Israel to answer to its role in arms deal

WASHINGTON (AP) — Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir has reached an agreement with congressional investigators on Israel's participation in probes of U.S. arms sales to Iran. Israel will provide written answers to questions about its role in the seven secret purchases, as well as a chronology of its contacts with Reagan administration officials, congressional sources said. Shamir, winding up three days of talks in Washington, was scheduled to meet today with Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger and Vice President George Bush, and to speak at the National Press Club. "We have a significant agreement about cooperation," House Speaker James Wright of Texas said Wednesday after meeting with Shamir. "We will respect their sovereignty and they will respect our need for information."

Sen. Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii, chairman of the special Senate committee investigating the matter, said Israel would compile a chronology of national transactions and contacts with U.S. officials and submit it to investigators. The Senate and House committees looking into the Iran-Contra controvery will prepare questions and the Israeli government "will provide us with answers" in writing, Inouye said. "If we desire clarification of the answers, steps will be taken by both governments to bring this about," he said. Inouye said staff members probably would go to Israel to see government leaders if clarifications are needed. He said the relationship would be "government-to-government" with inquiries relayed to the Israelis through Secretary of State George P. Shultz.

Four candidates file on deadline

Four more candidates filed on deadline day Wednesday for Hereford city elections and with two announcing as mayoral candidates and one for Place 3, voters will have a choice on the five places to be determined April 4.

Jim Steiert, 36, of 621 Star and Sylvia Z. Flores, 603 Jackson, filed for the mayor's post. Mayor Wes Fisher had previously announced for reelection.

Boyd Foster, 50, president of Arrowhead Mills, filed as a candidate for Place 3 on the commission, the place currently held by Tom LeGate who is seeking reelection.

Ed Wuerflein, 48, added his name to those seeking election to one of the at-large places. Wuerflein is a farmer and has a laser land-leveling business. He resides at 136 Oak St.

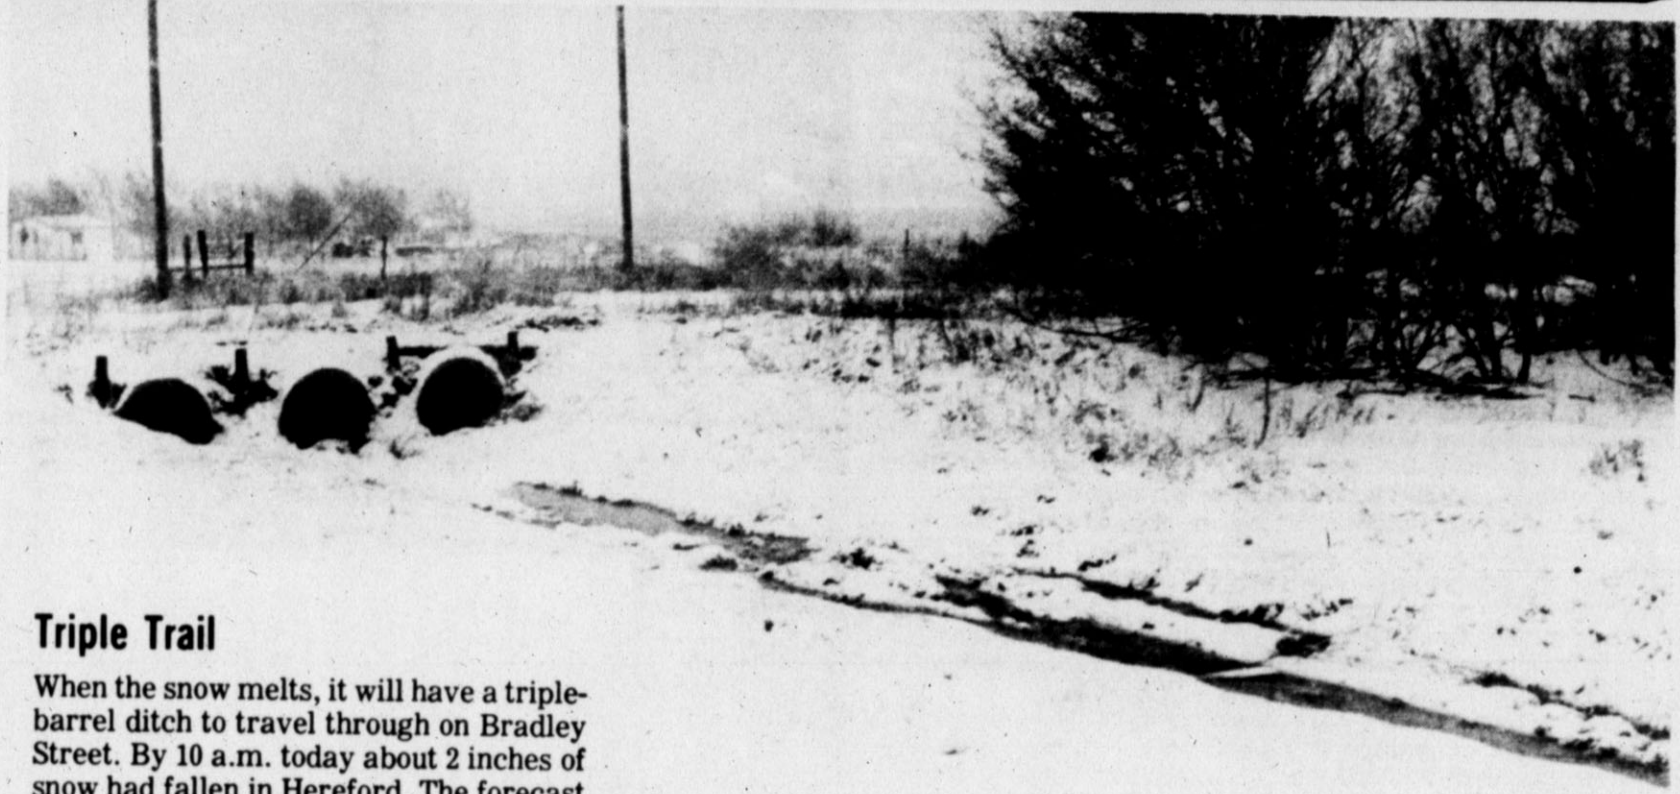

Places 5 and 6 are the at-large positions and four candidates had filed before Wuerflein on deadline day. They are Paul Abalos, Paul Hamilton, Raul H. Valdez and Jerry Walsh. The two with the most votes will win one-year terms to these places, which will be extended to two-year terms on the next elections.

Voters will now have three candidates to choose from in the mayor's race. Steiert is an associate editor with the Texas Farmer-Stockman magazine and has lived in Hereford about 12 years. A native of Hart, Steiert is a former farm editor for The Hereford Brand and was a co-founder of Texas Waterfowlers. He and his wife, Kerrie, have one daughter-Jaime, 6. A statement from Ms. Flores is expected tomorrow.

Foster, challenging LeGate for the Place 3 seat, is a graduate of Texas Tech University. He and his wife, Dolores, have two sons attending Tech. He has lived here about 25 years. "I believe our city government should more closely reflect the opinions, concerns and needs of the majority of Hereford citizens," said Foster. "These are difficult times with the economic health and orderly growth of the whole area at stake. I believe my experience and desire to serve could benefit those living in Place 3 as well as all Hereford citizens."

Wuerflein said he had "debated about running for several years" and, with the increase in number of places, decided to announce this year. "I am interested in city politics and want to see the city grow, and I want to become more involved in my community," said Wuerflein.

Triple Trail

When the snow melts, it will have a triple-barrel ditch to travel through on Bradley Street. By 10 a.m. today about 2 inches of snow had fallen in Hereford. The forecast calls for 1 to 2 more inches to pile up today and tonight.

Snow to spread into North Texas

By The Associated Press

Snow fell across a vast area of West Texas today and forecasts called for the snow to spread into western and central sections of North Texas tonight and Friday.

Accumulations of 1 to 2 inches were expected today over portions of West Texas with similar accumulations expected as the snow continues tonight. The snow is expected to end from the west Friday.

Snow was falling at dawn over the High Plains and western portions of the Edwards Plateau and a travelers advisory was in effect through tonight for the South Plains and Permian Basin because of snow and ice on bridges and overpasses.

A broad area of low pressure centered over western New Mexico was being blamed for the resumption of wintry weather across Texas.

Rain will be spreading across eastern portions of North Texas this evening.

It will be cloudy through Friday in South Texas with a chance of rain.

Lows tonight will be in the 30s and 40s over North Texas, in the 20s and 30s over West Texas, and in the 40s and 50s in South Texas.

Highs Friday will be mostly in the 30s and 40s, ranging to the 50s in southern sections of the state with some readings expected to reach into the 60s in extreme South Texas.

Early morning temperatures were mostly in the 30s and 40s except in South Texas where readings were in the 50s. Extremes ranged from 30 at Amarillo and Guadalupe Pass to 63 at Brownsville.

Other early morning temperatures around the state included 36 at Wichita Falls, 39 at Fort Worth, 41 at Waco, 44 at Austin, 47 at San Antonio, 55 at Corpus Christi, 43 at Houston, 42 at San Angelo, 30 at Lubbock, 37 at Midland and 32 at El Paso.

That feller on Tierra Blanca Creek says no matter what you do, someone always knew you would.

If you are patient in one moment of anger, you will escape a hundred days of sorrow.—Chinese proverb

As a follow-up on the Molly Ivins column in the Dallas Times Herald, her column of Feb. 17 includes a correction on the Feb. 12 column. That's the one where she blasted racial discrimination in Hereford. She admitted that Jesus Montoya was the wrong name, that it should have been "Moya."

That's all, folks. You'd think she would at least bring Dudley Bynke back to life even if she does overlook all the other errors and half-truths she had in the column.

A group of Hereford citizens left for Columbus, Ohio, this morning to present information to potential residents of this community. The cross-section representation of about 20 local business and community leaders will be talking to Department of Energy employees and Battelle Institute people who are scheduled to work in offices to be located in Hereford.

This group is not endorsing a nuclear waste repository for Deaf Smith County. They are simply providing information on the benefits of living in Hereford for working people who are going to be transferred to this area. Some of the citizens in the group have been criticized by a few individuals, and we think it is unjust.

As we've stated before, Deaf Smith County doesn't seem to be a logical place for such a repository. We don't know all the scientific reasons, but it makes common sense to us to put the repository on government land in Nevada or Washington.

The fact remains, however, that our country has been selected for a comprehensive study on the suitability of such a repository. I don't think we're going to change anything by telling people not to move here, or to appeal to them to quit working for DOE or Battelle.

When God commanded us to love our neighbors, I think he included folks in Ohio.

Clements likely to sign emergency bill for prison funds

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements likely will sign a $20.4 million emergency funding plan for Texas prisons this week, his press secretary says.

The Senate on Wednesday gave final legislative approval to the bill that would beef up parole and probation services and expand halfway house programs to help ease crowding problems in the filled-to-capacity prison system.

The emergency legislation will pay for other reforms ordered by U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice, including increasing prison medical staff and adding 400 beds to help separate violent and non-violent inmates.

Reggie Bashur, Clements' press secretary, said Clements intends to sign the bill into law before leaving Friday for Washington, D.C., where he will attend a National Governors Association meeting.

"He'll probably sign it before he goes to Washington. He wants (Comptroller Bob) Bullock to look at the numbers first," Bashur said.

Clements has said he hoped the additional money would show the state's "good faith" in making the court-ordered reforms.

Justice has threatened to fine Texas $800,500 a day beginning April 1 if a variety of reforms aren't completed.

But despite the quick legislative action, Attorney General Jim Mattox told a news conference there are too many reforms needed and too little money in the latest prison bill to accomplish all of them.

Asked if it would keep the state from being fined, Mattox replied: "I would say probably not. But it is a major step in the right direction."

The fact is, the fines are being assessed for a large array of problems. We are curing a great number of those ... But there will be some remaining that just a quick spurt of money will not solve," he said.

Garcia seeks school post reelection

Incumbent Jo Garcia is vying for a second term as a trustee of the Hereford Independent School District.

Garcia, representative of District 2 on the HISD board, has served three years on the board. She is on the Pupil Services and Curriculum Committees of the board.

Currently, the at-large seats, held by John Fuston and Bill Townsend, have drawn the most interest. Dennis Newton, Demitrio Zuniga, and Delia Griego have filed for those posts.

The filing deadline for the April 4 election is March 4. To run, candidates must be registered voters and a resident of the school district. If running for a district seat, the candidate must live in that district. Registration is done in the Hereford Schools administration office, at Union and Ave. F.

West Texas seeks supercollider despite Clements

SAN ANGELO, Texas (AP) — West Texas leaders are pushing ahead with plans to try to lure a supercollider project to the region, despite Gov. Bill Clements' view that an urban area would be better. West Texas city and business leaders met in Midland Tuesday and are negotiating to hire former U.S. Rep. Tom Loeffler and two Washington attorneys to lobby for a Garden City site.

large metropolitan areas. Clements contends federal guidelines require the project be near a large city.

He leaves for Washington Friday for a national governor's conference. Clements has said his top priority is to draw the multibillion dollar physics research project to Texas.

"I expect the governor will go forward out of Texas with at least two sites, one being urban and one being rural. We certainly hope to be the rural site and fully expect to be," Terrill said.

Ralph McLaughlin, chairman of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce's Superconducting Supercollider Steering Committee, said the group has not decided how much money they need to request from Midland, Big Spring, San Angelo and Odessa.

The Department of Energy supercollider is expected to employ about 3,000 people and have an annual budget of $270 million.

The West Texas group contends the particle accelerator can be built for $2.3 billion, not the DOE estimate of $4 billion to $6 billion.

San Angelo Mayor Burt Terrill said Garden City is just as attractive as locations near Dallas-Fort Worth, or the Austin-Houston-Bryan area.

"We need to keep in mind though that when you're talking time distance, that 50 miles out here can be made in an hour easily, whereas it may take you an hour to go 10 miles in the eastern corridor (of Texas)," Terrill said.

The West Texas site is between Big Spring, Midland and San Angelo, Terrill said.

Clements said Tuesday chances are slim that the supercollider would be in West Texas because of a lack of

State prisons closed once again

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — For the fourth time this year, the Texas prison system won't be admitting new inmates today because the number of inmates surpassed a 95-percent population cap.

And the prisons that reopened Tuesday for the first time in six days will probably stay closed Friday, too, because sheriffs relieved their crowded county jails by transferring a record 475 inmates into the state system, officials said.

At the beginning of business Tuesday, the state prisons were only 111 beds under the 95 percent limit. Another 210 inmates were taken in before prison doors closed at 5 p.m. Wednesday, while some 123 were slated for parole.

"I would anticipate us being closed Friday as well," Texas Department of Corrections spokesman David Nunnelee said.

The latest inmate headcount, made at midnight Tuesday and announced Wednesday, showed 38,654 prisoners — 95.61 percent of capacity — or 248 over the 95-percent cap, Nunnelee said.

Prison officials have said the open-and-close cycle will be repeated until later this year when trusty camps and a new maximum security prison are completed and provide additional beds.

The shutdown is the third in three weeks for the corrections department, which is operating under a 95 percent limit set by the Legislature to ease crowding.

Teachers not surprised by ruling

AUSTIN (AP) — Two teacher groups that fought losing state court battles against the mandatory literacy exam say the fight is probably over.

The Texas Supreme Court ruled Wednesday that the state had a legal and legitimate reason to order educators to take the Texas Examination of Current Administrators and Teachers in order to keep their teaching certificates.

More than 99 percent of 202,000 educators who took the TECAT last year passed the test, which checked basic reading and writing skills. The Texas State Teachers Association and Project Principle, a Starr County teacher group, challenged the constitutionality of the test.

The Supreme Court Wednesday, without writing an opinion, upheld lower court rulings against TSTA's suit. The high court wrote an opinion on the Project Principle suit.

"Teacher testing is a rational means of achieving the legitimate state objective of ensuring that public school educators meet specified standards of competency," Justice Robert Campbell said in his opinion for the court.

The court dissolved an injunction issued by State District Judge Ricardo Garcia of Rio Grande City that prevented the state from taking certificates from teachers who did not pass the test.

Attorney David Garza of Rio Grande City, who represented Project Principle, said he was "disappointed" with the Supreme Court's decision that a teaching certificate is not an irrevocable contract.

"We have a potential appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court. However, it is unlikely that we would pursue that avenue," he said.

Jim Butler, TSTA's executive director, said the state Supreme Court decision was expected.

"We originally filed the suit to try to stop the test on the basis that you should judge people by what they do in the job, not a paper-and-pencil test," he said.

Asked if TSTA would file further appeals, he said, "I don't think anything happens next. Essentially, I think it is moot."

INS cracks false-document ring

HARLINGEN, Texas (AP) — Four members of a ring that sold fraudulent documents to aliens, including valid U.S. military identification cards, have been taken "out of circulation" but the manufacturer remained at large today, authorities said.

The Immigration and Naturalization Service said it cracked the ring with the arrests of four members, including a full-time employee of the Texas National Guard stationed in Austin who allegedly was providing military ID cards that gave holders access to government installations.

The leader of the ring, which sold fraudulent documents in packages costing from $1,500 to $2,000 in cities from the U.S.-Mexico border to San Antonio, Austin and Dallas, is believed to be from Reynosa, Mexico, said an INS undercover investigator who asked that his name not be used.

The documents, including false birth certificates and Social Security cards, were allegedly manufactured in Reynosa, the investigator said.

"We busted up their operation and took four individuals out of circulation," said Jerry Sewell, INS district director.

Arrest warrants have also been issued for three other members of the ring, Sewell said.

Holders of the military cards, provided by the National Guard sergeant, "definitely have access to government installations. At least doors would open — a requirement for terrorists, militants, activists," the investigator said. "It definitely is a serious matter."

Reagan gave conflicting statements

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan gave a panel investigating the Iran-Contra affair conflicting statements on whether he approved Israel's first arms shipment to Iran, a published report says, and the former White House aide who testified that Reagan authorized the shipment is to be interviewed today.

The Los Angeles Times, citing sources it did not identify, said in today's editions that Reagan on Jan. 26 told the presidential commission headed by former Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, that he had approved the August 1985 shipment.

Then, when the commission interviewed Reagan again Feb. 11, "the president said that he had talked it over at great length with (chief of staff) Don Regan and wanted to correct himself, he had not authorized the first shipment," the newspaper said, quoting a knowledgeable source.

Regan told a Senate committee that Reagan declined to authorize the sale because of misgivings and questions about the middleman in the deal, Manucher Ghorbanifar.

Former White House adviser Robert C. McFarlane, on the other hand, testified that Reagan approved the shipment.

A Tower Commission spokesman said panel members were scheduled to question McFarlane in his hospital room today at Bethesda Naval Medical Center.

McFarlane, who is recovering from what police have called a suicide attempt last week, was to have appeared before the commission the day he was hospitalized.

The commission is scrutinizing the National Security Council and its handling of the arms sales to Iran and the possible diversion of profits to the Contra rebels fighting the Nicaraguan government.

Asked about the Times account, commission spokesman Herbert Hetu said Wednesday night, "We wouldn't comment on anything the president said in those meetings."

In addition, he declined comment on the Times' report that the commission has concluded that the Iran sales plan's main goal was to secure Iran's assistance in getting the American hostages in Lebanon released, and not, as Reagan has told the nation, to establish relations with "moderate elements" in Iran.

'Brother' relives childhood

By DEBE GRAVES
Feature Writer

Rich Kendrick is a professional with very real responsibilities in his accounting position with Friona Industries. Neatly groomed and mild-mannered, Rich presents a pleasantly conservative image, but once or twice a week he reverts back to childhood. A quick phone call to his "Little Brother", Jason Jesko.

assures Rich of a few hours of childlike enjoyment.

With Jason in company, Rich sheds the responsibilities of day-to-day life and relives happy childhood experiences he shared with his brother, Robb.

"Jason and I do the types of things that Robb and I did as kids," smiles Rich, "we play baseball at the park, we hike and cook-out at Buffalo Lake, sometimes we go out for pizza or to the library to pick out books."

Rich finds a great reward in providing memorable experiences for Jason, who doesn't have a brother. He remembers, "I first became aware of the Big Brothers-Big Sisters program through a presentation they made at West Texas State University."

After graduating from WTSU, Rich moved to Hereford and began his daily commute to Friona. A bachelor, with time on his hands, Rich decided to apply for the program. He states, "Jason and I have been paired for one year and one week now. He is a lot of fun to be around. He talks quite a bit when we are together and he isn't that picky about what we do. He seems to just like to be together."

Rich's other interests include watching football, playing tennis and volleyball for his Wesley Methodist Church team. He also attends Jason's basketball games at the YM-CA.

"Jason plays in the youth league on the 'Razorbacks,'" comments Rich, "I like to go watch him play and they are pretty good."

Watching the pair interact after a practice session makes their special friendship very clear. As Jason seeks approval, Rich praises, "You did great tonight. You're getting really good on defense."

Rich sums up his and Jason's time together "I'm not sure who has more fun-me or him."

Jason gives the best accolade the Big Brothers-Big Sisters program could ever hope for and the highest praise Rich could desire. He recently looked up at Rich and said, "You know, Rich, sometimes it's hard for me to remember you aren't really my big brother."

Erodible-land criteria outlined

The Secretary of Agriculture has approved new criteria for use in defining highly erodible land for the Conservation Reserve Program sign-up through Feb. 27.

Any land that was eligible in 1986 will be eligible in 1987. That includes land that is in Land Capability Class VI, VII, or VIII, and was farmed two years between 1981 and 1985 to an annual crop or alfalfa and certain other multiyear grasses and legumes.

Cropland in Class I through V is eligible if it is eroding greater than three times the soil loss tolerance level and was farmed two or more years between 1981 and 1985.

Land in Class II through V having a predicted average annual soil loss of two times the soil loss tolerance or greater with a serious gully erosion problem is also eligible.

Another kind of land will be eligible in 1987 and it will be the only criteria used in future years. This will be highly erodible land that has both an erosion index of 8 or greater and had an erosion rate greater than that recommended by the Soil Conservation Service Field Office Technical Guide during the 1981-85 base period.

An EI of 8 identifies an area of land that has the potential to erode at more than 8 times the rate at which soil can maintain continued productivity.

The February signups will be used to accept applications for both 1987 and 1988 contracts.

If you have land that does not have an EI of 8 but is eligible for CRP under the 1986 criteria, this is your last chance to offer to place land in the reserve.

Farmers who have small grain growing on their land face another dilemma. If they harvest the grain, they will not be able to place land in the CRP until 1988.

To stay eligible for farm program benefits, highly erodible land will need a conservation plan by Jan. 1, 1990 and planned practices will need to be completed by 1995.

Letters to the Editor

Readers say Hereford slandered

Dear Editor:

I am submitting a copy of my letter to Molly Ivins.

Ms. Ivins: I am terribly sorry you are so misinformed about our "Little South Africa", here in Hereford, Texas. From observing the way you have maligned most of the citizens here in our community, both white and brown, I have concluded that you probably are a bleeding-heart liberal who writes not only for the Dallas Times Herald, but also, in all probability, for the Texas Observer.

I would like for you to know, for your information, that our previous City Manager, Dudley Bayne, is not in fact dead, but retired. He lives directly across the alley from me, here in Hereford, and I can vouch for the fact that he lives.

You mention in your article entitled "Concerned Chicanos try to hoist Hereford out of Dark Ages" that the drop-out rate for Chicanos is ungodly, and then state that you cannot get that information from the school system. Perhaps that is due to our system's not breaking the drop-outs down by race. From my own experience in our school system here, (I graduated from Hereford High School in 1979, and attended school all of my life here) I feel that I am certainly qualified to tell you that we have white drop-outs as well as "brown" ones. These cases of dropping out, while I was in school and now, are largely due to the results of drug abuse.

When I look around me and see the lives of friends wasted due to the accessibility of drugs here, I am very glad we have had some juries who have sentenced drug dealers to long terms in prison. These dealers who have been sentenced are not only Mexican, but also Anglo. I think that upon interviewing a more widespread section of year-round Mexican residents of Hereford, you should find that most of them resent your articles, and will be happy to take issue with you on several points.

Lots of Mexican-Herefordites want none of the grouping or organization that you have said they need. As far as these groups not having or being able to obtain a meeting place, it is my understanding that you, in fact, met with them in the Hereford Community Center, a building provided and maintained by the City of Hereford, for civic meetings and functions.

In closing, I would suggest to you that perhaps you need to make sure you are aware of the facts before you sit down at your little typewriter and proceed to slander this community one more time. Your opinions, as stated thus far, lack ethics and credibility as a journalist.

Sincerely yours,
Dewayne Kimbell
515 Ave. K, Hereford, Tx. 79045

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The following letter was sent to the editor of The Dallas Times Herald by Mayor Wes Fisher, and he submitted a copy to The Brand)

To Ron Calhoun, Dallas Times Herald, 1101 Pacific Ave., Dallas, Tx. 75202:

This letter is in reference and answer to the article by Molly Ivins entitled "Concerned Chicanos try to hoist Hereford out of Dark Ages" which appeared in your Feb. 12th edition. Never before have I seen such irresponsible writing with such erroneous facts presented. It is a slap in the face to the citizens of Hereford of both Hispanic and Anglo origin. I will try to point out the true facts.

Forty two percent of the citizens of the City of Hereford are of Hispanic descent. Ms. Ivins claimed that the San Jose Community, south of the city limits of Hereford, is the heart of the Mexican-American community. The fact is that this community contains only about 7 percent of the total Hispanic population in the county. She claimed that the San Jose Community was once a prisoner of war camp which is not true. It was originally established as a labor housing center and later sold to individuals. The fact is that most residents own their own homes in this district and are proud of what they have. Through grants, they have established their own water and sewer systems.

The Hispanic population does not double during the summer, in fact, I doubt if it increases by 25 percent.

Ms. Ivins referred to the drug bust "where virtually all of the 81 citizens arrested were Hispanic." There were actually 72 citizens arrested. About 83 percent were Hispanic and that is primarily due to the fact that the undercover officer was Hispanic. The so called "harsh" sentences handed down to both Anglos and Hispanics are being upheld by the Appellate Courts. According to our Sheriff, these arrests cut the drug traffic in half in our community. The people of Hereford want to reduce drug use in our city and county and it makes no difference whether the offenders are Anglo or Hispanic.

Ms. Ivins claimed that Hispanics cannot be elected to office in Hereford. It must be pointed out that our Sheriff is Hispanic and Hispanics have been elected to our School Board, the City Commission, and have been appointed to other boards in our community. There are several Hispanic people that have filed for both the school board and City Commission in the upcoming elections. Citizens, regardless of race, are encouraged to run for office and to vote. We welcome any organization who works to get people registered and then to vote in order to create more interest in our local government.

Contrary to what Ms. Ivins claimed, the Hereford Community Center is used by Hispanic groups and has been used by the "Concerned Citizens". In fact, they have the Center booked for at least two more meetings at this writing. Hispanics have never been refused the use of the Community Center. She also claims that the City Secretary refuses to show Hispanics the map of the City voting districts. No one has ever been refused this information and any citizen that wants a map is given one. In fact, the same map has been published in the paper on several occasions. And, contrary to your report, you do not have to be a property owner to file for public office.

The local paper never said, as Molly Ivins claims, that "the concerned citizens of Deaf Smith County are racists because they only want to register and elect brown citizens." The paper has always been fair and factual in reporting on Hispanic activities.

Ms. Ivins used as an example a Hispanic lady who washes dishes at the Country Club who makes only $72 per week. She failed to say that this person is a part time employee and the $72 is her take home pay. She also failed to say that this lady, as part of her fringe benefits, receives one free meal per day at the Club and is given paid vacations, sick leave, and medical insurance.

Ms. Ivins claimed that a former Mayor of Hereford once described the Texas Rural Legal Aid lawyers as "Jew Communists." No record can be found of any former Mayor of Hereford making such a statement.

These are just some of the erroneous statements made by Molly Ivins which serve no purpose other than to encourage discrimination. It has taken 80 years to build Hereford into the successful and prosperous community that it is today. This was done, and is still being done, by good citizens of all races and to try to build a fence between the Anglos and Hispanics by irresponsible writers, such as Molly Ivins, certainly serves no constructive purpose. I am proud of all our citizens.

Very truly yours,
Wesley S. Fisher

Among children

Impetigo common disorder

Impetigo is a contagious bacterial skin infection which is common among children. It can occur almost anywhere on the body, but usually appears in the area around the nose and mouth.

According to the Texas Medical Association, impetigo usually is not a serious disease, but in a baby it can spread all over the skin and make the child very ill.

In impetigo a small patch of tiny blisters appears. The blisters soon break, exposing a patch of red, moist skin beneath. Gradually, the area becomes covered by a tan crust that looks like brown sugar. The infection then spreads at the edges, and newly infected areas may develop elsewhere.

If you or your child have impetigo, see a physician. Impetigo must be treated to prevent its spread. Your doctor probably will prescribe an antibiotic, to be taken by mouth or injected. An ointment also may be prescribed. This treatment should clear up the impetigo within seven to ten days.

Though the disease is disfiguring for a short time, it usually does not leave scars if treated promptly. Scratching and neglect can lead to a deeper infection which may scar.

Impetigo spreads from one person to another only through direct contact. A child with an active infection should be kept home from school and away from other children in the household. He or she should not share towels or washcloths with others in the family. Towels, sheets, and clothing should be thoroughly laundered. An adult who is caring for an infected child should scrub his or her hands with soap and water after contact with the lesions.

Learn to deal with stress of parenting

A sequence of ordinary little events — like spilled juice, thrown toys, an overflowing sink and ringing phone — can quickly lead to a screaming child and distressed parent.

Stress is something that parents of young children can't avoid; it's the reaction to stress that counts, says family life specialist Diane Welch.

"Parents should be aware of the symptoms that signal stress pile-up and potential danger," says the Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service home economist.

Some people react by developing physical symptoms such as headaches, dizziness, appetite loss or an increase in eating, she explains. Other parents become aggressive, which can lead to child abuse.

"Even when parents don't develop physical symptoms, they may cry, become fatigued, sad, angry, very irritable or feel depressed and guilty," Welch says. "It's not unusual for a parent experiencing stress to feel helpless and doubt his or her worth as a parent."

Lack of adequate sleep often contributes to parents' stress, notes the specialist. Sleep requirements vary from person to person, she says, but it's easy for any parent to lose sleep because of a young child's erratic sleep schedule.

According to the specialist, it's best to develop some ways of dealing with stressful events as they occur, so the stress doesn't pile up. She suggests some of the following stress-relievers:

-After putting the child in a safe place, such as his crib or room, step away until you feel you're again in control. You may want to count to ten, sit down and rest or close your eyes for a few minutes.

-Share your frustration with your spouse or telephone a friend and talk briefly about how you feel. Sharing your inner feelings is not a sign of weakness, it's a good therapy when you're upset.

-Work off your anger by doing something very physical. Instead of hitting the child, pound a mattress, scrub the floor or dig in the garden.

-Give in once in a while. If the child resists picking up his toys, for example, let the toys stay where they are temporarily.

"Avoid trying to be the superhuman parent who has a perfect child," says Welch. "In that case you can actually cause much of your own stress."

Says Penn State lost too many good football players

Paterno does not expect repeat title

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Football Writer
EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Only eight teams have won consecutive national championships in the 51-year history of The Associated Press college football poll. Coach Joe Paterno doesn't expect Penn State to

Cubs sportscaster rests after stroke

CHICAGO (AP) — Sportscaster Harry Caray, the voice of the Chicago Cubs, was resting comfortably today in Palm Springs, Calif., after suffering a mild stroke earlier this week, officials said.
The Tribune Co., owner of the Cubs and The Chicago Tribune, said in a statement that Caray, 67, had only minor discomfort. The statement did not say whether he was hospitalized.
Caray is known for his frank on-the-air comments and for leading the Wrigley Field crowd in renditions of "Take Me Out to The Ball Game," during the seventh-inning stretch at Cubs games.

make it nine.
"We lost too many good football players to win the national championship. If you're talking about a national championship contender we're not strong anywhere," Paterno said Wednesday night after being honored by the Football Writers Association of New York as Eastern Coach of the Year for the seventh time in 19 years.
Top Ten? "I don't think we'll be near that."
Top Twenty? "It depends on some things. I'll know better after spring practice. But we're not going to be as good, obviously (as last year's 12-0 team which defeated Miami, Fla. 14-10 in the Fiesta Bowl). We could end up being a decent football team. We've just got to sit back and start to regroup, stick some people in different spots."
Paterno wasn't sure exactly how many starters he must replace but said it could be as many as 18, 19 or 20. His biggest concern?
"Generally, depth. Our running back situation is going to be tough. We've got to get a fullback. We lost two fullbacks who played almost all of every game."

Paterno isn't concerned about his field general, even though two-year starter John Shaffer departs. Backup Matt Knizner returns for his senior year after playing in seven games and completing 14 of 36 passes for 217 yards with three interceptions and one touchdown, an 82-yard bomb against Pitt when he played almost the entire second half after Shaffer was injured.
"I think Knizner will be a good quarterback," Paterno said. "I'm not worried about quarterback. I'm worried about the running backs, I'm worried about depth, I'm worried about outside linebacker."
The writers also honored Rick Giancola of Montclair State as Eastern College Division Coach of the Year for leading the Indians to the New Jersey Athletic Conference championship, a 10-2 record and into the quarterfinals of the NCAA Division III playoffs.

Also honored were the top teams and players in the East and the Ivy League Player of the Year.
The ECAC Teams of the Year were Penn State in Division I-A, Holy Cross and Pennsylvania in Division I-AA, Towson State in Division II and Salisbury State in Division III. Penn State, Holy Cross, Towson State and Salisbury State also received the Lambert-Meadowlands awards as the top teams in their respective divisions.
The ECAC Players of the Year were Temple tailback Paul Palmer in Division I-A, Holy Cross tailback-defensive back Gordie Lockbaum in Division I-AA, Towson State wide receiver Dale Chipps in Division II and four players in the respective Division III districts — Amherst quarterback Paul Foye in New England, SUNY-Buffalo running back O.D. Underwood in Upstate New York, Montclair State quarterback Walter Briggs in Metro New York-New Jersey and Widener linebacker John Minnino in the ECAC South region.

Baseball spring training begins

Groundhogs around the nation may have had varying opinions, but the Boys of Summer know spring's around the corner.
Pitchers and catchers from the Cincinnati Reds, the Los Angeles Dodgers and the Atlanta Braves were reporting today to training camps in Florida.
Pitchers and catchers from the 23 other teams report Friday.
The rest of the players report next week to training camps in Florida, Arizona and California.
The first pre-season game is March 5 between the Braves and Georgia Tech.
The regular season begins April 6 with five American League and three National League games, including the traditional opener in Cincinnati, which this year is between the Reds and the Montreal Expos.

Ways with Wine

THE WATER IN BEER
Although the quality of each ingredient is important, none is more so than the quality of the water that goes into beer. This is not only because it forms 85-90 percent of the finished beer, but because it is used in every step of the brewing operation. It also has a great deal to do with the character of the beer. The first consideration, then, is the quality and type of water. It must be biologically pure and its mineral content must be known. A water that is well-suited for making lager-type beer does not make a good ale, and vice versa. That is why some regions are noted for their light beers and others for their ales.

Boston breaks two-game losing streak

Mavericks suffer 113-96 loss to Celtics

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS (AP) — You don't mess with the Boston Celtics' pride.

The Dallas Mavericks found that out on Wednesday night.

"Dallas just caught us on a bad night," said Kevin McHale, whose 28 points led Boston to a 113-96 victory over the Mavs. "After losing two in a row and playing as poorly as we did, (Coach) K.C. Jones really got on us. He doesn't yell too often, so when he did we got our tails in gear."

The world champions were riding a two-game losing streak after a 20-point loss to Utah and blowing a 17-point lead to the Los Angeles Lakers.

"I think we saw tonight what it takes to win a world's championship," said Dallas Coach Dick Motta. "They played like they were possessed. They just kicked us all around."

It was the first time in 68 NBA games that Dallas had been held to under 100 points.

"I wasn't thinking about losing three in a row," said Jones. "I was just happy we got back on the win-ing track. I gave the team a day off and it helped."

Boston outshot Dallas 50 percent to 40 percent and outrebounded the Mavs 59-43.

Larry Bird had his second triple-double of the year with 16 points, 12 rebounds and 11 assists.

"We had played two bad games in a row and we wanted to get back on the winning road," Bird said. "We knew we would have a tough game Thursday night against Houston. We didn't want to go there with three losses in a row."

Boston silenced the sellout crowd of 17,007 fans in Reunion Arena early, surging to a 67-46 halftime lead after outscoring the Mavericks 37-17 in the second period.

The Celtics (38-14) built a 31-point lead midway of the third quarter as Jones substituted liberally. It was Boston's sixth straight road game.

Danny Ainge scored 25 points, and Robert Parish had 14 for the defending world champions.

Ainge said "We had a lot of rest and really got into our transition game tonight. It may have looked easy but it wasn't. We had to work for every point we got."

Dallas, now 32-19, was led by Mark Aguirre who had 29 points and Sam Perkins who added 22.

In other NBA games, it was Cleveland 129, Sacramento 119; Philadelphia 114, Golden State 103; Indiana 105, Seattle 88; Milwaukee 113, Utah 109; and the Lakers 128, Denver 122.

Cavaliers 129, Kings 119

Center Brad Daugherty scored a season-high 33 point to help Cleveland snap Sacramento's three-game winning streak.

Daugherty and fellow rookies Ron Harper and John Williams scored six points each during a 22-6 run that brought the Cavaliers from a 104-97 deficit to a 119-110 lead with just more than two minutes left.

The victory was the Cavaliers' sixth in their last seven home games. 76ers 114, Warriors 103

Andrew Toney, Maurice Cheeks and Charles Barkley combined for 75 points as the 76ers survived a late Golden State rally in Philadelphia.

Toney scored 27, Cheeks 25 and Barkley 23 as the 76ers handed the Warriors their 11th loss in 14 games. Barkley, who earlier this week called some of his teammates "wimps" and "complainers," also grabbed 18 rebounds.

Barkley praised his team's effort against Golden State, but didn't back off from his earlier remarks.

"I just told the truth," he said. "I don't care who doesn't like me."

Pacers 105, SuperSonics 88

Guard John Long scored 29 points to lead Indiana to its fifth win in seven games. The Pacers jumped out to an 8-0 lead on their homecourt and stayed in front the rest of the way.

Bucks 113, Jazz 109

Terry Cummings scored 35 points as the visiting Bucks won their sixth straight game. Milwaukee took its biggest lead of the game, 106-97, when John Lucas completed a three-point play with 5:02 remaining.

Utah scored the next seven points, including four by Thurl Bailey, to cut the gap to two with 2:39 left. But the Bucks pulled ahead, 112-106, on a pair of free throws by Lucas with 17 seconds remaining.

Lakers 128, Nuggets 122

Magic Johnson scored 37 points and handed out 16 assists as the visiting Lakers improved their record to a league-best 39-13. Kareem Abdul-Jabbar added 25 points while James Worthy had 21 for Los Angeles.

Alex English led Denver with 27 points.

PRO™ TEXAS
A NEW OPTIONAL CALLING PLAN FROM AT&T

On November 13, 1986 AT&T Communications of the Southwest, Inc. ("AT&T") filed with the Public Utility Commission (PUC) of Texas to introduce a new intrastate, optional calling plan, PRO Texas. A comparable interstate plan, known as PRO America, is currently available to Texas customers.

PRO Texas gives Texas consumers an opportunity to save money on direct dialed in-state long distance calls. Customers who choose this new AT&T plan will receive a 10% discount on all AT&T intrastate direct dialed station calls by paying a monthly charge of $15.00.

The PRO Texas discount applies to calls placed during all rate periods and all days. The discount is in addition to the AT&T intrastate evening discount of 25% and the night/weekend discount of 40%. A one time charge of $6.00 will be billed to initiate the service. However, this charge will be waived during the first 90 days that the offering is available.

PRO Texas will be available to all Message Telephone Service customers in Texas. AT&T estimates that it will generate revenues in the first year of almost $8 million, which is 7% of AT&T's annual revenues for all Texas intrastate service.

The PUC has assigned Docket No. 7194 to this proposed service offering. The proposed effective date for PRO Texas is March 16, 1987. Persons who wish to intervene or otherwise participate in these proceedings should notify the PUC as soon as possible. A request to intervene, participate, or for further information should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard, Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757. Further information also may be obtained by calling the Public Utility Commission Consumer Affairs Division at (512) 458-0223 or (512) 458-0227, or (512) 458-0221 teletypewriter for the deaf.

Baylor Spring Rally scheduled

Dr. Jesse Sawyer, Baylor University assistant vice president and dean of students, will be a featured speaker at the Baylor Spring Rally at 7 p.m. Monday at First Baptist Church, Tyler and 13th Streets, in Amarillo.

The annual rally, sponsored by the Baylor Parents League, also will include an address by Dr. James Henry Nolen, associate professor of computer and engineering sciences.

The meeting is free and open to the public. Prospective and newly admitted students and their families, parents of Baylor students, BPL members and high school counselors are encouraged to attend.

The league is a partnership between parents and Baylor, according to Bobby D. Schrade, director of school relations, freshman admissions and BPL school relations. "The league keeps parents vitally linked to the life of the university," Schrade said. "It is a vehicle by which parents can work to provide the kind of college life they want for their sons and daughters."

The rally also will include a message from a current Baylor student. "The league is involved in the recruitment of outstanding students through the spring rallies," Schrade said. "We want BPL members to hear from a Baylor administrator, faculty member and student at each rally."

The speakers' topics will include preparation for university study in high school, academics, faculty, costs, admissions, orientation, advisement, registration, housing and student life.

League members receive a subscription to Towers, a magazine about Baylor; a university activities calendar; a newsletter; and BPL and Baylor decals.

Each summer, the BPL invites parents of current and newly admitted students to join the league. According to Schrade, the annual $10 membership fees go directly to the BPL Scholarship Endowment Fund. Parents also may make designated gifts to any phase of Baylor through the BPL.

Congress using Gates hearings as chance to harness CIA

WASHINGTON (AP) — After a difficult decade of stop-and-go supervision of the nation's spies, the Senate Intelligence Committee is using the confirmation process of a new CIA director to try again to rein in an agency once condemned as a "rogue elephant."

The opportunity is provided by the unexpected illness and resignation of CIA Director William J. Casey and the proposed elevation of his deputy, Robert M. Gates, just as Congress opened investigations into the Iran-Contra controversy.

The secret sale of arms to Iran, described by Gates as "a risky gamble" that in hindsight should not have been tried, was one of hundreds of covert operations initiated by a president since the end of World War II.

Until the Senate and House intelligence committees were made permanent institutions in 1976, most of these closely held operations were conducted in the shadows, outside the realm of regular and consistent congressional oversight.

Assassination plots, experimentation with mind-altering chemicals, the organization of coups all were included in the characterization of the CIA by the late Sen. Frank Church as a "rogue elephant" which, by its very nature, was resistant to the control and guidance of Congress during the 1970s.

Since the Church committee reported in 1976, Congress has sought to make oversight of covert operations a matter of expected routine.

CURATOR NAMED

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Timothy Benson has been named associate curator of the Los Angeles County Museum of Art's Robert Gore Rifkind Center for German Expressionist Studies.

Benson's area of expertise is the early 20th-century Berlin Dada movement within the broader context of German Expressionism.

Benson previously served as assistant professor of art at the University of Nebraska, Lincoln, where he taught modern art.

But under Casey, whose roots in intelligence work date to the wartime operations of the OSS in Europe more than four decades ago, and who is widely credited for shoring up CIA morale and bolstering its budget, lawmakers had increasingly complained that information was grudgingly and sparingly provided.

Sen. William Cohen, R-Maine, vice chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee, has said that in getting information from Casey, even behind closed doors and with guarantees of secrecy, one had to ask precisely "the right question."

And even if senators found the right question, they could count on getting only "half the right answer," Cohen said.

Gates has promised to end that. In testimony Tuesday and Wednesday, he repeatedly pledged to be forthcoming and forthright in the information he supplies. He acknowledged the CIA made mistakes in helping the National Security Council facilitate the Iranian arms sales, a covert operation the CIA had been forbidden by the White House to disclose.

And, reversing the stance he took on the first of the two days of public testimony, he told the committee he would feel it his duty as CIA director to report to the panel on any illegal intelligence activity by any U.S. agency, including the NSC.

The relationship between the congressional intelligence oversight committees and the CIA is of necessity a two-way street.

For his part, Sen. David Boren, D-Okla., the Senate panel's new chairman, has promised to guarantee that the CIA's secrets remain secret.

On the other hand, Boren and his committee want no more surprises about what U.S. agents are up to, surprises such as the jolting 1984 revelation that the CIA had used contract employees to mine Nicaraguan harbors.

That goal of secrets shared and secrets kept can be achieved, both Gates and senators agree, only if a "relationship of mutual security and trust" is nurtured and sustained.

And as the public phase of the Gates confirmation process closed, both the nominee and key senators agreed progress had been made.

Summing up, Cohen told reporters, "I would say he has taken a very large step toward reestablishing trust."

EDITOR'S NOTE: Lawrence L. Knutson covered the congressional investigation into alleged illegal activities by the CIA a decade ago and is now one of the AP reporters covering the Iran-Contra affair.

GREENVILLE, Texas (AP) — Six months ago Mickey DuBuque took a magnifying glass along when she went to the supermarket so she could put the right cans in her basket.

But such outings were rare for the 43-year-old Greenville woman, because, as she says, "I was afraid to go anywhere because I was afraid I might not get back home."

Mrs. DuBuque suffers from myotonic muscular dystrophy, a disease that can cause muscle weakness, poor circulation, difficulty in swallowing and excessive sleepiness. Mrs. DuBuque suffers from all those symptoms and one more — cataracts.

Myotonic muscular dystrophy is an inherited disease, and Mrs. DuBuque has passed it down to her only child, Lori. But ironically, Mrs. DuBuque didn't realize she had the disease until she found out that Lori did.

"I thought I had arthritis," Mrs. DuBuque explains. "My mother had had it, and when I started having trouble getting up from chairs and moving my hands, I thought, 'Well, I've got it too.'"

"Now I realize that my mother probably had dystrophy and never knew it."

Lori, 19, attends special education classes and has had a variety of medical problems all her life. When Lori had leg surgery in Dallas a few years ago, doctors told Mrs. DuBuque that she had it too.

They also told her that the disease has no cure, but Mrs. DuBuque says she wasn't frightened when she heard the news.

"I wasn't really scared when they told me," she says. "I just thought, 'I'm too young to be old,' but at least I was alive."

Within a few years, sleepiness and a weak neck were the least of Mrs. DuBuque's worries. Her leg muscles weakened badly and that combined with her gradually worsening eyesight, caused her to fall down frequently. In two years, she suffered two broken legs.

"I'd be walking along and my legs would just give," she says. "I'd fall down, and I didn't have any control over my legs."

She couldn't negotiate stairs or curbs, so walking became a chore. She could rarely walk by herself. A routine walk to the bank became a burden, and Mrs. DuBuque felt increasingly frustrated.

In May, Lori participated in the Special Olympics in Austin, and Mrs. DuBuque traveled there to see her. Within a 45-minute period, she fell down a flight of stairs and tripped on a curb. She was badly cut and bruised, and as frightened as she'd ever been in her life.

"I knew my eyes were bad, but that day in Austin scared the devil out of me," Mrs. DuBuque said. "I had to do something. It had gotten to where I'd put my hand out in front of me and I couldn't see it."

Like many people with failing eyesight, Mrs. DuBuque had gotten used to a blurred view of the world. She adjusted herself to listening to television and barely seeing the action on the screen, and to feeling the clothesline so she could tell where to hang the clothes.

"I'd clean up, but I couldn't tell if the house was clean or not," Mrs. DuBuque said. "I couldn't even look at the TV guide, and when I can't read TV Guide, something is wrong."

Fear had kept Mrs. DuBuque away from the doctor.

"I thought I was going blind and I guess I didn't want to hear it," she said. "That day in Austin, they were bandaging up my cuts, and I kept saying, 'I can't see, I can't see.'"

Shortly after she came back to Greenville, a friend drove Mrs. DuBuque to Dallas, where she found that her vision problem was caused by cataracts. She was told that the problem was correctable with surgery, but that wasn't exactly good news.

"I couldn't afford anything like that," she said. A divorced mother who receives no child support, Mrs. DuBuque's dystrophy-related problems kept her from working. Surgery was, at best, a distant hope. Then Mrs. DuBuque was referred to Dr. William S. Harris, a Dallas ophthalmologist who was a founder of the Lions Club Eye Bank.

"I went over there (to Harris' office), but I kept telling them I couldn't afford the surgery. They kept saying, 'Don't worry about it.' In a way I didn't want to have it done because I was afraid it wouldn't work."

Harris performed outpatient cataract surgery on Mrs. DuBuque's right eye last July, 10 days after her first visit to his office.

The only pain she suffered during the operation was having to hear the snip-snip of the surgeon's scissors, she says.

"I wasn't asleep," she said. "They numbed my face, but they didn't put me to sleep. Dr. Harris talked to me all the way through it. The worst part was hearing the scissors. When it was over, I was uncomfortable, but not bad enough to even take a Tylenol."

Within a few days, Mrs. DuBuque was seeing a whole new world through one eye. Her vision improved dramatically, going from legally blind in the right eye to 20-25 without glasses.

"I couldn't believe how much I had missed seeing," Mrs. DuBuque said. "I said 'My gosh, Lori, you've changed so much.' I hadn't really seen my daughter in years. Everything looked so different."

On Oct. 30, Mrs. DuBuque underwent the same operation, cataract removal with intraocular lens implant, on her left eye. With that procedure, her left eye improved from 20-50 with corrective lenses to 20-50 without corrective lenses.

"It's still a little fuzzy in that eye, but it's so much better than it was," Mrs. DuBuque said. "I can read again. I read everything — Reader's Digest, westerns, romances, those rag papers you get at the grocery store. I like to read just about anything I can get my hands on."

Mrs. DuBuque still isn't driving — her days of near-blindness have made her wary of getting behind the wheel. She still doesn't go out much without friends because myotonic dystrophy makes her too tired for a lot of activity.

She's doing exercises these days — push-ups against a wall — that her doctors tell her may keep her out of a wheelchair.

At times, it seems as if Mrs. DuBuque and myotonic dystrophy are fighting for control of her body, and for now, Mrs. DuBuque is winning the battle.

"I don't ever say 'Why me?' because I guess somebody has to have this disease," Mrs. DuBuque said with a defiant gleam in her eye.

Ann Landers

Be civil, pleasant

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I need to know if I am a smothering mother, hopelessly square, out of date or just plain nuts. Here is the situation:

My husband and I were divorced 10 years ago. I have raised my three sons alone. (Even when their father and I were married he didn't give me much help.) I think I've done a darned good job with these kids. They have never been in any trouble and that's more than a lot of parents can say these days.

"Jeff," the eldest (23), met a 19-year-old girl five weeks ago and went crazy over her. They have been together every evening and every weekend. When they aren't together they are on the phone. He told me this morning that he and "Monica" are moving into an apartment together in three weeks.

I was shocked to learn that her parents think it is "great." Jeff describes them as "real with it." when he told his dad about the arrangement, Dad's advice was, "Go for it!" (This didn't surprise me. The old man is on a pretty fast track himself.)

I realize that children need independence and I have never tried to clip my sons' wings, but I can't understand how parents of a 19-year-old girl can OK such an arrangement. In fact they are helping to furnish the apartment. Please let me hear from you.—Rochester Query

DEAR R.Q.: You aren't nuts, mother. Monica's parents sound like they are a quart low, but there is nothing you can do about them.

The live-in decision was obviously made below the navel and I think it's a bummer, but Jeff is 23 and free to do as he pleases. Be civil and pleasant. And don't rent his room.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I have enjoyed your column for many years, but never thought I'd be writing to you. Please permit me to use your space to address your readers.

As I am sure everyone knows, Cary Grant passed away recently in Davenport, Iowa. I resent the way some publications described our city. Davenport was called "an unglamorous burg, a sleazy jerkwater town" and "a turn in the road."

If Davenport is so bad, why would someone as famous as Cary Grant come here? Burt Bacharach was featured last year for the grand reopening of our newly renovated Adler Theater. Tony Bennett performed in this area recently and enjoyed it.

We greatly mourned Mr. Grant's passing, and felt very close to him. The headline in our Quad-City Times paper said it best: "Cary Grant Died In Our Arms." And that's the way all of us felt.—D. of Davenport

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I must respond to "A Friend From Up North," who was appalled by the ignorance of U.S. citizens who visit Canada. I suggest that she calm down.

I am from New Orleans. Every New Yorker I've met thinks our entire city is located on Bourbon Street and Mardi Gras lasts all year long. They also believe we have nothing but swampland around us and all the cooking is Cajun.

Ignorance is where you find it and unfortunately, you find it all over.—Louisiana Native

DEAR LOU: How true. Thanks for saying it so well.

Even if drinking is in the "in" thing in your crowd, it needn't crowd you out. Learn the facts from Ann Landers' booklet, "Booze and You—For Teen-Agers Only." Send 50 cents and a self-addressed envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611.

Trick or treat! In the middle of the 14th century, in Spain, the style was to wear false beards. It was not long before the country resembled a masquerade party. No one knew who anyone else was!

Many school teachers going back to college

Many first graders are managing major corporations and running sensitive chemical experiments—at least on computers. The ones who aren't are sending their teachers back to school.

Jerry Willis and Lamont Johnson, instructional technology professors in Texas Tech University's College of Education, said public school teachers are going back to college in hordes to learn how to use one of the best educational tools ever invented—the computer.

Willis and Johnson have both written numerous articles and books about personal and educational computing. Willis wrote "The Peanut Butter and Jelly Guide to Computers," one of the first books on personal computing, and Johnson is editor of "Computers in the Schools," one of our major journals covering computer education.

"Teachers who have been out of school more than five years are probably going to have students who know more than they do about computers," said Dr. Johnson. "They come back to take classes about how to use computers and how to incorporate them into their particular classrooms."

The variation in levels of computer literacy among recent college graduates and those who graduated several years ago exist because of changes in the past three years in the way computer courses are taught, said Dr. Willis.

"A real transition has taken place in the last four years," said Willis. "The emphasis in the first microcomputer courses to hit the schools was on programming. Now we assume we're teaching someone who is going to be a competent professional in a field other than computer information systems and that they will adapt already developed programs for their own purposes."

Although some public school students today get a taste of computers by the first or second grade, many teachers are still uncomfortable with the technology and do not know its educational power.

"The real power of the computer is its ability to simulate an environment," said Willis. "A student can simulate virtually any situation on the computer, including complex chemical experiments, running a company or growing a garden."

"Most of the skills you need to do the real thing are needed to do it on the computer. First graders can plant seeds, water them and watch them grow and then they can find out if they watered them too much or too little and what they could have done differently to make them grow better."

Johnson said the simulation ability helps overcome one of the major deficits of classroom teaching—the artificiality of the environment.

"Learning by doing is much more profitable than a teacher lecturing to a class," Johnson said. "The old idea that if kids are having fun, they aren't learning is not true. In the real world, you learn best when you are enjoying it. Computers have a way of getting students more invested in the subject."

Texas is one of the few states to require prospective teachers to take computer courses. The requirement, Willis said, is resulting in diffusion of computer technology throughout the public school curricula.

"Two patterns of usage have developed," he said. "One is the computer room where all the computers are kept and students come in to get familiar with them. Now, we're seeing diffusion of the technology as teachers discover the educational value of computers and begin using the computer in their own classrooms."

Beginning teacher trainees and those who are returning for computer courses at Texas Tech use the College of Education's Educational Computing Lab which is equipped with 25 personal computers or the Advanced Technology Learning Center, a central facility equipped with several microcomputer labs and mainframe equipment.

"Computers will play a big role in education in the future," said Willis. "It's already getting to the point where the teacher who doesn't know the educational power of the computer is at a disadvantage."
