

Reagan Suspends Delivery of Jets to Israel

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, stopping a definite ruling that isolated an agreement American-made arms sense only, is suspending delivery of four F-16s to Israel "for the being." But for now, no reprisals are being others said some action, even temporarily suspending shipments of just four planes, is necessary to drive home the point that agreements are meant to be kept. The suspension was ordered Wednesday under provisions of the 1952 Mutual Defense Assistance Agreement, in which Israel pledged not to use military equipment provided by the United States "to undertake any act of aggression against any other state." Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., criticized the action, saying that "after more thorough review, the administration will be compelled by the evidence to conclude that the mission was in fact an act of self-defense by Israel." Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., called the suspension "the right decision under the circumstances." "I agree with it and I support it," he said. The chairmen of the Senate and House Foreign Affairs committees said their panels will consider the issue soon. Senate hearings could open as early as next Wednesday. Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., chairman of the Senate committee, said either Congress or the administration can act on the possible violation. But he avoided suggesting that Congress might impose any additional punishment of Israel. Rep. Clement J. Zablocki, D-Wis., the House Foreign Affairs chairman, called Reagan's decision "measured and prudent" and added: "This decision properly upholds U.S. law regarding the use to which military equipment we sell can be put." The four F-16s, now at the General Dynamics Co. plant in Fort Worth, Texas, were to have been flown to Israel on Friday by U.S. Air Force pilots. The United States already has delivered 33 of 75 F-16s it has agreed to sell Israel as well as 25 of 40 more sophisticated F-15 fighters. The rest are in various stages of the manufacturing process. Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said Reagan personally approved the final draft of a letter by Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr., notifying congressional leaders that delivery of the four F-16s was being delayed. The letter noted that American F-15 and F-16 fighter-bombers were employed in Sunday's attack on the French-built reactor (See DELIVERY, Page 2)

Only Five Issues Listed

Clements Calls Session

By GARTH JONES, Associated Press Writer AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements told Texas

legislators Wednesday there would be a special session July 13 to reconsider their major failures of the regular session that ended June 1.

"The call will be limited to these subjects only," Clements said after listing five major issues on which compromise talks broke down in the final hours of the 140-day session.

The 30-day special session must complete its work by Aug. 11 in order to submit any proposed constitutional changes for the Nov. 3 general election, Clements said.

Clements, who said even before the regular session closed that he would call a special session later in the summer, set this agenda for the summer session:

- Repeal of the state ad valorem tax.
- Creation of a Texas water trust fund.
- Congressional redistricting.
- Revision of the property tax code.
- Consideration of the medical practice act.

If a Legislature is unable to complete its business in a regular session, the governor has the power to call one or more 30-day sessions and specify the subjects to be debated.

"I have discussed the timing of the session and the issues to be considered with Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and Speaker Bill Clayton, and we are in agreement," Clements said in a prepared statement.

"The call will be limited to these subjects only. Since the first two topics will require constitutional amendments which we want to submit to voters on the November general election ballot, early and prompt attention to these matters will be necessary."

A spokesman said Clements' call for the special session did not necessarily exclude discussion of some new plan to provide construction funds for state colleges not in the University of Texas or Texas A&M systems.

"If they could work out some sort of procedure where there would be a definite repeal of the state ad valorem tax included, the governor will consider that," said Jon Ford, the governor's press secretary.

Clements said he hoped legislative committees could begin meeting immediately "and initiate discussions on all of these issues so that solutions can be worked out in as far as possible prior to July 13."

He said he was giving legislators more than a month's notice in order that they could have adequate time to plan their summer activities and in order "that the committees can resolve some differences in advance."

Iranian President Loses Power Struggle

Bani-Sadr Ousted as Military Chief

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Atallah Ruhollah Khomeini finally decided the power struggle between Iranian President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr and the Islamic clerical elite, and Bani-Sadr has Wednesday as commander-in-chief of the armed forces, the official news agency Pars reported.

A spokesman for Khomeini said the 47-year-old economist would continue as president. But he will be a powerless figurehead since his conservative foes in the Islamic Republican Party control the Majlis, the Iranian parliament, and the government.

Lacking a strong political party of his own, Bani-Sadr had been trying to develop a power base in the armed forces to offset the clerics who control the IRP. But the Iranian Land Forces Command announced its "complete allegiance" to Khomeini "without support for any party," Tehran Radio reported. The joint staff command of the land, air and naval forces announced it would henceforth take orders from Khomeini.

Tanjung, the Yugoslav news agency, reported from Tehran that Bani-Sadr also handed in his resignation as president but Khomeini rejected it. A spokesman at the presidential office in Tehran, reached by telephone, denied this, saying Bani-Sadr's resignation as president "has been ready" since last year and Khomeini has not accepted it.

A spokeswoman at Bani-Sadr's office said he was in western Iran Wednesday inspecting the battlefield, and had no public comment on his dismissal.

Since the late Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi was overthrown in February 1979, two principal factions — one liberal and secular, the other ultra-conservative and dominated by the Moslem clergy — have vied for control of the Iranian revolution and its course.

The liberals scored when Bani-Sadr, who spent 17 years in the West, won the presidency in January 1980. But the clerics and their party won overwhelming control of the Majlis in elections later in the year and took over the government.

In the power struggle that followed, the clerics and their political front man, Prime Minister Mohammad Ali Rajai, denounced the Western orientation of their opponents. The liberals charged that the clerics were out of touch with the modern world and their government was incompetent and incapable of rebuilding the economy.

That feller on Tierra Blanca Creek says many self-made men made their heads too big.

As the bank robbers were finishing their job, they noticed the gagged cashier making expressions that indicated he wanted to talk to them. When they removed the gag, he pleaded, "Take the books, too. I'm $3,000 short!"

Stories in various publications lately have indicated that the long-term migration from rural and small community areas into the big cities has not only slowed but is being reversed.

The Wall Street Journal recently had a story about the difficulties large companies are having in moving their executives into large cities these days, and how a great many companies are moving to the suburbs because people are happier and work better there instead of the cities.

One example was given of a Spencer Beef Co. executive who turned down a promotion to Chicago from Spencer, an Iowa city of 12,000 people. He finally quit the company rather than move to Chicago and cited a number of reasons for the decision.

Foremost was the feeling of belonging that he had in a small town where people knew him and he knew them. He felt more like a person than a faceless statistic in a big city and that is important.

Senate Endorses Cutbacks In Food Stamp Program

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration's proposal to drop nearly 1 million persons from the food stamp program and reduce benefits for millions more has gone to the House after overwhelming Senate approval. Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kansas, said the Senate bill, similar to one pending in the House, "minimizes the impact of the president's budget cuts on the poor people of this country."

Dole, chairman of the Agriculture subcommittee on nutrition, said Wednesday's action also restores "an image of dignity and integrity to the food stamp program."

In other congressional business Wednesday:

—Budget Director David Stockman had an evening meeting with House Republican leaders to discuss how to keep the Democratic majority from unraveling the president's budget-cutting blueprint on the House floor.

Stockman said afterwards that some committees are not following the "letter or spirit" of the blueprint as they scramble to meet a Friday deadline to slash $35 billion from the budget for fiscal 1982, which begins Oct. 1.

Republicans say they will try to convince conservative Democrats to join them on the floor to substitute the president's cuts for any deviations backed by Democratic leaders and approved by the Budget Committee.

—The president's tax advisers, saying they have the votes to enact his three-year tax-reduction plan, were having no part of proposed Democratic compromise to implement the final year's cuts only if inflation is contained.

—A report adopted by the House Government Operations Committee concluded that the administration, by adopting policies "suggestive of amnesty," has systematically gutted Energy Department efforts to prosecute major oil companies for up to $7 billion in alleged illegal overcharges when domestic prices were controlled.

—The Senate Banking Committee voted to cut federal housing subsidies by more than $20 billion, give local officials more control over housing aid and raise rents for tenants in subsidized housing.

Iraq to Pressure For Sanctions on Israel

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Iraq is expected to press for international economic sanctions against Israel as Arab League foreign ministers meet here today to discuss a united response to Israel's destruction of an Iraqi nuclear reactor.

Western and Third World diplomats in the Iraqi capital say the Baghdad regime will seek "practical" economic sanctions rather than military retaliation against Israel or an oil embargo against its allies.

The United States, which supplied the F-15 and F-16 fighters Israel used in Sunday's lightning raid, is likely to draw strong condemnation from the Arab foreign ministers.

"There is a limit to what they (Iraq) can do in the way of retaliation, so I think they will try to get as broad a front of international political condemnation of Israel as they can," said a Third World diplomat, whose country condemned the Israeli raid as a "criminal act."

The diplomat, who said he was speaking privately and asked that his name not be used, speculated that the Iraqis want to gain the support of the United States and the Soviet Union against Israel, and want to avoid polarizing the issue along superpower lines.

However, he added, if the (See SANCTIONS, Page 2)

A: The Brand checked with local Postmaster Nolan Grady, who said that the hours that the post office lobby is open is not subject to regulation, and left to be determined by local conditions. Grady said, however, that as of Sunday, June 7 the lobby has been left unlocked, and will continue to be left open until vandals get out of hand as it did in the past. Grady reminded us that the lobby doors had been locked in the past due to a "critical amount" of vandalism which had occurred.

Teen Convicted Of Raping Coed

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — Jurors who took just 26 minutes to convict a 16-year-old Abilene boy of aggravated rape were ordered back to the courtroom today to begin considering the teen-ager's punishment.

Vincent Timothy Lee Evans, who was certified to stand trial as an adult, could get from five years to life in prison for his conviction Wednesday in the Jan. 25 rape of a Hardin-Simmons University coed.

Evans was arrested in the woman's dormitory room after the coed said she persuaded him to let her go to the bathroom and instead went to tell a security guard a man was in her room.

"I was shaking all over, inside and out," she testified. "All I could do was pray to God I could make it through this alive."

Defense attorney John Saringer raised the issue of consent during cross-examination of state witnesses, pointing out that the coed did not immediately report the rape.

However, the 21-year-old woman testified she didn't tell police at first "because I didn't feel I wanted to be disgraced any more."

She reported the rape three hours later after discussing the assault with volunteers at the Rape Crisis Center and with her mother by telephone.

The woman told Saringer that at one point she offered to help Evans sneak out of the dormitory and past the security guards.

"I wished he was out of there. I was hoping I could go back to sleep and wake up the next morning and think it was all a bad nightmare," she said.

Car Crashes Into Road Crew

HOUSTON (AP) — A 58-year-old insurance secretary has been charged with negligent homicide after her car crashed into a construction site on a Houston freeway Wednesday, killing two road workers.

Dead at the scene were Wallace Walker, 48, and Juan Cantu Baez, 44. Two other workers injured were listed in stable condition at a Houston hospital Wednesday night.

A fifth member of the road crew was not hurt, police said. Houston police investigators said Ms. Blackburn's car apparently veered out of control early Wednesday morning, plowing into the blocked-off construction area in the right lane of the highway.

Dick Kabat, district administrative engineer for the Texas Department of Highways, said the death toll for Houston road construction workers since the beginning of 1980 now has risen to 12. He said 25 others were injured during the same period.

All of the incidents involved automobiles running into road repair sites, Kabat said.

Police said Ms. Blackburn and a passenger in her car, Lucille Hudiburth, 73, were not seriously injured.

Bilingual Order May Not Be Met

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas' new commissioner for education said Wednesday he may have to go to prison if a court order mandating bilingual education in Texas stands.

Raymon Bynum told members of the Gulf Coast School Boards Association that it will be impossible to meet the order imposed by U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice. Texas has been told to provide bilingual education through all grades within six years.

"I may have to go to Seagoville (federal prison)," Bynum said. "There's no way we can meet the court order now or seven or eight years from now."

Bynum said he must cut school districts' state funds by ten percent if they do not comply with the order within 30 days. Texas has appealed Justice's order and the U.S. Supreme Court has agreed to hear the case.

There is not enough state money to pay for the additional bilingual teachers required by Justice's order, Bynum told the educators.

Final Arguments Set in Teen's Trial

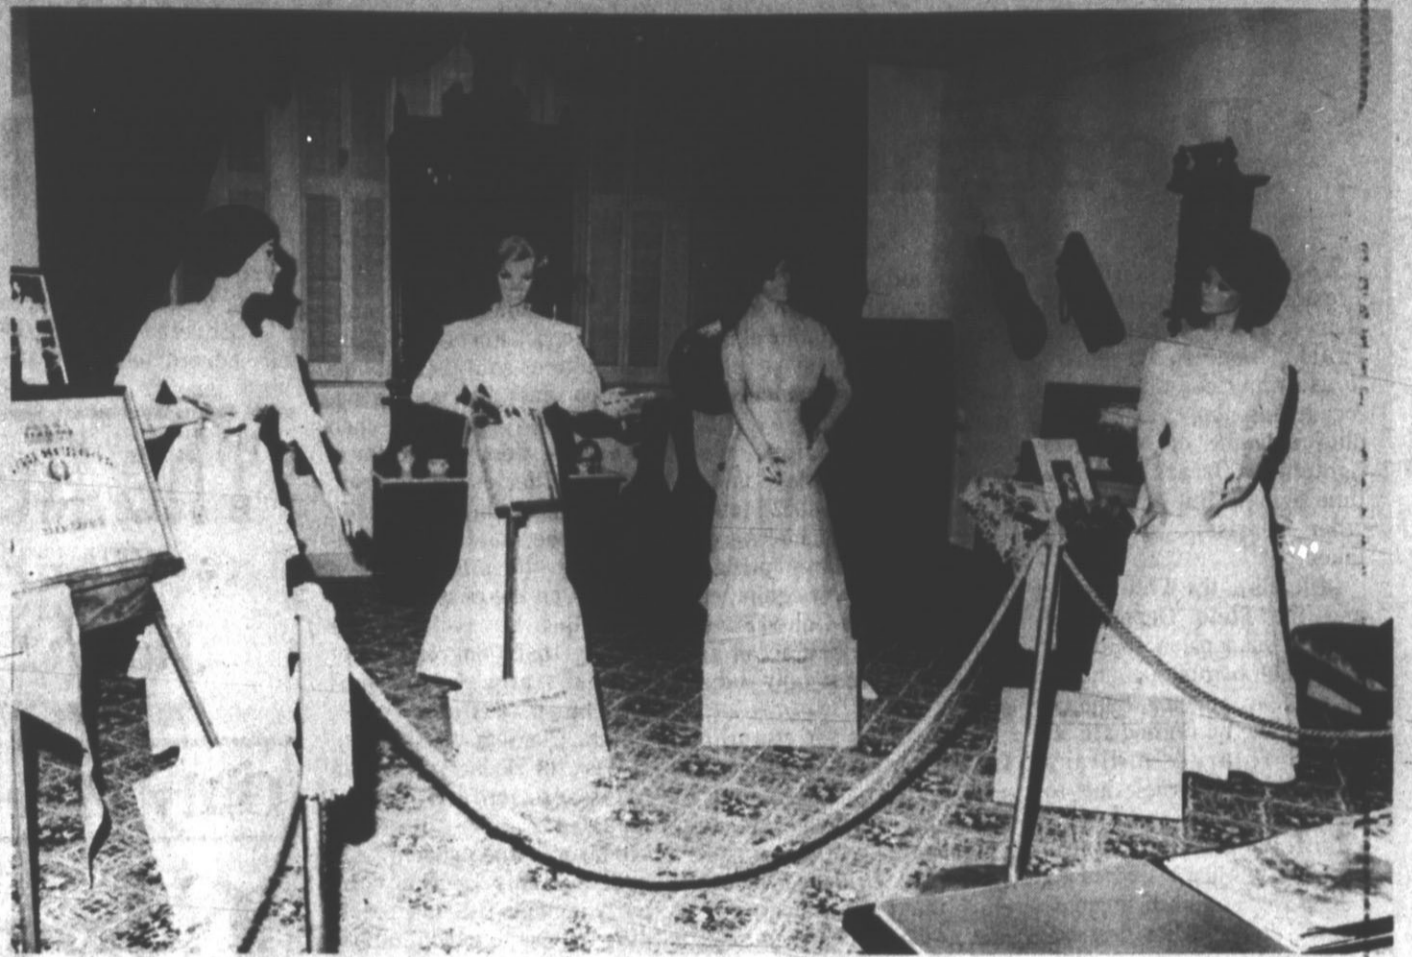

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — An El Paso teen-ager who has been sentenced to death plus 20 years for two killings should learn in court today whether he also will be convicted of jail escape.

El Paso District Judge Woodrow Bean II scheduled final arguments today on the charge that Efron Castro Ibanez, 18, stabbed a guard and tried to get away from the El Paso County Jail by shinning down a fire hose last March 22.

On Wednesday, another jury that convicted Ibanez of voluntary manslaughter in a two-day trial sentenced him to 20 years in the penitentiary. That term is to be served consecutively with a death sentence announced by an El Paso jury earlier this year.

Communist Central Committee Gives Party Chief a Reprieve

By THOMAS W. NETTER
Associated Press Writer

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — The Communist Party Central Committee gave party chief Stanislaw Kania a reprieve Wednesday night, ducking a showdown vote on his refusal to crush the liberal movement and leaving him in control despite Soviet criticism.

The 140-member committee adjourned after a heated, two-day debate at which hardliner Tadeusz Grabski charged that the 11-man party Politburo, of which he is a member, "in its present composition and under the leadership of Kania is unable to lead the country out of the crisis."

Kania proposed an immediate vote of confidence in each member of the Politburo, the Polish news agency PAP reported. A majority of the committee rejected this after a lengthy debate, postponing the crucial test for Poland's top party leaders.

The meeting was held after receipt of a letter from the Soviet Communist Party's Central Committee urging a crackdown on "counter-revolution" in the party and the Solidarity labor federation.

The letter said Kania and Premier Wojciech Jaruzelski promised tough action but instead conceded and compromised. It called on the Polish party to "reverse the course of events" and again raised the threat of Soviet military intervention, saying: "The offensive by anti-socialist forces...threatens the interests of all our community, its cohesion, its integrity, its security and its borders."

Kania at the opening of the committee meeting said the party would curb unrest but would continue the reforms begun last year when he replaced Edward Gierek after the nationwide wave of strikes that produced the independent labor movement and a growing reform movement among the party rank and file.

While Grabski and others called for stiffer measures, other members of the divided committee backed Kania's approach.

Politburo member Kazimierz Barcikowski said Kania's promised crackdown coupled with continued reform is "the best political line for Poland and the party and are by no means a capitulation line."

When Deputy Premier Mieczyslaw Rakowski also spoke up for Kania's leadership, he was interrupted by the stamping feet of other committee members but responded, "By thumping you cannot thump out reality."

Some speakers proposed postponing the party congress scheduled next month to debate the sweeping reforms instituted since last summer's strikes and approve the future course for the country.

Rakowski said delaying the congress would "open up the door to decay of the party and confrontation."

Letter to the Editor

Editor's Note: This letter was sent to USDA prior to the June 10th wheat report which revised the U.S. wheat production forecast down from 2.7 billion bushels to 2.013 billion bushels.

Dear Secretary Block:

As the battle for Middle America intensifies and those of us who are involved in producing the nation's food and fiber find ourselves pinned down on the beach much as those who fought for America were on Omaha Beach years ago today, I want to express a few thoughts to you. Your integrity and strong efforts in our behalf in the past few months are much appreciated, and I feel that I can express some broadly held concerns with you openly.

The drain of liquidity for American farmers, began in earnest with the craven betrayal of public trust by Clarence Palmy in 1972. The corruption which gave Russia, the members of the grain cartel, and Mr. Palmy cheap grain, windfall profits, and a 'lifetime job' respectively cost the U.S. billions of dollars, and this issue will yet come both before our courts and before our people in the media.

The hundreds of farmers in this area with whom I communicate have not wanted, nor do they want, government handouts. What we do want is an unmanipulated, fair, open, marketplace. The damage done by presidents Nixon, Ford and Carter with their embargoes must not be repeated by this administration, and we appreciate your efforts to get the selective Carter embargo terminated.

There is, however, another issue of great concern to us.

The most recent U.S.D.A. grain reports are probably going to prove to be the most inaccurate in the history of U.S.D.A. Part of this is due to the heavy rains that have made huge areas almost hopeless as far as ever getting the grain out before the fields are taken over by weeds and sunflowers. Part of it is due to the fact that much of the acreage is on non-historic wheat ground, and the harvest logistics will be difficult at best.

It is obvious that there are those who would like to pull another 1972 on the American farmer, buying the wheat at well below the cost of production, and then reaping hundreds of millions of dollars in profits far above reason. If you do not at least flag the potential harvest threats which are now existing, another of many grave threats will have been actuated against the future of our nation as we know it. The market is depressed because of rosy 2.7 billion bu. wheat harvest projections which will not happen.

Those of us in this area who have any contacts at all over the nation know that the harvest has already been shortened greatly by frost on May 10, by hail and by continuing rains in much of the "new" wheat area. We are putting on record right now that the harvest will be closer to 2 billion bu. of wheat than to your figures of 2.7. We ask you to at least flag for the market the potential and existing weather problems.

Sincerely,
Frank Ford

United States does not support Arab League proposals against Israel at the United Nations then there may be a move toward more radical measures against Israel and the United States, possibly including an oil embargo.

Iraq broke diplomatic relations with the United States during the 1967 Arab-Israeli war, but American diplomats have been engaged in fence mending operations here for the past year.

The chief of the U.S. Interests Section in Baghdad was summoned to the Foreign Ministry after the Israeli raid. Western diplomats said Foreign Minister Saadoun Hammadi "expressed concern" about the implications of the raid for U.S.-Iraqi relations.

Other Arab groups have called for stern punishment of Israel and the United States.

Yasser Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization called for "collective Arab retaliation in the political, economic and other spheres," and six members of Kuwait's Parliament demanded an oil embargo to punish the United States.

But Arab observers in the Persian Gulf region said Saudi Arabia would not go along with any such action. They predicted the Baghdad meeting would end with resolutions sharply condemning Israel and pressuring the United States to rein in its ally.

Moving to blunt Arab criticism, the Reagan administration announced Wednesday it was suspending the shipment of four F-16 jets to Israel.

Prior to the administration's announcement, Ambassador Clovis Maksud, the Arab League observer at the United Nations, said halting the delivery would serve as a warning to Israel and a "symbolic gesture of evenhandedness" to the Arabs.

However, after the suspension was announced, an Iraqi spokesman at the United Nations said the action was not enough and would not deter his government from seeking "maximum punishment" of Israel through the U.N. Security Council, which is scheduled to debate the issue on Friday.

Salah al-Mukhtar, press counselor of the Iraqi U.N. mission, said his nation will demand an international arms embargo against Israel, as well as economic and technological sanctions.

ing that his revolution would collapse into factional strife, tried to act as a balance between the two sides and until this year appeared to favor neither. But in recent months, as the bickering got louder and Bani-Sadr was unable to galvanize the armed forces into a decisive victory in the war against Iraq, he favored the clerics more and more.

Last week a special commission accused the president of violating the constitution by refusing to ratify some of Rajal's Cabinet appointments. It recommended that legal action against him be considered.

chains away from the big cities into smaller communities because they have found that sales are generated as well, if not better, in small towns. Most larger cities are also jammed with retail stores.

There is also a trend in the nation's medical and dental schools for doctors to look at settling in smaller communities. There has been a chronic shortage of doctors and dentists in the small towns because doctors have chosen to practice in the cities where they have larger medical facilities and access to more specialized assistance in the field.

The cities are getting well supplied with doctors, so eventually doctors will discover that they can practice medicine just as well and make just as much money in the smaller communities.

There is more to life than making money, and contentment with one's home town has to outweigh a lot of monetary matters. After all, you can't take it with you and you may as well enjoy it while you're here.

Delivery

near the Iraqi capital of Baghdad. Haig said "a substantial violation" of the 1952 arms agreement "may have occurred."

Speakes said the action has no effect on delivery of several major pieces of equipment to Israel, starting in July.

The Israeli reaction was made known through Ambassador Ephraim Evron, who met with Haig at the State Department shortly before the suspension was announced.

"It is particularly regretful

that the administration's punitive action was taken against an ally, while Iraq, which has severed diplomatic relations with the United States, has actively subverted and opposed America's objectives in the Middle East," Evron said in a statement.

Earlier, Evron told reporters that Israel believes that no suspension of deliveries is justified and that the United States should live up to "its agreements and commitments" to deliver the planes.

What's Reagan Doing to SS?

What is President Reagan trying to do to your Social Security?

From the florid oratory of the Kennedys and Moynihans and from some Republicans, you could easily conclude that President Reagan is launching an inhuman war on old people.

The big lie is convincing. The U.S. Senate's most recent public approval rating declined from 73 percent to 66 percent. Approval among retirees declined a stunning 16 points!

So what's the real poop? The U.S. Senate has voted 96 to 0 that President Reagan will not be allowed to discourage anyone from retiring at 62.

Obviously, Republicans as well as Democrats are willing to ignore economic realities in favor of some further political palliative.

Americans now on Social Security can lose their full benefits in only one way—bankruptcy of the system. That is what the Reagan administration is courageously trying to prevent.

Ironically, the president was prepared last March to leave Social Security untouched and seek other funding for it. It was members of Congress who began insisting on "bigger cuts in federal spending."

That is when the White House offered to consider the following: Leave everybody presently on Social Security alone. Let him or her continue to collect full benefits including inflation-prescribed increases.

However, in the future, anybody retiring early—at age 62—would receive reduced payments. Thus over five years to contribute $19 billion toward the solvency of the system.

But before the politically oriented senators dared head home for their spring holiday, they voted unanimously against this idea which, in fact, had been encouraged by members of the Senate and House.

Rather than sound piqued or petulant, President Reagan has quietly responded with an invitation to members of Congress to "offer some suggestions" of their own.

They don't want that. Every member of the Senate and the House has to know that Social Security recipients are about to drown in red ink. This must not be allowed. It will not be allowed. But Democrats particularly are determined that whatever belt-tightening is called for, the president's name must be on it!

For the record here is as much as the president has proposed:

Full retirement benefits for 31 million Social Security recipients will continue.

Medicare will not be cut. Supplemental income for the blind, disabled and aged will not be cut.

Veterans' benefits will be increased.

Every American who cannot afford adequate food will continue to get food stamps.

In essence, the genuinely needy will be cared for.

It must be the less "genuine" who are doing all the hollering.

Jason is seven years old and will also attend Northwest Elementary School next year. He plays T-Ball for the Cardinals and plans to be in Bluejays. He likes baseball and football. Jason has also been attending the Campfire Day Camp.

The Cochran family are members of the First Christian Church.

With such a busy family Mrs. Cochran likes food that she is able to put on to cook and forget about until mealtime. Below is her recipe for Chili which is her family's favorite. Sounds good for a rainy night!

Meats

CHILI
2 to 3 lbs. ground meat
2 medium onions, chopped
2 cloves garlic, chopped
1 tablespoon vinegar
2 large cans cooked tomatoes or 6 to 7 fresh, ripe tomatoes finely cut
1 or 2 large cans tomato juice
1 large can tomato paste
2 heaping "cooking spoonfuls" chili powder
1 or 2 dried red chili peppers

Brown ground meat and chopped onions together with salt and pepper. Drain. Place meat and onions in a 6 or 8 quart or larger cooking pot. Add all remaining ingredients. Season to taste and simmer 2 hours or longer. Makes a quick, hot meal served with salad and cornbread.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: You have spoken out on beha! of security guards, waitresses, cab drivers, butchers, meter-readers, secretaries, hairdressers, telephone operators, airline personnel and schoolteachers. Now will you please say something to help out the poor, beleaguered receptionist?

I have been in my job for 16 years and know it from A to Z. Why, oh why, do some people feel it is perfectly all right to come over and pester the receptionist instead of sitting down and waiting for their company person? Almost always it is the men who do this. Rarely is it a woman. These pests stand at my elbow, making small talk-or worse yet, telling jokes. "I have gone so far as to say, "I have work to finish. Will you please take a seat?" and still they hang around.

I have been asked for pencils, pens, a piece of paper, Scotch tape, matches, cigarettes and "something interesting to read." Some boors ask me to call their offices and leave messages. Others have asked if they can use my telephone to make personal calls.

Then there are the jerks who work for this company, who, at holiday time, bring in presents and cards for ME to distribute. But never is there a card or a gift for me.

Thanks a million for letting me have my say.-I Speak For Thousands

DEAR SPEAK: And now that I've printed it, maybe you ought to clip it and keep it handy for the next pest who is hard up for "something interesting to read."

DEAR ANN LANDERS: In July I will be marrying a fantastic man. Over a seven-year period (between 10 and 17 years of age) I was physically and sexually abused by my father. I tried twice to tell my mother. She threatened to kick me out of the house for "making up such lies."

A few years ago I was lucky enough to meet up with the right psychiatrist. He helped me overcome the guilt and shame and now I feel good about myself. I am 28, very successful in my field and have managed to maintain a casual relationship with my family.

I can handle having my father at my wedding but I don't want him to give me in marriage. How do I get around it without squealing?

I have no desire to humiliate him. Please advise.-Kim From Tucson

DEAR KIM: Pick someone else to do the honors. Make no excuses or apologies. If your father sets up a squak, tell him in private that if he insists on giving YOU away, you will be forced to give HIM away. That should settle his hash.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a salesperson in a retail shoe store. I am sick of customers who come in as we are locking the door and say, "Just made it, didn't I?"

These people keep us from 30 to 45 minutes after closing time to "try on one more." How would they like it if we went to their jobs or homes and kept them from an appointment or dinner by refusing to leave?

Most business establishments have the hours posted on the door. Ann, please tell these people to read the hours of operation and give themselves enough time to shop and get out by closing. If they knew how aggravating it is to miss buses, trains, rides with friends and in-town appointments, they'd give us a break.-Night Owl Trapped in Ohio

Cats Useful 101 Ways...After Death?

NEW YORK (AP)— There may be more than one way to skin a cat, but only one man is willing to risk the wrath of 23 million cat lovers with 101 suggestions for what to do with the hide.

That man is Simon Bond, a 33-year-old Englishman who professes to love cats even though they make him sneeze.

His best-selling book, entitled "101 Uses for a Dead Cat," is a dementedly whimsical collection of cartoons purporting to show how cats can be useful even after they've exhausted their nine lives.

Some call it disgusting, obscene, sadistic, horrible and sick. Others call it very funny. And everybody calls it very, very successful.

Already, 200,000 copies of the $2.95 book published by Clarkson N. Potter Inc. of New York are in print, pushing it well past the "cat books" it spoofs.

It's even more popular than the recent publishing phenomenon "The Official Preppie Handbook," which spoofed an altogether different sort of cat.

Bond's uncaptioned drawings show stuffed cats used as bookends on the mantle above a fireplace and as little throw rugs, like bearskins, before the hearth.

Bond, who said he got the idea for the 95-page book during a conversation with friends in Britain's zany Monty Python comedy troupe, has sketched rigor mortis cats with tails sharpened so they can be thrown at dartboards. "Weirdness," wrote Nancy Orr of Tampa, Fla.

One of Bond's kitty carcasses has been hollowed into a bowling ball bag; several others are mounted above prison fences with their tiny ears holding barbed wire in place.

A cat's foreleg serves as a tone arm on a phonograph and a carcass draped over a teapot as a cozy. One flattened kitty, grasped by the tail, serves as a tennis racket. Another squished feline, without tail, is a perfect Frisbee.

One writer, W. Michael Long, suggested another book: "101 Uses for a Dead Simon Bond."

The book also depicts four cats as dining table legs, while a cat on its hind-quarters with forelegs extended is a functional wine rack. Two tails are portrayed as windshield wipers and little paws are transformed into rubber stamps.

"Horrible," wrote Laurie Zane. "This man must be a sad and despicable human being." Actually, Bond is a rather impish fellow whose asthma and allergies led him to move to Phoenix, Ariz., several years ago.

His cartoons have been published in magazines like Esquire and the New Yorker, but Bond swore in an interview that he had never earned more than $10,000 in a single year - until now.

He said "101 Uses" was put together for fun, not money.

"I couldn't have done the book if I thought it was terrible," he protested. "I'm the first to start sneezing when a cat comes round, but I'm also the first to start petting it."

Nancy White Kahan, the publicist promoting "101 Uses," says more than 200,000 copies of the book have been printed, and booksellers are ordering in quantities surpassing the previous record fast-seller, "The Official Preppie Handbook." This week "101 Uses" hit No. 7 on the New York Times list of trade book bestsellers and No. 1 on the Walden and Dalton bestseller lists.

At Wits End By ERMA BOMBECK

On television the other night, a beautiful woman answered her phone and told the caller he had the wrong number. They talked for 20 minutes, speculating on what each looked like and how much they had in common and when they were going to get together.

I never talked to a wrong number in my life who didn't break the phone in half hanging up.

It's usually, "Hello! Jean?"

"No, this is not Jean."

"Who is this?"

"What number were you calling?"

"I'm calling 555-5855."

"I'm sorry, but that's not the number you dialed and there's no Jean here."

"Then why did you answer the phone, bimbo?"

Thirty seconds later when the phone rings again and I know Big Al is ready to "reach out and crush somebody" and he's going to be ticked that he didn't get Jean again, I say, "Hi, there. You're still dialing the wrong number." Then my mother answers, "Look, I know my own daughter's voice and if you don't want to talk to me just say so," and hangs up.

A lot of people I know get some really wonderful wrong numbers. A reader who lives in the Southwest has a reverse number of a desert museum. He gets wonderful calls and has a fun time with them like "What do you charge for children under 12?" And he answers, "I'm temporarily out of stock but expect more in at the end of the week."

One day he got a call that asked, "There's a turtle dove in my backyard with a broken wing. What should I do?"

He told her to dress it and have it for dinner.

At present, we're a digit away from a travel bureau. Travelers are not happy people. They don't even say hello. They want to know where their luggage is. Where their refund is. Where their ticket is.

The other night I was out in the yard. When I heard the phone ring, I put down the garden hose which spun around crazy and soaked me before I could turn it off. I tripped over the dog who yelped in pain. I turned off the TV set, ran to the kitchen where I slipped on the tile and twisted my knee, and answered the phone on the sixth ring.

The voice said suspiciously, "Is this John?"

I said yes.

Permit for Guest Worker a Possibility

HARLINGEN, Texas (AP) — Immigration officials say they wonder how they could enforce a proposed temporary "guest worker" program and still ensure that participants return to Mexico once their permits expire.

"We let someone in on a temporary basis and they want to stay. They see so many things are so much better here," said Larry Richardson, chief agent for the McAllen sector of the U.S. Border Patrol.

President Reagan and Mexican President Jose Lopez Portillo talked about such a program this week as a means to relieve economic pressure many poor Mexican nationals feel to illegally enter the United States.

Richardson and other South Texas immigration officials said Wednesday they have not been consulted about the plan but feel it could work if implemented correctly.

"If they were selective with the people admitted, it's a feasible idea," said Robert Wooten, a 19-year Border Patrol veteran in Brownsville. "They should be screened to weed out those with a prior record who would be a poor risk."

"From what I have read about this, the program proposed by Gov. Bill Clements, they would be allowed to seek employment anywhere in the United States. This would create a problem," said Hal Bouldin, district director for the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

Since 1979, Clements has backed a program to let Mexican citizens enter the country legally and find jobs anywhere for a limited time.

Bouldin questioned how American officials could keep track of each worker. Immigration agents say many foreigners are admitted temporarily but decide to stay illegally.

"It would be a physical impossibility to check every one of these people," said Wooten.

"I don't know what the immigration service would do if a lot of them were admitted and went to the East or Northeast, places that are not policed, per se, by the border patrol," Wooten said. "They'd have to make drastic changes in the immigration service."

Initial proposals seem to differ from the bracero program of the 1950s in which Mexican nationals contracted for work at specific agricultural jobs.

The bracero program has been criticized by Mexican-American civil rights groups as amounting to "legal slavery."

In terms of enforcement, though, the bracero program was easy to administer, Bouldin said.

Processing centers in Mexico gave bracero participants their documents and assignments, he said, and that aspect should be considered if the guest worker program ever is implemented.

"It would seem to me if they are not processed outside the United States, we would have to have large processing centers set up at the border," Bouldin said. "We do not have a facility to handle that now."

Employers who hire illegal aliens currently are not subject to penalty. Under a guest worker program, sanctions against employers who knowingly hire undocumented workers have been proposed.

Although many workers would enter the United States through South Texas, most probably would head north for construction and higher paying jobs, Richardson said.

Ludden Dies After Bout With Cancer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A memorial service was scheduled for Thursday for popular game show host Allen Ludden, who died at age 63 after a lengthy bout with cancer.

Ludden, the longtime show host of TV's "Password" and "G.E. College Bowl," died early Tuesday at Good Samaritan Hospital in Los Angeles, said hospital spokeswoman Betty Sheller.

At his bedside was his wife, Betty White, who had been with him almost constantly since Ludden was hospitalized a week ago, said family spokeswoman Pat Schrott.

"He was a very dear friend to me and my wife, both off and on the tube," said Tom Kennedy, who succeeded Ludden as host of "Password" after the actor suffered a seizure last October. "No one will ever fill his shoes. We're just thankful for having had a friend like him during our lives."

Ludden had been in and out of the hospital in recent months due to ailments stemming from the cancer, which was diagnosed a year and a half ago, said Miss White's publicist, Larry Bloustein. A malignancy had been removed from Ludden's side in an operation last year.

Last fall, during a visit to Northern California, Ludden lapsed into a coma and was forced to leave "Password," which he had emceed since its inception in 1961. Doctors diagnosed the seizure as being caused by a calcium imbalance related to cancer therapy.

As late as this January, Ludden said he hoped to return to the screen, but he never did. His only acting since then was in two brief radio spots for the Southern California Gas Co. in February.

Ludden, a native of Mineral Point, Wis., began his broadcast career before World War II.

After teaching high school English in Austin, Texas, and working briefly at radio station KEYS in Corpus Christi, Texas, Ludden entered the Army in 1942. He produced and directed 40 radio shows in the Pacific and, after the war, became personal manager of Shakespearean actor Maurice Evans.

Following a stint at radio station WTIC in Hartford, Conn., Ludden in 1953 became moderator of the radio forerunner of "G.E. College Bowl" and emceed the popular television quiz show for four years starting in 1959.

From 1967 to 1969 he also was program director for WCBS radio in New York City and for two years after that was director of programs for all CBS-owned radio stations. Before moving to "Password" he was director of creative services for CBS News. There he served as voice coach to newsmen Harry Reasoner and Charles Kuralt.

But "Password," in which contestants tried to figure out a mystery word based on one-word clues given by a partner, was where Ludden made his most lasting mark. It became a hit on prime-time television, and, in its heyday, attracted celebrity guests who never before wanted to appear on game shows, including Lucille Ball, Fred Astaire, Jack Benny and Olivia de Havilland.

The show left CBS after six years but returned to the air in syndication during the 1970s and was most recently on NBC.

House Sanctions Curbs Court-Ordered Busing

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House, reflecting the new conservative trend in Congress, is sanctioning curbs on court-ordered busing of school children to achieve racial desegregation.

The sponsor of the measure, Rep. James Collins, R-Texas, predicted Tuesday that the House-backed curbs would pass the Republican-controlled Senate and be signed into law by President Reagan, who already has said he opposes court-ordered busing.

"This is a different year and we have a different president and we have a different Senate," Collins said.

Last year, a similar effort passed the House and a reluctant Senate only to be vetoed by then-President Carter.

The busing amendment, attached to a bill authorizing funds for the Justice Department in fiscal 1982, easily passed the House on Tuesday.

spending any of its money to require any student to be bused to any school other than the one nearest his or her home. It makes exceptions for physically and mentally handicapped students who might need to attend special schools.

The measure would apply only to future Justice department actions and would not affect any suits now in progress.

Collins said the amendment means "you can't force any student to go beyond the school nearest his home."

The amendment, supported by both Democrats and Republicans, attracted little debate.

Democrats, led by Southern conservatives, supported the proposal by 120-98 margin. Republicans backed it by 145-24.

Opposition came both from Rep. Peter Rodino, D-N.J., head of the House Judiciary Committee, and from Rep. Don Edwards, D-Calif., chairman of the Judiciary Committee's subcommittee on civil and constitutional rights subcommittee.

Rodino contended the nation still has many illegally segregated schools and the Justice Department should be given whatever tools necessary to remedy the situation.

Edwards contended the bill would set back integration by 25 years.

But Collins cited public opinion polls showing 72 percent of all Americans oppose forced busing.

And Rep. Bobbi Feidler, R-Calif., who began her political career as a staunch foe of busing in Los Angeles, argued that busing had failed to improve the quality of education.

Adoption of the amendment came shortly before the House passed the overall bill, which authorizes the Justice Department to spend up to $2.3 billion in fiscal year 1982.

Collins called the passage "the biggest win we ever had" in 12 years of fighting school busing. "It's the real breakthrough," he said.

Collins noted that the last time the House considered the amendment, the vote was 209-190. This time, the margin was 265-122 — a switch of about 70 votes.

The bill prohibits the Justice Department from and Patrick Leahy of Vermont, were joined by Republican Charles McC. Mathias of Maryland in voting against the bill, which was approved after only perfunctory debate.

On the Senate floor, Leahy is expected to urge that the crimes specified in the bill be made punishable by a mandatory life sentence.

Thurmond's amendment to include attempted assassination of the president says such an attack could bring the death penalty if it "results in bodily injury to the president or otherwise comes dangerously close to causing the death of the president."

In recent rulings, the Supreme Court has excluded rape and other crimes from death sentences, and many scholars believe that only if a crime results in death should it be punishable by execution.

Sen. Howell Heflin, D-Ala., like Thurmond a former judge, voted against Thurmond's amendment, saying he believed it contradicted existing Supreme Court rulings.

Capital punishment critics, pointing to the high proportion of black criminals executed over the years, cite the death penalty as an example of racial prejudice in law enforcement.

Death Penalty Still A Question

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Judiciary Committee is recommending restoration of the federal death penalty amid charges that the legislation is unconstitutional.

The committee voted 13-5 on Tuesday to re-establish the death penalty for a number of federal crimes, including aircraft hijacking, the attempted or actual assassination of a president, kidnapping, treason and espionage.

The vote makes it almost certain that capital punishment will be the first major social issue the Republican-controlled Senate will consider this year.

Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., the committee chairman, has made the death penalty a major priority. After President Reagan was shot in an assassination attempt March 30, he pushed for an amendment to make an attempt on a president's life a capital offense.

The death penalty was approved by the judiciary panel last year but did not reach the full Senate. With a new conservative, Republican majority, however, passage seems likely in 1981.

Groups such as the American Civil Liberties Union say the proposal approved Tuesday is unconstitutional and will face court challenges if it becomes law.

Any funds raised in excess of that needed to send Brinkley to Arlington will go into the troop's outdoor fund.

DAR Plans Celebration Saturday at Black House

Los Ciboleros Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution is celebrating National Flag Day with a tea at the E.B. Black Historical House this Saturday from 3-5 p.m.

The chapter will be honoring its State Regent, Jayne Brainard at this tea. Special guests will be members of the DAR Chapters of the Panhandle Division.

There will be a called meeting of local chapter members immediately following the tea with two items to be acted upon.

Members are encouraged to attend the meeting.

Boy Scout Troop 52, sponsored by the First Methodist Church, will hold a 32-family garage sale this Saturday to help raise money to send a troop member to the National Boy Scout Jamboree in Arlington, Va. next month.

Reconciliation Works for U.S.-China Trade

NEW YORK (AP) — For American business, a decade of rebuilding trade relations with China has been a little like reconciling a broken marriage.

At first it was euphoria; then came a letdown. Now, 10 years after the lifting of the U.S. trade embargo against China, the relationship has settled into a period of steady growth and modest expectations.

The value of trade between the two nations rose from virtually nothing in 1971 to $4.9 billion last year, when U.S. sales to China reached $3.7 billion — about 2 percent of total U.S. exports. Government officials say two-way trade could climb to $7 billion in 1981.

Despite recent gains, the road to more prosperous trade with China has been dotted with potholes.

Some U.S. businessmen, agog at the potential for profit in a foreign market of nearly 1 billion people, at first thought of China as an instant gold mine. Dwight Perkins, an economics professor and China specialist at Harvard University, calls that the "Billion-Customer Syndrome."

The excitement faded as it became clear that closer commercial ties to China depended less on capitalist ingenuity than a gradual acceptance by the Chinese of Western political and economic policies.

President Nixon lifted the trade embargo June 10, 1971. As recently as 1977, two-way U.S.-China trade was only $874 million.

But in 1978, China disclosed a 10-year plan aimed at propelling the world's most populous country into the front ranks of industrial nations. A key to the strategy was use of foreign trade to get the latest technology in agriculture, industry, science and defense.

And in January 1979, the U.S. normalized diplomatic relations with China, opening the trade door still wider. The governments further eased trade restrictions in place since the communist takeover in China in 1949 — including U.S. tariffs on Chinese imports.

It seemed as though the golden era of U.S.-China trade had arrived.

U.S. Steel Corp., for example, signed a multimillion-dollar agreement in 1979 to help the Chinese develop an iron ore facility. But it and other heavy-industry projects were postponed only months later when China realized its modernization plans were too ambitious. The reversal stunned dozens of U.S. companies.

Christopher H. Phillips, president of the National Council on U.S.-China Trade; a private group based in Washington, said "there were a lot of companies that were expecting things that simply were unrealistic."

His group now advises U.S. companies eyeing the China market to look elsewhere unless they are willing to spend at least two years developing a business relationship.

"I've told them you're not going to go into China and make a killing," Phillips said.

Coca-Cola Co., which began shipping the world's largest-selling soft drink to China in January 1979, has learned the lesson of patience and persistence, spokesman Frank Stansberry said.

Under its agreement with the Chinese government, Coca-Cola is allowed to sell soda only to tourists. Although he declined to provide figures, Stansberry indicated Coca-Cola is losing money on its China operations, which thus far are limited to a bottling plant.

Other U.S. companies have done better, and the Reagan administration has announced it will ask Congress to lift still more trade restrictions against China. The remaining curbs chiefly limit sales on high technology or military goods.

Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. is expected to discuss possible sales of military equipment to China during a visit to Peking next week.

Such sales could be a boon to the U.S. aerospace industry. Boeing, the world's largest producer of commercial aircraft, has sold 13 jetliners to China since 1972 at a combined value of about $300 million. Lockheed Corp. and McDonnell Douglas Corp. have had less success.

Gordon Williams, a Boeing spokesman, said the company expects more deals with China, adding: "We're quite optimistic. But like any U.S. company doing business with China, our optimism has to be tempered a little bit by reality."

China faces problems that are unfamiliar there: rising prices and a growing budget deficit. Last year, its inflation rate was an estimated 10 percent — enormously high for such a controlled economy — and its budget deficit reached $8.1 billion, three times the anticipated figure. China's leaders reacted by cutting the construction, defense and administration budgets.

As a result, and also because of China's reluctance to borrow from foreign sources, American commercial banks have had little involvement there, and only three U.S. banks have offices in China.

"I don't think there is a bonanza for the banking business in China," said

Frank Stankard, an executive vice president at Chase Manhattan Bank and head of its international department. Chase opens a China office this month.

There are some extremely promising areas for U.S. companies, including energy development.

"HELLO! LONG DISTANCE FROM HELL CALLING!"

"There was a certain rich man," Jesus said, "who was splendidly clothed and lived each day in mirth and luxury."

"One day Lazarus, a diseased beggar, was laid at his door. As he lay there longing for scraps from the rich man's table, the dogs would come and lick his open sores."

"Finally the beggar died and was carried by the angels to be with Abraham in the place of the righteous dead. The rich man also died and was buried, and his soul went into hell."

"There, in torment, he saw Lazarus in the far distance with Abraham. 'Father Abraham,' he shouted, 'have some pity! Send Lazarus over here if only to dip the tip of his finger in water and cool my tongue, for I am in anguish in these flames.'"

"But Abraham said to him, 'Son, remember that during your lifetime you had everything you wanted, and Lazarus had nothing. So now he is here being comforted and you are in anguish. And besides, there is a great chasm separating us, and anyone wanting to come to you from here is stopped at its edge; and no one over there can cross to us.'"

"Then the rich man said, 'O Father Abraham, then please send him to my father's home—for I have five brothers—to warn them about this place of torment lest they come here when they die.'"

"But Abraham said, 'The Scriptures have warned them again and again. Your brothers can read them any time they want to.'"

"The rich man replied, 'No, Father Abraham, they won't bother to read them. But if someone is sent to them from the dead, then they will turn from their sins.'"

"But Abraham said, 'If they won't listen to Moses and the prophets, they won't listen even though someone rises from the dead.'"

Australian Pioneers Living in the Outback

KUNUNURRA, Australia (AP) — After 18 years battling heat, monsoon rains, the pink bollworm and the taxman, John L. Hay 3rd is leaving his farm in this outback frontier of Australia and heading home to Phoenix, Ariz.

"Hell, I'm not beaten. I made money. I've just retired," said Hay, who just turned 65 and sold his farm this week.

"We were the first generation of pioneers in this part of the world. It's the first generation of pioneers in any area that sets the stage for the second generation," he said.

Pioneer is a word they like in the Kimberleys, an area three times the size of England set in the northwest corner of Australia where salt water crocodiles infest the rivers, 30 species of snake inhabit the grasslands and the locals call it paradise.

"When I came here in 1963 the pub was in a quonset hut and there were 20 houses in Kununurra," Hay said.

"Thirteen of us lived in one house built on stilts. My wife Carolyn used to cook the breakfast. Hell, we used to eat three pounds of bacon for breakfast."

Hay was one of six Americans and an equal number of Australians who took up irrigated government land at $3 an acre after the construction of the Ord River Dam, considered by many to be Australia's great white elephant.

The Ord River Dam created a huge 800 square-mile lake in the Kimberleys, 1,365 miles north of Perth. It was supposed to encourage settlement and irrigated farms in Australia's empty north.

Although only 435 miles south of the Indonesian island of Timor, the Kimberleys has remained a sparsely-populated, cattle-growing area since it was first settled by Europeans in 1882.

"It reminded me a lot of Arizona," said Hay, who had cotton farms there before deciding to move to the Australian frontier.

"When I first came here in 1963, it was your typical frontier. The town had a population of 300. Before I die — and that'll be 10 years — it'll be 3,000."

Hay got preference in the ballot for irrigated land because he had served as a pilot officer in the Royal Air Force in World War II.

"I flew Mitchell bombers for the RAF and when America came into the war I transferred to the U.S. Army Air Corps. I'd have preferred to have stayed with the RAF," he said.

"I came here because I'd heard it was very like the frontier America had been 100 years ago.

"It was bare land then. Only trees and the irrigation channel. Six of us cleared all 3,500 acres."

Hay, a lawyer, spent eight months of the year in Australia, the rest in Arizona looking after his interests there.

Cotton proved to be the downfall of the first generation farmers on the Ord.

"In the late 1960s we were getting more cotton to the acre than we were in Arizona, and they were getting the highest yields in the United States," he said.

"But the aphids and the pink bollworm hit us. We sprayed 29 times in 34 days and still lost 20 percent of the crop."

What Hay didn't say was that the Ord had turned into an ecological disaster area. A friend of his, Henry Lyons who heads the Ord River project, described it this way:

"The cotton farmers were being eaten out by the pink bollworm. They learned that the only way to control the larvae was to spray it within two days of it hatching. So they sprayed every two days. This killed the larvae, but it also killed the wasp that ate the local caterpillar.

"The caterpillar was resistant to the spray, thrived without the wasp and ate the cotton. They also found that the bollworm was indigenous to the area because of native cotton trees. There was no way it could be eradicated.

"Then they found that the deildrin spray had contaminated the town water and the deildrin count in the cattle going to the meat works was so high the government banned the slaughter of meat. It was a disaster."

But the Ord is getting back on its feet again, although the original pioneers like Hay are selling.

"In the past two years 80 percent of the farms have been sold to financially viable people who have the money and confidence to make the Ord a success," Hay said.

These include at least one Saudi Arabian.

"I'd say the Ord has long-range possibilities. You can't look for immediate profits next year. It's still cheap land at $200 an acre cleared with irrigation.

"I don't regret a year of it. If I had it to do over again, I'd do it."

The Ord is 185 miles south of Darwin, and 37 miles from Australia's Indian Ocean coast, has 500,000 acres below the Ord Dam available for cultivation. Only 24,000 acres are being cultivated at the moment.

The crops are now rice, sugar cane, sorghum, and sunflower instead of cotton, and the yields are extraordinary.

"The future here will be in sugar for ethanol or crystal," Hay predicted.

However, the future of the area, where monsoon rains flood the country for three months of the year, may not be in agriculture.

An international consortium this week revealed they have discovered the world's richest diamond deposit barely two hours' drive from John Hay's farm.

There has also been a significant oil strike further south, and proved deposits of nickel, lead, zinc and bauxite in the Kimberleys.

"My wife and I used to go (prospect) where they found those diamonds out on Packsaddle Plains," said Hay, with a barely discernible note of regret.

Immigration Officials Say Enforcement is a Problem

HARLINGEN, Texas (AP) — A temporary "guest worker" program, such as that discussed between President Reagan and Mexican President Jose Lopez Portillo, would be hard to enforce, immigration officials said Wednesday.

"From what I have read about this, the program proposed by Gov. Bill Clements, they would be allowed to seek employment anywhere in the United States. This would create a problem," said Hal Bouldin, district director for the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

Since 1979, Clements has backed a program to let Mexican citizens enter the country legally and find jobs anywhere for a limited time.

The program's aim is to ease the flood of illegal immigration from Mexico, where unemployment runs at 30 percent. An initial figure of 50,000 guest workers has been suggested.

Bouldin and others said they wondered how American officials could keep track of each worker. Immigration agents say they are always tracking down persons admitted temporarily who decide to stay illegally.

BARBS

Phil Pastoret

A minor storm that you plow through to get to a basketball game becomes major if it occurs in the morning. It then prevents you from getting to work.

A restaurant parking lot crowded with trucks is a sure sign that, though the food may be lousy, the 26-inch sports TV on the cable is great.

"It would be a physical impossibility to check every one of these people," said Robert Wooten, a 19-year veteran with the U.S. Border Patrol in Brownsville.

"I don't know what the immigration service would do if a lot of them were admitted and went to the East or Northeast, places that are not policed, per se, by the border patrol," Wooten said. "They'd have to make drastic changes in the immigration service."

South Texas officials say they have received no communication about the proposal or learned of any details.

Initial proposals seem to differ from the bracero program of the 1950s in which Mexican nationals contracted for work at specific agricultural jobs.

The bracero program has been criticized by Mexican-American civil rights groups as amounting to "legal slavery."

In terms of enforcement, though, the bracero program was easy to administer, Bouldin said.

Processing centers in Mexico gave bracero participants their documents and assignments, he said. That aspect should be considered if the guest worker program is ever implemented, he added.

"It would seem to me if they are not processed outside the United States, we would have to have large processing centers set up at the border," Bouldin said. "We do not have a facility to handle that now."

Employers who hire illegal aliens currently are not subject to penalty. Under a guest worker program, sanctions against employers who knowingly hire undocumented workers have been proposed.

Baseball Strike Looms After Tonight's Games

By BOB GREENE
AP Sports Writer

"Play ball!" said U.S. District Judge Henry Werker.

But Werker's ruling, issued in New York, could cause the 1981 baseball season to end—or at least be disrupted—following tonight's games.

"Hopefully there might be some serious negotiations to avoid the strike," said Doug DeCinces, Baltimore Orioles third baseman and player representative for the American League. "There is always that possibility."

"Damn it all," said New York Yankee outfielder Lou

Piniella. "This hurts us, not the owners. They got the money."

Negotiations between the Major League Players Association and the Player Relations Committee were scheduled to resume this morning in New York with the prospect of a shortened season in the balance.

"This is not unusual," said Chicago White Sox Manager Tony LaRussa. "Both sides talk tough and hang tough until the bitter end. Then they give in and come up with a settlement."

"The same thing happened last year, didn't it? It looked as bad last year as it does this year, and there was no strike. "There is always a chance for a settlement. They'll come up with something."

Twice in the last 13 months, last-minute agreements have staved off a players' walkout. The National Labor Relations Board went to court last week, presenting its case for an unfair labor practice complaint and seeking an injunction.

In denying the injunction, which would have delayed a strike for a year, Werker said there was "no reasonable cause to believe an unfair labor practice has been committed" by the club owners. "The petition is therefore dismissed."

William Lubbers, general counsel to the NLRB, was expected to announce today whether he will recommend that the board appeal Werker's decision. Lubbers said Wednesday that the decision "will have to be studied closely" before the board decides whether to appeal the decision to the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Second District in New York.

Lubbers said that if an appeal is taken, the board also may seek a stay pending appeal to delay the strike deadline.

"I hope we strike," said Minnesota Twins second baseman Rob Wilfong. "I want to get it over with, and if a strike is what it takes to get this all settled, then I'm for it.

"We've been talking about this for years and years," Wilfong said. "We've been having deadlines and decisions and meetings and nothing's been accomplished. It's all been a big waste of time. We should have done it last year because here we are again."

The players had charged to the NLRB that the owners' refusal to release their clubs' financial records violated fair labor practice laws. But Werker, who held two days of hearings last week in Rochester, N.Y., ruled in favor of the club owners on every issue.

"It would seem less than forthright if I didn't tell you I am elated by the judge's decision," said Ray Grebey, the owners' chief negotiator. "We went in believing we were right, and when a federal court says you're right, it can't help but make you feel good."

Ted Simmons, catcher for the Milwaukee Brewers, was dismayed by the ruling. "What people do not understand is what the injunction sought," Simmons said. "It sought a delay. It was not an effort to get the books open."

"This was an attempt to show that in previous cases when management had not made records available to employees, an injunction like this was granted. Every effort was made to show that this was not an unprecedented position. We cited previous cases like this where time and again judges granted injunctions.

"This time he hasn't, but none of this surprises me." If last-minute negotiations fail, it would mean Cleveland and Oakland in the American League and four National League teams—Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Houston and San Diego—may have played their final games. They were not scheduled to play today.

Wednesday night, Philadelphia first baseman Pete Rose singled in the first inning to tie Stan Musial's National League record for career hits.

Baltimore's DeCinces, however, wasn't as optimistic as some of the other players. "There is always that possibility" that a strike might be averted, DeCinces said, "but we have been trying to negotiate for 16 months. One day isn't going to change it."

If negotiations fail, the first game to be affected by a strike would be San Diego at Chicago, the only afternoon contest scheduled for Friday. However, San Diego pitcher John Curtis, the Padres' player representative, held out a slight hope that the strike still could be averted.

Astros Lose As Rose Ties Mark

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

Even when he strikes out three times in a game—and Pete Rose hardly ever fans three times in one night—"Charlie Hustle" finds a way to please the fans.

Wednesday night, Rose made 57,386 Philadelphia faithful happy with a first-inning single that boosted him into a tie with Stan Musial for the National League lead in career hits. The 40-year-old first baseman has 3,630 hits in his 181-3 seasons; Musial spent 22 seasons with the St. Louis Cardinals.

After Rose lined Nolan Ryan's fourth pitch of the night to center field for his baseliner, he virtually took the rest of the night off as the Phillies rallied for a 5-4 triumph over the Houston Astros. Ryan struck him out the next three times Rose came to the plate.

"When I got that first hit, I felt like 20," said Rose. "And when I struck out the next three times, I felt like 40."

Rose might not get a chance to beat Musial's mark for a while. If the players go on strike after Thursday's games, as they've threatened to do, the Phillies won't play again until the players return. That doesn't worry Rose.

"It won't last until 1985," Rose said. "I'll get the hit sometime."

He might not get it if Ryan is on the mound, however. Not only couldn't Rose get good wood on the ball against the flame-throwing right-hander, he could barely see the ball.

"If he threw every pitch like he pitched tonight," said Rose of Ryan, "I'd be going after my 1,000th hit instead of 3,631. He was geared for me. It was good morning, good afternoon, see you later."

The baseball that Rose hit for his record-tying blow will be given to Rick Sutcliffe, a Los Angeles Dodgers' pitcher, who plans to use it in an auction to raise money for crippled children.

Rose said the ball he hits for the record-breaker will go to the Hall of Fame in Cooperstown, N.Y.

While Rose held the spotlight, Garry Maddox was the Phillies' hero. Rose's first-inning safety was the only Philadelphia hit until the eighth. Ryan, leading 4-0, retired the first two batters in the eighth but then gave up a pinch-hit single to George Vukovich.

Steve Carlton, 9-1, had left for a pinch hitter in the eighth. Mike Proby and Tug McGraw pitched the ninth.

Elsewhere in the National League, it was Los Angeles 4, St. Louis 1; Cincinnati 2, the New York Mets 0; Montreal 11, Atlanta 2; San Diego 3, Pittsburgh 2, and Chicago sweeping a pair from San Francisco, winning the resumption of a suspended game 2-1, then taking the regularly scheduled contest 7-4.

Dodgers 4, Cardinals 1
Jerry Reuss' masterful three-hitter paced the Dodgers over the Cardinals.

Reuss surrendered a home run to Garry Templeton with one out in the first inning, then set down 22 straight batters. Tito Landrum's infield single ended that streak.

Ken Landreaux had a two-run single and Scioscia added an RBI double to lead the 14-hit attack for Los Angeles.

Reds 2, Mets 0
George Foster supplied the power with a fourth-inning homer and Mario Soto hand-cuffed the Mets on six hits, striking out 11.

Foster said he got a fastball on the "black" and a little up from Mets left-hander Randy Jones for his 13th homer. "It was a fastball on the black—my black bat. My black, Foster-treated bat launched it out of center field," Foster said.

Soto, 6-6, has struck out 10 or more batters three times this season and has a total of 85 strikeouts. It was the sixth consecutive complete game for the fireballing Soto and his fifth victory in his last six decisions.

Expos 11, Braves 2
Tim Raines stole two bases, giving him 48 and placing him 20 games ahead of Lou Brock's pace when Brock stole 118 in 1974, and Larry Parrish had a three-run homer to back Bill Gullickson, 3-6. The Expos had scored a total of 11 runs in Gullickson's losses.

"Tonight was a team win," said Gullickson. "They hit the ball all over the place. When you have a lead like that, you feel comfortable knowing that you can give up a few runs and not get hurt."

Padres 3, Pirates 2
Ruppert Jones followed singles by Terry Kennedy and Randy Bass with a three-run homer in the sixth to push San Diego to victory. Juan Eichelberger, 6-3, and Gary Lucas combined on a six-hitter, with Lucas getting his 10th save.

Cubs 2-7, Giants 1-4
Chicago held on to win a game suspended Tuesday by darkness with the Cubs ahead 2-0. Then Mike Lam homered and had two singles and Bill Buckner and Jerry Moral'I felt good at the plate and the other guys are hitting and that helps too," said Lum.

Tigers Win; Rangers Romp by Brewers

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

Jack Morris is living proof that when you're hot, you're hot.

"Everything happens when you're winning," the Detroit right-hander said. "I'm challenging the hitters more with my fastball. They're either going to hit me or they're not going to hit me."

Right now, they're not...not much, anyway. Minnesota got eight hits off him Wednesday night—but Morris got his eighth consecutive victory, his seventh complete game and his ninth win of the season (tops in the American League) as the Tigers beat the Twins 4-2.

Elsewhere in the AL it was Texas 12, Milwaukee 5; Chicago 6, New York 5; Boston 4, Seattle 2; California 4, Cleveland 3; Kansas City 7, Toronto 4, and Baltimore 3, Oakland 1. Homers by Steve Kemp (he also had an RBI single) and John Wockenfuss powered the Tigers to their ninth victory in 11 games.

Rangers 12, Brewers 5

Buddy Bell has his own theory on wielding a hot bat. When others are hot, he says, you're more likely to be, too.

"Hitting is contagious," Bell said after his three-run homer and two-run single led the Rangers in their romp over the Brewers.

Jim Sundberg added three RBIs with a homer and a triple and Leon Roberts knocked in two with a homer and a single as Texas edged within a game of first-place Oakland in the West Division.

White Sox 6, Yankees 5
The Yankees' East Division lead over Baltimore was trimmed to two games as Chicago snapped their nine-game winning streak.

Wayne Nordhagen and Greg Luzinski hit two-run doubles and Bill Almon homered for the White Sox, who had a couple of close calls go their way in their three-run first inning.

Mike Squires and Carlton Fisk singled and Luzinski bounced to pitcher Rudy May. Squires got caught in a rundown between third and home but was safe at third when Aurelio Rodriguez missed the tag, a call that had the Yanks howling and brought Manager Gene Michael out of the New York dugout to complain.

When May uncorked a wild pitch, Squires scored—barely eluding May's tag—and the Yanks yelped again. Then Nordhagen doubled to right-center field for two more runs.

Red Sox 4, Mariners 2
Stan Musial, whose National League record of 3,630 career hits was tied by Pete Rose, fell a notch in a lesser-known category as Carl Yastrzemski moved into fourth place on the all-time at-bat list with 10,974, two more than Stan the Man.

Yaz also scored on one of Rich Gedman's two RBI singles against Seattle to help Frank Tanana post his third consecutive victory. Angels 4, Indians 3. Don Baylor drove in two runs with a first-inning single and Rick Burleson hit a solo homer in the eighth as California won its third in a row at home for the first time since late last season.

The Indians, absorbing their fourth consecutive loss, got a pair of doubles and runs scored from Bo Diaz.

Royals 7, Blue Jays 4
Amos Otis already had ripped three hits and driven in two runs when he came up in the eighth inning with the score tied. Kansas City Manager Jim Frey didn't have to think about strategy.

"With the winning runs out there I just give him the hit sign," he said. Otis responded by ripping a 3-0 pitch from Joey McLaughlin for a two-run double that sent the Blue Jays down to their 10th consecutive loss.

Orioles 3, A's 1
Mike Flanagan pitched 71-3 innings of two-hit ball against the A's before his control deserted him. Then Tim Lincecum came to the rescue, posting his second save despite allowing an RBI single by Cliff Johnson. Eddie Murray and Mark Belanger hit RBI singles and Dan Graham had a sacrifice fly for Baltimore.

Monterey in State Baseball Tournament

AUSTIN, Texas (AP)—Brennon, a team that belted two teams 35-0 and 31-0, was matched against Follett, which had played only 12 games, in the opener of the state schoolboy baseball tournament today.

The second Class A game featured Palmer, a 1979 champion and finalist last year, and Harleton, which averaged nearly 20 runs a game in its last seven games while holding the opposition to a total of only 18 runs.

Pearland in Class 5A and Waskom in 2A are back to defend the championships they won last year, and Lubbock Monterey is making its eighth tournament appearance since 1961.

Ten semifinal games were scheduled today, with five title games to be played Friday. All championship games will be played on artificial turf at Disch-Falk Field, the home of the Texas Longhorns.

Monterey, a champion in 1972 and 1974 and finalist in 1961, 1971 and 1978, plays Nacogdoches, whose only previous tournament appearance was in 1969, in a first-round game in 5A.

South San Antonio West, 28-2, brings a 20-game winning streak to the tournament in 4A. During that stretch the Cougars allowed only 23 runs and had seven shutouts.

South San opens against McKinney, and Waco Midway and Lubbock Estacado play in the other 4A semifinal game.

Waskom in Class 2A has three hitters batting over .400, including shortstop Tom Bowen, .489, and pitcher Kenneth Jackson, .450.

In 3A Pflugerville will face its third undefeated pitcher in the 1981 playoffs in Ricky Cruz, 15-0, of Somerset. Cameron's Allen Sapp was 11-0 when Pflugerville beat him 4-0 in the first round of the playoffs.

Woodville's Ricky Barlow, Detroit's first-round choice in this week's pro draft, was 14-0 when the Panthers defeated him 5-3 for the regional championship.

SMU Hit With Costly Probation

DALLAS (AP) — Southern Methodist University's football program, hit with a costly two-year probation barring the Mustangs from post-season play and televised games this fall, will step lightly to avoid future tangles with recruitment regulations, school officials said.

The National Collegiate Athletic Association announced Wednesday that SMU has been cited for 29 recruiting violations — including four allegations that Head Football Coach Ron Meyer gave potential recruits the idea they would be able to scalp complimentary season tickets.

The other 25 violations, which SMU President L. Donald Shields said were of a "technical nature," mostly involved contact procedures during recruiting.

But Shields said SMU "respectfully disagrees" with the ticket allegation leveled by the NCAA infraction committee.

Meyer called the scalping charges the result of "a total misunderstanding between prospective student athletes and what I said."

The university's inquiry substantiated the remaining 25 infractions cited by the NCAA, according to Shields, who emphasized the other cases did not involve any current players or include any academic misconduct.

Shields added the school will not appeal the penalties, which he estimated will cost SMU between $150,000 and $163,000 in Southwest Conference television royalties during the 1981 season.

However, SMU will be eligible to win the Southwest Conference title, Shields said.

The university president said SMU placed one assistant football coach on probation for a one-year period during which he will not be allowed to recruit off campus and also issued a three-year probation against recruiting efforts by two representatives of "SMU athletic interests."

Shields, citing NCAA regulations, would not identify the assistant coach or the "athletic interests."

Shield said besides the disciplinary sanctions, the school also would modify its procedures for monitoring recruitment contacts and establish new guidelines for controlling the involvement of outsiders in the recruiting process.

The infractions committee aid in considering the case it found violations of NCAA legislation related to an extra benefit to a student-athlete, improper recruiting inducements, local transportation and entertainment of prospects and recruiting contacts.

The case represents the third time in the last seven years that the SMU football program has been found to be in violation of "significant NCAA rules," according to Charles Wright, chairman of the infractions committee.

Wright said that although Shields, Meyer and Athletic Director Bob Hitch were not associated with SMU during previous cases, the committee was required to consider past violations in considering sanctions.

Former SMU Athletic Director Russ Potts earlier denied the investigation hastened his departure from SMU, which climaxed a 7-4 season last year with a last-second loss to Brigham Young in the Holiday Bowl.

Rangers Give Every Indication They Are in AL Pennant Race to Stay

By MIKE O'BRIEN
AP Sports Writer

MILWAUKEE (AP) — It used to be said that the Texas Rangers had abundant talent, but two conspicuous weaknesses — July and August.

But while it is barely mid-June, the Rangers give every indication that they will be in the American League West race to stay.

They surged to within one game of first place Oakland Wednesday night by whipping the Milwaukee Brewers 12-5. Buddy Bell led the Rangers with a three-run homer and two-run single, while Jim Sundberg knocked in three runs with a homer and triple and Leon Roberts hit a bases-empty homer and RBI single.

It was the Rangers' fifth victory in their last six games and 14th in their last 19.

The Brewers, who have lost four games in a row, broke a drought which had seen them held to one run in 29 innings.

But they fell behind 5-0 and did little against winning pitcher Doc Medich, 5-3, until the game was all but out of reach.

"The game tonight didn't bother me as much as one we lost in Boston and two we lost in Detroit on our last road trip," Brewer Manager Buck Rodgers said. "When you get smoked 12-5 it's not like one or two plays cost you the game."

The Rangers' surge is no accident. They lead the league in team batting, hits, doubles, fielding average and shutouts pitched and are second in runs scored.

"Hitting is contagious. When somebody hitting behind you and in front of you are hot, you get better pitches to hit," said Bell, who has batted in 42 runs.

That puts pressure on a pitcher," he said. "I don't care how good a pitcher is, pressure makes his job tougher. You should be a better hitter with men on base because the pitcher is going to be leery. He doesn't want to put any more runners on."

"When I was with Cleveland, we had maybe a good hitter hitting first, a good hitter hitting fourth and a good hitter hitting sixth," he said. "It was tough to put anything together because we had outs in between. On this club, it's easy to hit anywhere in the lineup because everybody is dangerous."

The Rangers scored their first two runs in the second inning. Pat Putnam singled and scored on Billy Sample's double to the left field corner. Sample took third on the throw to the plate and scored when Roberts singled off shortstop Robin Yount's glove in a drawn-in Milwaukee infield.

The Rangers added two more runs in the third after a single by Bump Wills and a walk to Mickey Rivers. The runners advanced on a grounder and scored on Bell's single.

Roberts lined his third homer of the year leading off the fourth as the Rangers chased Moose Haas, 5-4, and led 5-0.

"Moose had good stuff starting out," Rodgers said. "He had a hellacious fast ball. For some reason he didn't carry it through."

Basketball

Camp at WBU

PLAINVIEW, Tx. (Special) — Youngsters still interested in attending the 24th annual Boys Summer Basketball Camp at Wayland Baptist University should make their reservations immediately, according to Camp Director Ron Mayberry.

Open to boys between the ages of 8-15, this year's three week-long sessions are scheduled for July 5-10, July 12-17, and July 19-24.

'Hollywood' Inks with Miami

MIAMI (AP) — Linebacker Thomas "Hollywood" Henderson is about to bring his flamboyant and often-troubled act to one of the National Football League's most conservative operations.

Henderson, 28, whose career took a nosedive when he was cut by the Dallas Cowboys in 1979, said Wednesday he will sign a one-year, non-guaranteed contract with the Miami Dolphins.

The agreement, said the 6-2, 220-pound Henderson, includes a clause on his drug problem. The papers are in the mail, said Henderson, the Cowboys' first-round draft choice out of Langston College in 1975. He was a three-year starter with Dallas before Coach Tom Landry dropped him in 1979.

"There's a request that I be part of a program at least once or twice a week as needed," Henderson said. "It's part of something that will be very inspirational to me."

Henderson, who played in three Super Bowls in his first four NFL seasons, signed with San Francisco before the 1980 season, but was waived. He signed a one-year contract with no option with Houston and appeared in six games, then spent seven games on injured reserve.

After Houston released him, Henderson signed himself into a drug rehabilitation program, saying he had been using a quarter-ounce to half an ounce of cocaine daily, which had cost him much as $1,250 a day.

"I got involved in something I just couldn't handle," said the linebacker, adding that he used narcotics for 14 years but is now free of the cocaine dependency.

"But I'm a very happy person these days... the temptations are not there."

Dolphins Coach Don Shula confirmed that Henderson had worked out at Miami's training camp two weeks ago, but said nothing was finalized yet.

HEALTH

Resting body uses energy

DEAR DR. LAMB - Recently I tried to get a basal metabolism test like you once suggested to find out how many calories I need. I'm a small woman with a weight problem - you might say short and fat. I can't lose weight on the diets most people give me and I am sure it is because I don't need as many calories as other people. I'm told that the BMR test that used to be done is not done anymore. Do you have any other suggestions?

DEAR READER - You are referring to my observation that if your doctor knows how much oxygen your body uses at rest he can calculate a minimal daily calorie requirement for you. It is based on knowing that people in a fasting resting basal state will use 4.825 calories for each liter of oxygen the body consumes. There is a specific amount of oxygen needed per calorie liberated - from a person's food. This is not new information, but solid physiological knowledge of metabolism.

We use energy just to support our body functions at rest. This is your basal metabolism (not basal metabolic rate which is an expression related to your body surface or skin area). An average adult male at rest will use about 1,500 calories at rest during the 24-hour day. The rest of the energy your body needs is for activity, whether it is work or play or even such things as brushing your teeth.

The oxygen consumption under basal conditions can be measured by a pulmonary function laboratory or any number of cardiovascular laboratories that do exercise testing. By calculating the oxygen consumption for 24 hours from such a test and then multiplying by 24, you will know how many calories your body should use at rest for 24 hours. Clearly, if your diet is restricted to that level, should result in using stored calories such as body fat. An oxygen consumption measurement helps to provide facts about what the individual needs for calories.

DEAR DR. LAMB - In one of your columns you told where people can get zinc in larger tablets. The largest I can get is 50 mg.

DEAR READER - That is large enough. I don't approve of popping large doses of zinc on your own. That may be a good way to increase your chances of developing fatty-cholesterol deposits in your arteries and increase your risk of heart attacks and strokes. A good study from the University of New Mexico, published in the Journal of the American Medical Association, October 24-31, 1980, showed that men taking large doses of zinc had a significant decrease in the high density "good cholesterol" level in the blood. This is thought to increase vascular disease.

Everyone does need zinc. Most people get it unless there is a problem in absorption or increased use as in tumors. The best dietary sources of zinc are meat, liver, eggs and seafood, oysters in particular. The Recommended Daily Dietary Allowance for zinc is only 15 mg.

DEAR DR. LAMB - My husband was born with only one descended testicle. Our doctor consulted with a specialist who recommended that he have an operation. They would either remove the undescended one or put it in the scrotum if it was close. Our doctor didn't seem too concerned or think we should be in a rush to have it done. He did say that it might turn into cancer if left there it is. What are the chances of this? Shouldn't his parents have done something when he was younger?

DEAR READER - There are two problems with an undescended testicle. The first one is that it will not produce live healthy sperm cells. However, it will produce male hormone. That is why even if both testicles are not descended a man will still have all the male characteristics and normal sex drive. His semen will just not contain any viable sperm cells.

To preserve the testicle's function of producing healthy sperm cells the testicle should be in the scrotum well before puberty. The time when function of the testicle is normally stimulated to begin. If an undescended testicle is going to descend it usually does so in the first few years of life. Lowering the testicles after puberty or in adult life usually will not enable that testicle to produce sperm. The testicle is permanently damaged as far as this function is concerned. The second problem is the one your husband needs to consider. An undescended testicle is far more likely to become malignant than one in the normal scrotal location.

Figures are that if the testicle is in the abdomen, it is 50 times more likely to become malignant and if it is in the canal just above the scrotum, 11 times as likely.

Moving the testicle into the scrotum now will not decrease its chances of becoming malignant at this age. Since the one descended testicle will provide adequate amounts of sperm and male hormone, the idea of letting the undescended testicle remain, even in the scrotum, is questionable.

DEAR DR. LAMB - I'm a 15-year-old male, 5 feet 4 and 150 pounds. Most of the boys in my class are taller than I. My parents are short, too. I've been lifting weights since I was 14 years old. Now I'm lifting 150 pounds maximum. My father thinks I should have gotten into another sport that would help my height, like basketball or tennis. I keep telling him there are no special sports that will make a difference in my growth, whatever height I'm meant to be. I'll be. I'd appreciate your comments on this.

DEAR READER - As long as you have a well-balanced diet, with adequate protein, calories, vitamins and minerals and have no medical problems your growth will depend upon the genes you were born with. You are right. You can't expect to be taller because you play basketball or other sports.

In addition to genes and diet, your hormones affect growth. People much shorter than you have been given growth hormone. It is in limited supply since it must come from human pituitary glands. But genetic engineering is closing in on manufacturing human growth hormone by bacteria, just as insulin has been manufactured. When that happens it may be possible to safely increase height to average levels in those who are born on the short side.

POLLY'S POINTERS

Polly Fisher
-Freezer-burned meat-

POLLY'S PROBLEM

DEAR POLLY - Is there anything you can do to freezer-burned meat to make it usable? - M.M.

DEAR M.M. - Freezer burn is just a severe drying out of the food. Generally, only portions of the meat will be affected. These could be cut away and the remainder should be perfectly fine. If a large area is affected, you might be able to re-moisturize and tenderize the meat by braising it. That, of course, is cooking in a small amount of liquid, tightly covered, until the meat is fork-tender. You might want to add more seasoning than you usually would to make up for any flavor loss caused by the freezer burn. - POLLY

DEAR POLLY - Soaking fish, both fresh and frozen, in ice water will remove any trace of fishy taste.

When you're melting butter or margarine, a few drops of water added to it will keep it from burning. - ROSEMARIE

DEAR POLLY - When I cut my children's hair, I have them stand in an empty laundry basket. The hair falls directly into the basket. When the job is finished, I just brush them off and they step out. The hair just gets dumped into the waste basket with no mess. - KELLI

DEAR KELLI - When I was little, my mother made me stand in the bathtub. Then she just vacuumed the hair out of the tub! - POLLY

DEAR POLLY - I love to decorate for holidays and I save my decorations from year to year. I store them in large plastic bags, each tied with colored ribbon appropriate for that particular holiday - red and green for Christmas, green for St. Patrick's Day, yellow and purple for Easter, red, white and blue for the Fourth of July, etc. When each holiday rolls around, it's easy to tell which bag I want for my decorating. - MRS. T.W.

DEAR POLLY - Here's an idea for Mrs. R.L.B., who wanted to know of ways to use empty pill bottles. When my children were small, I put their lunch money in small, clean pill bottles. They were far less likely to lose money in the bottles than if they just put loose change in their pockets. - JANET

DEAR POLLY - I'm 14 years old and have two ideas for using empty pill bottles. They're terrific for stacking coins and as small storage bottles for fishing lures, flies or hooks. They are small and can be neatly fitted in a vest pocket or tackle box. I use them for fly-tying and they come in handy for storing my coin collection. - BOB

DEAR POLLY - Our church saves plastic pill bottles and sends them to missionaries in foreign countries. Often medication for these missions comes in large quantities, and they need small bottles to dispense individual prescriptions. They even accept aspirin, baby aspirin and other store-bought medicine bottles. Anyone who wants to contribute such bottles could ask local churches if their foreign mission programs could use them. - MRS. W.P.H.

POLLY'S NOTE - Thanks to the many other readers who also sent in this worthwhile suggestion. - POLLY.

Polly will send you one of her signed thank-you newspaper coupon clippers if she uses your favorite Pointer, Peeve or Problem in her column. Write POLLY'S POINTERS in care of this newspaper.
