W Drive

With the annual United Way drive nearing the end of its campaign, 102,000 has been collected, which is 79 percent of the $130,000 goal set for this year.

According to Mark Andrews, president of Deaf Smith County United Way, several accounts are still out including the employee payroll. Also, not all United Way cards that have been worked have been turned in.

'We're not going to quit. We will keep working until we get every dime. By the end of the week, we hope to have the majority of the money collected," Andrews said.

"So far, all factors considered such as the economic situations, the community has responded very well. The division workers have done a

Andrews reported that several major contributors have been contacted but have not donated yet.

"We need to collect as much as we can in order for all the United Way Agencies to have what they need. I feel like if we don't reach our goal the break down is in the United Way, the askers not the givers," he said.

This year's goal is a drop from last year's goal of $140,000. The total amount was dropped due to one agency, Kid's Inc., leaving the program according to Andrews.

"I think some people held back to support Kids, Inc., which is good. There are 1,500 kids in the program and the parents are going to support them. I don't blame them I think it is good," he said.

"Overall, I'm very satisfied with the results of the campaign. I think everyone has done well," he concluded.

Water Meet Set

An emergency meeting of the Deaf Smith County Fresh Water Supply District No. 1 will be held Monday at 7 p.m. at the district office building on Domingo Street in the San Jose labor camp area.

Among items on the agenda is discussion and approval of election of officers plus the purchasing of a chlorinator and water pump.

Consolidation and posting of all resolutions will also be handled and the district will also review a pay raise for the operator and consider a secretary to sign checks.

Guess you've heard that the nine-digit Zip Code is headed our way next year. The current five-digit system identifies not only regions and cities, but also areas within cities. The nine-digit system will pinpoint it down to the street blocks. The normal reaction is skepticism, of course. And business people are quick to see how much it will cost just to change printed forms. However, we must remember that numbers have been important to modern civilization. The telephone company, prison wardens and IRS people have understood their advantages for a long time. A lot of young postal clerks have never been to Walla Walla or Truth or Consequences but they have been through their numbers up to 10.

That feller on Tierra Blanca Creek says the real reason the Postal Service is changing to the nine-digit code is that they suspect the Russians have broken the five-digit code and are sabotaging the service.

But when there is a lapse in postal service, most old timers blame it on the number system rather than the Russians. Everyone knows that old timers don't like changes, and they are going to be put out by the nine numbers just as much as they were by the five numbers. Sometimes we don't recognize progress even if the government crams it down our throats! Motion picture producers recognized the value of numbers when they proclaimed Bo Derek a perfect "10." But they obviously never realized how many more points could be covered if they assigned her a nine-digit zip-something like 38-24,36-010!

Cooking Up a Cloud

Familiar sights and smells mark the approach of the end of harvest season in Hereford as the Holly Sugar Corporation emits the odor of cooking sugar beets and boiling clouds of steam. Frigid temperatures such as those noted here Saturday morning made the steam cloud particularly thick as it towered above the warehouses and storage facilities, as well as the harvested sugar peets piled on the yard. The harvesting of the 1080 sugar beet crop is expected to conclude in just over a week, but the sugar extracting process will continue at the local plant beyond that point as growers look toward sweet rewards for the year's work. (Brand photo by Mauri Mon-

Divorcee Speaks Of Difficulties

Trying Transitions Follow End of Marriage

By DENISE SMITH Staff Writer

(EDITOR'S NOTE: As of the first of this year a total of 118 divorces had been granted by the district judge out of 967 on file, awaiting court hearing. This is a vast amount in a town containing 25,000 people. Below is one Hereford woman's account of her turmoil during divorce.)

As she calmly sat at the kitchen table, 27-year-old Judy Oberski revealed a story now heard too often in today's society.

With hands folded, a slight quiver audible in her voice, Ms. Oberski explained the reason she and her husband, after four years of marriage and two children, agreed to a separation and divorce.

"Well there's a lot of them, (reasons) but I guess it mostly boiled down to probably a lack of communication, which I think is a problem with almost every marriage anyway. Finances, too," she

Both individuals coming from different backgrounds were young when they entered the fantasized world of marriage. Ms. Oberski, 19, one year out of high school with a brief stint at college behind her, felt that a marriage would fit her needs at that time.

"I think that marrying at that age was probably for all the wrong reasons. I didn't really fully understand myself. I didn't really know what I wanted out of life or what I expected," the divorcee stated. Finding the marriage itself not what she really expected, the young woman thought children would bring more satisfaction to the couple's relationship. "Those answers seem a little "asinine, now" Ms. Obserski explained, but added, "A lot of girls do that, but they just don't want to admit that that's what happened." A son, Jason, entered the life of Ms. Oberski in 1973, a year after their marriage. In 1975, unexpectedly, a daughter, Robin, was added to the growing family. The couple divorced when Robin was nine months old. Entering the six month procedure, Ms. Oberski describes it as being the toughest thing she ever did. With no property or anything to divide, the young mother hoped to make the turmoil a friendly affair. Later, she arrived at the decision that "there is no such thing as a friendly divorce." "For one thing when you're married, even if you hate that person, you don't realize how much a part of you that person really is until you start splitting the sheets," she said hesitantly.

During the time she was married, the blonde, faircomplected woman says she "wouldn't even consider driving to Amarillo by myself."

Now Ms. Oberski has to tackle the most difficult task of becoming an independent woman.

"I couldn't even imagine me taking on the two kids, all the finances and responsibilities, she stated. A common problem incurred by divorced women is the feeling of loneliness, according to Ms. Oberski, and learning how to cope with the feeling and dealing with it when it came along.

In Ms. Oberski's case, the children were hardest for her to cope with. With my children, their father was not allowed to see them, so I had the total responsibility which I was not used to having," she said with concern in her blue-green

Ms. Oberski had a most supportive family which without, according to the divorcee, she could not have made it through the ordeal.

The young mother with her two children lived in her sister's home the first six months in Guymon, Okla.

"The reason I say I was lucky is because I'm not sure that there would have been times I wouldn't have gone back to my husband that first six months. I don't care who they are (divorcees) or how secure they say they are, that first six months anybody is half looney," stated the mother.

During that difficult initial six months, the divorcee when at home alone, would pick up the phone and call her husband to talk.

It took the 27-year-old mother a year and a half to adjust to her new life alone. A year of that time she spent in Hereford with her parents.

"One day it hit me to just look at life as if it was going to be just me and those kids for the rest of my life, and then if someone did come along that was fine, they could fit into our lives, she explained. A married couple usually friends. When a person and man decide to separate their interests and common ideas with friends drastically change, she related. Ms. Oberski spoke of an oc-

"I felt so out of place, and again, that's when you realize how much a part of you that person was, cause they're not there."

She said she was rejected by many of her friends after ing, Ms. Oberski had to begin making new friends.

Suing Iran HOUSTON (AP) - International Systems & Controls Corp. has filed a the suit Friday in federal court, saying a Candian subsidiary had almost completed work on a pulp paper plant and was half finished on another project when the Iranian revolution toppled the shah's regime.

Since then, the subsidiary has been unable to collect on the contracts and has filed for bankruptey in Canada, according to the suit.

Almost $200 million in cliams have been filed in Houston federal court against the Iranian government. The suits are being consolidated into one under U.S. District Judge Carl O. Bue

The hospital source said the birth was kept secret for fear publicity would interfere with the legal action necessary for Mrs. Kane to relinquish parental rights to the boy.

Mrs. Kane was impregnated by artificial insemination, using the husband's sperm, after she responded to a classified advertisement and news stories about the couple's search for a surrogate mother.

They had spent several years looking for an answer to their infertility problem - blocked fallopian tubes before talking to Dr. Richard Levin, a Louisville infertility specialist.

Levin and Katie Brophy, a lawyer, handled the arrangement through a service called Surrogate Parenting Associates. The service has not said how much money is involved. It reportedly is between $13,000 and $20,000, which includes travel and all surrogate, legal and medical fees and expenses

Ayatollah Considers Hostage Release

KUWAIT (AP) - Iranian revolutionary leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini is considering a proposal to turn over the 52 American hostages to U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim, the independent Kuwaiti newspaper Al-Watan reported today. Quoting Paris-based sources close to the Iranian regime, the paper said the proposal was presented to Khomeini by Iranian Prime Minister Mohammad Ali Raji, who visited the United Nations in October.

The newspaper quoted the sources as saying Iranian President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr was leaning toward letting the non-aligned movement handle the hostage release.

One of the non-aligned nations, Algeria, currently is serving as the intermediary between the United States and Iran in the negotiations.

The speaker of Iran's Parliament, meanwhile, was quoted in Beirut, Lebanon, as saying Iran is getting all the weapons and supplies it needs, despite the U.S. boycott imposed after the hostages were taken. Iran and its neighbor, Iraq, have been waging a war at the head of the Persian Gulf for eight weeks.

Miss World Quits

LONDON (AP) — Eighteen-year-old West German Gabriella Brum renounced her new title as Miss World 1980 on Friday after saying her 52-year-old Los Angeles fiance was "not too pleased" with the victory. Pageant organizers said they would name a new winner Monday.

Miss Guam, 19-year-old Kimberly Santos, a travel consultant who finish ed second in the contest Thursday night, was flying home Friday via San Francisco without knowing she was the potential replacement.

Miss Brum, a blue-eyed blonde who stands 5-feet 11-inches tall, was crowned before a capacity crowd of 6,000 at London's Royal Albert Hall and a worldwide television audience estimated at 400 million. The title carries a cash prize of $12,000 and a $36,000 contract for 12 months of traveling commercial and promotion

The first indication that all was not well came at the traditional morningafter champagne breakfast with the Lord Mayor of London, where Miss Brum told reporters she had called her fiance, Benno Bellenbaum, a film cameraman in Los Angeles.

He was "not too pleased" she had won, Miss Brum said.

"I think he did not expect it, like I did not expect it," the British Press Association quoted her as saying.

Pageant organizer Julia Morley issued the announcement of the resignation, saying Miss Brum "told us she does not wish to hold the title of Miss World 1980 and having discussed the matter with her, we have agreed to respect her request."

She declined to spell out why Miss Brum renounced the title, saying simply "This morning she was a very happy young lady and looking forward to her time as Miss World...

"I think if any of us had any idea of this before the contest we would have liked to have been told."

Asked if the rifle was loaded. Anton said Garwood removed the clip from the weapon and showed it to. another POW who wanted to know if there was any ammunition in it. "I don't know. if the clip had any ammunition in it," Anton said.

Garwood, a balding. 34-year-old Indiana native, is. on trial before a jury of five. Marine officers on charges of desertion, collaboration, trying to entice American troops, to surrender and mistreating two fellow prisoners. If convicted, he could be sentenced. to life imprisonment and made to forfeit $143,000 in back pay now being held in Anton said he saw Garwood wearing an enemy uniform without any insignia of rank and that a group of POWs once found Garwood spying outside their tent.

A dark-haired career Army officer with bushy eyebrows, Anton said under crossexamination by defense attorney John Lowe that he never doubted Garwood wanted to return to the United States.

Prosecutors have indicated that part of the foundation for conviction on the desertion charge would be that Garwood remained voluntarily in

"I believed all along that if they offered him to go home on any one day he would have gone," Anton said in response to a question by Lowe.

Garwood disappeared at age 19 while driving a jeep in the Da Nang area in September 1965. In March 1979 he passed a note to a Finnish businessman in Hanoi with a request to be repatriated.

Anton, who is stationed at Fort Dix, N.J., was captured when his helicopter was shot down in January 1968. He was a captive for 62 months.

Texas Republicans and Ex-Democratic Foe Praise James Baker's Selection HOUSTON (AP) - Texas

Republicans and a former Democratic foe have praised the selection of James A. Baker III as White House chief of staff in the new Republican adminstration.

Texas Attorney General Mark White, who defeated Baker for the post in the 1978 election, called the 50-yearold Houston attorney "a man of integrity and ability." "I think he has a great talent for organization and an inderstanding of the problems facing this nation,"

White said Friday after a spokesman for President-Elect Ronald Reagan announced Baker's selection. "Reagan will have one of the best run staffs of any president," White predicted. Former Watergate Prosecutor Leon Jaworski, who shunned President Carter and headed a Democrats and Independents for Reagan-Bush, said if Baker's selection "is an indication of the caliber of the staff that an is establishing, it ould be a truly outstanding group and gives promise of a very successful White House administration " Baker, an attorney with the Houston firm of Andrews, Kurth, Campbell and Jones, worked on the campaigns of former presidents Richard Nixon and Gerald Ford. He served as undersecretary of commerce in the Ford adminstration. He also managed the presidential campaign of George Bush, now vice president-elect, until Bush withdrew and supported the Chester Upham, chairman nomination of Reagan.

of the State Republican Executive Committee, called Baker "one of the brightest stars in Texas" who possesses the ability to "get right to the heart of a matter."

Houston Mayor Jim Mc-Conn said he believed Reagan had made a "very wise decision." McConn called Baker who would be "friendly to the city of Houston."

The Bottom Line

'At recent Collingsworth County farm organization meetings, resolutions were passed opposing the education of illegal alien children. In Brownsville, a suit was filed this month to halt the education of those children until the funding burden on the local school can be straightened out. In Hereford the recent onion strike has brought attention to the activities of the Texas Rural Legal Aid group. In Castro County TRLA forced a redistricting so that Spanish surname citizens would be in a majority in one precinct.

All of these events are in response to the economic imperative of cheap farm labor. The labor that happens to be cheap at the moment is that of migrant Mexican-American farm workers who are U.S. citizens and that of Mexican citizens who have crossed the border illegally.

The reason that there is an incentive for these people to come and work in the fields of West Texas is that there is work to be had. It is hard work at low pay ... work that most Americans do not want or

The economic fact underlying low pay is low commodity prices.

And the reason commodity prices are low is that the federal government's policies have encouraged high production and low prices.

There is little doubt that the majority of growers would prefer to pay high wages and lush benefits to the people that work for them. They would have a happy, stable work force and they wouldn't have to worry about labor problems.

And there's no doubt that people could be found to take jobs on those conditions.

The problem occurs at the marketplace. If all agricultural producers are forced to pay high wages, then the price for their commodities will rise because they must make more money to continue to produce their crops. But higher priced commodities would be undersold by foreign competition, competition which the U.S. government encourages through its trade

And here is the heart of the problem. The federal government wants food produced cheaply. It also wants high wages and good working conditions for farm workers.

These conditions have conspired to pit farmers against laborers when they should be working together for higher farm commodity prices. And they have resulted in a clash of cultures along the border

The bottom line is that cheap food and cheap farm labor go together and you can't have one without the other. We can have high-priced food and high-priced farm labor, just as we have high-priced United Auto Workers labor and high-priced automobiles, or we have the system we now have. But it is impossible to have it both ways.

Last hurrah for a lame duck

A new Congress may have been elected Nov. 4, but we aren't quite finished with the old one.

It's back on the job in the special session scheduled when it became apparent some weeks back that the houses were not going to be able to dispose of all their priority business before the election recess.

It is a lame-duck session, that ornament of the American system that permits representatives of the people those same beople have repudiated at the polls to continue to conduct the

As it has turned out with the unexpectedly large Republican ins in Congress, this duck is not merely lame — it's close to ing a basket case. The familiar power brokers who have en running things for so long on Capitol Hill are still technilly in charge, but won't be after the first of the year. Partic-cally in charge, but won't be after the first of the year. Particularly in the case of the Senate, where the voters have sent in an entire new team of Republican committee chairman.

Some of these are already sounding as if they were in charge. Whether anything at all constructive comes out of this session may well depend upon the extent to which the Democrats they are supplanting are willing to play along.

While there is plenty on the agenda to test the cooperative will, the dominant issue is already apparent — tax legislation.

The new Republican leadership is pushing for enactment of the proposed $39 billion cut hammered out in the Senate Finance Committee before the recess. It differs in a number of respects from the president-elect's preferences, but has his endorsement as legislation he could live with.

There is some sentiment in the Republican ranks, however, for postponing action until next year and the convening of the new Congress. Which may be the result anyway if this session ends up working at cross purposes and stalemates itself. Whatever develops, neither old nor new Congresses can afford to botch tax legislation. It is too vital to the long-term health of the economy.

Lame-duck sessions have a bad name because the situation ermits defeated legislators to vote irresponsibly, disregarding the interests of constituents they no longer represent. It coesn't have to be that way, however. There is also the possibility that, relieved of conflicting political pressures, retiring ut conscientious representatives may feel freer than ever efore to act in what they truly perceive to be the public's best

It's a possibility the 96th Congress has a rare opportunity to take reality with its last hurrah.

Looking back and ahead

And one last word on the subject of elections: It's not too oon to begin thinking about 1984.

Not about potential candidates, although some are undoubtedly already revving up their ambitions. But about the procedures by which we select a president.

The campaign just finished was, by most evaluations, too much. It started too early, ground on too long and, above all, avolved too many primaries. That can be changed and variets plans for doing so — such as regional primaries or a few ized primary dates — have been under discussion for some ime. It's time to move from discussion to action, possibly brough the states working together to harmonize and rationalize their individual procedures or, if necessary, in Congress. This election also dramatized another problem: The effect pon voting in the West of early returns in the East. Millions in voters in California, the Northwest and Hawaii had not ven gone to the polls when the networks informed them that was all over. It may have made no difference in the presidential race. But, by encouraging many late voters to stay ome, it conceivably could have altered the outcomes of local aces.

But Are We Ready to be Led?

President-elect Reagan is ready to lead us, but we are ready thus to be led?

Last Election Day there was a cartoon in the Wall Street Journal. It showed a husband and wife at the breakfast table. He is reading the newspaper. She is saying, "The least you can do is to wait until they swear them in before you cuss them out."

Another election should have taught the pundits, the pollsters and the politicians, Never underestimate the quiet American. He does not shout his demands and he does not think much of those who do. WASHINGTON - The 1980 elections are now history and what history they have made! People know America is a great country - the greatest on earth. But they're fed up with a government that offers them only excuses, scapegoating, press releases and empty rhetoric, even as it continues to spend and tax them into the poorhouse. Except for liberal members of Congress - and now, many ex-members as well - just about everyone in America hungers for a real change. They want to see this country return to the principles of private enterprise where human progress is a natural product of the economic progress that flows from a strong private economy.

There's no magic about it really. It's just that the public is much smarter than people in Washington are willing to must rebuild our economy, and restore our proud growth of productivity that we enjoyed for many years, by getting government spending under control, by stimulating after-tax rewards for work. savings and investment, and by killing off the ridiculous about so often in this column.

What's more, everywhere in the country there is a great faith that all of these things can be done, and that we can reign our position of preeminence in the world. And even before the big journey begins in January, we will see a lot of evidence around the world that people once again have confidence and faith in the American system.

The biggest danger we face is that too many people might expect too much too soon. We must recognize that these problems were not all created in the last four years and that they will not disappear in the first six months of the new Administration. If we are, then future generations will look back on this election as the threshold of a new age of economic probelieve. Today, there is a gress - which, itself, is the broad consensus that we key to all human progress.

What happened to Carter? He could not find a slogan. A President has to have one. He must come up with a catchy phrase which seems to say something but doesn't. By the time Carter got there all the slogans had been used. He was left with grits and peanuts. Whatever crisis a President faces he just brings out the old slogan and makes it seem like part of his great plan. If the past Presidents faced the current inflation they would have sloganed their way out.

Roosevelt would have had a fireside chat and convinced us his new deal on money was the best thing since sliced bread.

Harry Truman would have given big business "Heck" (this is a family newspaper) and we would have known who to blame.

Ike would have said, "We need to do something. The price of green fees is going out of sight." Ike had no slogan but after all, he won the Ford would have said, "Congress needs to do something." Ford had no slogan. No second term either.

So, Carter was left with no slogan. His aides tried. Maybe they tried too hard. They had a new slogan every week. This included such gems as:

Fogged In

MOST FOLKS don't like a dense fog, or a heavy snowfall, one of those that blots out everything beyond fifty or a hundred feet. People get a little spooked and disoriented when they can't see horizons.

But those hemming-in fogs and winter mists and snowfalls really aren't all bad, if they force us now and then to take a smaller view of things. If we can see only a few things close around us-a shrub here, a gatepost there, some dead leaves in a puddle or soft snow stacked high on a motionless twig, a set of rabbit tracks vanishing into the blankness - then we see those things more clearly, and perceive them more thoughtfully perhaps. We might never have noticed those little close-in things or considered their meanings on a clear day.

IN A SENSE, it's like standing in the middle of a circle of lantern light in the all-enveloping night; then, too, your world grows small, and what you're most interested in is what you can see in your circle of light. Daylight is when you pay attention to the distances.

It wasn't too long ago in this country when most of the people lived in farms and towns, where the outdoors wasn't all lighted up at night, and the members of the family tended to like that little circle of light that was home, and hung around it pretty close in the evenings, and paid a lot of attention to what was at home.

Then in the cities and towns where most of the population lives, all the outdoors got lit up with streetlights and neon and headlights and marquees, and people, like moths, were drawn off into the brightness at night, and didn't sem to pay as much attention to what was in that little soft pool of light called home, called family. It was that way for a while.

AND THEN along came the strangest viewsqueezer of all: a little tube a few inches wide, glowing with an inner light, and seeming to contain the whole world.

People went back to their homes in the evenings and sat down in the darkness looking at that little screen and imagining they were looking at the real world. And they stopped going out into the city lights again. Since the little tube doesn't require any thought, pretty soon the fog settled in again - but this time inside the viewer's head instead of around it.

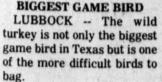

And there are those who believe that, now that the fog is inside our heads, we can't see and feel the real meaning of things at all - in fair weather or foul.

AND SO sometimes, when we get that bewildered feeling from seeing on the screen too much of what might or might not be the real world, perhaps we should go out and walk enveloped in the fog or the snow - and look at rabbit tracks, dead leaves, snow-covered twigs, thoughtfully. That is, with the clarity inside the head and the fog outside.

The fall turkey season in Texas is scheduled at the same time as deer season which is Nov. 15 - Jan. 4 in north-central Texas and Nov. 22-Dec. 7 in the Panhandle. Turkey hunters in counties not having deer season, should check the 1980-81 Texas hunting guide for the correct turkey dates.

Since the fall turkey are hunted at the same time as deer in most areas, most of the big birds are bagged when they happen to come within range of a deer stand or a stationary deer blind.

Texas hunters can increase their chances at bagging a wild turkey if they will carry a turkey caller with them in the field. One of the best ways to hunt fall turkey is to locate them, split the flock, setup a fast blind and call up the scattered flock.

This type of hunting is quite successful due to the instinct of the wild turkey to get back together with their flock once they are separated.

Many times, you will scatter a turkey flock by accident while deer hunting. Stay close to the same area and either find an adequate hiding place or build a fast blind.

This blind will be successful if it will hide you and your movements while waiting for the birds or shooting and if you can see all around you at least as far as your firearm will shoot effectively.

Another fall turkey hunting method is to move as close as possible to a feeding flock and try calling them within

If you forget your turkey caller, try figuring the direction the turkey are feeding or going to water and setup a blind along that trail.

Whichever method you use for fall turkey hunting, use camouflage clothing with the hunter blaze orange pattern. Other hunters must be able to identify you in your blind as you call for turkey.

SHOOTING COSTS RISE LUBBOCK - Many Texans enjoy shooting and hunting and the cost of participating in these sports has risen right along with food and fuel.

If you enjoy the outdoor shooting sports, reloading could make it possible to enjoy the sport longer at the same price.

Reloaded ammunition run from one-half to one-tenth the cost of factory-loaded cartridges. This would mean more practice with your firearm and a better chance to score at targets or game.

Even though reloaded ammunition is less expensive than factory shells, it does not mean that they are not accurate or dependable. In fact, most expert shooters reload their own ammo because they can pick the right bullet or shot for the job.

The cost of reloading will depend upon the tools and equipment you purchase. You can purchase dependable tools and components such as primers, powder, bullets or shot that won't exceed a day's shooting cost of factory am-

Also, you will not put your local ammo dealer out of business due to the fact that he usually carries the components you will need to reload or he can order them for you.

The important factor on reloading your own ammo is safety. Be sure to follow the manufacturer's suggestions on the cartons and get a reloading manual before you attempt to reload.

Always use the correct primer and powder for your firearm's ammo. Always wear safety glasses

Trout Stocked In Four Texas Lakes

AUSTIN - Trout anglers can again savor the flavor of High Country fishing in a down-home, downstream fishery provided by the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department's winter rainbow trout stocking program. The program is already underway with several thousand fish stocked and more scheduled for release in the coming months.

This year, the department has purchased approximately 110,000 rainbows for release at four Texas locations: the Guadalupe River below Canyon Lake, the Brazos River below Possum Kingdom, Boykin Springs Recreation Area near Jasper and Forest Park near San Angelo.

The Guadalupe River already has received several thousand rainbows and is scheduled for additional AUSTIN - More waterfowl than usual could be in the state for the eastern region duck hunting season if current habitat and weather conditions in the midwestern states persist.

"The midwestern states are generally dry, critically dry in some areas, and the lack of surface water should make for a swift passage of ducks to Texas. Also, the early onset of harsh winter weather in the Midwest could further speed the migration," said Texas Parks and Wildlife Department waterfowl program leader C.D. Stutzenbaker.

"If the situation continues, we could have more ducks down than normal, even though duck production has

The arriving waterfowl will find excellent habitat conditions on the upper Texas coast with plenty of water in the marshes and abundant waste grain in the rice fields.

Similar conditions exist in the middle and lower coastal regions where rains came in time to fill the freshwater ponds and promote the growth of vegetation for waterfowl forage.

Reports from all along the coast indicate huntable numbers of ducks with more arriving every day.

sunrise to sunset. The late segment of the split season will be Dec. 13, 1980 through Jan. 18, 1981.

As in previous season, the daily bag limit for ducks is reached when the point value of the last bird taken added to the total value of all other ducks reaches or exceeds 100 points. The season's point system is as follows: 100-point ducks -- canvasbacks; 70-points ducks mottled ducks, mallard hens, wood ducks, Mexican-like ducks, redheads and hooded mergansers; 10-point ducks gadwalls, pintails, teat, scaup, shovelers, widgeon and common mergansers; 20-point ducks - all species and sexes not listed above.

In a change from last hunting season, fulvous whistling ducks will be protected along with black-bellied whistling ducks and masked ducks.

Hunters are reminded that nontoxic steel shot requirements for all gauges of shotguns will be in effect in the J.D. Murphree Wildlife Management Area and Sea Rim State Park in Jefferson County. Steel shot for all gauges will also be required in the Sea Rim National Wildlife Refuge and the McFaddin Marsh National Wildlife Refuge, also in Jefferson County.

The goose hunting season east of U.S. Highway 81 also opens Nov. 8 and will continue through Jan. 18, 1981. The daily bag limit is five light geese and one dark goose, with the possession limit twice the daily bag limit.

ed in early March.

Possum Kingdom and Boykin Springs are set for initial stocking in mid-November, with subsequent shipments of trout planned at two-week intervals through early March.

The 15-acre lake in Forest Park, which was added to the trout program for the first time last year, will receive the colorful little fish by the end of the month; this stocking will be followed by three additional releases scheduled at three-week intervals through mid-February.

The early releases will be primarily eight-inch, catchable-sized trout, while the later stockings will include many 10-inch fish.

Since the department began the put-and-take trout fishery in 1966, releasing the fish in the Guadalupe River, the program has spread to other locations and has grown into one of the most popular inland fisheries programs.

A major reason for this is that generations of hatchery rearing have made the little rainbows eminently catchable by fishermen with varying degrees of experience. Fly rods and dry flies, ultralight spinning gear and small spinner baits or the simple pole and line baited with canned whole kernel corn all work successfully.

A daily creel limit of five trout and possession limit of 10 remains in effect for the popular little fish.

Shot Placement Key to Downing Deer

UVALDE - Sunup is rapidly appraoching on a cool, crisp autumn morning as the hunter waits patiently, perched atop a deer stand somewhere in the Lone Star State. As the sun's rays begin to flicker across the eastern horizon on this somber Saturday morning, 1980 deer season has officially begun.

Somewhere directly ahead, the hunter hears brush crackle and a twig snap. Out of a mesquite thicket less than 100 yards away, a magnificent 12-point buck emerges into the open field. Beads of sweat begin to pop out across the hunter's forehead as a chill crawls quickly up his spinal column at the sight before him. He draws a deadly aim and fires, watching in tense exhilaration as the tremendous beast falls in its tracks.

True, this situation may

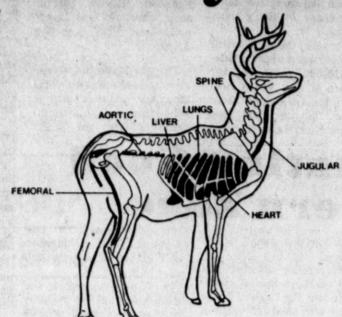

"Fantasy Island," but segments will be reinacted in varying degrees thousands of times this fall. Some hunts will end successfully; others will result in sheer frustration and disappointment.

Regardless of the situation, accurage shot placement is mandatory for a quick, humane kill, says Dr. Dwight Guynn, a wildlife specialist based in Uvalde with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System.

According to Guynn, hunting accuracy begins with proper preparation and care of the rifle. Before loading he urges hunters to make sure the barrel is clear of obstructions. Check rifle action for tightness, smooth operation and rust or dust. Magazines should feed and eject shells properly. Also, tighten scopes

Sighting in the rifle before hunting can be a critical factor, says Guynn. This can be done by firing at ranges of 50, 100 and 200 yards, distances at which most deer will be shot. It's also important to sight-in with exactly the same grain bullet you plan to hunt with. Then it takes dedicated repetitious practice in all hunting positions, learning limitations while improving accuracy.

Now, assuming the hunter has sufficiently sharpened his accuracy, where should the shot be placed for the most effective kill? Knowing a deer's skeletal structure and exact location of vital organs and arteries can be helpful.

Guynn prefers a shot to the lungs when possible. He says the lungs form the biggest vital area, allowing for a shot be somewhat off-target and still be effective. A shot missing the lungs a little high may sever the spine, one a little low may hit the heart, a little farther back may strike the liver, and one too far forward could break the shoulder. Any of these hits can result in a quick kill.

A shot into the brain or one severing the spine both achieve quick, definite results but must be accurately placed because of the small targets. If a trophy mount is desired, shots into the head or neck may do serious and even irreparable damage to those portions needed for moun-

Quick kills can also be achieved with a shot into the heart. But like those to the brain and spine, heart shots are difficult to place and can miss or result in a broken leg.

Guynn says shoulder shots are effective and provide a large target area. The one big disadvantage to this shot placement is more meat for the table.

Shots that sever a major artery such as the femoral artery, aortic artery or jugular vein are quickly fatal, but these are extremely difficult targets. Hence, Guynn discourages this type shot placement.

The wildlife specialist says a slightly angling-away shot is ideal for the hunter because it presents a good shot at vital organs with only light ribs to shoot through. He advises hunters to line up on the far shoulder for correct shot placement.

When deer are quartering away, a shot placed just in front of the hind quarter will pass forward, enter the rib cage from behind and angle toward the opposite shoulder. Guynn says this type shot will normally hit the liver, lungs and possibly the heart. However, the target area is much narrower than the classic broadside shot. Hunters unsure of their accuracy are advised to pass this one up in lieu of a better

Straight-away shots, at their best, are also questionable and not recommended. Here, two slim chances exist. From a powerful rifle. a shot just under the tail through the paunch into the chest areaor one through the center of the neck into the spine is about all a hunter can hope for. Both possibilities present a small and difficult Guynn says a shot under the tail must pass between the hip bones through a softball-sized opening in the pelvic girdle with enough force to travel almost the entire body length into the chest area. In addition, this type shot leaves little blood trail. making tracking difficult.

Guynn strongly believes that patience is a hunter's best ally. "When the opportunity for a shot arrives, don't rush it," he stresses. "Choose your shot carefully and wait for the angle that results in a good, clean kill."

Head Coach Sleeps Like a Baby

BREWING SEASONS - THOSE NOT quite. soup yet, but rapidly reaching the boiling point before that initial leap into an unpredictable athletic campaign - send most coaches into a fit of unrestfulness. Sleepless nights lend themselves to more sleepless nights until either the coach or the year's opening ribbon cutting vanished into the history books.

That wasn't exactly the case with girl's varsity basketball coach Larry Sowers. He was an exception to the obsolete rule, a tribute to the Sominex-less nap.

Mauri Montgomery

IN AN ALMOST DETACHED WAY, he reflected what he thought would be Hereford's best shot at a district cage crown in some time. His hands weren't shaking and there wasn't a perceptible twitch of nervousness in his eye as he talked about his team's first tilt of the year against the Pampa Harvesters Saturday night in Pampa - he had obviously been sleeping like a

What did the mentor know that preseason forecasts didn't? Polls had rated the female Whiteface crew near or at the bottom of the district 4-5A conference.

MAYBE SOWER'S COLLECTIVE CALM rested in the hard reality that only three members off last year's 16-11 squad had been lost to graduation. Six of the returning veterans were exactly that - veterans. Each had seen extensive varsity playing time and experience. Two of those returning six had received second team All-District honors.

"I think we're a lot better than we were last year because we've improved in some areas that needed work at the end of our season a year ago," Sowers said. "Our ball handling is better, our shooting is better and we are generally stronger than we were a year ago.

"I KNOW WE'RE GOING TO BE a better ball club, but that doesn't mean we'll have an easier job of it this year. We slipped up on quite a few teams last year because we were rated in the bottom of the heap just like we are this time," he said. "But this year I think they will be watching out for us. They know we are capable of beating 'em now and they won't be taking us as lightly as they used to."

Yet despite his optimisim about the upcoming season and the fundamental obstacles the HHS team has ridded itself of, Sowers admittedly is still concerned with some other improvements the team needs to make in order to fullfill its scheme for league contention.

"WE'VE GOT A LOT TO WORK ON between pre-district and district play still," he said. "We had trouble with our rebounding last year - not necessarily because of a height disadvantage, but because we never did really go after the ball aggressively. And I thought we had gotten better on that until we played scrimmaged Bovina Tuesday. We're still not going to the boards well and we have to if we're going to compete.'

Turnovers, another culprit that hampered the squad's progress a year ago, have been diminished to a great degree says the coach.

"I BELIEVE WE HAVE JUST ABOUT taken care of that problem. It's still there, but not with as much frequency and that's due to our experience level this year I think. We should progress even more in that portion of our play early, and hopefully it will be alleviated by the time we start conference play."

But the mentor, even though prompted to cite specific problems facing his squad at this point, was searching blindly for pitfalls to claim as dependents in the crew's play form.

He had just about everything he could hope for with the six returning cagers in addition to a complementing bench list.

Amy Schumacher with a 5.4 average, and (5-10 jr. post) Deborah Rogers with an average of 3.9 points per conflict.

Other players expected to see action this year include; Joyce High who started for the junior varsity squad a year ago, Stephanie Foster who will be listed as the varsity's only sophomore during the 1980-81 campaign, 5-6 senior shooter Deannette Vigil who saw varsity play as a junior last year, 5-8 junior Carrie Jones and Jill Pickens a big leaper who was enlisted from the HHS girl's high jump team.

"WE'VE GOT SOME GOOD PEOPLE coming back to help us," said Sowers. "I expect Terry Harkins to have her best year this go-around because she's worked awful hard - probably the hardest of any individual I've ever had the opportunity to coach. She will be a key in our play because she plays to her potential every game.'

"I think she and the others on the varsity plus a few junior varsity players give us prospects for taking the championship this year," he added. "We'll be facing some tough opponents as always, but this year we have what it takes to compete with them. Last year we would have realistically had to play way over our heads every game in order to be contenders because of our lack of experience. This year the story is different. I think we'll be the contenders we wanted to be last year - if we aren't I'll be disappointed because we won't have to play over our heads this season."

NO, SOWERS SEEMED TO BE the exception to the rule as far as restless nights were concerned before the start of the new season - he slept like a baby. His method of hitting slumber needed no pills. He simply counted all the sheep leaping over the league fence (all six plus a few more).

Earl the Pearl, Payton to Duel in Clash

CHICAGO (AP) - Earl Campbell of the Houston Oilers and Walter Payton of the Chicago Bears will provide one battle within the war Sunday when the two teams meet before a sellout crowd of more than 64,000 in Soldier

"Of course it's going to be billed as Campbell versus Payton," said Bear Coach Neill Armstrong, "Why not? Although they won't be on the field at the same time, they are two of the best running backs in all of football."

Campbell, who led the Oilers to a 38-34 victory over New England Monday night when he carried 30 times for 130 yards and two touchdowns, leads the NFL in rushing with 1,094 yards.

Payton has 899 yards and is third in the league, 18 yards behind Billy Sims of Detroit. Payton went over the 100-yard mark for the fifth time this season in last Sunday's 35-21 victory over Washington and now has rushed over 100 yards 39 times in his career.

"I don't approach this game any differently and I'll do what I've always done," said Payton in reference to his first meeting against Campbell in a regular season game. "It's not Earl Campbell versus Walter Payton. It's the Houston organization versus the Chicago organization."

Houston has a 7-3 record with four straight victories and is tied for first place in the American Conference Central with Cleveland. The Bears are in the cellar in the National Conference Central with a 4-6 record but are only two games behind first-place Detroit.

In addition to Campbell, the Oilers had a hot hand from quarterback Kenny Stabler in the victory over the Patriots. Stabler completed 15 of 17 passes for 258 yards and three touchdowns. He was 8-of-8 in the first half when Houston took a 24-0 lead.

"We knew it wouldn't be enough," said Stabler of the 24 points. "Those guys are high-powered. Shoot, I thought 38 might not be enough against New England."

It nearly wasn't and the Oilers didn't lock it up until Greg Stemrick intercepted a Steve Grogan pass in the end zone with 35 seconds left to

"I'm glad they won," said Armstrong, "Teams that lose on Monday night come back with a lot more intensity, the following Sunday.

"But Houston is tough defensively and Campbell is the big problem. It's Campbell run, run, run. Even when you know he's going to run, he's hard to stop. He has tremendous thighs and those big thigh pads he wears are like weapons. One man isn't going to bring him down."

The Bears have come up with another dimension in their offense in quarterback Vince Evans who succeeded Mike Phipps and will be making his fifth straight start.

Evans completed 11 of 18 passes for 210 yards against the Redskins including touchdown strikes of 40 and 12 yards to James Scott and 54 yards to Payton.

"He's a regular now and our passing efficiency definitely has picked up," said Armstrong. "He's throwing touchdown passes. He's staying in the pocket longer, reads the defenses better and he's getting better at spotting his receivers."

Evans also can scramble and has rushed for 138 yards, scoring four touchdowns.

Maverick Manager Contemplates Trade

general manager of the Dallas Mavericks will accompany the team to Los Angeles today and discuss the possibility of trading away No. 1 draft pick Kiki Vandeweghe to the Los Angeles Lakers.

Vandeweghe, the all-America center who led UCLA's Cinderella journey to the NCAA finals last season. made it clear he wanted to play only for the Lakers or New York Knicks and elected to remain in school rather than sign with the expansionteam Mavericks.

The Lakers have offered to give Dallas $500,000 and their No. 1 and 2 choices in the 1981 National Basketball Association draft, but the Mavericks rejected that offer, since Los Angeles' No. 1 pick would be at the bottom end of the first Instead, Dallas wants Cleveland's No. 1 pick in the 1982 draft - which the Lakers have acquired - and some feel that pick could be the first selection in the entire draft. Los Angeles has refused to give up that pick for Vandeweghe.

Dallas GM Norm Sonju feels Los Angeles may be willing to raise the ante for Vandeweghe after losing 6-8, 230-pound forward Mark Landsberger to an injury last Allen Stone, director of media relations for the Mavericks, said Sonju feels there's a "10 percent chance" some kind of trade will be made.

Even though Vandeweghe isn't playing for Dallas, the Mavericks have balked at trading him because it might give future draft picks the idea they could hold out and get the Mavericks to trade them to a team they prefer

"If we're going to set the precedent, we want to get just compensation for him,"

Stone said. "If we're going to trade Kiki just for the sake of trading him, we'll wait until just before the draft next year. We're not going to trade from a position of weakness."

Dallas has the worst record in the NBA now, and if the Mavericks finish as the bottom team in the league's Western Conference they would flip with the worst team in the Eastern Conference for the right to draft

Judge Rules Team .500 On Season

DALLAS (AP) - Greenville High School football players and fans think they're 10-0 this year, but a federal judge says they'll have to settle for a .500 season.

U.S. District Judge Barefoot Sanders ruled Friday that last-minute legal efforts by Greenville to halt Plano's march to the District 13-5A title were not sufficiently supported by evidence.

But Sanders said he wants to hear more on the complicated playoff squabble and has scheduled a hearing for next Wednesday.

The fuss started Oct. 24 when the University Interscholastic League ruled that Greenville football player Robert Byrd was declared ineligible because he had reached his 19th birthday in July.

UIL rules forbid any student playing organized sports if he is 19 prior to Sept. 1 of the current school year.

The UIL ordered Greenville to forfeit five games, including two district games. One of those games was a win over Plano, which Friday night wrapped up the 13-5A district title.

The suits, one filed by Byrd and the other filed by quarterback Phil Blue in behalf of the players, claim the UIL ruling violated Byrd's rights to due process and unjustly penalized the rest of the players by making their forfeit their district ti-

Sanders said he would rule next Wednesday on whether Plano would represent the

Temple Rolls Over Bryan for Championship

By ALAN SAYRE

Associated Press Writer Seeking a chance to defend its state Class 5A schoolboy football title, Temple overcame a bad case of the loose grip Friday night and claimed a 20-9 win over disappointed Bryan.

The Wildcats, ranked No. 1 in The Associated Press schoolboy football poll, and fifth-rated Bryan both entered the contest with perfect 9-0 records.

The fumblefest saw Temple let go of the pigskin five times, but the Vikings countered with four slips of their own and watched the District 15-5A title and a playoff berth roll away.

Kevin Korompai field goals of 36 and 31 yards for the Wildcats and Kenneth Davis threw a 25-yard halfback pass to Craig Lowe for a crucial touchdown.

In another head-on battle for a 5A championship, No. 10 Harlingen saw its season come to a sudden halt with a 28-0 loss to unranked, but tough, McAllen.

Second-ranked Port Arthur Jefferson clobbered Beaumont French, 49-7; No. 3 Odessa Permian, assured of a district crown, settled for a 14-14 draw with Odessa; and fourth-rated Conroe marked time until the playoffs with a 48-0 blitz over Houston Cypress-Fairbanks.

Playoff-bound Highland Park, No. 6, outplayed Wilmmer-Hutchins, 16-8; while No. 7 Plano, the winner in 13-5A, whitewashed Carrollton Newman-Smith, 35-0.

Ninth-seeded Brazoswood closed the season with a 41-10 win over Angleton. No. 8 Stafford Dulles was

Childress, ranked first in 3A, defeated Abernathy, 20-7; third-rated Edna blasted Bloomington, 34-12; No. 4 Pitsteamrolled tsburg Clarksville, 33-0; and fifthseeded Allen crushed

Quinlan, 35-7. No. 6 Cedar Hill torpedoed Midlothian, 27-0; seventhplace Slaton edged Post, 21-20; eighth-ranked Breckenridge popped Colorado City, 29-6; ninth-rated Decatur smashed Springtown, 39-3; and Refugio, No. 10, shut out Ingleside, 34-0.

Second-ranked Stamford had the weekend off.

In Class 2A, No. 8 Rotan claimed the 8-2A championship with a 13-6 win over 10thranked Baird.

Top-seeded Pilot Point did

All the old cliches that work for every mother never work ed for me.

Every time I'd chew one of them out, I was the one who ended up with egg on my face begging their forgiveness

Remember when a child was late for dinner and the mother always asked, "What's the matter? Get hit by a truck?" Mine did. A truck ran a red light and it nipped the back of his bicycle and threw him for a few bruises. And if that doesn't make you feel like the sweetheart who bought roller skates for Tiny Tim, nothing will.

Take my Mother's Day speech of 1974. It was one of the most eloquent speeches of sacrifice and dedication ever delivered to a group of ungrateful burns who appeared present-less. As I was getting to the good stuff about how the doctor had always said I was too short for pregnancy, would never wear pleated skirts again, and how "all you ever think about are yourselves," the doorbell rang and a large bouquet was delivered with Mother's Day greetings from my

A neighbor of mine could make her kids feel absolutely rotten with the old standby, "You forgot to pick up my prescription. You wouldn't forget to breathe, would you?" (I was always afraid to try that one.)

I tried, "What kind of a boy would skip church?!" and got back, "I was putting out a brush fire near the orphanage." Or, "That's right. Leave food on your plate while children in Slobovia starve." To which he replied, "Mom, Slobovia is a mythical place out of the Li'l Abner cartoon. After setting a spending limit, use the following money-saving tips to reduce gift expenses:

Take advantage of sales and specials to buy gifts. Buy gifts at bargain prices whenever possible.

Use imagination in choosstores and items.

For example, instead of one large present, consider several small, related gift items, or combine purchases with homemade items.

Make your own gifts if you sew, bake, paint or are skilled in other crafts. These may mean more to the receiver than a bought item.

Buy Christmas cards, suppies and decorations for the following year during afterseason markdowns have gone into effect.

When the family or group is large, consider drawing names instead of buying gifts for everyone. Set aside a place at home for storing gift items and wrapping supplies. Be realistic in the amount

Make gift-giving a joyful experience for the giver and receiver. Don't kill the pleasure by wrecking the family budget, the specialist continues.

Immanuel Lutheran Youth to Convene

This Sunday afternoon, Im- 10 a.m. worship hour. manuel Lutheran Youth Fellowship meets in the church basement at Park and Ave. B for its regular mon-thly meeting; a short Bible study, short business and planning session, including nominations of officers for 1981, and for recreation.

Kirk Jones is acting president. Leon and Patricia Vogler, Ken Joyce, and Betty Thomas are adult counselors, along with pastor Ed Brown.

This fellowship group participated in the "Youth Olympics," along with other youth across the Panhandle in Amarillo last month. They placed third in the "Frisbee Golf," and some participated in the water balloon toss and water balloon volleyball.

Attending a small school has one big advantage which is you know everyone almost like a brother or sister. You know all their joys and all their pains. You know you can depend on them for support.

At Marfa High School, 47 of us graduated together. That year there may have been 200 students enrolled in the high school. We knew who was dating who and who had done what and what someone was going to do before they did it.

Even though five years have passed, and I have not seen many of my classmates since that time I remember so much.

There was one friend in particular. We had been in the same class since second grade with Mrs. Hegy in the new elementary building.

We were so awkward growing up. All those years of learning, not just in school, but on the play ground. All the times of going steady for two weeks in the fourth grade, and attending birthday parties and meeting for the first date at the picture show.

In junior high we shared common interests like being in the band, playing football and riding the firetruck at the Fourth of July carnival. Both our fathers were in the fire department, so we felt special.

Just before high school my oldest brother and his friend christened me "Big Al" or "Al" for short. Much to my mother's dismay at the time, the name stuck. Just about everybody called me Al except he always called me Big Al.

In high school we had different friends, but I always felt a closeness to him. With just a few words to each other we knew what the other one was thinking.

Later, we both worked at the walk-in theatre and the drive-in theatre. He took the tickets and was the official bouncer, while I sold the popcorn. There were only a few of us who worked at the theatre, so of course, we became a pretty close bunch. After all, we had to fight every eight-year-old at the Saturday matinee.

I can still remember him filling up the ice chest for me, carrying the hot dog machine to the back to be cleaned and running to the projection booth when the film broke and everyone at the drive-in was honking the car horns.

We both drifted in different directions, and I didn't see him for some time. Then, one day at college I was feeling lonely and and a bit depressed wondering what in the world was I going to do with my life. Out of the clear blue I heard someone say "Hey, Big Al."

He was leaving, so he didn't stop to talk but those few words made all the difference in the world to me. For some reason, it symbolized that someone cared and my loneliness ceased.

During the last few years I hadn't thought about him much. When his father dropped by the newspaper office I would ask about him, but not much more.

But all the memories were forced on me at the first of this year when my mother received a phone call. I was sitting at the kitchen table when she took the call.

I was watching her as she hung up the phone and when she turned and looked at me there was so much pain in her eyes. She looked away, out the window.

She told me my friend had killed himself. The world stopped and the only thing in my mind was the memory of him, tall and lanky, wearing his lege so long ago, Ironically I worked with his younger brother this summer at the theatre. He took the tickets and ran the film, and I sold the popcorn. He, too, is tall and lanky, and he spent a great deal of time teasing me. I felt as if I had come a full circle. As if time had stopped.

He is young, sensitive and wise beyond his years. I remember the pain I would feel because he reminded me so much of his older brother. I also remember the joy I felt because of the similarities.

I can't help but wonder if it is his brother's death that has made him the man he is now. If so, perhaps the theory is true that everything that happens, no matter how small or large, shapes the world and its people.

My friend's death brought those who knew him a little closer. That night and the days that followed I think each one hugged another a little tighter and listened to friends and family a little closer. We all changed especially his younger brother who had to learn to be strong at such an

CPR is one of the classes taught by the Red Cross all over the country. Red Cross classes are standardized so that where ever you take a class, the material is the same. The Red Cross CPR material is being updated and will be out soon with many changes. These changes will also affect the first aid material as choking procedures and artificial respiration are taught in first aid classes. The first few minutes are very important when a heart attack occurs and it is important to recognize symptoms and know what to do in that situa-

Since the victim cannot speak, a universal signal is necessary to inform rescuers of the situation. LUBBOCK - A Smithsonian Institute Traveling Exhibit which includes a work by a Lubbock artist opens today at The Museum of Texas Tech University.

"Plans of Darkness," by James D. Howze of the Texas Tech art faculty, is one of the 51 pieces selected for the "American Drawings II" exhibit from over 1,000 drawings submitted to the national open competition.

Representing the full range of styles used by artists in the United States today, the exhibit will be at The Museum through Dec. 14. The competition and exhibit were organized by the Portsmouth, Va., Community Arts Council.

Jurors for the competition said one thing all the drawings have in common is that they are highly finished works of art which is a modern phenomenon. Traditionally, drawings have been part of the transition from a concept to a finished painting or sculpture.

Jurors were Ann Percy, associate curator for drawings, Philadelphia Museum of Art, Josephine Winters, associate professor of art, University of Maryland, and William Kloss, art historian and consultant.

The three said they were looking for more than technical skill in the works and that they guarded against a single standard of "taste."

"While an artist must be articulate, he or she must also offer an idea, an image or an interpretation that is the special product of the individual mind, personality or ****************

Local WT Freshman Stars In University Musical

Sherry Strain, a freshman theatre major at West Texas State University, will play the role of Pauline in the musical "No, No, Nanette."

Miss Strain is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Strain of Dawn.

This month the WT Opera-Musical workshop will present the musical which has a strong focus on its dance numbers.

Debbie Bray, instructor of physical education at WTSU, is the choreographer for the musical. She said "No, No, Nanette' involves more dancing than any musical that has been done at WTSU. "Every musical number has at least some dancing in it," she said.

Since many of the students in the cast have had little or no dancing experience, Bray has been rehearsing the choreography for the past four weeks.

"It's a fantastic musical. I couldn't have asked for anything better," Bray said. "There are so many different kinds of dancing included in it because of changes in the music. It isn't monotonous. A lot of it is Gene Kelly-Fred Astaire-type dancing.

framework for such old-time favorites as "Tea for Two" and "I Want to Be Happy," concerns Jimmy Smith, a publisher of Bibles, and the trouble he gets into on a summer weekend in New York and Atlanta City. Because the show includes such a variety of dances, incuding tap, the fox-trot and the Charleston, and because of the inexperience of so many of the cast members, the students have found a challenge in preparing for the performance.

Mrs. Strain said, "It's hard, and sometimes it's frustrating. But it's real neat to come out of here knowing something you didn't know before."

Chris George, a freshman music education major whose parents live in Zapata and who has the title role in the

The story, a light-hearted musical, described the choreorgraphy as being "pretty difficult." She has found it necessary to practice on her own.

Brent Biles, a senior music education major from Canyon and a member of the show's chorus, said he thought the tap dancing was the hardest part because he hadn't danced like that Even those students who have had some dance experience have found the choreorgraphy difficult.

"No, No, Nanette" will be performed from Thursday, Nov. 20, through Monday, Nov. 24, in the Branding Iron Theatre. Tickets are free for WTSU stuents with an identification card, $2 for WTSU Friends of Fine Arts members and $4 for general

Annual Carol of Lights Scheduled at Texas Tech

LUBBOCK A symbol of the Christmas season on the South Plains, Texas Tech University's 19th annual Carol of Lights will celebrate "A Light Seen Around the World" as its theme Dec. 5.

Signaling the beginning of the yuletide at Texas Tech, the annual program of music and light attracts hundreds of South Plains residents. Following a 35-minute program of Christmas carols, 12,000 red, yellow and white lights, outlining seven buildings around Memorial Circle, will be switched on.

A torchlight procession from Texas Tech's Broadway and University entrance to the Science Quadrangle at 6:55 p.m. will follow the summons of carillon music by Professor Judson D. Maynard.

Led by the Saddle Tramps, men's service organization, the procession will pass 1,500 luminarios lining Memorial Circle along the path to the Science Quadrangle where the musical program will begin at 7 p.m. Luminarios will be provided by service fraternity Alpha Phi Omega, Womens Service Organization and Catholic service fraternity Chi Rho.

The musical program will feature the Texas Tech and residence hall choirs.

After the 30-40 minute program, decorative lights on the Administration Building, Holden Hall, Economics Building, Mass Communications Building and the buildings around the Science Quadrangle will be turned on. The lights will shine 6-11 p.m. through Dec. 28.

The gala of song and lights originated in 1959 when Harold Hinn, former member of the Texas Tech Board of Directors and the Tech Foundation Board, financed illumination of three buildings with 5,000 lights during the Christmas break. The following year, students gathered about the Science Quadrangle and sang carols, a tradition still practiced today.

The ceremony became known as Carol of Lights in

Take Care in Packing

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I work for a post office. Every day I look at dozens of packages that won't make it, and I say to myself, "Why would a person send such a nice present insuch a filmsy box?" Or, "What in the world happened to the label, and no return address in sight!"

Since Christmas is several weeks away there is still time to give your readers some guidelines to make sure their packages will reach their destination in good condition. Here they are:

1. Use plenty of packing inside the box to protect the ob-

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I have been staring at this piece of paper for 20 minutes. I had no idea it would be so hard to get the words down. Please help me. I can't talk to anyone else about this problem. They would think I was the dumbest thing alive or plumb crazy.

I am a 19-year-old guy who makes good money as an auto mechanic. About three months ago I started to take out a very pretty girl who works at the carry-out place next door. Twelve Days of Harvest

By LOUISE WALKER

County Extension Agent I came upon an article I thought many of you farm wives might appreciate. It is so typical. However, when I was on the farm, we never were so lucky as to have only twelve days of harvest. It was more like six weeks!

ON THE FIRST DAY OF HARVEST my true love said to me, with our kids help he wouldn't need me.

ON THE SECOND DAY OF HARVEST the kids all laughed with glee, cause the chicken chores and milking chores would now be up to

ON THE THIRD DAY OF HARVEST my husband said to me, "Help tie the tarp down, run this half load into town, pick up some salt blocks and then check the cattle, cause WE'RE too busy."

ON THE FOURTH DAY OF HARVEST they gave a broken part to me, said, "Try the Co-op at Beeler, every implement dealer, just keep driving till you find the right pulley.'

ON THE FIFTH DAY OF HARVEST my husband said to me. "We're moving to the other field, you bring the pickup, fill up: the gas tanks and water jugs, put in the tool box, a can of bolts with nuts and locks, better bring our dinner and this time don't forget the ice tea.'

ON THE SIXTH DAY OF HARVET my daughter called to me, "The elevator's tied up and I can't get unloaded. Take the old Chevy truck, make sure it's gassed up, check the oil and battery and get over to the west field in a hurry."

ON THE SEVENTH DAY OF HARVEST my husband said to me, "We're going to bring some wheat in, will you clean out the north bin?" Then they set up auger and left me scooping breathless-

ON THE EIGHTH DAY OF HARVEST my husband gave a list to me, "Don't know if this belt will last, better get to town fast, I need another reel slat, filter and bearing. Bring run free.' ON THE NINTH DAY OF HARVEST at eleven-thirty, the clutch went out on the combine and he called on the CB. Said: "Find the heavy log chain, get the Ford tractor and come pull me." ON THE TENTH DAY OF HARVEST my true love snapped at me, as I handed tools up to him, very nervous- levels, race, color, sex,

ON THE ELEVENTH DAY OF HARVEST the whole crew said to me, "Want to fill the gas tanks while we eat, take home this load of wheat and bring back: one wrench, lug: another water jug, and a spray bomb for the sweat bees.' ON THE LAST DAY OF HARVEST my husband grinned at me, "If everything goes right, we should be done by midnight," and "Aren't you glad you didn't have to help, Pee Wee?"

During TWPA Annual Meeting

Wheat Producers Will Draft Positive Policies

AMARILLO - Encouraged by stronger wheat prices brought about by increased exports and a projected sharp drop in world grain production, wheat producers from across the state of Texas will meet to discuss the wheat situation and draft positive policy direction for action in

According to Otis Harman of Tulia, farmer-elected President of the Texas Wheat Producers Association (TWPA), this year's Annual. Meeting of the TWPA is set for Thursday, November 20, with registration beginning at 8:30 a.m. at the Hilton Inn on Interstate 40-East. This will be the 30th Annual Meeting of

"Considering recent developments in the world involving international trade and reduced grain production, this meeting is especially important," Harman said. "Farmers must be aware of the problems in handling wheat for export, how they will be affected by the new federal rail regulations, and the new markets for wheat which could be made available to them in the future," he added.

Harman said that the main purpose of the meeting will be to discuss these issues and determine what must be done in the areas of agricultural legislation and expanded market development ac-

railroads presents an issue to New Federal Rail Regula-Summer Drought Big Factor In Reduced Grain Stocks

The U.S. grain stockpile is Americans. And this year's undergoing one of the world grain output has declinsharpest reductions of recent ed significantly from earlier times, mainly because of this prospects, including year's drought-reduced corn allowances for the reduced harvest and continued high. U.S. harvests and a poor crop demand from users.

The exact dimensions of this grain drain will not be known for many months. And its impact on grain market prices, livestock feeding, grocery prices and, ultimately, the nation's economy also involves a good deal of conjecture at this time.

But the latest crop production statistics issued on Monday by the Agriculture Department continued to show that over the 1980-81 season the grain situation will be tight.

Farmers produced a record wheat crop this year before the full brunt of summer heat and drought took its toll. But corn, soybeans, sorghum and many other crops suffered greatly.

This fall's corn harvest, a keystone for the coming year in terms of livestock feeding and exports, was slashed at least 17 percent from the record crop of 1979, according to the latest surveys.

As it has been for many years, crop production elsewhere in the world also is in the Soviet Union.

All of those and many other factors have a bearing on the demands — and prices — that will be put upon U.S. grain in the months ahead.

Another factor will be the 1981 winter wheat crop. It was planted earlier this fall and, especially in parts of the Great Plains, has suffered from lack of moisture. Meanwhile, department analysts are trying to determine how much grain will be needed in the coming year, how much will be left over a year from now, and how prices may stack up. Another of their "supply and demand" reports is being prepared and has been scheduled for release later today. These are issued regularly, and today's analysis was not expected to include any major surprises.

A similar report issued Oct. 24, for example, included projections that showed the United States is expected to have about 47.9 million metric tons of "total grain" left on hand at the end of the about 39 percent from 78 million metric tons of grain wheat, rice, and corn and other feed grains - on hand at the end of the 1979-80 marketing year.

The official marketing year, incidentally, varies according to the crop. It begins on June 1 for wheat, Oct. 1 for corn and other feed grains, and on Aug. 1 for rice.

Also, a metric ton is about 2,205 pounds and, for example, is equal to 39.4 bushels of corn or 36.7 bushels of wheat. It is the unit favored in world trade and by the Agriculture Department when speaking collectively of "total" grain

According to department records, the grain not used or "carried over" at the end of the current 1980-81 season will be the least since 37.1 million metric tons were left on hand at the end of the 1975-76 year. And, five years ago, that represented an increase from the bare-bones grain carryover of 27.6 million metric tons the previous year.

Thus, according to the records, the 39 percent grain depletion projected last month for 1980-81 could be the sharpest decline in decades, possibly exceeding the drop of 35 percent when U.S. grain metric tons at the end of the 1972-73 marketing year from 73.9 million at the beginning.

The projected decline in whelmingly against corn and the other feed grains.

As seen in the Oct. 24 analysis, the wheat left over at the end of that crop's marketing year next June 1 will be 24.7 million metric tons, virtually unchanged from the 24.6 million on hand läst June 1. Rice stocks next Aug. 1 were projected at 1.2 million metric tons, unchanged from last Aug. 1.

But the corn left over next stocks declined to 48.2 million Oct. 1 was projected to be 15.2 million metric tons, down from 40.6 million on hand this Oct. 1.

Including corn and the wheat market expansion. U.S. grain holdings by the end other feedgrains such as of 1980-81 is weighed over- sorghum, oats and barley, the feed stockpile was expected to decline to 21.9 million metric tons at the end of 1980-81 from 51.9 million at the beginning.

WASHINGTON (AP) -The number of people receiving food stamps in the United States rose above 22 million in August, the Agriculture Department reported.

The department said those receiving the stamps increased from 21.9 million to 22.1 million from July to August.

Reserve I Corn Repayment Deadline is February, '81

WASHINGTON - Farmers having corn in farmer-owned grain reserve I will have until February 1981 to repay their loans following call of the reserve according to John Goodwin, acting executive vice president of the Commodity Credit Corporation.

Although the reserve has been called, farmers are not required to sell the grain. The call requires them to repay their loans within 90 days of the date they are officially notified of the call. County offices of USDA's Agricultual Stabilization and Conservation Service will officially notify producers whose loans have been called.

The reserve was called because the national average market price for corn has been above the $3.15 per bushel reserve call level for five consecutive market days. The Oct. 30 five-day average price of $3.26 is the highest received by farmers since September 1974.

Farmers who have corn in reserve have reaped higher prices because of their participation," Goodwin said. The present national average price of corn is $1 more than the season average for 1978, $1.23 above 1977, and $1.10 more than 1976, he said. "This proves the value of the reserve to farmers, and shows that it is working as intended," he said.

The call level for corn under the reserve I program is 140 percent of the $2.25 per bushel national average loan rate, or $3.15. Data used by the CCC in determining the call level includes a daily report by the Agricultural Marketing Service which shows prices at selected markets. The markets reviewed by CCC for corn are Chicago, Kansas City, Minneapolis, Omaha and St.

I was offered a replacement typewriter here a while back and balked about accepting for a reason which has just come to me.

Having reached the big times upon arrival in Hereford I was assigned the massive IBM electric on which this copy took its original form.

This was pretty classy equipment for somebody who had come up the ropes on manuals, and though it took some getting used to, this old IBM is a pretty familiar work tool now, not unlike the shovel with the worn portion in the handle where the hand has wielded it for many seasons.

But what I have realized might be the genuine appeal of this piece of equipment is the way it sounds when you stop a minute to think.

It is old enough and loose enough to have a rather throaty, throbbing rumble, not unlike the familiar tones of the 4020 left idling as you sorted out the elements and figured out a situation from the tractor seat. And it was with that thrumming of the diesel engine idling over in the background that I dreamed up a lot of the stuff that has taken form here in these columns over the past few

So who would want to trade away a close link to column sources?

The post-election gathering of Congress is being hailed as a lame duck session, but as far as I'm concerned they don't have to confine that moniker to only the brief session on the heels of an election.

> WASHINGTON (AP) -Mainly as an economy move, the Agriculture Department plans to eliminate a report scheduled for release in January that tells how many acres of key crops farmers intend to plant in the coming season.

The report, usually issued around Jan. 20, is based on surveys the first of the year. It normally includes the "prospective plantings" of corn, other feed grains, spring wheat, soybeans, sunflowers, cotton, flaxseed, rice and sugarbeets.

Normally, another report is issued in April, based on new surveys the first of that month.

Sen. Bob Dole of Kansas said the successor to Democratic Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland, a Minnesota dairy farmer, should be someone with "recent farming experience and not someone drawn from a big business background or from a special interest group - someone who is not tied to one of the big farm groups."

A spokesman for the senator, who will become chairman of the Agriculture nutrition subcommittee when the GOP assumes control of the Senate in January, said Dole has not talked personally with Reagan or his staff about candidates for the government's top farm job. But in an interview with reporters, Dole said that among those who would fit the qualifications he feels are needed are Minnesota Republican Gov. Albert Quie and Illinois Agriculture Director John Block. The Senate Agriculture Committee will consider the nomination of whomever Reagan names.

Dole, who gave up his top GOP ranking on the Agriculture Committee for the same status on the Finance Committee, was mentioned earlier this year as a possible candidate for agriculture secretary under Reagan, but rejected the idea. He will become chairman of the Senate Finance Committee in January.

When asked about Clayton Yeutter, president of the Chicago Mercantile Exchange, Dole said that "given what I've just said, he would not fit the background I would prefer."

Yeutter, a Nebraska native, served during the Nixon and Ford administrations as assistant secretary of agriculture for international affairs and commodity programs and deputy special represenative for trade negotiations.

Quie, a dairy farmer like Bergland, was elected governor of Minnesota two years ago after serving nearly 20 years in Congress. Block, who runs a hog farm in west central Illinois, has served as Illinois agriculture director since Republican Gov. James Thompson took office in 1977.

China Holds Soybean Market Potential

'There's no way the Chinese can produce enough soybeans to meet their huge potential demand," says Ray. "We've been assured at the highest level of their livestock production goals and their desire to improve living and nutritional standards for their people."

Ray compares the situtaion in China to Mexico, another developing country that has turned to U.S. soybeans as a plentiful source of protein for animal and human nutrition.

"The fact that the Chinese raise some soybeans and are already familiar with the product is real plus," says Ray.

Jud Seeley, a grower from Donnellson, Iowa, and president of the American Soybean Development Foundation, agrees.

"The huge human population, incredible livestock numbers, underdeveloped technology and government policies that will require large amounts of feed grains and soybeans are all reasons soybean farmers are excited about the market potential of China," he says.

Though the potential for a huge soybean market is clearly evident, ASA officials caution that some major hurdles must still be overcome. For one thing, China must find a way to raise the capital needed to purchase U.S. soybeans. According to the U.S. Commerce Department, crude petroleum and "A lot depends on China's continued efforts and ability to implement plans for economic advancement, beefed up livestock production and continued soybean imports," says ASA Chief Executive Officer Ken Bader. 'We can expect China to become one of our major customers within three to five years. Perhaps in the long term, they will import 4 to 10 million metric tons of U.S. sovbeans and products requiring up to 14 million acres of U.S. production."

Bader cautions, however, that the Chinese are shrewd customers. Without some effort on the part of U.S. sovbean producers to convince the Chinese of the value of their product and the quality of the U.S. sovbean crop, it is unlikely that this market can develop as quickly as will be possible with a concerted ef-

Stockmen Reminded of Need for Lice Control

AMARILLO - It's the time of year when the nation's cattlemen need to put up their guard against a pest that an-nually pilfers their pocketbooks of $100 million, warns an area entomologist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Lice are the culprits, and they begin to reproduce rapidly with the onset of cool weather, Dr. Carl Patrick, the entomologist, cautions. They reach peak populations in late winter and early sprand the pests can easily move from one animal to another." Patrick said. Heavy hair coats on animals during cold weather also afford protection for the parasites and allow increased reproduction, he noted.

Costs to the cattlemanboth in control efforts and dramatic production lossesincrease as lice poulations

There are two types of licebloodsucking and biting-and both infest cattle, The Extension entomologist said. Sucking lice pierce the animal's skin and suck blood. Biting lice feed on particles of hair, scale, scab and skin exudapneumonia. Heavy lice infestations often stunt calves. Undernourished cattle of any age usually have the heaviest infestation. Some cattle appear to be physiologically more susceptible to lice than others and thus have higher pest populations. Such animals are called "chronics" or "carriers" and are usually instrumental in reinfesting the herd annually in spite of repeated insecticide treatments. Culling tion, he explained.

Patrick said.

Lice infestations irriate Insecticide control of lice is not difficult to achieve but animals, causing itching, scratching and rubbing on there are some problems, the fences or anything else entomologist noted. "Most insecticides don't kill eggs; available. This produces denuded areas, bruises and therefore, retreatment is relacerations on the affected quired in two to three weeks to prevent another buildup." animal. "Heavily infested animals will have an unthrif-However if the initial treatty appearance and will suffer ment comes late enough in weight reduction, decreased the season, there may not be milk production, anemia or enough time for the lice to build to economic levels Lice infested animals may again before warm spring also be more subject to weather.

Spraying and dipping infested animals with the proper insecticides is a very effective means of controlling lice, but the control measures are usually required when winter conditions are most harsh--a time when cold stress is a good possibility and respiratory diseases prevalent. Some of this problem can be prevented by treating animals on a day when they can be dry before sundown, Patrick said.

Pour-on and spot-on grubicides labeled for lice are effective and considerably reduce the problem of cold stress associated with dips and sprays. However, the possibility of a host-parasite reaction is always a threat if the material is applied after the cut-off date for grub control, Patrick said. But he said this should be only a minor consideration, since most feedlots in the Texas Panhandle dip cattle year-round in dip vats charged with systemic grubicides and experience very little hostparasite reaction.

Systemics that are labeled for lice control usually recommend a lower rate than that to control grubs, which would help reduce the hostparasite reaction, he said.

The use of nonsystemic dust applied by hand or in dust bags would eliminate the possibility of host-parasite reaction. But because of a lack of penetration of heavy hair coats, dusts do not provide as effective lice control as dips or sprays, Patrick explained.

"However, when used in a preventative program, properly placed and maintained dust bags offer very effective control of lice." he said. Bags should be hung in areas that cattle frequently use or hung in such a manner that cattle are forced to use them. A dust bag station should serve about 30 head.

The spot-on formulation of chlorpyrifos is a new product that has been very effective against lice, the entomologist said. The product kills all stages of lice-eggs, nymphs, and adults. One application is adequate for season-long control if the entire herd is treated and no untreated animals are later introduced into the herd.

Only a small amount of the insecticide is required, so cold stress from soaking the animals with sprays and dips is eliminated. The insecticide is not a grubicide, so it can be used anytime without fear of a host-parasite reaction. This product is not labeled for dairy animals, he warned.

Dr. Patrick cautioned that whichever lice control program is used, the cattleman should be certain to read label directions and pay particular attention to warnings, restrictions, and preslaughter intervals. Additional information on control of lice and other external parasites of cattle is available by obtaining a copy of "Suggestions for Controlling External Parasites of Livestock and Poultry" from county Extension agents or Dr. Patrick at the Texas Agricultural Extension Service office in Amarillo.

Food For Thought

By GERALD McCATHERN Have you ever noticed that the price of food receives more criticism than any other item when the cost of living index is discussed. If you are an average American consumer, your philosophy is 'If the price of food keeps going up, I just don't know what my family is going to do!"

Perhaps we should analyze the inflation spectrum and see if food prices are actually the culprit in our home budget problems.

A good friend of mine who was killed in a plane crash in 1976, Congressman Jerry Litton from Missouri, when confronted with the statement 'food prices are just too high,' would always respond, 'compared to what'?

Compared to food prices in other nations around the world? In the United States we spend about 17 percent of our disposable income, after taxes, for food. In England and Japan, they spend about 25 percent; in countries like Russia, 53 percent; and people in Asia, as much as 82 percent. Food is cheaper in the United States than in any nation in the world, compared to percentage of disposable income.

You say you're not interested in what it costs to buy food in other nations. What does it cost to buy it here in the United States? Congressman Litton did some research on the subject and found that in the '30's, it took about 24 percent of our disposable income to buy food. In 1940 it required only 22 percent. In 1960 it had dropped to 20 percent. In 1970 it dropped to 16 percent. In 1980, with all of the inflation in our economy, we are paying less than 18 percent of our disposable income for food! Compared to food costs in the past, in relation to disposable income, food prices today are not too high! Let's compare it another way. Litton said that twenty years ago, the average American was eating 63 pounds of beef per year, today he is eating 120 pounds of beef per year - twice as much, and four times as much in the higher quality choice and prime cuts! An hours' worth of wages twenty years ago bought only 1.8 pounds of beef; today it will buy three pounds. Twenty years ago, a construction worker could work one hour and buy 2.5 pounds of beef for his pay; today he can buy nearly five pounds of beef for that same hours' wage.

At one of the congressional hearings concerning the 1973 beef boycott, a congressman asked Jerry Litton, "Mr. Litton, when are we going to see dollar-a-pound steak again?" "Mr. Congressman," Litton replied, "about twenty years ago, congressmen were paid $12,500 a year. That's gone up to $20,000 to $30,000, to $42,500 and now over $50,000 per year. I suppose we'll see dollar-a-pound steak again congressmen again." Compared to wages? No, the price of food has decreased rather than increased compared to the average increase in wages over the past forty years.

when we see $12,500-a-year

What about other consumer items? Automobiles? In 1950, the best Ford could be bought for approximately two thousand dollars, today it's ten thousand dollars or a 500 percent increase. Homes? A 1950 ten thousand dollar home would cost fifty thousand dollars today. Shoes? A $10.00 pair of 1950 shoes today will probably cost $50.00. Incidentally, they will also probably be made of plastic rather than leather. And how about a pair of $1.98, 1950 jeans? A 20 cent gallon of 1950 gasoline, a 1950 fine cent cigar, a month's rent on an apartment, telephone costs, electricity for your home, or a 1950 five cent newspaper?

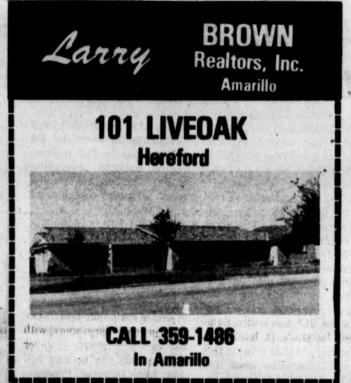

It always amazes me when I see a person never offer a word of complaint about the price of a $3.00 one ounce cocktail at their favorite bar, yet scream to high heaven about the price of milk at the grocery store which costs about 15 cents for an eight ounce serving!

And the next time you eat at a restaurant and leave the waitress a 15 percent tip for carrying your steak from the kitchen to your table, remember that you are paying the waitress more money for handling the steak for sixty seconds than you paid the farmer for growing it for two years!

Food costs too high? Compared to what?

Texas ranks first in the nation in 1980 in total farms and ranches with 159,000. Agriculture Commissioner Reagan V. Brown has reported.

Drought-Stricken Cotton Harvest Continuing poor crop prospects, Pfann-1979, with the drought again stands need moisture.

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) - The major agricultural activity in Texas is harvesting of drought-stricken cotton, peanuts and pecans - all showing below-average vields and quality, says Dr. Daniel C. Pfannstiel, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Cotton harvesting is now confined to the High and Rolling Plains and western areas, said Pfannstiel. A heavier frost is still needed in parts of the Rolling Plains to get the harvest under way.

While yields from some of the heavily irrigated cotton on the South Plains are good, most yields are poor, with some running only 100 pounds or so per acre. Much Rolling Plains acreage had been plowed under earlier due to stiel said. Peanuts are still being harvested in West Central and Central Texas as well as in parts East and Southwest Texas and the Coastal Bend. Again, yields are short but producers are getting good prices.
