

Rain-Damage Toll Mounting

By C.W. MIRANKER
Associated Press Writer

Caskets floated out of rain-sodden graves as levees crumbled and dams overflowed in Southern California, forcing thousands of persons to flee as rain continued to fall in the West. A sewer line ruptured in Phoenix, Ariz., dumping 35 million gallons of raw waste daily into swirling flood waters.

Drier weather was expected today in Southern California, but 10 days of rainstorms pummeling the West have left at least 31 persons dead. Damage estimates have hit nearly $425 million, and officials predict "it will go much, much higher."

The rains have destroyed much of California's strawberry crop, with losses likely to exceed $10 million. Also threatened is the almond harvest, which represents the entire U.S. output.

Six California counties — from Ventura just north of Los Angeles to San Diego on the Mexican border — were declared national disaster areas Thursday by President Carter. About 500 National Guardsmen were helping with evacuations and disaster work.

More than 7,000 people — some plucked from the water by helicopter — fled their homes Thursday in Riverside County, which stretches from Riverside, about 60 miles east of Los Angeles, to the Arizona border.

Los Angeles has received 12.75 inches of rain in a nine-day period. And the season total so far — more than 21 inches — is nearly a foot above normal for this time of year. The rain season runs from November through April.

Meanwhile, the Northern California coast braced for more rain, and heavy snow fell in the mountains. In Idaho and Utah, the threat to brimming dams abated.

At least 10 caskets were unearthed by floodwaters at the Verdugo Hills Cemetery just north of Los Angeles, and others bulged just below the topsoil. The area was declared a health hazard, and crews were removing the coffins as they slid toward a roadway.

In Phoenix, Ariz., officials said there was no immediate health hazard from the sewage spilling from a broken 66-inch pipe into the raging Salt River. The waste was being diluted by flood-

A GOOD'UN PASSED AWAY THURSDAY.

Delbert Kinsey was not a close personal friend of mine, but in the few years I had come to know the man, he was a gentleman in every sense of the word. During the eight years I've been in Hereford, I have never heard anyone say a bad word about Mr. Kinsey.

And, that says a lot about the man. He was a Christian man and he lived it. A kind, sensitive man, he contributed back to the community in many ways. Many friends and acquaintances will miss the warm smile, the good word from Delbert Kinsey.

CONGRATULATIONS TO HEREFORD'S City Commission on the opening of the new City Hall building. An "open house" is scheduled 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday, and we urge citizens to tour the new facility.

City Manager Dudley Bayne gave us a complete tour of the new structure this week and we were very impressed. It is quite a contrast from the old City Hall offices and facilities. We like the open concept from the old City Hall offices and facilities, which greets a visitor on entering the building. Officers are readily visible and accessible to callers.

Working conditions for officers were very poor in the old building. The new facility should provide for safe and efficient discharge of duties, and it should do wonders for morale. We have never seen a better layout for a small police department.

While congratulations go to all our city officials, perhaps no one man is more responsible for the accomplishment than Dudley Bayne. The veteran city manager pushed and promoted the idea and successfully got most of the job done with revenue sharing funds. And, there were those who had other ideas on how to spend those funds.

There's no doubt Bayne has picked up some critics in his 24 years as city manager, which is a natural happening. Being the outspoken man that he is, Bayne is prone to "tell it like it is" rather than being a politician.

But Bayne has recruited many supporters along the way, too. He has won the respect of many commissioners over the years, otherwise he would not be around. Many citizens will claim that his leadership and management have kept our municipal government in an enviable position. They'll say all you have to do is compare Hereford's tax rate, costs of city services, and per capita debt with other towns of comparable size.

It hasn't been a one-man show, but Bayne deserves a lot of credit.

Khomeini Backs Militants' Stand

By The Associated Press
President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr's ability to persuade the militants to give up the U.S. hostages in Tehran has been thrown into doubt after the captors got support from Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini and renewed their demand for the return of the shah.

But the Carter administration believes the Iranian regime is still committed to the release of the Americans, who began their 11th day in captivity today. Diplomatic sources at the United Nations said the stand taken by the militants Thursday made it clear Bani-Sadr needed more time to marshal support from the various power groups in Iran, and that this was delaying sending the five-member U.N. investigating commission to Tehran.

Iranian Foreign Minister

Sadegh Ghotbzadeh said the panel might not arrive in Tehran until early next week. The group originally was to arrive on Wednesday, but U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim postponed the trip and the panel's co-chairman flew from Switzerland to New York to meet Waldheim today.

The co-chairman, U.N. Ambassador Mohamed Bedjaoui of Algeria, had said earlier in the week there was a "gentlemen's agreement," but no deadline, to free the hostages in exchange for the commission's investigating Iranian charges against the shah and the support the monarch got from the U.S. government during his 37 years in power.

But the militants holding the approximately 50 hostages at

Tax Bill Nears Final Approval

WASHINGTON (AP) — How to help lower-income Americans cope with energy prices is the last issue blocking final action by congressional conferees on a "windfall" tax on the oil industry.

The roadblock could be removed today, clearing the way for a final vote in the House and Senate that would send the tax bill to President Carter for his signature in mid-March.

The Senate-House conference committee came within a whisker of final agreement Thursday, but deliberations over the energy-aid questions broke down after Rep. Charles Rangel, D-N.Y., a key House delegate, left the meeting.

President Carter's energy program calls for federal assistance to help lower-income families pay the rising fuel costs that will result in part from his decision to end price controls on U.S. crude oil.

The conferees must decide two big questions on such assistance:

—How should more than $3 billion a year for poor Americans — those generally with annual incomes under $10,000 — be distributed after 1981?

—What, if any, program should be created for 1981 and 1982 to help working families with incomes up to $22,000, who generally do not qualify for welfare?

On the first question, House members want to use the 1981 formula — which channels money through the welfare system — for all future years. Senators insist no such action be constructed last year primarily with federal revenue-sharing funds. Landscaping, furniture and leveling the old City Hall brought the total cost of the project to around $894,000. [Brand photo by Paul Sims]

Afghan Protests Spread

By The Associated Press

Protests against the Soviet military presence spread throughout Afghanistan today, with massive street demonstrations in Kabul leaving at least three persons dead, according to foreign reports from the Afghan capital.

"The city appeared in the grips of crisis," said one report received in New Delhi. Another report, whose source also asked not to be identified, said there was a "fair amount" of shooting.

Foreign residents in Kabul were quoted as saying they saw Soviet troops and armored personnel carriers rushed into the capital and deployed outside government buildings. Soviet MiG-21 jetfighters flew low over the city, buzzing rooftops, the reports said.

Merchants in the mile-high capital shuttered their stores for the second straight day to protest the two-month-old Soviet intervention. Most of the stores would have been closed in any case for the Muslim sabbath. Reports reaching New Delhi said the strike had spread to several provincial cities.

The strike and demonstrations in Kabul were the first outbreaks of disobedience in the capital since the Soviets poured tens of thousands of troops into Afghanistan in late December.

The Afghan Moslem rebels were reported today to be threatening major attacks on the capital. The Kabul correspondent of the Japanese newspaper Asahi Shimbun said the rebels have been distributing handbills warning of a March 10 attack on the capital to be followed by a "Tet-"

Biggest Jump in 6½ Years

Consumer Costs Soar in January

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new surge in gasoline and heating oil costs helped push consumer prices 1.4 percent higher in January, the largest monthly increase in more than 6½ years, the government reported today.

The rise in the Consumer Price Index was the biggest since a 1.8 percent jump in August 1973, when then-President Richard M. Nixon lifted price controls and beef prices shot up dramatically.

The culprit last month was not food, which rose a modest 0.1 percent from December, the Labor Department reported.

"Rising fuel prices were responsible for more than a quarter of the change," said department analyst Patrick Jackman. "Basically, it's the recent increases" by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries starting to work their way through the system."

A number of OPEC nations — including Saudi Arabia, the United States' largest crude oil supplier — raised prices last month. In recent days, several of them have announced cut-backs in production, which could increase prices further.

Major price increases also were reported for housing, which rose 1.4 percent from December because of higher fuel oil costs and higher mortgage rates. Medical care costs also rose substantially, up 1.3 percent because of new year price adjustments at hospitals and in doctors' fees.

Consumer prices had risen 1.2 percent in December after increases of 1 percent in each of the preceding two months.

If prices rise for 11 more months at January's 1.4 percent pace, the year would end with an inflation rate of more than 18 percent.

By contrast, prices last year rose 13.3 percent — the worst inflation rate since World War II price controls were lifted in 1946.

The Carter administration

predicts prices will rise 10.4 percent this year, but that would require monthly increases in the range of 0.8 percent or less — a phenomenon that has not occurred since 1978.

Meanwhile, the Labor Department reported that wage increases did not keep pace with soaring prices.

Average weekly earnings fell 1.1 percent from December to January. A 0.3 percent increase in average hourly earnings was more than offset by the 1.4 percent surge in prices.

Official Says U.S. Capable of Force

WASHINGTON (AP) — Responding to critics, presidential adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski says the United States has the military power to meet a Soviet thrust into the Persian Gulf area without using nuclear weapons.

"We can certainly threaten military involvement without commitment to an early reliance on nuclear weapons," he said Thursday in outlining the potential U.S. retaliation to Soviet aggression.

Defending the potency of U.S. mobile forces, Brzezinski said if they did not stop the Soviets in the Persian Gulf region the United States might retaliate elsewhere.

"We have worked very hard over the last several years to make the projection of American power more rapid," he said.

Critics have questioned U.S. capability of defending oilfields and other interests in the Persian Gulf if the Soviets should use their occupation of Afghanistan as a springboard to aggression elsewhere.

Administration officials say the United States can bring a "modest" number of troops — 3,000 total — into the Persian Gulf area within a few days by air, but it would take up to two weeks to bring a force of 25,000 into the area.

Former School Counselor Loves Life as Tour Guide

By PAUL SIMS
Managing Editor
For Robert Thompson, life began at 64. At least it became adventurous.

He was 64 in 1976 and working as a counselor in the Hereford Independent School District. He and his wife, Alice, an elementary-school teacher, decided to retire.

Like others who retire, they opted to take a trip. It changed their lives.

"We had looked around for something to break the monotony and decided to sign up for the Trailways bus tour.

We got hooked on it immediately," Thompson said. "Then, we were offered the job of escorting tours. And, we've been traveling since then. It doesn't cost us anything; in fact, they pay us for it. We're doing it for pay and we'd be doing it for nothing if we could afford it."

The Thompsons have guided tours throughout the United States, Mexico and Canada. Last year alone, they led eight tours which stretched 20,000 miles.

"The tours are planned by Trailways Tours Inc. of Amarillo. They call us and say a tour is ready and give us an itinerary. Then, all I do is fill the prescription," Thompson said.

"I don't make the reservations, but I call ahead and confirm the reservations. When we get to a hotel, I go in and get the keys and bring them out and give them to the people."

"My wife and I work as a team. We're in charge of the bus, and we help people get acquainted."

That is satisfying to both Thompsons. "We're mighty-well pleased that we have found something that is a great help to the enjoyment of our fellow citizens and ourselves in our declining years," he said.

"It's so much better than sitting at home and vegetating."

Thompson probably wouldn't vegetate, however. Besides being a tour guide, he is testing examiner for the local General Educational Development program, which allows individuals who were unable to receive a high school diploma to receive a certificate of high school equivalency.

"It is an excellent program," Thompson said. "There are a lot of people walking down the street that are actually second-class citizens because they do not have a piece of paper saying they are high school graduates.

"Everyone knows you can go to high school for four years and get a diploma by just going to school. They'll often come out without a high school education. A lot of prospective employers would prefer an applicant with a certificate of high school equivalency because they know the applicant can't pass a GED test without the equivalent of a

Local Civic Leader Delbert Kinsey Dies

Delbert C. Kinsey, a longtime local car dealer who was active in community affairs during his 38-year residency here, died at 11:35 a.m. yesterday in Deaf Smith General Hospital, following a brief illness. He was 70 years old.

Funeral services are to be conducted at 1 p.m. Saturday in First Baptist Church with the Rev. Doug Manning, pastor, and the Rev. Jerry Champion, associate pastor, officiating. Graveside services are planned at 3:30 p.m. tomorrow in Llano Cemetery in Amarillo. Local arrangements are under the direction of Gilliland-Watson Funeral Home.

Mr. Kinsey was born Oct. 28, 1909 in Okfuskee Okla. He married Louise Whiteside June 2, 1937 in Amarillo and they moved to Hereford five years later. At the time of his death, Mr. Kinsey was a semi-retired car salesman for Stagner-Orsborn Buick-Pontiac-GMC; he had been part owner of the Buick-Pontiac dealership for several years. Prior to that time, he had owned the Chevrolet dealership here and the Ford outlet at Portales, N.M., where he lived in the early 1960's.

Mr. Kinsey was involved in local civic work, having served as president of Hereford Noon Lions Club, of which he was a member for 17 years. He was a prominent member of First Baptist Church, where he was presently serving as a deacon and had formerly worked in the Sunday School program. Mr. Kinsey was also a member of Hereford Masonic Lodge.

He is survived by the widow of 218 Douglas; a son, Robert Charles of Dallas; a sister, Lola Jewell of Hereford; and three grandchildren.

Serving as pallbearers will be Chip Dishman, Jim Hensley, Van Hopson, V.C. Hopson, Phillip Newman, Ronnie Owens, Carroll Whiteside and John Whiteside.

In lieu of flowers, the family suggests memorial donations to the American Heart Association.

OPEC Committee

Approves Hike Plan

LONDON (AP) — The six-member long-term strategy committee of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries today approved a plan for quarterly oil price hikes pegged to currency-market fluctuations, inflation and economic growth in the West.

Kuwaiti Oil Minister Ali Khalifa Al-Sabah said the panel's recommendation would be presented to an "extraordinary" meeting of oil ministers from all OPEC nations before June.

"The date and venue of the meeting are still to be decided," the Kuwaiti minister said. The oil ministers' next regularly scheduled meeting is June 9 in Algiers, Algeria.

The price panel would seek to restore a single oil pricing system and would replace the past year's oil market free-for-all in which OPEC prices doubled to around $30 per 42-gallon barrel as nervous buyers built up stockpiles in the wake of the Iranian revolution.

Twin Girl Dies

After Being in Coma

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A 4-year-old twin who had been in a coma since she and her brother were shocked in a bathtub died late Thursday.

Anderia Patnam and her brother, Anthony, were pronounced dead on arrival at a Fort Worth hospital after an electric hair dryer fell into the bathtub with them Monday, a Fort Worth doctor said.

But Anderia responded to life support systems which have kept her heart, kidneys and lungs functioning, said the doctor, who asked not to be identified.

The child died at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, a hospital spokesman said.

The child's parents had been attempting to decide since Monday whether or not to disconnect life support equipment that was keeping the child alive.

The family lives in Keene in nearby Johnson County, and the children were taken to Fort Worth from a Keene hospital.

Ford Reports Good

Year for Profits

DETROIT (AP) — An overseas earnings record gave Ford Motor Co. its third-best year ever despite losses at home. The No. 2 automaker said Thursday it earned $1.17 billion or $9.75 a share in 1979, down 26 percent from the record $1.59 billion or $13.35 a share in 1978. In the final quarter, Ford lost $41 million or 35 cents a share against profits of $282 million or $2.35 a share in 1978.

Outside the United States, where Ford led all producers in motor vehicle sales for the 15th straight year, the company earned a record $1.4 billion in 1979. Fourth-quarter foreign earnings were $231 million. In 1978, Ford earned $779 million abroad.

In the United States, Ford lost $199 million or $1.66 a share for 1979, compared with profits of $809 million or $6.80 a share the year before. For the fourth quarter, the company lost $273 million or $2.28 a share on its domestic business, which had produced earnings of $218 million or $1.83 a share the year before.

Brezhnev Warns

Against Tough Talk

MOSCOW (AP) — President Leonid I. Brezhnev warned the West today not to talk tough to the Soviet Union.

He declared his people's unity "manifests itself with special force when people are talking to us with voices of force."

In a nationally televised address, Brezhnev drew prolonged applause when he declared: "The Soviet Union's defense might is maintained at the proper level."

"The Central Committee of the Soviet Communist Party can assure the Soviet people that we have everything necessary to repulse any armed provocation," the 73-year-old Soviet leader said.

He was making a political campaign speech before a capacity audience of 6,000 at the Kremlin's huge Palace of Congresses.

"The peaceful future of Soviet power has been ensured reliably," Brezhnev said.

Chagra Arrested in Vegas

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Convicted narcotics trafficker Jamie Alexander "Jimmy" Chagra has been arrested by federal narcotics agents who had been searching for him since he skipped bail more than six months ago.

Chagra, 35, was arrested Thursday night as he was driving down the Las Vegas Strip, said Joe Catale, an agent with the federal Drug Enforcement Administration.

Chagra offered no resistance when he was taken into custody.

Chagra, who disappeared last August just before he was to be sentenced in Austin, Texas for his conviction on "continuing criminal enterprise," had $187,000 in cash on him when he was taken into custody about 7 p.m., Catale said.

The money, in $10,000 packets of $100 bills, reportedly was in a diaper box in the car. Chagra's wife, Elizabeth, was located at a nearby motel but was not charged.

"He would not talk about anything," Catale said. "We warned him of his rights and he refused to make any statement."

Catale denied an earlier report that DEA agents had been tipped that Chagra was in Las Vegas.

"No, we weren't," he said. "We had the suspicion. We saw a car that we recognized from an earlier investigation and we decided to sit on it. And we got lucky."

Catale said that when Chagra was taken into custody by four DEA agents and a Las Vegas police officer "He said something like, 'Yeah, I'm a fugitive.'"

Chagra, a soft-spoken professional gambler known in many casinos here, was convicted last August of masterminding a not-so-successful Colombian dope smuggling venture. He was the alleged leader of what government prosecutors said was a conspiracy to bring in at least 13.2 pounds of cocaine — valued at $2,000 an ounce — from Colombia to Florida in November 1977. He also allegedly masterminded an attempt to smuggle 30 tons of marijuana by freighter from Colombia to Florida the following month.

He disappeared before his sentencing, which had been set for last Sept. 5, and forfeited $400,000 bail.

Following his arrest, Chagra appeared before U.S. Magistrate Joseph L. Ward, who set Feb. 29 for a hearing on his return to Texas. Ward continued the $3 million bail set for Chagra after he disappeared.

Chagra, asked by a reporter where he had been for the past six months, responded, "On the Las Vegas Strip."

Chagra is the brother of the late Lee Chagra, a prominent El Paso, Texas attorney who was murdered in his office in December 1978 during a $200,000 holdup. Three men have been arrested in connection with the case.

Joe Chagra, Jimmy's brother and an El Paso attorney, said Thursday night he was flying to Las Vegas to resume representing his brother.

"I've talked with Jimmy," he said. "He was in good spirits. He said he turned himself in."

Joe Chagra said he "was sure" his brother wouldn't have surrendered "unless he wanted to fight it."

"It's not like my family to be runners and hiders," he said. "I think he was tired of running and wanted to get it over."

He said his brother's return to custody was a "relief," but added, "We've got a tough fight ahead."

'Bible-Toting Cop' Deals With Risky Situations

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — The two photographs, taken 1 1/4 years apart, are nearly identical.

One shows a burly, gray-haired state police major talking with a suspected killer, his arm firmly around the man's shoulders. In the second photo, the trooper is holding the suspect's hand.

They look almost like poses of a loving father and son. But beyond the images were a dead wife, her fetus ripped from her womb, a murdered mother, a cop shot in the head.

In both instances, just before the shutter clicked, Maj. Roy Titler had persuaded the armed man to surrender, disarming him with only words. Both men remain in custody today, awaiting judge's decisions as to whether they are legally competent to stand trial.

"You have to be afraid because if you're not, you're not good, you must be a little mental yourself," the commander said in an interview.

"You know that if you do something wrong, either he's dead or your wife's a widow."

When Titler walked away from the second incident on Jan. 8, he was called the "Bible-quoting cop." He had used the words of the 23rd Psalm to calm shotgun-toting David Brady of Elizabethtown.

Yet, he said, "I'm not a religious man. I don't go to church."

with Richard Greist. Inside the house, Greist's wife and her fetuses were dead, and his 5-year-old daughter and his mother had been stabbed, the girl wounded in the eye.

Grabbing a bulletproof vest, Titler and two other troopers walked in the front door and faced Greist in the living room.

"I told him to lie down on the floor, and all he said was, 'Don't let them hurt me,'" Titler said.

"He grabbed me by the arm and I told him, 'If they hurt you, they'll have to hurt me first.'"

The photograph taken of Titler ushering suspected murderer Greist out of the house won a Pulitzer Prize.

"He's a major, and he had no damn business doing what he did" at Elizabethtown, one state police official said, more in admiration than with criticism.

"He's supposed to provide leadership, but sometimes he takes it too far."

Titler, a father of four, explained it this way:

"I don't enjoy someone getting shot, but I do enjoy the high of a situation like that. I don't know whether that's good or bad."

Titler said, "I don't go to church."

Standing with empty hands, in houses where people already lay dead, how close had he come to being killed himself?

"Not close at all," Titler replied. "I watch the person, talk to him, and I can tell you when there's danger, that it's bad and I'd better change my tactics. But I can't tell you objectively what exactly that danger looks like."

"At one point, I had four men with guns, two shotguns and two handguns, pointed at him (Brady) 10 feet away. If I had wanted him dead, all I would have had to do was 'Take him out.' But we don't do that."

After Brady surrendered, "A little girl walked up to me and said, 'Mr. Titler, you're my hero.'" Titler said. "But I'm not a hero. A lot of police handle things like this."

After 32 years of facing down armed persons, Titler said he's "more caring for people, more mellow. And you're more confident." He has no special training for hostage situations, although he has attended seminars on the subject.

And it was simply chance that put him in front of the cameras in May 1978 in Pottstown and on Jan. 8 in Elizabethtown — he just happened to be patrolling nearby.

When Titler arrived at the scene in Pottstown, troopers had already begun negotiations.

Thousands Said To Be Sterilized

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Prostitutes and petty criminals reportedly were among the thousands of persons sterilized at state hospitals over a 50-year period in a program to eliminate "misfits" from society. The law authorizing the operations is still on the books.

The extent of the program, which ended in 1972, was discovered during a search of records at Lynchburg Training School and Hospital, one of the state's mental hospitals, the Richmond Times-Dispatch said in today's editions.

During that period, more than 4,000 men, women and children were sterilized at the Lynchburg institution alone. Many of those were told only that the operation was to correct medical problems, the Times-Dispatch said.

The law authorizing such surgery at the discretion of hospital directors was upheld by the U.S. Supreme Court.

Police Recover Case, No Money

Hereford police Thursday recovered the brown attache case which had contained an undetermined amount of money stolen in an armed robbery Wednesday night at Mr. Burger East, 820 E. Park Ave.

The case contained only a few checks when it was discovered by a man in the bed of his pickup truck.

Police investigated a domestic quarrel in the 700 block of Stanton and a fight at the Blue Water Garden Apartments. According to police reports, a woman at the apartments complained that a man, whom she knew, had grabbed her child by the hair because he said the youngster was throwing eggs.

The woman complained that the man struck her twice and added that she hit him back. No charges have been filed over the altercation.

"In fact, I've had prospective employers ask if I'd give high school graduates GED tests. I can't, of course, because they're ineligible."

Like guiding tours, the work is satisfying, according to Thompson.

"I enjoy seeing the faces of people light up when they found out they have qualified for the certificate. It changes lives. A lot of people are not the same person when they go from digging ditches to going to college and becoming professionals," he said.

"It breaks my heart when I tell them they've failed the test."

Thompson moved to Deaf Smith County in 1927 from Hansford County. He was graduated from Tierra Blanca School, which is 11 miles west of Hereford, then went to work for Willy's Overland Agency, selling an automobile known as a Whippet.

He later worked as a grocery clerk and pharmacist, and, in 1939, was elected to the office of county and district clerk. He served in county politics until 1953.

"Some people in the school system insisted I get my teaching certificate and start teaching school. I taught social studies and Spanish for awhile," Thompson said.

He became a counselor in the school district in 1959.

Thompson is past president of the Chamber of Commerce and United Way, a trustee for the J.E. Hill Estate and a former director of the Red Cross and county child-welfare board. He has served as president of the Hereford, Texas, Federal Credit Union since 1947 and has seen assets increase from $50,000 in 1950 to more than $10.5 million this year.

Thompson has been a member of the Hereford Lions Club since 1940. He also is active in First Christian Church, where he serves as elder.

The Thompsons have two daughters—Elaine Trew and Lynn Smithson. He also has two granddaughters—one a student at Amarillo College and another who is married.

Iran

the U.S. Embassy in Tehran since Nov. 4 issued yet another statement Thursday demanding the return of deposed Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi in exchange for the captives, saying: "If the shah is not extradited, any expectation of America about the reconsideration of the situation of the hostages is a foolish expectation."

A spokesman for the militants told a reporter in Tehran his group had been encouraged by Khomeini's statement Wednesday urging Iranians to "forcefully demand" return of the shah from his refuge in Panama and not give up "until final victory."

Bani-Sadr, who is known to support an end to the crisis, has said Iran's determination to get the shah back to stand trial on charges of mass murder and plundering the nation's wealth is unrelated to the hostage issue.

He also said Wednesday in an interview with a Canadian reporter in Tehran that the U.N. panel is not linked to the Americans' release. Ghotbzadeh has made similar statements since Waldheim announced the panel's mandate Wednesday.

Carter administration officials, however, have privately linked the panel's investigation to the hostages' release, and on Thursday they said they believed Iranian authorities were still committed "in principle" to freeing the Americans.

Afghanistan

style offensive on March 21," New Year's Day for Afghanistan's Moslems.

The massive North Vietnamese Tet lunar new year's offensive of March 1968 was considered the turning point against American and South Vietnamese forces in the Vietnam war.

So far, the anti-communist Afghan rebels have confined their 22-month-old war against a string of pro-Soviet governments to the countryside, where their forces can mount sniper attacks and then slip away to mountain hideouts.

Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance's effort to get the Russians out of Afghanistan with a mass boycott of the Moscow Olympics appeared to be foundering and he flew home from London.

Vance said he found agreement among America's European allies on the "general objectives" of protests against the Soviet moves in Afghanistan, but "there are differences of opinion on how to carry them out."

Vance said West Germany and Italy promised to consider joining a U.S.-sponsored Olympic boycott, but he was unable to shake French opposition to such a move. The French were said to feel a boycott would disrupt East-West detente in Europe.

Vance ended the European leg of his tour Thursday in London, where Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's Conservative government vowed to back America to the hilt. Mrs. Thatcher said the sending of athletes to Moscow would be tantamount to "condoning an international crime."

Taxes

taken until after the program has had a chance to work for several months.

On the second matter, House conferees rejected a Senate plan for a $40-a-year tax credit — subtracted directly from income taxes owed — for every household, regardless of energy costs. The maximum credit would have gone to those earning up to $20,000 and would have phased out at $22,000.

The tax credit proposal, opposed by the Carter administration, would amount to an across-the-board tax cut for any household with income under $22,000 a year.

Still to be considered is another option, weighted toward households that use heating oil. It would allow a tax credit of up to $200 a year for families earning up to $20,000 with the credit phasing out at $22,000. The size of the credit would depend on heating-oil expenditures.

Those homes not heated with oil would qualify for a flat $30 credit — again, an across-the-board tax cut for any household under $22,000 a year.

The panel already has agreed that $57 billion — 25 percent of the estimated $227.3 billion the "windfall" tax will produce in the 1980s — should be set aside to help lower-income families cope with rising fuel costs. The question is how to allocate it.

Sixty percent of the total tax, or $136 billion, would be earmarked tentatively for income-tax reductions. The remainder would finance development of new energy sources, improve the transportation system and provide incentives for conservation.

Rain

waters, but it could pose a hazard when the flow eases, officials said.

Travel across the Salt, which cuts through Phoenix, remained snarled and authorities said the Interstate 10 bridge over the river would be closed until next month because of erosion around its support piers.

Gov. Bruce Babbitt has called for congressional action to help with the state's perennial flooding. Damage in Arizona is now estimated at $90 million.

In California's Riverside County, the entire town of San Jacinto was awash, and its 6,500 residents fled after a levee along the raging San Jacinto River burst.

In Palm Springs, water poured from a breached levee, inundating three foothill communities and sending more than a thousand people to evacuations centers.

In a desert area in the southwest part of the county, homes were reported under water and about 5,000 residents were isolated by floodwaters. The Air National Guard and Marines were lifting people out by helicopter and ferrying in supplies to other residents.

In San Diego's fashionable Mission Valley, hotels, shopping centers and homes were flooded. Six major San Diego reservoirs reached their highest levels since 1941, and the El Capitan was threatening to spill more water into the Mission Valley area. But officials said none of the dams had been weakened or was in danger of breaking.

In Northern California, emergency crews were racing to shore up eroding levees in the Sacramento-San Joaquin River Delta before another storm hit the area. Two islands in the delta were inundated by water Thursday, and several others were evacuated. "It's a very nervous situation," said Bill Ward of the Office of Emergency Services.

Heavy snow fell in the Sierra Nevada on Thursday, closing a 40-mile stretch of U.S. 50 because of mudslides and danger of avalanches.

In Malad, Idaho, 60 people returned home after the water level in a reservoir dropped. State officials continue to monitor the stability of a 30-year-old earthen dam.

In Utah, the flow of water cascading over a dam near the town of Enterprise is slowing, and officials said deterioration had stabilized. Damage in the state stood at more than $3 million.

Local Kindergarteners Study Nutrition

It may seem that kindergarten is a fairly young age to begin teaching nutrition, but "not so," according to kindergarten teachers at Hereford Elementary Schools including Aikman, Bluebonnet, West Central, Northwest, Shirley and Tierra Blanca, where teachers recently learned how to use "Little Ideas," a food awareness program, during a workshop presented by Patricia Smith, R.D., Dairy Council, Inc. nutrition consultant, Hereford.

The teachers will soon be introducing their students to a variety of foods in the "Little Ideas" nutrition program. Once the children become familiar with more foods, they are more likely to eat them at home and at school. This means less plate waste, and improved eating habits which carry over even into adulthood.

Kindergarteners learn to recognize foods in various forms, such as raw carrots, and cooked carrots in a casserole. The next step is grouping foods into ten broad categories such as "meats," "fruits," "breads," etc.

The "Little Ideas" program lays the groundwork for second and fifth grade nutrition programs in which the children learn to balance a meal, and finally, a whole day's intake according to choices from the U.S. Department of Agriculture's food grouping system for milk, meat, vegetable-fruit and bread-cereal.

"We help people to make wise food choices," said Mrs. Smith. "The best time for beginning nutrition education is at the initial onset of formal education."

by local dairymen. In addition, this year DCI has received a grant from the Texas Education Agency to supplement DCI's programs, and to increase the number of teachers and students reached within the state.

Ann Landers Credit Card Rules

DEAR ANN LANDERS: These days, when credit cards are becoming a way of life, there is a growing need to educate the public. I work at a credit card center and am appalled at the ignorance I encounter every day. Please, Ann, print the facts:

1. Everyone has an approved credit limit and he must stay within it. Remember, a credit card is not a substitute for money. It's a promise to pay.
 2. If a person wants to increase his limit, certain guidelines must be followed. Only those who qualify will get it. If you don't qualify, don't yell at the person who tells you, "Sorry-it's not possible." He or she had nothing to do with the decision. It was made higher up, based on your earnings.
 3. Keep your cool if informed that you are over your limit. It's amazing how many people don't even know what their limit is.
 4. Ignoring phone calls and notices to pay up will get you nowhere. Save yourself the embarrassment and cost of being hauled into court. It's no picnic.

 Thanks, Annie. If I see this in print it will make my day.—Richmond, Va. Contributor

DEAR CONTRIBUTOR: Your day is made! Thanks for helping to educate the public on a subject of vital importance.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I realize that competition between children is natural (it is called sibling rivalry), but what goes on in our family is not natural, it's sadistic, and it's driving me crazy. Please give me some help.

Our sons are 13 and 14 years old. We love them both very much and show no favoritism whatever. They have separate bedrooms and separate bathrooms. We do not buy them the same clothing. We try to treat each one as an individual.

They always fought a lot, but now they fight constantly about everything and anything—who is eating whose cereal, who gets the blue glass and who gets the yellow one, who has gone into whose room, etc. It's fight, hit and shove from morning till night. They argue from the minute they get up in the morning till they leave for school. When they come home, it starts all over again.

My husband is gone a lot, and we have a little girl who is three. I'd appreciate anything you can suggest.—Pooped in Bakersfield

DEAR BAKE: I suspect both boys feel displaced by the little girl and they are trying to get your attention. Fighting is a perfect way to do it.

Let them know that from now on, they must settle all differences between themselves. Ignore their fights and turn a deaf ear to their complaints. You'll find before long they will get along better. (P.S. I'll bet their behavior would improve considerably if their dad could spend more time at home and give them the attention they obviously hunger for.)

DEAR READERS: Several weeks ago I printed a letter from a mother who was worried about her handicapped son. He had a withered arm and a limp. The following letter arrived too late to use in my response but it's so up-beat I want to share it with you. Here it is:

DEAR ANN: My legs are crippled but my mind isn't. I'm in a lot better shape than some guys on the football team. I'm determined to be a trial lawyer—and a good one. My life is going to be exciting and productive. I have a lot to offer and nothing can stop me. Yes, Ann, I am going places and I don't need legs to get there. Sign me—A.O.K. In Long Island

It's not always easy to recognize love, especially the first time around. Acquaint yourself with the guidelines. Read Ann Landers' booklet, "Love or Sex and How to Tell the Difference." For a copy, mail 50 cents and a long, self-addressed envelope with your request to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611.

Concert to Follow Hypnosis Program

Area residents are invited to witness a demonstration of hypnosis, as performed by Terrial Mitchell during a program and concert to be presented at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in the Amarillo Civic Center auditorium.

Mitchell has been working in the field of hypnosis for eight years, both on stage and in clinical usage. While he practices the serious side of hypnosis at his clinic in Oklahoma City, he spotlights the entertaining and educational aspects of the science in his stage shows.

Mitchell is not a newcomer to Amarillo, having performed in several of that city's night spots.

Mitchell's hypnosis show will serve as an introduction to a country music concert to be presented that evening by Charly McClain, who is making her Amarillo debut. Her recorded songs have included "Lay Down," "Let Me Be Your Baby," "That's What You Do to Me" and "Take Me Back."

Tickets for the upcoming concert and hypnosis show are available at the following Amarillo locations: Jake Box 17, Graham Central Station, Boot Hill, radio station KIXZ and Billy's Band Aid. All tickets will be general admission at a price of $6 each. Ticket availability will be limited.

Delegate Returns from Conference

[EDITOR'S NOTE: Eloise McDougal of Hereford was the official delegate from the Northwest Texas Conference of United Methodist Churches when she attended the recent Assembly of Texas Conferences of Churches at McAllen, Mrs. McDougal is the chairman of Conference, Ecumenical and Inter-Religious Concerns.]

MCALLEN — Representatives to the annual Assembly of the Texas Conference of Churches got a closer look recently at the attractions and problems of the Texas-Mexico border. In six bus tour-seminars they saw and heard about what's happening in the Lower Rio Grande Valley, from people intent on improving the quality of life there.

A bus-seminar on migrant and seasonal farmworkers gave the group a chance to view their situation from several perspectives. It began with a talk by Jesus Moya, of the Texas Farmworkers Union, on the way to Hidalgo on the Mexico border. There Isaias Aguayo and Pedro Flores hosted the TCC members at Colonias del Valle, one of the oldest organizations that helps 94 colonias (small communities) solve their problems. This organization of farmworkers offers programs for day care, housing, water supplies, and civil rights.

Next, Sister Tess Brown at Colonias del Valle in San Juan spoke on efforts of the United Farmworkers. In Weslaco, Dr. Roy Haines of Texas A&I University told how academic institutions provide services to farmworkers. At Progresso, south of Weslaco, Francisco Rodriguez described how an organization for small farm operations, Organizacion del Pueblo del Progreso, provides services. Newton Dyer, of the Texas Farm Bureau, told of the viewpoints of small and large farmers.

A second bus tour-seminar showed efforts to provide health care to the poor and underprivileged. On it, TCC members heard from Sister Mary Nicholas, director of the Hidalgo County Health Department, Samuel Sanchez, former director of the Hidalgo County Health Care Corporation, Sister Pauline Boyer, manager of a rural health clinic in Edcouch, and Fidel Pizana, area coordinator for the South Texas Health Systems Agency.

A tour on human and economic development showed a wide range of approaches to rural sanitation, services to the elderly, water rights, housing and other problems. Enrique Garza, executive director, told how the non-profit Union y Dignidad organization provides rural garbage collection to colonias outside the jurisdiction of Mercedes. At San Juan, the TCC members saw a program for the elderly at the Amigos del Valle Center, where Julia Radsovic spoke. Immigration and border problems were discussed on the route from San Juan to Edcouch by Benigno Pena, executive director of the South Texas Immigration Council.

Francisco Salazar at Edcouch led a tour of a farm workers housing project. He is a director of a three-county housing corporation. From Mercedes to Relampago, Arturo Ramirez told how the Military Highway Water Supply Corporation is helping residents get together to set up water systems in rural areas. Guadalupe Tamez joined the tour at Relampago, to tell about operation of a day care center. Then participants visited three colonias in the mid-Hidalgo County area—Agua Dulce, Verde, and Colonia Nueva.

The education bus-seminar began with a visit to Region 1 Education Service Center in Edinburg, hosted by Yolanda Chapa and Marsha Anderson. Next, Felipe Lozano at Pan American University, director of Project CAMP, told about the "College Assistance for Migrants Program." At Weslaco they saw the vocational training program of the Opportunity Industrialization Corporation (OIC), and heard from its director, Noe Cavazos. There Arnaldo Cantu, director of the Service for Educational Rehabilitation, joined the group to describe SER's training center.

The interaction of religion and culture in the Valley was covered in a fifth tour, led by Sister Marian Strohmeier of McAllen. It began with a visit to a shop in McAllen that sells the herbs and other curatives of curanderismo, or folk medicine. In Hidalgo, they heard Mrs.

H.A. (Cathryn) Morgan tell how the Border Mission regularly holds services for 1200, distributes food to more than 600 people each week, and provides clothing to hundreds of needy Mexicans.

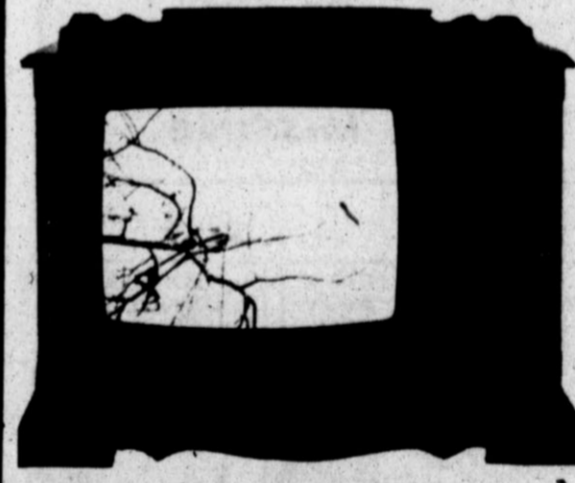

Near Mission, they saw St. Peter's Novitiate, a former headquarters for the Oblate Fathers who first came to the Valley as missionaries in 1849. The building is now used by the Tropical Texas Center for Mental Health and Mental Retardation. The rest of the tour included several religious organizations, ending at the Shrine of Our Lady of San Juan, now under construction to replace a building which burned in 1970.

The sixth tour gave a closer look at the impact and life of the tens of thousands of tourists who winter in this area. Each year the winter Texans bring in and spend $600 million in the Valley. The tour was led by Glen Marshall, himself a winter visitor from Nebraska. TCC group members saw the McAllen Civic Center, the McAllen State Bank, Chamber of Commerce, St. Mark's United Methodist Church, and Tropic Star trailer park at Pharr.

Heiden Wins 4th Medal; Has Race Left

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (AP) — It's four gold medals down and one to go for speed skating superstar Eric Heiden, who continues to rewrite the Olympic record book with bold, broad strokes that have turned these Winter Games into a salute to his individual brilliance.

They have become the Heiden Olympics, unquestionably dominated by the long, lean 21-year-old from Madison, Wis., the first man in history to win four golds in a single Winter Games.

By himself, Eric has matched the best gold medal production any entire American team has managed in the Winter Olympics since the United States won six events in the 1932 Games — the last time Lake Placid served as host. Only once since then — in 1952 at Oslo — has America won as many as four winter golds and now Heiden has done that all alone.

And he still has one more race to go.

Heiden's latest gold came in Thursday's 1,500-meter race when he was timed in a record 1 minute, 55.44 seconds. That followed victories at 500, 1,000 and 5,000 meters. All that remains is the 10,000-meter race on Saturday and you know who the favorite is in that one.

Two Norwegians, Kai Arne Stenshemmet and Terje Andersen, finished 2-3 behind Heiden in the 1,500, timed in 1:56.81 and 1:56.92 respectively. That silver and bronze combined with a third place bronze medal in women's 4 x 5 kilometer cross country relay race gave Norway nine medals for the Games and third place in the overall standings.

East Germany took the gold in the cross country race and added a silver from Jan Hoffmann in the men's figure skating and moved in front of the Soviet Union in the medal race 19-18. The Russians, second in the cross country, still lead in golds 8-7.

Heiden's gold was the seventh speed skating medal won by the United States and Charlie Tickner's figure skating bronze gave the United States a total of eight medals for the Games. America won 11 medals at the 1976 Games at Innsbruck, but only three of them were gold.

Tiny Liechtenstein claimed its first Olympic gold ever and third skiing medal of these Games when Hanni Wenzel won the women's giant slalom. The silver went to Irene Epple of West Germany and France's Perrine Pelen claimed the bronze by the narrowest of margins — one one-hundredth of a second ahead of teammate Fabienne Serrat.

The men's figure skating crown was won by Robin Cousins of Britain who overtook Hoffman in the Thursday night's free skating portion of his program. Tickner, third after the compulsories and short program, remained third for the bronze.

Earlier, world champion Linda Fratianne of the United States put on a dazzling short free style program to take over second place in the ladies figure skating competition. She trails East Germany's Annet Potsch halfway through the event with Dagmar Lurz of West Germany third. The gold medal will be decided in the long freestyle program Saturday night.

Tonight, the ambitious, unbeaten United States hockey team moves into the medal showdown portion of its tournament, facing the defending champion Soviet Union. Finland plays Sweden in the other medal round game.

The Americans are seeking their first hockey medal since 1972 and with four victories and a tie so far, they have done almost as well on their ice as Heiden has on his in these Games. For the United States, it has been all hockey and Heiden at Lake Placid.

"It was not as hard as I thought it would be," Heiden said of his latest gold. "To tell you the truth, I feel pretty good."

And he looked good, too, despite a near-slip on the third record set by Russian speed skater Lydia Skoblikova in 1964. No athlete has ever won five. Will that mean extra pressure Saturday when he goes for No. 5?

"If I skate well, I'll be happy," he said. "If I skate poorly, I'll be upset. It really doesn't matter whether I win or lose, just as long as I do my best."

Wenzel, who had won a silver medal in the downhill, captured Liechtenstein's first-ever gold with a 1:27.33 second run, third fastest of the day, for a two-heat total of 2:41.66. Epple's two-run total was 2:42.12 for the silver and Pelen took the bronze in 2:42.14, a bare one-hundredth of a second ahead of Serrat. Christin Cooper was the top American finisher, seventh in 2:44.71.

Serrat was bitter about her medal near-miss.

"This is the fourth time in big races I have been behind her (Pelen) by hundredths of a second, and I don't like it," said Serrat, the frustration spilling over into tears. "We're always together and I'm always second."

Lynn Spencer finished seventh

Second was where the Soviet Union found itself in the women's 4 x 5 kilometer cross country ski relay, beaten convincingly by the young East German unit, which was timed in 1:02:11.10. The Russians were timed in 1:03:18.20 and Norway clocked 1:04:13.50 for the bronze.

The United States team of Allison Owen-Spencer, Beth Faxon, Leslie Bancroft and in 1:06:55.41.

President Walter Mondale, speaking in St. Paul, Minn., said the United States shortly would announce a site for an alternate Summer Olympics for countries to choose not to participate in the Moscow Games because of Soviet intervention in Afghanistan. Mondale said 23 nations now support the American position on the matter.

But United States Olympic Committee President Robert Kane said conditions might change permitting American athletes to participate in the Moscow Games.

Gaels Upset 2nd-Ranked Louisville

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The Louisville Cardinals have been pressing teams into submission all season, but they weren't such tough birds against the Iona Gaels.

In fact, the Gaels turned the usually troublesome defensive maneuver to their own advantage Thursday night in upsetting the nation's second-ranked college basketball team 77-60.

"We worked on their press a long time and it paid off," said Kevin Hamilton, who scored 20 points for Iona. "The coaches did a great job preparing us. We weren't afraid of their press. We attacked it well. We tried to score on it where other teams haven't. We knew we could score on them."

Piercing the Cardinal defense with elan, the Gaels got the ball inside to center Jeff Ruland enough times to offset a marvelous 32-point performance by Louisville guard Darrell Griffith. Ruland scored 30 points and grabbed 21 rebounds, thoroughly dominating inside play.

The upset followed a predictable 105-89 victory for top-ranked DePaul over Wagner in the first game of a doubleheader at Madison Square Garden.

"Our strategy was to control the tempo," said Iona Coach Jim Valvano, "and we did that well enough. We didn't give them transition baskets. We can't play a transition game with Louisville. They have super quickness."

The New York-area team led the Metro Conference regular-season champions most of the way, holding a 39-36 advantage at the half and then pulling away shortly after intermission with Hamilton and Ruland the dominating figures.

Hamilton scored eight of his points with outside shots to lead Iona to a 53-42 lead after five minutes of the second half. The rest of the night belonged to Ruland, who scored 14 of his points in the final 15 minutes as the Gaels pulled away to their biggest lead of the night at the buzzer.

The loss, incidentally, stopped an 18-game winning streak for Louisville, 25-3. The Gaels, 24-4, extended their current winning streak to 12.

The opener held few surprises, once DePaul got untracked against Wagner, 14-11, midway through the first half with an 11-point spurt keyed by Mark Aguirre's seven points. The Blue Demons led 53-37 at the half and rolled up their lead to as many as 24 points with 12:15 left.

Skip Dillard and Terry Cummings had 25 points each and Aguirre finished with 24 as unbeaten DePaul won its 24th game this season and 25th in a row over two years.

"It was kind of tough getting up for this game," admitted Aguirre. "But we adjusted to it. We play tougher against the tougher teams. But playing in the Garden helped."

Added the DePaul swingman: "Man for man, we match up with anybody in the country. It's a matter of pride now to win."

In other games involving the nation's Top Twenty teams Thursday night, No. 5 Louisiana,

State defeated Mississippi 77-74; No. 11 Ohio State whipped Northwestern 68-59; No. 14 Brigham Young outscored Colorado State 111-86; Michigan stunned No. 15 Purdue 75-64; No. 19 Indiana turned back Michigan State 75-72; and UCLA upset 20th-ranked Washington State 80-66.

DeWayne Scates capped a 32-point performance with two free throws with 15 seconds remaining to help LSU beat Mississippi. Kelvin Ransey scored 20 points, triggering Ohio State past Northwestern.

Devin Durrant's 31 points paced BYU's runaway triumph over Colorado State. Michigan's Keith Smith scored all 13 of his points in the second half to spark the Wolverines' upset of Purdue.

Mike Woodson, playing for only the third time since he was sidelined by injury on Dec. 18, contributed 20 points to help Indiana defeat Michigan State. Kiki Vandeweghe scored 15 of his 22 points in the second half to power UCLA over Washington State.

Weiskopf Leads 1st Round In Tourney

By JACK STEVENSON
AP Sports Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — With the pressure increasing from the young lions of the professional golfing tour, Tom Weiskopf decided the time had come to seek advice.

He looked up Ken Venturi, who had helped him before, and the former U.S. Open champion made several suggestions, including one that the 6-foot-3 Weiskopf take a lower stance.

"Sometimes you forget your faults unless you have someone as a mirror to reflect them," said the 37-year-old Weiskopf, a veteran of 15 years on the PGA tour, after taking the first-round lead in the $250,000 Glen Campbell-Los Angeles Open.

Weiskopf, who hasn't won since March, 1978, fired a 4-under-par 67 over the Riviera Country Club course. Right on his heels at 68 came Bobby Walzel and Stan Lee.

At 69 were Tom Watson, Calvin Peete, Johnny Miller, Allen Tapie, Bobby Wadkins, Don January and Danny Edwards.

The traffic jam of 15 at 1-under-par 70 going into today's rain-threatened second round included defending champion, Lanny Wadkins and Gil Morgan, who won this tournament two years ago: Former U.S. Open and Los Angeles winner Gene Littler was also in the bunch.

Jack Nicklaus, making his second tour appearance of 1980, fared poorly with only a 73. "I developed a bad habit with a waggle in my backswing," said Weiskopf, explaining his search for help. "It was only a little movement of the club but it brought a swing that was not right for me. Unless the timing was absolutely perfect, I would either push or pull. I went to Ken since he had helped me earlier in my career."

"Venturi gave me the solution — remain low in the backswing."

"I have learned from great players and studied their methods and tried to adopt those to my methods...but not too much, it could get too confusing."

Weiskopf said he also has controlled his temper. His last warning note was in 1976.

"I'm progressing," he said. "And I'd like to spend another 15 years at this game."

"I was especially happy that I didn't have a bogey. I shot a 67 at Cypress Point (in the Bing Crosby) but I did have a bogey that time."

He birdied the first hole by hitting the green of the 506-yard hole in two and two-putting. He sank putts of 15 feet at the fifth and two feet at both the sixth and 17th.

Things weren't good for Billy Casper, another former U.S. Open king who has won the Los Angeles Open. He shot an 80 in the opening round and withdrew.

Lon Hinkle, who battled Wadkins to the wire here a year ago, soared to an 81. He stayed in the tournament but will take a miracle to keep him from being cut at the end of 36 holes today.

Pressure Doesn't Hamper Skating Champ Heiden

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (AP) — All the people around him — his family, his friends, even his New York agent — are tight as a drum, but the pressure has failed to penetrate the loose, free-wheeling spirit of the man himself, Eric Heiden.

This tousle-haired, boyish king of the speed skating track refuses to be changed by the instant fame and possible fortune stemming from his four straight gold medal victories in the XIII Winter Olympic Games and his bid for an unprecedented fifth.

"Personally, I enjoy it when people have expectations of me," the handsome, 21-year-old athlete from Madison, Wis., told a press conference after winning the 1,500-meter race Thursday in record time. "You guys can write what you want about me."

"As far as I'm concerned I'd just soon go back to the pad and watch '2001.'"

This relaxed, devil-may-care attitude is in sharp contrast to that of almost everyone else closely associated with his historic adventure this week on the frozen 400-meter Olympic oval.

His mother, Nancy, is snappy and prefers not to be bothered. His father, Jack, an orthopedic surgeon, is unapproachable. His grandmother won't talk. His New York agent is arrogant and officious. Even his sister, Beth, who settled for a bronze medal in four races, wept openly and criticized the pressure of the press.

After Eric had clinched his fourth gold medal, his mother was approached by a newsmen near the exit gate. "I don't talk to the press," she said icily. Nearby, Mrs. Art Thomson, the grandmother, said, "We don't want to be bothered."

A young man in a blue official jacket approached the newsmen and said, "I have been selected to guard the Heidens' privacy. If you don't go away I will call a trooper."

Later, Heiden came into the auditorium, smiling broadly while chomping away on a mouthful of gum. There is a little boy quality about him that seems incongruous with his 6-foot-1, 185-pound frame.

Somebody asked him if he had a special diet.

"No," he replied, "for breakfast I had three bowls of Kellogg's corn flakes and raisin bread."

Everybody laughed at this suggestion of advance commercialism. Heiden couldn't restrain an amused laugh.

Vega Loses Bi-District Tilt

The Vega Longhorn boys basketball team's season finally came to a close Thursday night as they dropped a Class 3-A bi-district title 51-42 to the Channing Eagles.

Vega's Scotty Cook (who saved the Longhorn's with a game-winning bucket last week against Bovina, in the district champ title), parlayed 14 total points to lead all other scorers for Vega while Bobby Arnold netted 10 as the second leading scorer.

But, their efforts went for naught, as the Channing squad outscored the Longhorn's in every quarter in order to advance further into the state finals.

Sims Dominates Scoring; Buffs Beat Creighton

AMARILLO, TEXAS (AP) — George Sims scored 22 points, leading a quintet of other double-figure scorers for West Texas State and pacing the Buffaloes to a 103-86 win over Creighton in Missouri Valley Conference basketball Thursday night.

For the second straight game Sims dominated WTSU's inside play, adding 13 rebounds Thursday night and running his two-game totals to 48 points and 26 caroms.

West Texas, now 8-7 in the conference and 16-9 overall, kept alive its hopes for a first-division MVC finish. The top four teams in regular-season play win the home-court advantage for the first round of next week's post-season tournament.

Creighton, also in the first division hunt, dropped to 9-7 and 15-11. The Bluejays concluded their regular season Thursday.

West Texas grabbed a 46-44 halftime lead. Then, midway through the second half, Steve Ornelaz scored six points and Sims added two more to put the Buffaloes on top for good, 63-59.

Guard Terry Adolph keyed a wide-open stretch run with 12 points and 12 assists.

Others in double figures for WTSU were Mike Lorenc with 16, Erskine Robinson with 13, and Carl Johnson and Eddie Harris with 11 each.

McKenna finished with 24 for Creighton. George Morrow added 16 points and 13 rebounds.

PUTTING POORLY

LONDON (AP) — Severiano Ballesteros of Spain won the British Open in 1979 but he glumly observed that his putting was off frequently in other tournaments and it cost him.

"Before 1979," he said, "I could count on an average of 30 putts a round but it went up to 34 or 35 in '79. Another thing, a back problem kept me from swinging easily and also forced me to lose some sleep."

Union Leader Jailed in Strike

CHICAGO (AP) — Firefighters walked picket lines in front of fire stations today as their union president was jailed and the vice president urged a general strike of all organized labor in Chicago.

The picketing began Thursday after a judge sentenced Chicago Fire Fighters Union President Frank Muscare to five months in jail for criminal contempt and allowed the city to withdraw from a strike-ending agreement with the 4,350-member union.

"Frank Muscare, you did this all by yourself," Circuit Judge John Hechinger said as he accused Muscare of not acting in good faith after the truce was reached Wednesday night.

"You, with your big mouth. You showed a total disregard for the agreement. You don't have integrity and your men are the losers," said Hechinger.

Hechinger reimposed $40,000-a-day fines against the union and its officers that had been suspended during the truce. He ordered new civil contempt fines of $1,000 to $5,000 for nine union officers.

Muscare was taken to the Cook County Jail immediately after the hearing, authorities said.

Meanwhile, William Reddy, first vice president of the local, requested meetings with the Chicago Federation of Labor and the police officer's union to set the groundwork for a general shutdown. There was no immediate comment from other union leaders.

Reddy called the breakdown of the strike-ending agreement "part of a scenario to bust this union and all labor in this city."

The executive board of the Chicago Fire Fighters Union voted in a meeting after the court session Thursday to resume picketing of firehouses, according to a spokesman. Picketing in the eight-day strike was stopped earlier in the day after the judge said a halt had been part of Wednesday's agreement.

The agreement called for firefighters to report back to work under a plan to be devised by the city, for 24 hours of round-the-clock contract negotiations and for provisions that the union not retaliate against non-strikers and the city not retaliate against strikers.

Hechinger said at a hearing Thursday night that the city had kept its end of the bargain.

Union Attorney J. Dale Berry said there was confusion over how the firefighters should report back to work and the agreement didn't prohibit them from picketing. But Hechinger said Muscare understood Wednesday that under the agreement there would be no picketing and that Fire Commissioner Richard Albrecht would have authority to design and implement the back-to-work plan.

Confusion over where firefighters were to report Thursday morning resulted when the union told firefighters in the nation's second-largest city to report to their usual fire stations.

The city locked the men out of the stations and later told the strikers to report to district headquarters to register and be assigned to firehouses.

Hechinger said that when Muscare went to a membership meeting Wednesday night, he directed the striking firefighters to continue picketing while negotiations went on.

He termed the union's handling of the strike "absolutely atrocious," and Muscare's behavior "irreprehensible."

The judge also imposed $1,000 fines against nine other union officials for civil contempt and fines of $5,000 against Muscare and Michael Lass, an officer of the International Firefighters Association.

'Posse Justice' Used By New York Citizens

NEW YORK (AP) — Amid a plague of ugly crime — including what the mayor calls "an epidemic of gun violence" — New Yorkers are fighting back with old-fashioned posse justice.

Rush-hour commuters in Grand Central Station cheered on Thursday as bystanders banded together to grab a wallet-snatcher. Subway riders tackled a mugger and held him until police arrived.

Earlier this week, a knife-wielding assailant fled into the arms of police to escape an angry crowd.

Crime — both above and below ground — has been on the front page and on the evening news here in recent days.

—A man brandishing a meat cleaver slashed four riders on New York subways in two attacks, and managed to escape by jumping off the train only moments before it left the station. He's still at large.

—A still-unidentified man was decapitated when he was pushed under the wheels of an on-rushing train, and an 11-year-old boy who was shoved into the path of a subway remains in grave condition.

—Two police officers have been killed and six others wounded since the year began.

Mayor Edward Koch calls it "an epidemic of gun possession and gun violence." On Thursday, he asked the Legislature to set minimum one-year prison sentences for those who carry unlicensed guns.

But citizens are also reacting — three times Thursday and, just days after angry commuters and a subway conductor were disarmed and captured a man who had threatened them with a knife.

"Chalk this one up for the public," said Transit Authority Police Officer David Orshovitz after the incident on Tuesday.

"I'm sure if we hadn't arrived, we could have found one suspect hanging from a subway beam. The suspect was escaping to us to keep away from them," he said.

In cases Thursday:

—About 100 persons plodding through Grand Central Station on their way to work stopped to cheer as 20 bystanders chased and grabbed a man who tried to steal a woman's wallet as she waited to get coffee at a terminal bakery. "It was a whole team effort," said bakery manager Joseph Zaro, who helped hold the robber until police led the suspect away.

—A band of eight to 10 subway riders chased and tackled an 18-year-old man after they saw him snatch two gold chains worth $2,600 from a woman's neck, police said. The angry straphangers also held the suspect until authorities arrived.

—A 60-year-old salesman brandishing what looked like a gun chased and helped capture two teen-agers who tried to grab his wallet as he dozed on a subway train. Police said his "gun" turned out to be a device to spray the chemical Mace.

Earlier this week, a recently discharged Marine and former Golden Gloves boxer came to the aid of a woman who was being threatened on a subway train.

And 20 subway riders fought back against a knife-wielding mugger before Officer Orshovitz and other police arrived at the Times Square station.

Louisiana Official May Testify after Delays

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Louis Lambert may make a twice-delayed appearance today before a federal grand jury looking into the government's Brialab investigation of public employee insurance and political intrigue.

The chairman of Louisiana's Public Service Commission was expected to be asked about $10,000 paid by FBI undercover informant Joseph Hauser to Lambert's unsuccessful 1979 campaign for governor.

Lambert, who first appeared before the grand jury Feb. 14, was told to return in a week because the panel had more witnesses and evidence than it could cope with in its first day of deliberations.

The grand jury reportedly is looking into allegations that Hauser, a twice-convicted Beverly Hills, Calif., insurance promoter, may have made illegal payments to Louisiana politicians in return for assurances they would help Prudential Insurance Co. land a lucrative state employees' group insurance contract.

Camille Gravel, who represented Lambert before the grand jury a week ago, disclosed that Hauser made an unreported purchase of $10,000 worth of tickets to a Lambert testimonial last November. Gravel maintained the ticket purchase was exempt from Louisiana's campaign spending disclosure law.

Reports also circulated that Hauser made similar contributions to the unsuccessful campaigns of two other 1979 candidates for governor.

State Sen. Edgar Mouton said campaign aide Charles Roemer II admitted forgetting a $15,000 contribution from Hauser. As state Commissioner of Administration, Roemer until last Sept. 1 supervised state employees' group insurance.

Lt. Gov. James Fitzmorris said he took his lawyer's advice and refused to testify before the grand jury on the basis of his Fifth Amendment protection against self-incrimination. However, Fitzmorris denied exchanging promises for money during his campaign for governor.

Three aides to Gov. Edwin Edwards made grand jury appearances Thursday, fueling a newspaper's speculation that prosecutors may be trying to build a case against Edwards.

Edwards said last week he told the grand jury of "playing games" at a November meeting with Hauser at the governor's mansion in Baton Rouge. He said it was obvious Hauser was recording their conversation and he apparently had underworld connections.

Edwards said Hauser told him he had $50,000 a month to spread among helpmates obtaining the public employees' insurance for Prudential, but that he took no money.

In a copyright story today, the New Orleans Times-Picayune quoted sources as saying Hauser was among 15 persons invited to lunch with Edwards at the mansion in June, 1976. The newspaper said the Californian was in the capital to purchase National American Life Inurance Co. from Baton Rouge businessman Roger LeBlanc.

The Times-Picayune quoted its source as saying Edwards may well have forgotten welcoming Hauser to Louisiana at the luncheon because such affairs at the mansion are commonplace.

The newspaper said Hauser was also taken on that same 1976 day to meet with Sherman Bernard, Louisiana's insurance commissioner.

The grand jury heard Thursday from Jane Laborde, Edwards' press secretary; Ann Davenport, Edwards' personal secretary, and Lt. Russell Milan, a state police member of the governor's security staff.

Ms. Laborde said she was asked many questions, including whether she remembered visits to the mansion by Lambert or Hauser. She said Lambert had visited the mansion often, frequently with others, but that she never met Hauser.

Ms. Laborde said she was briefed by the governor beforehand on questions that might be asked by the grand jury.

"That's good, just tell them that," Ms. Laborde quoted Edwards as saying when she told him she never met Hauser.

"He just calmed me down. He told me what I probably would be asked and he was right."

IN WAR OR PEACE, WASHINGTON PRAYED TO GOD

George Washington was a great deal more than just a military leader and a great statesman. He was a composite of all the dedicated patriots of his day, whose character traits included a willingness to risk everything they had in order to gain this Nation's freedom, and an absolute reliance upon God's guidance. Washington prayed for it during the darkest hours of battle, and he continued to seek it after he had attained the presidency. Moreover, his writings prove that he was a great believer in religious freedom of choice. Honor his birthday and follow his example by attending the Church of your own choice regularly.

Almighty God, we make our earnest prayer that Thou wilt keep the United States in Thy holy protection...

— George Washington

"He...was strong in faith, giving glory to God; And being fully persuaded that, what he had promised, he was able also to perform."

Legal Notices

On or about February 19, 1980, Pioneer Natural Gas Company ("Pioneer"), a division of Pioneer Corporation, filed a Statement of Intent with the Railroad Commission of Texas proposing to increase natural gas rates to the following large volume special contract customers:

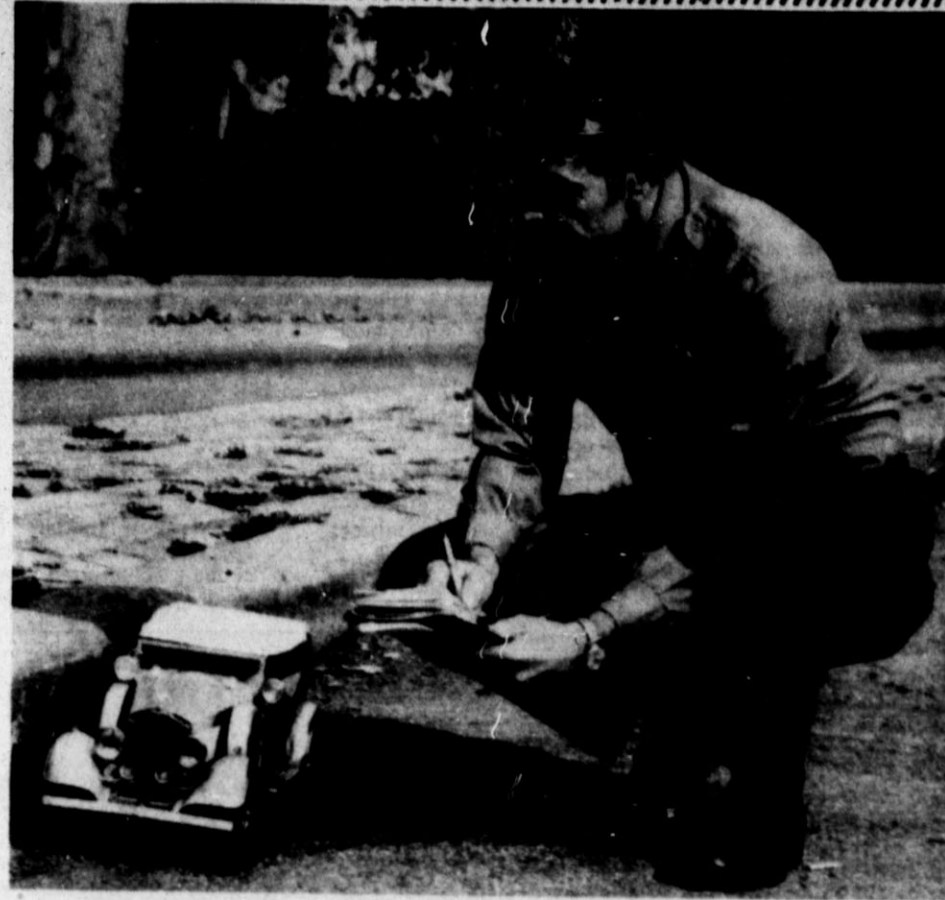

- AMOCO PRODUCTION CO.
- ARMOUR AND CO.
- CABOT CORPORATION
- COSDEN OIL & CHEMICAL CO.
- HOLLY SUGAR CORPORATION
- KERR CONSTRUCTION CO.
- LINDSAY MANUFACTURING CO.
- LUBBOCK FEED LOTS, INC.
- MAPCO, INC.
- MBPXL CORPORATION
- OZARK-MAHONING COMPANY
- PALO DURO PIPELINE COMPANY
- PHILLIPS PIPELINE COMPANY
- SID RICHARDSON CARBON COMPANY
- SOUTHWESTERN PORTLAND CEMENT CO.
- SOUTHWESTERN PUBLIC SERVICE CO.

The proposed rate change, which has been agreed to by these customers, consists of an increase from 29.92 cents per Mcf to 33.90 cents per Mcf above Pioneer's cost of gas plus certain adjustments for changes in the Consumer Price Index. The rate change is to become effective thirty-five (35) days after filing of the aforesaid Statement of Intent, or such other date as is permitted by the Railroad Commission.

DAVIS, Calif. (AP) — Actress Jane Fonda, rejected as a commencement speaker at the University of California medical school here, will instead send law school graduates into the world of torts and briefs.

Officials confirmed Thursday that Miss Fonda had accepted an invitation to present the commencement address at the University of California at Davis law school in May. She was not the first choice of the commencement committee — former U.N. ambassador Andrew Young and former Texas congresswoman Barbara Jordan were unable to appear. Last fall, the UC Davis medical school commencement committee rejected Miss Fonda as a graduation speaker. Students and administrators at the medical school said she would not be appropriate because she was not connected with medicine.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Tammy Wynette's D-I-V-O-R-C-E-S — and other episodes in her life — are headed for the small screen.

A made-for-television movie based on the life of the country singer is to go into production in May, according to Kathy Gangwish, a spokesman for Miss Wynette.

Casting has not been completed, Ms. Gangwish said Thursday, but Miss Wynette will play herself in the film based on her autobiography, "Stand by Your Man."

Miss Wynette and George Jones, who were divorced in 1975 after seven years of marriage, were reunited as a singing duo this month. The blonde singer, now married to her fifth husband, was abducted in 1978 in a case that remains unsolved.

DEL MAR, Calif. (AP) — The kids are grown, so actor Martin Milner and his wife, Judy, will celebrate their 23 years of marriage with a joint comeback on the stage.

Milner, who starred in television's "Route 66" and "Adam 12," said he and his wife will start road show engagements in April, starting together in "The Tender Trap" in Jacksonville, Fla. Next year, they expect to perform in San Antonio, Texas, and New Orleans.

The Milners met in Los Angeles where Judy, a singer and dancer, was a regular on a local TV show.

"We wanted kids, and she quit her career for 20 years," said Milner, 48. Now that the youngest of their four children is 16, he said, "Judy's finally coming out of the kitchen."

They celebrate their anniversary today.

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Charges of growing marijuana were dismissed, but actor Jan-Michael Vincent has pleaded guilty to a charge of possessing marijuana.

Vincent was fined $500 and placed on a year's summary probation by Superior Court Judge Bernard Selber on Thursday. Selber denied a request by the blond actor to be placed in a diversion program that would have allowed all the charges to be dismissed against him without trial if he underwent classes and therapy.

Vincent starred with Burt Reynolds in the Movie "Hooper," and also starred in "White Line Fever."

The State of the Vatican City and other places over which the Vatican retains control are remnants of the old Papal States. For almost 1,000 years the papacy held vast temporal possessions, including large areas of Italy and, until the French Revolution, parts of Southern France.

HEALTH

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.
Blood pressure & headache

DEAR DR. LAMB — Three years ago at age 51 my blood pressure became quite high. My doctor checked me for six weeks and then put me on Ser-Ap-Es. He said that once I started the medication I would have to keep taking it. He warned me about potassium loss and advised me to drink orange juice or eat fresh fruit, especially bananas. I'm 5 feet 8 and weigh 148 pounds but I'm not really overweight. He also took me off salt.

My doctor retired and moved away and I've gone to a new doctor. He said that my blood pressure was low at 110 over 70 and he didn't think I needed that much medicine. He put me on Aquatenon and so far my blood pressure has been normal.

One thing that bothers me is what our family doctor told me about not being able to quit Ser-Ap-Es once I had started it. Also I now have severe migraine headaches. I used to have a bad one every two or three months but I didn't have a single one during the three years I was taking Ser-Ap-Es. Now I have at least one a week and they're bad and it leaves me so depressed. I am wondering if the Ser-Ap-Es was keeping me from having those migraines. I take Tylenol but it doesn't seem to help. I don't think I can take these headaches much longer.

DEAR READER — Yours is a complicated problem. Ser-Ap-Es is a combination of Serpasil, a diuretic and a third medicine that some think improves kidney function. Serpasil does act as a tranquilizer and it may be this action that helped prevent your headaches while you were taking it. There are other tranquilizers that could be used that might do the same thing for you. I am concerned about your depression. I'm sure you meant this in relation to being depressed about having headaches but even moderate doses of Serpasil in some people will cause them to be depressed and sometimes they can have very severe depressions. One of the complications of both Ser-Ap-Es and Aquatenon is headache, so either medicine could actually cause a headache as well.

I'm sure you've discussed your headaches with your doctor but if your pressure is low enough, you might ask him to try you without any medicine at all. If your blood pressure stays normal without any medication, then the problem will be to deal with the question of your headaches rather than treating high blood pressure.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 1-8, Blood Pressure, to give you a better understanding of the mechanisms involved and the ranges of normal pressure. Also I'm sending you The Health Letter number 2-9, Headache: Man's Most Common Pain. Other readers who want either one of these issues can send 75 cents for EACH issue with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope. Send your request to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

There are other medicines you can take for elevated blood pressure that may also relieve a headache. One of these that works well in some people is Inderal. If you do have persistent elevated blood pressure, perhaps your doctor would like to try one of these medicines instead.

POLLY'S POINTERS

Glue from spool

DEAR POLLY — I crochet baby booties to sell so I buy ribbon on 20-yard spools. I need to know how to remove the glue from the ends that are fastened with tape. I have to throw away an inch or so from each bolt and that makes the last piece of ribbon I cut an inch or so too short to run through a bootie. — LILLIAN

DEAR LILLIAN — After spending quite a bit of time trying to remove the glue from the slip of ribbon you sent me I decided it was false economy — your time and mine are worth more than that. You get at least 40 "ties" from a bolt of this ribbon so just cut each one a fraction of an inch shorter than usual and you have it made. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — There is no need to fool around with lighted matches, etc. to get a ballpoint pen to write. Stick the point of the pen into a pencil eraser and turn it a few times and it will work if there is ink in the pen. — BETTY

DEAR POLLY — When my husband started using an electric razor I saved his old shaving brush and it is wonderful to use for dusting the many knick-knacks I have around the house. Great for pictures frames, too. The soft bristles get into all the corners and it is easy and quick. — ONALEE

DEAR POLLY — When a pin or needle is accidentally dropped it seems to get lost in shag carpeting. It must be found or someone could end up with it in a foot, so I keep a magnet handy and use it for retrieving them. — MRS. G.E.R.

DEAR POLLY — Mrs. C. asked for a way to remove cigarette smoke from her apartment. Burning a kerosene lamp was suggested by a reader, but I have a better remedy. I burn a vanilla candle and there is no smoke odor on clothes or in the house and the vanilla scent is very pleasing. Also, I keep a piece of plastic wrap between the pages of my cookbook. It keeps the pages clean while I am using a recipe and can be moved as needed. — BONNIE

Texas Briefs

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Austin cab drivers have joined the drive against armed robbers of drive-in stores.

Officials of the 38 local 7-Eleven convenience stores announced Tuesday an agreement with Austin Yellow-Checker Co. to set up taxi stands at three of the stores. More will be added later.

Southland Corp., owner of the 7-Eleven stores, said cab drivers would get free coffee and use of the stores' restroom and telephone.

In return, cab drivers will be encouraged to use their two-way radios in a general crime prevention effort. The drivers will be briefed on the type of suspicious activities they should report to their dispatcher, who in turn can call police.

"An observant driver sitting in front of a store virtually round-the-clock will cause a potential armed robber to think twice about hitting a 7-Eleven," said the announcement.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Rep. Frank Gaston, R-Dallas, has urged the state attorney general and district attorneys in Austin and Denton to follow up on the forthcoming report on financial problems at North Texas State University.

The report of the House General Investigating Committee is expected to be completed within a week.

"Too often," Gaston said in a statement Thursday, "a lot of publicity is given to the allegations of wrongdoing, but then the offices which could prosecute individuals fail to do so. I want to see these problems through to the finish."

The committee has taken testimony on alleged mismanagement of state funds at the Denton school.

PAMPA, Texas (AP) — Chairman John Poerner of the Railroad Commission said Thursday night the proposed windfall profits tax on oil would drain $62.5 billion from Texas' economy over the next decade. Poerner called oil industry profits "illusory" and added, "One thing is certain. If oil profits are big, their need for cash to finance development of new energy supplies is even bigger."

He said it costs almost $250,000 to drill an exploratory well, $95,000 more than it cost 10 years ago.

When corrected for inflation, Poerner said, profits of American oil companies in 1978 were lower than five years earlier.

Poerner spoke to the Panhandle section of the American Petroleum Institute's production division.

DALLAS (AP) — A Dallas County grand jury, after being told a 50-year-old Oklahoma man responded to a honked horn by trying to run another motorist off the road, has indicted the Oklahoman for assault with a deadly weapon — his car.

A Dallas man said he saw John William Watson of McAlester try to force a car driven by a native of Iran off the southbound lanes of North Central Expressway in mid-December.

Rajiv Rajayam Shah, 26, said he honked his horn, apparently angering Watson, when Watson cut too close in front of him.

The witness, whom prosecutors would not identify until the trial, told police Watson then dropped behind Shah, who was traveling in the right lane, and began to push Shah's small foreign car from behind at speeds of more than 80 mph.

Watson also prevented Shah from exiting, the witness said, and finally forced Shah's car onto the shoulder of the expressway. After curbing Shah's car, no words were exchanged and Watson drove away, police said they were told.

The witness took Watson's license number and reported it. After investigating, police turned the report over to the grand, which returned the indictment. The case was assigned to a court, but no trial date was set immediately.

DALLAS (AP) — A black activist was evicted from the Dallas City Council Wednesday after loudly protesting several rulings by Mayor Robert S. Folsom.

Al Lipscomb, who was ejected frequently from council meetings in the late 1960s and early 1970s, argued on behalf of an attempt to name newly constructed Texas 352 near the state fairgrounds for "a prominent and historic black figure."

The council majority rejected the bid, staying with previously announced plans to name the street after Dallas civic leader Robert Cullum.

After lodging bitter complaints on the city's failure to name a major thoroughfare after a black, its "inaction" on requested drainage improvements in minority neighborhoods, and removal of police patrols from housing authority projects, Lipscomb disputed several of Folsom's rulings.

"You don't own this city, Mr. Folsom," he replied on three occasions when the mayor warned him against further disruptions.

When Lipscomb again rose to object, Folsom ordered him to "sit down or leave." When Lipscomb refused to do so, the mayor ordered security guards to escort him from the chambers.

DALLAS (AP) — General fund expenditures will overrun revenues by $2.2 million by the end of the fiscal year, City Manager George Schrader has estimated in a briefing to the Dallas City Council on the city's financial prospects.

That's $1.9 million more than the $330,000 shortfall the city staff had projected last year before a no-tax-increase budget went into effect last fall.

Schrader said lower-than-expected sales tax and utility gross receipts tax revenues, combined with higher fuel taxes and unexpected expenses, brought about last year's overly optimistic revenue and expenditure estimates.

The city withdrew $372,000 — about a fifth of its $2 million contingency reserve fund — to make ends meet in the first three months of its 1979-80 fiscal year, Schrader said.

The City Council increased user fees and reduced the level of municipal services in a number of areas last year in order to keep the city property tax rate at $1.33 per $100 valuation.

DALLAS (AP) — A 23-year-old Dallas man represented himself in a civil suit — and lost — this week after his lawyer, State Rep. Sam Hudson failed to show up in court.

Hudson — criticized in 1977 by the State Bar grievance committee for his law practice, including other reports of no-shows in court — expressed unhappiness the judge didn't postpone the case.

An aide said he informed the court ahead of the 9 a.m. trial time Monday that Hudson had another court setting at the same time, "and they said okay."

But District Judge Joe Burnett asked Hudson's client if he wanted to represent himself. Fearful his 2-year-old lawsuit would be dismissed, he said, he agreed.

Not only did he lose the case — with Burnett signing an order denying him the damages he requested for injuries suffered in an automobile accident — but he was arrested as soon as the trial ended and booked into county jail on a warrant for a forgery case.

Burnett declined comment on the case, except to say Hudson arrived at the courtroom shortly after 11 a.m., explaining that he had a conflicting court setting.

He said Hudson had adequate notice of the trial.

When the state grievance committee issued a private reprimand three years ago, Hudson told newsmen he had experienced courtroom appearance scheduling problems because of a heavy caseload as a "solo practitioner" and because of his services in the Legislature.

Work Resumes on Cathedral Begun in 1892 Near Harlem

By DENNIS R. WHITEHEAD

NEW YORK (AP) — Tour buses line Amsterdam Avenue at W. 110th Street on Manhattan's Upper West Side. Their passengers mill about a huge stone staircase taking snapshots of one another and the structure.

Few notice the sign welcoming visitors to the "Stoneyard" of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, where they would find the revitalization of an ancient and nearly extinct art — stone masonry.

Five young apprentices work their blocks of limestone toward finished ashlar for storage off to the side.

Numbered and recorded in a book, the stones will be fitted into place for two 150-foot towers above the facade of the superstructure sometime in the early 1980s. The workers are chipping away toward completion of the cathedral, in progress for nearly 90 years.

The cornerstone for the cathedral at the edge of Harlem was laid on St. John's Day, Dec. 27, 1892. Construction continued uninterrupted until 1916 and World War I.

Work resumed after the war but was halted in 1941 with the outbreak of World War II. Though the structure was nearly completed, the finishing touches could not be added due to lack of money and other community needs. Church leaders felt the pressures from the impoverished community to raise the local standard of living instead of stone towers. In 1967, the scaffolding for the towers was torn down and it looked as though the cathedral would remain two-thirds finished forever.

But in 1971, the Very Rev. James Morton arrived on the scene as the new dean of St. John's. He set to work reviving interest in completion of the monument, challenging the opposition to spending $20 million on the church instead of putting money into the community.

Morton saw the cathedral as a center for the area, symbolically representing the very soul of the neighborhood. He also pointed to the number of local jobs that would be created by a renewal of construction.

On July 21, 1979, the stoneyard officially opened, marking the beginning of a new and, he hopes, final phase in the construction of the Gothic masterpiece.

Two days later, five apprentices, four men and one woman, reported for work and a new experience. A very old craft, but new to them — stone masonry — was being brought into their lives by Master Mason Christopher Hannaway and Master Builder James Bainbridge.

Hannaway was invited by Bainbridge to head the project, since the two had worked together for many years on the Liverpool Cathedral in England. Hannaway started as an apprentice in England in 1932 and has traveled the world working on stone structures.

Hannaway figures completion of the cathedral will take nearly 20 years. Stones will be cut for the two 150-foot towers over the next two years and then raised one by one and set into place.

After that, work will begin on finishing the bare blocks around the doorways and window sills and finishing the two side chapels, making the church a completed cross in the Gothic design.

When completed, St. John's will be the largest Gothic structure in the world. Of the five apprentices, only Tim Smith, 34, of Bellows Falls, Vt., has worked in stone masonry before, restoring stone foundations of old New England buildings. Others include Jose Tapia, James Jamerson, Manuel Alvarado and the one woman, Linda Peer.

A sculptor with a master's degree in fine arts, she worked in social services for a time.

"I enjoy this work because it's related to my sculpture, plus I can earn a living doing something I enjoy," she said. "You have to work with patience, attention to detail and be mentally alert."

Tapia, born in Puerto Rico and raised on Manhattan's Upper East Side, had to drop out of high school to help support the family when his mother died. He worked as a brick mason for more than three years.

"Laying the stone should be the same as brick work but stone cutting is something completely different," he said. "I wanted to pick up a trade I could depend on for the future."

Jamerson, who has lived in Harlem all his life, says he always dreamed of finding a trade where he could also find success.

"I wanted the job to earn more money, but especially to learn a new trade," said Jamerson, who worked in refrigerator and air conditioning repair for nearly four years. "In case one industry collapses I'll have more than one trade behind me."

Alvarado was previously employed at St. John's under the CETA program, mounting and hanging exhibitions, answering telephones and guiding tours through the church.

"The idea of developing a new trade, a new skill, really excites me," he says. "I wanted to be a museum curator, but now that I'm into this I feel it might be nice to pass the tradition to others as it is being passed to us."

Doctor Working Despite Wheelchair

MILLERSBURG, Ky. (AP) — Dr. Wayne Linville was too stubborn to give up when cancer placed him in a wheelchair in 1974.

He had graduated from medical school, completed his internship and returned to Millersburg to practice in his hometown.

"One day I noticed lumps on my neck but dismissed them as part of a viral infection," he recalled. "The lumps refused to go away, and I had exploratory surgery."

The diagnosis: cancer of the lymphatic system.

Linville was stunned but philosophical.

"If you gotta have cancer," he said, "this is the best kind. The survival rate runs between 90 and 95 percent."

During the next eight months, he lost 40 pounds while undergoing 42 radiation treatments. The spinal cord was damaged and he became paralyzed from mid-chest down.

"Depression overwhelmed me," he said. "I had a family to feed and a lot of unpaid bills. The future looked bleak."

He realized he was the only physician in Millersburg and one of four in Bourbon County. He also realized "you don't need legs to deliver babies or assist in surgery. I decided to plunge ahead."

Every morning he's at Bourbon County Hospital, checking on anywhere from 12 to 20 patients. If the need arises, he assists in surgery.

"All they do is lower the operating table a little bit for me," he said.

His rounds completed, Linville heads back to his office nine miles away, driving a van with a wheelchair lift.

"The place is always crowded," he said. "On a busy day, we may have 50 to 60 people. It gets rough but I have excellent nurses helping me."

Although some specialists are moving into rural areas, Linville wishes there were more.

"You can look around and find cities overrun with doctors," he said. "Trying to lure them into the countryside is a tough job."

He attributes part of the problem to physicians' wives, "who believe they won't be happy in a small town. They think there's no social life."

FOOD CHOICES?"

Do you really control your food choices, or do your habits control you? If changes are needed, only you can decide on four things:
*a specific goal,
*learning nutrition basics,
*unlearning" misinformation, and *changing traditions Few of us eat foods because we're told they're "good for us." In fact, health may be one of the least-effective motivations for change.

GOAL MUST EXIST
On the other hand, most of us will respond to a specific goal, weight reduction or diabetes control, for example. We see that health relates to any other specific goals, but just "health" alone isn't specific enough to make a majority of us change the way we eat. Most of us don't think in such long-range terms as eating "right" today to prevent health problems later in life. So having a specific goal is a "must" for many of us, but it's just the first step. If we can see health itself as our specific goal, this first step will be a stronger one.

BASICS, PATHWAYS
Understanding nutrition basics is the second step. This takes learning.
We need facts to point out the pathways of all our other steps—and to suggest the time and effort they'll require.
Most of us are interested in nutrition only if it means something good today.
We seek immediate results, and we're not too realistic about the time and effort needed to reach or obtain our desired goal.
Learning nutrition basics is the key to effectively reaching our goal.

MISINFORMATION

Learning and unlearning is a never-ending process, and nutrition education is not a simple matter.
Changes in types and forms of foods will continue at a pace which staggers the imagination. Choices we face will become even greater.
Realizing that this is a constant process which will go on throughout life is the third step in changing our eating habits.

CHANGING OUR TRADITIONS

Developing the ability to actually change is the fourth step.
One key to success is knowing how strongly food habits become entrenched in our daily routines.
Their grip is so strong we often fail to recognize that the laws of nutrition apply to everyone—or we ignore that fact.

DO I NEED ALL THIS?

How do we know if we need to change?

Start with self-analysis.
We can ask ourselves these questions:

- 1) What factors are most important when I select particular foods?
- 2) How does my overall dietary pattern affect my lifestyle and health?
- 3) Or, does my lifestyle determine my eating habits?
- 4) Do I select foods out of impulse, or am I a rational decision-maker?
- 5) Do I really understand why I choose the foods I eat?

Remember, too for most people, price of food items doesn't play a central role in consumer decisions—cost limits our purchases, but it doesn't determine our eating habits.

Here's one last question—a "food for thought" question (the one we asked in the first place): Do I really control my food choices—or do my habits control me?

LLL CAREER APPAREL FOR WOMEN

Are you dressing for success or failure?
Some experts claim that women dress for failure.
True or not, women have played a subordinate role to men in the business world, and they have not been "educated" to dress for success.

While much research studies how clothing communicates, little research focuses on career apparel for women.

THE 'IMAGE MAKERS'
One thing is certain: our clothing does communicate to those around us.

We can remember that fact, and we can further benefit from years of other research that focused on clothing as an expression of self.

Put it all together, and we become our own "image makers."

Clothing is a language that projects our talents, our needs, our personality, our dispositions and our destinations.

It reveals how we feel and how we think we look.

Clothing is the greatest single influence on the impressions we create—and we never have a second chance to make a first impression.

Some businesses feel clothing is so important in creating a favorable image they have strict dress codes—because reaction to appearance is automatic and involuntary.

We cannot dress neutrally. Whatever we wear makes a statement—not necessarily positive or negative, but something about us.

Our clothing may say, "I feel good about myself. I am confident I can handle this job."

Or it may say, "I am not prepared to handle this job. I am unsure of myself."

When used correctly, clothing can improve our appearance and advance us professionally.

If a job involves working with clientele, the dress should "set the stage," not restrict effective work with others.

When possible, research clientele to understand their clothing expectations.

Dress professionally, but try not to dress far above or below them.

CLOTHES TELL 'RANK'
Clothing establishes rank, role or position.

Uniforms are an obvious sign of rank or role which help others know how to respond. But dress need not be a uniform to indicate rank or level.

Even when the signs are subtle, dress can reveal an authority level.

The "business suit" helps a man establish his rank in the business world.

JACKET 'TOPS' ALL
Most experts agree the jacket has the greatest influence on this—and it's true for females, too.

For women, the skirted suit is the most effective dress in establishing credibility and authority, research says.

'FASHION' IN BUSINESS
Since the slightest error in dress can hinder professional progress, women must learn to sharpen and refine their clothing-language skills.

Fashion can have some influence in the business world, but we must learn to "play the game" of success.

Dressing in current fashions may not be on the road to success in some careers—however, dressing completely out-of-style or in a rut may say "I'm not aware of the world around me" and hamper your chances for job advancement.

What then?
Be aware of fashion, but "go" conservative on the job. Save extreme looks for evening or weekends.

STARTING OUT
When authority is important for your job, establish your credentials first with conservative, authoritative dress. Then begin to vary color, lines and fabrics in your wardrobe.

Lack of variety gets boring—to you and those around you. And society expects women not to look the same every day.

Variety adds interest and underscores effectiveness in the career wardrobe.

PATHS TO SUCCESS
Clothing is a powerful communicator, but it can't assure job success or make the wearer something she's not, of course. Job performance determines success or failure. Clothing simply "accentuates" the positive or negative.

Clothing can pave the road—or put stumbling blocks in your path—to success.

Notice what others around you at work are wearing.

To get ahead, pattern your dress after the most successful.

Dress for the job you want, not for the job you have (unless, of course, the two are the same).

If your wardrobe seems inadequate for the job you want, gradually add to what you have, especially if on a limited budget.

Carefully select the items which project the image you want.

THE 'MESSAGE'
The "message" you convey to others should be business-like but also one you're comfortable with.

If you're pleased with yourself and your career image, you're more likely to please others.

As you dress for the day, think about your schedule—who will you see? what will you be doing?—and then decide on the image you want to communicate.

Before you go to work each day, look in a full-length mirror from head to toe.

Try to see yourself as others see you.

Communicate a positive, professional image, regardless of the kind of job you have.

Southland Corp., owner of the 7-Eleven stores, said cab drivers would get free coffee and use of the stores' restroom and telephone.

In return, cab drivers will be encouraged to use their two-way radios in a general crime prevention effort. The drivers will be briefed on the type of suspicious activities they should report to their dispatcher, who in turn can call police.

“An observant driver sitting in front of a store virtually round-the-clock will cause a potential armed robber to think twice about hitting a 7-Eleven,” said the announcement.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Rep. Frank Gaston, R-Dallas, has urged the state attorney general and district attorneys in Austin and Denton to follow up on the forthcoming report on financial problems at North Texas State University.

The report of the House General Investigating Committee is expected to be completed within a week. “Too often,” Gaston said in a statement Thursday, “a lot of publicity is given to the allegations of wrongdoing, but then the offices which could prosecute individuals fail to do so. I want to see these problems through to the finish.”

The committee has taken testimony on alleged mismanagement of state funds at the Denton school.

PAMPA, Texas (AP) — Chairman John Poerner of the Railroad Commission said Thursday night the proposed windfall profits tax on oil would drain $62.5 billion from Texas' economy over the next decade.

Poerner called oil industry profits “illusory” and added, “One thing is certain. If oil profits are big, their need for cash to finance development of new energy supplies is even bigger.”

He said it costs almost $250,000 to drill an exploratory well, $95,000 more than it cost 10 years ago.

When corrected for inflation, Poerner said, profits of American oil companies in 1978 were lower than five years earlier.

Poerner spoke to the Panhandle section of the American Petroleum Institute's production division.

DALLAS (AP) — A Dallas County grand jury, after being told a 50-year-old Oklahoma man responded to a honked horn by trying to run another motorist off the road, has indicted the Oklahoman for assault with a deadly weapon — his car.

A Dallas man said he saw John William Watson of McAlester try to force a car driven by a native of Iran off the southbound lanes of North Central Expressway in mid-December.

Rajiv Rajayam Shah, 26, said he honked his horn, apparently angering Watson, when Watson cut too close in front of him.

The witness, whom prosecutors would not identify until the trial, told police Watson then dropped behind Shah, who was traveling in the right lane, and began to push Shah's small foreign car from behind at speeds of more than 80 mph.

Watson also prevented Shah from exiting, the witness said, and finally forced Shah's car onto the shoulder of the expressway. After curbing Shah's car, no words were exchanged and Watson drove away, police said they were told.

The witness took Watson's license number and reported it. After investigating, police turned the report over to the grand jury, which returned the indictment. The case was assigned to a court, but no trial date was set immediately.

DALLAS (AP) — A black activist was evicted from the Dallas City Council Wednesday after loudly protesting several rulings by Mayor Robert S. Folsom.

Al Lipscomb, who was ejected frequently from council meetings in the late 1960s and early 1970s, argued on behalf of an attempt to name newly constructed Texas 352 near the state fairgrounds for “a prominent and historic black figure.”

The council majority rejected the bid, staying with previously announced plans to name the street after Dallas civic leader Robert Cullum.

After lodging bitter complaints on the city's failure to name a major thoroughfare after a black, its “inaction” on requested drainage improvements in minority neighborhoods, and removal of police patrols from housing authority projects, Lipscomb disputed several of Folsom's rulings.

“You don't own this city, Mr. Folsom,” he replied on three occasions when the mayor warned him against further disruptions.

When Lipscomb again rose to object, Folsom ordered him to “sit down or leave.” When Lipscomb refused to do so, the mayor ordered security guards to escort him from the chambers.

DALLAS (AP) — General fund expenditures will overrun revenues by $2.2 million by the end of the fiscal year, City Manager George Schrader has estimated in a briefing to the Dallas City Council on the city's financial prospects.

That's $1.9 million more than the $330,000 shortfall the city staff had projected last year before a no-tax-increase budget went into effect last fall.

Schrader said lower-than-expected sales tax and utility gross receipts tax revenues, combined with higher fuel taxes and unexpected expenses, brought about last year's overly optimistic revenue and expenditure estimates.

The city withdrew $372,000 — about a fifth of its $2 million contingency reserve fund — to make ends meet in the first three months of its 1979-80 fiscal year, Schrader said.

The City Council increased user fees and reduced the level of municipal services in a number of areas last year in order to keep the city property tax rate at $1.33 per $100 valuation.

DALLAS (AP) — A 23-year-old Dallas man represented himself in a civil suit — and lost — this week after his lawyer, State Rep. Sam Hudson failed to show up in court.

Hudson — criticized in 1977 by the State Bar grievance committee for his law practice, including other reports of no-shows in court — expressed unhappiness the judge didn't postpone the case.

An aide said he informed the court ahead of the 9 a.m. trial time Monday that Hudson had another court setting at the same time, “and they said okay.”

But District Judge Joe Burnett asked Hudson's client if he wanted to represent himself. Fearful his 2-year-old lawsuit would be dismissed, he said, he agreed.

Not only did he lose the case — with Burnett signing an order denying him the damages he requested for injuries suffered in an automobile accident — but he was arrested as soon as the trial ended and booked into county jail on a warrant for a forgery case.

Burnett declined comment on the case, except to say Hudson arrived at the courtroom shortly after 11 a.m., explaining that he had a conflicting court setting.

He said Hudson had adequate notice of the trial.

When the state grievance committee issued a private reprimand three years ago, Hudson told newsmen he had experienced courtroom appearance scheduling problems because of a heavy caseload as a “solo practitioner” and because of his services in the Legislature.

Work Resumes on Cathedral Begun in 1892 Near Harlem

By DENNIS R. WHITEHEAD
NEW YORK (AP) — Tour buses line Amsterdam Avenue at W. 110th Street on Manhattan's Upper West Side. Their passengers mill about a huge stone staircase taking snapshots of one another and the structure.

Work resumed after the war but was halted in 1941 with the outbreak of World War II. Though the structure was nearly completed, the finishing touches could not be added due to lack of money and other community needs. Church leaders felt the pressures from the impoverished community to raise the local standard of living instead of stone towers. In 1967, the scaffolding for the towers was torn down and it looked as though the cathedral would remain two-thirds finished forever.

Few notice the sign welcoming visitors to the “Stoneyard” of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, where they would find the revitalization of an ancient and nearly extinct art — stone masonry.

Five young apprentices work their blocks of limestone toward finished ashlars for storage off to the side. Numbered and recorded in a book, the stones will be fitted into place for two 150-foot towers above the facade of the superstructure sometime in the early 1980s. The workers are chipping away toward completion of the cathedral, in progress for nearly 90 years.

But in 1971, the Very Rev. James Morton arrived on the scene as the new dean of St. John's. He set to work reviving interest in completion of the monument, challenging the opposition to spending $20 million on the church instead of putting money into the community.

Morton saw the cathedral as a center for the area, symbolically representing the very soul of the neighborhood. He also pointed to the number of local jobs that would be created by a renewal of construction.

On July 21, 1979, the stoneyard officially opened, marking the beginning of a new and, he hopes, final phase in the construction of the Gothic masterpiece.

Two days later, five apprentices, four men and one woman, reported for work and a new experience. A very old craft, but new to them — stone masonry — was being brought into their lives by Master Mason Christopher Hannaway and Master Builder James Bainbridge.

Hannaway was invited by Bainbridge to head the project, since the two had worked together for many years on the Liverpool Cathedral in England. Hannaway started as an apprentice in England in 1932 and has traveled the world working on stone structures.

Hannaway figures completion of the cathedral will take nearly 20 years. Stones will be cut for the two 150-foot towers over the next two years and then raised one by one and set into place.

After that, work will begin on finishing the bare blocks around the doorways and window sills and finishing the two side chapels, making the church a completed cross in the Gothic design.

When completed, St. John's will be the largest Gothic structure in the world. Of the five apprentices, only Tim Smith, 34, of Bellows Falls, Vt., has worked in stone masonry before, restoring stone foundations of old New England buildings. Others include Jose Tapia, James Jamerson, Manuel Alvarado and the one woman, Linda Peer.

A sculptor with a master's degree in fine arts, she worked in social services for a time. “I enjoy this work because it's related to my sculpture, plus I can earn a living doing something I enjoy,” she said.

“You have to work with patience, attention to detail and be mentally alert.”

Tapia, born in Puerto Rico and raised on Manhattan's Upper East Side, had to drop out of high school to help support the family when his mother died. He worked as a brick mason for more than three years.

“Laying the stone should be the same as brick work, but stone cutting is something completely different,” he said. “I wanted to pick up a trade I could depend on for the future.”
