WASHINGTON (AP) - The fiery plunge of a Soviet satellite into the atmosphere over Canada alerted much of the world for the first time to the nuclear devices that have been orbiting overhead for years.

Many people now are asking if such an accident can happen again, perhaps with deadly consequences. What about those 24 atomic packages still up there?

U.S. nuclear experts say the atom-powered satellites still aloft pose no threat for at least 600 years. About that time, 15 of them, all Russians, are due to plummet back to earth and could be dangerous.

Before then, they say the threat comes from nuclear packages still to be launched which could encounter a problem like the one that sent Cosmos 954 plunging back toward earth last Tuesday.

Even then, however, the experts say a spacecraft like the U.S. manned space shuttle might be able to retrieve such a satellite when a fall into the atmosphere is threatened.

No one is certain what happened when

Cosmos 954 hit the upper atmosphere over a remote area of western Canada. But it was high enough, nearly 100 miles, so that if the reactor did burn up, its poisonous wastes probably were carried by upper atmosphere winds all around the globe where they might stay for years.

U.S. and Canadian experts have been making aerial and ground searches for debris from the satellite. The hunt was concentrated late in the week about 220 miles west of Baker Lake after aerial searchers briefly detected a high level of radiation on the ground there Wednesday night. That sighting was discounted on Friday. Baker Lake is a small outpost about 100 miles south of the Arctic Circle.

The first American launch of an atom-powered satellite 14 years ago drew media attention, but little has been heard about the satellites since. Before Tuesday, the Russians had never even acknowledged publicly that they had launched nuclear-powered satellites.

However, the United States keeps close track on the Soviet nuclear satellites through an intelligence and tracking network.

Thus, when Cosmos 954 was launched last Sept. 18, its purpose was quickly determined by a computer deep inside Cheyenne Mountain in the Colorado Rockies where the North American Defense Command keeps track of the 4,500 manmade objects in space.

The orbital path of Cosmos 954 was similar to that of 15 earlier Russian satellites - all equipped with nuclear reactors and all designed to use the power of the reactor to monitor movements of U.S. Navy ships and submarines.

Each of the earlier satellites in the series operated for about two months, and NORAD trackers observed that each was then split into three pieces by ground command.

A section carrying the reactor then was fired into a position about 620 miles up, to assure it would not re-enter the atmosphere with its radioactive wastes for at least 600 years.

But this did not happen to Cosmos 954. In December, the satellite began losing

THE FIREPLACE is the most inefficient heating device known to man, according to an article we read recently, because only about 10 percent of the fuel used actually gets converted to usable heat in the home. Most folks with fireplaces are aware of this fact, but they still come to the defense of the old-fashioned unit.

I know most of the bad stuff we read about them is true, and it hurts me in the pocketbook to think about my electric heat making a mad dash to get up the chimney. Fireplaces are a lot of trouble - you carry in the wood and carry out the ashes. They burn your face and freeze your back.

But, they warm your soul, and I love 'em!

FARMERS HAVE a reputation for humor born out of adversity, and you hear quite a bit of the dry, pointed wit in all the farmers' meetings going on these days. Present problems besetting farmers are probably the toughest they've faced economically, but things have been harsh for the farmers back through the years and they have always turned to humor to let off steam.

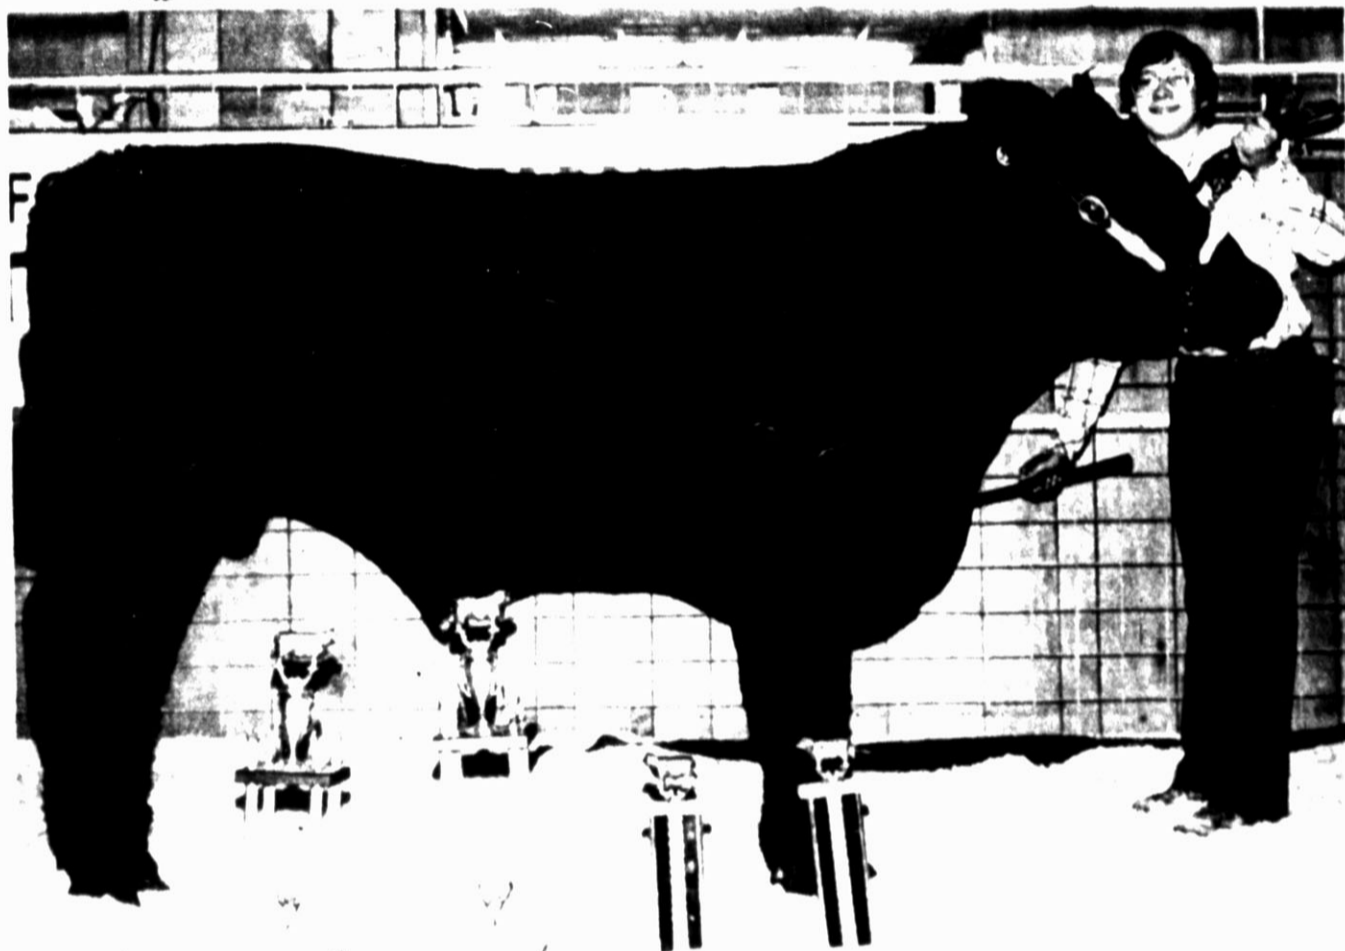

The story goes that leaders of a farm demonstration called for wives of farmers to volunteer to staff the strike office one week. One farmer explained that his wife would be unable to do so. "She has to work so I can afford to farm," was his explanation.

One farmer recalled a story told during the great depression. There was a young farmer who walked to town every Saturday and bought an axe. Saturday after Saturday he would be back to buy more axes, paying two dollars for each axe. The merchant's curiosity finally caused him to ask, "What are you doing with all those axes?"

"I'm selling them to my neighbors for a buck apiece," the farmer replied. "Well, aren't you losing a lot of money?" queried the merchant. "Yeah," retorted the farmer, "but it sure beats the heck out of farming."

A farm has been defined as a portion of land covered by a mortgage. In the dust bowl days, a farmer was trying to borrow more money on his land and the banker said, "We'll have to go out and look it

CAIRO (AP) - Egypt will continue on the road to a negotiated peace "to the very end" but warned anew Saturday there will be "grave and destructive consequences" if Israel undermines future talks.

The words of caution came as President Anwar Sadat was to announce plans to meet with President Carter in Washington next week to rally American support behind his negotiating position. Simultaneous announcements of the trip were expected in Cairo and Washington.

In a message to American Moslems of the World Islamic Colloquium meeting in Detroit, Mich., Sadat urged the Israelis to respond to his peace initiative with "positive action."

"I bear the world as my witness that if this initiative is not responded to in spirit and fact and positive action, there will be grave and destructive consequences whose responsibility will be borne for several generations by those who work to

Juvenile Arrested For Break-In

A Mexican-American male has been charged with theft over $200 in connection with the Jan. 9 break-in of city judge Woodie McDermitt's office.

Approximately $825 in cash and $310.32 in checks and money orders were taken in the robbery.

A 16-year-old juvenile, working as a custodian at the time of the incident, has been charged with the theft, according to Chief Don Brush of the Hereford Police Department.

"We have two other suspects - an 18-year-old man and a juvenile girl," Brush said, adding that he did not know if and when additional arrests would be made.

Brush said the money has not been recovered and the arrested youth has been turned over to the custody of his parents after referral to juvenile probation authorities.

McDermitt's office is down the hall from the police department.

'Scat' Russell To Run For County Judge Seat

L.B. "Scat" Russell, Walcott school superintendent for 10 years and former Hereford High School principal, has announced his candidacy for the Deaf Smith County judgeship.

Russell, 60 and a Democrat, is the fourth candidate to file for the position since Sam Morgan announced he would not seek re-election.

Russell, a salesman at Orval Watson Ford, is the former Walcott superintendent, taking that position after serving principal stints at Shirley Elementary and Hereford High School.

Russell was head football coach at Hereford High for six years.

"The administrative end of being county judge is more important than the judicial part of it, and I think I'm a good administrator," Russell said in announcing his candidacy.

"I understand all the problems. I've been around it all my life. We're dealing here with taxes, money and people.

"I want to stay in the public eye and I think I can do a good job."

Russell, who also has sold insurance and real estate, was born in Hereford and was graduated from Hereford High. He earned a bachelor of science degree in education and economics in 1941 from undermine it," the official Middle East News Agency quoted Sadat as saying in the message released Saturday.

Foreign Minister Mohamed Ibrahim Kamel told two Egyptian parliamentary committees today Egypt would continue "the road to negotiation to the very end" but "will not bargain on its land and will not give up the rights of the Palestinian people."

U.S. officials in Washington say progress has been made on an Egyptian-Israeli declaration of principles, but the two countries still disagree on key points, including the status of the 1.1 million Palestinians living on the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River and Gaza Strip.

They said Israel is resisting U.S.-backed demands that it acknowledge Palestinians "have legitimate rights" or a claim to statehood.

But after talks in Jerusalem with Assistant Secretary of State Alfred Atherton, the Israelis agreed the declaration should recognize the Palestinians be given a voice in "determination" of their future.

As a compromise gesture, officials said, Egypt will not insist that Israel surrender all the Arab lands it captured in the 1967 war.

Atherton was scheduled to meet with King Hussein of Jordan today in the Jordanian capital of Amman to try to draw him into the Egyptian-Israeli peace talks. But neither Israeli nor American officials expect Atherton to have much success at this point.

Meanwhile, Egyptian-Israeli military talks will resume in Cairo beginning on Monday and focus on Israeli troop withdrawal from the Sinai Peninsula, official Israeli sources said in Tel Aviv.

One informant said the formal decision to send Defense Minister Ezer Weizman to Cairo will be made today by the Israeli cabinet. Egypt already has agreed to send its war minister, Mohamed Abdel Ghany Gamaasy.

The military talks bogged down earlier this month over Israeli insistence that 20 Jewish settlements remain in the Sinai after the occupied territory is returned to Egypt. Sadat has demanded total Israeli withdrawal Arab land.

Hardin Simmons then received his masters in education.

He taught a total of 34 years in Abilene, Baird, Cisco, Hereford and Walcott.

"I think Deaf Smith County is great. It's one of the best places to live. We have problems here, but you can't run away from problems wherever you go."

Four Families Hit by Slayers

By The Associated Press

Eleven members of four families - one of them a 6-year-old boy - and a visitor were either shot or slashed to death in a 24-hour period in California, Maine, Massachusetts and Missouri. Two persons were being held in connection with two of the four triple murders, officials said.

A man wanted in connection with the gunshot slayings of three members of a family in Holden, Maine, on Friday was arrested early today in Lumberton, N.J., Maine state police said. The man was identified as an in-law of the victims.

In the Massachusetts slayings, police today were holding a 15-year-old youth for arraignment in the shooting deaths Friday of his father, mother and sister.

Police had no suspects in custody in the triple slaying in Sacramento, Calif., where a woman was found slashed to death and her 6-year-old son was found shot to death in their home. The third victim, also shot in the head, was visiting the family, police said.

Police in Pine Lawn, Mo., where a man, his wife and 18-year-old daughter were shot to death Friday in an apparent robbery attempt of their candy store, said they were looking for two young men who left the store in a green automobile.

The man being held in connection with the slayings in Maine was identified as Harold Estes, 23, of East Holden.

He had been sought by police since Friday evening when the bodies of Alphonse Vaillancourt and his wife, Mary, both in their 50s, and their son, David, in his 20s, were found in their home on U.S. 1-A in Holden, just south of Bangor.

At Least 10 Die In Hotel Blaze

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) - Fire swept through the historic downtown Coates House hotel Saturday, killing at least 10 persons, four of whom plunged to their deaths from upper-story windows, authorities said.

Several of the apartment hotel's 140 elderly residents were injured in the blaze and at least two others were unaccounted for hours after the flames were extinguished.

Firemen responding to the 4:12 a.m. alarm turned in by the desk clerk at the six-story frame and stone building found several persons hanging out the windows. Officials said the fire started in one of the upper stories.

Joe Bonino, owner of a bar across the street, said he was leaving his establishment when he saw smoke pouring from the upper floors of the hotel.

"All you could see was the top parts of bodies hanging out the windows screaming for help," Bonino said. "People were breaking out windows, trying to get out, and yelling 'Over here!' and 'Save me!' to the firemen."

By 8 a.m., the fire was said to be under "limited control" and firemen continued pouring a steady stream of water on the smoldering remains in 5-degree weather. John Waas, battalion fire chief, said parts of the walls were very fragile and prevented firemen from getting into the debris to search for more victims.

Carter Feels 'Great' After Physical Exam

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Carter emerged Saturday from his first complete physical examination since taking office and declared, "I feel great."

Carter drove to the National Naval Medical Center in suburban Bethesda, Md., at dawn for a head-to-toe checkup that took more than two hours.

A reporter asked the beaming president if he felt better now than a year ago.

"Yes," said Carter with a grim-

"better than campaigning." Secretary of Defense Harold Brown met Carter at the hospital and together they drove directly to the Pentagon where they immediately went into a top-secret briefing session in the National Military Command Center, known as the war room.

Brown told him the purpose of the briefing was to show how the war room operates "in a simulated crisis situation."

Carter said he thought it was important for the president, the defense chief, the joint chiefs of staff and the White House assistant for national security affairs, Zbigniew Brzezinski, "to go through these exercises together so we'll be ready should anything ever occur."

The war room also is the major Washington terminal of the "hot line" with Moscow.

Carter's complete physical exam was his first since Sept. 7, 1976, when a private doctor saw him in Atlanta. His White House physician, Rear Adm. William M. Lukash, gave him an interim examination last Aug. 19 during a weekend stay at Camp David, Md.

U.S. Army Helicopters Help in Storm's Wake

By The Associated Press

U.S. Army helicopters and engineers moved into the Midwest Saturday to help the area dig from under a blizzard that shut down industries and cut off thousands of travelers. At least 90 weather-related deaths were reported nationwide.

Army helicopters searched for stranded motorists in Ohio today after President Carter declared a state of emergency there and in Michigan and Indiana.

A 9 p.m. to 4 a.m. curfew was ordered in Indianapolis to prevent looting.

"All state and local resources have been expanded but are unable to cope with the magnitude of the problem," said Gov. William Milliken of Michigan.

Weather-related deaths were reported as follows: 17 in Wisconsin, 16 each in Illinois and Ohio, 11 each in Indiana and Michigan, three in Alabama, two each in Georgia, Kentucky, Maryland, North Dakota, and Pennsylvania, and one each in Maine, Minnesota, Nebraska, South Dakota, Tennessee and Virginia.

The storm that clobbered the Midwest turned to rain in the East, melting snow from an earlier storm and causing flooding from North Carolina to Maine.

Rains Kill 8 Persons In South Africa

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) - Torrential rains left eight persons dead, 24 missing and scores stranded in trees and on rooftops in the Pretoria-Johannesburg area Saturday, officials said.

Four persons were killed and seven critically injured in a train derailment, one of two caused by flooding. Four others drowned in storm-related accidents.

More than seven inches of rain fell in the last 24 hours, following 10 days of downpours. Air force helicopters were flying missions to evacuate those stranded.

Most areas of Pretoria, 30 miles northeast of Johannesburg, were blacked out by a power failure, and rescue workers had to rely on radio communications because telephones were out of order.

Rail services was snarled by washouts. Many roads were flooded and several cars were reported swept away by sudden torrents.

Police Report

Tommy Weaver, 815 E. Park, reported that somebody broke the windshield and mirror on his car while it was parked at the bowling alley between 10:30 p.m. Friday and 2 a.m. Saturday.

The damage was estimated at $165. PFC Pawn and Loan Shop, 202 N. Main, reported Friday afternoon that somebody stole a pocket knife valued at $14.

Lavon Pagett, 618 Ave. A, told police that someone entered her house Friday through a bedroom window and stole several coins and $90 in cash.

Missing was $200 in half dollars, $25 in old coins and silver dollars.

Griffin & Brand Produce reported a stolen 1971 Chevrolet pickup Saturday. The pickup, taken between 8 p.m. Friday and 7:30 a.m. Saturday, was found in Friona.

It was parked near a railroad track, and a train totaled the vehicle.

Police Friday investigated minor traffic accidents at 2:33 p.m. at Park and S. 25 Mile Ave. and at 12:15 p.m. in the 100 block of Third.

The Abundant Life

GRUDGES MUST GO

BY BOB WEAR

GRUDGES MUST GO. They must be dropped, discarded, completely given up; if we want a satisfactory life. These deep feelings of resentment or ill-will dissipate personal happiness, destroy peace of minds, overshadow the sunshine of our blessings, and cause all kinds of unnecessary troubles.

A GRUDGE IS NEVER harmless, and is never helpful. It always hurts, and the spread of the hurt may be unbelievably wide. This feeling of resentment or ill-will seeks satisfaction. It would be bad enough, if it were confined to the person who harbors it because of the great damage to that person. In addition to this evil, there are many others which develop as the grudge reaches out for satisfaction.

ONCE A GRUDGE TAKES HOLD of a mind, it is not inclined to let go. It seems to be almost indestructible. Of course, it is not all this strong unless we want it to be. It can be held in check, and blasted out of our mind. We can get rid of it, with very great effort.

A GRUDGE HAS IN IT the possibility of ruining one life, at least; and it usually does great damage to others. Nobody gains; everybody loses.

THERE IS SOMETHING BETTER. This ugly, pernicious feeling cannot force itself upon us. Therefore, we can keep it out of our mind; and this is what we must do. This is much better than having to struggle to get rid of it. We must manage ourselves so that we never permit any action of any kind to cause us to abuse our mind with grudges.

WE CANNOT AFFORD this ill-will, and a grudge is ill-will. It can do nothing but cause trouble for us, and for those who are made its objects. It is not consecutive, but destructive; it does not build up, but tears down; it does not improve people or situations, but makes them worse. It is evil, and one of the very worst forms of evil.

MALEVOLENCE IS the offspring of a grudge, and it is vicious. "It is misery; it is the mind of Satan, the great enemy, an outcast from all joy, and the opponent of all goodness and happiness." - J. Hamilton. It is emotional malignancy, and eats as does a canker; because it is erosive, and a source of corruption and debasement. In its workings, it multiplies existing sorrow, distress and calamity. It causes evil, where none existed.

WE MAY EXPECT GRUDGES AMONG PEOPLE WHO ADMITTEDLY ARE DEBASED BY THEIR OWN CHOICE. BUT IT IS SURPRISING TO FIND GRUDGES AMONG "good" people. This is not uncommon, but is always disappointing. Almost invariably, these "good" people will try to excuse and justify this ugly feeling. They just make a bad situation worse.

IF THE FEELING OF GRUDGE enters the thought processes, there is only one wise and right thing to do; get it out, get rid of it. We do have a choice.

Satellites

speed and altitude faster than expected. The change triggered a warning in the NORAD computer and the military alerted the Central Intelligence Agency.

The message said the Soviets had lost control of Cosmos 954, and at an altitude of about 100 miles, it was getting dangerously close to entering the atmosphere.

The White House was informed, and on Jan. 12, national security adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski called in Soviet ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin to express American concern about the possibility of radioactive debris falling in populated areas.

The two countries exchanged information for two weeks, and Dobrynin told the White House on Jan. 19 that its greatest fears were unfounded.

The enriched uranium in the nuclear reactor could not reach a critical mass and explode, Dobrynin said. He added that the device was designed to be destroyed when it entered the dense lower layers of the atmosphere.

"The real significance of this episode is that this was the first nuclear-related crisis in space and it brought forth Soviet cooperation and informal preparations to deal with a potentially serious situation," a White House official said.

Cosmos 954 did as Dobrynin said it would. It burned up at such a high altitude that the poisonous wastes may have been carried by upper air winds all around the globe where they would stay for years.

These wastes include radioactive strontium, cesium and iodine which are the fission byproducts of the fuel source, uranium-235.

Some U.S. experts said the danger would have been greater had Cosmos 954 burned up in the lower atmosphere over a heavily populated area. That could have posed a threat of heavy radiation fallout.

America has launched only one satellite with a nuclear reactor. That was an experimental payload named "Snapshot," sent into orbit in 1965 to determine effectiveness of such devices as space power systems. It purposely was put in a high orbit to assure an orbital life of at least 4,000 years.

The U.S. did not launch another reactor because its scientists found that small atomic generators fueled by plutonium-238 were more efficient for their purpose. Plutonium-238 is far less dangerous than uranium-235, which was used in Snapshot and all 15 of the Soviet orbiting reactors.

Slayings

Mrs. Vaillancourt's brother, was wounded and reported in critical condition at Eastern Maine Medical Center in Bangor with gunshot wounds in the face and abdomen.

In the small Massachusetts community of Topsfield, some 20 miles north of Boston, the bodies of Wilfred Brown, 46, his wife, Yoschica, 50, and their daughter, Dorina, 20, were found Friday night after Brown's 15-year-old son was arrested for driving under the influence of alcohol, police said.

The youth, whose name was not revealed because of the age, faced arraignment today in Salem District Court. He was held overnight at the Danvers Juvenile Detention Center.

In Sacramento, Calif., neighbors found the bodies of Evelyn E. Miroth, 36, her son Jason, 6, and a family friend, Daniel J. Meredith, 32, Friday afternoon. The bodies of Mrs. Miroth and Jason were found in a bedroom. She was slashed across the stomach and her son was shot in the head. Also shot in the head was Meredith, whose body lay in the living room.

Mrs. Miroth's 12-year-old son, Vernon, was away at school.

In Pine Lawn, Mo., the bodies of Oscar Green, 40, and his wife, Shirley, 38, were found behind the counter of their store. Their daughter, Arlene, was also shot in the head and died later in the emergency room at a hospital.

The triple slaying in California was the second one in that state in three days.

That was probably the same farmer who started keeping bees because he had

Or, he may have been the farmer whose family—during a drought year—ate 14 acres of corn in one meal.

Gasoline Tanks Can Be Hazard

HOUSTON (AP) - An engineer says few motorists are aware their 15 to 20 gallon gasoline tanks have an energy content equivalent to the explosive energy release of about 1,000 pounds of dynamite.

Stanley E. Handman, chief engineer for Pullman Kellogg, also says 5,000 gallon tanks buried beneath many service station driveways have the energy equivalent of the explosive energy release of about 150 tons of dynamite.

Handman said the public perception of potential hazards is dependent on the way information is presented to the public.

He said motorists are generally aware of the hazardous nature of gasoline but regularly drive their cars and drive into gasoline stations with inventories of 5,000 or more gallons of gasoline.

"Personal experience has led to a low level of concern," Handman said.

Pullman Kellogg made use of Handman's studies Saturday while rejecting a final draft of a General Accounting Office report that the manner in which liquefied natural gas is stored poses danger on a scale comparable to a nuclear bomb explosion.

By the year 2000, over half the world's population will live in cities, reports The Conference Board. Over 80 percent of the people in the developed nations and Latin America will live in metropolitan areas, as will more than 60 percent of the African and Asian population.

Former Governor Miffed at 'Colorless' Image

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - "What do they mean colorless?" Preston Smith once asked in exasperation. "I wish they'd go look at my billboards."

"Ol' Preston" - likened by a columnist to Mr. Magoo, the weak-eyed comic character who stumbles along avoiding potential disasters - served as governor in 1969-73 and now, at the retirement age of 65, wants four more years.

"Why?" he is asked everywhere he goes. "A last hurrah?" "Are you mad ad Dolph?"

"Do you want to vindicate your name?" "No-no," comes the soft drawl, accompanied by a shaking of the head. "I would just love to serve the people again."

Coaxed, Smith does say that although he and Gov. Dolph Briscoe are good friends, you would think that Briscoe would have returned Smith's two telephone calls. "I didn't place the calls for me. Someone asked me to call for them, but I got no response. When I was governor, if a former governor called me, I was back on the line within 10 minutes wherever I was."

Smith, the stories go, first confessed his desire to be governor for a 10-year-old farm boy, shuffling with his friends down a deep furrow his father had cut with a plow to guide them to the schoolhouse through dust storms and fog.

Smith likes to tell, too, about how "Magnolia officials....laughed at me" when he announced he was going to quit the gas station business in Lubbock someday and run for the Legislature.

Smith was elected to the House in 1944, beginning what he refers to as his "string of sizes."

He was in the House six years; lost a 13-man race for lieutenant governor in 1950; lost a race for the state Senate in 1952; then served in the Senate for six years, beginning in 1957. In 1962 he was elected lieutenant governor and held that job for six years in the shadow of Gov. John Connally.

In 1968, with Connally shifting to private law practice, Smith won a runoff with Don Yarborough in the Democratic primary and defeated Republican Paul Eggers in the general election.

He was the first Texas Tech graduate and the first non-lawyer since W. Lee O'Daniel in 1938 to be elected governor.

His boyhood dream had come true.

"I love people...."

"We're just common folks," Smith said, pledging to be a "good grandpa governor."

To the crowds at the inaugural balls, Hale County singing star Jimmy Dean, attempting a compliment, said, "I'll tell you, Preston Smith is plainer than a bar of laundry soap after a hard day's wash."

As governor, Smith assembled a good staff and flashed his independence, baffling most observers who tried to classify him. He had a sense of organization and a passion for order and promptness.

He stressed vocational-technical education and promoted programs that Connally had avoided or given little attention - such as human relations, low-income housing and traffic safety. He also supported reducing the voting age and creation of a "work release" program for the prison system.

"Persistent plodding," one reporter labeled Smith's administration.

A University of Texas government specialist, requesting anonymity, ranked Smith's hundreds of board appointments as "C-minus or D-plus."

Smith bragged on his "open-door" policy, and former aide Bob Bullock claims Smith once pulled into Dallas, found he had 160 phone calls to return and placed every one of them, connecting with 100.

Smith let it be known that he had worn nothing but polka-dot ties since 1962 and at the suggestion of former Gov. Price Daniel, who had advised him to "do something different if you want to get elected."

His pleasures were simple: bridge, backyard barbecues and fishing.

His record, however, was marred by such public statements as, "Some people like to live in slums." On another memorable occasion, after a University of Houston crowd had shouted to him to "free Lee Otis Johnson," a black militant leader, Smith said he thought they were saying "frijoles" and wondered "what in the world have they got against frijoles?"

The Sharpstown Bank scandal, exploding in early 1971, plunged Smith's popularity rating to 33 percent - the lowest for any Texas governor in 30 years.

Although he was never charged, Smith was damaged by the publicity that he had made a $62,500 profit on National Bankers Life stock that had been purchased with a loan from Sharpstown. The bank and the insurance company were among 28 defendants named by the federal government in an alleged stock fraud scheme.

"I seldom think of it, nobody ever asks me about it, and it hardly ever crosses my mind," Smith said in a recent interview. "You know you have to live with your conscience, and I know I did nothing wrong."

Nevertheless, Smith finished a poor fourth in a bid for a third term in 1972, receiving only 190,700 votes.

He took his leather governor's chair home to Lubbock, where his "roots" were, bought and remodeled a house across the street from Texas Tech and took a part-time job raising funds for the school. He is chairman of the board of West Texas Savings and estimates his net worth at about $300,000.

Comfortable?

"Oh, sure...."

"Anyone urge you to run?"

"No, I was not drafted. When a man tells you he's been drafted, you'd better check him out, because I think he may be lying."

The payment of his $1,500 filing fee Jan. 20 put him officially in the governor's race.

His understated campaign signs implore, "re-elect preston."

He doesn't have much money, he says, but "we do have the energy to go see the people. We'll get local stories in local papers. This is the way we won in '68."

He acknowledges it will probably be his last race, win or lose, but talks of legislative priorities - education and curbing crime - with enthusiasm.

"I see nothing wrong," he says, "with the employment of 100 highway patrolmen that would be assigned to different communities where the crime rate was high - maybe for 30 days - to clean it out."

"I don't know of anything," he adds, "that Governor Briscoe has done that would be outstanding insofar as new and innovative programs are concerned."

"I know without question," he volunteers, "that I should be more knowledgeable about government in Texas than any man living."

Once more, however, he is asked the most intriguing question: "Was there anything specifically that made up your mind to run again?"

"No, other than I've always enjoyed serving with people and working with people" - and then he gives, perhaps, a glimpse of his reason. "After 22 years, I suppose, it becomes a way of life."

FCC Still Gets Cash

WASHINGTON (AP) - Hey, CBers, Uncle Charlie needs a break.

He wants to tell us, again, that our CB licenses are free, and to ask that we quit inundating him with money he doesn't want.

Despite an announcement a year ago, and subsequent reminders that no money should accompany license applications, he's still being swamped with checks, money orders and cash.

And while he struggles to refund those fees, he's wrestling with another problem: how to refund millions of more dollars in fees collected during the last six years.

Uncle Charlie, of course, is the Federal Communications Commission.

"Will you help us solve a problem?" John B. Johnston, chief of the FCC's Personal Radio Division, wrote recently in "An Open Letter to the CB Community."

"We are being flooded with CB fees that we must return."

The FCC stopped charging license fees a year ago after a federal court ruled the commission was charging too much and must create a new fee structure.

At the same time, the court said the FCC must refund all fees collected between 1970 and 1976. An estimated $163 million, much of it collected from CBers, is at stake.

But the fees keep rolling in.

"We are being swamped with money that we must return," Johnston wrote. "Some folks think they can help us by sending in the fee, even though it is not required," he added.

"Others are confused because millions of old CB applications and temporary permits are still around asking for the $4 fee."

But the need to refund those fees, Johnston said, is "complicating our ability to get CB licenses processed."

Meanwhile, the FCC continues to wrestle with the problem of returning the $163 million in previous fees the court ruled were illegally collected.

Officials say they believe they can devise a refund program by May for those who paid fees over $20. That involves some 270,000 licensees who paid about $85 million.

But the big problem involves refunds to 10 1/2 million people who paid between $4 and $20 for their licenses. This category includes CBers and amateur radio operators.

The FCC has been told that, even if only half of those licensees asked for refunds, it would require processing 25,000 requests a day for nearly a year.

It was told it would require 40 extra staffers and cost $800,000 the first year just to refund those fees over $20. No one could say how much it would cost to refund the smaller fees.

But while it wrestles with that problem, the unwanted fees continue to roll in. Thus, Johnston's letter to CB retailers, magazines and newsletters and various organizations.

Every time we reach for the brass ring on life's merry-go-round we fall off the horse.

Nepotism Problem Plagued CETA Entity

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) - A nagging nepotism problem caused state Manpower officers to threaten non-renewal of a $200,000 grant to a Houston job counseling program led by a Briscoe appointee to the Texas Youth Council.

Howard Middleton Jr., a Houston labor leader, and his brother, Jimmy, finally resolved the problem by resigning as directors of Houston Employment Area Redevelopment and Training Corp. HEART on Sept. 30.

Howard Middleton was chairman of the board, and Jimmy Middleton was treasurer. As such, they were authorized signers of HEART paychecks.

Their nephew, Christopher Middleton, is a 51,112-a-month counselor with HEART, recipient of federal Comprehensive Employment Training Act CETA funds. CETA regulations prohibit nepotism.

"At no time did we try to not abide by that anti-nepotism rule . . . We were not aware of that problem when that young man was hired . . . You'll notice that when we got final action from Bud Harris, state director of manpower services we didn't tarry," Howard Middleton said.

HEART has held contracts to use CETA money to provide job counseling and refer unemployed persons to labor apprenticeship programs since March 10, 1975.

Two arms of Gov. Dolph Briscoe's office, the Texas Department of Community Affairs TDCA and the State Manpower Services Council, approved the contracts.

After TDCA evaluators had twice written up the nepotism problem, Harris wrote the following letter to Jerry Pruitt, HEART's executive director:

"This is to confirm our conversation of Sept. 7, 1977, regarding the existing nepotism violation under the current state services contract operating through Sept. 30, 1977. As long as this violation continues, a FY fiscal year '78 state services contract will not be executed with the HEART organization." As far back as Nov. 16, 1976, Harris had written Miss Pruitt that TDCA "considers the problem of nepotism . . . especially serious" and demanded immediate action.

Evaluators reported on Aug. 31, 1977, that the nepotism problem with Christopher Middleton remained and recommended that he be fired.

Miss Pruitt replied on Sept. 13 that the situation had been referred to the HEART board of directors. Harris wrote Howard Middleton again on Sept. 21 to reiterate that the employment of his nephew constituted nepotism.

Middleton said he had applied for a waiver of the nepotism rule, and a TDCA evaluator noted that such a request was written in February 1977 but no reply had been received.

But Fred Buchanan, TDCA's chief of state services, said Middleton repeatedly was told the situation with his nephew constituted nepotism.

"This has been a bone of contention with HEART for some time . . . Each time our finding was nepotism, and he would come up with a new angle," Buchanan said.

He added, "When we saw we were not able to get results here, we referred it to our legal department."

TDCA's lawyer, Tom Lara-

me, was unable to find any correspondence on HEART's nepotism problem in his files and said he might have dealt with it by telephone.

"I can assure you they don't have permission from us to practice nepotism in a CETA-funded position."

In April 1975, when HEART's initial contract was only a month old, evaluators discovered that Howard Middleton's son, Donnell, was working for HEART. They said it did not appear that CETA rules prohibited this but recommended a review of the rules.

CETA rules became more restrictive in 1976, however.

Before the letter threatening cut-off of HEART's federal money was written, Harris told a reporter that no such action had been contemplated.

"There is a federal law that is much more stringent - that you don't turn loose of participants," he said.

He said he was not even aware that Briscoe had put Middleton on the youth council.

Middleton is executive director of the Houston Area Laborers' Training Trust Fund HALT, to which some HEART clients were referred for training. He also has been a member for a decade of the political screening committee of the Harris County Council of Organizations, a black group and is a political backer of Briscoe.

"Because I am a strong supporter of the governor has nothing to do with my applying for funds . . . The governor has never intervened for me . . . You may think that Governor Briscoe is using some of these manpower programs for political gain, but he never has used HEART for political gain. . . He has never requested from me or anybody on this board any political favor. I don't even know if he knows this organization has a contract," Middleton said.

Nixon Asked Wallace To Persuade Congress

NEW YORK (AP) - Richard Nixon is quoted in a forthcoming book by David Frost as saying that he decided to resign the presidency only after Alabama Gov. George Wallace refused to use his influence to help rally congressional support for the beleaguered president.

Nixon said his decision to resign was made two weeks before he stepped down Aug. 9, 1974, and came after Wallace refused his request to intercede with Rep. Walter Flowers to vote against impeachment in the House Judiciary Committee.

The governor's office Thursday confirmed the Nixon telephone call on July 23, 1974, and said Wallace told the president it would be "improper" for him to approach the Alabama Democratic congressman. Flowers was with the majority when the committee voted for impeachment.

Nixon said his chief of staff, Gen. Alexander Haig, "had been in the room as I was talking to Wallace. And I said, and he recalls this very vividly, I said, 'Well, Al, there goes the presidency.'"

The 320-page book, a copy of which The Associated Press obtained in advance of the scheduled Monday release by William Morrow & Co., describes the events leading up to and including the 29 hours of interviews Frost conducted for five TV programs.

A secretary at Nixon's San Clemente, Calif., estate said Thursday that it was not immediately known if the former president would comment on the book.

Among other things, "I Gave Them a Sword" discloses some of the details of Frost's negotiations, gives Nixon's explanation for preserving the Watergate tapes and explores his willingness to renew the Vietnam War if the North Vietnamese broke the peace accord.

Frost said he paid Nixon $600,000 plus 20 percent of unspecified profits for the exclusive interviews. That could easily have amounted to more than $1 million for the former president.

During the taping of the five television shows, Frost said, Nixon was plagued by facial perspiration and kept handy a white handkerchief saturated with a drying agent to wipe his face.

Although "the visual impact was enormous," Frost said, he decided it would be unfair to show the former president's face when he dabbed at it or just before or afterward.

On the Watergate tapes, the former chief executive said he at first decided against destroying them in the belief that they would someday vindicate him.

He said he reasoned that to destroy them before they were subpoenaed "would have been an indication that I felt there were conversations on there that demonstrated that I was guilty."

And after the U.S. Court of Appeals ruled in October 1973 that special Watergate prosecutor Archibald Cox could demand nine of the tapes, to destroy the others would have "at least appeared to be an admission of 'I am trying to cover something up,'" Nixon said.

Nixon, who said during the third of the interviews that the president could sometimes break the law for the good of the country, also told Frost that he could have gotten Congress to authorize war again if the North Vietnamese violated the peace accord.

Nixon said he had offered "swift and severe retaliatory action" against the North Vietnamese as a way of getting President Nguyen Van Thieu of South Vietnam to accept peace.

"I felt that if the North Vietnamese, which they had so often done in the past, flagrantly and blatantly violated the agreement, that I could go to the country and to the Congress and get the support that was necessary to bring them into line."

Talks To Resume In Cairo Monday

TEL AVIV (AP) - Talks will resume in Cairo next week on Israeli withdrawal from Sinai, officials sources say.

The discussions between Israeli Defense Minister Ezer Weizman and Egyptian War Minister Mohamed Abdel Ghany el Gamassy will start Monday, one informant said.

The source, who declined to be identified, said the decision on sending Weizman to Cairo will be made today by Prime Minister Menachem Begin's cabinet.

The talks bogged down earlier this month over Israeli insistence that 20 Jewish settlements remain in Sinai and Egyptian demands that Israel withdraw totally from territory it captured in the 1967 war.

Parallel political talks in Jerusalem on the future of Palestinians in the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River and Gaza Strip broke down Jan. 18.

At that time Egypt was insisting the Palestinians be granted self-determination, while the Israelis were talking about limited autonomy.

U.S. officials in Washington said Sadat plans to meet with President Carter at the White

Carter Assistance Not Appreciated

NEW YORK (AP) - Poor Jimmy Carter. The president clearly has gone out of his way to assure business that he understands it, needs it cooperation and intends to help it. But he gets the cold shoulder.

He helps steel against imports. He writes tax incentives into his economic program. He promises to ride herd on inflation. He seeks to create jobs through the private sector. He rules out price controls.

The reaction is disbelief, and even disapproval. Steel is not yet happy with the trigger price technique that is supposed to indicate when foreign manufacturers are dumping their product in the United States at less than production costs.

The energy proposals, economic analysts say, are merely a rebate of new taxes, such as higher Social Security deductions, enacted in the past year.

His promises about inflation are greeted by an analysis common to nearly every economist, that price rises are coming, maybe at a rate greater than that of last year.

His promise to rely on the private sector in creating jobs meets the response from business that such rhetoric has been heard before and that while it might be appealing it is not convincing.

And no number of promises seems likely to convince business that Carter is not setting the scene for wage-price controls when he asks business to cooperate in seeking anti-inflation remedies.

Look to the stock market for the reaction to the economic and tax proposals, Carter suggested. Reaction? The recommendations were almost ignored. Deja vu, said the market; something old, nothing new.

But is that really so? Here are some highlights of the Carter economic proposals, in the president's own words:

-Business taxes will be reduced by more than $8 billion in 1979 . . . offset partially by more than $2 billion in business tax reforms for a net tax reduction of nearly $6 billion.

-I have recommended that the overall corporate tax rate be reduced on Oct. 1 from the current 48 percent to 45 percent, and be cut further to 44 percent in 1980.

-I also recommended that the existing 10 percent investment tax credit be made permanent, and that the benefits of this credit be extended to investments in industrial and utility structures.

As might be expected, business does not retreat from such offerings, but various comments about the overall program, and about Carter's leadership, merge into a rather definite negative response.

Credibility is one issue. It seems clear to most people that Carter will find it impossible to balance the budget by 1981, just as it seemed highly unlikely to them when it was first promised.

Economic understanding remains another. Some critics continue to argue that the energy proposals do not contain enough incentives for production and are, in effect, economic disincentives.

But could it be, one wonders, that the business of business is too much concerned with the limitations of Jimmy Carter and what they say is his inability to lay out a course for the next few years? And not sufficiently with extending itself and taking risks and seeking rewards - in keeping with the tradition that says American business and not the government built the country.

Official Gets Flak Over 'Bill'

BALTIMORE (AP) - Maryland's attorney general has discovered that it won't be so easy to change his name to just plain "Bill."

Francis B. Burch filed a petition Jan. 19 to change his middle name from Boucher to "Bill," a nickname by which he has been known since childhood. But there is at least one Maryland citizen who objects strongly to the idea.

In a petition filed in Baltimore Circuit Court, attorney Leonard J. Kerpelman states that the proposed name change is "a fraud."

According to Kerpelman, the nickname or friendly appellation "Bill" conjures up visions of a "friendly, down-to-earth, palsy, All-American boy type of fellow: one who is easy to get along with, comradely, and in possession of the common touch."

Kerpelman says that as an observer of Burch, he can certify that Burch is, "arrogant, tyrannical, snobbish, and vile-tempered . . ."

Burch, who is an unannounced candidate for governor, filed the petition in an effort to have his legal name changed, "to conform to the name by which he has been publicly and generally known."

Under court rules, such proposed name changes must be published weekly for three weeks in order to give opponents the opportunity to file objections.

Daniel Announces Candidacy

BRYAN, Tex. (AP) - Price Daniel Jr. paid his $1,500 filing fee Friday to State Democratic Chairman Calvin Guest as a Democratic candidate for attorney general.

The fee was paid at Guest's office in Bryan.

Daniel, former Texas House speaker, also named Judge John M. Barron as a member of an advisory committee of lawyers and judges supporting Daniel. Barron is a retired justice of the Courts of Civil Appeals.

Herd Rebounds to Win

By BOB NIGH
Sports Editor

The Hereford Whitefaces claimed a 44-24 edge in rebounds here Friday night, and went on to swamp the Lubbock High Westerners 69-51 as three Whitefaces scored in double figures.

Kelly Kitchens led the way with 18 points, while David Schumacher added 15 and Jackie Mercer contributed 13 as the Herd upped its first half district mark to 2-2 and improved to 15-11 overall.

But, the real story was on the boards, where Mercer and Robert Lee Graves tied for game honors with nine caroms apiece. And the 'Faces didn't stop there, either. Schumacher hauled down eight shots off the rim, while David Arney collected seven and Kitchens caught six.

"I was real pleased with the way we got on the boards tonight," Herd coach Bobby Decker said following the game. "We had worked hard on that two days."

Graves was hot under the Herd basket, bringing in six offensive boards, while Kitchens and Arney got four of their caroms under their own bucket, and Mercer grabbed three.

While the final margin looked like the game was a runaway win for Hereford, the game itself was not without its tight moments. The Whitefaces took a quick 6-0 lead on a Kitchens' tip of his own missed shot, a technical foul on Lubbock coach C.E. Carmichael, and a short jump by Schumacher.

The Westerners countered with nine straight points at that point, however to take the lead. James Williams hit three buckets to lead the LHS surge, and the Whitefaces went nearly five minutes without scoring.

Hereford finally found the heavy end of the see-saw and posted an 11-7 advantage the rest of the period to head into the second quarter ahead 17-16.

The Westerners took their turn having trouble finding the hole in the second period, scoring but 11 points to the Herd's 18. A pair of free throws by Brent Allen pushed the HHS lead to 10 points (35-25) with 1:26 left, and Kent Ellis countered a Scotty Garcia bucket with one of his own to send the 'Faces into the dressing room with a 37-27 gap.

The Westerners made it a ballgame in the late going of the third quarter, coming off a 50-37 deficit to score nine straight points to trail only 50-46 with just eight minutes left to play.

The Herd wasn't about to be denied in the final period, however. Schumacher's bucket off a job pass by Kitchens gave the 'Faces a 52-46 lead, and before the 6-3 senior post left the game with his fourth foul at the 5:22 mark the Herd led 55-48.

A single point by Lubbock was followed by 14 in succession by the Whitefaces, and the game was out of reach. Hereford went on to post a 19-5 advantage in the final eight minutes.

The Westerners actually outshot the Herd from the field, canning 23 of 41 tries for 56 percent. The Whitefaces found the mark on 26 of 60 shots (43 percent). But, the Herd was deadly from the free throw line with a 17-22 effort (77 percent), while LHS hit 5-9 (55 percent).

Williams wound up the leading scorer for Lubbock with 14 points. Garcia, who had decimated Coronado earlier in the year with 27 points, finished with 10. The Westerners fell to 1-3 and 4-19 with the loss.

Hereford will play the Clovis Wildcats here next Tuesday before hosting Coronado for the first game of round two in the district next Friday.

"We need to win that game (against Clovis)," Decker said. "It's a key to our momentum, but the kids know that it doesn't count if we lose."

The Herd sophomores gave HHS a second win Friday night with a 66-53 win over Lubbock as Keith Adams scored 27 points. Frank Maes added 15 to the total, while Darrell Poik scored 10.

The Herd JV wasn't as fortunate, however, dropping a 52-50 decision to the Westerners as Joe Walker scored 18 and Reid Herring added 10.

The sophs upped their mark to 3-1 in the district and 13-6 overall with the win, while the JV fell to 0-4 and 11-10 respectively.

Mutual Awarded SWC Grid Rights

DALLAS (AP) - Exclusive radio broadcast rights to Southwest Conference football games have been awarded to Mutual Broadcasting System, ending the SWC's 44-season relationship with the Exxon Network.

Mutual reportedly obtained a five-year contract Friday for more than $1 million. The agreement guarantees the SWC of more widespread coverage area.

Exxon had limited its broadcasts to Texas and a few stations in New Mexico and Arkansas, while Mutual plans to carry the games via more than 250 stations into a nine-state region including Arkansas, Arizona, Kansas, Louisiana, Mississippi, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Tennessee and Texas.

In addition, several SWC games will be carried nationwide throughout the season in conjunction with Mutual's 11 Notre Dame games and four "wild card" games.

Mutual earlier obtained exclusive radio broadcast rights to the Dallas Cowboys games and plans to broadcast them into the same nine-state area.

During the first three years of the SWC agreement, however, Mutual will not broadcast Arkansas games in the state of Arkansas, allowing the school to honor its contract with the Arkansas Radio Network.

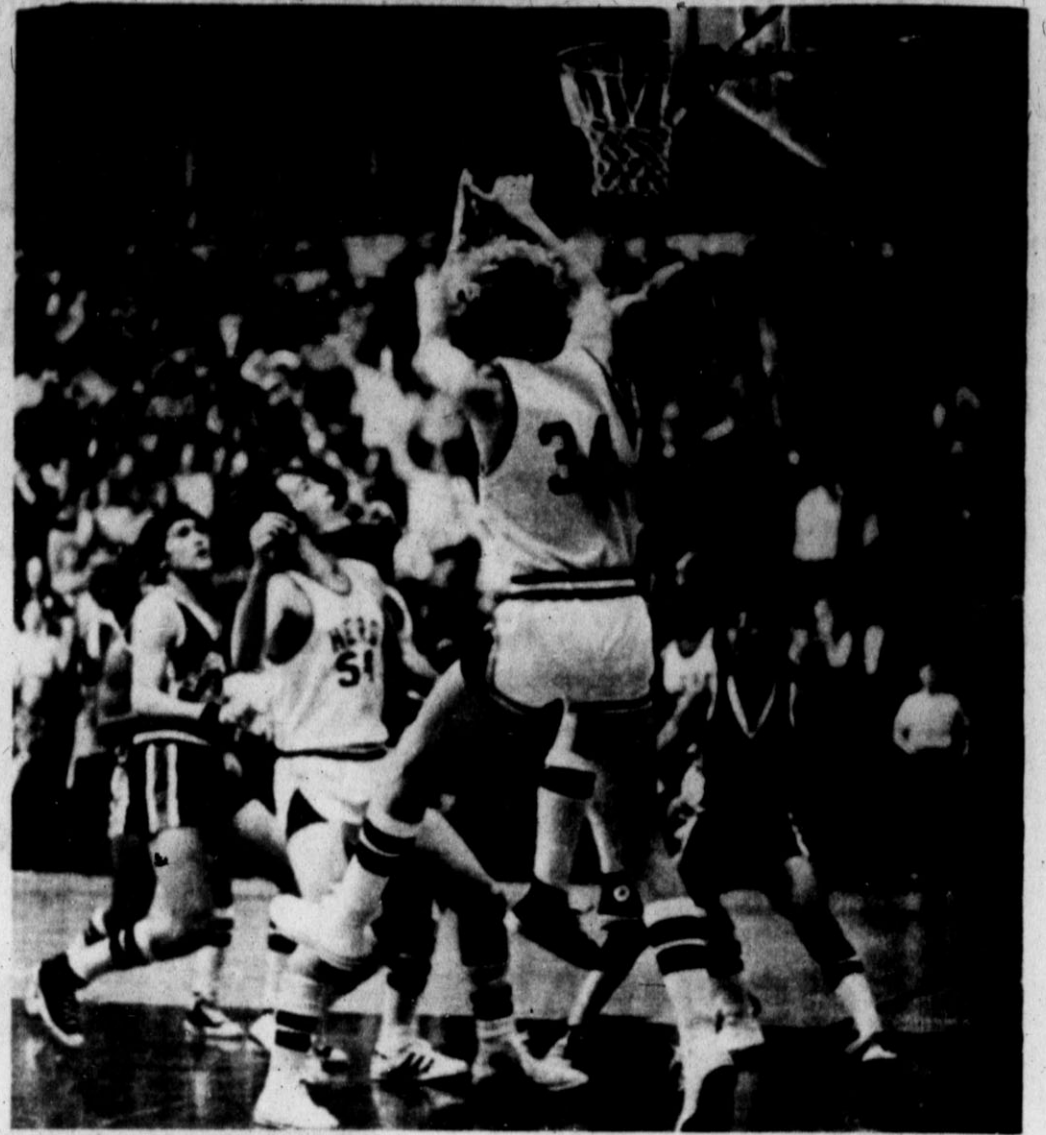

The ARN is separate from Exxon's network that included the other eight SWC schools.

Mutual officials said the network might present additional SWC programming, including basketball games and might broadcast selected football games on a tape-delayed television basis.

The Mutual system will broadcast a series of mini-features on SWC schools, such as agricultural news from Texas A&M and medical news from Rice, nationwide, officials said.

Mutual President C. Edward Little said "This is going to be the most ambitious and widespread media project under taken by a group of colleges in the United States."

Gervin, 'The Iceman' Driving Opponents Chilly

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) - Fans and teammates call him "The Iceman."

Opponents in the National Basketball Association call George Gervin other things: "incredible," "brilliant," "unstoppable."

Gervin, a toothpick-thin 6-foot-7 guard, is a reason the San Antonio Spurs have driven to the top of the NBA's central division. He's the second leading scorer in the league, averaging 26.4 points per game.

"George Gervin is probably one of the best basketball players on earth," declared Boston's Curtis Rowe after the Spurs whipped the Celtics 113-103 last week.

The Iceman scored 37 points in that game, the third time this year the Spurs have dumped the sagging Celtics. Philadelphia's Julius Erving, who will join Gervin on the East squad for the NBA All-Star game, said this about him:

"A lot of people learned about Ice last year. He doesn't say a lot. He just goes out and does it on the floor."

And All-Pro Jo Jo White of Boston, after a frustrating evening, declared:

"We tried to double-team him (Gervin). But he scored anyway. What can I say? What could I have done?"

With two current All-Stars - Gervin and teammate Larry Kenon, a 6-9 forward who's hitting more than 20 points a game - the Spurs are finding their second year in the NBA more enjoyable than the first.

In their first NBA season after playing in the old American Basketball Association, Coach Doug Moe drove the Spurs to a respectable 44-38 record and into the first playoff round.

But Boston, which was 4-0 against San Antonio in the regular season, knocked the Spurs out with two straight playoff victories.

The Spurs built a reputation in the league for being an offensive, running club that lacked defense at all. While San Antonio led the NBA in offense, it was last in defense.

This year started similarly, but in the last month the Spurs have begun to play sturdier defense. In the past 15 games, the Spurs have allowed an average of about 101 points while remaining second in the league in offense with 113 points per game.

San Antonio had won five in a row, 12 of its last 15 games, and was 28-18 heading into Sunday's contest at Kansas City. The Spurs grabbed first place from the injury-riddled Washington Bullets on Jan. 20.

"We're getting a lot of confidence in each other as a team," says Coach Moe. "And, we're getting some great individual play. Hopefully we can keep it up."

"We know we can play confident and unselfish basketball and that we can win," says Gervin, nicknamed "Iceman" because of his cool court demeanor. "We're in a position we want to be. We're tired of chasing someone else."

After handing Portland only its eighth loss of the season a week ago, Kenon summed up: "I think being in first place helped us. Most of the guys here have never been in first before."

"And I hadn't been in first place for so long I nearly forgot what it was like. Everybody points to you when you're No. 1," Kenon added. "It's a great honor. I don't want to give it up."

Kenon and teammates Billy Paultz and Mike Gale played together on the 1974 ABA championship New York Nets team.

The 38-year-old Moe, a former University of North Carolina star who played in the ABA, took the head coaching job here before the 1976-77 season after being an assistant at Denver in the ABA.

"This is a game of confidence," he says. "And right now, we're playing with a lot of it."

Moe is especially pleased with the Spurs' recent defensive play, for there has never been any doubt the team could score.

Gervin, who made the switch last year from forward to guard, has keyed a one-four offense in which the Spurs spread out and Gervin backs toward the basket, one-on-one against a defender.

"He's too quick for a forward to guard and he's too big for a guard to guard," says Boston's Dave Bing. "I've seen him since high school and he's the best. Nobody in the league can guard Gervin one-on-one."

"We're playing very good basketball now," says Gervin, a Detroit native. "If we keep doing like we have, we're going to be successful. We've worked hard to get to the top. We know all we have to do to get what we want is to win."

Ever know anyone who added an old dent to a new claim and then complained his insurance cost too much?

Adding a few extra dollars to an insurance claim may seem like harmless padding until you see what it does to insurance costs.

In just one year this kind of attitude adds up to an estimated $1.5 billion in fraudulent claims, despite strong efforts by insurance companies to be certain that all claims are legitimate.

Insurance companies collect premiums from many people and compensate the few who have losses.

The price of insurance must reflect the rising cost of paying for those losses.

We all know what's been happening to the cost of labor, materials, and medical care, and the escalation in jury awards.

In this environment, there is special incentive to keep fraudulent claims to the very minimum.

No one likes higher prices. But we're telling it straight.

The Monterey Plainsmen raced to a 14-4 lead and were never headed Friday night in posting a 56-48 win over the Coronado Mustangs to claim the first half title of District 4-4A outright.

David Davidson scored 18 points in paving the way for the Plainsmen, now 15-11 on the year after their fifth win in a row and eighth in the last nine games.

Craig Ehlo helped out with 15 points for Monterey, while Chuck Perry scored 10. Coronado 2-2 and 8-16, was led by Bill Shockley's 14 points. Steve Ahlenius, who ripped Plainview for 23 points last Tuesday, failed to score for the Mustangs as the Plainsmen put a clamp down on the Coronado inside game.

Crenshaw Sees Review Process as Necessary

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer
HOUSTON (AP) - Ben Crenshaw, one of professional golf's young lions, might be forgiven for not understanding the controversy concerning qualifying for Professional Golfers Association PGA events - he's never had to qualify for a tournament.

Actually, he seems to understand it very well.

"I think there needs to be an individual review of each case according to their performance," Crenshaw said in discussing a suit filed here last Monday by 12 former U.S. Open or PGA winners who are challenging a new PGA rule that would take away their lifetime exemptions.

"I haven't had the problem, but some of my friends have been hurt trying to get onto the tour," Crenshaw said.

The former three-time NCAA champion from the University of Texas received a sponsor's exemption into his first pro tournament, the 1973 San Antonio Open, which he promptly won to the surprise and delight of his Texas friends.

The 12 pro golfers, who won 20 U.S. Open or PGA titles, filed the suit against a new PGA rule that removes their lifetime exemptions from qualifying for PGA tour events as past winners of the PGA or U.S. Open titles.

"I can really see both sides," said Crenshaw, a runnerup last week in the Bing Crosby National Pro-Am at Pebble Beach, Calif. "I think they have a good case. Granting those exemptions was something that the PGA did in the past and I don't see why that has to change.

"There are some older players in that category that are good draws. But on the other hand, there are a lot of young players that won't be able to make any money this year.

"That's why I think there should be a review on each individual player to see how much he played.

Under the new PGA rule, an exempt player would have to compete in 15 tour events and earn a minimum of $10,000 in prize money to maintain his position on the tour.

The suit was filed here Jan. 23 by attorney Jack McConn, in behalf of golfers Jackie Burke, Julius Boros, Doug Ford, Jay Hebert, Lionel Hebert, Don January, Dave Marr, Bobby Nichols, Bob Rosburg, Gene Sarazen, Sam Snead, Ken Venturi.

The suit says about 45 veteran players would be affected by the new rule.

The PGA defended its new rule last week in a release which listed six unnamed tour veterans who played in a combined 111 tour events over the past two years and earned a combined total of $4,531.

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) - The team of Buddy Bell of the Cleveland Indians and Paul Warfield of the Cleveland Browns was tied with Bob Tucker of the Minnesota Vikings and Bobby Murcer of the Chicago Cubs for the lead today as second-round play began in the best-ball, football-baseball partner golf tournament.

Havlicek Expected to Announce Retirement

By DAVE O'HARA
AP Sports Writer
BOSTON (AP) - After 16 years as one of the greatest players in National Basketball Association history, John Havlicek of the Boston Celtics is ready to pack it in.

The Associated Press learned from sources Friday night that Havlicek, who will be 38 on April 8, will announce Sunday his retirement at the end of the current season.

The Celtics have called a news conference for 11:30 a.m. Sunday, prior to an afternoon game with the Golden State Warriors, in club president and general manager Red Auerbach's office.

Auerbach and his staff declined to give even a hint about the news conference. However, reliable sources told The AP that the conference was set at Havlicek's request to announce his pending retirement.

Havlicek, who makes his winter home in suburban

Boston, could not be reached for comment. A close friend, though, told The AP: "I'm afraid you're right."

Havlicek, a former Ohio State star, reportedly has another year to go on a contract paying him more than $250,000 a year. However, sources said he has become disenchanted with advancing years and the Celtics' dismal season 14-29, which already has cost Tommy Heinsohn his coaching job.

Although a star quarterback in high school football, Havlicek stuck to basketball at Ohio State. However, his first goal after graduation in 1962, was a pro football career as a wide receiver.

He survived until the Cleveland Browns' final preseason cut that year. Pro football's loss proved pro basketball's gain as he immediately joined the Celtics.

Although only 6-foot-5 in a world of giants, Havlicek has been a star at both forward and guard, breaking virtually every record in the Celtics' book.

He holds the NBA record for the most games ever played - 1,231. He also is the only player in NBA history to score more than 1,000 points for 15 consecutive seasons. And, with more than 25,000 points, he ranks third among the league's all-time scorers, trailing just Wilt Chamberlain and Oscar Robertson.

Outstanding on defense because of his speed and quickness, Havlicek has led the Celtics to seven of their 13 NBA championships. He appeared in 12 consecutive All-Star games until left off the squad this month.

NEW YORK (AP) - Roy Campanella, a Hall of Fame catcher, has joined the New York Mets in a public relations capacity, the club has announced.

SAN DIEGO (AP) - Jay Haas nursed in a 12-foot putt for an eagle 3 on the final hole Saturday and took a 1-stroke lead over 47-year-old veteran Gene Littler in the third round of the $200,000 Andy Williams-San Diego Open Golf Tournament.

Haas, only two months old when Littler scored the first of his 29 tour victories in this tournament in 1954, blew a 3-stroke lead, got as much as 3 behind and then completed his rally with the dramatic eagle on the 18th hole.

That finished off a round of par 72 in the warm, sunny weather and gave him a 54-hole total of 208, 8 under par on the total, 7,047-yard South course at the Torrey Pines Golf Club.

Mark Pfeil and Doug Tewell were another stroke back at 210. Each had a 70.

Grier Jones and long-hitting Fuzzy Zoeller were only 3 shots off the pace at 211 going into Sunday's final round of the chase for a $40,000 first prize. Zoeller shot a 71, Jones 70.

Tom Watson, a two-time winner already this year and the defending title holder, had a 71 and a 214 total. Johnny Miller was 73-216.

Haas, a former national collegiate champion from Wake Forest and a tour sophomore, had to fight the pressure of his first lead ever in a professional event and he admitted it was a problem.

"I was pressing too much on the front nine," he said, and played that side in a fat 39, that cost him the top spot. "I was trying to force birdies. You can't do that out here. You have to wait your turn. I didn't play that front side very well and I was pretty down when I made the turn."

All the drama took place on the last two holes after the soft-spoken, 47-year-old Littler had finished his round using what he called "a double overlapping grip. I used it three or four years ago and went back to it yesterday. I hadn't been putting very well and I just wanted a different feel. It worked."

Haas, winner of a very respectable $32,000 as a rookie last season, threw his approach to within 12 feet and made the birdie putt on the 17th hole.

That pulled him to within a single shot of the lead. He boldly went for the green on his second shot on the par 5 18th and watched the 3 wood shot come to rest about 12 feet from the cup. He stroked the eagle putt perfectly, but couldn't resist using some body English before the go-ahead eagle putt dropped.

Palmer, Post Meet for Title

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) - Sandra Palmer defeated Sally Little 2 and 1 and JoAnne Carner downed Sandra Post 4 and 3 Saturday to set up a favorite-vs.-longest showdown in the $105,000 Triple Play Match Play Championship.

Palmer, a late addition to the opening field of 16 when Carol Mann was forced to withdraw, and Carner, one of the favorites in this unique tournament, will play Sunday for the $21,000 first prize.

The loser in the finals at Mission Hills Country Club will get $14,000 for finishing second in the tournament, sponsored by the Colgate-Palmolive Co., and the Ladies Professional Golf Association's only match play event.

An eight-year veteran on the LPGA trail who hits the ball long off the tee and plays a daring game, Carner was very consistent in her match with Post.

She moved 2-up on the front nine with three birdies - while Post had one to take one hole - then won the 11th and 12th with a par 5 and birdie 3. The two golfers played even the next three holes, and Post was out of time.

Carner had opened with a 4 and 3 victory over Debbie Austin, then beat Nancy Lopez 1-up to advance to the semifinals.

Palmer, who joined the tour in 1964, controlled her match with Little most of the way, but had to go 17 holes to secure the victory.

She moved 2-up on the front nine with the help of three birdies, then increased her lead to three when she parred No. 10 and Little bogeyed. Little charged with birdies on No. 13 and No. 15, but Palmer took the 14th with a par 3 and played her opponent even the final two holes of the match.

Palmer, a self-admitted "short person," at 5-foot-1 1/2, has been humming Randy Newman's lyrics to herself throughout the tournament, as she first defeated Donna Caponi Young, then Silva Bertalacini, and finally Little to become a surprise finalist.

Palmer said she was looking forward to playing Carner, who beat her by a stroke on the 18th hole two years ago in the U.S. Open.

Post and Little will also play Sunday, vying for third and fourth in the tournament. Third is worth $10,000 and fourth $8,000.

There will be two other matches, and two winners, in the consolation round. Young plays Pat Bradley and Austin meets Jane Blalock.

In Saturday's consolation play, Austin defeated Bertalacini 1-up; Blalock topped Amy Alcott 2 and 1; Young scored a 3 and 2 victory over Lopez, and Bradley edged Kathy MacMullen 1-up.

Roth Defeats Holman In Quaker Tournament

GRAND PRAIRIE, Texas (AP) - Leading money winner Mark Roth hung on to defeat Marshall Holman 216-213 in the final game of the $100,000 Quaker State Open professional bowling tournament here Saturday.

Roth, who led the tournament from the very beginning, had wanted to complete a wire-to-wire sweep, but he had to sit and watch the Medford, Ore. native bowl in the 10th frame before the title was decided.

Roth needed nine pins on his final shot to clinch the championship, but he left two pins standing and gave Holman one last chance. Holman needed three strikes in the 10th to create a tie that would have forced a two-frame rolloff.

He struck on the first two balls, but the third went through the head pin and left three pins standing.

The win was Roth's 10th PBA victory.

"I made good shots in my first match, but unfortunately, I didn't against Mark," said a disappointed Holman.

The title game was decided when Holman whipped 1977 Firestone Tournament of Champions winner Mike Berlin 255-203. Berlin, of Muscatine, Iowa, had moved from fifth position, defeating Pete Couture, Windsor Locks, Conn., and John Wilcox.

Stram Fired

NEW ORLEANS (AP) - In a terse, one-sentence statement, the New Orleans Saints of the National Football League announced Saturday that the contract of Coach Hank Stram has been terminated.

There was no elaboration on the statement, and Stram and team owner John Mecom Jr. were unavailable for comment. Stram was signed to a 10-year contract before the 1976 season after having spent 1975 as a television commentator. Prior to that, he was coach of the Kansas City Chiefs, guiding that team to a victory in the 1969 Super Bowl.

In 17 years as a coach in the American Football League and the National Football League, Stram compiled a 131-99-10 regular season record, and a 1-1 mark in the Super Bowl.

Stram was eighth on the list of NFL coaches with the most victories, third among those still active.

The Saints were 4-10 and 3-11 under Stram. As this season ended, Mecom described his team as "poorly coached."

Particularly galling to Mecom was the fact that the 1977 schedule appeared to be among the easiest the team has ever faced. It was widely expected that the Saints would at least break even for the 1977 season and become the first Saints team ever to score more than five victories in a season.

In 11 years, the Saints have never been better than 5-9 for a season.

YMCA Searching For Cage Coaches

YMCA director Weldon Knabe has announced that the Y is searching for coaches to work within the Y's new youth basketball program, which will get underway sometime in February.

The Y will offer a basketball league this year since the Little Dribbler's program will not be held.

The program is for players in grades 3-6, and will be conducted under the framework of the YBA, the organization sponsored by YMCA's across the country.

"Special rules are used in YBA, with the emphasis placed on teaching the game rather than winning," Knabe said. "All players will receive the same awards at the end of the year."

Knabe explained that participation is the main object of YBA. All Players must play in every game, regardless of ability. "Each team has a roster of nine players," he said. "This helps get away from a platoon system, and forces the coach to use different combinations of players in the game."

Standings are not kept within the league, and teams are required to employ man-to-man defense. Zone defenses are not allowed.

Interested coaches may contact Knabe at the YMCA for information concerning the program.

A&M Parks Dept. Gets Assistant Professor

COLLEGE STATION -- Dr. John L. Crompton, formerly of England, has joined the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station as an assistant professor in the A&M University Recreation and Parks Department.

Dr. H.O. Kunkel, dean of agriculture, said the new staff member's experience and ability will be valuable to students and to research. "Dr. Crompton's responsibility is in business aspects of park management and commercial recreation enterprises. His broad knowledge of financial operations will greatly benefit our students and recreation businesses operating in Texas."

Research by Crompton will cover the application of marketing and management techniques to municipal park and recreation agencies, and the study of tourist behavior.

Crompton received his undergraduate training at Loughborough College in England. After teaching high school in Great Britain, he traveled to the United States and completed a master of science degree in recreation and park administration at the University of Illinois. He then returned to England and completed a second master's degree in business administration at Loughborough.

Between 1970 and 1974, Crompton was managing director and part owner of Loughborough Recreation Planning Consultants, which at that time was the largest recreation consulting organization in the United Kingdom.

The educator-researcher has been a consultant to a variety of cities and governmental agencies. These include the Irish, Northern Ireland and States of Guernsey Tourist Boards; British Airways and Der Lingus Irish Airlines; and commercial developers of marinas, golf courses, racquet clubs, second homes and amusement parks.

In 1974, Crompton returned to the U.S. and enrolled for doctoral study at Texas A&M.

Tanner Rips Dibbs

PHILADELPHIA (AP) - Tall Roscoe Tanner blasted 26 service aces in overpowering little Eddie Dibbs 7-6, 5-7, 6-4, 6-1 Saturday to advance to the final round of the $225,000 U.S. Indoor Pro Tennis Championship.

The 26-year-old Tanner meets the winner of Saturday night's other semifinal match between top-seeded Jimmy Connors and Brian Gottfried.

The sixth-seated Dibbs, a 5-foot-7, 160-pounder, simply couldn't handle the lightning-like serve of the 6-foot Tanner.

The Californian reached the semifinal with victories over Syd Ball, Zeljko Franulovic, Ilie Nastase and Friday night's stunning upset of second-seeded Bjorn Borg of Sweden.

Conservation Requested

AUSTIN -- When a wildlife species is in danger, sportsmen are usually eager to do their part to restore the resource.

With this in mind, the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department asks that the state's sportfishermen do their part to conserve the popular and much sought-after redfish.

In addition to observing the recently-established size restrictions and bag limits, fishermen are asked to release alive any "bull red" (those over 15-20 pounds) that won't be cooked and eaten.

Particularly in the case of the larger reds which make up the breeding stock, department officials ask that you land them carefully, handle them only with wet hands and return them to the water as quickly as possible. Biologists say the big reds stand a good chance of survival even through a short photo session if handled carefully.

The need for special conservation measures came to light in recent years after net samples, creel surveys, age studies and commercial landing statistics indicated that redfish numbers were declining in many areas.

In 1977 the Texas Legislature passed the Red Drum Conservation Act (Senate Bill 624) limiting the sportfisherman's catch to not more than 10 reds per day and 20 in possession. It continued the 14-inch minimum length but restricted the taking of large redfish to no more than two longer than 35 inches.

In an effort to further reduce fishing pressure, the Texas Parks and Wildlife Commission banned the use of trammel nets, gill nets, drag seines and trotlines in many sections of the coast on weekends. The penalties for violating the Red Drum Act are severe. The first conviction incurs a fine between $25 and $200 and confiscation of all equipment except vessels. For a second conviction, the fine is $200 to $500 and forfeiture of the sport fishing license as well as equipment besides vessels.

Redfish are highly desirable both for sport and eating. The smaller ones are tastier than the large, however, which is another reason to give the larger reds a break. Releasing "bull reds" will very likely help future generations appreciate one of the state's more spectacular fishes.

Meat Market Opens

The Meat Market, 425 N. 25 Mile Ave., is Hereford's newest business, specializing in custom cut and wrapped meats. Owner-partners of the Meat Market, which sells standard meats as well as specialties such as oxtail and beef hearts, are Jim and Faylene Conner and Ronnie and Cheryl Henderson. The store, open from 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. Monday through Saturday, began business a month ago. The Hereford Hustlers had a ribbon-cutting ceremony Jan. 20 at the new store. [Brand photo]

Roman Ruins Show First-Century Life

XANTEN, West Germany (AP) — Archeologists are saving unique Roman ruins and turning them into a booming tourist attraction that recreates life in a Roman colony of nearly 2,000 years ago.

Departing from the dry, academic approach of simply uncovering ruins, the Rhineland Museum is halfway through one of Europe's most ambitious restoration projects.

Museum officials in Bonn are supervising the six-year rebuilding of Colonia Ulpia Traiana, the only Roman town on the Continent north of the Alps whose ruins are easily accessible because they are not covered by modern buildings.

The town, whose population reached 15,000 during its 200-year existence, was founded by Emperor Trajan in 98 A.D. as the northernmost Roman colony in Gaul.

Visitors have been streaming here to walk among walls, towers, streets and an amphitheater, rebuilt on their original foundations. Even the advanced sewer and water mains of Colonia Ulpia Triana are being reconstructed.

Authentic first-century Roman specialties such as onion stew with pork liver are served with goat cheese on bread and honey-sweetened wine in Taberna 2000, a restaurant among the ruins.

German schoolchildren play hide-and-seek among the brick pillars of the rebuilt amphitheater where gladiators once fought to the death before audiences of 12,000 screaming for blood. Next summer the amphitheater will be used for open-air theater.

The backdrop is a rebuilt stretch of 20-foot-high Roman battlements, with tile-roofed guard towers, originally built to keep out marauding German tribes from across the Rhine River.

Remains of streets, houses, shops, factories, temples, public baths and harbor facilities once surrounded by the 2.4-mile wall have been unearthed in pasture land outside the German town of Xanten, 25 miles north of Duisburg.

"The idea is to reconstruct an ensemble of buildings to demonstrate the importance of Roman urban culture along the Rhine River," said Gundolf Precht, planner of the $6.3-million project.

As visitors stroll past historical displays set up along the gravel streets, work continues to save artifacts. Archeologists on Via Sagularis, a street which once led to the river port, comb the remains of a rich merchant's villa for pottery, silver coins and other ancient relics.

Excavations began as an emergency measure in 1972 when Xanten's industries threatened to spread out over the colony.

Financing, including nearly $2 million to purchase the land, came from the Rhineland Landscape Association, a state improvement agency.

CUPID'S HELPER

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The first American publisher of valentines was a woman, Esther Howland of Worcester, Mass., whose work first appeared in the 1840s.

Miss Howland's valentines were ornate, hand-made creations and cost as much as $35 each, according to Hallmark researchers. Although Miss Howland produced thousands of these delicate and romantic greetings over the years, she never married.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department is in a flap with Hereford cattle producers over a report it circulated which describes a genetic defect in the familiar red-and-white animals' skins.

Earlier this week, the department issued a news release which was based on studies at its Eastern Regional Research Center in Philadelphia. It was handed further by USDA's Agricultural Research Service regional office in Beltsville, Md., and finally

Woman's Hooked On Buttons

SOUTHINGTON, Conn. (AP) — Sally Luscomb can take or leave new clothes, but buttons are her weakness.

"Just bring me a nice button and I'm hooked," she says.

That is just what's been happening during the past 45 years, and she has had tens of thousands of them in a 28-year-old museum she calls Just Buttons.

The name belies her vital interest in the collection. "I'm not collecting fasteners," she explains. "I'm collecting arts and crafts and history."

And it's all there, in brass, cameo, ceramic, ivory, pewter, carved wax, shell: campaign buttons from the days when they were real buttons, ancient Egyptian buttons that were actually signets, rare buttons celebrating George Washington's presidency, specimens showing Connecticut's leading role in the button-manufacturing industry in the early 1800s.

The buttons are on display under glass in five rooms of the two-story house Mrs. Luscomb, a widow, occupies. Among the more than 400 display trays shelved along one entire wall are U.S. military buttons dating back to the Revolution. It's the largest collection of its kind, she claims.

New specimens are always coming in, those Mrs. Luscomb has sought and purchased and the "free appraisal" requests she gets all the time from people reading her nationwide "Button Collectors' Magazine."

In part, the report said that the characteristic called a vertical fiber defect "occurs in nearly 10 percent of the 30 million Hereford cattle hides produced each year in the United States" and that it is "not known to occur in the hides of other breeds."

The defect results in an estimated $10 million annual loss to the leather industry, the news release said.

Further, the report said that the genetic trait "may be linked to reproductive failures" of some Hereford cattle.

On Friday, USDA's Office of Communication issued another news release with "correction" printed at the top.

In it, T.W. Edminister, of USDA's Science and Education Administration, said the first report "contains information based on data which is inadequate to support the conclusions."

"Much of the information in the press release is not defensible on the basis of properly designed studies and adequate data," Edminister said.

Specifically, Edminister said that based on the studies reported in the first news release, "one cannot conclude:

"That the hide defect occurs only in Hereford cattle or that it occurs in nearly 100 percent of Hereford hides.

"That the hide defect is correlated with reproductive or other traits in any breed of cattle."

Further, he said, "the news item was not properly reviewed by ARS beef cattle geneticists before issue."

One spokesman, who asked not to be identified, said that stormy protests about the initial report had been received from Hereford breeders, including officials of the American Hereford Association.

"You might say they were a little upset," the source said.

The amount of land damaged by wind in the Great Plains is up from a year ago, but nearly all of the increase has occurred in the southern portion of the 10-state region, according to the Agriculture Department.

The department's Soil Conservation Service, which measures Great Plains wind erosion during seven months of the year beginning each No. 1, said Friday that 1,430,156 acres were damaged through Dec. 31, the first two months of the current season. Last year 1,122,517 acres were wind damaged in November and December.

But last year the damage was prevalent in most of the states, particularly in the northern area. This time, the situation is reversed.

Texas, for example, was listed with 920,000 acres damaged - 64.3 percent of the 10-state total - against only 111,602 acres during the first two months of last season.

The agency considers land damaged by wind if enough soil is removed or deposited on it to cause further erosion hazard or impair its capacity to produce crops.

For the entire 1976-78 season, about eight million acres of land were damaged by wind, up 30 percent from less than 6.2 million acres in 1975-76. That was the most wind damage since 10.3 million acres were stripped in the Great Plains in 1956-57.

By states, the damage listed for November and December included:

Northern Great Plains - Montana 28,130 acres in the first two months of this season and 82,205 a year ago; Nebraska 49,420 and 91,295; North Dakota 52,820 and 330,350; South Dakota 92,559 and 451,610; and Wyoming 13,900 and 7,159.

Southern Great Plains - Colorado 48,120 and 8,875; Kansas 4,560 and 8,300; New Mexico 164,837 and 4,050; Oklahoma 55,610 and 27,080; and Texas 920,200 and 11,602.

Consumer supplies of fresh vegetable are expected to be much more abundant than a year ago, when sharp freezes destroyed much of the tender crops in Florida.

The Agriculture Department said Friday that growers may have 21 percent more acres of vegetables for harvest during the winter quarter, January through March, than they did a year ago.

Officials said the increase includes more snap beans, broccoli, cabbage, carrots, celery, sweet corn, eggplant, green peppers, spinach and tomatoes. Slightly less cauliflower and lettuce is being produced this winter.

"Comparisons with a year earlier have less significance this time as the 1977 winter acreage of some crops - tomatoes, peppers, snap beans, eggplant and sweet corn - was drastically reduced as a result of Florida's three successive days of hard freeze in mid-January 1977," the department said.

So far this season there has been some minor frost damage to recent plantings of crops in Southern Florida.

"Supplies could be shortened later, but certainly not to the same extent as a year earlier," the department said. "Also, recent heavy rains in California have disrupted the harvest of lettuce, celery and carrots and briefly brought on record high prices for lettuce."

The report said that imports of tender vegetables - tomatoes being the most important - are up from a year ago, and the main volume is still to come.

"This season's Mexican tomato acreage is up substantially from last year, and volume shipments to the United States began arriving in the last half of January," the report said. "However, exports to the United States are expected to hold moderately below last year's record."

The report did not predict retail vegetable prices but indicated that prices paid growers for fresh market vegetables "probably will rise above December levels but hold well below last year's record high."

Total supplies of vegetables grown for processing "are moderately larger than a year earlier," the report said.

Corny, Flaky HEW

By PAUL SIMS
Managing Editor

I don't like trains and I don't like going to the dentist.

I'm not sure how I got my distaste for the railroad, but it must have something to do with how much more convenient it is to fly.

In a train I feel so helpless. It doesn't make sense because there is no way a train can blow an engine and plummet 10,000 feet to the ground.

I know why I don't like going to the dentist. If you have ever been, you know, too.

Apparently, the cats at Department of Health, Education and Welfare don't like trains or dentists, either.

Amtrak, a financially struggling national rail passenger service, recently joined with Kellogg Co., which makes Corn Flakes, to give a child a free ticket good for anywhere in the rail system in exchange for three cereal boxtops.

All appeared well for the railroad's plan until the director of HEW's Office of Consumer Affairs accused the rail service of contributing to tooth decay among children by promoting the sale of sugar-coated cereal.

The bureaucrat accused Amtrak of ignoring the fact that "high levels of sugar intake are linked with tooth decay, obesity, diabetes, atherosclerosis and hyperactivity in children."

He asked Amtrak "to consider whether Amtrak will be able to save enough money on reduced fares to cover the cost of dental bills incurred by the sugar-coated cereal their children ingest."

There is one thing I like less than trains and going to the dentist. That is bureaucracy.

HEW never stopped to consider that two of the three cereals involved in the promotion - Raisin Bran and Corn Flakes - are not sugar-coated.

The third cereal is Sugar Frosted Flakes. There is a way for children to remove the sugar frosting from their cavity-prone little mouths but it seems that the HEW never heard of a toothbrush.

I admire Amtrak, though I don't like its trains, for having the imagination to come up with the promotion and the guts to tell the HEW what it can do with its bureaucracy.

Amtrak has gone ahead with its boxtop venture and HEW has done nothing to stop it.

Another case of fighting HEW and winning was a massive letter-writing campaign concerning proposed health regulations which, if passed, might have meant the closing of thousands of small hospitals, including Deaf Smith General.

HEW revised its regulations which are still a nuisance for hospitals but not as disastrous.

Bureaucracy, you see, is beatable.

The Associated Press will begin a five-part series next week on bureaucracy and what can be done about it. The Brand will carry the series.

While you're waiting for it, eat a bowl of cereal. Then, imagine that you're standing up to HEW.

Paul Harvey:

Eliminating Excess

How would you like to get a big bunch of high-salaried government workers off your back?

The Department of Health, Education and Welfare has thousands more middle-level managers than it needs.

These are government employees making $22,000 to $47,000 a year.

HEW Secretary Joseph Califano says he can do without them. That he can and will eliminate 2,561 such jobs.

But I don't know what good it will do.

President Carter has said that no civil servant may be fired due to reorganization. All of them are going to have to be rehired in some government agency and at the same pay.

Federal government jobs are good jobs. Not counting their generous pensions and other fringes, government white-collar workers (average) more than $17,000 a year.

And the thousands of people they're trying to get rid of in HEW average twice that much.

In addition, HEW Secretary Califano says there are another 1,200 people in his agency who are overpaid for the work they perform. But he can't do anything about them, either.

He has asked the Civil Service Commission for permission to offer early retirement to 8,500 of his employees.

And remember, this is just one top-heavy government agency.

But so far the autonomous, dictatorial Civil Service Commission has refused.

It's next to impossible to fire a civil

Jack McGuire:

Talk of Texas

LAST RITES — Until World War I, most burials in rural Texas were handled without the services of an undertaker.

Since there was a scarcity of hospitals, most people died at home. When a death occurred, it was usually the neighbors of the deceased who bathed, dressed and "laid out" the body. If possible, burial was the same day since embalming was a rarity.

Usually the body was dressed in the best clothes available or else simply wrapped in a clean, white sheet. More often than not it was buried in a wooden box made by neighbors from whatever materials were handy. If the family was affluent, they sometimes hired a carpenter to build a plain pine coffin. The body then was hauled to the grave site in the bed of a wagon.

Most towns of some size had an undertaker, but usually that was only a sideline to selling furniture or something else. Funerals, even when a store-bought, satin-lined coffin was involved, weren't a profitable business.

THE CHANGING TIMES — San

Bootleg Philosopher

Editor's note: The Bootleg Philosopher on his Deaf Smith County grass farm strikes a blow for food this week.

Dear Editor:

As you know, research scientists who don't seem to have anything else to do are spending millions of dollars finding out that nearly everything we eat is bad for us.

The list is too long for me to remember, but over recent years scientists have announced at one time or another that some of the things that're bad for us are sugar, salt, eggs, bacon, milk, white bread, hot biscuits, thick steaks, - mashed potatoes, chewing gum, tap water, city air, hair coloring, cough drops and toe nail polish. I could go on but that's far enough. Oh, I did leave out hot dogs and potato chips.

In view of all these findings, I'm proposing a new study needing only a few thousand dollars but requiring some pretty sharp scientists who are unafraid of the unknown and have the courage to throw back their ears and announce their findings regardless of where they lead.

The purpose of this study will be to discover and prove beyond argument

Richard Leshar, U.S. Chamber of Commerce:

Union Disorganization

WASHINGTON — Very soon now, the Senate will vote on the so-called "Labor Reform Act" (S. 1883) - a piece of legislation that is unneeded, unwanted, and unwise. I hope the Senators' votes are more a reflection of their constituents' wishes than those of the AFL-CIO, for which the issue is a number one priority.

The official excuse for this bill is that employers have been thwarting employees' efforts to form unions, therefore it is necessary to make union organizing easier and to increase the penalties for employer intransigence. The real reason is quite different: The unions have not been able to sell themselves to the workers, so now they want to be able to use the threat of government penalties to cow employers into making deals with them over the heads of the workers.

Look at it logically: If American workers really have a burning desire to join unions, then this preference should be reflected in the union representation elections that do take place. But is it?

In 1976 (the most recent year for which the figures are available) the unions lost 52 percent of the secret ballot representation elections conducted by the National Labor Relations Board. Furthermore, the unions are also losing a majority of the decertification elections - that's when workers vote to throw out the union they already have. The number of decertification elections has doubled since 1970, reaching 611 in 1976, and that year the unions lost in 54 percent of them. So, the legislation is not needed (except by the AFL-CIO).

Is it wanted? We sponsored a nationwide poll conducted by the Opinion Research Corporation to answer that question. Here are some of the results:

-Only 22 percent of the general public favor legislation that would make it easier for unions to organize non-union employees.

-Twenty five percent want legislation that would make organizing non-union employees more difficult.

-Forty percent do not believe the current laws should be changed.

Even among union members, the proposal to make union organizing easier does not win majority support. Only one third supported the idea, while almost half (48 percent) think that the present laws should not be changed. So this legislation is not wanted.

Is it wise? Not if you're concerned about inflation. Unionization is associated with both higher direct labor costs and lower productivity because of stringent work rules and more frequent work stoppages. Therefore, the proposed labor-law changes could add to cost-push inflationary pressures.

If — as some people expect — the changes caused an additional 12 percentage points of employed workers to be unionized by 1985, then labor costs for each product or service could increase by an average of 7.4 percent.

Labor costs for small businesses could increase even more — by 9.3 percent — because they are less the existence of taste buds in the human animal. Probably use teen-agers as guinea pigs.

It is a well known fact that taste buds exist in other species. For example, cows, all of whom are illiterate and graze uninstructed by any studies on the nutritional superiority of one grass over another, will, if turned loose in a good pasture, pick the right plants to keep them fat and healthy, strictly by the dictates of their taste buds. Oh, occasionally one will sample some bitter weed or loco weed, but there are odd-balls in every species and there's no point in putting the whole herd on a diet just because a few miss-fits have unreliable taste buds.

If we can just get this scientific study to prove that nature has given not only cows, donkeys, birds, elephants, giraffes and even kangaroos taste buds, but has endowed man also with a set located somewhere on the tongue and palate, I'm not sure where and don't care, then we can all go back to eating happily whenever we get hungry. Personally I like potato chips but never cared for catsup on my eggs.

Yours faithfully,
J.A.

Richard Leshar, U.S. Chamber of Commerce:

Penultimate Word

unionized now and could expect to be organized more rapidly than the average for all businesses. Substantially higher labor costs would probably cause some small business failures and mergers, with a bad effect on both employment and competition.

The burden on the public in general — and on small business in particular — would be further worsened by the increased complexity and operating costs of the NLRB itself... a seemingly irresistible trend throughout the government today.

AND NOW THE BUDGET

I got caught in the crossfire at the Shot Bull Cafe. My table was in the middle of a discussion about the "government."

One guy had a great deal to say about how much money the government wasted.

Another had quite a speech about how many controls and reports he had to face because of Big Brother.

Another guy made a plea for more government aid in agriculture.

I ducked until I got a crick in my neck, left most of my greasy cheeseburger and went back to work.

First thing I read when I got back was an article about the new Carter budget. One half trillion dollars.

The article went into detail about how much money a half trillion is.

If I put into dollar bills and placed in a line end to end a half-trillion would: Circle the earth 1,800 times.

Stretch to the moon and back 250 times.

Provide 6.50 to every human being who has lived and died in the past 600,000 years.

Make every man, woman and child in Atlanta a millionaire. To this I added the startling fact that one person could not count that many dollar bills in a lifetime.

These figures are startling but the real fear is, what if we got all of the government we are paying for?

Talk about regulations now. A half-trillion would pay for a government inspection in every bathroom in America.

Every farm could have its own private government agent with two secretaries.

Every thermostat could be set by government employees.

Don't hollar to me about waste, man! We better hope they waste it. Efficiency in government would bury us all.

I don't care what they do with the stuff just as long as they use it up before they get to my house. One-half trillion will buy more government than I want.

Warm fuzzies,
Doug.

P.S. President Carter should be cited for bravery. Anyone who can ask for a half trillion dollars and still say he is on a budget is brave indeed. A half trillion isn't a budget it is a bottomless pit.

It's Byrd's Move

WASHINGTON — (NEA) — Power flows in peculiar ways in Washington. You cannot see it, or touch it. You cannot chart its course. But when it shifts, political antennae all over town begin to quiver.

As Congress settles into its second session, power on Capitol Hill is subtly sliding from the House to the Senate. At the White House and elsewhere in the Carter administration, game plans are being adjusted accordingly.

Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., largely overshadowed last year by the more colorful and gregarious House Speaker Tip O'Neill, is likely to hold the key to Carter's success this session.

Byrd's cooperation and leadership will be crucial if the president is to achieve his top priorities — enactment of an energy program, ratification of the Panama Canal treaties and adoption of major tax cuts.

The energy bill, stalled in a House-Senate conference committee, offers the greatest challenge. Byrd is a proud and sensitive man who does not appreciate suggestions from Carter or others that the Senate is "primarily responsible for the impasse."

"I think it's myopic vision to criticize the Senate," he said in a recent interview. "Both bodies are involved."

The majority leader shares Carter's determination to see an energy package enacted early this year, but he does not share the president's perception of what should be in the bill.

Like Sen. Russell Long, D-La., who dominates the Senate conferees, Byrd believes the energy program requires more production incentives than Carter and the House have proposed.

As a consequence, he will not try to push Senate conferees towards the president's position. Byrd will continue to exert quiet, behind-the-scenes pressure for an agreement on energy, but it is Carter who may have to give ground on substance to achieve a bill.

The president cannot afford to antagonize Byrd over the energy fight because he is heavily dependent upon the majority leader for help on the Panama Canal treaty ratification.

In that battle, Carter has nowhere else to turn. O'Neill may be his staunchest ally on Capitol Hill, but the House doesn't vote on the canal treaties. And there is no other senator capable of rallying support for the pact and ramrodding them through. Hubert Humphrey could have done it, before his fatal illness, but Humphrey is gone.

Byrd waited until last month to endorse the treaties. And even then, he demanded modifications as the price of his support. Carter had hoped to win Senate ratification of the pact last year, but Byrd told the president the treaties would be rejected if brought to a vote. Reluctantly, Carter accepted his advice.

It is this very power to control the schedule of Senate action which gives Byrd his clout. As majority leader, he virtually dictates the flow of legislative business in "the upper body," as the Senate likes to be called.

Critics have charged that Byrd worries too much about making the trains run on time, without regard to the freight. Byrd disagrees.

"Procedural problems have to be resolved before any substantive legislation can be passed. If the trains don't run, nothing gets delivered," he says.

Jimmy Carter may be losing the cars with legislative initiatives, but it is Robert C. Byrd's hand on the throttle. And the Carter freight will move only when — and if — Byrd wants it to.

ONE YEAR AGO

Local law enforcement officials established roadblocks on all major thoroughfares leaving Hereford last night following the theft of a number of valuable antiques from the home of Dr. Aaron Hutto at 705 Country Club Drive Monday. The theft was thought to have occurred between 1 and 1:30 p.m. The Hereford Police Department officially solved a recent major burglary early Thursday. It may result in the solution of several other crimes committed in Hereford and nearby towns. Inez Albright was awarded the coveted title of Outstanding Chamber Woman of the Year by Lavon Neiman Tuesday evening at the Country Club. The honor was doubled for the recipient because it will be one of her last memories of Hereford. Mrs. Albright and her husband will be leaving the community in the immediate future to reside at Big Springs, where he will be executive vice president of that city's Chamber.

TEN YEARS AGO

F.A. "Spec" Marnell and Jerry Don Glover were recognized for their achievements in agriculture Wednesday by the Tierra Blanca Soil and Water Conservation District and the Hereford Lions Club. Eleven men and one woman decided punishment of two years in the penitentiary for their conviction of Frankie Wayne Wester, on the charge of murder of a baby last July in Hereford, Wednesday in the Deaf Smith County Court House in a record deliberation. With the aid of a new underground watering system, Joe Reinauer, of the Reinauer Brothers Ranch, has made great headway in the problem of efficient and economic watering of cattle and crops.

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO

Chamber of Commerce Banquet Decoration will be unusual Friday evening in that they feature Highway 60 and familiar landmarks. The Hereford Garden Club is in charge of the decorations and members have been working on the project several weeks. The annual banquet will start at 7:30 Friday evening, and will feature Prof. Robert E. Jackson of Denton who will be principal speaker of the occasion. Entertainers from Amarillo Air Force Field will also appear on the program. Plenty of hustle, team spirit, good passing and dead eye shooting accuracy were the factor that enabled the Hereford Whitefaces to thrash the Vega Longhorns, 65-41, Saturday night.

FIFTY YEARS AGO

Keeping up with the demands of a growing city, a crew of workers of the Jordan Construction Company of Amarillo arrived here this week for the purpose of paving about six or seven blocks. They will finish the paving begun under a bond issue of two years ago, which was halted at that time because of inclement weather. This is the first opportunity which the company has had to finish the work. Farmers of this and adjoining counties will be given an opportunity to listen to a farming authority this week when Judge L. Gough, of Amarillo, a former Hereford resident, will speak to three groups of farmers at nearby communities. "Co-Operative Marketing" will be the subject of Judge Gough's speeches and he will discuss and fully explain the "New Contract" showing how it can be adopted to suit circumstances of any wheat problem.

Lighter Side

BANGOR, Maine (AP) — Reuben Cohen has invited President Carter to stay overnight at his house during the president's visit to Bangor next month.

But the 69-year-old Cohen said Friday that there is "probably no danger" that Carter will accept.

Carter is coming to campaign on behalf of Democratic Sen. William D. Hathaway, who is being opposed for re-election by Cohen's son, Rep. William S. Cohen, a Republican.

The elder Cohen, a baker, wrote Carter, "As a workingman and a lifelong resident of Bangor, I would like to offer you the use of my house at 7 East Summer St. during your visit to our city next month."

"Now that our son, Bill, is living in Washington, we have plenty of extra room. And, if you stopped by the family bakery, you would have ample chance to meet average citizens of Bangor."

The president is scheduled to hold a question-and-answer session with the public Feb. 17 and stay overnight in Bangor. Where he will stay has not been decided.

OXFORD, Ohio (AP) — The Miami University basketball team has finally made it home, ending a trip which included a night in jail and a morning's work at a local nursing home.

"What is normally a four-hour trip from Toledo to Oxford turned into a 36-hour experience," said Dave Young, a Miami spokesman.

The team was stuck in Vandalia, Ohio, because of the blizzard that hit the Midwest and spent Thursday night in the municipal building. About half of the team slept in the city jail and other players slept in the city courtroom.

On Friday, the players responded to a call for volunteers and worked about four hours at a local nursing home.

"They served meals to patients, they helped men shave and they made the beds," Young said. "A lot of the help at the nursing home hadn't been able to come in to work in 36 hours."

Seeking An Answer

Texas farmers await a response from John Balze of the Livestock and Feed Grains Subcommittee during a session at the House Committee of Appropriations conference room. Balze, shown seated at the rear on the right side of the photo, reveals the tension which has been prominent in many meetings with farmers, who are upset about the poor economic conditions they face today. Asked his position on the parity issue, Balze responded, "Hell yes, we support 100 percent parity. But you farmers aren't going to get what you want until New Yorker's can't buy food." [Brand photo by Jim Stolert]

GEORGE W. CORNELL

AP Religion Writer

Vocal opposition erupted this week in the wake of a United Presbyterian task force recommendation that the church give its blessings to the ordination of acknowledged, practicing homosexuals.

"We're up in arms," said a spokesman for a broad coalition of conservative groups in the church called the Evangelical Forum. "We're not going to take this at all."

If the stand were adopted, the denomination would become the first major Christian body explicitly to condone such ordinations, although it's recognized that they've been quietly common in church history.

But chances of approval appeared slim at the church's governing general assembly in May, considering recent surveys showing heavy majorities of the church's 2.6 million members and 8,600 pastors are against the idea.

Nevertheless, the coalition called a news conference this Thursday, registering combined opposition of three organizations, Presbyterians United for Biblical Concerns, Presbyterian Laymen and the Presbyterian Charismatic Commission.

"Our concern is not to condemn homosexuals but to minister to them," said Eleanor Campbell of Lindenhurst, N.Y., a coalition spokesman. "Our aim is to help them find the power of Christ for redemption toward heterosexual commitments."

The task force majority, in recommending that local church units be given a green light to ordain otherwise qualified homosexuals, said homosexuality "neither is consciously chosen nor readily susceptible to change."

Although it is only a "minor theme" in Scripture, unmentioned by Jesus or the prophets, those passages that do deal with it assumed it arose from "perverse and willful violations of nature," the majority report says.

"The view of what is 'natural' that undergirded these convictions was a view conditioned by time and place," the majority report says.

It says the "primary ethical issue in relationships between Christians is not whether the relationship conforms to a concept of orders of creation," but whether it enhances "faith and self-giving love" of those involved.

The report asks the church to declare belief that "self-affirming, practicing" homosexuals may be ordained, if otherwise qualified, with options about it remaining - as before - with local church units.

On the other side, a minority of five of the 19-member task force say "our present understanding of God's will for his people precludes the ordination of avowed practicing homosexuals."

"This is not to say that moral perfection is expected in his servants," the minority says, but it calls homosexuality a "result of man's fallen condition" and says all Christians are to strive against sin, adding:

"To evade this responsibility is to permit the church to model for the world forms of sexual behavior which may seriously injure individuals, families and the whole fabric of human society."

What seems a likely bombshell in the majority's report is its proposed sanctioning of ordaining "practicing" homosexuals, suggesting inclusion of those active in same-sex liaisons, although neither church nor civil laws recognize homosexual "marriages."

Asked about this, a staff aide, Kathy Young, said the task force didn't put that lifestyle "under a microscope" but that a footnote rejects any connotation that "practicing" homosexuality suggests promiscuity.

The majority report says: "For some homosexual Christian growth toward mature Christian living may imply accepting celibacy; for some it may imply accomplishing reorientation to heterosexuality; however for others it may imply remaining open to or attaining full companionship and partnership with a person of the same sex."

Meet Your Educator

Kenny Barnes is a new teacher at Hereford High School this year. He is a coach of football and teaches government.

He taught in White Deer and Hart before moving to Hereford.

Barnes attended high school at Sanford-Fritch High School, then later attended WTSU receiving his Bachelor of Science Degree.

This year Barnes has membership in TSTA and the Texas High School Coaches Association. He is also a sponsor of the Fellowship of Christian Athletes.

Barnes and his wife Gail attend Saint Anthony's Catholic Church.

Barnes would "like to help the young people of today grow and live complete lives mentally, physically, and spiritually. He wants to provide a friendly yet disciplined classroom which the students will look forward to coming to and learning to express themselves."

She Finds Clowning An Educational Tool

NEW BRITAIN, Conn. (AP) — Mallory Bagwell likes his students to clown around — that's what he's teaching them to do.

Bagwell teaches a class in mime and clowning at Central Connecticut State College and at Tunxis Community College in Farmington.

Many of his students at Central Connecticut are education majors. He says mime is particularly useful in special education classes, where it can help students improve self-image and coordination.

"Say a child is trying to get more control of his body, usually you show emotion through your face. But when you have a mask on, as in miming, it forces the body to search out movements to show emotions," he says.

Bagwell, 25, has taught mentally retarded and emotionally and socially maladjusted youngsters in programs for the Capitol Regional Education Council.

"It's like a word-association game with your body instead of your mouth," says Bagwell, who calls what he teaches a "serious art."

"Any clown has to fight against the stereotype of the birthday party and the bubble gum concept. It's a serious thing like any performing art," he says. Bagwell, who graduated from the Ringling Brothers Barnum and Bailey Clown College in Venice, Fla., also has a master's degree in physical education for special education from Springfield College.

Miming and clowning are the same kind of art, contends Bagwell, who gave up a circus contract for a teaching career.

Deer Stocking Program Ends

AUSTIN -- The Texas Parks and Wildlife Department last week shipped the final truckload of white-tailed deer in a three-year project to restore deer herds in Henderson and Nacogdoches Counties.

The 24 does and three bucks were live-trapped from several Hill Country sites and released in Nacogdoches County. Most of the other deer transplanted were taken from the mid-coastal area of Texas.

This makes a total of approximately 300 deer stocked at selected sites in the two counties during the past three years.

The three-year program represents a change in directions for deer stocking. In the past, about 100 deer was the maximum release in any given area, but studies indicate that larger infusions may be necessary to increase the breeding stock significantly.

Landowners at the release sites agreed to prohibit hunting of the deer on their property for up to five years or, until the population becomes established.

Iowa's Fred Stanek became the nation's very first corn husking champion in 1924, when—in only 80 minutes—he successfully husked more than 24 bushels.

Reservation System Due For Some Park Campsites

AUSTIN -- If you're planning to camp overnight in one of 16 selected state parks this year you might wish to reserve a campsite by mail, telephone or in person, according to the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department.

In the past, only cabins, shelters and group facilities could be reserved.

Overnight camping is now regulated in most state parks to the extent that each site is numbered and clearly defined, making it necessary to turn campers away after all sites have been filled. In order to avoid persons traveling long distances only to find that all campsites are taken, the department has placed 16 of the more popular parks on a campsite reservation system, effective February 1.

The parks where campsites can be reserved are: Bastrop State Park, Box 518, Bastrop 78602, 512-321-2101; Fairfield Lake State Park, Route 2, Box 269, Fairfield 75840, 214-389-4514; Galveston Island State Park, Route 1, Box 156A, Galveston 77550, 713-737-1222; Goose Island State Park, Route 1, Box 105, Rockport 78382, 512-729-2858; Huntsville State Park, P.O. Box 508, Huntsville 77340, 713-295-5644; Inks Lake State Park, Box 117, Buchanan Dam 78609, 512-793-2223; Lake Colorado City State Park, Route 2, Box 232, Colorado City 79512, 915-728-3931; Lake Somerville State Park (Birch Creek), Route 1, Somerville 77879, 713-535-7763; Lake Somerville (Nails Creed), Route 1, Box 61C Ledbetter 78946, 713-289-2392; Lake Whitney, Box 1175, Whitney 76692, 817-694-3793; McKinney Falls State Park, Route 2, Box 701B, Austin 78744, 512-243-1643; Martin Dies, Jr. State Park, Box 1108, Dogwood Station, Woodville 75979, 713-384-5231; Meridian State Park, Box 188, Meridian 76665, 817-435-2536; Palo Duro Canyon State Park, Route 2, Box 285, Canyon 79015, 806-488-2227; Possum Kingdom State Park, Box 36, Caddo 76029, 817-549-1803; and Tyler State Park, Route 9, Tyler 75706, 214-597-5338.

A non-refundable $2 reservation fee plus a one-day user fee are required for each campsite being requested. The one day user fee will be refunded if 24-hour notice is given prior to 2 p.m. on the date the site is to be occupied. Reservations cannot be made more than 90 days in advance. Reservations by telephone must be made at least seven days in advance and will be voided if required fees are not received within five days. Reservations will not be accepted for specific campsites, but are assigned on arrival at the park according to type requested. Occupancy is limited to 14 days and checkout time is 2:00 p.m.

Any unreserved campsite will be available on a first-come, first-served basis, with no reservation fee charge, as is the case with campsites at all other state parks not included in the reservation system.

Texas state parks are a bargain, offering a wide variety of activities in all regions across the state, with its diversity of geography, wildlife and climate. Planning is essential, not only in developing new parks but on a continuing basis in existing ones, to protect their resources and visitor enjoyment.

The department's aim is to give everyone an equal opportunity to enjoy all that each park has to offer.

For additional information on state parks and their camping facilities, write Texas Parks and Wildlife Department, 4200 Smith School Road, Austin, Texas 78744.

Safety Important During Reloading

--Observe all maximum load warnings in handbooks.

--Work up all new loads starting 10 percent below the recommended charge weight.

--Examine every case before loading to insure it is in good condition.

--Watch for indications of high pressure in establishing a new load. --Develop a routine for reloading to guard against mistakes.

AUSTIN -- Those hunters who decide to reload ammunition themselves should use special safety precautions.

The Parks and Wildlife Department offers the following safety tips:

--Use care and common sense at all times, and do not become distracted.

--Allow plenty of time for the project, and never load in haste.

--Use equipment and components as the manufacturer recommends; never take shortcuts.

--Store powder in a cool, dry place at all times. Keep powder away from heat and open flames.

--Never use a powder unless you are positive of its identity.

--Never smoke while handling powder.

--Keep powder out of reach of children.

--Don't mix powders.

--Don't keep more powder in an open container than you need.

State Quail Hunters Having Good Season

AUSTIN -- The annual harvest of quail is as difficult to assess as a bobwhite is to shoot on the wing.

However, biologists of the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department feel that the 1977-78 quail hunting season, which continues until Feb. 12 in most counties, is a good one.

An excellent hatch last spring was responsible for the better-than-average bird populations across much of the state, according to Al Springs, director of the department's upland game bird programs.

"There seems to be plenty of birds, and the only problem we've heard of is that the weather has been so dry the bird dogs are having trouble finding coveys due to poor scenting conditions," Springs said.

There have been reports in some areas where a high quail population was noticed in the early fall, but the birds disappeared by the time the hunting season opened. "Sometimes a big hatch simply overloads the habitat," Springs said. "Your land will support just so many birds."

He noted that when the quail population is at a peak, any loss of food for just a few weeks can cause losses. Cold weather often kills or retards vegetation that provides needed forage, and populations can be reduced drastically when this occurs, Springs said.

This all supports the theory which has become axiomatic to wildlife management specialists, which is "harvest them when they're available."

Gun pressure is not nearly as much of a factor in year-to-year quail survival as are the weather, habitat and food supply, Springs said. "If your property has habitat which will support two coveys of quail, then that's very likely all the birds you will have there under existing habitat conditions," he said, "and you'll have about the same number of birds from year to year whether you hunt them or not, so you might as well take advantage of the resource."

The reproductive potential of quails is so high that they quickly replace reduced populations -- as long as habitat and other factors are favorable, he added.

Stripers At Somerville

AUSTIN -- Hybrid striped bass are alive and well in Lake Somerville.

Inland fisheries biologists of the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department recently collected 27 hybrids ranging from eight to more than 21 inches. The largest weighed 4½ pounds.

This fine game fish, a cross between white bass and striped bass, has been stocked twice in Lake Somerville. In July 1975, the department released 50,000 six-inch fish; in June 1977, a total of 73,000 one-inch fish was added. Another reason for these stockings was to crop existing shad populations in the lake. Stomach analyses have shown that two-thirds of the hybrids collected had fed on these fish.

Lake Somerville lies about midway between Austin and Houston, and its 11,000 acres are easily accessible to fishermen. Good camping facilities and boat launching ramps are available. Hybrids are hard fighting fish and are not difficult to catch. Many successful fishermen often use deep diving lures, sometimes with a jig trailer.

Whistling Wings By Jim Steiert

Another waterfowl season is history.

They seem to slip past more quickly every year. The days one can get out and enjoy them grow more scarce, and the honkers and greenheads you are lucky enough to bag somehow mean more to you each time the magic months of November, December and January roll by once again.

There wasn't much snow this year, nor the bitter cold that makes duck and geese hunting the exciting sport it is.

But the old cattail lake, a handful of irrigation pits and a couple of much-favored corn-fields were still at hand.

And with them came the magic of teal whooshing past your hiding place in the cattails; the startled quack and rapid rise of a multi-hued greenhead; the awe-inspiring sight of a flight of Candas as they turned into the wind and coasted toward your decoy spread on set wings.

There were the rare moments afield when the bonds of friendship were renewed with old hunting buddies from back home, the excitement of locating an outstanding goose hunting area, and finding the stewards of that piece of land feel much the way you do about honkers. You even made one of the men from that place your companion on an exciting hunt.

The best days of the season past were the ones spent after geese.

Somehow, you seemed to put the secrets you had garnered from over a decade of goose hunting all together this year, or maybe it was just that you finally found the right place to try out what you felt you'd learned.

At any rate, the new-style goose blinds you designed under the apt direction of a veteran local goose hunter proved just what you had been looking for.

And there was a bit more method about the madness of putting out the decoy spread this time around. For the first time in years, you even had the entire spread ready to go. The broken stakes and heads were all patched and replaced, and you even managed to get all 40 of the set out at once.

And this time, when you called your brother and said,

"Come on up, there are a few thousand geese sitting out here and we've got a chance to get some," there really was a good chance.

In fact, when he showed up with Model 12 and insulated coveralls in hand, you knew there would be honkers in the bag that night, because a caring individual had been kind enough to grant permission for you to hunt right in the middle of his corn patch, where the Candas and snows were swarming in.

The geese came off the lake in huge bunches that afternoon. Their barking was incessant, and they were flying on all sides of the spread.

They came slipping in, catching the wind in their wings, mostly singles and doubles, and you let them get so close that they fell amongst the decoys when you folded them.

It did your heart good to see the "kid" brother (who can outwrestle you anyway) throw the blind aside and bring the honkers down with Dad's old Model 12. You could see waterfowl heritage passing from one generation to the next right there in the middle of that corn field.

There was a perfect double that afternoon. A pair of Candas came sideslipping towards the blind on set wings. Pat and I were both up in seconds and fired as one. The honkers were stone dead in the air and brothers reveled in the uncanny knack they've developed for firing at the same instant. Jerry, your old goose hunting friend since early college days, came up for one more try at the geese you'd been telling him about for so long.

But the jinx was still there. We sat amidst the spread and shivered all afternoon, and not a honker flew within range, though thousands passed by just to the west of us.

What can you say, Jerry, except next year we are going to get them for sure because we'll have a better idea of where to go and how to do it. — Just like this past season.

Then, there was closing day, when I didn't even think I would get to go. Restlessness gnawed at my innards all through that morning. "Your last chance for a goose for a whole year. You better get out and get cracking."

Incredibly, a hunt with two companions developed with only a phone call, and with that kind of luck to start on, you just knew it would be a good outing.

Mike and Gary were waiting with the decoys. The spread went up, the blinds were placed, and as the last hours of daylight sped past on Sunday afternoon, you were just where you wanted to be and doing exactly what you wanted to do.

The geese had developed a lot of savvy about decoy spreads and concealed hunters by season's end, and soon it was evident that it would be an afternoon of pass shooting.

You didn't mind. Huge skeins of barking geese were coming off the lake to the south continuously. Your pockets were full of shells, and the geese were sailing right over your hiding place.

Mike kept hollering, "Let's do it," blinds were hurled back, and three goose-crazy waterfowlers took high angle incoming shots at those spellbinding honkers.

Shoulders were hammered by three inch magnum loads of No. 2's, but a big honker would fold and come crashing down often enough to keep it from hurting too badly.

The sun hit the western horizon far too soon, and all the while you were gathering up decoys, the Candas were soaring overhead, barking the music that tugs at the heartstrings of a waterfowler. By the time the spread and blinds were gathered and you had bragged about your geese to the game wardens for a bit, darkness had fallen and a brilliant full moon added its iridescence to the landscape.

A skein of barking geese passed across the moon, silhouetted against the glowing yellow orb.

Their haunting cries mixed with the sharp night air, and the chills you'd known during so many other seasons were racing through you once again.

Chills that come only with experiencing the beauty and mystique of waterfowl.

Bag Strange Deer

AUSTIN -- Hunting deer at night has always been a serious violation to Texas Parks and Wildlife Department game wardens. A cold and windy night in November proved that, and more.

Game wardens Butch Shoop of Wichita Falls and James Hale of Henrietta arrested two men from the Wichita Falls area for hunting deer at night.

After a thorough and lengthy investigation one of the hunters said they had killed a deer but it was too heavy for them to lift. More investigation by the wardens revealed that a calf, and not a deer, had been shot by a 30-30 rifle from a distance of 100 feet and again at five feet. The fence had been cut and the animal field dressed. Only then did the hunters realize it was too heavy to load and it was abandoned.

Both men were taken before the justice of the peace in Jack County and upon pleading guilty were assessed $250.00 in fines for hunting deer at night.

On Dec. 8, 1977, the men were tried in district court, also in Jack County, and found guilty of criminal mischief, given two years' probation and sentenced to pay $750.00 restitution to the rancher.

TRAPPING SEASON WINDS DOWN

LUBBOCK -- The Texas trapping season will continue through January 31 and Panhandle and South Plains trappers have had plenty of cold weather, but only an average year collecting pelts.

The prices for raccoon have topped out at $16 in the Panhandle. Coyote carcasses are bringing from $20 to $22 in most areas with more finished pelts being handled according to one dealer.

"We have bought over 1500 coyotes this winter and most of the trappers are reporting just as many coyotes as last year although the animals are harder to spot or find due to the trapping and hunting pressure," the fur buyer continued.

The biggest decline in number of pelts and prices is the bobcat which is bringing an average of $50-$55 in January. The export ban by the Endangered Species Scientific Authority (ESSA) on Texas bobcat pelts has caused less interest in bobcat hunting and trapping by comparing the $55 per-pelt-price this winter with a $100 price tag last winter.

Licensed trappers are reminded that they must dispose of their season inventory of fur-bearing pelts by Feb. 5 since it is unlawful to possess green or undried pelts after that date.

NONRESIDENT FISHING
LUBBOCK -- The license requirements for anglers have changed several times since the early 1970's with nonresident fishermen required to buy a 1977-78 Texas fishing license regardless of age.

As a result of S.B. 222, 65th Texas Legislature, R.S., nonresident anglers are required to have a nonresident fishing license to fish in any public waters of the state. A temporary nonresident fishing license ($4.50) may be purchased to fish for five consecutive days in lieu of the regular nonresident fishing license ($10.50). Both Texas nonresident and resident fishing licenses expire Aug. 31.

Texas residents 65 years of age or older and 16 years of age or younger still are not required to have a fishing license. To be considered a Texas resident, you must live in the state for six consecutive months prior to purchasing a resident license.

High quality in sound reproduction does not have to mean high prices. At Radio Shack, for example, which has 5,000 stores across the country, highly valued music can be heard on highly valued sound equipment, like Realistic, which is relatively low in price.

Longtime Cookbook Editor Sees Changes Over Years

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Myrna Johnson, 76, logged more than a million miles in 30 years to search out the recipes that made the red plaid cookbook the third all-time hard-cover best seller.

"Really, it's been a team effort. I just added the parsley," said the now retired editor of the "Better Homes and Gardens New Cook Book." She is still called in on a consulting basis to help with the book she nursed through the depression years of the 1930s, when there was no chemical formula for baking powder, to the days of microwave cooking.

"I made five trips to Europe. I had to check out that famous pressed duck at Tour d'Argent — too Frenchy for our cookbook," said Mrs. Johnson.

According to Publisher's Weekly, the cookbook has sold more than 19 million copies, surpassed only by the Bible and dictionaries.

The goal over the years, according to Mrs. Johnson, has been to put out a book that serves the novice and the master.

"When I was a bride," wrote one reader, "I'd read a recipe that said 'braise the meat.' What's that mean? Dump it in water? Throw it in the air?"

The reader found the answer. "That cookbook told you what it meant," she said, referring to Better Homes and Gardens.

But the cookbook is more than just a helping hand, its users claim. It has become a tradition and Mrs. Johnson said the ring binder helps make it a part of the family because it allows for those personal additions.

"If you took that book and held it upside down by its cover, my mother's life would come apart," said another reader.

But it took more than philosophy and travel to make the book worth wanting. It required careful attention to trends, such as home canning, and some journalistic ingenuity.

During World War II, Mrs. Johnson earned an honorary membership in the Washington Press Club for sniffing out six months in advance — she had to meet publishing deadlines — the rationing point system for the benefit of those who wanted to make the best of those Victory Gardens.

A graduate student in art at the University of Chicago, Mrs. Johnson helped introduce color photos in the book in 1937 and it wasn't until the war years that she realized their impact.

In one edition, she used porcelain figurines of George Washington and Dolley Madison to grace a layout of cherry-topped cakes and cream-covered desserts.

"I got a letter from a woman imprisoned in a Japanese camp. For some reason, she had that photo and she wrote that it helped keep her spirits up while she was there," said Mrs. Johnson.

As to her own qualifications as a cook, learning how to flip doughnuts in her mother's kitchen led to a degree in home economics and a boxful of ribbons from the Iowa State Fair.

"I had credibility in the test kitchens. I could set the standards," Mrs. Johnson said.

But one time her expertise did not gain the confidence of one contributor.

"We brought in a Japanese woman to show us how she fried her shrimp. But she locked the kitchen door on us. We figured out her secret anyway. She used ice cubes in the batter."

The changes in cooking in general have been numerous.

The first 1930 edition of the book had an entire chapter on pickles, ketchup "and condiments. That's before Heinz was in there pitching. We even had a recipe for prairie chicken," said Mrs. Johnson.

There was no mention of frozen desserts. Mrs. Johnson went to Chicago in 1947 to see the first home freezer.

Berlin Riders Paying More

BERLIN (AP) — Capitalist West Berlin's communist mass transit system, the venerable S-Bahn, is raising fares again for customers in the non-Marxist part of town.

While East Berliners keep paying rates unchanged since the end of World War II, West Berliners will be shelling out a mark (about 44 cents) a ride.

A trip in the varnished wood cars of the world's oldest electric transit system will still cost about 13 cents less than a ride in the gleaming yellow cars of West Berlin subways, where the basic fare went from a mark to one mark and 30 pfennigs in August.

East Berliners pay various prices depending on how far they want to go. The basic fare is 20 pfennigs — less than a dime at even artificially high official exchange rates.

The elevated S-Bahn, short for Schnellbahn, or fast train, is part of the rail system that is run through all of Berlin by East Germany. The arrangement is a settlement among the World War II winners who Western diplomats contend still occupy the city.

East Germany, which says the West Berlin operation runs at a deficit, raised the price from 50 to 80 pfennigs in July 1976.

The system is the descendant of an electric trolley and subway line that went into service in 1902. That system descended from a 15-mile horse trolley operation opened under Otto von Bismark in 1871.

The S-Bahn's 200 miles of tracks run through 77 stations in West Berlin and 76 in East Berlin and its suburbs.

About 100,000 people a day ride the system in West Berlin, compared with about 2 million for Western buses and subways. The figure is up from the early days after the Berlin Wall in 1961, when Western passengers boycotted what became known as the "ghost train."

The West Berlin part of the system is run by West Berliners, but uniforms, equipment and travel posters in the cars are identical on both sides of town.

There's nothing wrong with a computer that a little competency on the part of the operator won't cure.

Bridge a Business Says Man Who Inspects It

DINGMAN'S FERRY, Pa. (AP) — Every morning before first light Carl Bensley, a dedicated man, puts out some cracked corn for the deer that wanders daily to his dooryard. Then he goes and sees to the bridge.

He walks across it, checks its wooden surface, its iron superstructure, its great stone pilings that are its foundation.

Other bridges, dozens of them, span the swift and sparkling Delaware River on its journey through this quiet valley, but this bridge is a special one.

You sense its difference immediately.

You drive across its rattling planks and stop at a little white toll house with a green roof and red brick chimney. The toll taker ambles up to the car window, smiling, to collect the 35 cents. Most passersby pause to chat, about the weather, about the airy iridescence of the river today, about whether the two golden eagles who do their fishing here have been about lately.

This bridge not only links two states, Pennsylvania and New Jersey, but is a link as well with more than two centuries of history. And it is one of the last remaining privately owned bridges in the land.

"The bridge is a business, of course," Carl Bensley said, "but I think its owners are just as concerned about its historical importance as its business importance. They really love the bridge."

Every October they have a stockholders meeting here. It's like a family reunion. They get motel rooms and visit with one another, and they all go down and look at the bridge, see that it's in good repair. That's my job, keeping it in good repair. No wonder it's like a family reunion.

Nearly all the 38 shareholders in the Dingmans Choice and Delaware Bridge Co. are related, most of them descendants of the brothers who bought into the bridge in 1900, the rest descendants of old Andrew Dingman himself.

In his pioneering way, Andrew Dingman was a straight-forward, no-nonsense sort of man. This was the place where, in 1735, he chose to live. So he named it — Dingmans Choice. He didn't even complete the name with an apostrophe.

He started a business plying a flat-bottomed ferry across the river. His offspring followed suit, and eventually the Dingman family owned a big stone house with balconies on both floors overlooking the river.

The old house still stands, sadly deserted, a haven for squirrels who play by day in a surrounding grove of linden trees.

"I lived in that house back in the '20s," said Doris Lance of Medina, Ohio, president of the bridge company. "My father died there. Some of us in the family are determined to restore it. It will be expensive, but it is or dream."

Mrs. Lance lived there long after the ferry had been replaced by a bridge. That was in 1834 when the legislatures of both states granted a charter for a toll bridge. That charter is still in effect.

The original bridge washed out in a flood, and so did its replacement, built in 1865. Indeed, ferries had to be used so often the village came to be known as Dingman's Ferry.

Finally, in 1900, Mrs. Lance's uncle and his two brothers, from Ohio, bought a discarded wrought-iron railroad bridge, carted it here in three 233-foot sections, set it on the original stone pilings, which they raised, and that is the bridge that remains today.

According to the 1834 charter, schoolchildren and people going to church or to a burial could cross the bridge free. That provision remains today, too.

"When my father was the toll taker in 1926," Mrs. Lance recalled, "a man dressed as a minister frequently crossed the bridge driving a hearse. That was during Prohibition, and my father came to find out that what was in the coffin was whiskey."

Carl Bensley, the local resident who sees to the bridge's repair, says nothing that intriguing happens at the bridge nowadays. "It's just a place to cross the river," he said, "but a very pleasant place."

My, yes. The traffic is sparse, the countryside quiet and remote. It would be hard to quarrel with Dingman's choice.

Young Turkish Girls Hand-Weave Carpets

ERZURUM, Turkey (AP) — Thirteen-year-old Leyla Korkuno works for less than 50 cents an hour, ten hours a day, hand-weaving a carpet that will sell for several thousand dollars.

Leyla is a student-worker in the "people training" program connected with the Ataturk University in this city in Eastern Turkey.

There are more than 250 girls in the school, aged 10 to 18, and they produce an exclusive line of Turkish carpets that are sold directly to individual customers on order. The one-of-a-kind patterns are selected in advance by the customer, and the girls reproduce the intricate geometrical designs chosen.

All day long they sit on wooden benches before the loom, their fingers flying along the harp-like threads of the warp to insert the many-colored tufts that will produce the luxurious pile of an authentic hand-woven Turkish carpet. A few adult women are scattered among the children to supervise their work, but the girls do the major portion of the weaving.

The florid designs are first painted on patterns, then the vegetable-dye-colored yarns in typical deep blues, reds and greens are selected to translate into the rug.

The girls are learning a trade that is some 3,000 years old, following a tradition that has provided fine carpets for everything from the Turkish court to the small prayer rugs used by the Moslem population.

Unfortunately, many of them will be unable to continue their work more than a few years because their fingers will grow too large to do the delicate work required. Those who continue to make carpets in their homes are encouraged to market them through the school management rather than try to sell them on their own.

The girls at the school here are just a tiny part of an industry in Turkey that produces carpets worth some $450 million each year.

Machines have taken over the job of making most of the carpets, with computerized punch cards making the color selection as the automated loom finishes in hours what normally would take months of work by hand.

Those who run the school here say an experienced buyer can tell the difference between a carpet made by hand and one done by machine — but they are reluctant to spell out the distinguishing marks.

Carmen Flood and Mary Kaye McQuigg, members of L'Allegra Study Club, are seen on the front porch of the E.B. Black home. The pillars which are currently on the exterior of the historical residence are to be replaced with Grecian Ionic columns, which were part of the house's original architecture when built in 1908. The columns are to be financed by proceeds of L'Allegra's ticket sales to the Antique Show and Sale.

The TV antenna atop the E.B. Black home betrays this photo, which could otherwise pass for a long-past era. Members of L'Allegra Study Club pose on the porch of the house, which is an adjunct to the museum and is being opened to the public in conjunction with the Antique Show and Sale. Rich in local history, the 70-year-old structure is located at 508 W. 3rd St.

L'Allegra Study Club's fifth annual Antique Show and Sale will begin Friday at 1 p.m. and continue until 6 p.m. next Sunday at Hereford Community Center.

This year's sale will have the added drawing card of the historical E.B. Black house, 508 W. 3rd St., which will be opened in conjunction with the antique extravaganza. A ticket to the antique show, priced at $1.50, will also offer admittance to the Black house, built here in 1908.

More than 15 registered antique dealers will have their authentic wares displayed for sale at the Community Center from 1-9 p.m. Friday and Saturday and from 1-6 p.m. next Sunday. Tickets will be sold at the door, according to Jody Skiles, show chairman.

Among the antique pieces to be offered will include stained glass, rugs, brass, copper, ink wells, silver, furniture desks, ice boxes, glass ornaments and primitives. L'Allegra will not realize any profit from the sale of the antiques, but will gain proceeds from ticket sales only. These proceeds will be donated by the club to the Museum for replacement of the exterior columns at the Black residence.

Individuals buying tickets to the Antique Show will be eligible for door prizes, to be given by The Funny Farm, Melrose Nursery, The Yellow Daisy, Flowers West and Park Ave. Florist.

Prudis Black, widow of Jim Black, contributed the E.B. Black house to Deaf Smith County in April of 1977. The Historical Museum was given custody of the premises and has been remodeling the house in order to restore it to its original appearance in 1908.

This is the first time that the public will have access to the Black site, since its restoration by the Historical Society. The house will be opened free to the public by Museum officials at Eastertime and then local clubs will have access to the structure as a meeting place.

Members of the Historical Society will be guiding tours through the Black home this weekend in conjunction with the same hours as the antique sale.

The E.B. Blacks were noted for their hospitable reputation in the small community of Hereford from the early 1900's until 1940. Their home, which was designed with entertaining in mind, was a popular (See "Antique Sale" on page 2 of this section.)

Adding flavor to a promotional campaign recently were antique cars, which took L'Allegra members to several city sites to publicize the Antique Show and Sale, scheduled Feb. 2-5 at the Community

Book Reviewed Thursday Night

Calliopean Study Club met Thursday in the home of Mrs. Millard Nobles. Minutes of the last meeting were read and approved. The club voted to make a donation of $80 to the heart fund. Mrs. Zella Mae Crump volunteered to host the next meeting in her home Feb. 9.

Mrs. Virginia Holmes reviewed the book, "Jack", which is a biography of the famous writer, Jack London written by Sinclair.

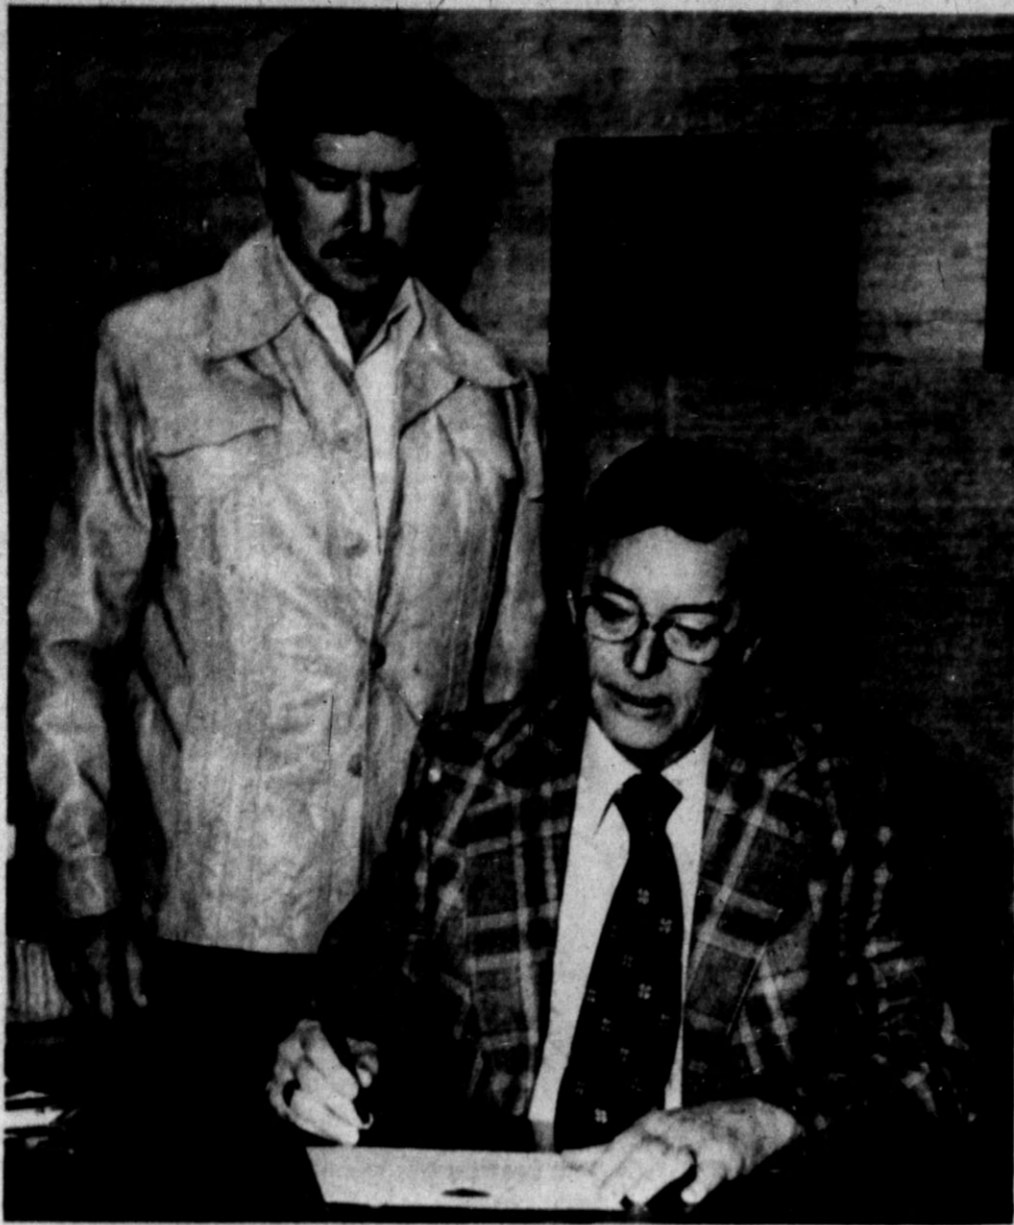

Jack London is the best known American writer in the world. During the 40 years of his life he published more than 50 books and numerous short stories and articles. Twenty-eight of these books are still being published for world readers. He grew up a street wail with little supervision. He mingled with drags of society and tried a life of crime, but after serving time in the penitentiary, he decided to pursue a better way of living. He educated himself and was admitted to the University of Berkley.

He earned his way for a while as a sailor on a whaling boat then sailed to Alaska to find his fortune in the gold fields. It was here he found material for many of his books; so though he didn't find wealth in gold he did find it in writing about his experiences. He married, fathered two daughters, divorced, married again and lived a life of alternate wealth and happiness then degradation and despair. He worked as war correspondent during the Boer War, the Japanese War, and finally the Spanish-American War.

Because of his loose life, he fell victim of Venereal disease, and many other health problems, becoming a drug addict and his final death in 1916 at the age of 40.

At this interesting program, refreshments were served to Leona Carruth, Eula Lee Cave, Audine Dettman, Peggy Furr, Amy Gilliland, Jane Gulley, Nancy Hays, Virginia Holmes, Mary Sue Hull, Sue James, Claudia McBrayer, Elizabeth McDowell, Kay McWhorter, Marjorie Mims, Kathlee Palmer, Joanne Simmer, Nancy Stewart and Meredith Wilcox.

For such a brief month, February is jam-packed with events, which should be of interest to local residents. Checking the society department's calendar, we discovered that the pace during the coming month will be fast and furious.

Of particular interest to Herefordites will be the grand opening of the E.B. Black house, 508 W. 3rd in conjunction with L'Allegra Study Club's fifth annual Antique Show and Sale Feb. 3-5. The 70-year-old home, which is now an adjunct of the local Historical Museum, has a fascinating countenance with an equally interesting history to boot.

The L'Allegrans will again amass a treasure trove of antiques at the Community Center to please the discerning eye of the professional collector or the tastes of those who simply see the charm of an old ink well.

For the ticket price of $1.50, an individual can attend all three days of the antique sale, as well as take a guided tour through the Black residence. Ticket proceeds will provide the money needed to buy Ionic Grecian columns for the porch of the Black house to further restore its original appearance.

February 3 is also a significant day in Hereford, for it marks the beginning of the American Heart Association campaign here, with the glamorous event being that night - the second annual Heart Ball. Beginning at 8 p.m. Friday at the Country Club, the dinner-dance will cost $25 per person, with approximately half of that sum going as a direct donation to the Heart Association. Jerome Friemel is chairman.

Projects related to the Heart drive are sprinkled throughout February, but the crux of the campaign is on Heart Sunday, Feb. 12, when volunteers will conduct a door-to-door solicitation. A number of people will be needed to help with the residential march. Volunteers are urged to telephone Mrs. Elmer Kimball at 364-3770.

Also adding to the Heart Association collection will be Hereford Study Club members, who are planning to sponsor a benefit Bridge Tournament Feb. 16 at the REC Medallion Room. Tickets costing $1.50 each may be bought now from club members, or can be purchased at the door that night. Door prizes will be awarded, as will prizes for high-scoring player and the runner-up.

All these events will hopefully glean $13,000 which is the goal of the Heart drive, according to Dean Stallings, president of the County Division of the AHA.

Members of the Beta Sigma Phi Sorority will be on the edges of their seats on the night of Feb. 11, when the Queen of the Sweetheart Ball will be crowned in Knights of Columbus Hall. The Sweetheart Ball is the peak moment of the year for local sorority sisters, representing approximately 75 women. Among the candidates for the title are Jo Ann Richburg of Xi Epsilon Alpha Chapter, Glenda Nigh of Alpha Iota Mu Chapter, and Donna Jones of Kappa Iota Chapter. Jan Walsler, general chairman of the Sweetheart Ball will be assisted in preparations by Opal Glenn. Providing dance music will be the Redden Brothers of Portales, N.M.

Hereford Council of Camp Fire Girls also recognizes February as an important time for their large organization. The individuals, clubs and businesses who sponsor Camp Fire Girls groups will be honored on the night of Monday, Feb. 13 at an annual dinner at K-Bob's Steak House.

Also, the crowd-drawing Father-Daughter banquet is slated Friday, Feb. 17 at the Bull Barn. This banquet is the climax of the year for Hereford's Camp Fire Girls, particularly those high school seniors who will be presented their WoHeLo medallions, highest honor to be awarded by Camp Fire.

Concluding this month of "big events" will be the County Home Demonstration Appreciation Luncheon Feb. 27 at the Bull Barn. Highlight of the HD year, the luncheon will include The Brand's presentation of the "HD Woman of the Year."

The County Commissioners will be special guests at this dinner. If that's not enough to keep things humming, don't forget that February also includes Washington's birthday, (Feb. 20) Lincoln's Birthday (Feb. 12) Valentine's Day (Feb. 14) and Ground Hog Day, (Feb. 2).

Parents Invited To Meet Monday

Parents of senior students at Hereford High School are urged to attend a pre-graduation planning meeting, beginning at 4 p.m. tomorrow in the HHS Library. Those who would be interested in serving on a graduation committee, but cannot attend Monday afternoon's meeting, are asked to contact Norma Hendon, 364-2171.

Reception Today To Honor Parkers

Mr. and Mrs. George Parker, former longtime residents of Hereford, will be honored at an open house today in recognition of their 75th Diamond wedding anniversary.

The reception will be from 2-4 p.m. in the home of their daughter Mrs. Clinton Jackson, 208 Centre.

Friends of the couple are invited to the affair. George Parker and Dora Gum were married Jan. 25, 1903 in Oklahoma. They have resided in Hereford for over 45 years.

Now residents of Prairie Acres at Friona since September, the couple are members of the First United Methodist Church here.

They had 10 children, eight of whom are surviving. Local children include Pauline Albracht, Viola Gyles, Muri Parker, Jerry Jackson and Anna Conklin. Others are Alta Brunstetis and Glenn Parker, both of Ava, Okla., and Mary Roas of Enid, Okla.

The Parkers have 31 grandchildren, 83 great-grandchildren and 15 great-great-grandchildren.

Clothing the Skeleton in the Closet

By Garth B. Thomas
President of Deaf Smith County Genealogy Society

Genealogy is the documentation of family pedigrees. It becomes exceedingly interesting and satisfying when one finds the details of an accomplishment, an event or incident which changed an ancestor's life style so significantly that its impact is felt today.

The impact may be nothing more than an explanation of what caused the family to migrate to Deaf Smith County. It may be that the ancestor was seeking economic opportunity, or was fleeing the wrath of a carpetbagger, or escaping the bonds of an indenture, or the entanglement of a romance gone sour.

Genealogy discloses that life just a few generations back was more rugged and harsh, less refined, less constrained by public law and order, more difficult to survive, less comfortable, more demanding, than it is today. Consequently, the story of most any ancestor's life is replete with acts of survival which are inspiring and worthy of documentation in a family history.

Each of us is evidence of the track left by our ancestors. Each has a track to follow for tracing our family history. This track often becomes dim beyond the second and third generation back which makes a genealogy search most challenging. The nugget that may be picked up along the way can be polished into precious family jewelry.

Earnest Langley, local attorney will speak at the Feb. 2nd meeting of the Deaf Smith Genealogy Society in the local library, regarding the legal implications of copying data from copyrighted publications, as well as other matter. This program should be of interest to anyone who uses a modern copying machine for any purpose.

Local: Please call the office if you are interested in attending the Disaster Workshop in Amarillo February 9 and 10. This class should teach us everything we need to know about helping in a disaster.

Congratulations to the LaPlata Council for their support of Girlstown. For several years, the Council has raised money to help Girlstown.

Jim Simon will be starting a CPR class soon. CPR is short for cardiopulmonary resuscitation. CPR can transform the average shocked, helpless bystander into a cool, competent saver of lives in instances of cardiac arrest.

Believe it or not the summer season will soon be here and we are now making plans for the Water Safety classes starting in May. We hope to have an advanced lifesaving class as soon as possible after the pool is filled. We hope to have a Water Safety Instructors class after the lifesaving class. Contact Katie Miller if you would like to participate in any way this year.

The 1978 Texas National Aquatic School will be held at Lakeview Baptist Encampment in Lone Star, Texas. The dates will be June 10th to the 19th. The curriculum will include training in Water Safety, CPR, First Aid, sailing, canoeing, and adapted aquatics. The tuition is $127.50, minimum age is 17 years old. Contact the office if you are interested in attending.

National: Red Cross chapters all over the nation are involved in disaster relief operations as winter storms, flooding, and tornados have caused havoc with travelers as well as many other problems. Thanks for Helping the Red Cross Help.

Save money and energy in the kitchen - unplug the coffee maker and use kitchen fans only when needed, advises Claudia Kerbel, consumer information specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

Stallings Blames Heart Deaths Partly on General Ignorance

Statistics indicate that cardiovascular disease is this nation's number one killer and that cancer is number two. But Dean Stallings, president of the American Heart Association's Deaf Smith County Division disagrees. "Cardiovascular disease is number one, but ignorance may be number two."

Stallings explains that heart attack, stroke and other forms of cardiovascular disease (CVD) are responsible for over half of all deaths which occur in the U.S., 52.5 percent to be more exact. "Close to a million Americans die of CVD each year," Stallings states "and I'm convinced ignorance - or maybe unawareness is a nicer term - is responsible for a large number of these deaths."

Stallings is convinced there are too many persons ("If there's one, there's too many.") who are "unaware of or unimpressed by" the magnitude of what he calls the "cardiovascular problem."

"Nobody's ever tried to solve a problem they didn't know existed. It's the same with preventing CVD. If you're unaware of the danger, it's unlikely you'll be motivated to do anything about it."

This leads Stallings to another area of ignorance or unawareness, which he thinks is a contributing factor to the CVD problem. "Among the people who know the magnitude of CVD, there're still too many people with an if-it-happens-it-happens, there's-nothing-I-can-do-about-it-so-why-worry attitude," he explains.

According to Stallings and the American Heart Association, there are preventive measures.

"Based on current death rates," he says, "I think it's appropriate to say that a person's chances of dying from a heart attack or stroke are 50-50. These are not very good odds. I've demanded better before risking a lot less."

He emphasizes three major ways to improve the odds:

- *Avoid cigarette smoking.
- *Eat foods low in cholesterol and saturated fats.
- *Control high blood pressure.

But Stallings adds, "There's more to it than simply knowing the risk factors; you've got to follow them before you're chances of dying from CVD are reduced. I wonder, "he asks thoughtfully, "how many CVD deaths occur because folks don't know or weren't heeding ways to reduce the risk."

But Stallings adds another item which he thinks contributes to the number of fatal heart attacks and strokes which occur.

"Believe it or not, some people actually think if heart attack as an easy way to die. If given a choice, they'd prefer heart attack over more agonizing forms of death." And Stallings admits that death from heart attack is relatively quick and painless.

"I'd go along with this if everybody lived to be 110 and then died of a heart attack. But unfortunately, heart attacks also occur much earlier in life. The untimely death is tragic enough, but the real tragedy, the thing that keeps heart attack from being easy, is the aftermath."

He adds, "The family, the survivors, of someone struck down in the prime of life aren't going to be convinced that heart attack is easy."

Stallings concludes that the mission of the American Heart Association is to reduce premature death and disability from cardiovascular diseases. "We're making a lot of progress, but we've got a long way to go. It'd be much easier if people would recognize the threat posed by CVD, and if they would take steps to prevent it."

"Along way to go," he repeats.

"Someday I'd sure like to be asked to explain why CVD is number 10, 11, 12 instead of the number one cause of death."

Based on statistics for 1975, the latest year for which complete data is available, the leading cause of death in the U.S. were:

- Cardiovascular Disease 52.5 percent
- Cancer 19.3 percent
- Accidents 5.4 percent
- Pneumonia/Influenza 2.9 percent
- Diabetes 1.9 percent
- All other causes 17.9 percent

CHAIRS..... for charm, for comfort, for sophisticated decorative accents, for comfortable conversation groupings or solitary television watching! What item of furniture offers so much variety, so much scope for your personal, family and entertaining needs?

Today's wide selection of chairs can be any decorator's delight. A good idea is to familiarize yourself with the different types available. The club or lounge chair is a man's favorite. Characterized by simplicity of line, with T or square cushions, this is one of America's favorite chairs. The famous Lawson chair is a good example.

The open-arm chair, usually smaller, has an upholstered seat and back, with the arm under the arms open. You'll find it in every style from traditional to Scandinavian modern. Slender, but often occasional chair, light in weight so that it can be easily moved. These are effectively used in pairs.

Decorators often refer to the "character" chair. It serves the function of lounge or occasional chair, but is styled as a dramatic eye-catcher. It can be a reclining chair that rocks, swivels or bogs to the wall, a high-back wing chair, barrel chair, or a contemporary rocker.

From "club" to "character" chair, you'll find them all in stunning variety in our showrooms now, in full range of distinctive new fabrics to complement your decorative scheme. Come in and see them all!

Commodities, Futures Studied by Moffitt

A book which challenges one's business sense and the continuation of a popular autobiography are two of the books available from Deaf Smith County Library.

Donald Moffitt's "The Wall Street Journal Views America Tomorrow" is a thought-provoking book which focuses on the importance of predicting change in America, as it pertains to commodities and futures.

After an absence on the literary scene for 30 years, Richard Wright has written the continuation of his bestselling "Black Boy" in a new book, entitled "American Hunger." Wright picks up where he left off in "Black Boy," describing his struggle to survive during the 1940's in an alien world in the North.

Deaf Smith County Library is open free to the public from 9 a.m. - 9 p.m. Monday and Thursday; from 9 a.m. - 6 p.m. other weekdays and until noon Saturdays.

THE WALL STREET JOURNAL

America Tomorrow
 by Donald Moffitt

How can managers in business and government set accurate goals for the future? The recent failures of forecasting in energy, transportation, and agriculture are vivid reminders that managers at all levels must be alert to rapid change in research, product development, distribution, marketing and customer demand.

This book is based on a series of articles which focused on the most significant aspects of change in modern life. Donald Moffitt has adapted these for the specific benefit of the business person's professional and personal awareness.

This multifaceted look at the future ranges from an analysis of potential crisis in population and resources, through speculation on new modes of transportation, food production, and medical research, to such provocative subjects as the weapons industry, contraception and homosexuality. The reader is challenged to make the proper assessment and use of the information and trends depicted.

The misguided euphoria of the recent past provides an appropriate backdrop against which to assess current information. Americans have learned not to be content with the most recent information, but to probe continually for the significance behind any development.

The reader is put on guard not only to be alert to new developments but to be wary of easy generalization about their significance. The thrust of the message is a clear caveat to anyone who must provide for a margin of stability in the future. The price of that stability is continual awareness and active, measured response to change.

AMERICAN HUNGER
 by Richard Wright

Anyone who had read Richard Wright's Black Boy knows it to be one of the great American autobiographies. Covering Wright's early life in the South, the book concludes with his departure in 1934 for a new life in the North. Now, more than thirty years after the publication of Black Boy, Wright's story is continued with American Hunger.

Although it was written in the early 1940's as a second part to Black Boy, American Hunger was severed by Wright from the main autobiography and the bulk of it has, until now, remained unpublished.

American Hunger is a vital, richly anecdotal work. It treats with feeling and frequently with wry humor Wright's struggle to make his way in the North-in Chicago-as store clerk, dishwasher and eventually as a writer.

He deals movingly with his early days in the Communist Party and with his attempts to keep his integrity in the face of Party demands that he subordinate his artistic goals to their needs. And he recounts with a mixture of pain and irony his break with the Party and the tortured period of ostracism that followed.

There is an unsettling and totally frank personal story here, and a lot of raw social history as well. Filled with vivid images and memorable portraits of the people and movements of the period, American Hunger is a spellbinding work, both historically and as a rediscovery of value in American literature.

Any find relating to Richard Wright is exciting. The reappearance of this absorbing work is more than that; it is very much an event.

At Wits End

BY ERMA BOMBECK

You know what this country needs? Something that doesn't last forever. I never saw the advantages of buying a carpet that would last a lifetime...or a winter coat that never went out of style...or lawn furniture that you never had to replace.

When one has a low threshold of boredom, a lifetime guarantee can be depressing — especially when it applies to things you hate.

In 1953, I bought a set of plastic dishes. They came two shocking pink and two dramatic black plates to a set. The first year we had them I thought they were chic beyond description.

By the fifth year, they began to grate on my nerves and I begged the kids to take them to the sandbox or lose them on a picnic.

After seven years of those crummy dishes (do you know how disgusting liver looks on a black plastic plate?) I resorted to sneaking out at night and putting them under the rear wheels of the car and allowing the kids to sit in them and sled down the hill in back of the house.

There isn't anything biodegradable anymore, with the exception of marriage which seems to decompose before the honeymoon.

The shine on my car is built to outlast the motor. The fillings in my teeth are good for 50 more years after I'm gone and my deodorant is so dependable, I've given up showers.

If American ingenuity keeps pace, I predict all the excitement will go out of our lives. Light bulbs will burn forever, tennis shoes will have to be put to sleep to get rid of them, and we'll never know the exhilaration of tossing away a wafer-thin piece of soap and saying, "I thought you'd never leave."

Maybe it doesn't bother anyone else, but this morning I did a gutsy thing. I took a paper clip which I've been using and reusing for ten years and threw it away. That's right — just dropped it off in a waste can and said, "Bunkie, you're finished!"

Someday, I know as sure as I'm sitting here, strangers from another planet will poke through the rubble of our civilization and try to figure out what we were all about. There's no doubt in my mind a woman will unearth a set of dishes, two shocking pink and two dramatic black plates to the set, and exclaim, "Hey, these look like they'll last forever."

That will be her first mistake.

Select Lawyer with Care

When selecting a lawyer, investigate, get recommendations and interview to find the lawyer that provides the needed services, advises Claudia Kerbel, consumer information specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

genuinely concerned with each problem.

Effective two-way communication is important to a successful lawyer-client relationship, Ms. Kerbel explains.

Merry Mixers Change Date Of Meeting

Do some investigating - don't be satisfied with "potluck" out of the telephone directory, she continues.

"Get recommendations from a trusted friend or another lawyer.

"Talk to people who might know lawyers that specialize in particular cases.

"For example, consult a marriage counselor for referral to a divorce lawyer, a real estate agent for an attorney experienced with deeds, or a bank officer for a lawyer to handle a will," Ms. Kerbel suggests.

Another source of information is the Lawyer Referral Service - a free public service of the State Bar of Texas. (Lawyer Referral Service toll-free number is 800-252-9690.)

The Lawyer Referral Service provides names of licensed attorneys according to their specialty - divorce, criminal, bankruptcy, juvenile, real estate and others.

These lawyers - though not screened by experience or qualifications - are all licensed and in good standing with the State Bar of Texas.

After gathering two or three names, interview each lawyer. Many lawyers will give an initial consultation free or at a nominal fee, the specialist continues.

During the interview, be sure to ask:

• about their experience with particular cases and their expertise in the subject.

• whether other lawyers will be consulted on a referral basis, and

• about fees - are rates hourly or a flat fee or a contingency fee (a percentage of the money recovered in a damage suit).

Finally, consider if the lawyer is trustworthy and if he or she is

An estimated 100,000 wild turkeys will be bagged by marksmen this year in the 29 states that have hunting seasons for the birds.

In the U.S., this confection is usually molded into flowers and fruits, but in Europe, it takes the form of vegetables and even pictures of children.

Hereford Merry Mixers had five squares dancing last week to the calls of J.D. Wilbanks, guest caller from Stinnett.

One guest, Jake Bender from Nebraska, was introduced.

It was announced that the club's regular dance on Feb. 3 will be postponed until Feb. 10, when a new slate of officers will be installed. Also, members were reminded of the Heart Fund Benefit Dance scheduled Feb. 4 at Dimmitt.

PERSONAL INSULATION

Clothing traps air to insulate the body and retain heat for added warmth in winter - without using more energy.

Air trapped between layers of clothing or trapped in a fuzzy fabric acts as insulation and helps retain body heat.

The body heats the trapped air and generates warmth.

Several loose layers trap more air and are warmer than one tight layer, regardless of its thickness.

The number of layers needed for comfortable warmth depends on personal activity. An active person generates more heat so fewer layers are needed. Trap heat by clothing design, too.

Normal garment openings such as necklines and sleeve openings should fit close to the body to prevent heat from escaping.

Cuffs, elasticized wristbands, turtle-necks, and cowl-collars are all warmer than open necks and open sleeves.

Remember, bulky socks and fleecy boots are warmer than slippers.

Camisoles or under-shirts provide an extra layer over the major portion of the body - and when the body is warm, excess heat goes to the hands and feet, making them warmer.

IMPROVED CHILD QUALITY

Informed selection of child care contributes to improved service.

Take advantage of opportunities to be knowledgeable of laws, standards, characteristics of quality care, variety of child care available and request a quality program for children.

would force operators of child care facilities to improve their services.

"Usually, families select child care on the basis of cost, location, hours of operation and quality - in that order.

"Because of this priority ranking, operators of child care facilities place major emphasis on cost, location and hours of operation.

"Competitiveness within the business is centered around cost and convenience - not quality of care."

The Texas Department of Human Resources (Welfare Department) can provide copies of the laws and standards that regulate child care, printed information on how to select child care, and lists of licensed child care facilities.

Having read this information, a parent can spend a couple of mornings making unannounced visits to the child care centers, observe the programs, ask questions and select the service that best meets the families' needs.

RESISTING FALSE HUNGER CUES

Effective weight control starts with resisting false hunger cues that contribute to weight gain.

It involves resisting internal and external cues that contribute to weight gain and resisting the temptation to use fad diets to take off the extra pounds.

People should recognize the source of their urge to eat. Some internal cues, such as tension; may only seem to be hunger cues.

On the other hand, external cues stem from seeing others eat, seeing food, smelling good food, or hearing food ads on television.

These cues are not real hunger - and they do contribute to weight gain.

In addition, fad diets do not encourage the eating habits necessary for long term weight control and good nutrition.

While fad diets may result in short-term, quick-weight loss, they are not effective for long-term weight control.

Fad diets are ineffective because they fail to provide adequate nutrition - and they can be dangerous if followed for a long time.

CHECK APPLIANCE LIFE EXPECTANCY

Before replacing a major appliance that needs repair, consider its projected life expectancy - repairs may cost less.

It is good to know the life span estimation for household appliances:

Freezer 20 years, new; 9 years, used.

Refrigerator 15 years, new; 7 years, used.

Gas Range 13 years, new; 7 years, used.

Electric Range 12 years, new; 6 years, used.

Dishwasher 11 years, new; 7 years, used.

Washer 11 years, new; 5 years, used.

Electric Dryer 14 years, new; 5 years, used.

These figures indicate how long, on the average, households keep appliances.

Turning the other cheek is great if you want lumps on both sides of your face.

Ann Landers Witty Answer

DEAR READERS: A gentleman in Oklahoma came up with the perfect answer for the wife whose husband comes home from work and asks, "What did you do all day?"

In a recent column a woman wrote to say her husband asked her that question and when she told him she washed clothes for eight people (they have six kids) he replied, "What do you mean YOU washed clothes? The machine did it."

Well, here's his snappy comeback - in poetry yet - and I love it!

SOMEDAY I'LL ANSWER.... (Husband): "What did you do all day?"

I didn't wash the dishes, And I didn't make the bed, Your clothes are Where you left them - I sat all day and read, I overlooked the ironing,

The wash and mending too, As far as I'm concerned There's not a thing to do. Your supper isn't ready And the toys are in the way, And that, my darling husband, is what I didn't do All day. - Submitted by Jack Wright, Yukon, Oklahoma

DEAR JACK: A big kiss from every woman in America who has ever been asked the question!

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My sister's husband started running around on her very soon after they were married. Everyone seems to know about it but her.

She is such a sweet person, a great wife and a terrific mother to two small children. It seems every other day someone tells me about another girl her husband approached for a date, took to dinner or practically attacked.

The jerk has made passes at me and my brother's wife. We both told him off but he feels safe because he knows we would never let my sis know. It would hurt her too much.

Should a woman have to live her whole life like this? I've been thinking seriously about telling her. She is still young and beautiful and could make a life with someone else.

He must be crazy. I need your advice, Ann. - Torn Between Two Fires

DEAR TORN: Since every other day someone brings you news about the skunk's latest move, why not ask one of the carrier pigeons to do your sister a favor and tell HER instead of you? Make it plain his behavior is not news to you - that you feel your sister should know but you simply can't tell her for obvious reasons.

Don't be surprised, however, if your sister already knows. Many women are aware or strongly suspect their husbands have an outside interest, but they pretend not to know because it's easier than dealing with the situation. One thing is certain - the information should not come from you.

Honor Roll Includes Dale Tarr

Local Folks Buy Much Insurance

Deaf Smith County residents are not lacking in life insurance, with their total protections now at approximately $177.2 million.

American people as a whole also have been adding to their insurance in the last few years, with total holdings at $2.34 trillion.

Those figures are contained in the 1977 Life Insurance Fact Book and other insurance statistics.

In Texas, according to the figures, the amount of insurance in force totals $135.1 billion, as compared to $72.8 billion in 1970.

Life insurance coverage in Deaf Smith County is estimated at $29,840 per family, compared to an average of $26,600 for the entire area of the west south central United States.

Most local residents carry individual or family policies, according to the statistics. Group insurance is in second place.

The difference between loonies and normal people is in whether you happen to be in the minority or majority concerning some subject.

Winter Playground

The playground equipment at Dameron Park might have been an entertaining place for Jack Frost earlier this week, but was void of any other signs of life after several inches of snow fell here Tuesday. However, the brilliant sun burned away most of the white stuff before the weekend. More snow is expected to cover the Panhandle tomorrow. [Brand photo by Dianne Banner]

Yarbrough Sentenced Five Years for Lying to Jury

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Former Texas Supreme Court Justice Don Yarbrough must go to prison for five years for lying to a Travis County grand jury about a meeting in an Austin motel with a former business associate.

Yarbrough's jury Friday night deliberated 3½ hours before denying him what he pleaded for — a probated sentence.

From the beginning, the case has been a fight over whether he would get a probated sentence. Defense lawyers admitted he lied to the grand jury June 28 when he said he did not meet with Bill Rothkopf on May 16, but they said the grand jury already knew that, and would have indicted him for forgery regardless of his answer.

They said that made it simple perjury, a misdemeanor, not aggravated perjury, a felony.

State District Judge Mace Thurman took the question away from the jury, ruling Yarbrough's answer to the grand jury did influence the panel in its forgery probe.

Rothkopf secretly recorded the May 16 meeting with equipment strapped on the lower part of his back by a Harris County district attorney's investigator. The jury heard the tape, which included much profanity, by Yarbrough.

Yarbrough instructed Rothkopf at the motel on how to forge a car title.

The ex-jurist ignored reporters' questions after the judge read the verdict. His chief attorney, Waggoner Carr, said, "We'll definitely appeal. That's about all I want to say."

60 Persons Rescued From Stranded Train

ROACHDALE, Ind. (AP) — Work crews dug through a wall of snow Friday to rescue 60 persons stranded more than 12 hours on an Amtrak passenger train that stalled in a snowdrift and then froze to the rails.

The 45 passengers and 15 crewmembers on the Chicago-to-Florida-bound Floridian were ferried aboard snowplow locomotives to a nearby crossing, and then driven in trucks to a fire station in the town of Bainbridge.

During their ordeal, all aboard the seven-car train moored into the lead locomotive and huddled under layers of blankets for warmth, but four hours before the rescue water ran out for the train's steamheating system and some passengers suffered frostbite, authorities said.

The train stalled about noon near this rural community about 33 miles west of Indianapolis at the height of a blizzard swept by winds 40 to 50 mph that dumped about a foot of snow on the state's midsection.

"It was a pretty harrowing experience," said passenger Ove Knudsen 69, Knox, Ind. "It took 28 hours to go a little less than 200 miles. But we are so thankful to the firemen and to Amtrak. They did the best they could."

Knudsen said he and his wife were en route to West Palm Beach, Florida, "and we still aim to get there."

Bainbridge Town Marshall Louis Lowery Jr. said that from the fire house the evacuees would be taken to the Methodist Church where the women's auxiliary was preparing food.

He said a four-wheel drive vehicle had been sent to bring the town doctor to aid the passengers.

"We've got drifts 15 to 20 feet here," Lowery said. "When I learned we were going to be involved in the rescue, I got out the volunteer firemen and then our street people to clear a path from the crossing to the fire station."

The final rescue was effected by 10 volunteers digging through the wall of snow, Amtrak spokesman Joseph Vranich said. That allowed the two rescue locomotives to join the stalled train, and passengers and crew boarded the rescue units.

The snowplow-equipped locomotives of the Louisville &

Nashville Railroad had reached within a few feet of the train shortly after midnight. But Vranich said they were unable to plow through the drift to couple with the lead locomotive and haul it away.

The tracks were in a gully, Vranich said, and the snow was so deep it was impossible for passengers to walk from their train to the rescue locomotives.

USDA Investigative Head Assigned to Grain Elevators

WASHINGTON (AP) - John V. Graziano, head of the Office of Investigation in the Agriculture Department, has been assigned temporary duties to look into the recent series of fatal grain elevator explosions.

Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland appointed Graziano to the job. Graziano will work with Leland F. Bartelt, administrator of the Federal Grain Inspection Service, to coordinate and direct "special efforts to determine the cause of the explosions, the additional safety precautions that must be taken and safety guidelines for USDA employees."

Bergland said Graziano's "primary concern will be analyzing the adequacy of current investigations, enforcement practices, legislation and regulations" relating to the grain elevator problems.

More than 50 persons have been killed in recent explosions, including 13 USDA employees. Graziano also will be USDA's liaison with the Labor Department, the Environmental Protection Agency, the grain industry and other agencies of the federal and state governments involved in the safety effort.

Bergland also announced that flags at USDA national headquarters and at department field offices will be flown at half staff on Feb. 13 "as an expression of the department's sympathy and esteem for the families of the employees who were lost."

County Tops in '77 Wheat

AUSTIN - Deaf Smith County was the top wheat producing county in Texas in 1977, Agriculture Commissioner Reagan V. Brown reports.

With a total harvest of 5,357,300 bushels, Deaf Smith County produced 4.6 percent of the wheat grown in the state, Brown said.

Of the 267,000 acres planted in wheat, Deaf Smith County farmers harvested 213,900 acres, and realized a 25-bushel per acre average yield, he noted.

The state's winter wheat production for 1977 totaled 117,500,000 bushels. This boosted Texas into the No. 6 spot in the nation in total wheat production, Brown commented.

He stated that the low wheat prices which accompanied this near-record production have hurt Texas farmers, particularly in the face of rising production costs.

"However, Texas farmers will receive a substantial share of the $1.2 billion in federal wheat deficiency payments that will be paid out this year," Brown noted. "This should help ease the serious cash-flow problems our farmers have experienced because of the low grain prices."

From 1967 to 1977 the average weight of tackles in the Big Eight Conference increased 35 pounds from 211 to 246.

Men Appointed To NCA Committees

DENVER, Colo. — Ken McLain of Hereford has been appointed a member of the Environmental Management committee of the National Cattlemen's Association (NCA), while Dave Hopper has been named to the marketing committee.

According to NCA President Richard A. McDougal, McLain, Hopper and other committee members from across the nation will be responsible for the development and implementation of policy in the environmental and marketing areas.

"One objective of NCA," said McDougal, "is to accurately reflect the interests and concerns of cattlemen throughout the country. One way this is done is through committees.

McLain and Hopper and other committee members who serve on NCA's 13 standing committees are the eyes and ears of the association. And this is as it should be. Working cattlemen, who best understand industry problems, are most qualified to develop and articulate the proper solutions to industry problems."

McLain, manager of South West Feed Yards, Inc. is active in the Texas Cattle Feeders Assn., where he serves as member of Regulatory Agency Committee. Hopper operates Chamion Feeders Inc. and serves as a director.

The main thrust of NCA is in government affairs at the nation level.

On The Turnrow

By Jim Steiert

Brand Farm Editor

The general topic of discussion around the farm community is centered on what is going on in Washington these days.

There were a lot of local farmers who traveled to the nation's capital for the first week of activities in connection with the farmer movement on that city. A lot more wanted to go, but had livestock to take care of here at home and didn't make it.

Wherever I go these days, I'm met by farmers who ask, "How was Washington," and add, "Do you think all of those guys up there are going to do any good?"

Well, as a first-time traveler to that city myself, I'm not too well qualified on just how Washington was or is, but it would suffice to say that my sojourn there was an eye-opening experience.

It's not hard to liken Washington to a Camelot, a city of pomp and ceremony, high living and revelry supported by the hard work of a lot of peasants who are seldom thought of by vainglorious lords.

I've lost sleep nights since I returned from Washington, wondering just what in the heck it is that the legislators there are thinking about these days.

Is it possible to be so seemingly unaware of impending disaster, not only for agriculture, but for the whole economy?

And is it humanly possible to be so unconcerned?

I got the impression while I was there that a lot of individuals are not only expert at passing the buck and stretching the truth, but have developed a particular adeptness at baldfaced lying.

But then again, I got the impression that Washington is a city filled with elected officials, and those officials are still accountable to the nation's taxpayers and to their Creator.

I saw a lot of squirming going on when some of those "public servants" were asked to account for themselves to the men of the land who pay their salaries (plus extras.)

As for the second question, will all of those guys up there do any good? That remains to be seen.

I received word during the past week that there were around 100,000 farmers still camped in Washington and lobbying for their cause.

Someone told me there were more farmers during the second week of the farmer protests than there were present during the kickoff effort of the first week.

I can't guarantee that a massing of farmers in Washington is going to do any good, but when you look at all of those other lobbies that have fared so well there, I don't think it can do any harm.

There was speculation that this farmer movement on Washington would fold up after a week and be forgotten.

Leaders of the farm strike have vowed they'll be in Washington until something is done.

In my opinion, that is exactly what is going to have to take place. Camp right on the doorstep of Congress and the Senate until action is taken.

There probably won't be any legislation for 100 percent parity prices. But when the legislators are hounded long enough, they will probably reopen the farm bill and shore it up so that it is at least workable.

The nation's farmers are going to have to exercise their lobbying rights just like everyone else if they ever expect a fair shake again.

Funds for lobbying may one day become as important as the cash a farmer expends for seed, fuel and fertilizer.

It is regrettable that our government has regressed to a system of lobbies under which the group that makes the most noise gets the attention.

But if these are the rules we must play by, agriculture might as well get in its licks first. Maybe "all those guys" can help this effort bear fruit.

Wiese Gives Presentation On Sprinkler Herbicides

BUSHLAND — Applying herbicides through a sprinkler irrigation system is a new technology that works for certain herbicides in corn.

Dr. Allen Wiese, Texas Agricultural Experiment Station researcher, pointed this out at the Southern Weed Science Society in New Orleans on January 18. Eradicane, Sutan, and Lasso are labeled for this purpose. Mixtures of Sutan and Atrazine along with Lasso and Atrazine are also labeled. The Texas A&M University scientist also told society members about 1977 research he conducted with Bill Turner, a CIBA-Geigy researcher from Lubbock. Getting more herbicides labeled for application through center pivots was the object of the study.

The two scientists applied twelve preemergent treatments to corn through a center pivot irrigation system on the Charles Hough farm south of Friona.

An untreated plot was included for comparison and each plot was about 10 acres. Herbicides and pounds per acre active ingredient applied with 0.8 inch of water were Dual plus AAtrex, 2 plus 1.6 and 2.5 plus 2.5; a prepackage mixture of the two herbicides at the same two rates; AAtrex, 3; Dual, 3; Lasso, 3; Lasso plus AAtrex, 2.25 plus 1.2; Eradicane, 6; Sutan, 6; and Sutan plus AAtrex, 6 plus 1.5. In addition, Eradicane and Dual were applied in 1.3 inches of sprinkler irrigation. The 0.8 inch of water wet the soil 2 to 3 inches and largely evaporated. The 1.3 inch water application wet the soil deeper and met residual moisture.

The quarter section field had been no-till planted to corn in 1976 and treated with AAtrex. Stalks had been shredded and the field was tandem disked prior to planting corn on April 27, 1977. There were several tons of crop residue on the soil surface when herbicides were applied from May 3 to May 6. The fine textured soil was one-third sand, silt and clay with 1.5 percent organic matter. Volunteer corn and a few weeds were cultivated about May 15.

About two weeks after application, the scientists took soil samples at 0 to 2 and 2 to 4 inches deep and planted them to millet and wheat to measure how deep herbicides leached. AAtrex, Eradicane and Dual applied with 0.8 inch of water along with Dual and Eradicane applied in 1.3 inches of water were sampled.

AAtrex injured wheat at both depths, but had little effect on millet. Dual did not leach below 2 inches when applied in 0.8 inches of water, but leached below 2 inches when 1.3 inches of sprinkler irrigation was used. Eradicane did not kill millet or wheat when applied in 0.8 inch, but injured both when applied in 1.3 inches of water. "More of the Eradicane must have persisted when applied in the high rate of water," the scientists said.

The researchers checked weed control on June 30 when corn was 5 feet tall. Neither untreated nor treated areas had many weeds and by harvest the entire field was weed free. Herbicides did not injure corn and all plots produced about 10,000 pounds per acre of grain.

Wiese concluded his presentation by stating that the information gained from the experiment will help obtain labels for AAtrex and Dual. He also pointed out that occasional poor weed control with Eradicane, when applied with sprinkler irrigation to fine textured soil, may be the result of insufficient water application.

Meetings Set To Explain Farm Program

Dr. Ray Sammons, Economist-Management, Texas Agricultural Extension Service, and Don Tatum, District Director ASCS, will present three regional meetings to explain the main provisions of the 1978 Farm Program.

Topics of discussion will be "The Normal Crop Acres," "National Allocation Factor," "New Calculations for Set-Aside Acres," and an explanation of "Current Provisions for the Farm Program."

Dr. Sammons warns, "Reducing planted acres to obtain 100 percent coverage for Deficiency Payments may cost

TAX TIP IF YOU SELL FOR A PROFIT

Normally, taxpayers who sell their home for a substantial profit face a heavy tax burden, but this burden can be avoided. If you buy another home that costs as much or more than the sales price of the old one, within a specified time, the profit from the sale is not included in your taxable income.

The second home must be bought and occupied within a period ending 18 months after the sale. (This is a new change, previous time period was one year). A 2-year period is permitted when building a new home. This tax deferral applies only to the sale of a home which is the family's main residence.

When figuring the amount of gain for which tax may be postponed you may deduct for "fix-up" expenses if they were accomplished within 90 days prior to the sale, and paid for no later than 30 days after the sale. Check with your accountant or the IRS on details if this matter affects you. It could be well worth your while.

Holly Reports $6 Million Net Loss Over Nine Months

COLORADO SPRINGS -- Holly Sugar Corporation has reported an estimated net loss of $6.0 million, or $3.82 a common share, on sales of $117.6 million for the nine months ended Dec. 31, 1977. This compares with an estimated net income of $3.7 million, or $2.36 a common share, on sales of $140.3 million for the same period last year.

Provision for federal and state income taxes is a credit of $7.7 million compared with an expense of $2.4 million last year. These results are unaudited. The cost of producing sugar is based on estimated sugarbeet processing costs and on estimated selling prices of refined sugar during the remainder of the fiscal year.

Holly emphasized that substantial adjustments may be required in the last quarter of the fiscal year and that these reported results must be considered with those uncertainties in mind.

In a letter to stockholders, Chairman John B. Bunker said that despite an improvement in refined sugar selling prices since mid-October, average selling prices for the December quarter were too low to offset losses sustained during the previous seven months.

"Improved price levels should make it possible for Holly to market sugar at prices which, in most cases, exceed production costs. However, an adequate return on stockholder investment remains an expectation for the future rather than a reality of the present," Bunker explained.

He called the government's activities in sugar price and import regulations during the past quarter "haphazard" and said that the situation "remains clouded and complicated" for several reasons. "Administrative difficulties in implementing both the loan-purchase program and the Presidential Proclamation have caused confusion and uncertainty," Bunker said.

"Equally important," he continued, "international commodity agreements are known for their unworkability" with enforcement depending upon "good faith among nations." Bunker was referring to the recently implemented International Sugar Agreement which the Administration hopes will stabilize the world sugar market.

He pointed out that "U.S. policy sooner or later must answer the need for a long-term sweetener program dealing with sugar and other nutritive sweeteners such as high fructose corn syrup. This step is yet to come."

He reported that during the last quarter, Holly purchased about 78,000 metric tons of offshore refined sugar at prices below the current production cost of beet sugar.

Bunker explained that this sugar will be marketed in coming months and will partially offset the effect of a reduced sugarbeet crop in 1977.

Beef Supplies, Demand To Be Up During 1978

COLLEGE STATION — There should be plenty of fed beef on hand to satisfy consumers during the year ahead, and consumer demand should also be up.

"This points to a somewhat better year for cattle producers," says Dr. Ed Uvacek, livestock marketing specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

The amount of fed beef will generally be larger than in 1977, at least through the first half of the year, although the amount of "other" beef from cows and non-fed steers and heifers will be down from a year ago.

"Demand should also be boosted in 1978 due to increases in Social Security payments, proposed tax reductions, changes in the Food Stamp Program, a substantial gain in minimum wages, and continued growth in the general economic activity of the country," contends Uvacek.

What should cattlemen expect in the new year?

"Fed cattle prices may weaken a bit during the first calendar quarter but should gather strength by the middle of the second quarter," believes the specialist. "Lowest prices could come by late March and highest prices in June or July. Feeder cattle should follow about this same price pattern. Plenty of rain this spring could cause producers to temporarily overprice feeder types."

Choice fed slaughter steers in Amarillo should average about $41-$43 per hundredweight during the first quarter, then push upward to about the $43-$45 level for the April-June period. Heavier feeders will be priced close to feds from January to March, but price premiums are almost certain by the second quarter.

"The picture is improving, therefore, for most cattlemen although we still have a long way to go," contends Uvacek.

Teheran, the capital of Iran, was founded in the 12th century, but remained a small trading center until about 1788, when it was made the capital of Persia.

World Market on Farm Goods Is Termed 'Clearance Sale'

AUSTIN — Speaking to an annual gathering of the Texas Farmers Union here, a former USDA official charged a representative of Trade Ambassador Bob Strauss with a "continuation of an administration 'give-away' food policy that is churning farmers out of billions of dollars in income."

National Farmers Union chief economist, Robert G. Lewis of Washington, whose background includes service with the USDA responded here to remarks by Vincent Clephas, Special Assistant to Strauss.

"Our government is trading grain on the world market at prices that are so ridiculously low," says Lewis, "that every other nation must raise the price of incoming American grain with variable tariffs in order to protect their own domestic market. Uncle Sam makes the (farm) price in the so-called world market — and it's not a market; it's a clearance sale!"

A spokesman for the general farm organization said he hoped "Clephas will get the message to Strauss that setting a floor for agricultural farm prices between producing nations (i.e. America, Canada, Argentina) at the true cost of production level is the key to saving the American family farm. The Administration has been dragging its feet in international commodity agreements and is the "top-producing world leader that other nations look to follow."

"European countries are getting parity for their farmers," Lewis continued, "and are protecting them from imports. Our nation is trying to get them into an American boom and bust farm economy and attempting to starve them out rather than protecting us."

Lewis said that "the same old excuses" are coming from this Administration that we received from Nixon and Earl Butz. "We're told we must be competitive, when other nations are themselves raising the price of our cheap grain to resell it. We're told that nothing can be done about the 'huge surpluses' when the fact is that reserves are only 13.9 percent of one year's world consumption. We are told that our national budget cannot be spent on American farmers, while we are subsidizing corporations,

TFU Head Praises Protest, Calls for Continued Fight

AUSTIN — Characterizing 1977 as a year of "fight, furor and frustration," Texas Farmers Union President Jay Naman of Waco told the group's annual convention here recently that the role of the Farmers Union for 1978 should be "to transform the energy and excitement that has developed in the protest movement into achievement."

Speaking of the protest activities, Naman said: "We should be aware that farmers are doing things that are extremely hard for them to do. They are not comfortable as protesters and picketers but would rather peacefully plow their fields. Their basic nature makes them more willing to confront the elements and the other hazards of a risky farming business than to confront antagonistic lawmakers and hostile political attitudes. We should salute those farmers, who, even though it is contrary to their nature, have been willing to risk embarrassment, criticism, personal injury, and even jail to make the point that we are no longer willing to be discriminated against and to stand idly by while we are exploited as a pawn in this economy. I propose a standing ovation for the striking farmers.... As we meet here in Austin, some of our members are in Washington protesting with the American Agriculture strike movement. A lot of us here, including myself, are with them in spirit and wish that we could be with them in Washington today."

Naman said the American farmer and rancher had little voice in the farm program passed in 1977. "It was apparent in Washington that the Administration was listening to the trade, the grain, cotton, rice and peanut trade. The National Cotton Council wrote the cotton program. The grain trade, including the international grain traders, apparently wrote the program for wheat and feedgrains, and the candy manufacturers had a heavy hand in the development of the peanut program. Those who were interested in exporting cheap rice were the architects of the rice program.... there were no tractorcades, there were no protests, there were no farmers standing up in righteous indignation over the problems that Farmers Union was facing in its fight in Washington."

Naman, a cattleman from harvest of quails as difficult to of the organization and Joe Rankin, Ralls cotton farmer, was re-elected vice president.

Farmer's Worries Same As Any Other Parent's

CHICAGO — When it comes to raising children, farmers have the same concerns as other parents. They worry about crime, permissiveness, drugs, alcohol and outside influences. Yet according to a recent survey by International Harvester's FARM FORUM magazine, farmers regard financial pressure as the single greatest threat to family life in rural America.

Of those farmers who responded to the questionnaire, nearly 52 percent cited money worries as their major concern: "What Do You Feel is the Single Greatest Threat to Family Life in Rural America Today?" Financial pressure 51.7 percent, Permissive Parents 16.7 percent, Materialism 11.1 percent, Both parents working 10.5 percent, Crime 7.3 percent, Television/movies 5.8 percent, Drugs 4.3 percent, Alcohol 3.9 percent, Permissive attitude about sex 3.8 percent, Divorce 3.0 percent.

Despite this, nearly 8 out of 10 farmers would do it over again if they had to choose and 66 percent said they would be unhappy at a job in town even if it provided a higher income. This was surprising when a majority of farmers felt their standard of living was about the same or lower than their city counterparts:

"How Does Your Standard of Living Compare With Similar Families in Town?" Higher 20.3 percent, Lower 23.3 percent, Same 55.1 percent. Many farmers believe the benefits of living in the country still outweigh the disadvantages:

"Do You Believe the Benefits of Living in the Country Are Increasing or Decreasing?" Increasing 57.6 percent, Decreasing 23.6 percent, About the same 18.8 percent.

Farmers gave several reasons for preferring rural life to city life but an overwhelming majority (88) percent feel farm families are closer knit than city families and that overall farm children have more advantages than children raised in cities.

Though most farmers indicated they would welcome having their children take over the farm operation one day, only two out of 10 said they would be disappointed if their children decided not to go into farming.

Farmers also indicated concern about government pressure to reduce the number of small, family farms, but more than half of those questioned felt positive about the future of farming:

"Do You Think There is Government Pressure to Reduce the Number of Smaller, One-Family Farms?" Yes 77.9 percent, No 21.0 percent

"Do You Think Large, Nonfarm Operations Will Take Over Farming?" No 54.4 percent, Yes 42.8 percent.

While 70 percent of the farmers questioned feel television has exposed their families to undesirable influences, half agreed that religion still has its influence in rural family life today.

Dechant Vows TFU Will Back Parity

AUSTIN — Administration officials have current discretionary authority and Congress has before it several realistic bills with which to solve the farm crisis, according to Tony T. Dechant national president of the Farmers Union.

"The situation, however, depends on how well we wage the fight for parity," Dechant told the Texas Farmers Union at its annual convention here.

"The Farmers Union has a workable answer," Dechant continued, "but critical reform hinges on our ability to defend parity, as the Farmers Union will continue to do."

"Farmers Union practically invented the concept of parity. We've advocated it during the whole of our history, and we recommended it last March when action started on the 1977 farm bill," Dechant said, "and we're not backing away from it now."

"Frankly, I don't expect the people who are against parity to come up with a better yardstick. Many of them think the support levels in the 1977 farm act are already too high," He said that if farmers received a return of 9 percent on their investments, the rate guaranteed most electric utilities, farm income in 1977 would have been $60 billion instead of $20 billion.

"By almost any standard, it is clear that it is time for action. Several bills have been introduced in both houses of Congress which would raise rice supports on farm commodities to a level which would assure farmers of receiving at least their cost of production if they get a crop. I want to stress that it is not a problem of trying to get the farmers' friends in Congress to agree on a specific proposal."

"The problem," according to Dechant, "is an administration firmly wedded to a cheap food policy and the mistaken belief that the only way our farm products can be competitive in world markets is by what amounts to a giveaway."

Dechant pointed out that the Secretary of Agriculture has the authority under existing law to lift price supports from current levels of around 50 percent of parity to 90 percent of parity.

Turkey Flock Cuts May Go Over 300,000

AUSTIN—Texas turkey flocks could be cut 3 percent this year if growers carry out their current intentions, Agriculture Commissioner Reagan V. Brown has announced.

"Growers have indicated to the Texas Crop and Livestock Reporting Service that they will raise 8,300,000 heavy breed poulters this year," Brown stated. "This is a decrease of 300,000 from the 8,600,000 total in 1977. In spite of lower feed costs, producers are continuing to cut back slightly from the higher levels of 1976 in an attempt to keep prices up."
