

New Iranian Hostage Plan Being Considered

WASHINGTON (AP) — With the hostage drama seemingly speeding toward a climax, President Carter is weighing whether to accept a new Iranian plan that Secretary of State Edmund S. Muskie says offers a "fighting chance" for ending the 14-month standoff in the next four days.

In Tehran, Iran's chief hostage negotiator said Thursday talks have come down to a dispute between U.S. banks and the Central Bank of Iran for returning frozen Iranian assets.

Top-level administration officials met until about 2 a.m. EST today at the Treasury Department to evaluate the new Iranian proposal, described as a "very complicated...very different kind of approach."

One source said Carter would give the U.S. answer today.

Muskie said further instructions would be transmitted today to Deputy Secretary of State Warren Christopher, who has been in Algiers since Jan. 8 negotiating through Algerian intermediaries. Christopher will remain in the Algerian capital as long as necessary, Muskie said.

"Chris is the kind of a guy you keep on the firing line," Muskie said.

The Iranian message was delivered on the eve of what officials in Tehran said was the deadline for transferring frozen Iranian assets into the Central Bank of Algeria.

Muskie, leaving a private dinner party for Carter, said the proposal "is positive. It has prospects. But I would not want what I've just said to raise expectations because as all Americans know, it's a very touchy situation."

Discounting talk of a deadline today, Muskie said, "The only deadline is Jan. 20, which dictates beyond our power to change it the transfer of authority from President Carter to President Reagan."

Asked if a settlement could be reached by then, Muskie replied: "There's a fighting chance."

The new Iranian plan was believed to deal mainly with $4 billion in blocked Iranian deposits in overseas branches of American banks and loans to Iran declared in default.

In tandem with the indirect hostage negotiations through Algerian intermediaries, U.S. officials have been consulting with private bankers whose institutions hold the Iranian money. The New York Times said today about a dozen U.S. banks have been negotiating secretly in New York for the last week with American and European lawyers representing Iran and its central bank.

The Washington Post and the New York Daily News reported today that release of the 52 Americans, now in their 440th day of captivity, hinges on legal and technical issues between the U.S. banks and the Central Bank of Iran.

Iranian Executive Affairs Minister Bezhad Nabavi said the new proposal was made because U.S. banks "did not act effectively and acceptably" for settling disputes involving the assets.

Nabavi claimed the United States had agreed to transfer funds before the hostages are freed, but Assistant Treasury Secretary Joe Laitin denied that.

In December, Iran demanded the United States deposit $24 billion in financial guarantees in the Algerian Central Bank in return for releasing the hostages.

The United States rejected that demand and, on Jan. 2, made a counter-proposal through Algerian intermediaries. It suggested that Iran free the hostages in return for repatriation of the Iranian assets currently frozen in the United States.

Some $2.5 billion would be made available to Iran on the day the hostages are freed. Ownership of assets which are the subject of rival financial claims would be decided through binding arbitration.

Iran, faced with outright U.S. rejection of what it had called its "final" offer, seemed interested in reaching a compromise as Inauguration Day approached for Ronald Reagan, a new and potentially harder-line American president.

Nabavi, in a statement broadcast Thursday on Tehran Radio, said the time had come for a decision.

Banquet to Recognize Producer Excellence

By JIM STEIERT
Managing Editor

Excellence in agriculture production and related activities will be recognized during the Texas-New Mexico Sugar Beet Growers Association's annual grower's banquet to be held at 7 p.m. Saturday at the Bull Barn.

The association will cite its top sugar beet producers for the 1980 growing season with outstanding performers from each growing region to be recognized.

The year's top producers will also receive individual awards during the event.

Another award ceremony Saturday night will see the announcing of The Hereford Brand's "Man of the Year in Agriculture" for Deaf Smith County.

The award, sponsored by The Brand, is presented annually to an individual on the basis of achievement in farming-ranching enterprises, support and aid to the area's agribusiness industry, and participation in community affairs.

Members of the committee which selects the award recipient include John Fuston, executive director of the Deaf Smith County ASCS, Justin McBride, county Extension agent, Tom Cunningham, district conservationist with the Soil Conservation Service office here, Jess Robinson, Hereford FFA and Young Farmers advisor, and Jim Steiert, Brand managing editor.

Guest speaker for tomorrow night's banquet will be Texas Commissioner of Agriculture Reagan V. Brown.

Brown, selected as Progressive Farmer Magazine's "Texas Man of the Year in Agriculture" in 1968 is widely-known as an outspoken advocate of agriculture and rural life and his country humor is known to many area residents.

Brown's career includes more than 25 years of service with Texas A&M University.

Other featured entertainment will highlight the Bluegrass Band, headed by Dale Winders of Castro County.

Tickets for tomorrow night's banquet are priced at $7.50 each and will be available at the door.

Armed Robbery Reported

The Seven-Eleven Convenience Store at 13th Street and 25 Mile Ave. reported an armed robbery to police shortly after midnight.

Police said a Mexican-American male about 24 years old went behind the counter and threatened the clerk with a knife.

The clerk opened the cash drawer, but the robber took a money bag from a shelf with an undetermined amount of money instead. Police said the robber left on foot.

Police are still investigating the case. Crown Auto Sales, 1315 E. Park, reported the theft of a blue and white battery charger from a storage shed near the business.

Police said the battery charger is valued at $400.

Police arrested a 43-year-old male for driving while intoxicated on New York Avenue and officers also arrested a man for public intoxication at 209 E. 6th St.

Rosa Valdez, 806 Blevins, reported that someone threw a rock at her windshield and made a crack the size of a quarter. No estimate of damage was made.

Police issued seven traffic citations yesterday.

Laser Weapon Gets Test-Firing

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — A laser-beam weapon that could transform warfare into something out of "Star Wars" has been test-fired aboard an airplane for the first time, the U.S. Air Force says.

"I'm satisfied that we have in fact passed a very significant milestone," Air Force Secretary Hans Mark said Thursday at Kirtland Air Force Base here. "We can now think about shooting down the other fellow's missiles without using nuclear warheads."

The laser eventually may be mounted on a satellite that will be able to pick off enemy missiles from outer space, Mark said. And some time in the future, the laser technology may be incorporated into a small weapon for use by foot soldiers, he said.

The tests, conducted Wednesday and Thursday, gave the United States a leg up on the Soviet Union, Mark said.

"We know the Russians are doing a lot of work on lasers," Mark said. But "as far as I know, they do not have a laser like this on an airplane. 'We're way ahead on this,' he said.

The tests were conducted aboard a four-engine NKC-135 jet on the ground. While the laser had been fired from the ground before, even shooting down target missiles, it had never before been used while mounted on an airplane, Mark said.

The next step, which could come within months, is to fire the laser from an airborne NKC-135, he said.

Mark declined to say what problems have cropped up during the tests, but said, "I don't see any technical problems that are in the way."

A laser is a narrow, intense beam of light produced when atoms are stimulated to high energy levels. The one tested this week "sounded like a jet engine going," Mark said.

The Kirtland-Special Weapons Laboratory first used a high-intensity laser to shoot down a drone target in 1973. Since then, the Air Force has been working on the technology to place a laser aboard an NKC-135.

Mounted aboard an airplane, the continuous wave carbon dioxide laser holds several advantages over missiles and ground-stationed lasers, Mark said.

Unlike a missile, the laser moves toward a target at the speed of light and eliminates the need to lead a target, like a football quarterback leads a receiver, Mark said. It is also better at coping with bad weather, such as rain or clouds, that would interfere with a beam shot from the ground, Mark said.

The carbon dioxide laser "really works well above 30,000 feet or so because almost all water vapor is gone," he said.

keeping track of personal finances, computing income tax, analyzing stock portfolios, inventory control, computing horoscope charts and many other tasks that are "drudgery" for humans, said Lockmiller.

Lockmiller's computer is not only a hobby and a game player, it organizes his Sunday School class records and school work.

His job in the special education department of Hereford schools involves continual updates on student files.

Lockmiller has developed a program that will keep track of up to ten items separately and eliminate mounds of paperwork.

A computer program is information fed into the computer that instructs it in a defined language and word order to perform a specific function, Lockmiller explained.

Computer programs can be as simple as instructing the computer to add two plus two, or they can combine many simpler programs to construct an extremely complex program, Lockmiller said.

Information is fed into a computer in three ways: from a pre-programmed cassette tape, the computer keyboard or through an interface that connects the outside world usually a telephone to the computer directly, said Lockmiller.

Cassette tapes are used to store computer programs—this is "software," the written or printed data essential to the operation of computers.

Several businesses sell software for all types of uses—personal, business, and pleasure in the form of games. New computer magazines have also developed that include printed programs, sections for beginning programs and innovations in the field, Lockmiller said.

Hereford's Radio Shack carries software and courseware—special computer programs designed to teach mathematics, reading, language arts, physics and chemistry using drills, practice and problem solving.

Norman Kerr, owner of the local franchise said, "People are scared of the word computer. They think they aren't capable, but they can, with a little bit of study, do fantastic things with them."

"Math is not my strong suit," said Lockmiller when explaining the relative ease of computer microcomputer programming.

"Computer programming of this type requires hardly any math knowledge, and you

Reagan Planning More Budget Cuts

WASHINGTON (AP) — The incoming Reagan administration, accusing President Carter of playing politics with the 1982 federal budget, vows to slash the $739.3 billion lame-duck spending plan from top to bottom.

President-elect Ronald Reagan, who reviewed the just-released budget with his economic advisers Thursday and scheduled another session for today, said he expected to find "some fat" to reduce the projected $27.5 billion deficit.

But Reagan's nominee for budget director, David A. Stockman, said more radical surgery will have to be performed or else an already sluggish economy will worsen.

Stockman accused Carter of proposing a "very political document" that underestimates the deficit and is overly optimistic in its economic forecast. Stockman estimated the deficit under Carter's budget would be at least $50 billion.

"We think that we're going to have to revise it (the budget) from top to bottom because clearly it's not an acceptable fiscal policy and it would only cause further deterioration in the economy," Stockman said.

Carter's budget director, James T. McIntyre Jr., denied the spending plan for the fiscal year that begins Oct. 1 had been shaped with politics in mind. "I have taken no action with the purpose of embarrassing the incoming administration," he said.

Carter, as he signed the thick document, defended the budget as an example of restraint. The departing president predicted any changes made by his Republican successor or Congress will be "relatively minor in nature because this is a sound proposal that will withstand the scrutiny of congressional deliberations."

Reactions in Congress, predictably, were positive from Carter's fellow Democrats and negative

Reagan Brown, state commissioner of agriculture, will be the featured speaker at the annual Sugar Beet Growers Banquet Saturday night at the Bull Barn. Brown is a much sought-after speaker, and the banquet should be an interesting one.

For umpteen years, we've heard complaints that community newspapers "cover up" news, or play up chamber of commerce stories, or fail to "tell it like it is."

Well, we ran across a story about an Indiana editor who got a bellyful of such complaints and decided in one issue, many years ago, to tell it like it is. Here were some of the items:

1. John Coyle, local merchant, is doing a poor business for a good reason. His prices are high; his store is dirty, and his clerks are insolent. How can he expect much?

2. The Rev. Bob Jones preached Sunday night on "charity." He'll need all the charity he can get from his congregation because his sermon was so poor.

3. David Conley died at his home here Tuesday night. His doctor called it heart failure, but those who knew him said whiskey killed him.

4. Married — Miss Sylvia Rhoades and James T. Colvin, last Sunday at the Baptist parsonage by the Rev. Gordon. The bride is a very ordinary city girl who doesn't know any more about cooking than a jackrabbit and never helped her mother three days in her whole life. She is not a beauty, by any means, and has a gait like a duck. The groom is an up-to-date loafer. He has been living off his old man at home all his life and is not worth having. A dim future for the couple is predicted.

5. Died—Jim Hinds, 56. Deceased was a mild-mannered pirate who came here in the night with another man's wife and joined the church at first chance. He owed us several dollars for this paper, was indebted to almost everyone in town, but you could hear him praying six blocks away. He died singing "Jesus Paid It All" and we think he is right, because he never paid anything himself. He was buried in an asbestos casket and his friends threw palm leaf fans in his grave because he'll probably need them.

New Method Replaces

Test-Tube Babies

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Childless couples may soon have access to a new and better method of giving birth than the so-called test tube programs, says a researcher in the field of transferring animal embryos.

In fact, the first human pregnancy by embryo transfer could take place this year, Texas A&M University scientist Duane C. Kraemer said Thursday.

"Within a year, I expect we will hear about the first human embryo transfer and resulting pregnancy," said the veterinary physiologist who helped perform the world's first successful embryo transfers on baboons, cats and dogs.

"Of course, I can't guess now if this will result in the birth of a child, since it has not been proven that the uterus of one human will accommodate the embryo of another. However, the likelihood is rather high since this does occur within a wide variety of animal species."

The technique involves removing a fertilized egg from the "donor" woman's uterus and implanting it in the "host" mother without the use of surgery, Kraemer explained.

It involves flushing the egg out with a chemical solution, and reversing the process to implant it, and the greatest risk is that the solution could force the embryo beyond the uterus into the Fallopian tubes. The result might then be a tubal pregnancy which is dangerous to the mother, but close medical observation could probably avert such a possibility, Kraemer pointed out.

Grand Jury Refuses To Indict Officers

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — A representative of the U.S. Justice Department will visit Amarillo Monday to discuss the case of a 46-year-old man shot to death by police last month, said the leader of a civil rights group.

The Potter County grand jury Thursday refused to indict the four police officers who, police reports indicated, were at the scene of the Dec. 5 shooting of Raymond Lee Johnson.

Roger Scott, president of the Amarillo chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said he will attend Monday's meeting to "find out what's possible" in the case.

However, Scott said he had not seen any evidence in the matter and could not comment on the grand jury's refusal to indict the officers.

Johnson was shot "several times" after he was stopped for a suspected traffic violation and threatened the officers with a spanner wrench, police reports said.

Police said patrol officers stopped Johnson on suspicion of drunken driving, and that he climbed out of his car carrying a tire tool.

Officers say he struck patrolman James Blaylock on the hand and lunged toward one of the other policemen before the officers shot him to death.

Political Campaigner Shot and Wounded

COOKSTOWN, Northern Ireland (AP) — Bernadette Devlin McAliskey, the Northern Ireland Roman Catholic political campaigner, was shot and wounded along with her husband this morning, police said.

They were shot at their home in Cookstown, County Tyrone, about 30 miles west of Belfast, police said. Their three children were not injured.

Mrs. McAliskey, 33, and her husband were rushed to a hospital by helicopter after the shooting and their conditions were not believed to be serious, police said.

Three people were detained by police for questioning after the shooting, police said.

Police also said a customs officer was shot dead by terrorists this morning at Warrenpoint, County Down, 30 miles south of Belfast but they did not say whether they believed the incidents were connected.

Fire Destroys Country Club

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A four-alarm fire destroyed the River Crest Country Club building here early today, causing an estimated $10-15 million damages, firemen said.

The country club's main building was the scene of a smaller fire earlier this week, a fire department spokesman said.

The fire was well out control, firemen said, when they arrived at the scene early today. They were forced to pull back and allow the fire to burn.

Firemen aided residents in the area around the country club building in wetting down wood shingles to prevent the fire from spreading to nearby homes.

Government Spending Millions on Advertising

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ronald Reagan is taking over an enterprise that's running in the red, and he may want to do what other chief executive officers often do in that situation: cut the advertising budget.

If he does, Reagan will discover the government spends more than $150 million for ad space or air time and millions more on market research, ad production and creative efforts.

All this made the United States the country's 28th biggest advertiser in 1979 — far behind Procter & Gamble, but well ahead of such big advertisers as Pillsbury, the Gillette Co. and Reagan's former employer, the General Electric Co.

But if Reagan tries to cut ad outlays, he'll run into flak from agencies that say they must communicate with the public and can do it best through advertising.

The Defense Department, for example, says it couldn't run a voluntary army without advertising heavily for recruits.

The government advertises for many purposes. Amtrak advertises to sell seats on its passenger trains. The Treasury advertises to try to overcome public resistance to the Susan B. Anthony dollar. The Energy Department advertises to try to boost fuel conservation.

The Corporation for Public Broadcasting advertises the television shows it underwrites. The Peace Corps advertises for volunteers.

The Postal Service advertises the joys of stamp collecting because sales of stamps that aren't used for postage are pure gravy.

Three of every four government ad dollars go for military recruiting. For every recruit the Army signs up, the Pentagon spends $410 on advertising to lure him into the recruiting office. The few good men the Marines want cost $339 each in advertising.

These expenditures are for ads which can only plant the idea of enlisting. Millions more are spent in the entire recruiting effort.

Each branch of the service has its own ad director (usually a colonel), and each has a separate ad agency. Advertising Age, an industry publication, notes that J. Walter Thompson Co. has the Marine Corps account; Ted Bates and Co. writes Navy ads. Each service competes with the others for recruits.

The purpose of advertising is to help the prospective enlistee make a decision that's good for him and good for us, and competing ads help him do that," says Al Martin, the Pentagon's director of accession (recruiting) policy.

In addition to buying ad space and time, the government gets millions of dollars worth of free advertising through industry donations. These public service campaigns promote health and safety, urge energy conservation and acquaint people with government services such as direct deposit of Social Security checks.

The Advertising Council, a 40-year-old non-profit industry organization, estimates the government gets about $300 million worth of free public service advertising a year.

Everyone knows these ads — the 39-year-old "Only you can prevent forest fires" campaign, for example.

The Ad Council sometimes turns down proposed government campaigns on the grounds that they beat unimportant drums. For example, it refused to undertake a Treasury campaign to get people to stop hoarding pennies.

Government ad officials, while not ungrateful for the free ads, say they must still run paid ads to reach their intended audiences.

Martin, the Pentagon official, questions the value of public service ads. He wants his commercials to run, say, at halftime during the pro football playoffs rather than for free between the sermonette and the sign-off of a small-town radio station.

Increasingly, the government is running ads for services that compete directly with private enterprise. The Postal Service is putting ad dollars behind selling its Express Mail service in hard-nosed competition with private delivery firms.

The government is such a big advertiser that the Federal Trade Commission wants to screen government ads to make sure they meet the same standards of honesty that the FTC imposes on commercial advertisements. But the program is voluntary, and the Pentagon won't submit its ads for clearance.

The FTC acted after the Gray Panthers, an organization in support of elderly people, objected to Treasury ads which called investing in U.S. savings bonds a way to "put your financial worries to rest" even though savings bonds offer interest rates considerably below the inflation rate.

After the FTC carried the Gray Panthers complaint to the Treasury, the bond theme was changed. The bonds are now plugged as a means people can use to force themselves to save — "a sure way to save the dough that runs right through your fingers."

Uncle Sam, advertiser, had been taken taken to task by Uncle Sam, regulator.

Home

can learn to write a simple program within about 40 minutes to an hour," Lockmiller said.

Kerr believes that if people understood the potential of computers, "sales would mushroom."

Sales in Hereford have been slow—Kerr has sold about six home computer units since 1977 when the first small microcomputers came out with adequate memory at a relatively low cost.

For average home and personal use, Kerr recommends a computer that hooks up to a color television.

Kerr said the color computer can handle personal finances and, "play unreal games with color and sound."

He doesn't recommend a color computer for business use because of its limited memory capabilities.

Color computers are the most expensive home computers. Their prices begin at $399.

The TRS computer series intended for tasks requiring memory begin at about $499 and range up to $10,000.

Pocket computers capable of solving scientific, business, engineering, real estate and aviation problems in addition to playing games are available for about $250.

Several different brands of computers are available, said Lockmiller. These include the APPLE II, PET, Atari and TI computers. The programs for these different brands are slightly different, and they are not interchangeable.

Radio Shack's TRS-80 computers have different models and levels. Programs are not interchangeable here either, but conversion tapes help retain the use of programs as the system becomes more advanced.

One advantage of the TRS system, said Lockmiller, is the ease of expanding a system.

"You just send the keyboard (the actual computer part) back to the factory, and they change out the parts in about two weeks," Lockmiller said.

He also said kits to expand the system are available, "but you have to know what you are doing."

The different levels and models use different computer languages, but the most common language is BASIC—a language based on English that is translated inside the machine to binary numbers and back to English after the task is completed.

All computers operate on a binary system which uses machine language, said Lockmiller. Machine language consists of hexadecimal (Base 16) numbers understood by the computer's processor and represented by binary numbers.

Binary numbers are Base 2 numbers using only ones and

zeros. For example, 001001011.

The computer translates these numbers represented by "squared off" sound waves that sound like static from the cassette program tapes, the keyboard or an interface, Lockmiller said.

Graphics are another facet of microcomputer abilities. Although Lockmiller said graphics are the hardest part of computer programming to master, they can be the most fun.

He has used graphics to draw numbers for his daughter's math lessons, and computers are programmable to compose graphs, tables and illustrations.

Lockmiller said, "The thing I enjoy most about computers is writing a program that works. It's fun, a challenge, to make the machine perform."

Lockmiller bought his first home computer in July, 1980.

plemented," Stockman said after he and other Cabinet designates and aides met with Reagan.

"Then a four-year plan can be presented to the Congress and the country to steadily reduce that level of spending and deficit to accompany the tax reduction plan we think is essential to get the economy off dead center," he said.

Unnecessary Eye Surgery Performed

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Parents of a 7-year-old boy say their child entered Fort Worth's Cook Children's Hospital for an ear operation, but mistakenly underwent unnecessary eye surgery instead.

"There were two different doctors, and they got my boy into the operating room where the other doctor was doing eye surgery on another kid," said Hollis Elmore. "It wasn't even the right doctor, but he went ahead."

Elmore said apparently the doctor didn't look to see who he was operating on Wednesday, despite the armband that Ray Elmore wore. Elmore declined to identify the surgeon.

The other child needed an operation to correct "lazy eye," a condition in which one eye is overworked and tends to cross. To eliminate the problem, doctors go in under the eyelid and cut certain muscles.

Elmore said his son had been treated for farsightedness about three years, "but now that they cut all the muscles loose, I don't know what will happen."

He said the eye surgeon "apologized and said he put it all back, and he felt sure there wouldn't be any problems afterward."

Ray's slated operation was to correct a thickened tissue that had grown around one of the bones in his inner ear. Elmore said the tissue was causing hearing difficulty.

The ear operation was performed after the family was informed of the mix-up, he said.

Budget

from the GOP.

Rep. James Jones, D-Okla., chairman of the House Budget Committee, called the budget "very honest" and "very, very tight as far as reducing spending."

Jones' Republican counterpart in the Senate, Peter V. Domenici of New Mexico, attacked the proposal as "an old, tired, timid budget."

Carter's budget calls for a $76.6 billion, or 12 percent, spending increase from 1981, mainly due to a hefty boost for the military and inflation-triggered jumps in other areas.

Defense spending would go up $23 billion to $184 billion.

When adjusted for inflation, the projected overall budget rise is 1 percent. The defense budget, which would get 25 cents out of every federal dollar, rises 4.4 percent while non-defense spending declines slightly after taking inflation into account.

Carter also proposed modest personal tax credits to offset higher Social Security taxes. In addition, he revived his call for a 10-cent-a-gallon increase in gasoline taxes to conserve energy. The gasoline tax, which Congress rejected last year and is likely to do again, would cut the budget deficit $13 billion.

In a revised estimate of the 1981 budget, which Carter had promised would be balanced, the president said the effects of high inflation and a recession in 1980 caused spending to balloon to $663 billion, creating a $55 billion deficit.

Reagan told reporters he intends to honor his campaign pledge to make deep cuts in the budgets he is inheriting from Carter.

Asked if he still expected to meet his goal of balancing the budget by 1983, he replied, "Well, I'll break an arm trying."

"There's no question about the economy worsening," which is causing federal spending to grow, Reagan said. "But that's not anything meaning we're going to retreat. It just means that we've got a harder job and more to do."

Edwin Meese III, who will be Reagan's chief counselor in the White House, said a complete package of spending cuts accompanied by significant tax cuts and regulatory changes will be sent to Congress within four weeks of Tuesday's inauguration.

Stockman said there is "no wavering" on Reagan's commitment to reduce personal tax rates by 30 percent over three years — a plan Carter has assailed as irresponsibly inflationary.

The 34-year-old Republican congressman from Michigan also said the new administration planned to make "very, very major" spending cuts. "It will be some multiple of

Oilmen, Company Fined $20 Million Penalties

HOUSTON (AP) — Two oilmen and a Denver-based company, in a plea bargain agreement with federal prosecutors, will pay more than $20 million in penalties and refunds for selling low-priced "old" crude oil as a higher-priced "new" product.

B.A. Williams III of Houston, Marvin Davis of Denver, Colo., and Summit Transportation Co. entered guilty pleas before U.S. District Judge Norman Black, who imposed $20,120,000 in fines and refunds. Williams is a former president of Summit and Davis is its former board chairman.

Williams was fined $40,000 on each of two counts and Davis agreed to pay $20,000 as a civil penalty.

Summit entered a guilty plea to a two-count criminal information and drew a maximum $10,000 fine on each charge.

The company also agreed to pay a $3 million civil penalty and refund $17 million, including interest, to the Department of Energy.

Specifically, Williams was charged with willful violation of the Energy Petroleum Allocation Act and the company was accused of making false statements.

Prosecutors said the pricing scheme existed between Jan. 1, 1973, and May 1, 1978.

Court records showed that Summit delivered 48,153 barrels of West Texas sour crude to Mobil Oil Corp. for $529,684 in March 1976. Included in the sale was a statement from Summit that the petroleum did not include any "old" oil when, in fact, it did, the government contends.

At that time "old" crude was selling under federal regulations at about $5 a barrel compared with $10 to $15 for "new", or more recently discovered, oil.

U.S. Attorney Carl Walker Jr. released a statement of the government's contentions in the case.

"Summit, in purchasing their supplies of (certified) crude oil ... also purchased crude oil for which they obtained no certification in violation of DOE regulations," the statement said.

"Summit ... then resold or exchanged and resold their crude oil, thereby knowingly and willfully on frequent occasions failed to identify the amount of old oil contained in the volume sold, thus supplying their customers with a false certification."

The summary listed three 1976 sales which the government said involved resale of West Texas sour crude oil containing a certain amount of "old" oil.

In March 1976, Summit Gas was alleged to have entered into a contract with Mobil Oil Corp. to sell crude and "knowingly and willingly contracted to sell the West Texas sour crude oil as containing no 'old' oil, when, in fact, it did contain a certain percentage of 'old' oil."

Also in March 1976, Summit Gas was alleged to have invoiced Mobil for 48,153 barrels of West Texas sour crude at $11 a barrel, with the $529,684.21 invoice containing a statement certifying that the petroleum involved contained no barrels of "old" crude oil. A similar allegation involved an April 1976 invoice to Mobil covering 51,241 barrels of West Texas sour at $11 a barrel.

Ann Landers Making a Husband

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I have a yellowed copy of an article that several of us wish you would reprint. It appeared in your column 22 years ago. When I was first married, I thought I was the only one who felt this way—and then I read this and knew I was not alone. It was a great comfort to me.

Now I have daughters who are contemplating marriage. I showed them this 1958 column and they thought it was terrific. It may seem old-fashioned to some, but in our circle many of these ideas still prevail. Please rerun it.—Manawa, Wis.

DEAR MANAWA: Only 22 years old? It sounds like something from another century. I'm printing it as an example of outrageous sexism—1958 vintage.

DEAR ANN: What is man? Here is my definition:

Man is what a woman marries. Generally speaking he has two hands and two feet. But he rarely has more than one dollar or one idea at a time. Making a husband out of a man is one of the most intricate and challenging forms of plastic art known to civilization. This art requires a knowledge of science, sculpture, common sense, intuition, patience, faith, hope and charity. What a phenomenon that a small, tender, soft, violet-scented creature like a woman should enjoy kissing a stubby-chinned, tobacco and bourbon-scented thing like a man. If you flatter a man, you frighten him to death. If you don't, you bore him to death. If he gets what he wants, he becomes disinterested and it's the end. If he doesn't get what he wants, he becomes disinterested and there is no beginning.

If you wear gay colors, eye makeup and startling hats, he hesitates to take you out. If you wear a tailored suit and a little brown beret, he stares all evening at the woman in gay colors, eye makeup and the startling hat.

If you are a clinging vine, incapable of making a decision, he considers you an idiot. If you are decisive and accomplished, he considers you unfeminine.

If you are simple and uncomplicated, he longs for a brainy woman with ideas. If you are a brainy woman with ideas, he feels you are competing with him, and eventually he dumps you in favor of a stupid playmate.

What is the solution to this puzzlement of human nature, this collage of quirks and contradictions? Who knows the answers? I don't. That's why I'm writing to Ann Landers.—Augusta, Maine

DEAR AUGUSTA: Woman was never meant to understand man. She is just supposed to love him.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I just finished reading "Soulmates Not Mr. & Mrs." Does it happen that you don't know what a live-in is called? It's a POSSL-Q—Person of the Opposite Sex Sharing Living Quarters.

The census bureau came up with this because they ran into the problem, too. I'm 13 and even I know that! Besides, I think if a person wants to introduce a live-in as just that, it's her own personal business.—Not A Brat, Just Trying To Help In Pa.

DEAR NOT A BRAT: You're 13?! Hang on to my address, Toots. I think you are going to be a steady correspondent.

Are your parents too strict? Hard to reach? Ann Landers' booklet, "Bugged By Parents? How to Get More Freedom," could help you bridge the generation gap. Send 50 cents with your request and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611.

Teachers Learn to Cope With Non-Instructional Concerns

LUBBOCK—New teachers may be well prepared in academic skills, lesson planning and teaching methods, but they soon find there is more to teaching than that.

A teacher's ability to cope with non-instructional concerns—irate parents, data processing reports, student discipline, club sponsorship, and other non-teaching duties—is often as important to the survival of the first-year teacher as academic ability, according to a Texas Tech University professor.

In an article, "Stress and the Beginning Teacher—And The Walls Come Tumbling Down," published in the Fall 1980 issue of "Action in Teacher Education," Dr. Ray A. Purkerson of the Texas Tech College of Education advocates forewarning beginning teachers of what they face.

"While there is no cookbook of instructions for dealing with these concerns, teachers can have an awareness that they exist and some possible options for different situations," Purkerson said.

Purkerson, who directs University Interscholastic League programs and teaches methods courses, directed Texas Tech's student teaching program for eight years. He has done follow-up studies of education graduates.

With the results of such studies revealing a need for training in non-instructional areas, the Texas Tech College of Education is making a stronger effort to present education majors with the total picture of teaching, Purkerson said.

Teachers have more stress or a different kind of stress than other professionals because of the end product—a child," he said.

The rewards of the work also may be far down the line while the fruits of labor in other professions may develop more rapidly, he said.

"That day-to-day contact with so many children with unique problems causes a lot of wear and tear on teachers, as well."

Teachers, though, can combat some of the stress by thoroughly investigating prospective schools and community values and questioning principals about such things as their evaluation criteria before considering available positions.

The awareness of possible problems, a good faculty atmosphere and closeness between the faculty and principal can offset much teaching stress, Purkerson said.

Small Talk

By SUE COLEMAN

When she got back Monday from a visit in Nebraska, Eunice West announced that she is never going north again in the winter. While we were having springtime temperatures here, she found near-zeros there last week. But she did enjoy the visit with her grandson, Billy Lloyd, his wife and baby. Especially the great-grandchild, whom she was sort of planning to bring home with her, according to the tongue-in-cheek accusation of her sister, Ruby Lee Hickman. The child's parents wouldn't cooperate in that plan, though.

If you're a Whiteface fan, not because a member of your family is on the team but because you like school sports, and if the boys were beginning district basketball play with a 20-1 record and bright prospects for a championship year, you'd probably do your best to get to the opening conference game.

Well, the Whiteface girls are in that spot as they head for their first contest of the season tonight at Lubbock. How about being there, hollering loudly for them, getting as excited about them as you would about the varsity boys?

Some stray observations: There are quite a few street intersections in Hereford where views are blocked by bushy shrubs too far out on the curbs, that surely do need a good trimming. If I had to decide which of our modern conveniences it would be hardest to do without now, I'd certainly give a high rating to paper products, thinking back to time when we got along without paper cups, dishes, towels, tissues and a lot of other little things that make life so much easier...

...This is an uncertain world, and as soon as you find a brand of something that pleases you exactly, it comes out next week with a "new and improved" label, and you know they've done something to it that eliminates the feature you liked most.

Newspaper Bible

JUST HOLD ON AND HANG LOOSE

But when you are arrested and stand trial, don't worry about what to say in your defense. Just say what God tells you to. Then you will not be speaking, but the Holy Spirit will.

Brothers will betray each other to death, fathers will betray their own children, and children will betray their parents to be killed.

And everyone will hate you because you are Mine. But all who endure to the end without renouncing Me shall be saved.

When you see the horrible thing standing in the Temple, reader, pay attention!—flee, if you can, to the Judean hills.

Hurry! If you are on your rooftop porch, don't even go back into the house. If you are out in the fields, don't even return for your money or clothes.

Woe to pregnant women in those days, and to mothers nursing their children.

And pray that your flight will not be in winter. For those will be days of such horror as have never been since the beginning of God's creation, nor will ever be again.

And unless the Lord shortens that time of calamity, not a soul in all the earth will survive. But for the sake of His chosen ones He will limit those days.

And then if anyone tells you, 'This is the Messiah,' or, 'That one is,' don't pay any attention.

For there will be many false Messiahs and false prophets who will do wonderful miracles that would deceive, if possible, even God's own children.

Take care! I have warned you!

HHS Girls Face Westerners in 1st District Tilt

Lubbock-Not Too Much To Look At

THE LUBBOCK HIGH WESTERNERS weren't much to look at - and few seldom did.

From the bleak 4-22 mark they burnished a year ago, to the matty 5-12 accord they rest at currently, the female cagers weren't exactly a fashion plate for sophistication.

But then, cocktail dresses, elbow length gloves and Halston designer shoes weren't the club's preferred attire.

BEING THE UGLY DUCKLINGS meant nothing, for they often knew little better. They were the have-nots, but they were as graceful as anyone - in their opinion.

Mauri Montgomery

The Westerners more frequently proved myth to be fact by stealing glances with a game winning performance here and there - always on the wrong occasion for an unsuspecting opponent.

And the squad would try to ruin the party once more as it played hostess to the, now 19-1, zealots Hereford Whitefaces in Lubbock tonight at 7:45.

TONIGHT'S CONFLICT, the first district showdown for both squads, markers either another victorious beginning or an unmentionable beginning of the end for Hereford's ongoing string of 18 straight wins.

THE HEREFORD BRAND SPORTS

The Hereford Brand-Friday, January 16, 1981-Page 7

The post game wait had head HHS coach Larry Sowers worried over all the worries involved. Trying to predict the unpredictable cast a gray shadow on his dark-haired locks, and it was only the first of a long-line.

"Lubbock High is a scrappy team, they always have been," he said. "Who can tell what you'll be up against when you play them? If we don't play, then we'll have our share of trouble. But if we do play like we can, I feel like we ought to win."

"We're playing for what counts now. All the other games have essentially been practice rounds, and I hope we've learned a few things in those past 20 ball games. I believe we have," he noted.

BUT, SOWERS SHOULD BE so lucky. The frets over tonight's opening league encounter, at best, hid his admitted concerns over next week's tilt with the loop's other fat-cat, Lubbock Monterey (also riding an ominous 19-plus pre-district wave).

"I don't think you can help but think about the Plainswomen somewhat," he said. "It's something that has been in the back of our minds since we started this year. Monterey had an open date Tuesday and they'll have a chance to watch us play tonight. Beating them has been one of our primary goals, but I don't think we can worry about it so much as to forget to play tonight. A loss to Lubbock wouldn't only kill us - it would be disastrous."

THE WESTERNERS, returning three starters off last year's fifth-place district club, have been dumping approximately 40 points (298-997 attempts for 30 percent) against area teams per outing thus far in season play. That average falls well below each of the league's other three teams in Plainview, Monterey's 78.2, Coronado's 52.1 and Hereford's tally of 62.6 per game.

The squad's leading point input has come under the guise of double-figure scorer Olivia Vasquez (5-6 guard who has provided just over 11 points per game in her first year following last season's ineligible status as a junior). LaShawn Zahn (5-7 sr. forward) follows that average with almost eight per outing.

"I would rate Lubbock comparable to Amarillo Caprock, they always have the capability to put one over on you if you aren't careful," noted Sowers.

SOWERS WAS JUSTIFIED in making the comparison after his squad clipped Caprock twice (the first very easily 68-32, but the second coming somewhat harder 45-38). The Caprock series illustrated, according to the coach, the two contrasts of Hereford's play up to this point in the crossroad of the season - good and not so good.

"We were playing better earlier this year, but at the same time we were playing teams that weren't playing their best," he said. "Still, I don't think we've been playing quite as well offensively as we were doing earlier this year. The kids have been in a slump scoring wise - the game the other night with Tascosa (Hereford won the affair 49-36) was the first in a good while that finally got us back on the right track."

Leading the Whiteface's scoring potency at this juncture of play are second-team All-District post Louise Mays and team captian Terri Harkins. Mays is currently averaging 13.3 points a conflict as the squad's leading scoring thrust while Harkins (Hereford's only other player netting a double figure average) has been drilling in 12.6 per game.

WHAT DID ALL THAT amount to - would Hereford's pre-district success hurt or help the squad in district - would the 19-1 mark racked up over the season's half induce over-confidence, or give the crew a foundation of assurance to fall back on?

"Of course I'm pleased with our record so far - a 19-1 mark is awful nice to look at. But I hope we won't worry about too much," Sowers added. "Before, I think we were afraid we might lose. We were playing cautious, but now that's behind us. We've got to think about district and concentrate on each ball game."

"WHEN YOU LOOK AT IT, our season up to this point has provided a lot of lessons. We've won some close ones and a couple of overtime games. That should help our confidence in close district games," he said. "And we've won some games even when we haven't played well, which if you think about it, should help because we did it when we had too."

Hereford Boys Meet Dimmitt Here Tonight

The Hereford boy's varsity are scheduled to play the Dimmitt Bobcats here tonight at 7:30 p.m. in the La Plata Gymnasium.

The squad, coming off a disappointing 47-45 overtime loss to the Tascosa Rebels earlier this week, will take a 3-19 mark into play against the successful Bobcat team.

Following tonight's conflict, Hereford will then prepare to take on Lubbock Coronado, 10-10 thus far in season play, in Lubbock Tuesday night at 7:45 p.m. as its first district battle of the year.

Bum Close to Bourbon St. Scene

NEW ORLEANS (AP) - Former Houston Oilers Coach Bum Phillips says he's close to reaching an agreement with New Orleans to become coach of the Saints, but nothing has been signed.

"No. Nothing's been settled yet," he said Thursday.

"I know I want to be the coach. I think they want me to be the coach. But nothing has been signed," he said.

He denied he told anyone he had reached a verbal agreement to become head coach of the Saints.

"That's somebody trying to put words in somebody's mouth," he said in a telephone interview.

"I've told everybody that's where I want to go, and I think it will work out," he said. "But until something actually does work out, you can't say so until you actually agree on it."

Has a verbal agreement been reached? "No." Is an agreement close? "Yep." How close? "I don't know. I think a week or two, 10 days, something like that."

Phillips and John Mecom Jr., owner of the National Football League Saints, met twice in Houston, and Phillips said he expected to talk to Mecom again soon after he got back to Houston.

He was in Mobile, Ala., to watch Senior Bowl practice sessions.

"We haven't discussed everything yet," Phillips said. "There's not really a sticking point - just time."

He said his talks with Mecom have been general in nature, with no discussion of salary or specific areas of responsibility.

"We just talked theory a couple of times. We haven't really got down to job descriptions and all that," he said.

Phillips was fired after the Oilers lost to Oakland in the first round of the AFC playoffs. The Saints job opened up after the team went 1-15 for the season.

Dick Nolan was fired by the Saints with four games remaining and the Saints 0-12.

THE CHINESE INVENTED spaghetti, after all. So, it was only appropriate that Zhang Deshang demonstrated his special twists of pasta making at the Exhibition of the People's Republic that recently toured the United States. Zhang, chief chef at the Peking Hotel, can produce more than 500 varieties of noodles, dumplings and other such delicacies. This specialty is called "dragon's beard noodles."

POLLY'S POINTERS
Polly Cramer
=Lingering odor in shirt=

POLLY'S PROBLEM
DEAR POLLY - How can I remove perspiration odor from the underarms of a chambray work shirt? The odor is only evident when the shirt is ironed or when the body warms it, though there is no evidence of perspiration odor at the initial time. Any suggestions will be most welcome. - LILLIAN
DEAR LILLIAN - Sponge the area with a colorless mouthwash after you have tested its effect on the color and fabric. - POLLY

DEAR POLLY - I thought others might like my neat way of keeping lint out of the slot in the front of my dryer. Even though one usually cleans the lint screen after drying each load, some still falls down. I take a blue toilet bowl brush (nylon) and run it in the slot that holds the screen. This keeps it almost 100 percent lint-free. - VERA
DEAR POLLY - We live in a trailer and there is not an extra inch of space, so I hang a clipboard on the inside of the door in the kitchen to clip my placemats. There is no more fuss over getting them bent in a crowded drawer.
Also, I have to wear a back brace made of a very heavy material and it has to be washed in warm water and left to drip dry. I take the brace into the bathtub with me, lay it across my lap, pour on a little detergent and scrub it with my bath brush. I rinse it under the faucet and hang on a short line over the tub, where it can drip. At the same time I am soaking my aching back in the warm water. I think this is pretty smart. - MARGE
DEAR POLLY - I use my dishwasher when I have dough to raise. I turn it to "dry" and put the bowl of dough in the dishwasher. It works great.
DEAR POLLY - To make my aluminum pans shine, I boil rhubarb and water in them. Acid apples will work also, but I think rhubarb is better than anything, even soap pads. - EVA

DEAR POLLY - I save the cotton that comes in aspirin and other medicine bottles and put it all in a plastic bag, so I always have plenty to use for removing nail polish. It works fine.
My watchband often causes a rash on my wrist, so when I apply ointment on the rash, I slip the top of a boy's old sock over it, so my sleeves stay clean. - MRS. D.V.W.
DEAR POLLY - To clean a darkened aluminum pan, I put some catsup in it, fill with water and let it stand for a few hours. My pans always come out looking clean and shiny. - MARTHA

Don't abuse bed rest

DEAR DR. LAMB - My mother is having a problem and she won't listen to me. She reads your column and maybe you can help her. She is 56 years old and usually in good health but three weeks ago she had a bad cold. She started spending a lot of time in bed. Now the cold is gone but she says she is weak and tired and spends most of the day lying in bed. I've tried to tell her that she would be better off if she would get up and move around and be a little more active. She says she doesn't feel like it. Can you comment on this for her.
DEAR READER - Bed rest is one of the most abused forms of treatment. It is of little value except in people who have shock or inability to stabilize their circulation in the upright position. Other than during sleep, people should stay out of bed unless there is a real indication for it, and that indication needs to be looked at real hard.
Staying in bed can cause "bed disease." The fluid drains out of your legs so that when you do get up you feel faint or may actually faint. That is why doctors gradually increase a patient's up time if he has been in bed for a reasonable length of time.
When people have colds and upper respiratory infections it is fine to lie down for naps, but otherwise, and certainly for a good part of each day, they are better off sitting up in a comfortable chair and should walk around a bit. The heart and lungs both function better if you are in the sitting position unless you have problems of shock.
People do get fatigued from lack of activity, or sitting around too much. Prolonged bed rest also mobilizes calcium out of your bones. It is really quite debilitating.
Now, people vary in their recovery time and it may be too soon for your mother to have regained all her previous energy, but she will certainly recover faster if she stays out of bed and moves around more.
DEAR DR. LAMB - My husband had a vasectomy eight years ago. He is now 26. My doctor recently made a passing comment that it was not 100 percent effective as a birth control method. This worries us. We have sex on a daily basis so what are the facts?
DEAR READER - You'll find there is almost nothing, except death, that is 100 percent certain in life. There are rare cases in which the vas tube creates a new channel and the male can again add sperm cells to his semen. That is quite rare. It is nature's old story of healing or correcting an injury, even if the injury is intentional, as in a vasectomy.
Sperm cells stored in the prostate may still be there after a vasectomy has been performed. These are usually gone in a short time after the surgery, particularly if sex is a frequent event. That is why many doctors request samples after the surgery to see if there are still any live sperm cells present.
Still, a vasectomy is one of the most effective of all forms of birth control and it is quite rare for it not to be effective.

It offers you as much protection as you could expect from any other form of birth control.
DEAR DR. LAMB - Recently I lost someone very dear to me and the immediate cause of death was listed as cardiac arrest secondary to anterior myocardial infarction. When she died I couldn't tell if she was having a heart attack or a stroke. She seemed to weaken in her legs and complained of her eyes but didn't complain of chest pain. She vomited at first and appeared to have an upset stomach. When I realized that it was more than that I called for an ambulance. Was there anything that I could have done to keep her alive? I've been living with a guilt complex that perhaps I didn't get help in time.
DEAR READER - It is natural to look back and ask if you could have done better. Most people do the best they can in the light of the information that they have at the time. Now that you know she had a heart attack you are looking at it with information which was not available to you at the time.
If she was able to communicate, as your letter implies, she did not have cardiac arrest at that moment. If a person still has a pulse and doesn't have heart or respiratory arrest one of the best things you can do is to simply call an ambulance. If the heart stops and there is no pulse then you can use Cardio-Pulmonary Resuscitation (CPR), if you know how.

In some communities the Red Cross or the local chapter of the American Heart Association sponsors courses in learning how to do CPR.
DEAR DR. LAMB - My boyfriend is 21 years old, 6 feet and weighs 180 pounds. Will you please tell me the risks involved in his drinking one gallon to two gallons of milk every day? He seems perfectly healthy except he only sleeps four to six hours every night.
DEAR READER - As you know I believe one should "individualize not generalize" when you are talking about diet. Whether or not that much milk is harmful to him depends upon how his individual body responds to it. If he happens to be a little fat and not just muscle, then the extra calories in the butterfat could be a problem for him.
If he happens to have a high blood cholesterol level, I would recommend that he switch to fortified skim milk to avoid both the saturated fat and the cholesterol in whole milk. That would also help him limit his calorie intake in case he needs to eliminate any body fat.

Now if his cholesterol level is all right - meaning low normal - and he is not obese and tolerates this much milk without symptoms, there is not likely to be anything wrong with it. When he gets older and needs to limit his calories or has a change in cholesterol levels, then he might need to be careful to stick to fortified skim milk.
I don't think his milk drinking has anything to do with his sleeping habits.

DEAR DR. LAMB - I am not a 90-pound weakling but I am 5-foot-10 and only weigh 140 pounds. I'm 24. I don't want to get fat but I would like to have some muscles. I think I would look better if I had enough muscles to weigh 165 pounds. I have been lifting weights every day and am also active with jogging and handball. Still I don't gain any weight. What is the secret?
DEAR READER - You are probably in good physical condition from your regular exercise but if you want to grow muscles you may need to change your routine.
Muscles grow and get stronger to be able to contract with greater force. If you lift a 10-pound weight every day, even 100 times each day, your muscles will not get any bigger or stronger than they need to be to lift 10 pounds.
The best way is to lift a weight that you can lift at least three times but have trouble lifting 10 times. Use this weight for the muscle group you are training about three times a week.
