

Killeen killings: a crash, a shot, more and more

By SCOTT McCARTNEY
Associated Press Writer
KILLEEN, Texas (AP) - It was the height of the lunch hour - about half-past-12 - on a warm, clear October day in this central Texas military town.

The Luby's Cafeteria was buzzing with 100 patrons. Waitresses were pushing beverage carts. Some workers were celebrating "Bosses Day."

Angela Wilson was coming to work in the bakery shop - a little late. Her boyfriend, Eddie Sanchez, dropped her off in the front parking lot.

It seemed like just another Wednesday.

Sanchez saw a blue pickup truck speed into the parking lot and turn toward the front of the red brick restaurant. Amazingly, it accelerated and made a quick turn, blasting through a floor-to-ceiling window, crashing through tables and coming to a stop beside the serving line.

Even then, no one knew what George Hennard had in mind.

"He stopped with both hands on top of the wheel," Ms. Wilson said. "He opened the door and got out. He seemed real calm."

The Luby's diners seemed stunned; the restaurant grew quiet. Hennard, 35, screamed some thoughts that now, two days later, only add to the mystery. Some thought it was "This is what Belton did to me."

Others, "This is what Bell County did to me." No one is sure yet what he meant.

Hennard took one look at a man on the floor near the truck, and shot him.

That's when the screams began. Hennard looked for more. Shots rang out with precision - not a wild, frantic staccato from his pair of semi-automatic pistols, but a cold, brutal, efficient aim and shoot. He walked around the restaurant stalking victims, police say. He reloaded magazines in his pistol. He may have brought as many as 96 bullets with him.

He found an elderly woman shielding her elderly husband, and he shot her in the head, authorities said. He told Aneshia McNeil to "get your baby and get out of here," then shot and killed Mrs. McNeil's mother, Olgich Taylor. He may have even gone back to shoot some already wounded, police said.

"I didn't think he was going to leave any of us alive. Then came a brief silence in the gunfire. He seemed to be taking a breather. I was hoping he was out of bullets," said Susan Robinson-Hester, attending a lunch for her boss on Bosses Day.

"But then I heard a noise - the chilling sound of a gun being reloaded," she said.

Maria Serna jumped into a freezer to hide, and was later treated for exposure.

Mark Mathews, 19, climbed inside an industrial dishwasher and hid - for nearly 20 hours until discovered by another restaurant employee.

Thomas Vaughn, a technician at a Killeen car dealership, hurled himself through a glass window at the rear of the building, allowing 30 to 40 people to escape behind him.

Richard Bone, a city employee from the neighboring town of Harker Heights, pulled up for lunch at 12:40 p.m. and heard shots. His cellular phone had a one-button speed-dialer for the Harker Heights police dispatcher. Call Killeen police, Bone said.

The call came in to Killeen police from Harker Heights at 12:40, and immediately word went out. By chance, the Texas Department of Public Safety was holding a training class for Killeen police at a Sheraton Hotel, two parking lots down the street from Luby's. By chance, two Killeen narcotics officers were nearby at a city maintenance facility.

A DPS officer and a Killeen officer ran over from the Sheraton, joined by the two narcotics officers. Time of response was 12:41. They were there within a minute of the call.

James Forrest, standing outside the Commercial Credit office next door to apply for a loan, heard the shots and the screams. One of the officers yelled "DPS! FREEZE!" They ran into the cafeteria, drew fire from Hennard and fired back, striking the gunman four times.

"Had the response not been that quick, I'm sure you would have seen higher fatalities at Luby's because of the rounds directed at the officers," Killeen Police Chief F.L. Giacomozzi said.

Hennard scampered to the alcove outside the men's room. He had sprayed all but one bullet. Now he put the gun to his own head, and killed himself.

"He used the last one on himself," said the police chief.

'Oh God, we feel the pain'

KILLEEN, Texas (AP) - This central Texas town Thursday tried to come to grips with the worst mass shooting in U.S. history, but many people here said a resiliency tied to their military background will get them through the tragedy.

Shock, disbelief, and anger were the most common reactions to the shooting at Luby's cafeteria.

The cordoned off restaurant continued to draw onlookers such as Victor Sanchez.

"The whole town is in shock," he said. "Even if you are not related to the victims, you feel it. Just talking about it makes my hair stand on end. This kind of thing doesn't happen in Killeen. It happens in other towns."

On Wednesday George Hennard, a man described as angry and troubled, drove his pickup truck into the restaurant during lunch hour and began shooting and killing people.

Within 10 minutes, Hennard had killed 22 people before killing

Bentsen unveils health care plan

WASHINGTON (AP) - Legislation that will make health insurance more affordable for small employers will be introduced next week in both the Senate and House, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, says.

Bentsen called his bill only a short-term solution to the nation's health care crisis, but emphasized to reporters Thursday that his proposals are "things that I think we can do now - not things that will block fundamental change later."

Bentsen is chairman of the Senate Finance Committee. His counterpart in the House, Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, will introduce a similar bill, Bentsen said.

Bentsen said comprehensive reform is needed.

But, he added, "Major overhaul is going to take some time ... and in the meantime, lots of people are going to suffer." His plan would improve some of the problems now.

Bentsen's proposal would cost the federal government about $10 billion over five years, most of it from increasing the tax deduction for health care premiums from 25 percent to 100 percent for the self-employed.

Bentsen said he had not settled on a way to finance the measure.

Fort Worth murderer gets custody of kids

EDITOR'S NOTE: Detectives called it the act of a "madman," and the rape of a young mother and the murders of her infant children dominated Texas headlines in September 1964. But the story of Charles Hefley did not end a quarter century ago with the courtroom verdict that he was criminally insane.

By MIKE COCHRAN
Associated Press Writer

FORT WORTH (AP) - On a warm September night in 1964, a young woman named Carolyn Adams left her mother's fashionable Fort Worth home with her two infant sons, Dickie and David.

Two days earlier, David celebrated his first birthday. His older brother was 2 1/2.

As she drove away, a "fat faced" teen-ager forced his way into the auto, pulled a knife and told her, "I know you from the pool."

The woman, 20, did not recognize the intruder.

After driving a short distance to the Trinity River, he ordered her from the car. He beat her with a lead pipe, stabbed her 14 times, raped her and left her for dead on the banks of the river.

The next morning, a truck driver saw her lying in a clearing, where she had crawled during the night.

"Help me," she whispered.

Investigators found no trace of the missing children until they arrested a neighborhood youth, Charles Hefley, 16.

Hefley, who would successfully plead insanity, confessed that he threw the boys into the river.

A search party recovered their bodies from the murky waters.

More than a quarter century later, Hefley insists he is far different from the person who committed those violent acts. But troubles persist, and he now is the center of a controversy in an obscure East Texas courtroom.

"I'm not the deranged, mentally disturbed, confused 16-year-old I was 30 years ago," Hefley told The Associated Press by telephone this week from his home in Las Vegas, Nev.

Nevertheless, his past surfaced in a bitter Athens divorce case that focused on custody of the couple's two children, a daughter now 5 and a son now 3.

In his closing argument, a lawyer for Hefley's wife declared:

"...It would be unthinkable to award custody of these small children to a man such as Mr. Hefley, an admitted murderer, con-artist and ne'er do well."

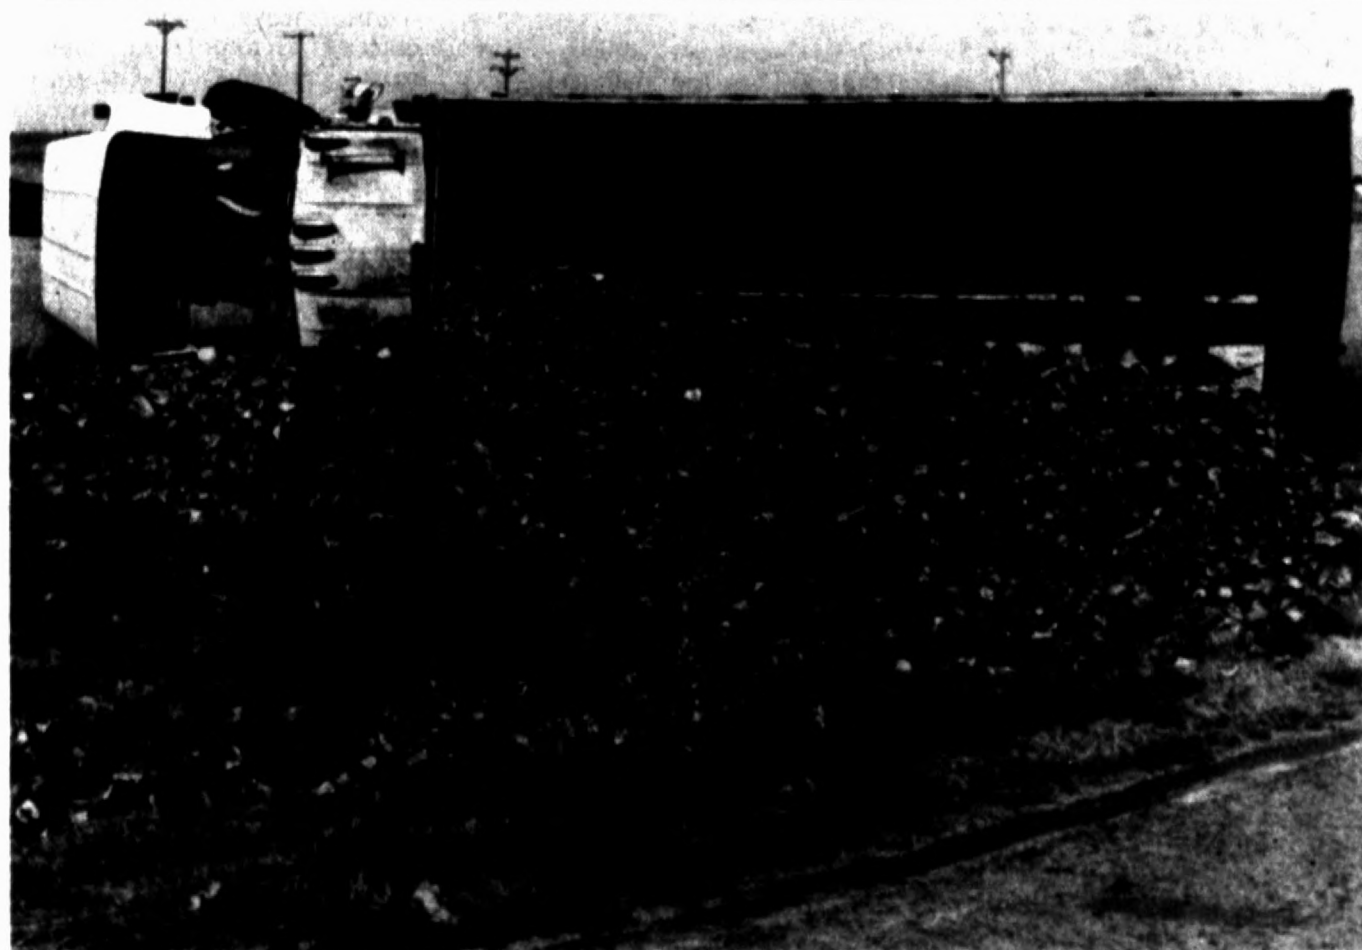

But County Court-at-Law Judge Matt Livingston not only awarded Hefley custody, he also ordered the mother to pay support payments of $200 monthly.

"This is a horror story," said Janet Hefley, 38, who lives in nearby Tyler with her fiance. She is waging a fierce campaign to regain custody of the children.

Since the judge's ruling last June, Hefley has moved to Las Vegas and taken the youngsters with him.

Mrs. Hefley maintains that her daughter may have been molested by an acquaintance of her husband after he left Texas. Authorities in two states are investigating.

Barajas jumped from the truck and miraculously escaped injury. The accident occurred at 12:45 p.m. Thursday.

WASHINGTON (AP) - Gun control advocates, after suffering an overwhelming defeat in the House, concede that a ban on semiautomatic assault weapons will not be part of this year's crime bill.

In the face of a shooting rampage in Texas that left 23 people dead, the House voted 247-177 Thursday to reject the ban as part of major anti-crime legislation pushed by President Bush and already passed by the Senate.

Further work on the measure was put over until Tuesday. Even though the Senate included a ban on nine models of assault-type weapons as part of its bill, the 70-vote margin of defeat in the House virtually assures its elimination from whatever compromise bill emerges later, said Rep. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., a key sponsor.

"This was just a first step, we did not expect to win," said Schumer, whose measure would have banned 13 models of assault guns as well as the large-capacity ammunition magazines they use.

The crime bill, however, still will have the first major new anti-gun initiative in years: a waiting period for the purchase of a handgun. It has been dubbed the Brady bill, for James Brady, the ex-White House press secretary who was critically wounded in the 1981 assassination attempt on former President Reagan.

Despite an all-out campaign in opposition by the 2.6 million-member National Rifle Association, the Senate included a five-day waiting period for the purchase of a handgun in its package. The House approved a seven-day waiting period, 239-186, last May in anticipation that it will be folded into the anti-crime package.

With an election year coming up and House members facing new constituents as a result of redistricting, many lawmakers took the position that one vote a year against the NRA was enough, that two was too many.

"I'm not a water carrier for the National Rifle Association; in May I stood up against them and supported the Brady bill," said Rep. James Sensenbrenner, R-Wis. "This is bureaucratic overkill."

Gun control advocates acknowledged that the NRA conducted a more subtle, and more effective, campaign this time, using local newspaper and gun magazine ads to encourage their members to phone or write lawmakers rather than buying television time to challenge them directly.

"This is totally irresponsible to the American public's safety," said Brady's wife, Sarah, who with him has become a fervent leader of the gun control movement. "It's just one more reason to be utterly disgusted with the U.S. Congress."

Supporters of the ban drew heart when Democratic Rep. Chet Edwards announced just before the vote that the mass slayings Wednesday at a cafeteria in his Texas district had persuaded him to drop his longstanding opposition to the ban.

"For me, the old arguments ring hollow," he said. "It's a human story now, a human tragedy. Had this been law, the killer could not have had 17 bullets in each clip and we could have perhaps saved lives."

The ban would have prohibited the sale and possession of 13 specific models of assault guns. Most are designed to be held at waist level so that with clips of up to 60 rounds of ammunition, they can be used to spray bullets in a sweeping path. Critics say such guns are the No. 1 choice of drug lords.

In addition, the measure would have limited the capacity of magazines to seven rounds of ammunition. Bush had called for ban on clips above 15 rounds in the proposal he sent Congress last February.

Water debate reminds of old West

VALENTINE, Texas (AP) - Relaxing beneath a midnight sky, a group of visitors sway in rocking chairs on the porch of a historic West Texas hotel, their boot-clad feet propped on a rail while they enjoy longnecks and the idyllic night.

"Listen," says a visitor from Austin. "Do you hear that? It's so quiet here."

But recently, the tranquility of this vast West Texas land has been shaken by what locals call an urban intruder: water-hungry El Paso.

Two months ago, the city of El Paso's water utilities, board announced it planned to purchase for $2 million the 25,000-acre Antelope Valley Farm, which sits on the tip of the Ryan Aquifer.

But West Texas residents have said the plans are tantamount to an invasion to rob their riches. They plan as their first counter-assault to pack a meeting today of the Rio Grande Council of Governments, hoping the voluntary body of officials from El Paso, Hudspeth, Culberson, Brewster and Presidio counties will pressure El Paso to drop the plans.

"It's our livelihood. Not only is the little town of Valentine dependent on that water supply but the ranchers in the area are dependent on that water supply," said Jody Miller at a recent Jeff Davis County town meeting. She and her husband, Clay, own a 36,000-acre ranch adjacent to the Antelope Valley Farm. "That's why it's important to us. And when that aquifer's drained, they'll drain another one."

In fact, area land owners are so serious about protecting their water supply some have proposed alliances with traditional foes, the government and wilderness groups, with hope of discovering an endangered species on the farm.

But Ed Archuleta, El Paso Water Utilities Public Service Board general manager, said El Paso does not intend to suck the aquifer dry. He said the ground water would be a supplemental water supply and is at the bottom of a list of options for the city.

"Part of our water planning is we're looking at all the combinations of options that would start with conservation, second would be surface water, third would be reuse of wastewater and then the ground water in the area. The other two options are importing and desalinization," he said.

He said El Paso was approached about buying the farm by its owner, Connecticut General Life Insurance Co., and has been offered other land in the area by West Texas ranchers.

"It's beautiful ranch country out there," he said. "There's no doubt about it, any use of minerals and water should be properly managed."

This is not the first time El Paso has engaged a neighbor as it has sought to ensure an adequate water supply for its growing population, expected to reach 1 million by the year 2040. In March, the city settled a multimillion-dollar lawsuit with New Mexico that began when El Paso tried to tap an aquifer in southern New Mexico.

The lawsuit was settled in part because El Paso had drawn up a water conservation plan that went into effect in April. Since it began, the city has dropped its water consumption 8 percent using 2.601 billion gallons of water, said John Sutton, El Paso PSB water conservation manager. The city's goal is to cut consumption by 20 percent by the year 2000.

In addition to restrictions on lawn watering, car washing and a water rate structure that penalizes heavy water users, the city is now offering rebates to El Pasoans who replace their toilets with water-saving fixtures and is drafting a landscaping plan to encourage use of native desert plants.

"I think we've started learning (how to conserve water)," Sutton said.

Despite the reassurances from El Paso, West Texas officials plan to form underground water districts. Under Texas law, a land owner owns the ground water beneath his or her property, but the number of wells drilled and pumping activity can be regulated by a water district.

Fund set up for family

Friends of Anna Maria Chavez and her family have established a fund to assist the family with expenses incurred because of her injury in an auto accident on Oct. 4.

The special account has been opened at Hereford State Bank for contributions. Persons wishing to donate should designate funds to Mrs. Chavez.

She was a passenger in an auto driven by her husband, Carlos Chavez, when the car was struck by another vehicle on U.S. 385.

The five members of the Chavez family in the car and the driver of the second vehicle sustained injuries in the accident.

After treatment at Deaf Smith General Hospital, Mrs. Chavez was transferred to Northwest Texas Hospital in Amarillo where she has been confined to the intensive care unit.

AUSTIN (AP) - The state has offered $6.4 million in grants and loan money to provide water and sewer improvements for a colonia near Brownsville.

"This has been a long struggle, but we persevered, and soon we will have both water and sewer service in the colonia," said Gloria Moreno of Valley Interfaith in a statement.

Members of the church-based community action organization traveled from the Rio Grande Valley to Austin for Thursday's vote by the Texas Water Development Board.

The board offered the financial assistance to the city of Brownsville for the Cameron Park colonia project.

"Today is a great day for the people of the colonias and all Texans," said Gov. Ann Richards, who spoke to the board in support of the project.

Local funds also would go toward the city's proposed $7.2 million project for Cameron Park, part of which has no water service, according to board staff.

If Brownsville approves the offer and submits a financial application, the water board would take final action in November.

Javier Parra of Valley Interfaith said that septic tanks in the colonia, or subdivision, now overflow when it rains.

"Kids play in this dirty water, and they get sick," Parra said.

The city's proposed wastewater construction would give Cameron Park residents adequate sewage treatment, and the area would no longer be in violation of Health Department regulations, according to board staff.

Water service also would be provided to the entire colonia, and facilities would be upgraded to give customers sufficient pressure and fire protection.

The water board's offer includes $4.5 million in grants and a $1.9 million loan.

The board also would finance a buyout of Military Highway Water Supply Corp., which with Brownsville's Public Utility Board now provides water service to parts of Cameron Park. The buyout would be negotiated at a later date.

In other action, the water board approved $1.6 million in financial assistance for additional water lines to provide service to residents in five subdivisions of Socorro, in El Paso County.

The subdivisions are Bauman, San Isidro, Rio Rancho, San Agustin and Belen Plaza.

The assistance provided to El Paso County Lower Valley Water District Authority includes a $1.2 million grant and $400,000 loan.

Randall uses last-minute breaks to edge JV Herd

Randall's junior varsity football team got breaks in the final minutes and took advantage of them to pull out a 14-6 victory over Hereford's JV Thursday at Whiteface Stadium.

In the only other game Thursday involving a Hereford team, the freshman maroon "A" team lost 48-20 at Pampa.

In the JV game, Hereford got a 4-yard touchdown run in the second quarter from tailback Chris Vallejo, but the extra point was no good. Something went wrong with the hold, and an emergency pass was intercepted. At halftime, Randall led 7-6.

Trailing 7-6, Hereford had good field position late in the second half, but was intercepted twice in the final minutes, including once after they had penetrated to the Randall 10-yard line. That interception was returned 96 yards for an apparent score, but was called back most of the way on an illegal block below the waist call. The penalty wiped out the run, but not the interception.

Hereford also had chances at interceptions in the final minutes, but twice passes bounced off Hereford defenders' chests. Another time, the Randall quarterback pitched to a running back who was not there. The ball hit the ground and rolled, but Randall recovered.

Randall had a 75-yard scoring run a few plays after one of the interceptions for the final score.

"The defense played well," Hereford defensive coach Ron Young said. "We broke down two times and they scored two times. Other than that we held our own."

Despite the loss, offensive coach Craig Yenzer looked at the positives. "I'm proud of these kids," Yenzer said. "They played hard, kept coming at 'em. You hate to lose, but they can hold their head up. The reason you play these JV games is to learn, and we learned a lot of lessons."

In the freshman game, Hereford's team started well, but the game got away from them in the second quarter.

When Michael Brown ran 23 yards for a touchdown to end Hereford's first drive, it made the score 6-6, but by the time the half ended, Pampa led 32-6.

Late in the third quarter, Greg Kalka caught a 46-yard TD pass from Brown, and Brown ran for another score, a 7-yarder, in the fourth. After the third touchdown, Jeremy Scott ran for the two points.

Close, but...
Hereford junior varsity's Mark Kuper (85) just missed blocking this punt in Thursday's game against the Randall JV at Whiteface Stadium. Randall won 14-6.

Bears win ugly game

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) - It was the kind of game Mike Ditka relishes. His Chicago Bears defense was dominating and his offense was effective enough to produce another down-in-the-dirt, grass-stained victory.

And once again the victim was the hapless Green Bay Packers, whose offense, once regarded as the most innovative in the NFL, was embarrassingly inept.

"It ain't pretty. It was a tough game, it was a good win and I ain't apologizing," said Ditka after Thursday night's 10-0 victory over the Packers. "And I ain't giving it back."

"We were just extremely ready and prepared for this team, this game, this outing. A week off helped us mend up our people, and that assisted us on defense, especially."

Consider the Packers' pathetic numbers. Five first downs, including only one in the first half; 138 total yards; and a deepest drive that only reached the Bears' 43.

Was the Bears' defense that good? It held Don Majkowski to only three completions in 16 attempts for 32 yards, a performance that forced coach Lindy Infante to replace him with Mike Tomczak in the fourth quarter.

Or was Green Bay's offense that bad?

"I really believe it was more of what our defense was doing than ... what their offense was doing," Ditka said. "He (Majkowski) still scares the heck out of me. I'm not going to say anything negative."

But the fans at Lambeau Field were less than pleased with the Majik Man and the Packers. They booed at the end of the half as the team left the field and again at the end of the game.

One of Majkowski's longest completions was overruled by instant replay when it showed tight end Ed West had stepped out of bounds. It was that kind of night.

"When you have that, I think it's tough on a quarterback. You begin to try to make things happen, you force things," said Bears linebacker Mike Singletary.

Chicago's offense, meanwhile, got only one touchdown, but that was enough as the Bears beat the Packers for the 11th time in their last 13 games.

Jim Harbaugh's 8-yard touchdown pass to James Thornton late in the second quarter and Kevin Butler's 22-yard field goal early in the fourth sent the Bears (5-2) to victory after two straight losses.

The Packers fell to 1-6 with their fourth straight loss and their 11th in 12 games dating back to last season. Green Bay hasn't been 1-6 since 1986.

"It wasn't pretty, but I don't think a lot of the Packer-Bear games are," said Harbaugh, who completed 18 of 29 passes for 142 yards.

Majkowski fumbled a snap out of the shotgun and Richard Dent recovered for the Bears at the Green Bay 14 with 30 seconds to go in the third quarter. Chicago just missed a first down and settled for Butler's 22-yard field goal with 13:48 to play.

Trailing 10-0, the Packers apparently recovered a Chicago fumble on a punt return early in the fourth quarter, but a whistle while the ball was loose blew the play dead and allowed Chicago to maintain possession. Field judge Don Orr admitted after the game that he blew the whistle too soon on the play.

The Bears, whose first two possessions of the game ended on a fumble and interception, finally scored when Harbaugh hit Thornton for the score with 1:44 left in the first half.

In Sunday's games, the New York Jets play at Indianapolis, Houston is at Miami, Seattle plays at Pittsburgh, Minnesota visits New England, Tampa Bay is at New Orleans, Atlanta plays at Phoenix, Cleveland visits San Diego, Detroit plays at San Francisco, Kansas City is at Denver, and the Los Angeles Rams play the Los Angeles Raiders.

NFC East teams are off and the week concludes Monday night with Cincinnati at Buffalo.

Netters play for title; Pitman hosts golfers

This weekend's high school sports activities offer a variety of choices of what to watch Saturday, with varsity tennis and sophomore football playing in Hereford and Pitman Municipal Golf Course hosting a fall high school tournament.

Pitman Golf Course will host girls from six area high schools who will compete against two teams from Hereford Saturday. HHS "A" team will compete against teams from Amarillo High, Borger and Pampa, while the "B" team will go against Plainview, Caprock and Palo Duro.

The shotgun start will be at 9 a.m. Hereford's boys will play at the Pampa Country Club, starting at 8:30 a.m.

TENNIS
Hereford meets Borger for the district championship. They start at 1 p.m. Saturday at Whiteface Courts.

Both teams are undefeated in team tennis matches. Hereford became undefeated when a match against Pampa was completed last Saturday. The completion was to be played Thursday, but it was taken care of while the Hereford team was in Amarillo to play Caprock.

One of Pampa's players was ruled ineligible, tennis assistant Natalie Sims said, and in the other match, Hereford's Bri Reinauer beat Patsy Barker 6-2, 3-6, 6-4 to give Hereford the win.

VOLLEYBALL
The Lady Whitefaces will try to ensure the runner-up spot in the playoffs by winning the rest of their district games. They start at Borger Saturday, with the junior varsity teams starting at 2 p.m.

FOOTBALL
The varsity meets Randall tonight at 7:30 at Kimbrough Stadium in Canyon. The sophomores host Monterey at 11 a.m. Saturday at Whiteface Stadium.

All of Hereford's junior high teams play Tuesday, and all at 5 p.m. The seventh grade teams will be in Hereford, with the Maroon team against Borger and the White team against Pampa. The eighth grade Maroon team will be in Borger, and the eighth White will be in Pampa.

Also, in the schedule which appeared in the Brand before the season, a game for the eighth grade Maroon was mistakenly listed for Thursday, Oct. 24. The game will be on Tuesday, Oct. 29.

CROSS COUNTRY
The cross country teams will run in Spearman Saturday, starting at 10 a.m.

Yankee Managers
NEW YORK (AP) - The New York Yankees have had many managers since they were founded in 1903 but two names stand out - Casey Stengel and Joe McCarthy.

With McCarthy as manager, from 1931 to 1946, the Yanks won 1,460 games, eight American League pennants and seven World Series titles.

Under Stengel, 1949-60, the New York team won 1,149 games, 10 pennants, and seven world championships.

Opposing players stole 60 bases when Dwight Gooden of the Mets was pitching in 1990.

Through 1990, while pitching to 1,013 hitters, Bill Landrum of the Pirates did not hit a single batter with a pitch.

Smoltz, Hunter spark Braves

PITTSBURGH (AP) - First they wrote a sequel to "Gone With the Wind." Now the Atlanta Braves have rewritten the history books - and the storybooks.

What else can Atlanta take in one year?

Would you believe the World Series?

"There isn't one person in this stadium who'd have believed in April that they'd win their division; let alone Game 7 here," a disbelieving Andy Van Slyke said following the Braves' decisive 4-0 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates in the National League playoffs Thursday night.

They'd been shut out of the World Series since 1958, when they played in Milwaukee, but the Braves literally shut the Pirates out of the series. Three of the Braves' four victories were shutouts as baseball's best regular-season team failed to score in the final 22 innings overall and the last 27 in Pittsburgh.

"You wish for shutouts, but that's awfully hard to do," Braves manager Bobby Cox said.

"Who would have thought we'd get shut out three times?" Van Slyke said. "We're not slouches. We underachieved, but they have a great pitching staff."

They were a last-place team the last three seasons.

"People said we were out of it at the All-Star break, but we kept battling. They said we couldn't catch the Dodgers and we kept battling. This is a team that won't give up," NL batting champion Terry Pendleton said.

The Pirates had never lost a decisive Game 7 in the 104-year history of their franchise, but not even the history books could save them from some of the best postseason pitching in history. Pittsburgh was shut out at home only twice all season, only to be zeroed out in three of their four home playoff games.

Playoff MVP Steve Avery, a two-time 1-0 winner, said the Braves now will zero in on the Minnesota Twins in the first World Series matchup of last-place teams from the previous season.

The Worst Series, err, World Series begins Saturday night in the Metrodome with the Twins' Jack Morris to face probable Braves starter Tom Glavine. Scoring is optional.

"I think we showed we can throw the ball a little bit out there," Avery said. "I'm sure the Twins have a great staff, but I don't think that any team in the league can match our staff now."

"I don't know if anybody knows how it feels to lose consistently," said Game 7 winner John Smoltz, who allowed six hits, struck out eight and walked one in his first shutout of the season. "I know it feels great to win."

For Pittsburgh, it felt a lot worse to lose to Atlanta than it did to 1990 world champion Cincinnati in 1990. The Braves went from worst to first, but it only got worse for the Pirates this time around.

They managed only seven runs in the final six games as their big three of Barry Bonds, Bobby Bonilla and Van Slyke went 0-for-33 with runners in scoring position from early in Game 1 until late in Game 7.

The numbers tell all about the Pirates' second consecutive playoff defeat and their sixth in eight NL playoff appearances: Bonds, .148 with no RBIs; Bonds, 0-for-16 with runners in scoring position; Bonilla, one RBI; Van Slyke, .160 and no

RBIs after the third inning of Game 1.

The Braves themselves had a playoff record 26-inning scoreless streak as big boppers Pendleton (.167, 1 RBI), David Justice (.200, 2 RBIs, 1 missed base) and Ron Gant (.259) had so-so series. But they still won.

"We just didn't get the hits," Pittsburgh manager Jim Leyland said. "Getting shut out three times says it for you."

The Braves made it tough on 20-game winner John Smiley from the start, knocking him out in a three-run first inning keyed by Brian Hunter's two-run homer.

"I had a decent season, but I let my team down and it's going to take a long time to get over it," said Smiley, who allowed seven first-inning runs in his two playoff defeats. He lost 10-3 to Smoltz in Game 3.

The Game 7 crowd of 46,932 was nearly 8,000 fewer than the night before.

Some fans started booing as early as the first inning.

"Here's a team that busted its rear to win a national championship and they boo us? That's weak," Bonds said.

Worst-to-first World Series set

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) - Many of the Minnesota Twins were hoping to see the Atlanta Braves in the World Series. They got their wish.

In perhaps the most unlikely matchup in Series history, the Braves and Twins play Game 1 Saturday night at the Metrodome.

Kent Hrbek liked the idea of two teams that went from worst-to-first playing to see who is the best. Jack Morris, Minnesota's starter in the opener, preferred playing in the warmer weather of Atlanta.

In the next couple of days, there will be a lot of talk about how these teams compare. How the Twins start three right-handers and the Braves have three southpaws. How the Metrodome will affect the Braves.

But the Twins and most baseball observers know there's only one thing that really matters, and that's how Kirby Puckett does.

Just take a look at the playoffs. Puckett was 1-for-7 in the first two games against the Toronto Blue Jays and the Twins' offense looked dead. He finished 9-for-21 with two homers, six RBIs and the series MVP award.

"Myself, Kent Hrbek and Chili Davis weren't swinging the bat well," Puckett said. "Sooner or later we were going to start swinging well, and we did."

Puckett is not one to give up on himself easily, so don't be fooled if he goes 0-for-4 in Game 1.

He doesn't look like a baseball player. He's short and round with a body that resembles a clenched fist. When Puckett builds up some speed going around the bases, he looks like a little bowling ball.

But he is a ballplayer, and a great one. In eight major league seasons, Puckett has an average of .320, including a career-high .356 in 1988.

He grew up on Chicago's tough South Side and built up leg strength by constantly climbing the stairs to his 14th floor apartment because the elevator didn't work. It turned out to be a stairway to Hanky Heaven.

Puckett never had the style and grace of Willie Mays or the pure power of Darryl Strawberry. He had to do it the hard way.

"All I ever wanted was for people to give me a chance when I was growing up," Puckett said. "I've been playing baseball since I was 5 years old. I knew I had talent. I just wanted the opportunity to succeed."

The Belmont Stakes, now a fixture for the month of June, was run once in November.

Two out-of-state sponsors now claim that a walleye national championship will be held at Lake Meredith during 1992. The local officials involved have done a great promotional job and will soon make their formal announcements.

The real question about this tournament is the controversial walleye length limits. Will the minimum length limit on walleye be lowered from the current limit of 16 inches? After several years of imposing a 16-inch minimum length for walleye, it appears that the limit will be lowered in time for these 40 visiting professional anglers.

In Texas, annual lake limits are usually decided at the preceding September meeting of the Parks and Wildlife Commission. Watch for special Texas Parks and Wildlife Department action to lower the limits. The conflict between the science of fish management and the business of high exposure national tournaments will make for some very interesting explanations from experts.

Stripers! If you enjoy catching stripers or want to learn more about catching them in our region, then contact the "Striper Club" and Harold Allm at PO Box 20154; Amarillo 79114. Harold is tired of driving hundreds of miles or going out of state in order to catch his favorite fish. He and his new group point to the limited but very successful hybrid steeper experiment at Lake MacKenzie.

Many view Lake Meredith as a natural open water lake with great potential to become an outstanding hybrid or steeper lake. The huge economic impact of steeper fishing has revitalized many businesses at Lake Texoma. Allm believes our region could use a similar economic boost.

Congratulations to all the winners at the first annual State Championship of Old Texas, in which 53 anglers from 15 different cities in Texas and Oklahoma competed at Lake Greenbelt.

Lonnie Cox of Canadian won the first-place trophy, $660 in prize money and a fishing trip on Elephant Butte with professional guide Dale Wagy.

The second place trophy, $500, and a pheasant/quail hunting trip at Harper's Game Preserve near Booker was won by Billy Schrader of Amarillo. Pampa's Gary Carter used a special Roy Alderson model floating worm to capture the third-place trophy, $160 and a quail-hunt at Bookout Hunting Resort near Channing.

Tim Trimble of Clarendon took home fourth-place money of $106. Raymond Berger of Borger was fifth and Bob Schiffman of Pampa rounded out the top six.

Special thanks to Anchor Marine, Top-of-the-Line Marine, Greenbelt Marina and KGNC for helping make this tournament one of the best of the 1991 season.

Members of B.A.S.S. are invited to fish a team tournament Oct. 27 at Lake Baylor. For details contact Bob Schiffman at (806) 669-0091 or Sam Taylor at (806) 323-8720.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I read your column about individuals who mistakenly thought they were being charged for organ donations and I hope that misunderstanding has been straightened out once and for all.

I am now listed with a New England donor bank. I've been waiting six months for a transplant. The "suspended animation" is a terrific strain on me and my family. We are on an emotional roller coaster.

Months go by and there are no donors, which means no transplants are performed. People listed with this donor bank must be close to death in order to qualify. Some die waiting for surgery.

When an article mistakenly says organ donors are charged and people start tearing up their cards, it makes me sick. Will you please reprint the essay by Robert Test that you ran a while back? It expresses my feelings perfectly. And urge your readers to be organ donors, Ann. For many it will be the most noble deed they've ever performed.—Ellen Allen in Wynant-skill, N.Y.

DEAR ELLEN: Thank you for asking. I have had a great many requests to reprint this piece since that transplant flap, and here it is:
To Remember Me...

By Robert N. Test
The day will come when my body will lie upon a white sheet neatly tucked under four corners of a mattress located in a hospital busily occupied with the living and the dying. At a certain moment a doctor will determine that my brain has ceased to function and, for all practical purposes, my life has stopped.

When that happens, do not attempt to instill artificial life into my body by the use of a machine. And don't call this my deathbed. Let it be called the Bed of Life, and let whatever is usable be taken from it to help others lead fuller lives.

Give my sight to the man who has never seen a sunrise, a baby's face or love in the eyes of a woman. Give my heart to a person whose own heart has caused nothing but endless days of pain. Give my blood to a teenager who was pulled from the wreckage of a car, so that he might live to see his grandchildren play. Give my kidneys to one who depends on a machine to exist. Take my bones, every nerve and muscle in my body, and find a way to make a crippled child walk.

Explore every corner of my brain. Take my cells, if necessary, and let them grow so that, someday, a speechless boy will shout at the crack of a bat and a deaf girl will hear the sound of rain against her window.

Burn what is left and scatter my ashes to the winds to help the flowers grow.

If you must bury something, let it be my faults, my weaknesses and all prejudice against my fellow man.

Give my sins to the devil. Give my soul to God.
If, by chance, you wish to remember me, do it with a kind deed or word to someone who needs you. If you do all I have asked, I will live forever.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My dad, a smoker, recently died of lung cancer. He spent seven days and seven nights coughing his guts out. It was his guts, of course, because he hadn't eaten any food in a month.

My message to all smokers is: "You can't barbecue your lungs every day for 30 years without paying for it."—W.C., Winnipeg, Canada

DEAR W.C.: Your message is the same one I've been trying to get across for umpteen years. Let's hope somebody listens.

Planning a wedding? What's right? What's wrong? "The Ann Landers Guide for Brides" will relieve your anxiety. Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $3.65 (this includes postage and handling) to: Brides, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562.

Fashions designed for not-so-perfect bodies

NEW YORK (AP) - Ah, that we all had perfect bods.

Then we could slide between the seams of fashion's sexiest looks without a worry about secondary flesh.

But, alas, only runway models and a few hundred other perfectly put together young things could do justice to the recently-unveiled resort collections that leave little to the imagination.

Calvin Klein was kind enough to build a bra into one of his slinky slip dresses. But most designers are relying on Mother Nature. For those she's already let down, a little artificial molding would help. As designer Christian Dior said, "Fashion is nothing without foundation."

Enter the bodybrieger.

It's an all-in-one strapless, sometimes backless undergarment meant to create a smooth, uniform line. Va Bien's Bodyshaper of nylon and Lycra gently shapes and sculpts the figure. It's about $62 in white, pearl, champagne and black. It would work equally well with slip dress or strapless column.

"Intimate apparel has the ability to change the way clothes fit and the way women feel," says Kathy Smith, a segment manager at Du Pont. "Today, there's a whole wardrobe of appropriate lingerie to enhance the look of a dress."

There are times, too, when lingerie sets the limits for decency and becomes an integral part of the ensemble. Sheer bodices of chiffon and the peek-a-boo look of crochet cry for leggings, bike shorts, unitards and camisoles in bright colors and bold prints. Natori, for example, makes a unitard in lace, providing a smooth, body-revealing line for sheers. It's $58 in purple, red, forest green, black or white.

The control slip, such as the Under-Wonder by Flexees, $36 in white or black, is perfect for anyone without a washboard stomach and pencil-thin thighs. The style works wonders for the teeny-weeny tank-T as well as the spandex mini skirt updated with fall's revival of the poorboy sweater.

When you want to let the air flow free or give those abs a rest, what to wear under the tent or trapeze dress? Well, if the fabric is opaque enough, bikini panties and demi bra will suffice. But for the less daring, there's a full slip. Some manufacturers, including Gia and Vanity Fair, have designed anti-cling chemise slips that also offer built-in bust support.

CUSTODY

Meanwhile, Janet Hefley's friends claim she is a victim of a cruel irony. They say the judge took the children from a battered wife, ordered her to pay child support and gave the offspring to a husband who tormented her.

The couple met in California in 1979 before Hefley and his first wife were divorced. He and Janet were married in Las Vegas in 1980. Five years earlier, Hefley was released from the Rusk State Hospital. He spent 10 years in the mental facility after a Fort Worth jury ruled he was insane.

Hospital records show that doctors as early as 1968 said Hefley was sane and attempted to release him. A Fort Worth judge rebuffed those efforts on three occasions. Retired Tarrant County Sheriff Lon Evans, one of the investigators in the 1964 rape-slaying case, says today he believes the whole sanity issue was a charade.

"That was as phony as a July snow," he said.

Hefley's first marriage after his 1975 release was a turbulent affair that included allegations of wife abuse, which he denied. He was in and out of trouble for drunken driving, the most serious of which resulted in an involuntary manslaughter conviction in Las Vegas in 1979. Hefley dismisses that incident as "just a car accident."

"It was two people running a stop sign on New Year's Eve," he said. Concerning his drinking problems, Hefley said, "Janet was guilty of that same act. She just never got caught."

Says she: "I'm not perfect. I've made mistakes, but I'm honest about it. And I never killed anyone."

During much of their marriage, Hefley bounced around the country in a variety of jobs, mostly doomed or dishonest time-share escapades that kept him flirting with trouble.

"I never was a target," he says now. "But I was a material key witness."

Mrs. Hefley says he avoided jail by turning states evidence.

Hefley says he does not believe the child was abused but insists if she was, he is faultless.

"It could happen to anybody who leaves his children with a babysitter."

Mrs. Hefley also contends that Hefley abused her mentally and physically throughout their 10-year marriage and blames him for her emotional disorders.

Presumably, Judge Livingston based his custody decision on her mental problems. He has refused to speak with The Associated Press about the case, which she said is still pending.

However, he notified Mrs. Hefley's new attorney this week that his motion for a new trial had been overruled.

That ruling will be appealed, the lawyer said.

GUNMAN

himself, police said. The death count was double that of those killed in the Persian Gulf War who were from nearby Fort Hood.

In this town of 65,000 people on Thursday flags flew at half mast and an army of counselors, clergy and volunteers tried to console the family of victims, survivors, and anyone else who needed assistance in coping with the tragedy.

A sign outside one business, "Oh God, we feel the pain."

"It doesn't matter how much time you have, you are never prepared for this," said Jill Hargrove, a victim's witness coordinator for Bell County. She has been counseling several people who lost family members in the shooting.

Gina Elliott, a spokeswoman at Central Texas College, said that when she first heard reports of the massacre she felt the same anguish as when the Persian Gulf conflict started, and her husband, David, an army sergeant was sent to Saudi Arabia.

She said the community is reacting the same way as during the Middle East conflict. "People are trying to pick up the pieces," she said.

Sue Owens, a ticket agent at a downtown bus station said, "This town is used to a lot of hardships. We went through this when everyone went to Saudi Arabia. People left wives with children, and the community pulled together."

Fort Hood deployed 23,000 troops for the Gulf war and the town has several thousand military retirees. Fort Hood currently has 36,000 troops.

Killeen high school principal Corbett Lawler said many students told him they were confused about the shooting but that no one seemed real upset.

"During Operation Desert Storm, we had 700-800 kids here with loved ones in harm's way. Military communities are more resilient. They are accustomed to changes in life," he said.

As evidence that tradition will continue, the Killeen Kangaroos football team will host Pflugerville Friday in an important district game.

"At this point we are going on as usual," Lawler said.

Meanwhile, Sam Rogers of St. Petersburg, Fla., was taking photographs to show a friend of his who is a manager of a Luby's restaurant in Florida.

Sam Rogers was en route from California to home when he heard about the shooting and decided to take a look for himself.

"Luby's will probably have to knock this down," he said. "Who would want that stigma?"

Killer angry with women

KILLEEN, Texas (AP) - Residents mourned the deaths of 22 people killed in a cafeteria by a suicidal gunman who police say may have been in a violent rage against women.

Investigators today pieced together clues about why George Hennard drove his pickup truck through a Luby's Cafeteria window then opened fire on customers during lunch hour Wednesday, killing 22 people and wounding 23 before turning one of his two semi-automatic pistols on himself.

"He has an evident problem with women for some reason, not all women," Police Chief F.L. Giacomozzi said Thursday. "We're trying to look into that to see if it can lead us to where we need to look."

Hennard's neighbors in nearby Belton described him as an angry man who bothered women on his street with bizarre letters and obscene gestures.

"Did you and your sister find new flames yet?" Hennard wrote in June to a neighbor's two daughters. "Do you think the three of us could get together someday? Please give me the satisfaction of someday laughing in the face of all those mostly white, treacherous female vipers from two towns who tried to destroy me and my family."

Witnesses said when Hennard began methodically shooting horrified Luby's customers, he shouted, "Look at what Belton's done to me!" Another witness said he yelled about Bell County, where Killeen is located.

Susan Robinson-Hester, who escaped from the cafeteria unhurt, said she heard Hennard saying, "Tell me, was it worth it? Wait 'til those... women in Belton see this!"

Some survivors of the attack, which occurred the day after Hennard turned 35, escaped by breaking through a window. Another hid in a freezer, and one employee spent the night in a commercial dishwasher at the restaurant.

On Thursday, onlookers stopped to see the roped-off death scene. Around town, flags flew at half-staff as this military city of about 67,000 tried to cope with the worst mass shooting in U.S. history.

New clues about Hennard's past also began to emerge. Hennard was treated for two weeks in 1989 in a Houston hospital for drug abuse. The Dallas Times Herald reported that earlier in 1989 he was kicked out of the Merchant Marines.

At the gunman's home in Belton, his father said he did not know what caused his son to go on a rampage. "It was not drugs, that's for sure," said Georges M. Hennard, a Houston doctor.

He speculated that his son had a tumor like Charles Whitman, the sniper who killed 16 at the University of Texas in 1965, but had no evidence of that.

In Washington, gun control advocates used the slaying to call attention to a crime bill the House was debating. But the portion of the bill that would have restricted the high-capacity ammunition clips used in Hennard's guns was defeated.

"The tragedy yesterday added some momentum in our direction, but at this point I don't think it is enough," said Rep. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., the bill's leading supporter. Rep. Chet Edwards, a Democrat whose district includes Killeen, dropped his long standing opposition to a weapons ban.

Meanwhile, hundreds of people attended the first of what promised to be many memorial services, and squads of counselors and disaster relief volunteers fanned out in the city offering to help people who needed assistance in coping with the tragedy.

About 350 people filled the pews at St. Joseph's Catholic Church on Thursday night and tried to cope with the tragedy through prayers, songs and hugs.

Bishop John McCarthy of the Archdiocese of Austin urged citizen's not to justify the massacre as "God's will," but to use it to look closely at the problems of society.

"There are no words a clergyman can say that can allay the pain and suffering and anguish that marks this gathering," the bishop said. "God didn't will the death of the men and women of Killeen."

One of the parishioners listening and praying intently was 30-year-old Dan Cezar, a physical education teacher at an elementary school about three blocks from the cafeteria.

"This week I've given a lot of hugs to a lot of kids," said Cezar, who teaches students whose friends and family were killed or wounded.

Cezar, who lost two brothers in a car-train wreck when he was a teen-ager, said he refuses to drive by Luby's or read news reports about the event because of the memories of his family's tragedy.

"The best thing I can do is pray - pray for those families," he said. "The main thing is for them to be strong."

Restaurant worker spent night hiding in dishwasher

KILLEEN, Texas (AP) - Mark Mathews emerged from a night spent huddled inside one of worst murder scenes in U.S. history without even knowing what exactly had taken place.

Mathews, a 19-year-old Luby's Restaurant employee, was discovered by another employee. He had remained crammed inside an industrial dishwasher nearly 20 hours after George Hennard sprayed the dining room and killed 22 diners and himself Wednesday.

"I wasn't sure what was going on," Mathews said. "I couldn't see... I never peeked out."

To escape the shooting, the food preparer climbed inside a 15-foot-long industrial dishwasher less than a minute after Hennard crashed into the restaurant with his pickup truck and started shooting at diners.

Mathews stayed inside the machine through the night, unable to see outside and afraid that police and rescue workers also were criminals.

The restaurant's assistant manager, Robert Butler, discovered the 6-foot Mathews curled up inside the dishwasher Thursday morning.

"I was so thrilled," Mathews said Thursday afternoon after an examination at a hospital. "I just hugged Mr. Butler."

It wasn't until he was taken to the hospital that authorities told him about the 10-minute barrage.

"I was shocked," Mathews said upon learning about the dead and injured. "So many were killed."

Mathews' disappearance after accounting for all the other employees working at the time of the incident had worried company officials.

"We knew he was missing last evening and we were concerned about his disappearance and we continued our vigilance in trying to find him," said Pete Erben, president and chief executive of the San Antonio-based restaurant chain.

Mathews, who used his size 13 tennis shoes as makeshift pillows, was stiff and sore from his night in the dishwasher but otherwise uninjured.

Company officials, who have established a $100,000 fund for the victims' families, said they did not know whether the Killeen Luby's would reopen.

Lt. Stephen Decatur led a successful raid into Tripoli Harbor in 1804 to burn the U.S. Navy frigate Philadelphia, which had fallen into the hands of pirates.

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

LEGEND OF THE DOGWOOD

WHEN JESUS WAS CRUCIFIED HE FORGAVE ALL THOSE WHO TOOK PART IN THIS HORRIBLE EXECUTION (LUKE 23:34). AT SOMETIME IN THE EARLY YEARS OF CHRISTIANITY A LEGEND STARTED THAT, SO COMPLETE WAS HIS FORGIVENESS, EVEN THE WOODEN CROSS WAS INCLUDED! IT WAS SUPPOSED THAT THE TREE FROM WHICH THE WOOD CAME WAS THE DOGWOOD AND BECAUSE OF THIS FORGIVENESS THE TREE NEVER AGAIN GREW LARGE ENOUGH TO SUPPLY WOOD FOR SUCH A TERRIBLE PURPOSE—AND AS COMMEMORATION, ITS FLOWERS WOULD FORM A CROSS WITH A NAILPRINT AT EACH PETAL'S EDGE, WITH THE CENTER RESEMBLING A CROWN OF THORNS STAINED WITH BLOOD.

TODAY'S BEAUTIFUL DOGWOOD TREES GROW TO A HEIGHT OF EIGHT TO FIFTEEN FEET—NOWHERE NEAR THE SIXTY OR SEVENTY FEET THAT THEIR ANCESTORS ARE SAID TO HAVE ATTAINED, AND ALSO....

...THE PETALS OF ITS LOVELY FLOWER DOES HAVE WHAT APPEARS TO BE A NAILPRINT ON THE EDGE OF EACH PETAL, WHILE THE FLOWER'S CENTER IS A BLOOD-RED COLOR—NEXT TIME THEY'RE IN BLOOM, TAKE A LOOK FOR YOURSELF!
