House sends contra aid plan to Senate

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a decisive, hard-fought foreign policy victory for President Reagan, the House is sending a $100 million aid plan for Nicaragua's Contra rebels to a Senate that once before approved the idea.

The 221-209 roll call vote Wednesday night removed the House as a major obstacle to Reagan's months-long drive to secure approval of an aid package that gives the Contras $70 million in weapons and $30 million in logistical support over an eight-month span.

A jubilant Reagan, arriving in California to begin a vacation at his mountaintop ranch near Santa Barbara, said in a statement: "The cause is freedom. The cause is just. The cause will triumph."

"Once again, members of both parties stand united in resisting totalitarian expansionism and promoting the cause of democracy," the president said.

Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega, in a nationally televised address, said the vote "is a ratification of the warlike policy of the U.S. government that brings it to the brink of direct intervention by its troops in Nicaragua."

Ortega accused President Reagan of "acting worse than Hitler with his terrorist and fascist policy against Nicaragua," which he said would bring Nicaragua "more economic and material difficulties and more death, (but) it does not terrify nor intimidate us."

In Washington, Nicaraguan Ambassador Carlos Tunnermann said, "The contras can win their battles in Washington but they are being defeated by the people in Nicaragua."

Fifty-one Democrats joined 170 Republicans to provide the winning margin and reverse the House's decision in March, when it voted 222-210 to reject an earlier version of the aid plan.

The Contra aid was made part of a $8.1 billion military construction bill and sent to the Senate. That Republican-controlled chamber voted 53-47 this spring for the earlier Contra aid plan.

Under the blueprint approved by the House, the U.S. government would be permitted for the first time to openly give military assistance to the rebels.

The Central Intelligence Agency ran the program when the aid was provided secretly from 1981 to 1984. The new legislation does not bar the spy agency from resuming that role.

The administration's only setback during the 12-hour debate was the narrow, 215-212 approval of an amendment by Rep. Robert J. Mrazek, D-N.Y., that would bar any U.S. personnel — civilian or military — from providing aid or training to the Contras in areas within 20 miles of the Nicaraguan border.

That vote appeared to indicate that many members of the House still harbor strong fears that American troops may one day become involved in combat in Central America.

Reagan lobbied until the last minute to win the votes he needed to reverse the earlier defeat, and House Republican leaders said much of the credit for the victory belongs to the president.

But they also said a bipartisan compromise hammered out by House members and approved by the White House also deserves much credit because it presented wavering members with something new as a justification for switching votes.

As crafted by a team led by Reps. Ike Skelton, D-Mo., and Mickey Edwards, R-Ky., the aid package was expanded to include $300 million in economic assistance to four Central American democracies: Guatemala, Honduras, Panama and El Salvador.

This permitted Reagan supporters to contend that military aid to the Contras was only one element of an overall regional policy.

In its new form, Contra aid would be provided in installments of $40 million, $20 million and $40 million, with the first to be made available on enactment of the bill and the last on Feb. 15, 1987.

Military training would be emphasized in the initial phases of the program and only "light" personal weapons would be made available. So-called heavy weapons would be made available only with the last aid installment.

The legislation did not define "heavy" weapons, but these apparently include anti-tank and anti-aircraft weaponry.

Congress could vote to block the release of the final $40 million but because of the two-third majorities needed to override a presidential veto, such action probably would be little more than symbolic.

FIRE MARSHALL JAY SPAIN: "If the police find anybody breaking the fireworks laws, they will be charged with a Class B misdemeanor."

Fireworks burdensome to police, fire squads

By SHAWN COCKRUM
Staff Writer

The tradition of using fireworks to celebrate the Fourth of July started as Francis Scott Key wrote the immortal lines, "And the rocket's red glare/the bombs bursting in air/gave proof through the night/that our flag was still there."

Today those words are in the hearts and minds of every patriotic American, and fireworks that recreate that moment have become the symbol of the American freedom. But, for local police and firefighters, fireworks have become a big burden.

In July of 1985, the Hereford Fire Department responded to 18 fires in five days due to fireworks. The Hereford Police Department responded to 60 citizen complaints concerning fireworks.

Fireworks were also responsible for almost $10,000 worth of property damage due to fires in the city.

So what can be done?

The city already has strict laws concerning the use and sale of fireworks inside the city limits. Fireworks sales are strictly prohibited in the city, and the discharge of fireworks is not allowed near or around any public street, square or alley. The penalty for those who may take the law lightly can be up to $100 for the first offense.

State laws say that fireworks may not be discharged within or from a motor vehicle, within 100 feet of a place where flammable materials are stored, or within 600 feet of a church or school.

"What worries me are all these new homes," said

Hereford Fire Marshall Jay Spain. "One bottle rocket can land on a roof with these wood shingles and we have a real problem."

Spain added that the police department and fire department will be strictly enforcing the fireworks law this season. "We have already been out inspecting some of the fireworks stands this year and we are planning on inspecting everyone of them."

Spain recommended that for those who wish to celebrate the holiday with fireworks, be sure to do so in a safe place with adult supervision.

"I have been at the hospitals when people have been brought in with their fingers blown off, or have fireworks go off in their eyes. They can do real severe damage," said Spain.

Committee approves immigration bill to stem flow of illegal aliens

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Judiciary Committee approval of a major immigration bill leaves lawmakers with a tough job in seeking to complete action in 1986 on an issue that has confounded Congress for six years.

The Judiciary Committee measure, approved Wednesday night by a 25-10 margin, is designed to stem the flow of illegal aliens into the country and upgrade conditions for millions already here.

The Senate has passed a version at sharp odds with the measure fashioned by the Judiciary panel — which now must pass muster with the Agriculture and Education and Labor committees.

Under the measure, illegal aliens who arrived before 1982 would get temporary resident status that could be made permanent after a year. The first-ever fines for employers prescribed by the measure are designed to discourage a new wave of illegal immigration.

Clearing away the last roadblock to approval, the panel adopted special provisions, offered by Rep. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y. They are designed to guarantee western growers a readily available supply of farm labor from south of the border.

The plan represented a compromise between growers and labor unions as well as critics of the treatment accorded millions of aliens whose lack of legal rights makes them prey to unscrupulous employers and racketeers.

Schumer was so busy fending off attacks on his proposal that he had to abandon plans to attend a political fund-raising party in his honor. The major target of critics was a provision that would make foreigners imported to work in this country immediately eligible for welfare.

"It is a legal enticement to come in," said Rep. Romano L. Mazzoli, D-Ky., a longstanding proponent of immigration law overhaul. Rep.

Thomas N. Kindness, R-Ohio, declared, "It is too much, it is reprehensible, it is disagreeable and it is not good in principle."

Rep. John Bryant, D-Texas, called the plan "repugnant" but pointed to an oft-repeated threat by Judiciary Committee Chairman Rep. Peter Rodino, D-N.J., that he would act to block such legislation if it contained so-called guest worker provisions that are part of a bill already approved by the Senate.

At the same time, he said, western growers stood to kill the legislation if they were not guaranteed adequate labor.

"We can't beat the growers and the growers can't beat the chairman of

The city will be begin spraying for mosquitoes and flies early Friday morning. The spraying will continue Saturday and Sunday mornings.

Theft of gas reported

Two local convenience stores reported the theft of gasoline Wednesday, according to the Hereford city police. E-Z Mart on Park Ave reported the theft of $20 worth of gas and Allsup's on North 385 lost gas valued at $11. A police spokesperson said that the two incidents were not related.

Police also heard a report of the theft of a gas grill valued at $350 from Greg Melugin in the 200 block of Beach St.

State 4 indicted under open meetings law

MARBLE FALLS, Texas (AP) — A Burnet County grand jury has indicted the mayor and three aldermen on charges of violating the Texas Open Meeting law.

Named in the indictment were Mayor Kenneth McKinney and Aldermen Eugene Yett, Robert Stover Sr. and Tony Hogue, said a spokeswoman with the Burnet County Sheriff's Department.

The grand jury recommended bond be set at $1,000 apiece. Violation of the Open Meeting law is a misdemeanor.

"I have not been officially notified, so I have to remain mute," McKinney said Wednesday. "I do not feel I violated the law."

The state Open Meeting law requires governmental bodies to post advance notices of meetings even when officials plan to gather behind closed doors.

The Tuesday indictments stem from an incident last week in which McKinney and Hogue asked City Administrator Jack Chaney to resign. An area newspaper, The Highlander, filed suit, alleging the city officials violated the Open Meetings law.

After the suit was filed, the council voted 3-2 to reject Chaney's resignation.

McKinney said the move for Chaney's resignation followed a series of phone calls the preceding night.

"I had three councilmen call me and they each said they wanted a meeting" to discuss Chaney's performance, McKinney said.

"I asked each one of them if they minded if I approached him (Chaney) and ask for his resignation," he said, adding that all three aldermen agreed he should talk to Chaney.

Tuesday's discovery in a North Auburn store was the fifth bottle of pain medication found to contain cyanide. Cyanide-laced Extra-Strength Excedrin capsules were blamed last week in the deaths of Sue Snow, 40, and Bruce Nickell, 52, both of Auburn.

Don Williams, executive director of the Pharmacy Board, said the Anacin-3 may have been found in one of the same stores where tainted Excedrin was bought. "Since that information was not publicly released, this leads me to believe this was not a copycat," he said.

But Jim Davis, director of FDA investigations in Seattle, said the agency hasn't ruled out the possibility that more than one person is involved.

"We think this is a major problem with this bottle," Davis said. He refused to say whether there were outward signs of tampering on the bottle.

The latest discovery was the first time in this tampering scare that a brand other than Extra-Strength Excedrin had been involved.

Authorities immediately warned residents in the Auburn and Kent areas south of Seattle not to use any over-the-counter capsule medications.

Washington state bans capsules

SEATTLE (AP) — Authorities could confiscate over-the-counter medications in capsules found on store shelves in King County today, and the sale of most such drugs were banned statewide to counter cyanide tampering that has killed two people.

The 90-day statewide ban on sales of nonfused capsules, approved Wednesday by the Washington Pharmacy Board, formally takes effect after paperwork is completed, probably by Friday, said Chuck Kleeberg, chief of environmental sciences for the Seattle-King County Health Department.

Meantime, the state agency banned the sale of two-part, nonfused capsules in the county and directed health department officials to check stores and confiscate the medications if necessary.

About 95 percent of all over-the-counter medication in capsule form is available in other forms, and the rest would be available as prescription medication, which is not affected by the ban, officials said.

In Washington, D.C., Food and Drug Administration Commissioner Dr. Frank Young said he knew of no other states banning over-the-counter capsules.

The ban was prompted by the discovery of cyanide Tuesday in a bottle of Anacin-3 capsules during a random check.

Since then, the FDA checked 121,000 capsules collected in south King County, where cyanide-laced Extra-Strength Excedrin killed two people earlier this month, but no further contamination was found.

Senate to act on home port plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Supporters of a Navy plan to create new ports around the nation are looking to the Senate for help after a budget-conscious House rejected one part of the proposal — basing new ships in Puget Sound and New York City harbor.

The House voted 241-190 Wednesday to delete $140 million for the two ports from a bill that appropriates $8.1 billion for a wide range of Pentagon construction projects.

The Senate, which supports the Navy plan, has yet to act on its version of the military construction bill.

The House finally approved the bill by a 249-174 margin late Wednesday night after approving $100 million of mostly military aid to rebels fighting to overthrow the leftist government of Nicaragua. The Contra aid package was one of the many amendments to the military construction measure.

Differences between the House and Senate bills will go to a conference committee for resolution.

Cocaine recognized as instant killer

BOSTON (AP) — Cocaine ruins lives slowly, but as recent research and the death of basketball star Len Bias dramatically show, the white powder also can strike people dead with lightning speed.

Experts have watched cocaine's growing popularity with alarm. Up to 30 percent of users, according to one estimate, get hooked by the drug's power to instill euphoria and false confidence.

"When an individual uses cocaine, he is playing Russian roulette," said Dr. Lester Grinspoon of Harvard Medical School. "He may be able to use it casually and then walk away from it. But there are some people who cannot walk away. It becomes a dominant feature in their lives. They become obsessed. They devote all their energy to it. They neglect their families, their careers, everything."

However, the death of Bias underscores a more dramatic hazard. A medical examiner found that the University of Maryland basketball star died of cocaine intoxication that disrupted the electrical stimulation of the heart.

Experts are unsure how often this happens, but it certainly is not the only case. Recently, Dr. Jeffrey Isner of Tufts Medical School in Boston presented research on seven young people who were hospitalized or died suddenly because of heart disorders immediately after using cocaine.

Less money going into energy

EDITOR'S NOTE — The focus of research into alternative energy sources is changing now that oil prices have dropped sharply. Less money is going into renewable energy sources such as sun, and more money is going into traditional fuels such as coal.

By PETER COY AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — On a 100-acre

Oil woes prompting migration

DALLAS (AP) — More U-Haul trucks and trailers are leaving Texas than are coming in.

That bit of information comes from U-Haul company officials who say it's a sign of the state's economy — people leaving Texas for jobs elsewhere.

Bob Barr, head of truck and trailer operations for U-Haul, said the demand for Texas rentals began rising in January when oil prices dropped.

In recent months, he said, Texas has edged past the farm states in terms of emigration. Lots of Texas oil workers idled by the slump are moving to Florida, Arizona and Southern California, he said.

Many Texans surveyed by U-Haul said they were leaving for states that are not dependent on oil, Barr said.

It used to be the opposite during the oil boom days. Texas cities, especially Dallas and Houston, experienced a glut of trucks and trailers, Barr said.

Now, the Dallas-Fort Worth metropolis and San Antonio are the only two healthy areas in Texas in truck rentals. "All the others are experiencing a tremendous outward migration," Barr said.

The emigration is most noticeable in West Texas, the U-Haul spokesmen say.

In Midland, U-Haul has organized two trips to Dallas to return some of the trailers and trucks to the area.

Midland U-Haul manager Billy Sturgeon said he rented 25 trucks for one-way trips out of the city in one week while only five trucks arrived from other parts of the country.

A popular location for migrating oil workers is Florida, which is now becoming overcrowded with trucks, officials said. Two weeks ago, U-Haul spent $114,000 flying people to Orlando and paying them to drive about 450 trucks and 1,100 trailers back to Houston and New Orleans.

In Texas, U-Haul has raised its prices to help slow the exodus. The rental fee for a 6-by-12-foot trailer from Dallas to Orlando is $836. The price for the same trailer going to Chicago, about the same distance, is $391. The trailer costs only $130 going from Florida to Dallas.

this committee," he said. "In view of that, we're going to have to have a compromise the insides of which may be very, very difficult to swallow."

Maneuvering by both sides was hard-fought as Rodino kept the panel in session into the night to wrap up work on the legislation.

In criticizing the Senate plan, Schumer compared it to the now-defunct Bracero Program for importing farm workers, which has been blasted for years on humanitarian grounds.

The Immigration and Naturalization Service estimates that there are 3.5 million to 6 million illegal aliens currently in the country but acknowledges that the figure is conservative. It says the number is growing by 500,000 a year as not only Hispanics but Asians and others come across the southern border in quest of jobs.

Contrary to image, the majority of the illegal aliens are not farm workers, according to the INS. Service and light manufacturing industries are major employers, the agency says. It says they are concentrated in southern California and Texas as well as Chicago and New York.

In addition to its farm provisions, the bill also:

—Bans hiring or recruitment of aliens not authorized to work in the United States. Fines for each undocumented worker would range from $1,000 to $2,000 for the first offense and $2,000 to $5,000 for additional ones.

—Provides for a six-month education period after the measure takes effect during which no enforcement actions may be taken. For 12 months thereafter, warning citations would be issued to first offenders.

—Forbids immigration-related job discrimination against those who have legal status within the United States.

—Requires employers, recruiters farm outside Naples, Fla., J.C. Caruthers and some friends are working on a Rube Goldberg-like plan to make white yams into lighter fluid for backyard grills.

The farm's cattle produce manure. The manure gives off methane gas, which fires a boiler. The boiler runs a still, which makes alcohol from the yams. And the gunk left in the still feeds the cattle, which produce more manure. And so on.

The part-time entrepreneurs have not actually sold any yam-based lighter fluid yet, but Caruthers says their Energy Research Institute will be well-placed for the inevitable rise in the price of oil — and oil-based lighter fluid.

"The public is very lethargic. Next time we're hit, it's going to be hard," he said.

The Energy Research Institute, founded by Caruthers in 1980, is a non-profit organization of individuals and companies with an interest in alternative energy sources. Its specialty is making alcohol for fuel.

Visionaries such as Caruthers, who makes his living as an architect, are scarce these days. The halving of world oil prices since November has boosted the American economy but weakened the nation's resolve to develop alternative sources of energy.

The drop-off in research and development concerns energy experts, especially since it comes at a time of a rising appetite for energy, a sharp cutback in exploration for oil and natural gas and the plugging of low-volume wells whose output has become uneconomical.

"I think we're designing our next energy crisis," said Charles Hook, editor of the Review of New Energy Technology in Littleton, Colo.

Fred Ohr, an energy analyst for Alliance Capital Management Corp. in New York, said, "I hate to join the industry alarmists, but the fact of the matter is that ... our energy self-sufficiency is going to decline."

Elihu Bergman, executive director of Americans for Energy Independence, argues that the government should prop up development of alternative energy sources.

"We're really not dealing in breakfast cereals and laundry detergent. This is an issue of economic security, an issue of national security," Bergman said.

Most of the big spenders in energy research and development have reduced or flattened their budgets in recent years.

Running against the trend, the nation's electric utilities, which benefit from cheaper fuel, boosted their research budget about 10 percent this year. The dollar amount spending, however, is far less than the oil companies'; the industry-financed Electric Power Research Institute in Palo Alto, Calif., is spending about $200 million in 1986 for research on energy generation, fuel sources and environmental controls.

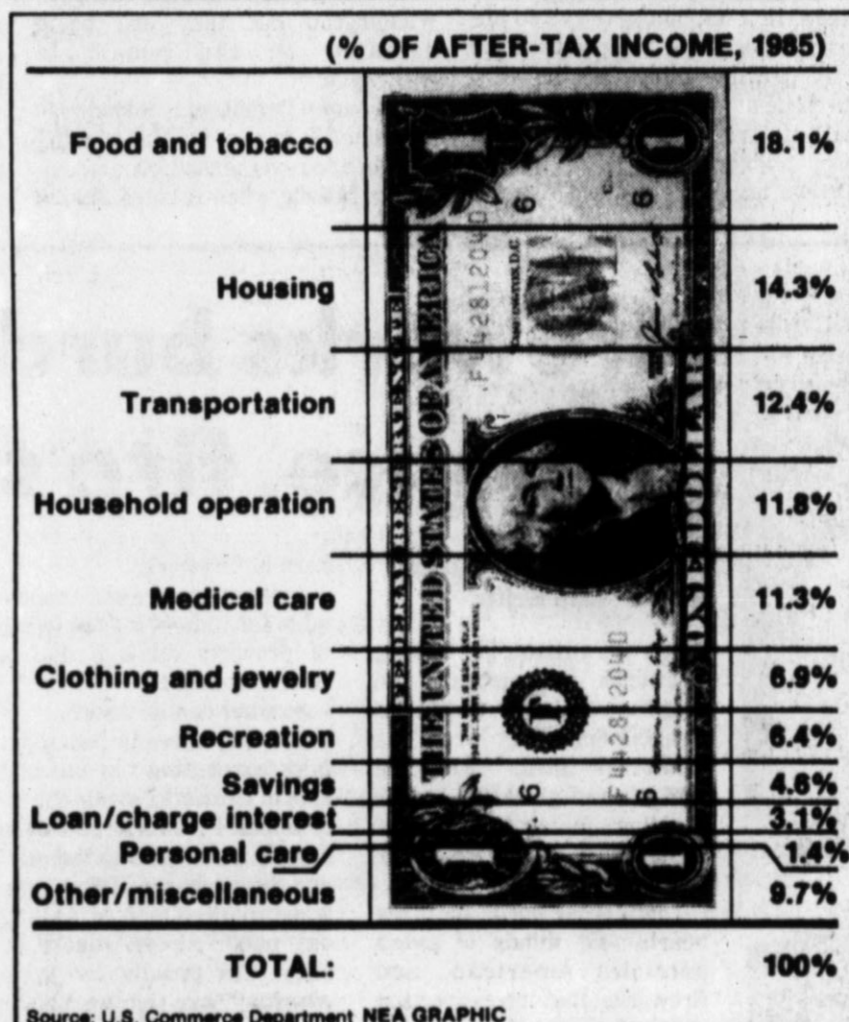

Meanwhile, the focus of research is changing. Less money is going into renewable energy sources such as sun, wind and yams, which have never provided more than a fraction of 1 percent of the nation's energy needs. More money is going into traditional fuels such as coal, which produces 57 percent of the nation's electricity.

Favorite research projects these days range from a steam boiler that runs on a mixture of water and ammonia to a furnace that burns a coal-limestone blend rolled by giant jets of air. The latest experimental plants burn far more cleanly and cheaply than their predecessors.

Coal's contribution to U.S. electricity needs could rise to 70 percent by the end of the century, so building better coal plants could mean big savings in the nation's bill for energy and environmental cleanup.

Poll taken on wheat production

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than a million farmers, landlords and others who hold an interest in U.S. wheat production are being asked to take part in a nationwide straw poll that some Democrats hope to turn into a vote on Reagan administration farm policy.

The mail referendum was ordered by Congress in the Food Security Act of 1985 to see how producers feel about strict mandatory controls as a way of gaining higher prices for wheat.

Between 1 million and 1.1 million ballots were mailed by local offices of the department's Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service. The marked ballots should be returned to the same offices by July 14.

Under the 1985 farm law, wheat growers must be given a chance to vote on whether they like current policy, which calls for lower price supports as an incentive to boost export sales, or whether they would prefer mandatory cuts in production aimed at forcing wheat prices higher.

The ballots were to go to farmers and others who have an interest in farms that produce at least 40 acres of wheat. Votes will be counted at the ASCS management office in Kansas City and the results announced after Aug. 1.

While the outcome of the voting is not binding, it is likely to take on heavy political significance. If farmers vote in large numbers in favor of supply controls, Washington policymakers will read that as a repudiation of the administration's "free-market" stance, and efforts to rewrite the six-month-old farm law likely will follow.

"We're at the crossroads of our future agricultural situation," said Sen. Edward Zorinsky, D-Neb., at whose insistence the poll was included in the 1985 farm law. "We need to ask farmers what they want their big-shot experts here in Washington to do for them, or not to do for them."

The vote has taken on a highly partisan tone, with Agriculture Secretary Richard E. Lyng publicly urging farmers to vote the issue down and some congressional Democrats urging farmers to use it to send an anti-administration message.

Zorinsky said Wednesday at a news conference that Lyng's flurry of statements on the issue show the administration is "at the point of hysteria" over the poll because it fears a defeat could cause political damage in farm belt states this election year.

Administration policy pins its hopes for farm economic recovery on improving farm exports, which have slumped by one-third since 1981. To entice foreign buyers, the administration is dropping price-support levels, protecting farmers' incomes in the meantime with direct government subsidies.

Greater sales coupled with U.S. efficiency will lead farmers back to prosperity, the reasoning goes. But the transition is proving expensive. The anticipated three-year cost of the new policy already has risen from $52 billion to $80 billion.

The wheat poll poses an alternative that is diametrically opposed: to use the force of federal policy to shrink U.S. output, restrict imports and force farm prices higher. Consumers would pay more for food, farmers would prosper, and the government could end expensive subsidies, proponents argue.

"Here is the opportunity for farmers to tell Congress, the president and the world whether they find the current farm scenario acceptable," said Rep. Dan Glickman.

Court upholds ban on execution of insane

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Constitution's ban on "cruel and unusual punishment" bars states from executing any insane person, the Supreme Court ruled by a 5-4 vote today.

The court, by a separate 7-2 vote, ruled that Florida must hold new hearings into the mental competency of convicted murderer Alvin Ford, whose lawyers say he became insane while a death row inmate.

All 38 states with death penalty laws, including Florida, have policies against executing mentally incompetent people even if they were competent when they committed their crimes.

Miss Liberty has long travel from France

NEW YORK (AP) — They were three dreamers who collectively helped turn the vision of a Statue of Liberty into reality. But the dreams of Frederic Auguste Bartholdi, Edouard-Rene Lefebvre de Laboulaye and Joseph Pulitzer lay in different worlds until they meshed in New York Harbor.

Bartholdi dreamed of building a huge monument — at the Suez Canal. De Laboulaye dreamed of a French republic at a time when his homeland was trying to form an empire.

Pulitzer dreamed of selling the most newspapers in New York City.

"What today's spectator sees in Liberty is scarcely what she meant to her makers and early public," wrote Marvin Trachtenberg, an art historian, in his re-released 1976 book on the monument, "The Statue of Liberty."

The statue was the brainchild of the French-American Union, a group that included no Americans and claimed as its members French activist intellectuals who sought to gain control of a government in upheaval. They looked to the United States as a model of democracy and also learned that by writing glowing accounts of America they could get around their government's censorship rules.

De Laboulaye was a leader of this group; the statue idea was his, a gift from the French on the 100th anniversary of U.S. independence that would link his political party with the United States and its expressed ideals of liberty and justice for all.

Although Bartholdi wrote in 1885 that de Laboulaye envisioned the project as "a common work of both nations," the Statue of Liberty remained a French effort until it was virtually completed.

Bartholdi was a sculptor with "a lust for the colossal," Trachtenberg wrote. The first Bartholdi effort to bring him attention was a 25-foot statue too large for display inside the exhibition hall at Salon, France.

He was a great admirer of the Egyptian pyramids and the Sphinx, and in 1869 proposed a monument at the Suez Canal nearly identical to the Statue of Liberty.

The Egyptian plan was rejected, but at a dinner party at de Laboulaye's home the schemes of the politicians and the sculptor meshed into the plan to build the "Statue of Liberty Enlightening the World" and Bartholdi visited the United States in 1871 to pitch the project.

On his trip, the sculptor met with President Ulysses S. Grant but received little support.

As Bartholdi progressed through six small clay studies, his design evolved. He used his wife as the model for Liberty's body and his mother as the model for the statue's face.

The frame around which the statue's copper shield was to be wrapped was designed by Gustave Eiffel, who would later build the tower bearing his name in Paris.

After de Laboulaye's group gained control of the French government in 1875, forming the Third Republic, the politician decided the time was right to announce plans for the statue. The announcement coincided with a constitutional assembly, helping de Laboulaye's party solidify its position.

Appeals for funds were made in French newspapers, but the response was less than enthusiastic; one letter writer suggested the United States should be building the statue on the River Seine.

Work nevertheless went on: "The Statue of American Independence" received U.S. copyright No. 9939 in 1876, and more than $200,000 was raised in France.

U.S. fund-raising produced almost nothing at first; the press derided the project as "the French statue" and wondered why Americans were expected to pay for it. New York newspapers hinted at fraud.

But Bartholdi, who knew from his first trip that his dream belonged in New York Harbor, suggested that he might consider putting the statue in Philadelphia or Boston. With this, the attitude in New York shifted considerably and early in 1877 a committee was formed to receive the French gift.

Meanwhile, Liberty made her first appearance in America. A 13-foot model of the hand and torch were displayed at the Philadelphia centennial celebration in 1876 and then went on display in New York's Madison Square Garden.

Construction continued in France, but U.S. fundraising for the pedestal lagged.

In 1883, railroad baron Jay Gould sold his money-losing New York World to Pulitzer, a Hungarian Jewish immigrant who had come to the United States in 1864, made his mark as a publisher in St. Louis and now was ready to take on the newspaper giants of New York.

He saw in the Statue of Liberty the chance to seize the public imagination, sell newspapers and at the same time blast the wealthy.

The drive moved slowly at first, raising only $135.75 in the first two months.

Pulitzer, who increased the World's circulation more than twentyfold in three years, kicked off his second fund-raising campaign in 1885 with an editorial: "Let us not wait for the millionaires to give this money. It is not a gift from the millionaires of France to the millionaires of America, but a gift of the whole people of France to the whole people of America."

Gould and William Henry Vanderbilt, two of New York's most prominent financiers, became, through the World, Pulitzer's favorite targets.

"Please take this from a little boy who wants to set Jay Gould a good example," read one letter published in the World — purportedly from a 10-year-old boy who contributed a dime.

The plan worked — the World raised $102,000 in five months — and the Statue of Liberty was dedicated atop its publicly financed pedestal Oct. 28, 1886.

Gavin, Perenchio drop bid

LOS ANGELES (AP) — An investor group that includes former U.S. ambassador to Mexico John Gavin and Hollywood executive A. Jerrold Perenchio has dropped its bid for Los Angeles television station KMEX and four other Spanish-language outlets.

"We made an offer which was turned down" and decided not to raise the bid, Robert Cahill, executive vice president of Chartwell Partnership Group, said Tuesday. Chartwell is Perenchio's principal business.

KMEX and the other stations are among a dozen outlets owned by the Spanish International Network. The Federal Communications Commission had threatened to revoke licenses of the stations but agreed Tuesday to lift that threat if the stations were sold.

Spanish International Network has circulated a confidential document to prospective bidders describing the properties and indicating their value.

Chartwell's bid was made before receiving the network's offering document.

Cahill said the offering document indicated the network was seeking more than the stations were worth.

Forging successful alliances often hindered by issues

LUBBOCK — Forging successful alliances between groups—whether they be business, political or social—is often hindered because issues get tied up in interpersonal conflicts.

Successful negotiators, says Texas Tech University management Professor Grant T. Savage, take that into account.

"So long as negotiations stay at the content level and focus only on issues, things will be fine," Savage said. "As soon as interpersonal problems surface, the chances of reaching an agreement diminish quickly."

Savage said interpersonal problems often arise from the manner in which one party presents something to the other.

"The person sending a message often concentrates only on what the message is, rather than on how it is delivered," Savage said. "The person receiving a message is often more concerned with how it is said. And that can cause some massive problems."

Savage said the sender should ask the receiver to rephrase the message so that both parties will know what is being received. By doing this, each message is more likely to be understood.

"The most important thing to consider in avoiding conflict is saving face," Savage said. "You must be concerned not only about defending your own face, but also protecting the other person's. You should always be aware of how your request will make the other party look in the eyes of their own group."

Savage suggested several negotiating tips to diminish the chances for conflict:

-Don't gunny sack. If a behavior is bothering you, tell the other person. Don't let small irritations build up. Either forget them or address them as they arise.

-Don't hit below the belt. Don't let sensitive issues that have no real bearing on the discussion come into play.

-Don't get upset at red-flag words. Especially when dealing in cross-cultural situations certain words, such as swearing, can be unacceptable. Don't let the unacceptability of such things interfere with the real issues.

-Don't try to resolve everything in front of an audience. Some negotiations are best done in private where saving face is easier in the end.

-Do try to understand and rephrase the other person's messages.

-Do try to compromise on the points you can. There are usually some things both sides can compromise on to reach the best overall agreement.

-Do work out a fail-safe plan. Once an agreement has been reached, a fail-safe plan for what to do if the agreement doesn't work will make resuming negotiations easier.

-Do find a mediator if an agreement cannot be worked out any other way. Often a neutral third party can see a resolution that will allow both sides to believe they have won.

Diego Maradona is dominating player

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer
MEXICO CITY (AP) — Move over, Larry Bird. Make room, Wayne Gretzky. You have company in Diego Maradona.

In much the same way Bird dominates the NBA and Gretzky rules the NHL, Maradona has made the 1986 World Cup his personal playground. The magic man of soccer scored a pair of sensational goals Wednesday, leading Argentina to a 2-0 victory over Belgium and into the championship game.

On Sunday, Maradona will try to carry Argentina to its second world title against West Germany, which eliminated France 2-0 Wednesday in the other semifinal. For the Germans, it is a record fifth trip to the World Cup final — they won in 1954 and '74, lost to England in 1966 and fell Italy four years ago.

"I believe we were defeated by the best player," Belgian Coach Guy Thys said. "The German victory over France wasn't expected. Germany showed its very good conditioning."

"However, Maradona is capable of being the decisive difference in the final."

Or anywhere else. The stocky 25-year-old striker has proven time and again in this tournament that he is soccer's best player.

On Wednesday, at Aztec Stadium — where the final will be held — Maradona was shut down in the first half by Belgium's shifting zone defense. But, just as against England in the quarterfinals, he needed little time to catch fire in the second half.

At 51 minutes, Maradona outraced a pair of defenders to a pass from Jorge Burruchaga and slipped the ball over charging goalkeeper Jean-Marie Pfaff. Twelve minutes later, he dribbled through four players before beating Pfaff to the far side.

"I am physically and psychologically at my best," Maradona said. "I feel as strong as a bull."

West Germany must stop Maradona if it hopes to become the first European team to win a World Cup held in Latin America, and join Italy and Brazil as three-time winners. Argentina won the crown in 1978.

While Argentina was ending Belgium's stunning run to its first semifinal ever, the Germans once again proved to be the impenetrable barrier for the European champion French. In the 1982 tournament,

Only two men in the history of the NBA have won MVP and Rookie-of-the-Year awards in the same season. Will Chamberlain did it in 1960 and Wes Unseld in 1969.

John L. Sullivan was the last of the bare-knuckled heavyweight champions, and James J. Corbett, who defeated Sullivan, was the first to wear gloves.

By The Associated Press
California Angels manager Gene Mauch says he expects Kirk McCaskill to have a good outing everytime he pitches, but his latest performance was more than Mauch expected.

It was a one-hitter in California's 7-1 victory over the Texas Rangers Wednesday night that moved the Angels into the lead in the American League West, a spot held for more than a month by the Rangers. The loss left the Rangers a game out of first.

"I expect him (McCaskill) to pitch like that every time out," Mauch said.

A one-hitter every time out? "Well, no, not a one-hitter," Mauch laughed. "But a winning performance. He certainly has the talent."

The only hit off McCaskill, 8-4, was Steve Buechele's home run leaked off the third. It was Buechele's 11th of the season, all of them with the bases empty.

"It didn't feel like a one-hitter," said McCaskill, who was winning for the fourth straight time and has won six of his last seven decisions. "I was grinding it out and I was tired. I didn't have my best stuff."

"I had better stuff in the game against Baltimore (a 2-hitter) and against the Rangers the last time I faced them (also a 2-hitter)."

By the time Buechele blasted a McCaskill fastball into the center field bleachers, the Angels had staked their right-hander to a 4-1 lead, thanks to a 4-run third against Ranger rookie Bobby Witt, 4-6.

The key blow in the inning was Wally Joyner's 2-run single, the first of his three hits.

Joyner was 7 of 15 in the three-game sweep over Texas with five runs batted in. He now has 55 for the year, second high in the American League.

"It helped when we got the early lead," said McCaskill, who is 5-1 lifetime against Texas. "I just told myself to treat it like a walk in the park."

McCaskill struck out 10 and walked two, both free passes issued to Buechele after his home run.

"Boonie (catcher Bob Boone) said I was trying to hump up and throw it past him," McCaskill said of his walks to Buechele. "I just think I was frustrated because he'd hit it out and I was determined to make him hit a good pitch."

The Angels collected 14 hits off Witt and three relievers with Boone, Rob Wilfong, Rick Burleson and Gary Pettis getting RBIs.

In other AL games, it was Boston 5, New York 4; Toronto 5, Milwaukee 1; Seattle 6, Cleveland 1; Detroit 11, Baltimore 2; Kansas City 5, Oakland 4; and Chicago 4, Minnesota 3.

Red Sox 5, Yankees 4
Boston scored five runs in the first inning and made them stand up, salvaging the final game of the three-game series against New York, the Red Sox' closest rival in the AL East.

Al Nipper, 4-4, pitching his first game since undergoing surgery May 18 after suffering a severe gash behind his right knee, survived a shaky start and checked the Yankees on eight hits for seven innings before giving way to Joe Sambito.

Tigers 11, Orioles 2
The Tigers hit four homers, two of them by Kirk Gibson, in the first four innings as they stopped Baltimore right-hander Mike Boddicker's seven-game winning streak.

Gibson, who had five RBIs, hit a two-run homer in Detroit's three-run first inning and got another two-run homer in the third.

Detroit starter Jack Morris, 7-4, allowed seven hits and struck out nine for his fourth complete game.

Royals 5, A's 4
Kansas City, which got out of a jam in strange fashion in the top of the ninth, beat Oakland in the bottom of the inning on Jorge Orta's RBI single.

With two outs and A's runners on second and third in the ninth, Jose Canseco walked off Steve Farr, 5-1. But pinch-runner Ricky Peters, who said later he thought the bases were already loaded, started walking home and was tagged out, ending the inning.

White Sox 4, Twins 3
Bobby Bonilla scored from first base on a two-out double by Greg Walker in the sixth inning, breaking a 3-3 tie and lifting Chicago over Minnesota.

Bonilla, who had singled to center off loser Frank Viola, 7-6, hesitated as he reached third base after Walker's double into the left field corner. But when Bonilla saw the relay throw going to second base, he raced home safely ahead of Steve Lombardozzi's throw.

Minnesota Manager Ray Miller was then ejected, claiming Bonilla never touched the plate.

White Sox starter Tom Seaver left in the top of the sixth after giving up an RBI triple to Randy Bush, making the score 3-2. The Twins, whose first run scored on Gary Gaetti's homer, tied it 3-3 on Kent Hrbek's groundout after Seaver left the game.

White Sox Manager Jim Fregosi said Seaver, who has lost four straight decisions, "is a very unhappy player who should get traded."

Fregosi added, "Tom and I have had a meeting and there is no sense in his staying here, but we are doing our best to work out a deal."

Mariners 6, Indians 1
Seattle left-hander Mark Langston overpowered Cleveland, striking out 15 and allowing only three hits.

Langston, 8-5, who recorded his fourth straight victory, set a team record for strikeouts, passing the previous club mark of 13 by Gaylord Perry in 1982.

Blue Jays 5, Brewers 1
Jessie Barfield and Rance Mulliniks broke open a close game with homer, while Toronto pitching held Milwaukee to six hits.

Jim Clancy, 7-5, allowed five hits over six innings, and gave up the only Brewer's run on Ben Oglivie's infield single in the top of the sixth, which made the score 2-1. Dennis Lamp allowed one hit over the last three innings for his first save.

Dave Parker hits game-winning single

Reds edge Astros 4-3 in 10 innings

By The Associated Press

Dave Parker came to bat against the Houston Astros in the 10th inning with a chance to hit the game-winning. He says it's his favorite situation.

And Parker took advantage of the situation with a two-out single that gave the Cincinnati Reds a 4-3 victory Wednesday night over the Houston Astros.

It came against 10-game winner Bob Knepper and with first place in the National League West on the line.

"I felt like I pitched as well tonight as I have all year," said Knepper who failed for the third straight time to win his 11th game of the season Wednesday night at the Astrodome. "It is disgusting to play this bad. Our defense has been sloppy and we haven't gotten the key hits when we needed them."

Parker was an unlikely hero after entering the game batting .213 against the Astros this season but the lack of a knock-out punch by the Astros gave Parker, who is a .304 life-time hitter, an opportunity.

"I'm a competitive guy," Parker said. "I was hitting about .214 against them. I guess they thought they had my number. I like to be up on a game winning situation."

Tracy Jones slamed a one-out single to left field in the 10th inning, advanced to second on an infield out and scored on Parker's shot to right field.

"You can't give Parker that many opportunities," said Reds player-manager Pete Rose. "He can hurt you at any time."

The win gives the Reds a 29-40 record while the Astros are at 38-33.

The Astros' loss overshadowed another fine performance at the plate by first baseman Glenn Davis who was 3-4 with two singles and a double, raising his average to near the .280 mark. He has gone 17-35 during the last nine games against the Reds.

"We could put 20 guys in the field and Davis would still get a hit," Rose said.

Kevin Bass also contributed three singles and an RBI for the Astros.

Other hitting stars for the Reds were Eric Davis with an RBI and two singles and Buddy Bell with a sacrifice fly.

The Astros remain a half-game behind the San Francisco Giants for first place in the Western Division race.

Cardinals 2, Pirates 1 and Braves 3, Dodgers 2

According to Vince Coleman of the St. Louis Cardinals, "Speed kills." So does lack of same.

Coleman's speed helped the Cardinals defeat the Pittsburgh Pirates 2-1 in 10 innings Wednesday night for their sixth consecutive victory. The Los Angeles Dodgers, on the other hand, had two consecutive runners nailed at third base to defuse an eighth-inning rally in a 3-2 loss to the Atlanta Braves.

Coleman opened the Cardinals' 10th with a single off reliever Pat Clements and took second on a wild pitch before Tito Landrum walked. Tom Herr singled to right and Coleman, who had stopped at third, sped home when Joe Orsulak's throw struck Herr on the leg near first base.

"He was worried about having to make a good throw and had to hurry," Coleman said.

The Pirates argued that Herr intentionally moved into the path of the throw, a claim disallowed by umpiring crew chief John Kibler and denied by Herr.

Meanwhile, Atlanta led Los Angeles 3-0 after 7½ innings on Rick Mahler's one-hit pitching and Bob Horner's two-run double in the top of the eighth. But in the bottom of the inning, Franklin Stubbs, who singled in the third inning and again in the ninth, beat out a bunt and took second on Mike Marshall's single.

In other National League games, St. Louis edged Pittsburgh 2-1, Atlanta got past Los Angeles 3-2, San Diego downed San Francisco 3-1, New York beat Montreal 5-2 and Chicago outlasted Philadelphia 10-7.

Paul Assenmacher relieved and surrendered a single to Len Matuszek that loaded the bases and a two-run single to Enos Cabell. But Matuszek was forced at third on Ed Amelung's bunt and, after Gene Garber relieved Assenmacher, Cabell was out at third on a botched hit-and-run play with pinch hitter Ken Landreaux at bat.

"I didn't do anything right," Landreaux said.

VOTER CERTIFICATION STATEMENT

Subpart W of Part 2054 of Title 7, Code of Federal Regulations requires that all voters for FmHA county or area committee elections meet the following eligibility requirements: (a) be farmers; (b) derive the principal part of their income from farming (that is more than 50% of their gross income must come from agricultural production); (c) have their principal farming operation within the county or area for which the election is being held.

By submitting this ballot, I attest that I meet the criteria to vote.

Pittsburgh played its game under protest after arguing that Clint Hurdle, who pinch-hit for Danny Cox in the Cardinals' ninth, had been announced as a replacement for Andy Van Slyke at first base. Van Slyke remained in the contest when umpire-in-chief John Kibler upheld St. Louis Manager Whitey Herzog's decision to keep Van Slyke in the game.

Braves 3, Dodgers 2

Rick Honeycutt, who has the lowest ERA in the majors, allowed an unearned run in seven innings but it was enough to make him the loser. Atlanta took a 1-0 lead with two out in the sixth when Dale Murphy tripled and scored when third baseman Cabell misplayed Horner's sharp grounder. It was the Dodgers' 87th error of the season, most in the majors.

Padres 3, Giants 1

Dave Dravecky's two-run single in the fourth inning helped him snap a personal four-game losing streak. Dravecky, Lance McCullers, Craig Lefferts and Rich Gossage blanked the Giants until Rob Thompson homered in the ninth.

Mets 5, Expos 2

Kevin Mitchell and Len Dykstra doubled home runs in a four-run fourth inning as the Mets salvaged the finale of a three-game series and moved nine games ahead of Mon-treau in the NL East. Winning pitcher Sid Fernandez, 9-2, scattered six hits over six innings and also singled home the go-ahead run in the fourth. George Foster added New York's fifth run with his 12th homer of the season.

Cubs 10, Phillies 7

Rookie Dave Martinez's two-run double tied the score in the sixth inning and two batters later Shawon Dunston put Chicago ahead with another two-run double. The Cubs, who blew a 3-0 lead and trailed 5-3, knocked out Charles Hudson in their fourth-run sixth. Martinez doubled for his first major-league extra-base hit and RBIs.

The Cubs withstood Philadelphia homers by Mike Schmidt, John Russell, Ron Roenicke and Ronn Reynolds.

 Information about your changing telephone service from Gary Stevens, Manager-Community Relations

SWBT sponsors wagon train
 Southwestern Bell Telephone is committed to preserving our state's rich history, because we're proud of Texas' distinctive roots. They're our roots, too.
 Wagon trains, like telephones, have played a key role in Texas' development. And in keeping with our Texas commitments, we recently joined in the sponsorship of the Sesquicentennial Wagon Train, through proceeds from the sale of Sesquicentennial calendars.
 While we enjoy helping bring the past to life, we never lose sight of our most important job: providing Texans the best telephone service possible — advanced, futuristic telecommunications systems — today.
 You might say we do just that on the wagon train. While today's wagon train riders are living a lifestyle reminiscent of the 1800's, they do have at least one edge over the pioneers who settled Texas. We've made sure today's adventurers enjoy the best of two worlds, if they want to, by providing portable payphones at campsites during their 6-month, 3,000-mile journey.
 As the wagon train — longest and largest in American history — blazes a new trail across Texas, it's making modern-day history. The wagon train not only commemorates our state's 150th birthday and ancestors, but is a symbol of Texas to the world.

A festive journey's end
 On July 3 the 4-mile-long convoy of 150 wagons, 800 horses and 300 horseback riders will roll into their final campsite, Fort Worth. Not only will the "eyes of Texas" be upon them, but millions of people from around the world will also be watching.
 Reporters, newsmen and camera crews from across the U.S. and world will be on-hand to cover the Texas-sized celebration planned at the end of the trail.
 And we're happy to be a partner in this historic event, sharing in Texas' past, present and future.

Teaching good phone usage
 With the kids out of school for the summer, it's a good time to teach or review good phone usage, both for good manners and for security. Some of your personal emergency numbers for the youngsters during the school year will be changing now that school's out. And we're here to help. We've got a free booklet, "Phone Use for Children," for youngsters and their parents. With a little help from Mom and Dad, this booklet can help even a pre-schooler understand the proper way to use the telephone.
 The booklet shows children how to answer the telephone, what to say to callers and what to do in an emergency. It also talks about "calls that cost extra money" — like long distance or other toll calls. And it describes in words and pictures good phone manners to learn and remember.
 Having good phone manners, well that's just one more thing about your children you can be proud of. But knowing they understand how to use the phone in an emergency will make your summer relaxation a lot more relaxing.
 To order your free booklet, write to:

In N.L. all-star balloting for first basemen

Hernandez regains lead over Garvey

NEW YORK (AP) — Keith Hernandez of the New York Mets has regained the lead from San Diego's Steve Garvey in the balloting for starting first baseman on the National League's All-Star team. Hernandez has 507,056 votes —

30,400 more than Garvey, who has started the game nine times, the commissioner's office announced today.

Top vote-getter in the league continues to be Hernandez' teammate, Darryl Strawberry. The right fielder has received 892,528 votes.

Second and third among outfielders are Atlanta's Dale Murphy and San Diego's Tony Gwynn. Murphy is 170,805 votes behind Strawberry at 721,723; Gwynn has 506,172 votes.

787,811 votes.

The All-Star game will be played at the Astrodome on Tuesday night, July 15.

"MR. CLUTCH" DAVIS
PHOENIX (AP) — "Mr. Clutch," that's what Alvan Adams, the center of the Phoenix Suns, calls teammate Walter Davis.

"I can't imagine any player doing the things Davis has repeatedly done in the fourth quarter of games," Adams said. "I know Larry Bird of Boston is a great performer, but I don't think even Larry comes through in the fourth period the way Davis does."

FUN REDS

When one is looking for a grapey young red wine to drink with strong cheese, or without food, Beaujolais is the wine of choice. It is a light red wine that is meant to be enjoyed while it is young and lively. It is not meant to be taken seriously. Thus, it goes well with hamburgers or quiche. Beaujolais is the safest and best all-round class of red wine for mealtimes. Beaujolais-Villages is a better, stronger and tastier selection. Simple young Bordeaux, Burgandy and Rhone reds should have the same appeal. Italy's Valpolicella and Bardolino, Barbera and Dolcetto, and even Chianti, can be freshly fruity if they are young enough. Light Zinfandels and Gamays from California often are good choices in this class.

Let THE STORE assist you in your choice of wines to insure you get the best value suited to your personal taste and budget. "A World of Wines" awaits you here at 400 N. 25 Mile, 364-7802 where we are open Mon.-Sat. 10-9, use our drive up door until midnight for beer and wine, on Sun. only beer and wine is available from 12-12.

Fizzy red Lambrusco is a "fun" selection from the young red class.

Cowhands hit trail

The Civil War took many frontier Texans — farmers and ranchers alike — away from home. As the war dragged on, thousands of cattle wandered and multiplied without being thinned out.

Texas historian Joe Frantz says that when the men returned home, they found about four million head of untended cattle, mostly in the region between San Antonio, Corpus Christi and the Rio Grande Valley.

Meanwhile, Northerners had new money and an appetite for beef. The resource, however, was a thousand miles from the market. The Texans' problem: how to move this ready resource to market.

Joseph G. McCoy, a 26-year-old Illinois commission merchant, convinced the railroads to build a cattle town west of settlement so that Texas cattle trailed northward would not be subject to a typhoid quarantine in settled areas.

McCoy then persuaded Texas drivers to turn their herds northward toward the new town of Abilene, Kansas, where the necessary facilities for cattle had been built. Abilene even had gambling halls, bars and prostitutes.

Somehow the Texas cattlemen took a chance on this man they had never seen and sent their cattle to a town they didn't know.

The first drive took place in 1867, as a quarter of a million Texas cattle were herded toward a no-place called Abilene, Frantz says, and cattlemen found that McCoy had delivered on all his promises.

Between 1867 and 1890, about 10 million head of cattle were trailed north across Texas and Indian territory. The grass became better the farther north the cattle traveled — the closer to market, the fatter the steers.

Once Abilene became prosperous, Frantz recounts, the new, more conventional residents frowned on cowboy high jinks and the cattlemen drove ever farther west.

Of the cowtowns that followed, the most famous was Dodge City, Kansas. (Or perhaps, as Frantz reminds us, "infamous" is the better word, for in one of the sayings that came down: "West of Kansas City there is no law; west of Dodge City there is no God.")

Cattle also were trailed into Colorado, Nebraska, Wyoming and Montana. The northern states provided a fine "topping off" range.

Eventually, these newer territories and states became cattle kingdoms themselves, stocked mainly by the descendants of the longhorn cattle originally trailed into their regions from Texas.

The advance of the railroad, the farmer's frontier and barbed wire fencing spelled the death of the range cattle industry, Frantz says, helped along by the tendency to overstock the range and destroy the grass and by a miserable drought in 1885-1886, intermixed with one of the most blizzardy winters in western history.

That year is known as the year of the Big Die-Up, and not only drove many entrepreneurs out of the cattle business but convinced survivors that the days of uncontrolled breeding had to end. Ranching then became a business and the free-ranging cowboy became a hired hand.

Still, the cowboy became the American equivalent of the medieval knight on horseback. Although his era was short, the range cowhand emerged as a symbol of a once-ample world, courage and direct action.

Literary historian Don Graham believes that the greatest epic expression of the generic American hero has been the cowboy. The cowboy saga stimulated the imagination of hundreds of novelists, poets and dramatists, Graham says, and by the turn of the century, as movies came into being, there lay at hand a vast repository of history and romance out of which to concoct stories.

Cowboy gear contributed to the mythology: the broad-brimmed sombrero with its high crown, high-heeled boots, rawhide lariat, spurs, silver-tipped western saddle with its big horn and oversized stirrups are just part of the mystique.

The apparel was in large part borrowed from Arab, Spanish and Mexican heritage.

Although the gear was spectacular to the benchbound Easterner, Frantz says, it served a practical use, as did the roundup and the methods of tending cattle borrowed from the Hispanic past.

The original tenders of the longhorn, also bred in this tradition, showed the Anglos how to manage herds in a semi-arid environment. And some of the cowboy lingo had Hispanic origins: rodeo; la riata, or lariat; sombrero; hoosegow for juzgado; buckaroo for vaquero; mustang, or mesteno, meaning a pony of mixed blood; and remuda for a relay of spare horses.

The longhorn and the cowboy became the enduring symbols of the state, an imperishable part of Texas tradition, no matter how urbanized and far removed from the ranch Texans may become.

Airline captain gives up job for for candy

By CASEY SELIX Fort Worth Star-Telegram

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Bruce Graham gave up a high-paying job in the cockpit for candy.

The former American Airlines captain is now the maker and marketer of Colonel Graham's Gourmet Candies in Dalworthington Gardens.

The boost in rank comes from his home state of Kentucky's affinity for honoring native achievers.

Some, including his mother, questioned whether Graham was flying right when he retired early from a $100,000-a-year job in 1983 to make artificially flavored bourbon cremes.

Graham says he's on course, although he admits his income has yet to match his salary as a pilot.

"If you have the bent toward being an entrepreneur — to satisfy that need — you have to break away from something as routine as being a pilot," says Graham, who guided DC-10s to the Caribbean during his 17-year career.

"Being a pilot means hours and hours of boredom punctuated by moments of stark terror."

David Thomas, director of the Small Business Institute at the University of Texas at Arlington, says Graham is one of a growing number of Americans who sacrifice steady jobs to start their own businesses.

"Many people are willing to trade their jobs for the satisfaction of doing something themselves," Thomas said. "The underlying current is the sense of adventure and a sense of fulfillment. This pilot is very characteristic of that trend."

At 53, Graham has shed the captain's blues for a white frock coat and pants that Kentucky's plantation owners wore 150 years ago. It's all part of a technique to market his Mint Julep Bourbon Cremes, Red-eye Whisky Balls and Champagne Truffles.

Life as a pilot might be behind him, but he has used the analytical skills acquired in that job in his newest adventure.

"Flying is a very technical job. You must know all the systems of the aircraft and how they relate. In this, you must also know how everything operates — from making the candy to marketing it," said Graham, who trained as a U.S. Navy pilot.

Graham is no stranger to the kitchen or to salesmanship. For years, he made batches of bourbon cremes as Christmas gifts. When he didn't make the candy one Christmas, he says he never "caught so much Dickens in my life."

Longtime friend Bob Link, who met Graham when they were fraternity brothers at the University of Kentucky, has been the salesman in action.

"Years before he became an airline pilot, he worked for me," said Link, who has a real estate company in Lexington, Ky. "He's a salesman and a promoter, and good at both. It didn't surprise me at all that he'd do this."

Margie Graham, mother of the entrepreneur, says she didn't understand her son's motives at first. "I really felt being a pilot was an awful good position to give up," she said in a telephone interview from Harrodsburg, Ky.

Reactions to the candy have made her more confident. "Everyone who has seen it or tasted it seems impressed, especially with the packaging," she said.

So far, most of Graham's business is coming from his home state of Kentucky, where the chocolate-coated candies are packaged in liquor-shaped bottles.

Graham has an agreement with a 48-store chain in Kentucky and Tennessee, and he is trying to get the candies sold at airport and hotel gift shops.

Locally, the product is available at $12.95 a bottle at The Party Connection in Arlington's Lincoln Square, but the owner says it's not selling.

"It's wonderful candy, but people don't think of us for this sort of thing," said Don Benson, whose store sells novelty items for parties.

Graham has been working 14 to 18 hours a day trying to nurture his nine-member operation.

His wife of nine years, Sandy, is a flight attendant for American Airlines and says she doesn't mind footing the bills for now. The couple moved to Arlington in 1980 after American Airlines moved its headquarters to the area.

"It's a different kind of excitement," Sandy Graham said of their current lifestyle. "It's exciting when he comes out with a new product."

The first thing people usually ask Graham at trade shows is if he's that colonel of fried chicken fame. Graham's white suit, white hair and white moustache remind some of the original Kentucky colonel.

"The next question is, 'Where's the chicken?' I tell them I don't sell chicken, but I do sell some fine candy," he said. "Move over Colonel Sanders, there's a new colonel in town."

PUC gives final OK to rate hike

AUSTIN (AP) — The Public Utility Commission has voted final approval to a $35.4 million rate hike for Southwestern Bell, but that does not mark the end of the case.

Southwestern Bell's next move will be to ask for a rehearing. Then, the company — which wants a $277 million hike — can take the case to state court.

The commission Wednesday routinely approved its previous preliminary decisions which add up to no increase in monthly bills for basic local phone service.

However, when the new rates take effect, probably in mid-July, Southwestern Bell customers will have to pay $1.35 for an operator to check a line, and $2.20 for an operator to interrupt a phone conversation.

The number of free directory assistance calls will go down to three per month. Five free directory assistance calls are now permitted. Calls above the limit will continue to cost 30 cents.

Southwestern Bell's $277 million request includes local service increases of up to $2 a month.

PUC Chairwoman Peggy Rosson

Wednesday reiterated her opposition to the $35.4 million hike. She was upset June 13 when fellow Commissioners Dennis Thomas and Jo Campbell changed an earlier vote and decided to allow a larger profit for Southwestern Bell shareholders.

The commission previously had tentatively approved an increase of about $8 million.

Ms. Rosson said her findings showed Southwestern Bell was entitled to far less than $35.4 million.

Ms. Rosson said she would file a dissent to the commission decision.

Ground breaking for center slated

Lubbock General Hospital will celebrate the ground breaking of its new Radiation Therapy Center on Monday, June 30, with a ceremony on the southwest grounds of the hospital. Lee Lewis General Contractor will begin construction at the end of June with completion expected in March 1987.

The one-level center, containing over 8,000 square feet, will be a free-standing building connected to the hospital with its own adjacent parking and reception area.

"The addition of radiation therapy will enable us to provide more complete care to our oncology patients," said Georgia Fojtasek, Chief Operating Officer at Lubbock General Hospital. The facility's cost will be in the neighborhood of $2,800,000 including construction and equipment costs.

The center will be equipped to treat cancer patients of all ages. The 15-room building will be provided with the most modern treatment devices available.

A newly designed dual-energy linear accelerator will provide high energy radiation which will be capable of treating malignancies of different depths and sizes. Treatment planning will be aided by a simulator and a highly specialized computer. A separate machine will be dedicated to orthovoltage, or medium energy radiation treatment.

Fojtasek said, "This is very definitely a significant advance in health care for the people of West Texas."

Dr. Jay Sackler, Chairman of the Texas Tech University Health

Sciences Center Department of Radiology, is spearheading a search for a radiologist who specializes in radiation therapy. The new radiation therapist will direct care of cancer patients, teaching and research.

If you're cooking with chocolate and haven't enough unsweetened chocolate, for each ounce called for you can use three tablespoons of cocoa plus one tablespoon of fat.

Flags Presented

Members of the Pioneer Study Club presented flags to be displayed in the E.B. Black House Tuesday. The flags were donated by key members of the club and will now be used as a part of Deaf Smith County history. Both flags, the United States and Texas, were used in the opening of each club meeting for many years.

Flags presented to E.B. Black House

Members of the Pioneer Study Club recently presented flags of the United States and Texas to the E.B. Black House to be displayed for many generations to come.

The Black House was also built the same year that the Pioneer Club was organized and members agreed that the flags should have a permanent home in the Black House as part of Deaf Smith County Museum.

The U.S. flag was presented by Mrs. Ralph McCullough when she retired as president from the club in 1963.

Mrs. Ted Panciera presented the second flag of Texas to the study club when she also retired as president, in 1972.

Both flags have also been used in the opening of each club meeting for many years.

Organized in 1909, the Pioneer Study Club has contributed much to Hereford's community for the past seventy-seven years.

One member of the club, Bess Turentine Werner, built the first local museum in a quonset building on her farm five miles west of Hereford. Visitors from many states toured this museum for a number of years.

The Deaf Smith County Historical Society was organized in 1966 for the purpose of gaining community support to build a museum to house the treasures of Werner and other local residents.

Pioneer Study Club members have held 100 percent membership in the Deaf Smith County Historical Society since it began.

Most of the members have served as hostesses for the museum for the eight years until a full time director was employed.

Werner was a guiding influence in the Deaf Smith County Historical Society and her daughter-in-law, Johnnie Turrentine, is the current president.

DR. GOTT

Drugs replace carotid surgery

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT — There is an operation called a bilateral carotid body resection that apparently does wonders for asthma and emphysema patients. Could you describe this procedure and explain how it works?

DEAR READER — The carotid bodies, one on each side of the neck, act as mini-respiratory sensors in the body. When stimulated by low blood oxygen, the carotid body reflex stimulates the brain's breathing center to increase the respiratory rate. Because the carotid bodies also seem to stimulate the nerves that open and close the bronchial tubes, surgeons discovered that when they removed the carotid bodies, some patients with asthma could breathe easier. Now that there are so many effective drugs and treatments for asthma and emphysema, the operation is seldom performed anymore.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I am 34 and have been trying to get pregnant for the past six years. What kind of tests would have to be done to find out what the problem is?

DEAR READER — There are many tests. The basic tests determine if you are ovulating, if your husband's sperm count and motility are normal and whether your cervical secretions are inhibiting the movement of sperm. In addition, specialists have to make sure that the ova you produce can find their way into the Fallopian tubes and thereby travel down to the uterus. The two most common tests are the hystero-salpingogram (an X-ray study to evaluate your reproductive tract) and a postcoital semen analysis.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I got two ruptured discs at work and the doctor wants to operate. What can I expect from the operation? Will I be able to do the heavy lifting at work that I did before?

DEAR READER — You can expect relief of pain if the operation is successfully performed. You will probably be advised to limit your lifting activities thereafter, because there is always a chance that other discs can rupture, too. I think you'd best sit down with the doctor, before surgery, and discuss the operation's risks and benefits, as well as the restrictions you may have to adhere to after you have recovered.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I am 60 and have developed diabetes in the last two years. No one else in my family has this problem. My weight is high, but my blood sugar isn't (130). Can you explain why I developed diabetes?

DEAR READER — Actually, your blood sugar — if it's a fasting specimen — is high. It may go sky-high a couple of hours after you eat.

No one knows precisely why some people tend to develop an intolerance to sugar as they age. This type of diabetes is usually seen in overweight persons. Perhaps the pancreas just gets worn out after decades of trying to produce enough insulin in people who eat too much.

You may be able to control your diabetes satisfactorily if you lose weight and omit sugar from your diet. That way, your pancreas will not have to work as hard, and the limited supply of insulin that it now makes may be sufficient to keep your blood sugar at an acceptable level.

Diet control is the cornerstone to the treatment of all diabetes. In an overweight patient, it is paramount.

Dr. Gott's new Health Report on IRRITABLE BOWEL SYNDROME explains the symptoms and management of this common problem. Send $1 and your name and address to P.O. Box 2597, Cincinnati, OH 45201. Be sure to mention the title.

CYSTIC FIBROSIS

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Drs. Robert Schwartz, a cystic fibrosis specialist, and Richard Doherty, a geneticist, at the University of Rochester Medical Center say they have identified a DNA marker associated with cystic fibrosis.

The discovery, made in collaboration with Integrated Genetics Inc., could soon lead, they say, to direct identification of the gene for cystic fibrosis and eventually to new treatments for the killer disease.

The researchers are now developing a diagnostic test, called direct carrier screening, which would permit advance warning to couples at risk of having children with cystic fibrosis. One in every 400 American couples is in the at-risk group.

Ready for Lock-In

The youth of San Jose Church have joined with Richard Schlabs and Johnny Gonzalez of the Full Gospel Business Men Association to organize a 24-hour lock-in Friday and Saturday at 716 Brevard. Prison inmates, law enforcement officers, former drug users and local juvenile probation officer Lupe Chavez will speak on crime and drug abuse. The lock-in begins at 6 p.m. Friday and concludes at 6 p.m. Saturday. Guests should bring a pillow and blanket for rest between speakers, games, and snacks.

POLLY'S POINTERS Mix can replace baking powder

By Polly Fisher

DEAR POLLY — Do you have a recipe for homemade baking powder? My mother-in-law used to mix baking soda and cream of tartar, but I don't know what the proportions were. — CAROL

DEAR CAROL — A substitute for baking powder may be made by mixing 1/4 teaspoon baking soda plus 1/2 teaspoon cream of tartar for each teaspoon of baking powder called for in a recipe. This is perhaps not as reliable as commercial double-acting baking powder, but it should do the trick in a pinch.

I'm sending you a copy of my newsletter "Kitchen Tricks," which includes this formula as well as other substitutes for common cooking ingredients and additional hints to make your daily cooking chores easier. Others who would like this issue should send $1.00 for each copy to POLLY'S POINTERS, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1216, Cincinnati, OH 45201. Be sure to include the title. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — Slice firm ripe bananas and freeze the slices individually on a cookie sheet. When frozen, store in small plastic bags in the freezer. These are delicious on ice cream, cereal, puddings, etc. The bananas must be used quickly upon removal from the freezer. — FRAN

DEAR POLLY — Have you ever had trouble with paper coffee filters collapsing when the water pours onto the coffee granules? I had that problem until I tried dampening the filter holder before putting the coffee filter into it. That solved the problem. If there are still spots where the filter doesn't cling to the filter holder, dampen them with a small amount of water or with dampened finger tips, then press the filter into place. — R.M.

DEAR POLLY — I reuse heavily scented dusting powder boxes by filling them with baby powder. The scent, only slightly milder, is immediately picked up by the baby powder. — MARTHA

DEAR POLLY — Is there some way to get candle wax out of a tablecloth? The candles were left to burn too long and ran onto the tablecloth. — MRS. L.D.S.

DEAR MRS. L.D.S. — Here's the basic procedure for candle wax in fabrics: With a dull knife, gently scrape off as much wax as possible. Sandwich the fabric between two thick layers of paper towels and iron over the spot with a hot iron. Frequently change the towels for fresh ones as the wax melts and soaks into the paper. If any colored stain remains after all the wax has been removed, sponge with rubbing alcohol or cleaning fluid. Finally, launder or dry clean the cloth as usual. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — I have a good Pointer for using the plastic wrappers newspapers come in on rainy days. When I am working with different colored skeins of yarn, I slip each skein in one of these bags. This way the yarn stays untangled and clean and I can see which color I want easily. I have two sizes of bags, for large and small skeins. When I'm done with the project, I put the ends of the skeins in one of these bags and label it with the name of the pattern and amount of yarn used and left over. — MRS. M.D.

DEAR POLLY — To prepare horseradish quickly, put some white vinegar in a blender, add chunks of horseradish and blend.

Ann Landers
Behavior unprofessional

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Will you please tell me whether it is considered ethical for a male psychologist to fondle and explore a female patient's body as "a necessary part of the relaxation technique"?

It starts gradually with hand-holding and a few caresses. "Pretend I am your father," he says. "Concentrate on how comforting it is."

The patient trusts him. She has total confidence in his professional abilities. He promised to make her well. She is told she will be perfectly comfortable with everything that happens, and that she must relax and "let herself go."

I feel sure you will say this is wrong. If I am correct, will you please inform women whose therapists behave this way that they must be aware of what is happening to them and where it may lead? Let them know, Ann, that they are being used instead of helped and that such conduct is highly unprofessional.—CONCERNED IN CALIFORNIA say a word. One morning Johnny's mother put out his pancakes and to her surprise Johnny said, "There should be more butter on the pancakes, Mother." The mother was delighted and said, "Oh, Johnny, why have you never said a word before?" "Oh, said Johnny, 'up to this time everything has been fine.'"—WOODLAND HILLS, CALIF.

DEAR WOODY: Last time I heard that joke I laughed so hard I kicked the slats out of my cradle. I'm printing it, however, for the present generation.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Please answer in the newspaper. My husband works nights, and he gets the mail.

He has very high blood pressure and is overweight. The doctor increased his medicine, but he has not told the doctor that he drinks about 8-10 cans of beer a day. Please find out if drinking so much beer can affect the blood pressure.—WORRIED IN CHICAGO

DEAR CHICAGO: Eight to ten cans of beer a day can affect the weight—and that can affect the blood pressure. Tell your husband's doctor at once about the beer-guzzling and let him take it from there.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My sister and I are having an argument. Please settle it. She washes her clothes in cold water and rinses them in cold water as well. I say warm water must be used or the clothes don't get really clean. Who is right?—LAND R IN WYOMING EAR WY: Your sister is right. Cold water will get the clothes just as clean as warm water. Buy her a lunch.

There is a big difference between cold and cool. Ann Landers shows you how to play it cool without freezing people out in her booklet, "Teen-Age Sex—Ten Ways to Cool It." Send 50 cents and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611.

DEAR CALIFORNIA: I'll tell them more than that! The type of behavior you describe is worse than unprofessional. It is immoral, indecent, unethical, exploitive and considered totally unacceptable by any and all standards.

I urge any patient who is experiencing such gross conduct on the part of her doctor to report him to the American Psychological Association, 1200 17th St., N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: On the subject of young children learning to talk: This story is from the Farmers' Almanac.

"Little Johnny was six years old and never had he said one word. His parents tried every possible way to make him talk. Even a doctor who was brought in couldn't get him to

Theater production opens

Adventure Theater is proud to announce its' summer show, 'You're a Good Man, Charlie Brown.' The Broadway hit musical features Charlie Brown, Snoopy and the rest of your favorite Peanuts characters. Watching the show is like seeing a months worth of comic strips mixed with wonderful, witty songs depicting each of the characters in larger-than-life situations.

Heading up the cast in the role of Charlie Brown is Jim Elliott, Snoopy is played by Scott Hay, Lucy by Laura Burch, Linus by Greg Corona, Schroeder by John Jacob and Patty by Fleur Fox. The show is performed by adults in childrens' clothing and is easily as enjoyable for adults as it will be for children.

Opening on June 21, the show will play every Saturday afternoon through August 9. The hot dog lunch, sponsored by Wienerschnitzel and Pepsi-Cola is served at 12:30 and the show begins at 1:30. Admission is $5.00 for children and $7.00 for adults. Adventure Theater, Inc. is a non-profit Texas corporation located at the Country Squire Dinner Theatre. Cal 358-7486 for reservations.

Doug Keese named for award

Doug Keese, son of James and Debbie Keese of Hereford, has been named an Academic All-American by the National Secondary Education Council.

Doug, who attends Stanton Junior High School, was nominated for the award by Kathy Rundell, life science instructor. His name will appear in the Academic All-American Scholar directory which is published nationally.

The council selects Academic All-American scholars upon the exclusive recommendations of teachers, coaches, counselors and other qualified sponsors. Once awarded, the students may be recognized by the NSEC for other honors.

Doug's grandparents are Mona Keese and Jimmie Lee, both of Amarillo.

Draper presents program on patriotism at Pilot meeting

The Hereford Chapter of Pilot International met Tuesday for a regular meeting at the Caisson House. Breakfast was served to approximately 40 members and guests.

Clovis Seago, program chairman, introduced Argen Draper who presented a program on patriotism with emphasis on heroic and patriotic women in Texas history. Five new members were initiated into the chapter. They were Jane White, Betty Taylor, Merle Clark, Karen Vardeman, and Mary Harris.

Thelma Lamm was honored as Pilot of the month. She was cited for her many contributions to the club in particular her work in co-ordinating ticket sales for the recent fund-raising supper.

The next meeting will be the regular monthly business meeting on July 8.

International Friendship Week observance scheduled

Realizing the importance of promoting friendship throughout the world, the Odd Fellows and Rebekahs in North America, South America, Europe and Austral-Asia are observing the week of June 22-28 as International Week of Friendship.

During the regular meeting of the Hereford Rebekah Lodge recently, the proclamation by Sovereign Grand Master George E. Shaw of Marlboro, Mass., directed the observance of International Week of Friendship throughout the world of Odd Fellowship, and that all members of the international brotherhood should join together in acts of friendship to promote a better understanding among the people of all nations.

"Odd Fellows and Rebekahs are proud to join with civic and government officials in observing this special week," stated Kee Ruland, noble grand of the local lodge.

As 1986 has been designated as the International Year of Peace by the United Nations, the international leader of Odd Fellowship has encouraged the membership to promote peace and understanding with a demonstration of friendship.

Plans finalized by lodge members for benefit supper

Final plans and preparations were made for a benefit supper and musical jamboree when members of the Hereford Rebekah Lodge No. 228 met Tuesday evening.

The spaghetti supper will be served Saturday beginning at 5:30 p.m. at I.O.O.F. Hall, 205 E. Sixth St. Musical entertainment will be in progress throughout the event.

Tickets are priced at $3 each and all proceeds will be used to pay medical expenses for Levita Fitzgerald.

Noble Grand Kee Ruland presided

as sick members and friends were reported. Sixty-four visits and 22 cheer cards were reported for the week.

An annual memorial service was presented under the direction of Ruland.

Verna Sowell was hostess to Ruland, Merle Booz,er Susie Curtisinger, Fred Ruland, David Rettman, Faye Brownlow, Leona Sowell, Verna Sowell, Lydia Hopson, Sadie Shaw, Dorothy Lundry, Jo Irlbeck, Anthony Irlbeck, Gllessie Shelton, Wallace Shelton, Ada Hollabaugh, Anna Conklin, Ben Conklin, Peggy Lemons, and Helen Bishop.

Band Boosters to meet today

Hereford High School Band Boosters will meet at 6:30 p.m. today in the High School Band room to start organizing fund raisers to help purchase new band uniforms.

Booster club members note that the organization is not limited to parents of band members, but any person interested in the HHS band may participate.

Demand for graphics high

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Some of television's best visual moments are the slam-bang station identifications or the brilliant program opening sequences that make some shows look like a limp afterthought.

The three-dimensional network logos that dance across the screen are the product of graphic computers. While the expense limits such graphics to just a few seconds, the demand for such imagery has increased.

It also has sparked a new growth industry for powerful computers that once were only purchased for high-tech defense companies to design aircraft or train pilots.

"We wanted to turn it into a general product," said Ken Dozier, president and chief executive officer of Interactive Machines Inc. His company makes the IM1500, an increasingly popular image-making machine.

"In both computers and graphics, there's an emerging market that is above the general computer market and below the supercomputer market. That's the area we're headed for," said Dozier, a former rock musician.

The $40,000 IM1500 computer that creates three dimensional line images was designed for architects, but so far, not one architectural firm has bought one.

Instead, IM1500s are used to project realistic images of enemy and friendly aircraft on a dome at the pilot training center at the Lemoor (Calif.) Naval Air Station. The computers also are at several graphic imaging firms, and two of them are at work for Universal Studios, the first studio to start its own computer graphics department.

"The studio is starting to use more video technology," said Ron Saks, head of the department. "Any time people are exposed to the computer graphics, it pushes up their expectations, and the producers and directors want to incorporate them."

Saks' department also does contract work, and has created computer images for television commercials such as the flying electrical plug for Circuit City stores.

The unit also has done work for other studios, such as the Warner Bros. movie "Spies Like Us," and the "Twilight Zone" television show.

For Universal, Saks has created special effects and computer images used in "Knight Rider," where the computers are used to create the line images seen on KITT the Car's radar screen, and "Airwolf," where computer-created missiles were cut into a film sequence.

Typically, a finished computer-generated image, such as the opening sequence of the "NBC Nightly News," can cost anywhere from $3,000 to $5,000 a second to produce. Obviously, there's no room for mistakes.

What makes such images possible is the relatively cheaper cost, about $100 a second, of creating a skeletal version of the images on computers such as the IM1500.

Kiwanis vote not to allow women members

HOUSTON (AP) — The Kiwanis International will remain an all-male service organization after delegates at the organization's annual convention rejected an amendment that would have allowed women to join. The proposed amendment, which was rejected Tuesday, would have allowed Kiwanis clubs in other countries to have the option of admitting women. Members from Norway and New Zealand have pushed for the changes while Japanese and Swiss members have wanted to keep out women, said David Blackmer, Kiwanis public relations director. Fifty-three percent of the delegates, or 2,555, voted to retain the male-only membership rules, while 47 percent, or 2,295, voted to allow women to join. A two-thirds majority was required for women to be admitted under an amendment to the Kiwanis constitution, which would have applied only to chapters in the United States. One Canadian chapter and six U.S. chapters have violated the rules and have invited women to join, Blackmer said.

For the first time since the issue came up about 10 years ago, the Kiwanis board recommended allowing women to join to avoid costly court battles, organization leaders said. The international group has already lost one federal court battle in New Jersey and is appealing that,

Kiwanis International President Don E. Williams said. In recent months, state courts around the country have ruled against service organizations excluding women, board member Norris A. Lusche told about 4,900 delegates. "In the long run, we're not going to win everywhere," said Kiwanis public relations manager David Williams.

At last year's convention in Toronto, 77 percent of the delegates rejected the idea of dropping the barrier against women, Blackmer said. But Kiwanis delegate J. Douglas Alexander, of Holt, Mich., said many Kiwanis members resented the board's sudden change in philosophy. Delegate David Jacobs, of Prescott, Ariz., said his club instructed him to vote against the measure. "The majority felt by allowing women into the club, some of the men would feel displaced and threatened with a possible takeover (by women) down the road," he said. Kiwanis delegates hotly debated the issue with cheers, boos, clapping and some sharp remarks during a 45-minute discussion period. Delegates in favor of admitting women argued that the organization should keep up with the changing times and that women could contribute to the organization's work. "The fact is we're on a sinking ship," a San Diego delegate said while arguing the organization should donate millions of dollars to charity instead of court fights. But other delegates argued that Kiwanis should stick to tradition and fight for the right to exclude women. About two dozen wives of Kiwanis members picketed outside the convention site with signs that read, "Don't Destroy A Good Men's Club," and "Wives Support Kiwanis Men." "Women have their clubs," said Karen Dull, wife of California delegate Dull. "Let men have their clubs."

AUTHOR AWARDS

NEW YORK (AP) — The Book-of-the-Month Club recently presented awards to three American authors for "their distinguished contribution to American letters."

The authors were Robert A. Caro, Toni Morrison and Lewis Thomas. The club announced three grants of $10,000 each, one in the name of each author, to "Give the Gift of Literacy," an organization supported by publishers and booksellers to promote literacy on a national level.

The citations to the authors praised Caro for the vigor of his scholarship, Morrison for the richness of her language, and Thomas for the grace and wisdom of his writing.

Clark, Kelley receive degrees

Two students from Hereford received their degrees at Texas A&M University's spring commencement exercises.

Receiving a bachelor's degree were Ronda C. Clark, veterinary medicine, and Randy D. Kelley, nuclear engineering.

A total of 3,460 degrees were awarded, including 2,951 bachelor's, 411 master's and 98 doctoral degrees.

King's Manor Announces Child Care Center

King's Manor Methodist Home, Inc. is proud to announce that after a perfect inspection rating by the Texas Department of Human Resources, we are now taking enrollments for our Child Care Center. We will begin operation on July 14, 1986.

The Center is a non-profit, interracial and non-political institution, owned and operated by the Northwest Texas Conference of the United Methodist Church, to serve children of all religious faiths. Our purpose is to provide quality care that will benefit the child, the parent, and the community.

The Center will be open 24 hours a day, 7 days a week. Children may be in continuous care for a maximum of 12 hours. Drop-ins are welcome when space is available. Children from 3 Weeks to Age 13 will be accepted for care. Hot meals and nutritious snacks will be served.

The Center will provide a safe, caring environment for children to explore.

We welcome visitors any time. Please come by the Center, through the new administrative entrance to King's Manor, to complete the enrollment forms necessary and to visit with the Child Care Director, Martha Rickman. The phone number is 364-0661.

The Newspaper BIBLE

THE BASKET CASE WHO GOT AROUND!
Saul became more and more fervent in his preaching, and the Damascus Jews couldn't withstand his proofs that Jesus was indeed the Christ. After a while the Jewish leaders determined to kill him.
But Saul was told about their plans, that they were watching the gates of the city day and night prepared to murder him. So during the night some of his converts let him down in a basket through an opening in the city wall!
Upon arrival in Jerusalem he tried to meet with the believers, but they were all afraid of him. They thought he was faking! Then Barnabas brought him to the apostles and told them how Saul had seen the Lord on the way to Damascus, what the Lord had said to him, and all about his powerful preaching in the name of Jesus.
Then they accepted him, after that he was constantly with the believers and preached boldly in the name of the Lord. But then some Greek speaking Jews with whom he had argued plotted to murder him. However, when the other believers heard about his danger, they took him to Caesarea and then sent him to his home in Tarsus.
Meanwhile, the church had peace throughout Judea, Galilee and Samaria, and grew in strength and numbers. The believers learned how to walk in the fear of the Lord and in the comfort of the Holy Spirit.
Acts 9:22-31

Rules take effect

WASHINGTON (AP) — After 12 years of legal wars that are far from over, regulations go into effect today to govern the way the public can get to see 2.5 million pages of documents that Richard Nixon was forced to leave behind.
But in keeping with a history that has yet to see a single document opened to the public, a public interest group was ready with a lawsuit to challenge an interpretation by the Reagan administration that Nixon has the final say on what will or will not be released.
The National Archives prepared to send letters in the next few days to President Reagan, Nixon and at least 60 other people who asked to be notified that it intends to allow access to the files.
A general notification also will be published shortly in the Federal Register, and those affected had at least 30 days to object.
The regulations went into effect automatically when a Wednesday midnight deadline passed without action by Congress to disapprove of the regulations. It was the end of a 60-day waiting period. As part of the regulations and before opening any papers, the archives is required to give the 30-day notice.

Past attempts to make the documents available have resulted in suits either by Nixon or people who generated the documents. Even if anticipated future suits don't materialize, the archives doesn't expect to release any papers until late fall.
Congress passed a law seizing control of Nixon's papers and the White House tape recordings in 1974 after he resigned the presidency. The law directed the fullest possible public access to the papers, especially those pertaining to Watergate, and directed the archives to draw up regulations for that.
Five drafts of those regulations were rejected for one reason or another, including five lawsuits by Nixon or his former aides. Last July, a final version was submitted to the White House Office of Management and Budget for review.
Those regulations provided that the archivist of the United States would rule on any Nixon objections to release of the documents on grounds of executive privilege and that the former president would be entitled to court review of any decision he disagreed with.
But when the rules were approved and returned to the archives, they were accompanied by a Justice Department memo that said the archives must honor Nixon's claim or go to court to overturn them. The memo also said Reagan had the right to stop release of documents on executive privilege grounds.
Frank Burke, the acting head of the National Archives, said during a congressional hearing that he had no choice but to comply.
Acting on a request by three senators, acting Comptroller General Milton J. Scolar studied the Justice memo and declared it to be contrary to the 1974 law and "fundamentally inconsistent with the final regulations." Scolar said the inconsistency precludes the archives from following the Justice Department rule.
Of the conclusion that the archivist must defer to any Nixon executive claim, Scolar said, "We see no way in which this conclusion can be read into the current regulations."
The suit, prepared by Public Citizen, challenges the lawfulness of the Justice Department opinion, which, it said, "will substantially curtail public access to the materials and tape recordings." It asks the court to direct the archives not to comply with the memo.
Other plaintiffs are the Reporters Committee for Freedom of the Press and David A. Bollier of New Haven, Conn., a free-lance journalist. Defendants are Burke, OMB Director James Miller, Attorney General Edwin Meese III and Nixon.
Under the law, the archives must notify the president, Nixon and the person who created the records that it intends to release them.
The list of people who asked for notification include these former Nixon administration officials: Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, Chief of Staff Alexander Haig, speech writers Frank Gannon and Kenneth Khachigian, Communications Director Herbert Klein, counsel Donald Rumsfeld, Secretary of Commerce Maurice H. Stans and press secretary Ron Ziegler.
