Farm Exports Should Show Big Jump

WASHINGTON (AP) - Farm exports, led by massive shipments of grain and soybeans, are expected to be worth a record of $40 billion this fiscal year, a 25 percent jump from $32 billion in 1978-79.

Further, the Agriculture Department said Wednesday, exports in the new year that will begin on Oct. 1 "may reach $40 billion to $45 billion."

For 11 consecutive years, farm exports have set annual records and have provided ample margins between those and imports of agricultural products.

This year's imports, as an example, are expected to be valued at about $17.5 billion, meaning an agricultural trade balance of around $22.5 billion. That would be a 42 percent increase from $15.8 billion in 1978-79.

In its previous forecast issued in May, the agency said

1979-80 exports were expected to be worth about $38 billion. Higher prices for some commodities and an increase in tonnage accounted for the $2 billion boost.

Also, three months ago imports were projected at $18.7 billion, pointing to a trade balance of $19.3 billion.

Dewain Rahe of the department's Economics, Statistics and Cooperatives Service said the downward revision in import values was due mainly to "less sugar being imported than we were anticipating" last May.

Looking at export possibilities in 1980-81, analysts said a number of factors will bear on the situation in the coming

-Weather developments that will heavily influence not only the northern hemisphere crops that are now maturing but also the yet-unplanted crops in the southern hemisphere.

-Reduced supplies of grain available for export in some other major exporting countries, including Canada, Argentina and Australia.

-A 1 to 2 percent increase in livestock production among countries that buy U.S. feed grains, requiring them to import larger quantities.

-Slow economic growth in most major foreign markets that may limit their growth in demand for U.S. commodities for most of 1980-81.

-Relatively little growth in agricultural production in the lower-income developing countries.

Also, the report noted, prospects for U.S. harvests this year of cotton, corn and other feed grains have declined sharply because of drought from 1979 levels, pointing to "relatively tight" supplies in the coming year. .

18 Pages

The actual volume of U.S. farm exports this year was estimated at 162.1 million metric tons, up 18 percent from 137.5 million shipped to foreign buyers in 1978-79. In May, the forecast was 158.4 million metric tons. A metric ton is about 2,205 pounds and, as an example, is equal to 39.4 bushels of corn or 36.7 bushels of wheat or soy-

Officials noted a "continued record pace of grain, soybean and cotton shipments" this summer and prospects of those continuing for the balance of the 1979-80 fiscal year.

Grain and feed exports were estimated at a value of $18.3 billion this year, making up about 46 percent of the $40 billion total. Oilseeds and oilseed products were listed at $9.9 billion.

Brilab Probe Moved to State

HOUSTON (AP) - A Justice Department attorney says the Brilab investigation, which resulted in the indictment of Texas House Speaker Billy Clayton on racketeering charges, was moved from California to Texas after newspaper articles blew an FBI informant's cover.

During the third day of a pre-trial hearing Wednesday for Clayton and three other Brilab defendants, Bruce J. Kelton of Los Angeles testified the investigation was originally planned to center in Southern California, but later crossed state

Assistant U.S. Attorney Ronald Wood called Kelton to the stand in an effort to bolster the government's contention that federal jurisidiction was valid in the Brilab investigation. Kelton told the court that the Brilab focus was switched after a series of newspaper articles in February of 1979 blew

FBI informant Joseph Hauser's cover in Southern California. At the close of Wednesday's proceedings, Wood also said he planned to call two FBI agents who posed as insurance company executives and accompanied Hauser during the 10-month investigation. U.S. District Judge Robert O'Conor was informed of the plan just after defense attorneys asked O'Conor to listen to a taped conversation between Hauser, labor leader L.G. Moore and Austin attorneys Randall B. Wood and Donald W. Ray.

Moore, Ray, Wood were indicted along with Clayton on June 12 by a federal grand jury here on charges of fraud, conspiracy, extortion and racketeering in connection with an alleged insurance kickback scheme.

After defense attorneys filed motions asking that charges against the four be dismissed, O'Conor has spent three days listening to tape recordings secretly recorded by Hauser.

Under cross-examination by Roy Minton, attorney for Clayton, Jerry Goldstein, attorney for Ray and Wood and Mike Ramsey, Moore's attorney, Kelton told the court that Hauser was to be paid $65,000 for his work as an informant.

He said the arrangements to pay Hauser came after the informant pleaded guilty Feb. 2, 1979, to three counts of a 10-count indictment that stemmed from a 1977 investigation into bribery and kickbacks. Reading from a document provided by Wood, Kelton told the court that Hauser received $25,300 from February, 1979, to November, 1979, as "salary" for his work. Hauser also received $10,000 for moving expenses, a year's prepaid rent on his Beverly Hills home that totaled $11,700 and $1500 a month for his family's living expenses for a 12-month period starting Jan. 1, 1980.

Kelton declined to reveal Hauser's whereabouts, saying only that he had been in the federal witness protection program since May 5 of this year after being sentenced to two and one half years in prison for the three 1979 charges.

But under questioning by Ramsey, Kelton did say that Hauser was a "federal prisoner."

Wood has indicated that Hauser can be called as a witness if needed, but has argued that the informant could add nothing to the information available on the more than 100 tapes that have been made available to defense attorneys.

Kelton also testified that he had little to do with the "dayto-day supervision" of the investigation once it moved to Texas and had never heard of the four defendants until July

He said Hauser was chosen as an informant "because he basically operated out of" Los Angeles, an area originally targeted for the investigation.

The FBI established a bogus insurance firm known as "Fidelity Financial Consultants" in a Beverly Hills office after the newspaper stories halted Hauser's work in California, Kelton said.

Hauser represented himself as an employee of Prudential Insurance Co. "who works only for the president of the company," but Prudential has claimed they had no connection with the investigation.

The Deaf Smith County Appraisal District, still hoping to go into the central taxing and collecting method in January, 1981, held an informational meeting Wednesday night at the Thompson House Restaurant.

Bruce Coleman, chairman of the appraisal district board, said the meeting was held to "convey additional information and explain the state law."

Coleman said members of the board "feel that it will be more costly to wait until 1982 to initiate the system." The law requires that counties form the central appraisal districts by January, 1982, but they can start the system in 1981.

The new appraisal board has voted to start in 1981, provided that all governmental units approve the system. The City of Hereford has not yet approved the change this coming year.

"We feel there has been some misunderstanding about the concept of the central system, and the purpose of our meeting last night was to answer questions and convey additional information," said Coleman.

GDANSK, Poland (AP) - The Polish government's worst crisis in 10 years went into its second week today with the Communist regime rounding up leading dissidents in Warsaw and claiming that some strike committees in the Gdansk industrial area were coming to terms with it. But it admitted the strike was growing in Szczecin. Gdansk Radio said 47 strike committees contacted local officials and reached agreement with them on some of the issues. Another broadcast said representatives of some of the strikers and a government negotiating team led by Deputy Premier Tadeusz Pyka reached a "common position."

There was no indication which issues had been settled. But Communist Party chief Edward Gierek in a broadcast earlier this week offered only gradual wage increases and rejected the strikers' demands for free trade unions and other major political reforms allowed nowhere in the Soviet Bloc.

There also was no indication how many of the estimated 125,000 strikers along Poland's Baltic coast were represented by the committees the government claimed were dealing with it. Pursuing a divide-and-conquer strategy, the regime refused to deal with the central strike committee leading the fight for free trade unions. Instead it nibbled away at the committees in individual plants.

Meanwhile, in Szczecin, a major port on the East German border where dissident sources reported 20,000 strikers two days ago, the local government radio said steel and papermill workers joined the walkout for higher pay, free trade unions and other political reforms. Management spokesmen claimed that workers who struck for two hours Tuesday at the showcase steel plant at Nowa Huta, in southern Poland, all returned to work Wednesday. But other reports said many of the 40,000 employed at the plant stayed away.

Police in Warsaw arrested leading dissident Jacek Kuron, head of the underground Committee for Social Defense, and 14 of his associates in Kuron's apartment Wednesday evening, dissident sources reported.

BOSTON (AP) - Texas millionaire Jack Grimm, who spent $1 million to find the sunken luxury liner Titanic, says he's willing to leave it in its cold grave. But he's also willing to spend another $3 million to get to its safe.

His searchers, aboard the H.J.W. Fay, were heading for dock in Boston today carrying evidence that convinced them they have located the 68-yearold hulk of the proud British ship 350 miles off Newfoundland.

Grimm said Wednesday he was convinced enough by the search party's findings to spend $3 million to reactivate a 51-foot submarine with 9-foot robot arms to cut through the Titanic's hull next May or June.

"We just want to recover the safe in the purser's office," said Grimm, 55, of Abilene. The purser was an officer handling money and valuables aboard

"I don't know what's in the safe. One English magazine reported the safe contained a $125 million shipment in diamonds," he said, adding their worth could be nearly $300 million at current exchange rates.

Two of Chagra's relatives, his brother, Joe Chagra, and Jimmy Chagra's father-in-law, Leon Nichols, appeared before the grand jury Wednesday.

Shrimpers blamed the poor year on heavy rains that killed young shrimp, high diesel prices and the closing of Mexican shrimp grounds to U.S.

"It was shaping up to be a bad season two years in a row. I think we were looking at a lot of bankrupcies," said Melvin Power of the WPB Shrimp Producers Inc. of Port Isabel.

Gayman said his boats were hauling in only 200 pounds a night before the storm. However, he said trawlers now are taking in up to 1,200 pounds in a day's work.

A check with other shrimp fishermen in Brownsville and Port Isabel shows similar catch increases following the storm.

'It happens after every hurricane," said Power. "It activates the ocean bottom waters and puts the shrimp closer to the surface. It probably won't last more than a week or two."

After the seas calmed from Hurricane Allen, shrimpers headed out to see if the storm would have the same result as past ones.

recruits priests. Roman Catholic authorities in Florida say the state is in "desperate need" of holy men - with many fewer priests per person than the national average.

The priest shortage is not confined to Florida, however, according to the Rev. Caesar Russo, vocational director of the Diocese of St. Augustine. He said it's a national and worldwide problem.

"There is no doubt that there is a (U.S.) shortage," concurred Bob Wonderly. spokesman for the U.S. Catholic Conference in Washington, D.C., "but the situation is turning around."

Wonderly said there were 59,192 Roman Catholic priests in the United States in 1970, the most ever. By 1979, the figure had declined to 58,430, but this year the total number has risen to 58,621.

He declined to estimate the number of priests needed within the U.S. church: "There are never really enough.'

Wonderly also declined to connect the shortage of priests with Tuesday's announcement by the Catholic Conference that married Episcopal priests will be permitted to become Roman Catholic priests and remain married, under a plan approved by the Vatican.

The two matters are "completely unrelated," he said.

The U.S. average of priests per persons of the Roman Catholic faith, while still indicating a need for more priests, is far better than that in some areas of the world. notably Latin America and Africa.

According to Vatican statistics, America has roughly 120 priests for every 100,000 Catholics. The numbers of priests for Latin America and southern Africa, respectively, are 16 and 33 per 100,000 worship-

Last month, the Vatican's Congregation for the Clergy appealed to dioceses in America and Europe (where the rate is 93 priests per 100,000 people) to send more men to countries which sorely need priests. But the appeal comes at a time when bishops, even in priest-rich regions, feel they can barely cover their own parish needs. Reasons for the lack of priests are hard to define, priests say. Wonderly noted the steady level of resignations from the priesthood that followed the controversial decisions of Vatican II in the mid-1960s and said interest in the priesthood is only now picking up again.

"It's not anything against the church," said the Rev. Thomas O'Dwyer, dean of students at the Archdiocese of Miami. "It's really an accumulation of things." Materialism and a lack of some sense of commitment by many men could be blamed in part, he said.

"The problem points out the instability in our own culture. There is a certain amount of narcissism" and life-long commitments aren't often made or demanded, said Russo.

The shortage in Florida is putting a strain on those already in parishes.

Russo said 75 priests serve ment in Florida's two 65,000 to 80,000 Roman diocesan seminaries - St. Catholics in the St. Augustine diocese. That leaves roughly one priest per 1,000 Catholics to counsel, teach, administer sacraments and visit the sick, as well as study scriptures and carry out other ministerial duties.

"This deprives them of giving their full time in certain situations and creates some tensions," Russo said. "Many priests feel guilty that they are not doing enough."

When counseling or other services are requested, priests now must "be selective as to the time you give to a response," and some people are left feeling cheated, he

O'Dwyer said many priests are alone in large parishes and are "confined to dispensing the sacraments." He said some must depend on help from lay people in the churcommunion alone in a big parish, by the time he finished, the people would be falling asleep," he said. But there are signs of change. O'Dwyer said enroll-

But the Rev. Robert Linch, rector at the Miami archdiocese education department, says that's because other seminaries around the country have been forced to close for lack of students.

Florida's seminaries have another advantage over those in other states: they are the only ones which teach in both English and Spanish, which will help prepare priests for work in both the heavily Cuban areas of southern Florida and in South American and Caribbean countries, Russo said.

In addition to the biliboard campaign, the priesthood is being advertised in pamphlets and even on bumper stickers, O'Dwyer said.

And, as could be expected from priests in need, he added,"We keep praying hard we're going to get more young fellows in here."

Listening to America

By DANIEL Q. HANEY Associated Press Writer

FRAMINGHAM, Mass. (AP) - For 30 years, doctors have put their stethoscopes to the chests of the people of Framingham. What they've heard is the heart of America.

Every couple of years, 11,200 men and women have loyally appeared at a white clapboard house with a sign out front that says Framingham Heart Study. They are subjects in the longestrunning medical investigation in the history of man's search for what's killing him.

Since 1950, this study has looked for reasons why some people stay healthy and some get heart disease, the most common cause of death in America. Over that time, it has compiled an indictment of the country's favorite

Through thousands of checkups and interviews, doctors spotted the coronary risks in the rich diets, the sedentary ways, the paunchy bellies and the smoking habits of the American peo-

When these researchers began to identify these dangers in articles in medical journals, the word spread and became the gospel of good health. Now Americans jog, watch their weight and eat more wisely. And the health of their hearts has improved.

Although they freely share credit with later studies conducted elsewhere, the doctors in Framingham think they deserve much of the credits for Americans' preoccupation with their hearts.

"We have persuaded many people that this is very likely a disease of lifestyle and that the fate of the potential heart attack victim really lies in his own hands," said Dr. William Kannel, 56, a professor at Boston University Medical School, which runs the program with the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute

When Kannel joined the study a year after it began, Framingham was a town of 28,000. The medical investigators enrolled 5,200 of them, half of the men and women in town between the ages of 30 and 62.

Every two years since then, these people have gone in for hour-long sessions of prodding and questioning and measuring. Those who moved away stop in for checkups when they return for a visit to this town - whose population is now 75,000 - 20 miles west of Boston. The study has lost track of only 2 percent of

After the checkup - consisting of an interview, treadmill and resting electrocardiograms, a sonar examination of the heart, blood tests and measurements of height, weight and lung capacity the researchers share the results with the patients' personal physicians.

Kannel says people keep coming back out of a sense of pride and responsibility. "But also New Englanders are quite frugal," he added. "They know when they're getting something pretty good for free."

When the study began, little was known about why some people die of heart attacks and others stay healthy. So doctors tested theories.

Eventually, they sketched a profile of the likely heart attack victim - the fat, harddriven man who eats lots of salt, loves fatty food, smokes cigarettes and never exercises, yet feels well and has no inkling of impending disaster.

Then they developed a mathematical formula that allows doctors to use checkup results to calculate the risk of heart trouble for patients. Among the Framingham findings:

-Even a little high blood pressure is dangerous, and it is not a natural consequence of growing old. -The risk of heart disease increases with the number of cigarettes smoked daily and with high levels of cholesterol in the blood. -The chance of sudden death from heart disease triples among people who are 20 percent overweight. -Very sedentary men are three times more likely to suffer heart attacks than are those who stay active. Women are not immune, Kannel stressed. Heart disease is also the leading women, but in general, the in-It strikes women with in-Eight years ago, the Fram- creasing force with advanc-

The doctors in Framingham shoot down theories, too. For instance, they have found no link between heart disease and family size, coffee drinking, sleeping habits or marital status.

Yet these doctors believe there's plenty more to be learned from 30 years of probing into the health of one

"We probably know more than anyone else in the world about why people get heart attacks," said Dr. William Castelli, the study's director. "And yet we only know about half the causes. The other half are yet ...

Castelli hopes to compile the ideal lifestyle for good health and longevity.

"We can delay the onset of a heart attack in everyone until after the age of 60," Castelli said. "It's a modest goal. Eat less, cut down on high-fat foods, get more exercise, relax, quit smoking. It's as simple as that."

Fall TV Season Will Continue Despite Strike

By PETER J. BOYER AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) -The fall TV season will arrive on time, after all. You'll just have to switch channels to find it. The Public Broadcasting Service, its programs unaffected by the actors' strike, will march forward with its 1980-81 season according to plan.

It is clear that the three major commercial networks won't be able to begin their season until October, and only then if the strike is settled this week. But at PBS, fall adjust to their upwardly programs are already in the mobile existence. "From Anyway, because public TV gets its shows from small independent producers and through overseas acquisitions, PBS isn't affected by the Screen Actors Guild-AFTRA troubles that have shut down the big studios and snarled the plans of ABC, CBS and NBC.

Public TV, an increasingly popular alternative to network television in normal years, should grow fat this season. Well, not fat. Healthier.

PBS picked up more viewers again last year, the first year of the plan under which most PBS stations agreed to carry network prime time programs from Sunday to Wednesday. This enhanced national advertising and promotion efforts, and, presumably, accounts for some of the increase in viewership.

While ABC, CBS and NBC are broadcasting reruns and freak shows, PBS will offer this fall schedule:

SUNDAYS: Beginning Sept. 28, "Cosmos," with host

MONDAYS: "Great Performances" begins its new seasons with "Tinker, Tailor, Soldier, Spy," a miniseries the commercial networks would love to have.

NEW YORK (AP) - Communist governments have given permission for the United Bible Societies to provide Scriptures for Christians in Eastern Europe, officials say, and new projects were being mounted to do it.

The American Bible Society, part of the multinational UBS, said official permissions for printing and importing Bibles have been received from Russia, Czechoslovakia, Hungary and Yugoslavia.

Although the permissions came too late to be included in budgeted projects this year, extra funds of about $140,000 were being sought for four Scripture-supplying projects in those areas, including:

-Providing paper and binding material for 10,000 New Testaments in modern Armenian to be printed and distributed in Soviet Armenia.

-Supplying paper and transport costs for 10,000 New Testaments in Today's Hungarian version to be printed in Hungary.

TUPELO, Miss. (AP) -Three months of monitoring prime-time television discloses that non-Christian values are depicted in a favorable light nearly three times more often than traditional Christian values, reports the National Federation of Decency.

It cited NBC as the only major network whose overall programs were more

The federation said the study was conducted by more than 500 trained volunteers in 14 states and covered 742.5 hours of programming from March 23 to June 14. The report said that 8,877 non-Christian values were favorably shown, compared to only 3,618 Christian values.

What then? Well, the president simply orders all Americans who own gold to hand it over to the government at the official U.S. exchange rate of $42 an ounce. He then turns around and sells it on the world market for, say, $600 an ounce. The resulting profit revives Social Security for a few more

Salinas Prepares To Defend Reign

FOR JAMES SALINAS, play on the links wasn't getting any easier. The competiton was getting stiffer, he hadn't really overburdened himself with consistent tournament competition, and then there was his putting - his putting game just wasn't up to par.

And those worries seemed to increase two-fold as the weeks closed to within days, before he would be obligated to defend his reign as winner of the Hereford Men's City Championship.

Mauri Montgomery

THE LOCAL GOLFER HAD COPPED the title last year (his first in the Hereford limelight before coming to this site from Borger where he took the city championship also) after skimming past Jeff Loerwald's trailing 74-75-149 with a convincing 71-72-143 two day tally for the affair.

But in his opinion, last year was last year, and Friday and Saturday's tournament could end up being an even more rugged animal than its predecessor.

"I don't know what everybody else is saying, but this year is going to be a lot tougher as far as the field is concerned," Salinas said regarding the upcoming tourney.

"LAST YEAR WASN'T ANY piece of cake either, but the field wasn't as strong overall as it will be this time I don't

"I'll probably be playing in the same flight with guys like Terry Russell, Raymond Schroeder, Dana Rush, Mack Hill (all of whom have had tournament wins in the past), and even Kelly Kitchens could be a difficult opponent if he decides to play. Everyone of them are experienced enough at the game to take the tournament - none of them can be dis-

THE PRESENCE OF THOSE golfers hovering in the back of Salinas' mind could be put in perspective, but there was still that lingering spector corrupting his overall play - the nagging knowledge his putting game had gone berserk.

And that twinge of dissatisfaction in his golf play bore the heaviest on his confidence going into the tourney.

Salinas said that as far as he was concerned, the putting aspect of the game was more crucial than any other facet in competitive play, and that in this particular contest it would play a vital role in deciding the winner.

"It is very definitely one of the more important parts of your game, especially in tourney play in my opinion," he said. "And it's my guess that whoever takes this thing will have had a good game of putting."

SPORTS

Page 6A--The Hereford Brand Thursday, August 21, 1980

"I've really been shooting consistently all summer with the exception of my putting game, and it's starting to bother me a little bit,"he said. "The funny thing is, that so far the other parts of my game have been making up for it, and I only hope that it will continue."

SALINAS, PAIRING WITH local pro Mike Horton this past weekend in the North Plains Pro Member Golf Championship, said his troubles with the short game hampered him in the first round and then dissappeared during the second.

"I really don't know what to think," he said. "My game's been somewhat like day and night - up and down because of my putting - so I've changed grips. It (the new grip) seems to have helped, but when you do something drastic like that it works on your mind."

"Last year it was just the other way around in respect to my short game because my putting saved me. I led after the first round in that tournament, but near the end I lost a shot of the lead and a 50-foot putt was my saviour - at least it turned the odds for winning around in my favor," Salinas added. THIS YEAR HOWEVER, Salinas says he needs help with his game because his efforts alone, aren't getting him the results he wants. "I've tried to get help in that segment of my game from just about everybody I know, but none of it has helped," he related. "I've gotten in a rut, and I've been missing the putts you have to make in order to pull out a good score and be successful - the little four and five-foot putts.

"It all boils down to pressure though," he said. "You can get out on a practice green and sink the ball all day long, but that all changes when you hit your first green in a tournament. You forget all the stuff you've practiced on, and that's why my chances for a win this weekend are going to be rough. I just haven't played in enough tournaments this summer."

That pressure begins for Salinas and other entrants in the scheduled two-day tourney with tee-off time at 1 p.m. Satur-

Indians Trim Chicago With No-Hitter Golf Play Finishes

BY HERSCHEL NISSENSON AP Sports Writer

George Brett resumed hitting after a one-game "slump" and the New York Yankees remained 21/2-games ahead of the Baltimore Orioles in the American League East but both events were overshadowed by Dan Spillner's near no-hitter Wednesday night.

Spillner, a Cleveland righthander with a 5.45 earned run average, came within two outs of a no-hitter before rookie Leo Sutherland singled for Chicago's only hit — an opposite-field grounder between third and short - as the Indians downed the White Sox

Spillner quickly got those outs to preserve his first AL shutout. He had two with San Diego in the National League, including a one-hitter against - who else? - the Chicago

Elsewhere, the Kansas City Royals turned back the Texas Rangers 5-3 in 12 innings, the Yankees downed the Seattle Mariners 6-4, the Orioles held off the California Angels 6-5 in 10 innings, the Oakland A's edged the Boston Red Sox 2-1, the Detroit Tigers beat the Milwaukee Brewers 8-6 and the Toronto Blue Jays trounced the Minnesota Twins 10-4. Royals 5; Rangers 3

One night after his 30-game hitting streak was snapped, Brett rapped his 15th homer and two singles in three atbats, boosting his average to .406, but Willie Aikens' sacrifice fly in the 12th inning drove in the winning run as the Royals stretched their winning streak to eight

Hal McRae opened the 12th with a double and Brett was intentionally walked for the second time. Darrell Porter also walked, loading the bases, and Aikens followed with his sacrifice fly. Brett later scored on a wild pitch.

Yankees 6, Mariners 4 Bobby Murcer drove in three runs with a single and double and Tommy John picked up his 17th victory. The Yankees took a 3-2 lead with two runs in the third inning on RBI-singles by Murcer and Reggie Jackson. New York's Bob Watson homered in the second inning and Murcer added a two-run double in the seventh. Tom Paciorek and Juan Beniquez homered for Seattle.

Orioles 6, Angels 5

Doug DeCinces' two-out single in the top of the 10th scored John Lowenstein with the winning run after the Orioles blew a three-run lead in the ninth. Lowenstein started the 10th with a walk and stole second. Lowenstein went to third on Dan Graham's long fly and DeCinces followed with his game-winning hit.

Home runs by Ken Singleton and Benny Ayala in the sixth inning helped Baltimore take a 5-2 lead but the Angels tied it with three runs in the ninth on Rick Miller's RBI-double and a two-run single by Bert Campaneris.

A's 2, Red Sox 1

Mario Guerrero's eighthinning home run, the second and last hit off Dennis Eckersley, gave Mike Norris his 17th victory. Eckersley didn't allow a hit until Mitchell Page opened the Oakland seventh with a single. He stole second as Dave Revering struck out and continued to third base when catcher Carlton Fisk's throw went into center field.

After a long argument, with Fisk and Manager Don Zimmer contending that Revering interfered as Fisk threw to second, Wayne Gross tied the score with a sacrifice fly. Tigers 8, Brewers 6

John Wockenfuss slammed a three-run homer, Tom Brookens added a two-run shot and Lance Parrish homered with the bases empty to help Gerry Ujdur pick up his first major league victory. Sixto Lezcano, Sal Bando and Ben Oglivie homered for Milwaukee.

However, Bando grounded into a triple play after the Brewers cut an 8-2 lead to 8-5 in the eighth. Third baseman Brookens, who had a perfect 5-for-5 night at bat, also

The NFL doesn't admit to playing catch-up with ABC's schedule, nor to tossing ABC a negotiating bone for the next TV contract when the current four-year agreement expires following the 1981 season.

"On paper, ABC's 1980 schedule is better than '79 and close to '78," said Val Pinchbeck, the NFL's director of broadcasting. "What we tried to do was keep in mind the fact that we can't make adjustments with Monday Night Football.

Dorsett Is Willing To Bend

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) - Dallas Cowboys running back Tony Dorsett says he didn't come to training camp "to walk out" despite his earlier threats to leave or ask to be traded unless his contract was renegotiated.

Dorsett seemed more willing to bend Wednesday, though he stopped short of saying he definitely would not leave the Cowboys, something he threatened to do earlier in the week upon the advice of his Pittsburgh attorney Steve Sokol.

"If suggested ... it would have to be weighed," Dorsett

Mike Trope, Dorsett's original contract negotiator, met with the Heisman Trophy winner at camp Tuesday and announced he had been asked to co-manage the star player with attorney Sokol.

Miss Warden Keeps Winning, Keeps Smiling

DIANE WARDEN

By ALLISON RYAN Society Editor

She stands 5-7, green eyes, slim in figure and has a face that lights up like a Christmas tree when she smiles. This is Diane Warden, 1980 Miss Hereford and the newly crowned Miss Wheatheart of the Nation. She was named Miss Hereford in June of this year and was crowned Wheatheart of the Nation at the 34th annual pageant in Perryton Monday.

Miss Warden has been in five contest to date and has won four of these beginning with Miss Hereford Junior High in 1978.

"I had heard about the contest (Miss Junior High) and decided to enter. We had to model a formal dress and then the judges decided. They called five of us back on stage, and I was chosen the winner," Miss Warden said.

The following year, she entered the Miss Teen Hereford. She won the contest and, in addition, received $250 for a college scholarship.

In June of this year, Miss Warden was a contestant in the Miss Hereford Contest. continued. She won the title and received $500 in scholarship money. "I thought I would have to wait one more year before entering the contest, because the age limit had always been 18-22 years old. This year they lowered the age to 17 her choice. She has chosen to attend years old, so I decided to enter," she said. According to Miss Warden she was contacted about a month ago by the Women's Division of the Chamber of Commerce to enter the Wheatheart contest. "I was scared to go, and when I saw how many girls were entered I thought I wouldn't have a chance. But, I decided to try my best, because I wanted to win," she

After an on-stage interview, Miss Warden was chosen to represent the wheat industry in 1980. By winning the title she was awarded $1,000 scholarship to use at the college or university of West Texas State University after graduating from Hereford High in May of 1981.

"I want to major in commuter science. I first got interested in that field when I took a data processing class in school. This summer I was able to work with a commuter, and I enjoy the work," Miss Warden said.

Winning these pageants have done more than just provide money to attend college next year in Miss Warden's opinion.

"At each contest, I have been interviewed by judges, people I don't even know. It has helped me to meet people. Being on stage you have to have confidence in yourself. This has helped me to have confidence in myself all the time. I have gained a great deal from each contest," she said.

Miss Warden is also active in school. She has been a member of National Honor Society for two years. Membership to the organization requires that a certain grade-point average be achieved and maintained.

She has been a cheerleader for four years and will participate again this year.

Miss Warden said the contest she has entered has never interfered with her school work or her friend-

"My friends kid me about it, (winning pageants) but winning a contest doesn't change me or anything," she

Her advice for others wishing to enter a contest is to think positive.

"You have to think positive about winning but not be over confident. I have seen people lose because of overconfidence. Also, it is really important to smile-not a forced smile-but a sincere smile. I guess it is easier if you think of something that makes you happy," she said.

Multi-Entertained Sister

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My sister and I are both over 40. We have never had much in common except family.

I am divorced and my sister was widowed last year. She has always been the rich one, but her husband's death put her in the millionaire class.

The woman is lonesome. Her children are married and gone. I have a large, noisy family and many friends, so I now include my sister when I have anything that faintly resembles a party. Sis enjoys these gettogethers. On several occa- is really abuse. I resent this sions she has tried to give me a $10 or $20 bill after a meal or a party. I always refuse, although I could use the money. Actually, I need a new washer or a few good pieces of furniture. Why doesn't she see this? It would be much more gracious than handing me cash. Please don't suggest that I come out and tell her. I couldn't. Is there another way to get the message across? - A Sister

DEAR SISTER: Would you feel OK if one of your children put a bug in her ear? Since she is loaded and you could use the help, it would be perfectly OK for the multientertained sister to be told that a new washer would be a great gift - and easier to accept than $10s and $20s. DEAR ANN LANDERS: The letter from the 15-year-

Statistics Can Mislead

By JOHN CUNNIFF AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) - Personal income rose $28.6 billion or 1.4 percent in July, but those who work for a living aren't likely to celebrate by going on a spending spree. They know they didn't get it.

They have learned that statistics mislead when taken out of context. And they know also that they should suspect signs of good news when their own senses tell them that we are in an economic predica-

Suspicions aroused, they ask how personal income could go off so very sharply in its own direction while other economic measures fell?

When, for example, unemployment has been rising, and second-quarter economic output fell at a near-record rate of 9 percent, and corporate profits fell more sharply than in any quarter in 25 years.

operating rate fell to 74.2 perthe lowest since July 1975. When final sales were off. When some of the biggest and once most successful companies were struggling to survive.

But most perplexing, when wages and salaries in the very same month of July fell $1.7 billion, and the income of farmers didn't rise at all.

The confusion is cleared up - but not the problem when a breakdown of the personal income figure shows that all but $4 billion of the increase resulted from what are called transfer payments.

Transfer payments are aptly named, being payments transferred to people other than those who produced the income. To beneficiaries of Social Security, to recipients of welfare, veterans benefits, unemployment.

Transfer payments leaped in July, mainly as a consequence of a 14.3 percent costof-living adjustment for Social Security recipients, an increase that wage-earners might be denied under wageprice guidelines.

The situation, that of nonproductive members of society retaining or improving their standards while economic life deteriorates for others, may be only temporary, but it generates some serious questioning.

How far, for example, can the country carry its propen-When July's factory sity to profer growing benefits on a growing population of retirees without raising economic production, and the efficiency with which it produces goods?

Isn't it futile to expect the latest increase in personal income to fuel greater sales and hoist the country out of recession? Especially when recipients of transfer payments generally have to use most of their payments for living expenses rather than discretionary purmay involve a degree of pain. Almost every family gets some benefit.

Eventually, though, it seems that such questions will force their way into consideration because those who earn the money and produce the goods might find themselves without the means to continue.

HANG LOOSE AND ENJOY LIVING Continue to love each other with true brotherly love. Don't forget to be kind to strangers, for some who have done this have entertained angels without realizing it!

Don't forget about those in jail. Suffer with them as though you were there yourself. Share the sorrow of those being mistreated, for you know what they are going through.

Honor your marriage and its vows, and be pure; for God will surely punish all those who are immoral or commit adultery.

Stay away from the love of money; be satisfied with what you have. For God has said, "I will never, never fail you nor forsake you."

That is why we can say without any doubt or fear, "The Lord is my Helper and I am not afraid of anything that mere man can do to me."

Remember your leaders who have taught you the Word of God. Think of all the good that has come from their lives, and try to trust the Lord as they do.

Jesus Christ is the same yesterday, today, and forever. So do not be attracted by strange, new ideas. Your spiritual strength comes as a gift from God, not from ceremonial rules about eating certain foods - a method which, by the way, hasn't helped those who have tried it! Hebrews 13:1-9

At Wits End By ERMA BOMBECK

In Sweden, a 12-year-old child divorced his parents on the grounds of incompatibility and irreconcilable differences.

In Chicago, another 12-year-old waved goodbye to his Russian parents, said he liked his new school, and was defecting to the United States.

It's part of a growing trend that focuses attention on the rights of children.

I remember when I was 12. Every Friday, my parents went to their friends' house to play cards. After I had teased their dog, slugged down 16 ounces of pop and listened to the radio, there was nothing left for me to do but fall asleep on the sofa. About one or two in the morning, they stood me on my feet and stuffed me into the car where I shivered myself to death all the way home.

I had been doing this for about four years when one night I suggested that they let me stay at home and sleep in my own bed. My mother wanted to know why I wanted her dead.

Most of us who are raised by intimidation and public humiliation have a difficult time relating to this new-found

Looking back, there wasn't a day that went by that I did not have sufficient grounds for dissolving the relationship. A stepfather certainly constituted "alienation of affection." Whether or not they were going to let me stay out all night at the prom was "mental anguish" beyond belief. Telling me to spend my own money for a bicycle was definitely grounds for "non-support," and switching my legs for lying was "aggravated assault." I wrote the book on "coveting" and not returning anything.

If my parents had been any different, I would have had nothing to talk about to my friends. Our parents and their inhumanity to us was all we ever talked about ... or bragged about.

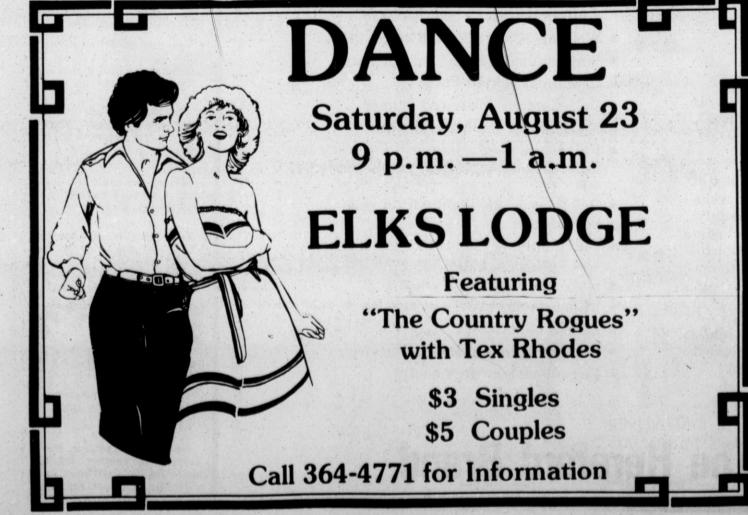

They made us salute the flag, believe in God, say thank you, flush, eat everything on our plate, keep our feet on the floor and our knees together.

We couldn't swim after we ate, pick our noses, hang on the phone, put our elbows on the table, go to bed with dirty feet, drink milk out of a carton or smoke cigarettes.

They punished us for talking back to teachers, leaving the refrigerator door open, playing with our gum, losing our bicycle and stealing.

Babies have come a long way. I'm weak. I don't want to be the one to tell my mother.

Cub Scouts Attend 'Anything Goes

Tossing eggs and mud pies and stuffing longhandle underwear with balloons were a few of the events 31 Hereford Cub Scouts participated in recently at the annual "Anything Goes" at La Plata practice field.

This is the second year the activity has been sponsored for Cub Scouts throughout the city. According to Lynn Gowdy, Den Mother for Pack 53, four packs participated including 50, 53, 54 and 151.

The events included an obstacle course, egg toss, 3-legged race, longjohn stuff, mud-pie toss, wheelbarrow race, balloon shave, ice cream feed, piggy back race with dad and tug-of-war.

All were time events with ribbons given to the top three winners.

Running the obstacle course, Keven Hansen took first place with Chad Redwine finishing second and Shawn Moore placing third.

The egg toss event consist of two-person teams tossing an egg back and forth the longest time without breaking the egg. Those winning in this event were Keven Hansen and Jason Bullard, first; Brent Berry and Brendon Banner, second; Jimmy Gowdy and Nate Smith, third.

In the 3-legged race each Cub participating had to have his brother, sister or friend as a partner. Taking the top three places were Andy Fogo and his sister Josy, first; David Armor and his sister, Kathy, second; and Russell Rayburn and Bryan Cole,

In the longjohn stuff a Cub Scout was required to put on a pair of long underwear and his partner was to stuff the underwear with balloons. The Cub Scout wearing the long underwear then runs to the finish line.

Banner placed first with Jimmy Gowdy and Matt Smith, second: and Cameron Gulley and Jerry McDonald, third.

Two teams consisting of four members came away with top places in the mud-pie

Immunizations Important for Children; Updated Records Required for School

COLLEGE STATION --Children's immunizations are important, and now's the time for "all good parents" to review their records and update their children's protection from diseases, says a health education specialist.

Immunizations "tedious business" to many people, but they don't have to be - especially if you know what's needed and keep updates records, Mary Ann Shirer stresses.

Dr. Shirer is on the home economics staff of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

First, know what your children should be protected against, and then be sure to keep immunization records in a safe, organized file - make photocopies before sending the record to school or to a child-care facility, the specialist advises.

However, remember, once a child age 15 months or over has received the mumps vaccine, he is thought to be immunized for life - so just the one dose of mumps vaccine is required in most cases.

MEASLES VACCINES FOR OLDER STUDENTS

Also, measles immunization will eventually be required for all public school students in Texas, grades one through 12.

For the 1979-80 school year, measles immunization was required for children in grades one through six.

DANGER: MEASLES OUTBREAKS, OLDER STUDENTS

Because of measles outbreaks among junior and senior high school students recently, parents may want to ask their private physicians about immunizations for children beyond the official age requirements for this current school year especially measles immunization and, perhaps, mumps immunization.

Measles can be a serious illness, Dr. Shirer warns.

Which made it perfectly safe in her mind, since, she says, "I had three stuntmen all trained in fire put me out with fire extinguishers.

Still, fire is treacherous and people can burn. "As soon as you feel hot during the course of events, you've already got second-degree burns," says. "You should never feel anything.

stay at home.

WASHINGTON (AP) Texas International Airlines has announced an experimental plan of slashed fares to entice customers who otherwise might use the train or bus or Limited numbers of discounted seats will be available for $19 on short flights such as Dallas-Fort Worth to Austin; $29 on medium flights such as Dallas-Fort Worth to Omaha, Neb.; and $59 on long-range flights such as Dallas-Fort Worth to Baltimore-Washington.

Ron Woestemeyer, an airline vice president, said Monday the tickets for the discounted seats must be purchased 14 days in advance. He said that customers will not be allowed to transfer the tickets, turn them in for refunds or switch them to other flights.

"Once you buy them, they're yours, whether you use them or not," Woestemeyer said at a news conference.

He said the plan is designed to sell tickets for seats that regularly go empty. The seats, in limited numbers, are available on 149 of the airline's 278 daily flights starting Sept. 3 from 28 of the 35 cities served by Texas International.

Woestemeyer said the airline hopes the new fares will increase its load factor, or percentage of occupied seats, by 10 points.

Prices effective — August 21 to August 23, 1980

"These are seats that never sell," he said. "We believe that with these unprecedented deep discounts, we can tap a whole new market of potential air travelers, even during a time of the year when traffic is traditionally slow and the recession is continuing." Woestemeyer said the new fares, to become a regular part of Texas International's fare structure if successful, would not affect the airline's "peanuts fare" discount plan already in operation.

Texas International applied to the Civil Aeronautics Board for the authority to offer the discount fares.

Texas cities where the new rates will be in effect on some flights include Dallas-Fort Worth, Houston, Amarillo, Austin, Beaumont-Port Arthur, Corpus Christi, El Paso, Lubbock, Midland-Odessa, McAllen and San Antonio.

A few fish facts

DEAR DR. LAMB - My husband has to go on a lowfat, low-cholesterol diet and I want to get him off beef and pork. We will use a lot of chicken but I also want to use fish more than we have in the past. I've read that fish is a low-fat, low-cholesterol food. But I've also heard that shellfish do contain lots of cholesterol. Which is correct?

I know that fish contain polyunsaturated fat, but so does corn oil and soybean oil. Is fish oil any better and if so,

Will my family get the same good quality protein in fish that they get in beef? I don't want to neglect the children's protein requirements while I'm cooking for my husband. At the same time, I don't want to cook different meals for everybody

DEAR READER - Let's start with fish, excluding shellfish. There is a world of difference in the types of fish you can choose. Not all fish are really low-fat foods. Most of them are low-calorie foods but that is not the same thing. To illustrate, about 60 percent of the calories in canned King salmon are from its fat content. Over half of the calories in rainbow trout are also from fat. By contrast, less than 5 percent of the calories in red snapper are from fat. You can get fooled because a table will tell you that only 14 percent of the weight of King salmon is fat but since a large part of its canned weight is water (most fish are 80 percent water) that still represents over 60 percent of the total calories in canned King salmon. The flat fishes, flounder and sole, are truly low in fat. Only 1 percent of the calories in haddock are

I am sending you The Health Letter number 11-12, Fish and Shellfish as Health Foods, which will provide some tables of values for both fish and shellfish that you can use as a guide. Other readers who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Shellfish tend to be low in fat, expressed as percent of total calories available.

Fish oil tends to be highly polyunsaturated and is the only major source of highly polyunsaturated fat in our diet. Most of the polyunsaturated fat in cereals and vegetables has only two spots on the carbon chain that do not have hydrogen atoms. There may be five or six such spots of unsaturation in fish oil. Is this an advantage? Perhaps. Good studies have not been done to test the difference but there are studies that show remarkable lowering of cholesterol levels after fish oil has been added to the diet. I'm not recommending a binge on fish oil to lower cholesterol but I do agree that it is wise to include an adequate amount of fish in the diet for whatever benefits it may provide.

Although there is a difference in fish, a general figure for cholesterol content is 50 to 70 mg for each 100 grams. That is adequate for your purposes. Shrimp contains 150 mg while oysters contain only about 50 mg. A table on cholesterol content of shellfish is also included in The Health Letter I am sending you.

The protein in fish and shellfish is of good quality and is equal to that you will get in poultry and beef.

--- Refinishing cans

DEAR POLLY - I have saved some nice cans that pretzels came in. I want to use them for storing staples such as flour and sugar. However, the insides of these cans have a funny, rusty look and I wonder if there is a way I could refinish them or do something that would make them safe for storing food items. Many thanks to you and your friends for helping so many people. — M.J.S.

DEAR M.J.S. - I suggest that you paint the inside of these cans with clear varnish or shellac and then put the various staples in plastic bags inside the cans. - POL-

DEAR POLLY - Not too long ago a reader asked about redoing the back of a bathroom rug to keep it from slipping. I am now making a latch hook rug and was instructed to paint the back of it with liquid latex when it is finished. This would probably also work on a used bathroom rug and can be bought in a store that sells latch hook supplies. — MARJORIE DEAR POLLY — When you take bread out of the oven, leave it in the pans for 10 or 15 minutes and then it will come out easily. Watch the time so you do not forget. If it stays in the pans too long it will be soggy.

When baking a cake, grease the bottom of the pan or line it with waxed paper but do not grease the sides, as that makes it crisp, which is undesirable if you plan to ice the cake. When a recipe calls for spices, etc. tied in a bag so as to be easily removed, I use an aluminum tea ball instead of the bag. I transfer household bleach to a squeeze bottle and label it carefully and then put it with my dishwashing detergent.

When I put the soap in the dishpan to do dishes I squirt in a teaspoon or so of the bleach to help kill germs and remove food stains. The dishes dry without spotting after they are rinsed and set on the dish drainer. — MRS.A.G.

Priests To Keep Wives

WASHINGTON (AP) -Within about a year, married Anglican priests in the United States will be able to remain married, remain priests, and become Roman Catholics.

The U.S. Catholic Conference announced a Vaticanapproved plan Wednesday under which Anglicans would be allowed to become Roman Catholics while maintaining some of their own liturgical traditions.

The plan would allow married Anglican priests to become Roman Catholic priests while remaining mar-

Catholic priests still could not marry, and the former members of his group could allowed to remarry if widowed or to become bishops.

There are only a few married Roman Catholic priests in this country now, mostly members of Eastern Rite churches. Wednesday's announcement was unusual because it made "such a large group" eligible for the married priesthood, said Robert Wonderly, a conference spokesman.

The Rev. John D. Barker of Los Angeles, the leader of a small Anglican group that has sought union with the Catholic church, said Wednesday he hopes the first Anglican priests would not be become Catholic priests in not much more than a year.

Russell Shaw, a spokesman for the Catholic Conference. responded that that seems "a reasonable amount of time.

"It's a hope that we would share, that this is not going to be delayed unnecessarily," Shaw added.

Wednesday's announcement affects only the United States. The Rev. Lawrence Purcell of the Office of the Apostolic Delegate in Washington, the emissary of Pope John Paul II, said the pope's approval came in response to a specific request from the U.S. bishops. He said he was unaware of any similar actions in other coun-

Barker said his Pro-Diocese of St. Augustin of Canterbury is no longer within the Episcopal Church, although some of its 63 clergy are. Barker said the group recognizes the teachings of the Catholic Church and the primacy of the pope.

The formal announcement came from Archbishop John R. Quinn of San Francisco, president of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops. He said Anglicans in the United States will be able to seek a "common identity" in the Roman Catholic Church.
