Emergency workers tend to injuries

Emergency workers, including one who crawled into the crumpled passenger area of the truck, tend to the injuries of Roman Rado. Rado sustained severe head injuries in a one-vehicle accident north of Hereford on Wednesday that claimed the life of Wilbur Gibson of Hereford. Rado, from northwest New Mexico, was taken to St. Anthony's Hospital in Amarillo.

Gibson dies in wreck

Wilbur Dean Gibson, 69, of Hereford died in a one-vehicle accident north of Hereford on Wednesday afternoon.

Gibson died when he was thrown from a 1979 Chevrolet grain truck about 19 miles north of Hereford on U.S. Highway 385.

Roman Rado, 72, of Vander Wagen, N.M., a passenger in the truck, is in critical condition at St. Anthony's Hospital in Amarillo. He suffered severe head injuries.

Rado was trapped in the truck for about 40 minutes before he was freed by emergency personnel. The truck had overturned 1 1/4 times and had crumpled the passenger area. Hereford volunteer firefighters used the "Jaws of Life" rescue tool to cut away part of the passenger portion of the truck to free Rado from the wreckage. Emergency medical personnel from Vega and Hereford were able to wedge their way into the cab to begin emergency treatment at the scene. Rado was taken to Deaf Smith General Hospital for initial treatment before being transferred to the Amarillo hospital. Gibson was driving the truck north on U.S. 385 when a right rear tire blew out, sending the truck out of control. Department of Public Safety Cpl. Bill Scott of Hereford said a witness, driving a truck south on the highway, saw the accident occur. The truck swerved into the ditch before rolling over 1 1/4 times. Gibson was ejected from the truck, which was not equipped with seat belts (they were not required on trucks manufactured at that time, Scott said).

Gibson was pronounced dead at the scene by Justice of the Peace Johnnie Turrentine, who did not order an autopsy. A blood sample was taken, a routine procedure in a fatal accident.

Funeral services for Gibson will be held at 3 p.m. Saturday at First Baptist Church in Hereford with Dr. Ron Cook, pastor, officiating. Burial will follow in West Park Cemetery under the direction of Gililand-Watson Funeral Home.

Gibson was born April 29, 1922 at Erick, Okla. He moved to Hereford in 1950 from Amarillo. A veteran of the Army Air Corps in World War II, Gibson was involved in real estate, insurance, farming and ranching. He was a 32nd Degree Mason and a member of the Shrine.

Survivors include his wife, Eleanor; two daughters, Mary Lynn Mabray and Mona Gale Gibson, both of Houston; three sisters, Lucille Gibson of Oklahoma City, Lois Yearly of Arlington and Opheia Waltrip of Center; and a granddaughter.

KILLEEN, Texas (AP) - A cafeteria crowded for lunch turned into a killing ground for a man who crashed his pickup truck through a plate glass window then calmly and methodically began shooting. Ten minutes later, 22 people - and the gunman - were dead in the nation's worst shooting massacre.

Police said George Hennard, 35, of nearby Belton drove his pickup truck through the plate glass window of Luby's Cafeteria. Witnesses said he got out and then began randomly shooting patrons, most of them in the head execution-style.

The carnage Wednesday stopped after one of four plainclothes Department of Public Safety officers, attending a law enforcement seminar at a nearby hotel, shot at Hennard, drawing away his attention, said DPS spokesman Mike Cox.

"Had the response not been that quick, I'm sure you would have seen higher fatalities at Luby's because of the rounds directed at the officers," Killeen Police Chief F.L. Giacomozzi said at a news conference this morning.

The chief said Hennard fired two 9 mm semiautomatic pistols, a Glock 17 and a Ruger P89. The gunman spent six magazines that, if full, contained 96 rounds.

Giacomozzi said Hennard spent the last bullet on himself after being hit several times by law officers.

Hennard's mother, Jeanna, told The Dallas Morning News that she had spoken to her son on Tuesday, his birthday, and that he sounded fine.

"This is so frightening, so devastating," she said from her Henderson, Nev., home. "I don't know what to do. I don't know what to say. I'm interested in one thing: this tragedy and the death of my beautiful son."

Before dawn today, authorities removed the blue pickup from the debris at the cafeteria.

Police said they had no clue to Hennard's motives, but Angela Wilson, 24, a Luby's employee said as he got out of his truck "he said something like, 'This is what Belton did to me, ...'"

"And then he just started shooting. He also said, 'Is it worth it?'"

Before killing himself, Hennard killed 14 women and eight men.

Another 23 were taken to area hospitals, most with gunshot wounds. None of the injuries were life-threatening, hospital officials said.

"It didn't look like he had anyone particular in mind," said Ms. Wilson. In June, Hennard wrote a letter to some neighbors expressing disgust with women in Belton.

Asked if police were checking whether Hennard was aiming at women, Giacomozzi said "That is one avenue of the investigation."

Hennard lived in a massive colonial house in Belton that once belonged to his parents. A check of the home found "nothing that indicated this incident would occur," the chief said.

"We have not been able to track his movements prior to the incident," Giacomozzi said.

"We just lived in fear of the man," said Jane Bugg, a 46-year-old medical secretary, whose daughters were the intended recipients of the June letter.

Hennard wrote in part: "Did you and your sister find new flames yet? Do you think the three of us could get together someday? Please give me the satisfaction of someday laughing in the face of all those mostly white, treacherous female vipers from two towns who tried to destroy me and my family."

Mrs. Bugg said she took the letter to police, who investigated but did not arrest him.

The red brick cafeteria sits beside Killeen Mall, the main shopping area in this military town about 50 miles north of Austin. The city of about 45,000 people is home to Fort Hood, the nation's largest Army post.

The barrage began about 12:41 p.m., when Hennard drove his blue Ford pickup through the cafeteria's front window.

"It was a big crash, and then it was real quiet," said Ms. Wilson, who was about 15 feet away. "He stopped with both hands on top of the wheel. He got out, took one step," and began firing.

With the first shot, screams filled the cafeteria, and patrons hid behind counters and ran. Some escaped through a large rear window that had been broken by a man who threw himself through the glass.

With the gunman methodically shooting victims, a group at the back of the room felt they were trapped," said Thomas Vaughn, who sustained minor injuries from the broken glass. "Everybody was laying down, nobody was running," he said. "Nobody was running because nobody had a place to go."

Cox said DPS officers at the nearby seminar went to the restaurant when a woman ran to the hotel screaming: "He's crazy, he's got a gun, he's killing everybody."

"These people were terrified. They are grabbing at our officers for help," Cox said. "The dying were reaching up for them."

DPS Sgt. Bill Cooper, told Cox that he saw Hennard run up to an older man who was lying on his stomach and shoot him in the head.

In another incident, moments before his own death, Hennard came upon an elderly woman lying with her arms draped protectively over her wounded husband.

Cooper reported that she looked straight into Hennard's eyes, then bowed her head before Hennard shot her in the head, Cox said.

One Luby's employee, Maria Serna, 41, of Copperas Cove, hid in a freezer for 2 hours, unaware it was safe to come out, said Ricky Seiler, spokesman for Metroplex Hospital, where the woman was treated for hypothermia and released.

Another employee, identified by police as a young male, stayed at the restaurant through the night hidden in the commercial dishwasher.

"He was just scared and was going to stay there," Giacomozzi said. The man was not hurt, he said.

"There are not enough words to express the sorrow that we have of this tragedy," said Mayor Pro Tem Fred Latham, who said a memorial trust fund had been set up for the benefit of the victims. Luby's already has contributed $100,000, he said.

Robert M. Luby, the 81-year-old founder of the chain, told the Houston Chronicle he believes the company should close the cafeteria.

In the previous worst previous mass slaying in U.S. history, a gunman killed 21 people at a McDonald's restaurant in San Ysidro, Calif., in 1984, before he was shot by police.

Crazed gunman kills 22 in Killeen tragedy

Mechanic crashed through glass to help many escape

KILLEEN, Texas (AP) - An act of insanity by a gunman that resulted in at least 23 deaths in a Killeen restaurant spawned an act of heroism by a Belton man when he hurled himself through a plate glass window at Luby's Cafeteria, injuring himself, but allowing between 30 and 40 people to escape through the hole he made.

Thomas Vaughn, a technician at a Killeen car dealership, was preparing to eat in the cafeteria with the rest of the crew from Fred Brown Mazda when a gunman crashed his pickup truck through the front of the cafeteria and opened fire at patrons in the cafeteria. Vaughn was one of several people that managed to break out a window for an escape route.

"We got our meals and just set our trays down on a back table," Vaughn said. "Just as soon as I set my tray down, the man drove his pickup through the front part. I think everybody pretty much thought it was a wreck. But then he just commenced to shooting."

Vaughn said the gunman walked about methodically shooting the victims, stopping only to insert new clips in his handgun.

"He'd empty one (clip) then reload," he said. "About the third time we were trying to break the glass (window for an escape route)." But they could not break it even though they kicked it and hit it with chairs.

"I kicked it as hard as I could two or three times and the window just rattled and that's when he went 'pow, pow, pow' and the bullets hit the glass to the right of us." But the bullets did not strike the glass that Vaughn eventually had to break through.

"He'd empty one (clip) then reload," he said. "About the third and I didn't really see him, so I just took off for the glass."

Vaughn suffered cuts that required stitches on his elbow, ear and head when he crashed through the plate glass window, which was about 10 feet from him.

With the gunman methodically shooting victims, the group at the back of the room felt they were trapped. "We had no other choice but to try to break it (the window)," he said.

"Everybody was laying down, nobody was running," he said. "Nobody was running because nobody had a place to go."

The crew at the dealership said that while the man was shooting, there was just dead silence. They said they heard a lady say "Oh my God," and "He's coming this way!"

Other than that, the only sound was the gunfire.

"I feel fortunate, we all do, that we survived."

Vaughn said numerous people escaped through the shattered window. "I ran across the street and when I did I looked back there were people going everywhere," he said. "He was shooting as we ran away, he didn't stop."

Feds hit companies on liquid diet claims

WASHINGTON (AP) - The popularity of liquid diets soared after Oprah Winfrey strutted before a national television audience in a black turtle neck and jeans, showing off a willowy, newly achieved size 10 figure.

That was nearly three years ago, after the Chicago-based talk show host lost 67 pounds on the Optifast program. Later, with most of that weight regained, Winfrey vowed never to diet again.

Winfrey's participation in Optifast raised a groundswell of consumer interest in liquid diets.

But the government on Wednesday accused Optifast and two other medically supervised liquid diet programs, Medifast and Ultrafast, of misleading consumers with false and unsubstantiated advertising claims about their safety and the long-term prospects of keeping off lost pounds.

Under a consent agreement with the Federal Trade Commission, they must "replace unsubstantiated hype with documented facts," said Barry Cutler, director of the FTC's Bureau of Consumer Protection.

Optifast, Medifast and Ultrafast - the three most popular liquid diets - had nearly $200 million in revenues last year. But they represent only a small segment of the diet business. Overall last year, consumers absorbed with the idea of svelte bodies forked over an estimated $3 billion on weight loss programs.

The companies said they willingly signed on to the agreement.

"We firmly believe that the things they have asked us to do are in the best interest of the patient and in the best interest of the industry in general," said spokesman Jim Bruno of Jason Pharmaceuticals, which markets Medifast.

The FTC complaint targeted Sandoz Nutrition Corp., the Minneapolis company that sells Optifast; Jason, of Owings Mills, Md., and its Nutrition Institute of Maryland, which market Medifast; and the National Center for Nutrition of Newington, Va., which markets Ultrafast.

All three programs are available only under medical supervision.

Ultrafast is not associated with Ultra Slimfast, the popular over-the-counter diet program.

Rep. Ron Wyden, R-Ore., whose House small business subcommittee led a congressional inquiry into diet programs, said the FTC also should look at center-based programs and at over-the-counter diet products.

Cutler said the FTC was looking at "about a dozen" other programs, including some "household names", among weight loss centers and over-the-counter programs. He did not specify which ones.

The programs charged Wednesday typically involve a nutrient-supplemented fast - usually a liquid protein diet - of 420 calories to 800 calories a day for 12 weeks to 16 weeks, the FTC noted. They are followed by a period during which the dieter moves to 1,000-1,200 calories per day.

Optifast participants spend 26 weeks at one of 400 clinics nationwide. Medifast and Ultrafast programs are administered by hospitals and physicians.

The FTC noted that: -Optifast claimed that it was "clinically proven safe and effective."

-Ultrafast said studies have shown that "supplemental fasting, when medically supervised, is the quickest, safest way of losing excess body weight."

-Medifast claimed that "more than 300,000 formerly obese patients had already been helped by Medifast without one instance of serious side effect associated with their treatment."

The FTC said these and other statements "misrepresent the programs to be either unqualifiedly safe or free of serious health risks when, in fact, the reason for physician supervision is to minimize the potential for health risks."

Baker calms Israeli fears

JERUSALEM (AP) - In a final drive to wrap up an October peace conference, Secretary of State James A. Baker III is trying to calm Israeli concerns about Syrian and Palestinian intentions.

Baker's met Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir today, his task complicated by Syria's decision to boycott a phase of the conference.

For their part, the Palestinians are testing Shamir and the Israeli cabinet by bringing the Palestine Liberation Organization out of the shadows as the decision-maker on which Palestinians will attend.

Compilation of a list is awaiting a decision by the PLO leadership in Tunis.

Baker met here, meanwhile, with a group of Palestinians and will see them again tonight. Faisal Hussein, spokesman for the group, said they talked about Jerusalem, which the PLO envisions as the capital of a Palestinian state built on Israeli-held land.

"It was an important and serious meeting which should allow us to go forward in the process," Hussein said.

In Damascus on Wednesday, Syrian President Hafez Assad gave Baker final approval on terms for the negotiations.

His foreign minister, Farouk Sharaa, made plain at a news conference that the objective was recovering the Golan Heights, strategic territory Syria lost to Israel in the 1967 Six-Day war.

But Sharaa did not offer peace with Israel in exchange. And he said Syria would not participate in a phase of the peace conference that will deal with such regional issues as weapons buildups and scarce water resources.

Still, Baker said at a news conference in Damascus before flying here that plans for the peace conference this month were "still on course" after more than 12 hours of talks with Assad.

But Sharaa said Syria would not go to the regional talks until Israel complied "with international laws and U.N. resolutions."

In Jerusalem, Shamir said the peace conference would not be "a rose garden" and that Israel's attendance was not yet guaranteed.

Bi-partisan group to conduct drive to limit terms of office

AUSTIN (AP) - A group favoring limits on how long Texas politicians may hold office says voters ought to have a say on the issue.

Texans for Term Limitations announced petition drives Wednesday to put a non-binding referendum on the Republican and Democratic primary ballots in March.

"With the poor quality of government that we're getting, the only hope that the people have left is term limitation," said James Calaway, co-chairman of the group.

Calaway, a Democrat, and Republican Rob Mosbacher, the group's founder and co-chairman, said they will seek petition signatures from 60,000 qualified Republicans and 90,000 Democrats to place the question on primary ballots.

Calaway, a veteran Democratic fund-raiser, said term limits - and the constant turnover created - are the only way to reform a political system increasingly swayed by campaign donations and special interest lobbyists.

He noted that several states are considering term limitations.

"It is true that politicians across the country are feeling the heat. Unfortunately, they don't feel it enough to think they ought to go home," he said.

"We need fresh people, and they should not all be white male lawyers. They should be women, they should be blacks, they should be small business people, school teachers, union people, artists, all kinds of people," he said.

The two men said recent events in Washington - news reports of congressmen bouncing checks and skipping out on restaurant bills - have added fuel to the term limit fire.

"Thanks in large measure to a number of disclosures in Washington in the last several weeks, we are enjoying success beyond our wildest expectations," Mosbacher said.

Texans for Term Limitations favors restricting the governor and most other statewide officeholders to two, 4-year terms. It wants service limited to eight years in the state House or Senate; Railroad Commission members to one 6-year term; Texans in the U.S. House to four 2-year terms, and Texans in the U.S. Senate to two, 6-year terms.

To place a question on the March ballots, sufficient petition signatures must be submitted by the Jan. 2, 1992, filing deadline, said Katy Davis of the secretary of state's office. Valid signatures totaling 5 percent of the vote in a party's last gubernatorial primary are needed, she said.

Mosbacher said the group plans a major push on Nov. 5, when Texans will go to the polls to decide 13 proposed constitutional amendments.

Although the question is non-binding and Texas lawmakers wouldn't be required to act, Mosbacher and Calaway said they hope at least 70 percent of voters endorse the proposal.

"The signal will be unequivocal if you pass something like this overwhelmingly," Mosbacher said.

Opposition is centered on incumbent officeholders and others profiting from the current system, Calaway added.

"Everybody's opposed to term limitations who's in government, does business with the government, is married to somebody in government, the lobbyists and most of the political scientists," he said. "I come to this as the only hope."

Death claims 'ol peapicker' Ford, 72

RESTON, Va. (AP) - Tennessee Ernie Ford, whose bass voice boomed out on the million-selling record "Sixteen Tons" and on his TV variety show spanning two decades, died today after a long illness. He was 72.

Ford died at 6:15 a.m. at HCA Reston Hospital, where he had been admitted on Sept. 28.

"Mrs. Ford was at his side, as she has been throughout his illness," said hospital spokeswoman Claudia Smith.

Smith said Ford had suffered from a lengthy liver disease. She would not disclose the nature of the ailment.

Ford became ill at Washington Dulles International Airport as he was about to fly home to San Francisco following his attendance at a White House dinner.

Ford, known affectionately as "the ol' peapicker" and "ol' Ern," was host of TV shows in the 1950s and 1960s. He was host of a nighttime variety show on NBC from 1956 to 1961, then had another program from 1962 to 1965, this one on ABC in the daytime.

Ford recorded more than 80 albums during a singing career of more than 40 years. He was especially known for his gospel music.

The mustachioed performer with a mischievous grin and homespun humor said in a 1990 Associated Press interview that he believes he came across the TV screen as a loving member of the family.

"They felt like when the time came for my show, they didn't have to change clothes or put sterling on the table," Ford said.

At last count, he said, "Sixteen Tons" had sold 20 million copies worldwide after becoming a sensation in 1955. It was a tribute to blue collar workers, especially coal miners, with lines like "I owe my soul to the company store" and "another day older and deeper in debt."

Ford was especially fond of religious songs and it became traditional for him to end each TV program with a spiritual tune. He sold more than 24 million gospel music albums - and some were still advertised on TV in the 1990s.

As of 1990, Ford did a handful of concerts a year, singing mostly at a few state fairs. He did a little recording and some TV specials.

He was married for almost 50 years to Betty Heminger, who died in the late 1980s. They had two sons and lived most of their adult life in California, first in Los Angeles and later near San Francisco. Ford later remarried.

Apology planned to sailor's family

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Navy is prepared to apologize for suggesting a despondent sailor set off an explosion aboard the USS Iowa that claimed 47 lives in 1989, Pentagon sources say.

Adm. Frank Kelso, the chief of naval operations, was scheduled to take the step today at a Pentagon news briefing.

"It's an apology. He'll do it publicly," one senior Pentagon source said.

Kelso is taking the step because he believes the latest studies into the explosion are "inconclusive" about the exact cause of the blast, said a second source knowledgeable about the report. "The Navy has been going in this direction for some time."

Both sources spoke on condition of anonymity.

Kelso inherited the issue from his predecessor, retired Adm. Carlisle A.H. Trost.

The sources said that after more than a year of tests and analysis by the Navy and independent scientists, it appears the blast could have been an accident after all and not sabotage.

In its initial investigation of the explosion, the Navy concluded it "most probably" was an intentional act by Gunner's Mate Clayton Hartwig, who was described by the service as depressed over a failed relationship with another sailor.

The Navy accused Hartwig, who was killed in the blast, of placing "some type of detonation device" between gunpowder bags as he supervised the loading of one of the ship's 16-inch guns.

At the time, the Navy admitted that it only had circumstantial evidence for its finding. Several members of Congress were highly critical of the Navy's conclusions and demanded new studies.

Kraig J. Brusnahan, an attorney representing the Hartwig family, said a Navy admiral planned to visit the Hartwig home in Cleveland today to outline the Navy's announcement.

"The Hartwig family feels the Navy's apology is certainly a step in the right direction," he said.

In June 1990, Navy Secretary H. Lawrence Garrett III ordered the service to reopen its investigation after the unexpected ignition of gunpowder occurred during the new series of tests that had been ordered.

The new report stems from that action.

The Pentagon sources said Wednesday that studies conducted by the Navy and independent scientists at the Sandia National Laboratories in Albuquerque, N.M., have been unable to agree on a specific cause for the blast.

It also follows a General Accounting Office report that said sabotage couldn't be proven.

The GAO did not pinpoint a probable cause of the April 19, 1989, explosion. Even though the Navy said it had found evidence that an ignition device was used to set off the gunpowder, the GAO cast doubt on that theory.

"There is no explicit physical evidence that the hypothetical chemical ignition device was present in the center gun of Turret 2" at the time of the explosion, the GAO said.

Los Ciboleros Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution met recently at the Hereford Community Center and discussed Constitution Week and a Columbus book.

Mrs. Luther Norvell, chairman of Constitution Week Committee, reported on the activities of the week.

She reported that proclamations had been presented to the mayors of Hereford, Dimmitt and Friona. The group displayed 21 posters, 40 booklets and distributed 350 book-marks and 300 leaflets.

Mrs. Robert Sheffy introduced Mrs. Tom Draper who reviewed the novel, "The Crown of Columbus" by Michael Doris and Louise Erdrich.

Names of Mrs. Helen Frisbee Bell, Mrs. Mildred Channer Allen and Mrs. Patricia McCoy Pugliese were presented for membership and were accepted.

Regent Clark presented a past regent's pin to Mrs. Austin Rose, who also received a citation for her excellent work as regent.

The Los Ciboleros Chapter received 15 certificates of merit from the Texas State DAR plus a blue ribbon for its history scrapbook.

Mrs. J.J. Durham resigned as corresponding secretary because of ill health.

Regent Mrs. Arthur Clark led the group in the opening ritual assisted by Chaplain Mrs. Herman Drake, Mrs. Robert Sheffy, Mrs. Carroll Newsom and Mrs. Beryl Fish.

Mrs. Austin Rose gave the President General's report and Mrs. LeRoy Williamson gave the Centennial Moment.

Guests present were Mrs. Pugliese and Mrs. Bell. Members present were Mrs. Arthur Clark, Mrs. Herman Drake, Mrs. Robert Sheffy, Mrs. Carroll Newsom, Mrs. Beryl Fish, Mrs. Austin Rose, Mrs. Leroy Williamson, Mrs. Stanford Knox, Mrs. Luther Norvell, Mrs. J.J. Durham, Mrs. Tom Draper, Mrs. J.P. Jones, Mrs. W.J. Gililand, Mrs. J. Roy Euler and Mrs. Gid Brown.

McLaughlin addresses Pioneer club

Dr. Bill McLaughlin spoke to the Pioneer Study Club recently at the Cason House Restaurant on the state educational reform.

McLaughlin said that there were five points to consider in the formula of a good school. Those include dedicated teachers who are prepared, instructional leadership, parental guidance, high expectations for the children to learn and discipline.

McLaughlin said that teaching excellence to children is like being a good citizen, it is everyone's job.

During the business portion of the meeting, Nell Culpepper gave the treasurer's report. Members elected Gladys Miller, Nell Culpepper, Jeannie Caison, Oleta Hoffman and Mary Jane Burrus to the nomination committee.

Thank yous were received from Donna Wright, representative for the M.D. Anderson, Top of Texas District.

Willie Wimberly gave the federation report. Margaret Reed, district president elect, announced that two resolutions have been passed from the national president to state and district. Those include sale of card for M.D. Anderson, made by children patients, be promoted by other clubs and businesses in the town and are asked to comply with the law that no tinted glass be used in vehicles.

Olene Caraway appealed to the group to plant a tree at Alibates National Park on Arbor Day.

Local clubs are urge to support the library. Billee Johnson gave a "My Turn" report of Harriet Wilford Whatley.

Serving as hostesses were Fern Sigle and Maria Escamilla.

Members present include Burrus, Caison, Culpepper, Escamilla, Catherine Gripp, Johnson, Helen Langley, Miller, Mary Panciera, Mildred Sheffy, Sigle, Thomas and Willie Wimberly. Special guest was Mrs. Joe (Virginia) Wood.

More than 700 incoming freshmen at Texas A&M University have been honored with scholarships recognizing outstanding academic achievements and excellence in extracurricular activities.

Among those were Blake Buckley and Camille Betzen of Hereford.

Buckley is the recipient of the Terry Foundation Scholarship and National Merit Scholarship. He is the son of Larry and Myrna Buckley and majoring in computer science and engineering at.

Betzen is the recipient of the Lechner Fellowship. She is the daughter of Thomas and Cheryl Betzen of Hereford. Betzen is pursuing a major in finance.

WASHINGTON (AP) - When a judge dismissed all charges against Oliver North a month ago, the former White House aide hinted he might write a book. Evidently it was well under way.

HarperCollins announced that "Under Fire: An American Story," North's account of the Iran-Contra affair, will go on sale Oct. 24.

Time magazine will publish excerpts on Monday.

North, 47, was convicted of three felony charges in the Iran-Contra scandal. The convictions were set aside by an appeals court, and special prosecutor Lawrence Walsh declined to go on.

The case formally ended Sept. 16 when a federal judge dismissed all charges.

Outside the courthouse, North declined to comment to reporters, saying, "I am going to look for a better forum to do that than the hot sun here today."

Public Notice

On July 1, 1991, Southwestern Bell Telephone filed an application with the Public Utility Commission of Texas that proposes to delete Paragraph 3.4(G) from Section 3 of Southwestern Bell's intrastate Access Service Tariff, which concerns credits where a customer uses Switched Access Service to furnish a service which has been defined to be an exchange service. The application was assigned Docket No. 10463.

Because Southwestern Bell is not aware of any customers who presently use switched access service to furnish an exchange service, Southwestern Bell does not believe its revenues will be affected. However, certain interexchange carrier customers of switched access service have made claims under the aforementioned tariff. Such customers, but only to the extent they provide an exchange service using switched access, would be affected by this application. Based on claims made for credits (assuming such credits were allowable), Southwestern Bell's revenues would be affected by no more than $1,168,962 annually, which is .037 percent of the Company's adjusted revenue for the 12-month period ending December 31, 1990. It is not possible to know how many interexchange carriers might believe themselves entitled to credits, but 189 carriers have registered with the Commission pursuant to PUC Substantive Rule 23.61.

The tariff, after suspension, is proposed to be effective May 1, 1992.

Persons who wish to intervene or otherwise participate in these proceedings should notify the Commission as soon as possible, but no later than November 15, 1991. A request to intervene, participate, or for further information should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Blvd., Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757. Herd secondary has challenge in Raiders

Two months ago, this week on Hereford's football schedule looked like a good chance to rest and recuperate after the big Pampa game. Randall finished last season 0-10. Winless. However, when the Herd meets the Raiders at 7:30 p.m. Friday at Kimbrough Stadium in Canyon, they'll be facing the new, improved, 4-2 Raiders.

The 1991 Raiders aren't really new, and that's one reason they're so good. They returned a bunch of starters from last year's squad--10 on offense and eight on defense, according to the Harris Rating System's pre-season forecast--and those players are mostly seniors now. They are 1-0 in District 1-4A after beating Caprock 33-7 last week. Hereford is, like Randall, 4-2 overall and 0-1 in district after losing to Pampa 21-6.

Randall has a prolific passing attack featuring Brandon Barker at quarterback. With 1,363 passing yards, Barker is second in the state in Class 4A. He has completed 81-of-163 passes with only five interceptions.

Barker has a couple of favorite receivers who are ranked in the state (in receiving yardage). Anthony Benson is fourth with 551 yards on 24 catches, and Doug Richardson is ninth with 475 yards on 35 catches. Richardson's 35 is the highest number of catches of anyone in the top 15 in yardage.

All this firepower could cause serious problems for a Hereford defense which has had trouble with the pass this season.

"They've got a terrific passing game and it's a real challenge for us to handle it," Herd coach Danny Haney said.

"We've got to go to zone coverage...mixed in with a some man-to-man and some stunts. Pressure is the key. If you let him (Barker) stand back there, he'll get you," Haney said.

YMCA plans V-ball tourney

The Hereford and Vicinity YMCA will hold a volleyball tournament on Oct. 31 and Nov. 1 and 2.

Divisions offered include men's, women's and co-ed with power rules; co-ed "A" and co-ed "B".

Play will start at 6:15 p.m. on Oct. 31 (a Thursday) and on Nov. 1 (a Friday). Play starts at 1 p.m. Nov. 2.

The entry fee is $40 per team and the entry deadline is Oct. 29. The schedules will be ready at 1 p.m. Oct. 30, and teams should call the YMCA to get game times.

T-shirts will be given to six players for first-place teams, with team trophies going to second- and third-place teams.

Quarterback Dave Krieg of Seattle caught one pass in 1990 but lost six yards on the play.

Randall's offense has scored 144 points in six games; this season, but their defense has allowed 115.

"Their defense isn't as good as their offense, but they're capable," Haney said.

They run an eight-man front and play man-to-man in the secondary, Haney said, and they have good size up front, including 255-pound nose guard Greg Cook and 250-pound tackle Jeremy Krieg.

Injury report: Defensive tackle Santos Liscano (dislocated shoulder) and placekicker Ben Perry (arthroscopic knee surgery) are out. Defensive tackle Monroe Timberlake (kneecap) was cleared on Wednesday to play Friday.

Derek Mason was named the defensive player of the week after playing defense for the first time on varsity. Mason, who as a tight end caught four passes for 107 yards and a touchdown, has played defense before, but never on varsity.

"He's a good athlete who gives you speed and strength at a critical position," Haney said, "and he plays hard all the time."

Lineman Michael Campos got player of the week honors on offense. Haney said Campos' blocking graded out at 90 percent.

For the junior varsity, Jerry Rincon was honored on defense and Andrew Tijerina on offense. For the sophomore team, it was Todd Alexander on offense and Brandon Holcombe on defense, and the ninth grade White team's player of the week was Edgar Gallegos.

Hereford favored by eight

The Hereford football team should break its two-game slide Friday at Randall, according to the Harris Rating System. Harris gives the Herd an eight-point advantage over Randall in the 7:30 p.m. game at Kimbrough Stadium in Canyon.

Hereford's Harris power rating is 179, dropping only a point after last week's 21-6 loss to Pampa. In the rankings, Hereford dropped four places to 49th.

Meanwhile, Randall is on its way up. The 4-2 Raiders gained two points up to 169 on their power rating by beating Caprock 33-7 last week. That moves them up in the rankings from 104 to 100.

Following its impressive win over Hereford, Pampa jumped 10 places in the rankings up to 29th. The Harvesters' power rating rose two points to 184.

This week, Harris picks Pampa to beat Borger by 28 in Borger, and Dumas by 15 over Caprock. Dumas is ranked 113 with a rating of 165, Borger is ranked 143 with a rating of 154 and Caprock is ranked 149 with a rating of 150. The service lists 168 teams in Class 4A.

Other area teams, with ranking and rating, are: 17, Big Spring, 188; 18, Andrews, 188; 20, Sweetwater, 187; 33, Levelland, 182; 41, Lubbock Estacado, 181; 48, Monahans, 179; 75, Frenship, 173; 77, Snyder, 173; 101, Dunbar, 169; 110, Lamesa, 166; 121, Pecos, 164; and 136, Fort Stockton, 159.

Each week Harris lists the best matchups of the week. One Panhan-

Campos named player of the week

Hereford offensive tackle Michael Campos (68) makes sure that Pampa end Phillip Sexton (90) can't get to quarterback Richard Sanderson (10) in last Friday's game. Campos was named varsity Herd's offensive player of the week. Derek Mason, normally a tight end, played varsity defense for the first time and was named defensive player of the week.

dle-area game makes the list: Panhandle at Wellington, which Harris says is even.

Harris' picks for other area games, with home team in CAPS:

Avery's pitching forces seventh game

PITTSBURGH (AP) - All of the tomahawk choppers in Georgia haven't decided this series, nor have some of the National League's big boppers.

Heard of hitters getting zeroed in? This is one series where they keep getting zeroed out.

Here's the linescore from the last two playoff games in Pittsburgh: three runners outside the stadium, two runs inside it.

The Atlanta Braves and Pittsburgh Pirates will play Game 7 of an incredible rollercoaster ride, a gut-wrenching gripper of a playoff series tonight, and what is remarkable is that both teams are but a victory away from the World Series.

"I don't know how the fans are taking it," the Pirates' Steve Buechele said after Atlanta's how-tense-can-you-get 1-0 victory Wednesday in Game 6 - the third 1-0 game and the second in a row in a series long on tension and short on runs.

Sound like a lot of 1-0 games? None of the 137 playoff series and World Series since 1903 had featured so many 1-0 games. By contrast, there were only four in the previous 22 NL playoffs.

"This is a lot of fun to play, but it must be miserable to watch. How much can you take?" Buechele said. "If all 162 games were like this, you wouldn't have a player left at the end of the season."

"Jim (Leyland) and I are both ready to explode," Braves manager Bobby Cox said. "This is baseball as good as you'll ever see it."

And hitting about as bad as you'll see it.

The Braves were shut out for a NL playoff-record 26 consecutive innings and were 1-for-26 with runners in scoring position until Ron Gant scored on Greg Olson's two-out double in the ninth inning off hard-luck loser Doug Drabek.

Still, they won because the Pirates' bats were as frigid as the mid-40s temperatures, managing only three singles off Steve Avery in eight innings and another off Alejandro Pena in the ninth.

Perhaps taking a clue from Dave Justice in Game 5, no Pirate touched third base until Gary Varsho in the ninth. He still was there when Andy Van Slyke froze on a game-ending third-strike changeup from Pena, sending the pumped-up Braves onto the field and a suddenly very silent crowd of 54,508 to the parking lots.

"When we got a run for Steve Avery, I thought we were in good shape," Olson said.

The Pirates thought they had the Braves right where they wanted them with two games to play and only one to win in Three Rivers Stadium, before their chopper-stopper fans.

They also had their big-game pitcher, Doug Drabek, armed and ready. Drabek was on the mound for both of Pittsburgh's division title clinchers the last two seasons.

The trouble for Pittsburgh was that Avery might just have the best arm in baseball. The 21-year-old left-hander never allowed a runner past first base, much less into scoring position. He struck out eight and fooled plenty more.

"Steve Avery is 21 going on 45," Pittsburgh first baseman Sid Bream said. "He doesn't know he's not supposed to pitch this well."

Pitching on a sore hamstring, Drabek has allowed but one run in 15 innings in the series, yet is only 1-1.

He's given up only four runs in 31 1-3 postseason innings, yet is only 2-2.

The Pirates didn't figure on Avery pitching as well as he did in winning Game 2 by 1-0. Instead, he pitched better.

"If he's in the league much longer, I'm going to develop a new disease: Avery-itis," Andy Van Slyke said. "That's what we have: Poison Avery-itis. If he's in the league five or six years, I might poison him."

Avery hasn't allowed a run in a playoff-record 16 1-3 innings.

New faces dominate All-Star list

NEW YORK (AP) - There are a lot of new faces on this year's Associated Press All-Star team.

Third baseman Terry Pendleton of Atlanta, catcher Mickey Tettleton of Detroit, designated hitter Frank Thomas of the Chicago White Sox, left-hander Tom Glavine of Atlanta and reliever Lee Smith of St. Louis were voted on the team. None got a single vote last year.

Outfielder Rickey Henderson and pitchers Bob Welch, Frank Viola and Bobby Thigpen, all 1990 All-Stars, didn't get any votes this year.

First baseman Cecil Fielder of Detroit and outfielder Barry Bonds of San Francisco were the only holdovers.

Julio Franco of Texas, who got just one vote last year, won at second base, while Baltimore's Cal Ripken won for the fifth time at shortstop. Ken Griffey Jr. of Seattle and Jose Canseco of Oakland completed the outfield. Boston's Roger Clemens won at right-handed pitcher for the third time.

The AP team was selected in nationwide voting by sports writers and broadcasters. The closest race was at catcher, where Tettleton beat Brian Harper of Minnesota 41-36. There were no players on the team from the AL champion Twins or the AL East champion Toronto Blue Jays.

Only two clubs had more than one player. Atlanta, the NL West champ, had Pendleton and Glavine. Detroit, which finished tied for second in the AL East at 84-78, had Fielder and Tettleton.

Just two National Leaguers, Pendleton and Bonds, made it among the position players.

After catcher, the second-closest voting was for designated hitter. Thomas got 49 votes, beating Paul Molitor of Milwaukee and Fielder by 10 each. But Thomas also got 48 votes at first base, and they didn't count toward the DH total.

Ripken, who hit .323 with 34 homers and 114 RBIs, also was selected to the AP team in 1983, 1984, 1985 and 1989. Clemens (18-10) also made the team in 1986 and 1987, while Canseco won in 1988 and Tettleton in 1989.

Ripken won by the largest margin, beating last year's winner, Barry Larkin of Cincinnati, 166-9. Glavine (20-11) had the second-largest, beating California's Jim Abbott 149-11.

In the outfield, Bonds got 117 votes, Griffey 80 and Canseco 79. Toronto's Joe Carter was fourth with 52 and Pittsburgh's Bobby Bonilla, the biggest star among the players eligible for free agency, was fifth with 40.

Clemens, who led the AL in ERA (2.62), innings (271 1-3), strikeouts (241) and shutouts (4), beat the Twins' Scott Erickson 109-43 at right-hander. Erickson and Detroit's Bill Gullickson were the only 20-game winners in the AL.

Smith, who led the majors with 47 saves, beat California's Bryan Harvey 127-26 at reliever.

Cox named NL manager of year

PITTSBURGH (AP) - Win or lose, it's already been a great year for Bobby Cox and the Atlanta Braves.

They became the first team in major league history to go from the worst record to first place. They captured the imagination and interest of fans everywhere. And they went into tonight's Game 7 of the NL playoffs against Pittsburgh with a chance to reach the World Series.

Cox, like many good managers, does not claim credit for the team's success. But he must have done a lot of things right, because today he was named the Associated Press Manager of the Year.

Cox received 91 votes in nationwide balloting by newspapers.

Minnesota's Tom Kelly, who also guided his team from last place to first and now has the Twins in the World Series, was second with 49.

Pittsburgh's Jim Leyland got 15 votes for performing a tough task, keeping the Pirates in first place with no dropoff, and St. Louis' Joe Torre was fourth with 13 after helping transform the Cardinals into contenders. Voting was completed before the playoffs began.

"It's an honor, but I don't really know what I brought to the team," Cox said. "You can't do what we did without good players and good coaches, and we have the best."

Cox, who managed Atlanta from 1978-81, is in his first full season back with the Braves. He returned to their dugout in June 1990 after Russ Nixon was fired, and also maintained his job as general manager.

The shakeup didn't really help as the Braves finished at 65-97, the poorest record in the majors. Little did anyone know they would go 94-68 this year.

In the off-season, new GM John Schuerholz made some moves to help Cox. He signed free agents Terry Pendleton and Sid Bream, got Otis Nixon in a spring trade that seemed to be a minor deal at the time and added Alejandro Pena in the stretch.

Right before the Braves broke their spring training camp, Cox held a meeting with his coaches.

"I told them that I thought we had a chance to be a good ballclub. I really believed it, and they did, too," Cox said.

"Sometimes you go out and sign a bunch of new players and bring a lot of new guys in, and you're still not really sure what you have," he said. "I thought we could be good."

The Braves were baseball's biggest surprise from the start, and Cox celebrated his 50th birthday on May 21 with Atlanta in second place, just one-half game behind in the strong NL West.

In the two months that followed, the Braves dipped below the Los Angeles Dodgers and trailed by 9 1/2 games at the All-Star break.

Even at that time, Cox calmly told his team that it could get back in the race, and the Braves were helped when David Justice came back from his injury.

"We'd hit a little slump there, but we weren't out of it," he said. "We just needed a good start in the second half."

The Braves got it, and began dueling the Dodgers in mid-August.

With a win in Pittsburgh tonight, the Braves will be in the World Series for the first time since 1958.

Twins get better of trade

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) - There's really a simple way to figure out who got the better of the big deal between the Twins and Mets in 1989.

Would Minnesota now trade Kevin Tapani, Rick Aguilera and David West to New York for Frank Viola? Viola is heading for free agency while Tapani, Aguilera and West helped put the Twins in the World Series.

When the Mets acquired Viola, they thought the trade would bring a pennant. It did - for the Twins this season.

Tapani won 16 games and Aguilera tied a club record with 42 saves. West was only 4-4 during the season, but came up big in Minnesota's victory over Toronto in the AL playoffs.

Viola, MVP of the 1987 World Series, had a bitter contract fight with the Twins in 1989 and the club ended up giving him a three-year contract for more than it could afford.

The Mets figured acquiring Viola would help them catch the Chicago Cubs in 1989, but he was only 5-5 in 12 starts. After winning 20 games in 1990, Viola struggled after the All-Star break this season and became increasingly disenchanted with New York. He finished 13-15.

"Frank was a great pitcher in Minnesota, but we were in a position of needing more pitchers," Twins general manager Andy MacPhail said. "We projected Kevin and David as starters and Rick as a replacement for Jeff Reardon."

It should also be noted that the salaries of Tapani, West and Aguilera combined is less than Viola's for one season.

"Certainly that was a consideration," MacPhail said. "We also knew Jeff Reardon was eligible for free agency after the 1989 season and he ended up signing with Boston."

The Mets considered West the best prospect in the group. But he has been plagued by nagging injuries and bad pitches with Minnesota. West, however, won Game 5 against Toronto and pitched 5 2-3 scoreless innings in the playoffs.

"In retrospect, sure I'd like to have done better," said West, 14-15 since coming to the Twins.

The big surprise this season turned out to be Tapani. He was 0-6 with a 5.35 ERA in May and some in the Minnesota organization were beginning to think his ability may have been misjudged.

Tapani proved it wasn't by winning nine consecutive decisions to help keep the Twins in first place.

"Kevin is a very consistent pitcher," manager Tom Kelly said Wednesday after the Twins worked out for the second straight day. "You can count on him for seven strong innings almost every time out. I think his confidence grew a lot this year."

Confidence also was a big part in making Aguilera one of the best relievers in baseball. The Mets pegged him as a starter coming through their organization, and he was 11-3 in 17 starts in 1987.

But after elbow surgery in 1988, it was thought he might be more effective coming out of the bullpen.

"I really thought of myself as a starter," Aguilera said. "But I came to the realization it would be better for me to be a reliever, and it's worked out very well. I love it here."

Since joining the Twins, Aguilera has 74 saves. In his career, he has 81 saves in 100 opportunities.

After his success against Toronto, the Twins are hoping West also has gained the confidence to make it as a starter next season.

"I don't ever consider myself having a problem with confidence," West said. "Sometimes things work out and sometimes they don't."

The Killeen Massacre

Witness: 'It seemed like slow motion'

KILLEEN, Texas (AP) - Blood, broken glass, bullet fragments and spent 9mm cartridges litter the floor of a cafeteria where a gunman conducted a methodical massacre. "It's almost a surrealistic, nightmarish-looking scene," Mike Cox, a spokesman for the Texas Department of Public Safety, said Wednesday night. "You think you are on a TV set. You have to remind yourself this is the real thing." George Hennard, 35, killed 22 people and himself, police said, making the slaughter the worst single-day murder in U.S. history. His motive is not clear, but police are piecing together a picture of a frustrated man with a volatile temper. Luby's Cafeteria, a brown brick building located on a frontage road along U.S. 190, is a popular restaurant in this Central Texas city of 45,000 adjacent to Fort Hood, the nation's largest military installation. Some residents had gone there to celebrate Boss's Day. Among them was Jacquelyn Pleasant, an employee of the Killeen Independent School District.

The terror started when a blue pickup truck smashed through a front window during lunchtime. "When he broke in, I thought it was an accident," Ms. Pleasant said. "I thought he was drunk." The driver, wearing sunglasses and brandishing a dull black semiautomatic pistol, leaped from the vehicle and opened fire, witnesses said. "First, there was the crash. Then the glass breaking," said Angela Wilson. "Then the quiet. Then the shooting. Then the screaming," she said.

Sam Wink thought he would be killed. "He looked right at me and pointed the pistol," Wink said. "I thought I bought the farm but a lady close to me got up to run. He turned and fired at her." Wink said he managed to escape through a fire exit. "I heard bullets go over my head and into the wall. It just seemed like slow motion and he shot forever."

Cox said the carnage was incredible. "There are bodies scattered throughout the entire cafeteria," he said. "The floor is covered with broken glass, bullet holes, bullet fragments, blood." Eight white hearses lined up outside the restaurant Wednesday night as the bodies were removed. At the nearby Sheraton Hotel, counseling centers were opened to help the victims' friends and relatives cope with their grief. "I lost three friends in the cafeteria," said Larry Pogue, a retired U.S. Army major. "I was in two tours of duty in Vietnam. I lost more friends in Killeen, Texas, today than I did in any one day in Vietnam."

Editor's wife gives account

EDITOR'S NOTE: Susan Robinson-Hester, a counselor with the Killeen Independent School District's Chapter 1 program and wife of Killeen Daily Herald news editor Robert Hester, was in the Luby's Cafeteria during Wednesday's massacre. Here is her story.

By SUSAN ROBINSON-HESTER
Special To The Herald
KILLEEN, Texas (AP) - Is this really happening?

Will I ever see my girls again? Will I see my husband? Am I going to die?

I just held my breath. The gunshots seemed to ring out for hours, even though it lasted only a matter of minutes.

Moments before the shooting began, we were finishing our lunch at Luby's cafeteria, having a good time and giving gifts to our boss for Bosses' Day. The good time was quickly shattered by the sound of breaking glass as a blue pickup came crashing through the front windows at about 12:40 Wednesday afternoon.

Before it was over, our boss, James Swift, lay bleeding from a gunshot wound.

Mr. Swift, the director of KISD's Chapter 1-Bilingual-Adult Ed Program, survived the shooting. Two of his staff members did not.

One sat across the table from me at lunch. I was just talking to her when we heard the truck crash through the window.

After the ordeal was over and were sure it was safe to get up, I grabbed her leg and shook it. I called out her name, but she didn't respond. I didn't realize how close the bullets came to me until that moment.

The truck was completely inside the building when it came to a stop, and it would've kept going if something hadn't forced it to stop. I don't know what it was.

I saw a glimpse of the gunman's head. He began shooting and yelling. "Look at what Belton's done to me," he screamed.

The next thing I knew I was on the floor, as was everyone around me.

My face was pressed as far into the carpet as possible. I was getting as low to the ground as I could. I was trying to hide from him even though I knew I couldn't.

I kept my face to the ground and my eyes closed. The rest of the ordeal was a nightmare of sounds.

The sound of the bullets began to grow louder and louder. It seemed like they were getting closer to my head. Then the sound started moving away. He seemed to be circling the cafeteria's dining area. I didn't think he was going to leave any of us alive.

The came a brief silence in the gunfire. He seemed to be taking a breather. I was hoping he was out of bullets. But then I heard a noise, the chilling sound of a gun being reloaded.

He began walking about the cafeteria again, and the terrifying sounds continued.

"Was it worth it?" he said. BAM. BAM-BAM-BAM, the gunfire blasted out.

"Tell me, was it worth it?" BAM-BAM-BAM-BAM-BAM.

"Wait 'til those ... women in Belton see this. I wonder if they'll think it was worth it," he screamed.

He was overloaded with anger. He needed help before it came to this.

I wondered when his anger started, if he had been an angry child. As a counselor with the Chapter 1 program, I work hard for children. Some them also have anger inside. I hope I am helping them deal with their anger appropriately.

The gunfire began to sound more and more distant. I heard screams and the sound of glass breaking. It seemed to be coming from the kitchen area.

Soon afterward, I heard a siren. It was quickly followed by several more sirens.

Then I heard a different voice. I kind of lifted myself up and saw a man with a rifle, but I still didn't know if it was safe. Other voices could soon be heard, and I could tell some people were moving around. I thought the police had arrived.

I heard the gunman's voice yelling out, "I've got two hostages."

"No, you don't," another voice screamed back.

A few more words were exchanged. Several shots were fired. And I heard someone say, "He shot himself."

I was feeling like it was over, but still scared to get up.

"My face was pressed as far into the carpet as possible. I was trying to hide from him even though I knew I couldn't. I kept my face to the ground and my eyes closed. The rest of the ordeal was a nightmare of sounds."

A policeman came over to our area, his black cap said "POLICE" in white letters. He told us help was on the way. I slowly stood up, and the police who were ushering us out of the building told us: "Don't look down."

There were bodies everywhere. A brief thought crossed my mind about those people at McDonald's in San Ysidro, Calif., where a shooting killed 21 people in 1984.

Once I got outside the door, I just screamed and cried after I had to hold it in for so long.

Thank God it's over. Thank God I'm all right. Thank God I'm alive.

Ms. Wilson, a pastry chef at the restaurant, had just been dropped off for work by her boyfriend, Eddie Sanchez, who came face-to-face with the killer.

"He was very calm. Cold-faced," Sanchez said. "He was like pivoting and shooting."

Sanchez said he tried to phone police, but stopped when the gunman spotted him. "When he turned back around the other direction we ran out the front door," he said.

"I ran into HiLo Auto Parts and yelled: 'I need a gun! Give me a gun!' I told them to call the police," Sanchez said.

Sheldon Smith, a porter at the cafeteria, was carrying a load of trays when the shooting began.

"The guy jumped out of the truck and said, 'This is what Bell County

Neighbors had warned police Text of letter

BELTON, Texas (AP) - Four months ago, neighbors of George Hennard showed police a letter in which he wrote of disgust to certain women in Belton and said he wanted to "personally remind all of those vipers that I have civil rights too."

Police investigated Hennard's background but did not arrest him, said Jane Bugg, whose daughters were the intended recipient of Hennard's letter.

"We just lived in fear of the man," said Bugg, 46, a medical secretary.

On Wednesday, Hennard, 35, crashed his pickup into a restaurant in nearby Killeen and started firing an automatic pistol, killing 22 customers and then himself in the nation's worst mass shooting.

"I think it's just a shame that something that maybe could have been stopped back then and wasn't has led to this today," Bugg said. "That's the biggest tragedy of all."

For several months, Hennard had scared Bugg and her daughters, Jill Fritz and Jana Jernigan, with bizarre behavior that included the rambling letter, phone calls and running in front of their cars.

Hennard often waved to Fritz, 23, and Jernigan, 19, the women said, and for months they took him to be a friendly but anonymous neighbor.

That changed in May, when he began darting in front of their cars as they drove by his house. In recent days, he made obscene gestures, they said.

In June, Hennard called Bugg from Henderson, Nev., about a letter with pictures of himself that he intended for her daughters but mistakenly sent to their next-door neighbor.

The letter exhibits a disturbing attitude to women. It read in part:

"Did you and your sister find new flames yet? Do you think the three of us could get together someday? Please give me the satisfaction of someday laughing in the face of all those mostly white, treacherous female vipers from two towns who tried to destroy me and my family."

Bugg said when Hennard called he identified himself as "George from down the street" and she told him she didn't have any neighbors named George.

When he explained he lived in a brick house a block away she said she realized it was the man who had run in front of her car waving his arms and yelling.

"It scared me because I knew who we were dealing with," Bugg said.

The letter also said he had found the best and worst women in Belton.

"You and sister on the one side," he wrote. "Then the abundance of evil women that make up the worst on the other side. I would like to personally remind all of those vipers that I have civil rights too."

Fritz said the letter frightened her though she had married and was no longer in Hennard's neighborhood.

"He looked scary. He just always looked scary to me," she said.

Jernigan asked to accompany her sister to work so she wouldn't be left in the neighborhood alone during the day. But, after a few weeks, she returned to her normal routine.

"He kind of got to the point where he just left us alone," Jernigan said. "I was concerned about him and I would keep my eye out on him but I wouldn't concern myself with being scared of him."

When she saw news accounts of the Killeen shooting, Jernigan said she recognized Hennard's blue pickup.

"I hadn't heard his name yet. I'd just seen the truck," she said. "When they finally released his name, it didn't really surprise me at all."

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the complete text of a letter written by cafeteria massacre gunman George Hennard to "Stacey" and "Robin," the names he mistakenly attributed to Jill Fritz and Jana Jernigan, two sisters who lived near his Belton home.

June 6, (19)91

Dear Stacey and ? Robin?

Surprise surprise. Can you guess who this is writing to you? Well just take a look at the enclosed pictures to help you figure it out.

They are for you and your sister ? Robin? I never did learn her name for sure. Believe it or not, to this day, 6691, not one single person ever come forward and volunteered one bit of information that would help me lead to your capture.

One day before I left Texas to return to Las Vegas and all of it hassles, I saw in the Temple Telegram your picture and impressive accomplishments. Is your sister of the same caliber? I hope so.

The thing that immediately came to my mind was you are a senior in high school.

I then realized that the mystery of what the problem had been was finally solved after 3 1/2 years.

Think back now Stacey to Jan 31, 1988, the night that Neal Pearl, my main man, and Russell played down in Austin. I remember seeing two young girls and their mother pass by me twice in a little tan compact car.

"Well what's going on here?" I thought to myself.

Oh my God, I was looking at two sisters just 15 and 17 years old at the time. I can promise you I had no idea of your young ages and the fact that I had just stepped into a legal twilight zone. My goodness I must admit (being) truly flattered knowing I have two teen-age groupie fans but unfortunately mommy dear had strong reservations about me.

Maybe your mother saw me as the wolf in sheep's clothing. Was she afraid I would act irresponsibly with her two precious gems and then run and hide?

Your mother made a miscalculation in her evaluation of me. There was no place to run and hide, then or now. I worked and sailed on ships for 17 years. When there was a problem, conflict, or a crisis, no place to hide from it on the ship. We all just tried to correct it or sit and ride it out.

Do you think, Stacey, someday that you and your gorgeous sister could meet up somewhere sit down and have a long talk? Would there be any harm in that?

Let's face it, we owe it to ourselves to at least get acquainted. And the three of us find out who and what we are. Believe me, communication may come very easy.

The hard may come afterwards. You're both different and talented. That's why you caught my interest. And still hold it regardless of what went down during the past 3 1/2 years.

No doubt your father may be annoyed and angered the way I screamed at him the last night in Belton. That's fine with me I don't like his tactics.

I never at any time told him he could knock on my front door to talk and get acquainted, send me an invitation through the mail inviting me to pay you and your family a visit, call me on the telephone to say let's have a talk.

Enough is enough, now. His routine method leads nowhere. It was a dead end from day one. Excuse me, please, but both of your parents are so evasive and nebulous about what their intentions are that I just got disgusted and focused on one person, your sister.

Didn't do a lot of good, though.

OK, so now what do you and your family want to do? The question begs itself. Did you and your sister find yourselves new flames yet?

Do you think the three of us can get together some day? Please give me the satisfaction of someday laughing in the face of all those mostly white treacherous female vipers from those two towns who tried to destroy me and my family.

It is very ironic about Belton, Texas.

I found the best and worst in women there. You and sister are the one side. Then the abundance of evil women that make up the worst on the other side.

I would like to personally remind all those vipers that I have civil rights too. Just because I did not hire an attorney they have carte blanche to do what they want in violation of these rights.

I will no matter what prevail over the female vipers in those two rinky-dink towns in Texas.

I will prevail in the bitter end. In conclusion, I ask you do not disclose the contents of this letter to anyone other than immediate family members. It is no one else's business but ours anyway.

I hope that you and ? Robin? will write soon to acknowledge receipt of this letter. Now it is your turn to respond. Remember, from this day one, no more talk of rejection, slander, deceit, and etc.

The truth is now in writing.

Peace sisters.

Love you both, George. Your fan. How about sending me your nice pictures. Ha ha.

Weapon popular in movies

DALLAS (AP) - The Glock-17 9mm semiautomatic pistol used Wednesday by a gunman who killed 22 people and then himself at a Killeen cafeteria is the darling of Hollywood shoot-'em-ups and the sidearm of thousands of law officers.

"It's kind of ugly," said a salesman at the Gun & Tackle Store in Dallas who gave his name only as Mike. "But it's real businesslike and functions well."

He said some customers ask for the weapon because they see it used in films.

"Any movie with good guys and bad guys and somebody will probably be using one," he said.

The Glock 9mm is one of the more popular handguns used in Hollywood movies because it is very durable, said Jeff Wagner of Malibu's Movie Arms Management, a leading gun prop company.

The gun was used recently in 1990's "Die Hard 2," starring Bruce Willis. In the film, Willis' character notices that something's wrong because a security guard is carrying the gun, which is too sophisticated for such a job.

Movie Arms owns 12 Glocks that fire blanks, Wagner said.

"They're dependable. And in the movie we need dependability," he said. "We can beat these Glocks up and they just keep coming back for more."

The handgun, made in Austria and imported by Glock Inc. of Smyrna, Ga., can fire 17 shots or 19 shots, depending on the magazine size.

The pistol is semiautomatic, meaning it fires every time the trigger is pulled. The cartridges are contained in a detachable magazine, allowing rapid reloading.

Many users like the high firepower of the weapon, Mike said. "They just sort of spray and pray," he said. It retails for about $500, he said.

The Dallas Police Department evaluated the Glock for use by officers before recommending another 9mm as the weapon of preference. However, many officers purchase Glocks for their own use, the chief's office said.

Glock vice president Karl F. Walter said Wednesday evening in a telephone interview from Smyrna that news of the shooting "makes me ill."

"We are trying everything possible to avoid anything like this," Walter said.

In a statement, Walter said the company deplored the use of its products by a "deranged individual."

"This type of individual is found all over the world and has always found the means to cause tragedy and grief for others, to further their own selfish agenda," Walter said.

Walter said that the weapon is used by about 4,000 peace officers across the country.

Ron Dusek, a spokesman for the Texas Attorney General's office, said any adult can purchase a handgun in Texas.

There is no waiting period to purchase any firearm, although a purchaser must sign an affidavit saying they are not under indictment for a felony or have been convicted of a felony.

Buyers also must attest that they are not a controlled substance abuser, a fugitive from justice, dishonorably discharged from the armed forces, an alien illegally in the United States, a former patient of a mental facility or an American who has renounced citizenship.

It is illegal for anyone who has been convicted of a felony that involves violence to carry any gun outside his or her home, according to the Texas Penal Code.

It is a third-degree felony to carry a firearm at a licensed distributor of alcohol. It is a Class A misdemeanor if a firearm is carried onto a schoolground or educational institution or a polling place on the day of an election, the code says.

Walter said that responsible American citizens have the right to protect themselves, their families and their property with the educated use of a firearm.

"Only then will innocent victims, such as those in Killeen, Texas, be protected," he said.

Gun-control advocates speak out

WASHINGTON (AP) - Congressional advocates of a ban on assault-style semiautomatic weapons and large-capacity ammunition clips quickly seized on the massacre of 22 people in a Texas cafeteria.

But they acknowledged they lack the votes to preserve the ban as part of a comprehensive anti-crime bill before the House in the face of intense lobbying by the National Rifle Association.

"It's an uphill fight," Rep. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., said

Wednesday night, several hours after the deadliest mass shooting in the nation's history. "We do not have a majority of the votes now."

Schumer is a chief author of a provision in the bill to ban the sale of 13 specific types of semiautomatic weapons and gun magazines that hold more than seven rounds of ammunition. He said his measure would have put "a limit to how many bullets that madman could have fired."

"At least it would have slowed him down ... so that his bullets could not be sprayed and sprayed and sprayed," Schumer said. "It's very clear he was not using a six-shot revolver."

The Glock 9mm semiautomatic pistol used by the gunman to kill 22 people and himself in a Killeen, Texas, cafeteria is not among the weapons that would be banned in the bill.

However, the legislation would not allow the sale of the 17-round magazine commonly used with the Austrian-made Glock to anyone other than the police or the military.

House Speaker Thomas S. Foley, D-Wash., traditionally a strong supporter of the NRA, indicated Wednesday he disagrees with the bill's definition of semiautomatic weapons and bans on specific models.

"I would personally favor very heavy penalties for possession or use of automatic weapons in an illegal circumstance," he said.

The first singing telegram was introduced in 1933 by the Postal Telegraph Co. in New York.

Autumn brings bountiful photography opportunities

By The Associated Press

The arrival of autumn brings magnificent colors and some not-to-be-missed color-photo opportunities.

A landscape of glowing crimson-and-gold foliage, a vividly colorful Halloween party and a Saturday afternoon football game are a few of the reasons to keep your camera handy and loaded with film. The Photography Information Council has some advice for autumn shutterbugs that will help produce pictures to be proud of long after the last leaf has been raked from the lawn.

Photos of autumn vistas can be breathtaking, but you can make them more meaningful by including friends and family members in your composition. Even better, capture them at some typical autumn activity, such as carving a pumpkin, frolicking in a pile of leaves or playing touch football. Such pictures do more than capture colorful beauty - they preserve precious memories.

Look for elements that evoke other sensory memories: For example, a distant house with smoke rising from the chimney, crisp dry leaves against lush green moss, a bushel of apples, or footprints on a deserted beach.

"The best times of day to shoot pictures are early morning and late afternoon," says photojournalist Linda Solomon. "The pure, clean air of morning has a bluish cast, perfect for catching the light reflecting off fall leaves. Late afternoon light has an amber warmth that makes fall colors even more intense and vivid."

If you plan to stay in one location for any length of time, try shooting the same subject or scene a couple of times, several hours apart. For example, capture the light playing against and through the leaves at different times of the day.

Keep an eye on the sky. Fall weather elements - brisk winds, drizzle, rainbows - can help you create some of the most dramatic shots imaginable.

Experiment with your flash - remember, it's not limited to indoor use. In shade or heavily overcast conditions, it can throw just enough light onto a subject to make the difference between a shot that's merely passable and one that's full of life.

As a photographer, don't limit yourself to one stance. Get down on all fours, climb onto a rock, stand on top of your car - do what you can, within reason, of course, to find the best frame for your shot.

Using the proper filter can intensify the colors in your fall pictures. A polarizing filter will deepen colors, such as the blue of the sky, and eliminate unwanted glare; an enhancing filter intensifies reds and oranges, and is perfect for dramatizing fall foliage. Although such filters are commonly used with cameras that have interchangeable lenses, many point-and-shoot cameras can also be fitted with filters.

Be careful when selecting film. Some amateurs make the mistake of using film that is too fast - ASA 400 or higher - for their needs. For outdoor, daytime shots, slower film will produce excellent, fine-grained prints. Stick to ASA 100 or 200, or, in very bright settings, ASA 64 or slower.

Follow the lead of professionals: Take plenty of pictures, vertical as well as horizontal ones. Try different angles and move around - shifting only a foot or two to the left or right could significantly change the color composition of your shot.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: From time to time, you offer information about hotlines and support groups for people struggling with different problems. I'd like to tell you about a program that also could be of wonderful use to your faithful followers.

The Boys Town National Hotline, 1-800-448-3000, is a toll-free crisis line for both troubled parents and children across the country. It is operated by Boys Town, the world-famous home for abused, neglected and abandoned boys and girls, founded by Father Edward J. Flanagan in 1917.

Our hotline's professional counselors are trained to deal with problems involving physical and sexual abuse, suicide, running away, alcohol and drug abuse, parenting issues, school behavior, eating disorders, etc. They do short term telephone counseling and refer callers to services in their own hometowns using a computer database of 50,000 local agencies and programs nationwide. In addition, Boys Town has sites in nine states and can refer callers to our shelters and programs in these areas.

The hotline is open 24 hours a day, every day. We have a TDD line (1-800-448-1833) so we can communicate with the hearing-impaired. We also have bilingual counselors to assist Spanish-speaking callers.

Please share our Boys Town National Hotline number with your millions of readers who receive compassion and wise advice from you each day. It's a number they can call any time free of charge for help with any problem.

May God bless you in your continued good work helping families across America.—Father Val J. Peter, JCD, STD, executive director, Boys Town

DEAR FATHER PETER: I've checked out Boys Town and it has a glowing five-star rating. I'm delighted to tell the world about this great place that helps boys, girls and their parents. Expect a deluge, padre. You're going to get it.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My son, 42, is in a second marriage (11 years) and has two wonderful children. He and his wife both have good jobs.

Today he told me that he is expecting a baby soon by a woman who is not his wife. I am very hurt by this and feel like wringing his neck.

His wife is unaware of the situation. I don't know the other woman, but she knew my son was married when she took up with him. They work together.

Seeking To Halt Tissue Damage

ATLANTA (AP)—Researchers are in the early stages of developing a protein that stops the complex chemical chain reaction that prompts excessive heart muscle damage following a cardiac attack, according to Arthritis Today, a publication of the Arthritis Foundation.

A heart attack usually triggers the complement system, a part of the body's immune mechanism which also controls the inflammatory response that fights infection.

But this system often overreacts, causing excessive damage to heart muscle, the Atlanta-based publication explains.

When the protein was administered to laboratory rats suffering the equivalent of a heart attack at Johns Hopkins University Medical Center, it notes, the resulting destruction of tissue was reduced by 44 percent.

Further research is necessary before the protein is tested on people but the researchers hope the complement blocker also will be useful against the overactive inflammatory response that marks disorders such as rheumatoid arthritis.

This is not the first time my son has had an affair. My daughter-in-law also had an affair for which my son never forgave her. That wasn't her first affair either.

The problem: My daughter-in-law is going to find out about this sooner or later, but I could never bring myself to tell her. When she does find out, she'll know I knew about it and she'll be very angry with me for not telling her.

When this child is born, what do I do? It will be my grandchild, but if I acknowledge it, it might upset by daughter-in-law. I'm furious with my son, but I know he loves his wife and they aren't going to split up over this. What is the right thing to do?—G in Detroit

DEAR DETROIT: You are under no obligation to keep your daughter-in-law informed about her husband's escapades. You are right to keep your mouth shut. When the child is born, take your cue from the baby's mother.

If she wants you involved, fine, if not, stay away. It's her call.

An alcohol problem? How can you help yourself or someone you love? "Alcoholism: How to Recognize It, How to Deal With It, How to Conquer It" will give you the answers. Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $3.65 (this includes postage and handling) to: Alcohol, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562.

Neighbors were always wary of Hennard's ways

BELTON, Texas (AP) - George Hennard, who gunned down 22 people in a crowded cafeteria, was the handsome son of wealth and a loner who neighbors say was a fanatic about a neat yard and a clean pickup, and sometimes frightened them with outbursts, phone calls and even a letter referring to "female vipers."

"We just lived in fear of the man," said Jane Bugg, a 46-year-old medical secretary.

Hennard, 35, who killed himself after his 10-minute shooting spree Wednesday, lived alone in his divorced parents' two-story, red-brick Colonial home, a mansion with six majestic white columns in front.

He was usually aloof and unfriendly, according to people in the middle-class neighborhood of modest homes where the Hennard mansion stuck out. He was seldom seen, only when washing his truck or mowing his lawn. Sometimes he ran into the street in front of their cars, waving his arms and yelling.

James Dunlap, 32, told WFAA-TV the and Hennard were roommates in 1982 in Temple, about 15 miles northeast of Belton. He remembered him as an angry, hostile person.

"He had a very explosive temper, a very violent temper. He'd throw things when he'd get mad, put his fist through a wall, hit things, knock things over," Dunlap said.

"He'd yell and scream at people a lot. He did that quite a bit. He made several references about wanting to kill people. He was a very prejudiced person," Dunlap said.

He drove a shiny blue 1987 Ford Ranger pickup with a vanity license plate, "SEA TRV," possibly a reference to time neighbors thought he spent as a merchant seaman or in the Coast Guard.

Hennard phoned Mrs. Bugg and her daughters, Jana Jernigan and Jill Fritz, several times during the past five months, the women said Wednesday night. But he had tried to get their attention months earlier.

In June, Hennard sent a letter to Jernigan, 19, and Fritz, 23, that mistakenly was addressed to a neighbor. The mistake was corrected when Hennard called Mrs. Bugg from Nevada and told her the letter was next door.

The letter said in part: "Did you and your sister find new flames yet? Do you think the three of us could get together someday? Please give me the satisfaction of someday laughing in the face of all those mostly white, treacherous female vipers from two towns who tried to destroy me and my family."

Police said Wednesday they have no motive for the massacre. Hennard drove his pickup through a front window of a crowded Luby's cafeteria in Killeen, got out and methodically began shooting patrons, killing 22 in the nation's worst mass shooting ever.

When Hennard entered the Luby's cafeteria in Killeen, witnesses said he screamed something about Belton and "This is what Bell County has done to me!"

His letter to the neighbors contained a eerily similar passage.

"It is very ironic about Belton, Texas," Hennard wrote. "I found the best and the worst in women there. You and sister on the one side. Then the abundance of evil women that make up the worst on the other side. I would like to personally remind all of those vipers that I have civil rights too."

He then urged the women not to divulge the contents of the letter. But Mrs. Bugg took it to police the next day.

Neighbors said the 6-foot tall, clean-cut, handsome Hennard moved into the 3,500-square-foot mansion in this central Texas town about 10 years ago. His mother, Jeanne Hennard, now lives in Las Vegas, they said, and his father, also George Hennard, is an orthopedic surgeon in Houston. Mrs. Hennard referred to her son as "Jo" - his middle name - to distinguish him from his father, they said.

"He never spoke to us. He wasn't our kind of people," said one neighbor, who asked not to be identified by name. "All we ever saw him do was yardwork or wash his pickup."

Mary Mead, who runs a convenience store near the home, said Hennard was often the first customer after her 5 a.m. opening. On Wednesday morning, he charged a few dollars worth of merchandise and said he'd be back in the afternoon.

She, too, had received a cryptic warning. "He said if they didn't stop messing around his house, something bad was going to happen," Ms. Mead said.

Andre Coffey, 21, said he was hired by the younger Hennard several years ago to do yardwork. "He didn't like being around people. He was always alone, or with his mother," Coffey said.

"He always told me, 'Andre, you're a nice kid.' He seemed like a nice person to me, just a loner."

Police said Hennard had no local record other than a 1990 speeding ticket.

His telephone, too, had a bizarre recorded message which said: "Yo, cuz. You've reached Public Street. Leave your name, number, time and message. Hang-up phone calls are absolutely prohibited and you'll be bugged if you do so."

Killeen, in Central Texas, centered around Fort Hood

KILLEEN, Texas (AP) - The development a half century ago of Fort Hood, now the nation's largest military installation, turned Killeen from a sleepy railroad crossing into a bustling Army town of 65,000.

Killeen, in Bell County, is about 150 miles southwest of Dallas and about 60 miles north of Austin, the state capital. The Killeen Chamber of Commerce sells the community as featuring low taxes, low cost of living, excellent school, regional medical facilities and a highly skilled labor force.

Downtown Killeen is a collection of surplus stores, pawn shops and retail outlets, many operated by Koreans whose families moved to the city after the Korean War.

Killeen is the largest of a cluster of communities that surround and economically feed off the base, with its 40,000 soldiers and civilians.

It is closest to the post's main operating area, and its economy is closely tied to the Army post, which deployed 23,000 troops to the Middle East for the Persian Gulf War. The town is home to several thousand military retirees.

In 1940, Killeen, population 1,400, was a quiet ranching community built along the Sante Fe railroad. But whatever innocence the town enjoyed ended abruptly in 1942 when President Franklin D. Roosevelt ordered 108,000 acres of dusty, hilly farmland transformed into a tank training ground.

Seventy thousand soldiers descended on Killeen, rocking the town with the first of many military-driven booms. In six months, the town's population had grown to 6,000.

The tranquility that returned to Killeen at the end of World War II was shortlived. The post became the home for the 1st Cavalry and 2nd Armored Division, which gained fame as the "Hell on Wheels" unit led by Gen. George S. Patton.

With the outbreak of the Korean War in 1950, troop trains began converging on the Texas town once again. Camp Hood was designated a permanent fort, assuring Killeen's marriage to the military.

Over the next 20 years, the Killeen of popular folklore grew up. It was a seamy place of tattoo parlors, beer joints, pool halls, pawnshops and prostitutes. Residents still ruefully recall the busloads of prostitutes that arrived in the 1970s to satisfy the sexual desires of soldiers passing through Fort Hood during the Vietnam War.

Since 1975, the character of Killeen has undergone a dramatic transformation. Today, more than 60 percent of the nearly 40,000 soldiers based at Fort Hood are married. As the population soared, a legitimate business base developed.

An aura of uncertainty settled on the town early last year as the Pentagon pondered which military bases to close. Fort Hood passed the cut, but not without losing an entire Army division. The Pentagon began deactivating the 12,000-troop 2nd Armored Division in June 1990.

The town was still reeling from the bad news when the Persian Gulf crisis erupted - and 26,000 soldiers from Fort Hood were dispatched to Saudi Arabia.

But since the quick victory in the Mideast, particularly with the vital role that Fort Hood's soldiers played in the rout, good times had started rolling again.

Families, torn apart as mothers and fathers answered the call of war in the Persian Gulf, had been reunited. The ravaged economy, which saw 150 businesses fail and hard-working people lose their life savings, was on the mend.

Defense Secretary Dick Cheney, who'd been a villain years before, became a hero in April when he announced that Fort Hood would not be losing personnel. Instead, the 5th Mechanized Infantry Division would be moved from Fort Polk, La., to Fort Hood.

Killeen had begun to believe the nightmare was over for a city whose fortunes literally rise and fall with the arrival and departure of troops at Fort Hood.

The giddiness of good times revisited was shattered Wednesday when a man drove his truck through a plate-glass window at Luby's Cafeteria, a popular lunch spot, and began slaughtering patrons.

A community that over the years has learned to live with war and sudden death was left to deal with another kind of tragedy.
