DOE accused of destroying documents

SEATTLE (AP) - Two congressmen have accused the federal Department of Energy of being incompetent or conducting a cover-up in its destruction of documents on selecting the Hanford nuclear reservation as one of three finalists for a national high-level nuclear waste repository.

Reps. Al Swift, D-Wash., and Ed Markey, D-Mass., made the charges in a letter to Energy Secretary John Herrington.

The House Energy, Conservation and Power Subcommittee had asked the DOE to supply various documents relating to the selection of Hanford in Eastern Washington, Yucca Mountain, Nev., and Deaf Smith County, Texas:

The preliminary drafts of the report that led to the selection of the three finalists were "not retained" by the federal agency, the congressmen quoted the department as saying.

"In other words, key decisional documents have routinely been destroyed by the department," Swift and Markey said Tuesday. They added that they found "it hard to believe that there is not one memorandum in DOE files or DOE contractor files which relates to the secretary's decision to recommend the three final

"We are left with only two possible conclusions: Either the department is engaging in a cover-up and obstructing this subcommittee's investigation, or incompetence has become the hallmark of this program," the congressmen said.

"DOE's actions throughout the entire process have reflected an arrogance at best and a determined policy of preventing the Congress and the public from knowing what it is up to at worst," Swift said.

A spokesman at the DOE's nuclear-waste office was not immediately available for comment.

Tom Bauman, spokesman at Hanford, said the information was too vague. "Until we know more, we can't comment."

But Bauman said he hadn't heard of any documents being destroyed at Hanford.

On June 5 the House subcommittee asked Herrington to "provide all ... draft and final memoranda from March 1, 1986, to the present concerning any policy issues pertaining to the development and finalization process relating to the secretary's decision to recommend three sites to the president."

On July 8, Herrington responded: 'As (the department) was preparing the recommendation report, a number of working drafts were developed and marked up. When a new draft was produced, the previous draft was no longer operative or of any use and was not retained.'

A spokesman for the subcommittee said Herrington provided no documents to the panel in response to its question.

The congressmen said that last year DOE officials acknowledged that working documents concerning the methodology used in the selection process had been destroyed.

"It appears (the department) has ignored the lessons learned at that earlier hearing, and continues to engage in unacceptable recordkeeping practices," Swift and Markey said.

Lottery one plan to erase possible $3 billion deficit

AUSTIN (AP) - A state legislator stitutional amendment on the ballot representative is urging passage of a in November. The lottery can be instate lottery to help erase Texas' growing budget deficit.

Gov. Mark White has said he would call a special session of the Legislature to deal with the budget crunch as soon as lawmakers come up with a plan to cut spending.

But Rep. Ron Wilson, D-Houston, said Tuesday the state should look for ways to raise money, not cut programs. Wilson is a long-time backer of a state lottery.

"The timing has never been better for us to take a long look at a state lottery than now. If we go into session in August, we can have a con-

Session date to be told Thursday

AUSTIN (AP) - Gov. Mark White on Thursday will announce the date of the special legislative session to deal with the state budget crisis, a source in the governor's office said today.

The source, who would comment only if not identified, said it is "safe to assume" White would reveal the date at a 6 p.m. announcement that will be offered live to television stations around the state.

In June, White announced he would call lawmakers into special session this summer.

stituted in a few months and more than likely we'd be taking in revenue before the regular session was completed" in May, he said.

Wilson told a news conference a lottery could, eventually, mean as much as $600 million a year for state government.

He wants the special session to at least place the lottery idea on the November ballot as a non-binding referendum.

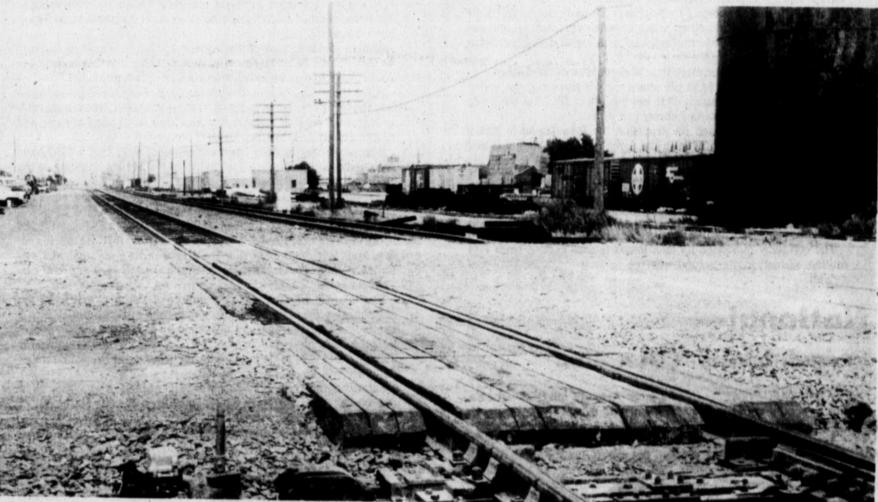

State Comptroller Bob Bullock is working on a revised revenue more than $3 billion.

The new forecast will be announced late this month, after July sales tax collections are reported, said Tony Proffitt, a spokesman for the comptroller's office.

"All Bullock says is he is sure it's over $3 billion, but he has not set a number to it," Proffitt said.

In February, as oil prices plummetted, Bullock predicted a $1.3 billion shortfall in the current budget period, which ends Aug. 31, 1987. Last month, he raised it to $2.3 billion.

"It's going to be reflective of what's happening in the Texas economy in unemployment, construction and manufacturing and the other sectors in the last six months. There's not an ounce of good news in any of those economic indicators." Proffitt said. "I think it's called a recession."

U.S. missionary safe, needs clothing

MANILA, Philippines (AP) - A U.S. missionary abducted by armed Moslems in the southern Philippines says he has been treated well, is praying and sometimes sings and talks with his captors, according to a tape transcript made public today.

The text of the taped message was made public by the military officer in charge of efforts to free Brian Lawrence, a 30-year-old Presbyterian evangelist from Madison, Wis., and 10 Filipino Roman Catholic nuns kidnapped on the island of Mindanao.

Col. Raul Aquino, army brigade commander in charge of operations to recover the kidnap victims, gave The Associated Press the transcript after the tape was broadcast on a local radio station in Iligan, 500 miles south of Manila.

He said he was convinced of the authenticity of the taped message, which he said government emissaries sent to negotiate for the victims' release obtained from the kidnappers.

In the message, Lawrence, who the military believes is being held somewhere in the forests of Lanao del Sur province on southern Mindanao, said he was instructed by his kidnappers to say that he was being held by a group fighting for the island's independence.

Lawrence assured his family that he was being treated well, had plenty of food, had not been harmed and hoped to be released soon.

He also requested that his supervisor, John Wittenmore, who also is a missionary in Mindanao, be his chief negotiator with the kidnappers.

Col. Aquino said the emissaries assured him Lawrence will not be harmed. "I hope before the weekend is over he will be released," he said.

Lawrence was kidnapped by a Moslem band on Saturday from his apartment in Marawi, 510 miles south of Manila, a day after the 10 Catholic nuns were abducted from their Marawi convent.

The Carmelite nuns were not mentioned in the message and it was unclear whether they were being held by the same group holding Lawrence. A military report issued Tuesday showed that the nuns were being held in Lumbia, in Lanao del

Sur province. In Manila, Moslem Affairs Minister Candu Muarip told a Cabinet meeting presided over by President Corazon Aquino that the kidnappers were not genuine rebels but "partisan groups" previously used by politicians to promote their political ambitions.

Text committee hearing issue of evolution

The long-time controversy over how much to tell Texas public school students about evolution erupted again Tuesday before the 15-member committee that is selecting $114 million in textbooks for 1987.

A spokesman for People for the American Way reminded the committee that the U.S. Supreme Court will consider next term arguments against a court ruling that Louisiana's creationism law was unconstitutional.

"Whether you know it or not, what you do here could influence that case," said Mike Hudson, Texas director of the nonpartisan organization to uphold constitutional guarantees. "Should you be co-opted by this pseudoscience and recom-mend the books be rewritten, your action will surely be cited as support for the existence of 'creation science' before the court."

"We can no longer hold Texas science education hostage to knownothings and religious zealots," Dr.

Steven D. Schafersman, president of the Texas Council for Science Education, told the committee.

"Fundamentalist pressure on teachers, school administrators and boards of education for the past 20 years have resulted in the topic being compromised in classrooms throughout the country, especially in the South," he said.

Schafersman, a Houston colle professor, said the only way to break the cycle "starts with textbook selection committees. I ask you to ignore creationist pressure and adopt only those books that treat the topic of evolution in a responsible and scientifically accurate fashion and not adopt books that omit or distort the topic."

But Mel Gabler, a Longview textbook consultant who has been a critic of evolution passages, said that

"scientific evidence against evolu-tion is consistently censored."

"We are not asking that creation-science be taught," Gabler said. "We merely ask that textbooks be in-tellectually honest and observe the scientific practice of providing both ... the 'for' and 'against' whenever evolutionary arguments are

Construction on U.S. 385 is in all pratical means completed, according to officials of the Appian Corporation.

The paving project which was started in October was completed Tuesday. Now the state must paint the stripes on the road, then the city can install the traffic light at U.S. 385 and Moreman.

Appian officials originally planned to have the project completed three weeks ago, but due to the weather they were forced to take the additional time. Appian said that they had planned for any delays, so the city and state did not have to pay any additional money.

Six-year-old boy shot in sleep

DEKALB, Texas (AP) — A 21-year-old De Kalb man has been charged with murder in connection with the death of his 6-year-old stepbrother, who was killed by a rifle bullet that went through a wall and struck him as he slept.

Justice of the Peace John Carson set bond at $50,000 for Jeffrey Wayne Hornbuckle, who was taken to the Bi-State Justice Building Jail in Texarkana.

Jacob Samuel Hudson was killed about 2 a.m. Tuesday by a single gunshot wound to the head, said Raymond Calhoun, chief deputy of the Bowie County sheriff's office.

Family members said that after a quarrel, Hornbuckle was ordered off the residence by his stepfather and was denied use of a late-model pickup truck. Hornbuckle returned to the residence with a 30-30 rifle early Tuesday and fired three shots, authorities were told.

Calhoun said one shot pierced the pickup and two others entered the residence. One shot went through a window, and another went through a wall and struck Hornbuckle's stepbrother, Calhoun said. Hornbuckle was arrested near the residence a short time after the shooting, officials said.

Calhoun said the case will be presented to a grand jury.

Economy blamed for low earning

DALLAS (AP) — As company officials predicted, Interfirst Corp. of Dallas reported a $281.1 million net loss for the year's second quarter as the worsening Texas economy cut into net earnings for Interfirst and three other bank holding companies in Texas.

The loss reported Tuesday by Interfirst, an umbrella for 67 banks in Texas, came as it and other banks wrestle with lower oil and gas prices, a soft real estate market and a generally sluggish state economy.

Oil prices have dropped more than 50 percent since December. The Interfirst loss is $4.18 per share for the three months ended June 30. The figures compare with net income of $16.1 million, or 24 cents per share, for the same quarter last year.

The company increased its provision for loan losses to $328.2 million, up from $32.9 million in the same quarter a year ago and $52.2 million for this year's first quarter. Such additions to reserves come directly from earnings.

Houston-based Texas Commerce Bancshares also reported a loss, with net income for the quarter at $10.5 million (31 cents a share) — down 66 percent compared with its $31.1 million (95 cents per share) during the same quarter last year.

The company increased its loan losses to $320 million from $184 million in last year's second quarter to guard against potential defaults.

Reagan boosts COLA plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate proponents of a bill to give the nation's 37 million Social Security recipients cost-of-living increases say President Reagan's support lends momentum to the measure.

Formally endorsing a concept he informally endorsed several months ago, Reagan lent support Tuesday to legislation to abolish the longstanding requirement that annual inflation of 3 percent is needed to trigger cost-of-living hikes.

"We're very happy about it," said Richard Bryers, spokesman for Sen. John Heinz, R-Pa., who introduced the legislation that is also supported by eight Republican senators seeking re-election this year.

The president had said he liked the idea of the legislation when Heinz first mentioned it several months ago, Bryers said.

Bryers said Reagan's support will provide momentum to attach the bill to budget reconciliation legislation on which the Senate Finance Committee is scheduled to begin work next week.

Word of Reagan's support came Tuesday from Sen. Paula Hawkins, R-Fla., who is in a tough re-election fight with Democratic Gov. Bob Graham.

King fears Israeli expulsion

AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — King Hussein says he fears Israel could eventually expel the growing Arab population of the occupied West Bank, victimizing the people and jeopardizing the stability of his kingdom.

In a wide-ranging luncheon session with reporters at his Al Nadwa palace, the king said Tuesday he hopes to organize financial assistance to help West Bankers remain on their land, and shrugged off criticism of his break with PLO chief Yasser Arafat.

Referring to Israeli studies of population trends in Israel and the Arab lands it occupies, Hussein asked, "What happens in the year 2000 when you have an Arab population equal or more than the Israelis?"

One study, carried out by Meron Benvinisti, the former deputy mayor of Jerusalem who heads the West Bank Data Project, forecast the percentage of Jews in Israel and the occupied territories will drop from 65 percent in 1969 to under 55 percent by 2005 will drop from 65 percent in 1969 to under 55 percent by 2005.

action by Israeli leaders.

"Will there be a serious attempt to expel these people?" Hussein asked. "That is what concerns me the most

U.S. to assist Bolivian drug raids

LA PAZ, Bolivia (AP) — About 140 U.S. Army troops, along with helicopters and transport planes, have begun arriving in Bolivia to aid the country's drug agents in a campaign to wipe out dozens of clandestine jungle-based cocaine labs, officials said.

U.S. officials who spoke Tuesday on condition of anonymity said the narcotics raids will be staged with the help of six U.S. Army Black Hawk assault copters, which were airlifted with their pilots to Santa Cruz, about 200 miles east of La Paz, on Monday.

The operation is being conducted at the invitation of the Bolivian government, said Mark Jacobs, press attache for the U.S. Embassy. He confirmed late Tuesday the arrival of the U.S. helicopters, four transport planes, and an unspecified number of "support personnel."

A U.S. Embassy source said about 140 American military personnel scheduled to provide support in the anti-drug campaign have been provided with diplomatic immunity, and that the operation has been authorized by Vice President George Bush.

Delta crewmembers blamed for deadly crash last August

WASHINGTON (AP) — The crewmembers of a Delta Air Lines jumbo jet which crashed and killed 137 people at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport last Aug. 2 should not have attempted to land, even though they had no knowledge that the thunderstorm in their path contained brutal winds, federal investigators ruled.

The National Transportation Safety Board said Tuesday the Lockheed L-1011 jumbo jet had flown into wind shears created by a microburst — a complex, severe downdraft — and was unable to recover before plunging to the ground 6,000 feet short of the runway.

The board acknowledged that neither the crew nor flight controllers on the ground knew of the severity of the storm, and expected the plane would break into fair weather, as forecast, before actually touching down. But it said the crew's decision to stick to the glide path rather than play safe and turn away after encountering lightning was a principal "probable cause" of the crash.

The agency also faulted crew training for handling wind shears, or sudden changes of wind direction, and the lack of "definitive" weather information as contributing reasons for the accident.

Delta, based in Atlanta, called the board's findings "incomplete, inaccurate and most painfully flawed."

Hollis Harris, senior vice president for operations, said "Delta categorically rejects in great part the board's views of this tragic accident. We are convinced the flight crew operated the aircraft in full accordance with all the appropriate and recommended Delta and Federal Aviation Administration procedures and regulations."

The aircraft's flight data recorder and cockpit voice recorder, said Harris, both "affirmatively confirmed the crew's aggressive and correct application of the proper and accepted technique of escaping the lethal effect of downburst vortices by applying maximum engine power, attempting to raise the aircraft nose to the highest safe pitch angle."

Bill Melvin, an Air Line Pilots Association official and a Delta pilot, said he was disappointed that the board "hasn't recognized the real reason that these guys got trapped — a multiple microburst. They thought they were flying into a condition that thousands of guys have flown into."

Melvin said that "one of the reasons that pilots are not as fearful" as they should be of storms, "is that in cases like this before, the government told us a good pilot would have flown through it."

After a day-long debate, the board rejected one member's suggestion that primary blame be fixed on the storm itself, which apparently triggered several microbursts and associated wind shears, and cropped up without warning south of the airport.

The panel also passed over recommendations that would have assigned more specific responsibility to the crew's handling of the emergency, the weather service and the failure of other pilots to relay to the Dallas-Ft. Worth tower the fact they had observed unusual weather just minutes before the crash.

The crew was headed by Capt. Edward N. Connors, who had 29,300 hours of flight experience, 3,000 of them in the L-1011. He and his copilot and flight engineer died in the crash, as did a motorist who was struck by the plane on a highway near the airport. There were 27 survivors.

The board said "the probable causes of this accident were the flight's crew decision to initiate and continue the approach into a cumulonimbus cloud which they observed to contain visible lightning, the lack of specific guidelines, procedures and training for avoiding and escape from low altitude wind shear, and the lack of definitive wind shear hazard information."

Safety board member Joseph Nall argued that "this is a microburst case, not a pilot competence case. Nobody on the day of the accident foresaw a microburst."

The board's compromise language, approved 4-0, was fashioned

RIGHT FROM WRONG

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Children don't always need adults to teach them right from wrong, according to a study of moral development in children at the University of Rochester.

Professor Judith Smetana found that children often learn moral values—that hitting people is wrong, for instance—from their own experience. They see that hitting others produces crying, pain and other distress that is clearly negative.

Social conventions, on the other hand, such as dressing boys in blue and girls in pink, must be taught by adults because such conventions are arbitrary and not obvious to children.

J.C. BROWN July 14, 1986

J.C. "Bud" Brown, 63, of Groom died Monday. He is the brother-in-law of Hershel Black of Hereford.

Funeral services were held at 10:30 a.m. today in First Baptist Church of Groom with the Rev. Rick Burton, pastor, officiating. Burial was in Groom Cemetery under the direction of Schooler-Gordon Colonial Chapel of Amarillo.

Mr. Brown, born in Goodnight, had lived in Groom all of his life. He was a farmer and carpenter and a member of Groom Lions Club. He was a member and deacon of First Baptist Church where he was superintendent of the Sunday school. He was also on the school board.

Survivors include his wife, Sybil; a son, Gary of Floydada; a daughter, Brenda Lee of Pflugerville; two sisters, Opal Spurgeon and Zola Webb, both of Amarillo; a brother, Fred of Groom; and five grand-by acting chairwoman Patricia A. Goldman, who argued against fixing primary responsibility on the storm because "the clues were there, and people failed to recognize them."

The independent safety agency heard testimony that the crew, which already had made one detour on its flight from Fort Lauderdale, Fla., to avoid a thunderstorm, had received virtually no information from the ground to indicate that what one air traffic controller had called a "little rainshower" near the airport was potentially destructive.

However, the captain elected to stay on his glide path a ter his own co-pilot, Rudolph P. Price, told him more than a minute before the crash that "lightning's coming out of that one, right ahead of us."

Moreover, after the plane's first encounter with a wind shear — which Connors successfully fought through after suddenly losing altitude and 44 knots of airspeed — he still returned to the glide path rather than pulling up to go around the airport, they said.

Nall said that was not surprising. "The crew thought that they had successfully accomplished flight through a downburst," he said. "He (Connors) thought he was through it."

Air safety investigator Martin Speiser countered that "when you get in a wind shear, it's time to get everything you can out of your airplane to put as much distance as you can between you and the ground — not to get back on a glide path."

It was when the plane encountered another wind shear at less than 1,000 feet altitude that it began its fatal drop, the board's staff testified.

The board heard also that two of three weather service units in the area were unmanned when the storm popped up because their meteorologists were on dinner breaks. Had they been manned, they might have been able to warn the flight of the potential severity of the storm, investigators said.

Board members noted that Delta's own training manual tells pilots not to fly through or under thunderstorms at altitudes below 10,000 feet, effectively precluding landings or takeoffs. But several investigators faulted the airline — and others as well — for not being more assertive about that rule and also for not offering more exhaustive training about what to do if a plane suddenly encounters microbursts or wind shears.

Board member Jim Burnett, soon to become chairman for a second term, said that "to say the microburst was the cause is almost like calling it an act of God. Obviously, if there was no microburst, we wouldn't be here."

Ronald L. Schleede, chief of the aviation accident division, agreed, saying that "we don't feel a causal statement should give any endorsement to flying into a thunderstorm."

The airport was equipped with six sensors to detect wind shears, but none of them was positioned far enough out to report the storm encountered by the Delta flight. The FAA is working on a more sophisticated Doppler radar system which it hopes will offer more reliable information about microbursts and wind shears, but those units won't be fully operational until the 1990s.

The NTSB recommended in the interim that the existing weather stations be manned constantly, and that the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration develop formal training programs for meteorologists to help them recognize the potential for microbursts more readily.

It also recommended that the Dallas-Fort Worth airport "revise its disaster response notification procedures to provide for timely and effective notification of mutual aid agencies whose assistance is needed."

Joe Dealey, a spokesman for Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport, said airport officials would not comment until they had a chance to read the report

Comfort, warmth key to skiwear

By The Associated Press

Comfort and warmth are the keys to this year's skiwear, according to David Ingemie, president of Ski Industries America, the consumer ski product manufacturer's trade association.

"It doesn't matter how fashionable a skier looks on the slopes," he says, "if his clothes can't keep him warm and dry. Rather than simply 'design' skiwear this year, manufacturers are 'engineering' their lines."

For example, Ingemie says, several companies are offering completely weatherproofed stretch pants of laminated fabric with four-way stretch.

More waterproof materials, more comfortable cuts and performance features will make stretch pants a staple in most skiwear lines this season, says skiwear expert Barbara Alley.

She adds that one of the keys to smart ski dressing is creating layers to trap dead air, which creates warmth. "One technique in keeping the skiwear silhouette slim is to layrr fabrics with various functions," she says. "For example, one layer wicks moisture away from the body, another layer reflects heat back to the body, another layer insulates and the outer shell keeps moisture out."

Some manufacturers use fabrics laced with metallic threads for the reflective layer, she says.

"In recent years, technology has

"In recent years, technology has made a big difference in the ski experience," says Miss Alley. "The ski consumer has a myriad of options available that are both functional and good looking. Fabrics, insulations, skis, boots and bindings all benefit from the on-going research and innovation of the ski industry's 'engineers."

Beginning Experience

The Beginning Experience, a weekend for separated, divorced and widowed individuals, is scheduled Friday through Sunday at the Bishop DeFalco Retreat Center.

The retreat will begin at 7 p.m. Friday and conclude at 4 p.m. Sunday. It is open to people of all denominations. The cost, including tuition, room and meals, is $55.

The purpose of the weekend is to help widowed, separated and divorced people to start over, to help wounds heal and make a new beginning in their lives. The program stresses that divorce doesn't mean failure. It is planned to emphasize self-discovery and to help people come to terms with themselves.

A specially trained team of peers leads the participants through a simple program of presentation, private reflectionand group dialogue. Priests and ministers are available for counseling if desired.

Pitching more than 75 percent of game

By HAL BOCK AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON (AP) - Pitching, a wise baseball man once observed, is 75 percent of the game.

You might want to increase that estimate a bit after Tuesday night's Astrodome All-Star show, owned by the arms from start to finish.

The best sluggers in the world produced just 10 hits and the only reason the National League scored in the 3-2 loss was because one AL pitcher was too good for his own good.

From MVP Roger Clemens, who retired nine straight batters, to Fer-

Hole-in-one shot Tuesday by Pat Goforth

Pat Goforth scored a hole-in-one on the par-three No. 3 hole at Pitman Municipal Golf Course Tuesday during a Ladies Play Day tournament.

Mrs. Goforth used a 9 iron on the 135-yard hole, and the shot was witnessed by Norma Hendon and Rose Marie Robinson.

"After the ball hit the green, I couldn't tell if it went in the hole or rolled off the back of the green," said Mrs. Goforth. "I couldn't wait to get to the green and see where the ball was..then I jumped up and down and started screaming. It was very exciting," exclaimed Mrs. Goforth.

nando Valenzuela, who matched one of baseball's most hallowed records, to Charlie Hough, who nearly struck out four batters in an inning, this was a night to admire the fine art of making hitters look foolish.

From Sid Fernandez, who struck out the side in the only inning he worked, to Mike Scott, who came within one strike of doing the same thing, to Don Aase, who saved the victory, pitchers dominated.

This is not entirely unusual in the Astrodome, which produced the last All-Star shutout, a 1-0 NL victory, when the game's best players convened in Houston in 1968.

The embarrassment began early. Clemens, expected to be a little arm weary after pitching a complete game victory for Boston on Saturday, mowed down all nine NL batters he faced. He threw 25 pitches, 21 of them strikes.

How good was he?

"He threw so well, I even enjoyed catching his warmups," catcher Lance Parrish said.

Now that's good.

Just as Clemens finished, Valenzuela began writing a little history. He struck out Don Mattingly, Cal Ripken and Jesse Barfield in the fourth - the eighth time in All-Star history that a pitcher struck out the only three batters of an inning and the second time he did it - the only pitcher to do it twice.

Then Valenzuela continued the string by striking out Lou Whitaker - who had homered in his first swing and Teddy Higuera, who quietly pitched three shutout innings of his

The five straight strikeouts, matched the All-Star record set by Hall of Famer Carl Hubbell in 1934, when he victimized five consecutive future Hall of Famers - Babe Ruth, Lou Gehrig, Jimmie Foxx, Al Simmons and Joe Cronin.

"The only thing I was trying to do was throw strikes," Valenzuela said. "I was not aware that I was going for a record. I don't know about Carl Hubbell. I was born in 1960."

Valenzuela's string ended when Kirby Puckett grounded out.

"He was awesome," AL Manager Dick Howser said. "Five straight strikeouts. I didn't want to look up for six."

In the next inning, Valenzuela gave up a hit, a signal that it might be time for another arm.

Scott was the candidate and he struck out the first two hitters he faced and had two strikes on pinchhitter Frank White.

"I was trying to strike out the side," Scott confessed. He made the next pitch too good and White hit the 14th pinch homer in All-Star history.

Now the score was 3-0 and the way the Nationals were hitting, it looked like enough. Higuera surrendered a one-out single to Darryl Strawberry in the fifth inning, ending a string of 13 straight NL outs - an All-Star record for futility at the start of the game. Through seven innings, that remained the lone NL hit.

In the eighth, Chris Brown opened with a double against Hough, whose knuckleball was dancing through the controlled climate of the Astrodome.

Chili Davis struck out, but the third strike ricocheted past catcher Rich Gedman, and Brown reached third. Then Hough struck out Hubie Brooks but Gedman again could not control the last strike and Brown scored with Brooks safe at first.

Brooks moved up on a balk before Tim Raines became Hough's third strikeout victim and the 19th strikeout victim in the game, two shy of the record set in 1984. He had two strikes on Steve Sax before surrendering a single that made it 3-2 and ended his evening.

"It was a little embarrassing for me out there," Gedman said. "Here I am in an All-Star game and I am missing all these balls."

Hough sympathized with Gedman's plight.

"It was a pretty good knuckleball, and most of the time even I didn't know where it was going," he said.

When Jody Davis and Dave Parker had one-out singles in the NL ninth, it looked like another disappointment building for the Americans. But Aase relieved and fed Brown a double-play pitch to end the game.

Ann Landers Pet peeve

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I've hope you will follow through never seen anything in your column about my pet peeve.

I am a senior citizen who eats out with friends a couple of times a week. We all have good incomes. When we go to a restaurant one couple orders a single salad. She eats half of it and passes it to her husband and he finishes it. They do the same mind-boggling.-E.R. IN ROANOKE with soup and dessert. They claim they cannot eat such large portions. If it is the amount of food that bothers them why can't they ask for a smaller portion and be prepared to pay the full price?

I would like to hear your opinion on this subject. It looks to me as if they are cheap and it is embarrassing to be in their company.-DON'T LIKE CHINTZINESS

DEAR CHINTZ: Cheap? Surely you jest. Why should anyone throw out either food or money?

The couple who cannot handle large portions of food should consider asking for one order of salad, soup or dessert-"to be shared by two." I know of no restaurant that would refuse such a request. This would be infinitely more appetizing to observers than passing a bowl of unfinished soup or a plate of halfeaten salad or dessert to another par-

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I decided to write after reading an article from "Sympathetic in Florida." I, also, have an emotionally disturbed son, "Jason," who is 6 years old. He, too, has been diagnosed as hyperactive. I have taken him to four psychiatrists and tried three different kinds of medication for hyperactivity. So far nothing seems to work.

Jason has a violent temper and breaks everything he gets his hands on. I can't let him outside by himself because I never know what he might

My main problem is that I'm afraid he will seriously injure his two younger brothers. I already caught him pushing the baby down the stairs and kicking him. When I talk to Jason about his behavior he says he is sorry and won't do it again. Ten minutes later he is doing the same thing. Spanking makes him worse. He never cries; in fact, he laughs at me. This makes me furious and causes me to do and say things I am

I have been going around in circles with this boy for almost two years. I don't know what to say or do anymore. I would appreciate any help you can give me.-LOST IN WISCONSIN

DEAR LOST: Your state has one of the finest medical centers in the country. It is associated with the University of Wisconsin in Madison.

Take your son there for evaluation, first by a neurologist and then by a behavioral specialist. I also suggest that you consider taking Jason to an allergist. Hyperactivity may be caused or aggravated by certain additives in food.

Please let me know the result of your visit. I really feel for you, dear. If the doctor suggests famliy counseling along with medication, I

Daphne Roddy, a student at Stanton Junior High School, has been námed an Academic All-American by the National Secondary Educa-

She is the daughter of Joseph and Minnie Roddy and granddaughter of Joseph and Ella M. Roddy of Marlin, Roddy's name will be published in the Academic All-American Scholar Director. She was nominated for the coveted honor by instructor Cathy Rundell at Stanton.

All scholars must earn a 3.3 or better grade point average.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I was amazed to read in your column that 13 percent of U.S. citizens 20 years of age (with 8th-grade educations or less) are functionally illiterate. Can you tell me where these people live? find the figures

DEAR RO: According to Karen Norton at Laubach Literacy Action, Utah has the lowest rate of illiterates. The states with the highest percentages of illiterates are Kentucky with 32.8 percent, Tennessee 27.6, West Virginia 27.5 and Arkansas with 27 percent.

What's the story on pot, cocaine, LSD, PCP, downers, speed? Can you handle them if you're careful? Send for Ann Landers' all-new booklet, "The Lowdown on Dope." #### Bride-Elect Honored

Leslie Robbs of Hereford, bride-elect of Wade Easley, was feted with a bridal shower Saturday afternoon in the Energas Flame Room. Greeting guests with the honors were (from left) Mrs. Roger Hamilton, the bride-elect's mother; and Mrs. Jean Easley, the prospective groom's mother.

Leslie Robbs feted with bridal shower

A bridal shower was held Saturday afternoon in the Energas Flame Room for Leslie Robbs. Her fiance is Wade Easley of Hereford. Jodi McElhaney invited guests to register while the honoree greeted them with the assistance of her mother, Mrs. Roger Hamilton, and the prospective bridegroom's mother, Mrs. Jean Easley.

A white cake, which was decorated with delicate royal blue rose buds and mints, nuts, punch and coffee were served from the main refreshment table covered with an heirloom crocheted cloth. Further enhancing the table were crystal and silver ap-

The centerpiece consisted of a basket of greenery adorned with royal blue and white silk flowers.

Individual tables were covered with white linen cloths and centered with baskets of ivy tied with royal blue ribbons.

Hostesses included Jan Garrett, Helen Ann McWhorter, Jana McWhorter, Marcy Hughes, Carolyn Maupin, Gail Richardson, Prude Fusts, Peggy Fitzgerald, Bonnie Hamilton, Rita Bell, Elaine Clarke, JoBeth Shackleford, Lynn Gowdy, Marge Graves, Phillis Morrison, Jenny Cassels, JoEllen Neal and Mary McWhorter.

NOTICE OF RATE CHANGE RE-QUEST AND

STATEMENT OF INTENT

Notice is hereby given that DEAF SMITH ELEC-TRIC COOPERATIVE. INC. (the "Utility") intends to change the manner of recovering power costs from ratepayers effective August 7, 1986. The Utility is proposing monthly variable power cost recovery factors to more closely follow rules established by the Public Utility Commission of Texas. The changes are applicable to all areas and all customers servd by the Utility. The proposed changes do not result in any revenue increase to the Utility.

Implementation of the proposed changes is subject to approval by the appropriate regulatory authority. A statement of intent including the proposed revisions of tariff and schedules and a statement specifying in detail each proposed change is available at the general office of the Utility located at East Highway 60 and Whittier, Hereford, Texas. Persons who wish to intervene or otherwise participate in these proceedings should notify the Commission as soon as possible. A request to intervene, participate, or for further information should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek boulevard, Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757. ## Lawyers on firing line

NEW YORK (AP) - The program at the 40th annual convention of the Association of Trial Lawyers of America is all business but the talk outside the seminar rooms is all about the furor over liability insurance. The conversation Monday in the halls of the Hilton Hotel was mainly of craven legislators, brain-washed jurors and the dreaded, resurgent stigma of the ambulance chaser.

"It's on everyone's mind," said Deborah Stashower, an organizer of the conference. The lawyers, most of them fairly big shots back home in places like Plano, Texas, and Padquaquela, Miss., don't like the scapegoat's horns for which they say they have been fitted by the insurance proved Maher's rejection of industry.

Rising premiums, they say, have more to do with the insurance companies' own financial problems than with million-dollar jury awards or settlements in product liability cases.

"A lie can travel around the world before the truth can put its pants on," said Peter Perlman, a Lexington, Ky., attorney whose year as association president has been marred by legislative proposals to curtail product liability litigation.

But lately, "the mood is upbeat," Perlman said. "As lawyers, we deal with facts, and we feel the facts are on our side." The lawyers had plenty of stories to illustrate their feel-

Last month, recalled Florida attorney Michael Maher, jury selection in a negligence case took so long that the parties settled before a jury could be chosen. By that time the judge had ap-16 jurors, most of whom admitted their feelings about liability insurance premiums were so strong they could not render an impartial verdict. Such prejudice, lawyers claim, is the result of what Perlman called an insurance industry media blitz last fall that put plaintiffs' lawyers on the defensive. At the time, insurance industry spokesmen trotted out some juicy cases of outrageous verdicts on behalf of the following: a woman who was burned after pouring perfume on a lit candle; a body-builder who fell while running with a refrigerator strapped to his back; two men injured in an explosion after they tried to clean a deflated hot-air balloon in a washing machine; a youth who, was rendered quadriplegic after falling through a skylight while trying to steal a floodlight from the roof.

The lawyers' association disputes the stories, but its members circulated the same type of horror stories at the convention.

The first coast-to-coast dirigible flight by the USS Shenendoah ended in San Diego on Oct. 11, 1924.
