Youths Convicted Of Kidnapping

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - Two of four Austin youths accused in the June 1980 abduction and slaying of a 16-year-old girl have been convicted of aggravated kidnapping.

After 20 hours of deliberation, the jurors on Thursday acquitted a third defendant and reached no verdict on a fourth.

The charges stemmed from the death of Elaine McCuistion, an Austin Lanier High School student last seen riding her bicycle in Northeast Austin in June. Her body was found near Waco in August.

The guilty verdicts were returned against Nemecio Carmona and Ruben Castillo Tello, both 18. The jury cleared Joe Robert Riojas.

State District Judge Tom Blackwell declared a mistrial for Faustino Gonzales, 17, when jurors could not reach a verdict.

Prosecutor Nate Stark said a decision on whether to seek a retrial of Gonzales would be made after jurors recommend, a sentence for the two convicted teenagers.

Shrimp Fishery

Regulations Approved

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - Final regulations for management of the shrimp fishery in the Gulf of Mexico have been approved by the U.S. Department of Commerce, Gov. Bill Clements said Thursday.

He said the first element of the plan was the cooperative closure of both state and federal waters prohibiting shrimp harvesting off the Texas costs, May 22 until July 15. The closure is designed to protect undersized brown shrimp as they migrate from the bays into the Gulf so they may grow to a marketable size.

Prior to the cooperative closure, there was only a Texas closure within the state's territorial waters out nine nautical miles. The joint closure is effective out to 200 miles.

Senate Votes

To Protect Horses

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - The Senate has approved a bill that would authorize the inspection of slaughter houses to keep stolen horses from being slaughtered.

Sen. Peyton McKnight said thieves make off with expensive quarterhorses as well as children's pets. The stolen horses are taken to slaughter houses, he said, and made it to horse meat to be sent overseas.

"You can take a bucket of feed and catch almost any horse," said McKnight.

"If you have ever seen a child after somebody has stolen his horse ... it's certainly a heart-rending thing," he said.

McKnight said his bill would authorize the Texas Animal Health Commission to contract with the Texas Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association to police slaughter houses.

A slaughterer could not slaughter a horse until an authorized inspector had released the horse. McKnight also said the slaughterer would have to hold the horse for at least 24 hours.

Records would have to be kept of all horses, including the name and address of the person delivering the horse, as well as the make, model and highway registration number of the vehicle delivering the horse.

Brezhnev Says 'Flames of War' Threatening the Middle East

MOSCOW (AP) - Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev said today "flames of war" threaten the Middle East, and repeated his desire for international conferences on the Arab-Israeli conflict, the Persian Gulf region and the civil war in Afghanistan.

"What is happening in the Middle East is profoundly tragic and dangerous,' Brezhnev said in a nationally televised speech from Tbilisi, capital of the Georgian Soviet Republic.

"One miscalculation and the flames of war could sweep the entire Mideast region. And it is not known how far the sparks of this fire could scatter," he said.

The Soviet leader said tension in the Persian Gulf region "is being sharpened because Washington is trying to bring gross pressure on Iran and organize intervention against the Afghan revolution. The strain is aggravated by the unprecedented concentration of military forces of the United States in the entire region."

Iran has been fighting Iraq, a Soviet ally, for eight months. The Soviet Union has based at least 85,000 troops in Afghanistan since January 1980 to help the pro-Soviet Afghan regime battle anticommunist Moslem rebels.

Brezhnev's speech underlined separate Soviet campaigns to regain lost diplomatic ground in the Mid-

His proposal for a Mideast conference is certain to come up next Tuesday when Jor-dan's King Hussein begins a three-day visit to the Soviet capital, his first since 1976. Hussein, a staunch U.S. ally, is considered an essential player in any comprehensive regional settlement because of the large number of Palestinians living in Jordanian territory bordering Israel. Moscow has consistently opposed the 1978 Camp David accord involving the United States, Egypt and Israel, and has sought to reassert itself in

Reagan assured House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill and Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker that he is willing to compromise on his farreaching but unpopular proposals to make Social Security solvent, and he asked them to join him in a bipartisan effort to rescue the system.

But the conciliatory letter sent late Thursday also warned bluntly, "Unless we in government are willing to act, a sword of Damocles will soon hang over the welfare of millions of our citizens."

Reagan made no mention of the most widely condemned feature of his proposal to reduce Social Security costs by $88.4 billion over the next five years: slashing early retirement benefits for 62-year-olds starting next Jan. 1 by up to 43 percent. He said only that he would insist that any plan to rescue the beleaguered program be built around three principles: holding down the payroll tax, preserving the integrity of the trust fund, and eliminating "all abuses in the system that

He explained that food was down more than two percent for the month due to the decrease of prices.

Hayes Leads Memorial Golf

DUBLIN, Ohio (AP) -Bobby Clampett was sure he had broken one of golf's rules - you don't touch an obstruction in a hazard.

Clampett, who turned 21 a month ago today, flicked away a stone from a bunker at 17 at Muirfield Village at a time Thursday when he was the sole first-round leader in the $400,000 Memorial Tournament.

The Professional Golfers' Association Tour rookie got away with it because of what Clyde Mangum, Tour deputy commissioner, called odd circumstances. Instead of taking an 8, slipping from 6-under to 2-under and three shots behind, Clampett was just one shot behind Mark Hayes heading into the second round today. Hayes fashioned a 5-under-par 67, his best round ever in this six-year-old tournament. Clampett shared second with Tom Purtzer, D.A. Weibring and Lanny Wadkins, clustered at 68.

"All I could tell myself when I left that (17th) green was, 'It's only a game."" Clampett said. "I figured I had lost the ruling."

To aggravate his nerves, Clampett was forced to wait again on the 18th tee for a ruling involving the threesome in front of him. He had waited another 15 minutes before playing out the 17th hole, leaving his third shot in the bunker, blasting onto the green and two-putting from 35 feet. "It might have been the longest two holes I ever played," said Clampett, the low amateur in this international invitational a year ago. Here was the scene on the 17th, a 430-yard par-4:

Clampett and his playing partner, Mike Gove, both hit their approach shots in the back bunker a foot apart. Gove was away. He asked Clampett to mark his ball.

After holing his trap shot, Gove raked the bunker. Clampett was removing his marker and replacing his ball in the sand when he noticed a stone resting against his marker.

"It wasn't there on my original lie. Instinctively, I flicked it away," he said.

Clampett was positive he had broken the hazard rule and would draw a two-shot penalty. He asked for a ruling before he played his third. shot.

Mangum, however, delayed his decision until he telephoned P.J. Boatright, executive director of the U.S. Golf Associattion in New Jersey

"The rules of golf do not allow you to remove an obstruction in a hazard, but this was an odd situation There was precedent that gives you relief in this situation," Mangum said.

By FLOYD NORRIS Associated Press Writer

Business has not been good for the last year, but Jack Davidson thinks his truck and farm equipment dealership could have survived if it weren't for high interest rates.

"We've paid 17 to 23 percent to borrow over the last year," said the president of Jackson Kitchel Inc. of Logansport, Ind. "With inventory that you can't sell, it becomes too expensive."

As a result, the International Harvester dealer is closing its doors today after 33 years in business.

Davidson is not alone. So far this year, 5,885 businesses have failed, up 47 percent from a year ago. And 1980 was the worst year since 1967 for business failures, according to Dun & Bradstreet Corp., which keeps track of such things.

The 58-year-old Davidson is proud that he is leaving behind no debts, that neither suppliers nor customers will lose money.

"We wanted not to hurt anybody," he said, adding: "We're turning 38 people into a job market in which there are very few jobs."

The rising tide of business failures comes at a time when the economy apparently has been growing rapidly. The government says the economy grew at an annual rate of 8.4 percent in the first three months of the year, the highest rate in nearly three years:

But that growth has been uneven, and it followed a year that included a recession and finished with almost no growth.

"There are a lot of pockets of weakness in the economy," said Thomas Thomson, the chief economist of Crocker National Bank in San Francisco. "We really have several economies."

He says that while such businesses as oil drilling have never been better. "automobiles and housing are in a deep red Such industries as appliances and home furnishings have been hurt by the housing slump. Regionally, the Rocky Mountain area is booming while the industrial Midwest has major problems. There were 434 business failures last week, the highest weekly total in 20 years, according to Dun & Bradstreet, and 68 percent more than a year earlier. Some of those failures can be traced to last year's economy. "It takes some time before the failures come in," said Rowena Wyant, a vice president in Dun & Bradsreet's business economics department. "Retail firms tried to last through the end of the year, to see if Christmas would pull them out." Raymond "Buddy" Sheely ran one such retail operation, a small department store in Elizabeth City, N.C., that was started by his grandfather 78 years ago. It closed in February.

"Things were tightening up," said the 53-year-old Sheely, who notes that there had been layoffs at a local lumber mill and says his problems were aggravated by a new suburban shopping mall that hurt all downtown businesses.

While there are usually dozens of reasons for the failure of an individual company, ranging from bad management to bad luck, the increase in failures can be traced in significant part to high interest rates.

Davidson, who hopes to start a business to repair farm equipment, said he thinks those rates provided a double whammy for his business. Not only did it cost much more for him to borrow, but his customers staved away because they couldn't afford finance charges. His sales fell from $8 million in 1979 to $7 million last year, despite higher prices. High interest rates have affected all companies, but small ones are in some ways more vulnerable because they usually cannot sell stock to the public or borrow from anyone but a bank.

"Big firms can hold out. Some small ones can't, and they can't make the payments," said Rachel Balbach, an economist with the First National Bank of St. Louis. Big companies frequently can negotiate to borrow from banks at less than the prime lending rate, which is now 20 percent. But small companies often are charged rates higher than the prime.

"We've had companies tell us that they had to fire people to get the cash to pay loans," said William Dunkelberg, an economics professor at Purdue University and a consultant to the National Federation of Independent Business, a trade group for small companies. His survey says 44 percent of its members had to

The Postal Service says the five-digit ZIP Code introduced back in 1963 has reached the limits of its ability to accommodate increasing mail volume. The service wants to extend the code to nine digits. Under the present system, the first three numbers designate a major post office or a distribution facility serving a specific region. The next two identify a local post office, a city branch office or in some cities a single large office building. The proposed extended code would add a hyphen followed by two new digits indicating a sector of a community served by a specific post office or branch and another two designating a limited part of the sector — in effect, the actual delivery route. The annual mail volume in the United States is now some 105 billion pieces of which 30 percent is generated by business, according Pitney Bowes, mailing equipment manufacturer.

ing phenylpropanolamine hydrochloride and caffeine. DEAR READER - Throw those pills in the garbage can. Phenylpropanolamine hydro-chloride has been implicated in causing high blood pres-sure. It is under review by the Food and Drug Administra-tion and a number of companies that have marketed products that contain it have withdrawn their products from the market.

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Diet pills are a bad idea

My general opinion is that people should not use diet pills of any type. Too often they contain harmful substances. Caffeine in diet pills is the same as caffeine in coffee. Too much can make you nervous and jittery, also light-headed. Individuals who have a tendency to high blood pressure or other circulatory disorders should be particularly careful. Another reason you could feel exhausted is from the diet itself. We get energy from our food. When we don't eat enough and don't really have a lot of body fat reserves we do get exhausted. Also inade quate food intake, particular ly with some diet fads, lead to severe chemical changes i the body that are not health and can be dangerous.

A lot of young girls diet who should not. Being too thin can delay their normal sexual-development and affect nor-mal hormone functions.

If you really need to diet if best to follow a sensible balanced diet and lose weight very slowly. A good exercise, program with a balanced diet is also important.

The Hereford Brand will publish a Special Feature in the Classified Section called "GRADUATION '81". This is the perfect way for you to express your personal congratulations to your favorite graduate, and will make a treasured momento for the family album.
