. Producers wrote the law. Producers are paying for the referendum through voluntary donations. And producers will run the program from day one, once the referendum passes. The government's involvement is limited: The Secretary of Agriculture formally appoints the Beef Board members, who are nominated by producer organizations; he is also responsible for seeing that the money is spent according to producer wishes, as set out in the law.

It's not a tax. The program is voluntary. The automatic. But if anyone, for any reason, doesn't want to participate, he can ask for a refund and get it promptly. With no red tape. That's the law. It's not just an advertising program.

The program is comprehensive. Some of the money will go for consumer education. Some for foreign market development. Some for production research. Some for new product development. Some for improving marketing and distribution. And some for advertising and promotion whatever producers, through the Beef Board, decide they need.

It's not just for the big guy. Beef Board members will be both big producers and small, from all across the country. Cow-calf operators. Farmer-feeders: Stocker operators. Feedlot people. Dairymen-dairy cattle account for 20' of beef production This program will help everybody

4-H,FFA Members To Hit Houston Road

By JIM STEIERT Brand Farm Editor

Deaf Smith County 4-H and FFA members will be hitting the road for the grandaddy of all livestock expositions this weekend as they load up and head out for the Houston Livestock Show and Rodeo.

A total of 34 FFA members and 15 4-H'ers will be making the Houston trip this year according to Marcus Phillips, Hereford FFA advisor and Juston McBride, county Exten-

Phillips reported that Ronald Vasek will be providing a truck to transport the FFA animals to Houston free of charge.

An entourage of parents and escort vehicles will accompany the local youth on their long

Among county 4-H members Houston-bound are Melissa and Barbara Brumley, Tamara and Gay Myers, Becky and Michelle Hughes, Kent and Joni Hicks. Sherri Jones, Paul Smith, Toby Fulton, Rickie, Randy and Gary Vogel and Monty Hutto.

Included in the FFA delegation will be Chet Bunch. Mike Caudle, Corey Christie, Tracey Cole, Dennis Detten. Marcel Fischbacher, Steven Gallagher, Mac Hagar, Becky Hughes, Kirk and Sherri Jones and Molly Keating.

Also, Kevin Kelley, Terry Lewis, Delynn Mason, Scott Mazurek, John Meyer, Peggy and Rodney Miller, Lisa and Robbie Phillips, Alice Reinart.

Phylecia Rowland, and Donna and Kenneth Schlabs.

Among other FFA members to show at Houston are: Kevin Sparkman, Brian and Mark Urbanczyk, Gwen Wilhelm. Tania Willson, and Bryan and Joseph Diller.

Junior show exhibitors take over the 22.3 acre Houston livestock exposition facility for the second week of the livestock show, with judging beginning on February 28. Each exhibitor knows he is up against the best in livestock, with much riding on the decision of the most experienced livestock judges in the nation.

Junior shows include breeding beef heifers, dairy, breeding sheep, Angora goats, beef and dairy scramble heifers, commercial steers, breeding rabbits, market lambs, market poultry, market turkeys, market swine and market steers, including a carcass contest.

In addition to the premium awards and trophies, exhibitors of market animals know that a grand championship in their market division at Houston can translate into the stake for a future cattle herd or college diploma.

The Houston Livestock Show and Rodeo holds the world's record for prices paid at auction for the grand and reserve grand champion junior market animal in five categories:Grand Champion Steer, $70,000: Reserve Grand Champion Steer, $45,000; Grand Champion Lamb, $30,000; Reserve Grand Champion Lamb, $16,500; Grand Champion Barrow, $25,000; Reserve Grand Champion Barrow, $13,000; Grand Champion Pen of Five Broilers, $22,000; Reserve Grand Champion Pen of Five Broilers, $17,000; Grand Champion Turkey, $13,005; and Reserve Grand Champion Turkey, $7,500.

More importantly, community involvement and civic support from thousands of individuals and businesses alike combine to assure junior exhibitors that their animals selling in the market auctions will bring premium prices. Show officials estimated that 35 per cent of animals entered in market competition make the auction sales.

Thousands exhibitors are also competing in livestock and dairy judging contests where their knowledge of animals can win calf purchase certificates worth $400 toward the purchase of a purebred, registered beef or dairy heifer. For the 1980 rodeo, 388 boys will be participating in beef and dairy calf scrambles as part of rodeo action in the Astrodome.

More than just a crowdpleasing rodeo event, the calf scramble offers winning boys the opportunity to earn a calf purchase certificate worth $400. With the top 40 winners of the livestock and dairy judging contests, calf scramble winners participate in a special yearlong program that stresses education and responsibility. It concludes with special show ring competition at the following year's show.

"It just makes sense to keep weeds from going to seed in crops like sorghum and wheat where herbicides are relatively cheap and hoeing is not necessary, stated Wiese as he offered advice on keeping beets clean.

Wiese and Dr. According to New, on both 30 Steve Winter, another Texas Agricultural Experiment Station researcher set up experiments where hoeing cost was comparcations. In the relatively clean Dr. Allen Wiese, weed field, hoe time was seven hours A preplant application of Nortron or a postemerence treatment of SN-503 cut hoeing to one hour per acre. Using both herbicides eliminated pigweed and hoeing. Using SN-503 to supplement hoeing and cultivation was the cheapest method of controlling weeds. In the field where pigweed were allowed to produce seed for several years, hoe time after four cultivations was 50 hours per acre. At $3.50 per hour, hoeing cost was $175 per acre. Using a preplant application of Nortron cut weed control cost $95 per acre. A postemergence application of SN-503 saved $117 per acre and hoeing was cut to $46 per acre. Using a combination of the two herbicides cut hoeing cost to $26 per acre. The savings in hoeing was about equal to herbicide cost over a single application of Nortron or SN-503. Using Nortron preplant, SN-503 postemergence and Treflan at layby cut hoeing cost to $16 per acre.

Total weeding cost above cultivation for herbicides and hoeing was $59 per acre. "These experiments show that the secret to low hoeing and herbicide cost is clean farming and using the right herbicide or combination of herbicides."

"SN-503 is an excellent postemergence herbicide for controlling pigweed in sugarbeets," the researcher said. Sprays of this herbicide are usually the best single treatment in cultural practice experiments. Other studies show that applying SN-503 in the morning of days that exceed 68 degrees may cause severe sugarbeet injury. Treating in the afternoon when sugarbeets have at least two true leaves. eliminates the danger.

Wiese said, "Kochia, Russian fields infested with a few thistle, volunteer sorghum. watergrass and volunteer corn are tough weeds to control in sugarbeets." A grower with kochia and Russian thistle needs to use Nortron preplant. It is the only herbicide that will control both weeds. SN-503 does a good job on kochia, but has little effect on Russian thistle. Using both Nortron and SN-503 usually controls 95 percent of the kochia in a field.

Volunteer sorghum is hard to control with any herbicide according to the researcher. He says incorporating RoNeet prior to planting is the best chance to control this weed.

Research over six years shows that Antor is the best preplant herbicide for controlling watergrass. "Growers with watergrass will want to use this herbicide when it gets labeled." Wiese said. "Preplant application of RoNeet followed by a postemergence spray of SN-503 also gives good control," he said. Hoelon is another experimental post-emergence herbicide that gives excellent control of watergrass.

LONDON (AP) — Six of attempt to row from Paris, up The Easter week stunt is to raise money for the "Help a London's Thames River the Seine, and across the policemen will tackle rougher English Channel to London's Tower Bridge.

HIGHLIGHTS By Lyndell Williams

AUSTIN-Like a Christmas toy which is turned upside down so the snow flakes can float down in chaotic fashion, . State Capitol halls buzzed last week with the news that an FBI bribery investigation (code name "Brilab") touched the office of House Speaker Bill Clayton."

Clayton was subpoenaed last week to appear before a Houston grand jury to testify about whether he took a bribe in return for helping an undercover FBI 7 informant gain information about bidding on the state's employee health insurance program.

The Speaker, who has denied taking a bribe, won a delay until mid-March.

Clayton allegedly received some hundred dollar bills in his office on Nov. 8 from Houston labor leader L. G. Moore following a conference which also involved Joseph Hauser, an FBI informant who identified himself as a Prudential Insurance of America agent.

All accounts of the meeting report that the money was offered as a "political contribution" following a brief discussion of insurance. Clayton has admitted he took the money, but not as a bribe. He also maintains he has not provided any favors for the money

Avoid Embarrassment

Clayton explained he took the money to avoid embarrassing Moore, his past political supporter, in front of their guest Hauser. Clayton said he first laid the money uncounted on his desk, then later gave it to his aide. Rusty Kelley, for safekeeping until it could be returned to Moore. Kelley locked it in a safe in his office where it remained until last week when it was turned over as evidence to the grand jury.

Initial news reports gave the amount as $10,000, but when the safe was opened, $5,000 was counted and turned over to authorities.

Telephone logs in the Speaker's Office were presented as record that Clayton later tried unsuccessfully to phone Moore, and Moore apparently did not return the

Political Futures

The subpoena has upset the normal turn of events in the Legislature as House members consider the political future of their speaker.

If indictments are returned against Clayton, he may not he able to keep the gavel for the Governor's promised special session in August. He might resign his office, or he might fail to be re-elected following a motion to declare the Speaker's chair vacant.

Already there are a handful of state representatives listed as possible successors to Clayton, should he step down or be toppled from his three-term reign (an historical first.)

Emerging Contestants

Clayton's most clear-cut opponent is Dallas liberal John Bryant, who formally announced two weeks ago he would challenge Clayton in 1981. In the midst of the Brilab flurry, Bryant is scrambling to win more commitments to his candidacy in time to challenge Clayton in the special session.

Bryant claims some 60 commitments (en route to 76 votes needed for a majority). More cynical observers speculate Bryant has about 40 solid votes. Although many of Clayton's trusted team members will not come back in 1981 (due to retirement or defeat) and Bryant is credited with a decent shot of bumping him off then, the fiery Dallas member is generally given only an outside shot of taking over in August.

House conservatives are not sitting back on their hands, and should something happen to Clayton, Bryant will be confronted by an opponent from their numbers. Gib Lewis of Fort Worth and Lynn Nabers of Brownwood are oft-mentioned names, since both have indicated they may run for Speaker in 1983 (but not against Clay-

In the meantime, Clayton continues to draw good support from House members, though the subpoena has perhaps lowered his standing in the eyes of Texas voters. Many legislators are resentful of the FBI's tactics and what they consider to be entrapment. Last week a group of 30 members led by Bill Caraway (D-Houston), Wayne Peveto (D-Orange), Dan Kubiak (D-Rockdale) and Bob Bush (D-Sherman) met in Austin to discuss the dilemma. Calling themselves an uncommitted caucus, their main concern is to prevent a rush to judgment that might prematurely or unjustly force

Clayton from the podium. Clayton also gained support from the Texas Civil Liberties Union which criticized the FBI for violating the Speaker's rights. "All indications in the news stories are that agents set out to find someone to bribe and there is no indication that evidence of criminal activity existed prior to the undercover operation," said TCLU executive director John Duncan.

Others are stating in plain words that the Speaker is the victim of a political set-up. Clayton's status will become clearer following his day in court next month.

First, the women's division of the Histadrut National labor federation complained. Apparently acting on rumors that the new costumes were to be slinky, tight-fitting dresses, Histadrut official Aliza Tamir protested that El Al was turning its air hostesses into sex symbols.

To counter the protest, El Al published some of the designs under consideration: formal gowns, full-length and full-cut, modest, with yokes decorated with colorful geometric embroidery designs.

But the publication sparked another protest, this time from the Palestinian Society for Preservation of the Family. which charged the designs were stolen from Palestinian Ara folk Unperturbed, an El Al beauty and detail. They start with half a dozen basic designs, carefully and sturdily crafted of baltic birch, and customers can select an unfinished house for between $90 and $300.

But most people select from such accessories as clapboard siding, real brick veneer, bay windows, shingles, cupolas, wallpaper, stained floors, porch railings, gutters, downspouts or even wiring to power miniature chandeliers. All of that can run the price up to $1,000 or more.

And then there's furniture: upholstered sofas, Queen Anne highboys with real brasses, pipe organs, china cupboards, knitted rugs, plant stands and the like. Another $500 or so.

With the help of Mrs. Evans' architect husband, the teachers can even take an especially demanding customer one step further.

Yes, drink the water

DEAR DR. LAMB - People are advised not to drink too much coffee, tea and cola because of the caffeine, and not to drink too much decaffeinated coffee, not to drink too much milk and not too many fruit juices which may cause frequent trips to the bathroom. My question is, what should a person who has chronic bowel problem drink? I personally can only drink so many glasses of water a day and then I need something else.
DEAR READER — From a health point of view, it's kind of hard to improve on water. Mother Nature knew what she was doing when she manufac-tured it. Of course, we've done a few things to it by contaminating our water supplies and adding various and sundry chemicals to it.

I presume from your question that you must have recurrent problems with diarrhea. It is true that anyone who has digestive. disturbances, whether it's burning in the pit of the stomach or an irritable colon, would do well to avoid the coffee, tea, colas and caffeine-containing beverages. It's also true that the decaffeinated coffee can also be irritating to the digestive intolerance, there's no reason why a person can't drink just about as much fortified skim milk as he or she wants. It's a good source of calcium and a good source of protein and the fortified skim milk is a relatively low-calorie drink because most of the fat has been removed. It won't cause you to make frequent trips to the bathroom unless you are one of those people who has milk intolerance. Most normal people can drink a reasonable amount of fruit juices without having any difficulty. A wide variety of these can be blended with ice to make a very nice cool beverage. They also provide vitamin C. There's more to diarrhea problems than what you drink. I am sending you The Health Letter number 13-8, What You Need to Know about Diarrhea. Other readers who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. Some people seem to be sensitive to certain foods that trigger episodes of diarrhea. If you can learn what ones these are and eliminate them, it will help enormously.

DEAR POLLY — Last year I purchased a brown corduroy three-piece suit for my husband that looks as if it had been in the store window — parts of it have faded terribly. It was bought on sale at a very good discount so it cannot be returned. My husband would like to wear this suit but when in the direct light the faded parts are

I hope you can help me find a solution for our prob-lem. We thought of exposing the dark parts to the direct sunlight thinking they might fade to match the rest of suit. Then we thought of dyeing it. Hope you on think of something as it is just hanging in the closet doing no one any good. - MRS. M.G.

DEAR MRS. M.G. - As the suit is a complete loss the way it is you could take some chances and experiment a bit. Dyeing seems the most logical thing to me. Since the suit is made of corduroy it is probably washable, which would make the dyeing less of a chance.

In any case the directions on the dye package must be followed exactly. Select a shade of brown that is a bit darker then it is now and be sure to use as much as the package suggests. The container for the dyeing must be sufficiently large that the suit can be kept moving about in the dye bath and covered with the water and dye all the time.

Remember that the suit will look darker when wet, so be sure dyeing process continues long enough to get the suit as dark as you would like. Rinse thoroughly. I think I would dry it in the dryer on low heat so as to fluff up the corduroy and then would take it to the cleaners for a professional pressing. I am only suggesting this dyeing because the suit is already a loss.

Before starting the dye job be sure to remove any buttons on the suit and the lining. Good luck — POLLY

DEAR POLLY - I have put my husband's social security number on the back of my social security card in very small numbers. It is surprising how often this comes in handy. -

The beet researcher outlined a number of keys to high beet vields.

They include timely operations, planting and watering up early, harvesting late, obtaining a full stand, and weed, disease and insect control.

Other factors include proper tillage, nitrogen management. irrigation, keeping harvest losses to a minimum, and a helping hand from the weather.

The scientist also informed those present that re-planting may represent a costly mistake on the part of growers as a loss of five tons per acre in yield potential is noted for each replanting date.

'A stand of 6-7 beets in 10 feet of row may look pretty thin, but that is only about the point where you might begin to look for a profit by replanting." Winter explained.

Area Entomologist Dr. Carl Patrick of Amarillo spoke on root aphids, which are growing in importance as a beet pest

He explained that the aphids may overwinter in sugar beet residue, curly dock, lambsquarter, and pigweed, and that good weed control can help alleviate some of the root aphid problems.

'Late June irrigations may also discourage infestations of this pest." he reported:

In addition, Patrick explained that a grasshopper problem will probably be noted again this summer in an area ranging northward from Hereford to Hartley, and that early pesticide applications to the nymphal stages of the grasshopper population will yield better

Schlabs also indicated that if a producer is pressed to get across his corn and beet acreage with water during the summer, a good program is to water the corn then half the beets, go across the corn again and then water the other half of the beet

SUGAR CANE

HAVANA (AP) - While some experts predict a shortage of newsprint, particularly in Third World countries, by the early 1980s, an encouraging development has recently taken place in Cuba with the inauguration of a plant to produce newsprint from bagasse, the fibers from processed sugar

Cuba was chosen for the project, financed by the U.N. Development Program, since it is one of the largest sugar producers in the world and accumulates some seven million dry tons of bagasse fiber annually.

At present it is necessary to mix wood fiber with bagasse to produce newsprint of the strength and quality needed for high-speed presses, but experts are looking toward the day when newsprint may be produced solely from bagasse, thus averting the chance of a newsprint shortage.

Vegetable Patent Controversial

COLLEGE STATION ... Despite popular opinion to the contrary, whether or not new be developed may depend on a proposed amendment to the WARD Rugged tillers.

Plant Variety Protection Act of

"The amendment would vegetable varieties continue to simply give new vegetable varieties the legal protection they deserve," points our Tom Longbrake, horticulturist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System. "The amendment concerns new varieties of six vegetables-carrots, celery, cucumbers, okra, peppers and tomatoes.

These vegetables were excluded from the original law due mainly to industrial lobbying."

According to Longbrake, the original law protects developers of plant varieties against theft or misuse just as a patent holder of a new tool or machine invention is protected. However, since certain vegetable varieties ere excluded from the 1970 law, an attempt is now being made to correct the inconsistency.

"Many people are voicing their opinion against the amendment as well as the original act because they say it will lead to a loss of genetic variability needed to insure a continued gene pool for plant breeders. Actually, the situation is exactly the reverse, 'contends Longbrake.

He explains it this way. "The loss of the large gene pool is a separate problem from that if choosing which varieties will or will not be grown. Plant patent laws are one small way to combat . that . loss ... Under the Plant Variety Protection Act, a sample of all patented seed must be deposited at the National Seed Storage Laboratory in Fort Collins, Colo. Seed is stored under ideal conditions and is tested periodically for viability.

"If germination tests indicate the need for a fresh supply of seed, the patent holder must provide a new supply upon request. Failure to do so will void the patent.

"Operations and hospital rooms cost a lot more than you think."

WT Beginning New Research

State University animal science department is beginning new research in three areas, said Dr. Theodore Montgomery, professor and head of the department.

The first project concerns "Developing an Equation to Estimate the Carcass Characteristics of Commercially Fed Cattle" and has been financed by the Houston Livestock and Rodeo Association for $8,000.

"The object of the research is to develop a prediction equation for the estimation of carcass characteristics among pens of commercially fed cattle," said Montgomery.

The pens from which the data will be obtained are at various cooperating feedlots around the Panhandle area. "To do this, we will gather information on 75 to 100 pens of commercially fed cattle and record the types of feed fed, the feed conversion ratio, the origin of cattle, the final weights and various other factors." he said.
