Energas wants 7.7 percent rate hike

By KIM THOGMARTIN Staff Writer

Energas company announced Friday it will seek a 7.7 percent rate increase for natural gas service to domestic and commercial

The 63 cities that belong to the West Texas City Plant System, including Hereford, learned that unless they protest, the rate hike will go into effect Aug. 10.

The average increase to a residential customer would be 35.8 cents per thousand cubic feet. The company said that would amount to around $3.57 a month for the average monthly consumption of 10 thousand cubic feet.

Energas Company officials said the basis for the rate filing is a study by an independent consulting firm on the costs and revenues of the West Texas City Plant System for the calendar year ending Dec. 31, 1983. The study reflected that the cost of service exceeded the revenue at present rates by $8,914,983.

The company said that by law it is entitled to recover its cost of service through its rates to customers and those expenses include cost of gas purchased for distribution, operation and maintenance expenses, depreciation expenses, taxes and a rate of return on rate base.

The overall rate of return being requested by Energas as related to a net original cost rate base is 11.63 percent. According to Jack Mars, count in this filing."

district manager at the Energas office in Hereford, the $8.9 million refects the company's failure to make what they call a "fair return" on their rate base.

The last rate hike request filed by Energas for the West Texas System was in 1981, with the subsequent increase of 35.2 cents per thousand cubic feet going into effect on Dec. 15 of that year.

The company claimed that while it has been able to hold cost increases to a level below general inflation rates since the last rate request, a number of expenses have increased above the 1981 cost levels. Those include ad valorem and miscellaneous taxes, operation and maintenance expenses and prices for needed new equipment and plant facilities. Energas said those cost increases, coupled with lower sales volume than anticipated, have resulted in the revenue deficit.

Charles K. Vaughan, president and chief executive officer of Energas noted that the company has recently implemented an extensive cost reduction program. "Operating and maintenance expenses were reduced by $1.2 millin in a concentrated effort by the employees and management of Energas," he said, "and that cost reduction has been taken into ac-

Vaughan also noted that all cost and revenue figures were adjusted to reflect the operations of Energas Company as an independent entity, and that the spin-off of energas from its former parent corporation (Pioneer Corporation) has had no effect on the need for or the amount of the requested rate increase.

The affected cities may review the request and determine to take no action, in which case the rate change would become effective Aug. 10. According to information provided by Energas, the cities have the option of suspending operation of the rates for a period not to exceed 90 days beyond

In 1978 and 1981, the towns formed a joint steering commttee to study the rate request, which resulted in new rates being established uniformly throughout the system. Mars said he expects such action to be taken again. "We look for the cities to group together and review the request, then meet with us to try and work out a solution," he said.

"We feel the rate request is valid and that the company has demonstrated a commitment to hold costs down," Vaughan said. "Energas is prepared to meet with representatives of the 63 communities at the earliest possible time to discuss the filing."

YMCA promotion set July 16-21

Publisher-Editor

Hereford YMCA's campaign drive to raise $925,000 for its new building is heading down the final stretch, and directors are planning a big promotional event the week of July 16-21 in an effort to put the drive over the top.

Rick Brown, YMCA president, said "Final Stretch Week" will start July 16 with the "Y" striving to collect about $60,000 to finish off the building campaign. Contributions and pledges now total about $790,000 and the "Y" needs $850,000 in order to receive a grant from the Mabee Foundation, which pledged the final $75,000 for the new facility.

The special week will be climaxed by "Final Stretch Day" on Saturday. July 21, with fun, games, entertainment and, hopefully, a victory celebration scheduled at the "Y" on that day.

Events planned for "Final Stretch Day" include live entertainment, an auction, drawings for prizes to lucky contributors, clowns, a "Cow Patty Cakewalk" game, special video tapes on Channel 3 during the day, tours of the YMCA building which is presently under construction, and a final push by a telephone committee to solicit and collect contributions and pledges.

The steering committee for the big event, said Brown, includes Cindy Baker, Debbie Black, Keith Ann Gearn and Regina Kester. Others working on the "Final Stretch Week" include Jerry Morgan, chairman of the telephone committee: Charles Hoover, auction committee; Debbie Black, special prizes; Darwin Manning, "Cow Patty Cakewalk," and Regina Kester, autographed building

Certification for CPR available

Thanks to the efforts of the Association, a number of Deaf Smith County's residents have been trained in CPR (cardio-pulmonary resuscitation). A person who has been trained in

Through classes American Red Cross and the Heart CPR has the potential to save a life, possibly that of one of his own family members. But the technique must be administered properly, and one training session without recertification may not be enough.

"Even CPR at its best is not as effective as the body doing its own thing," Gary Hollinger of Deaf Smith General Hospital explained. Hollinger, who is director of nurses, also takes an active role in emergency medical operations at the hospital. Hollinger said the quality of compressions and ventilations administered is vital. "When a person has stopped breathing, keeping the rhythm going is very important."

Betty Henson of the Deaf Smith County Chapter of the American Red Cross said while written instructions for performing CPR are available from sources other than a certified instructor, it is the practical experience that allows a person to be effective at CPR. "You must practice on a mannequin to get the proper hand position," she stressed. "You can kill someone by putting your hands in the wrong place."

The class is eight hours long, usually taught at night in two consecutive weeks. The Red Cross office maintains a list of people wanting to take the class. When enough people are signed up, a teacher is found and a class is held. Henson hopes the next one will begin in about 10 days.

Certification is good for one year, then a refresher course is needed. "Generally, that means taking the class again," Henson said, "but it usually goes more quickly." She said re-certification could be accomplished in five or six hours.

Henson said a lot of people have taken the class once but never recertified. "You tend to forget it if you don't use it," she pointed out. "We do about 200 certifications a year, and probably 95 percent are first time students." That means a lot of people are not going back for those important refresher courses.

Hollinger said he is pleased that so many people have studied the technique, and he does not want to make light of their efforts. "I hesitate to

State jobless rate dips to 4.8 percent

DALLAS (AP) — The Texas jobless rate plummeted to 4.8 percent in June as the economy rallied from a double blow of Mexican peso devaluation and lethargic energy production, prompting the lowest unemployment in about three years, federal officials said Friday.

About 98,000 Texans found work in June and state unemployment reached a full three percentage points fexow the 7.8 percent level of June 1983, according to the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics.

The June jobless rate was the lowest since April 1981, the agency said.

"The news is good, very good," said Bryan Richey, the bureau's southwest regional commission. "You could not single out any particular industry as a standout in Texas. The upsurge is generally widespread and all-inclusive.

"We have already gained back what we lost before and then some," he said.

Human blood found

MADISONVILLE, Texas (AP) - Human blood was smeared in a bullet-riddled van belonging to a key witness in an investigation into the legality of construction bids in the Texas prison system, laboratory tests showed Friday.

But authorities said they still believe James Rodney Pitts, 37, of Palestine, may have tried to fake his own murder in an effort to avoid testifying against former co-workers.

Madison County sheriff's Deputy John Davis said Friday night the blood will not be typed until early next week. Investigators are not certain what type Pitts' blood is, Davis said.

'Lab tests have showed the blood found in the van was human, but whether the blood was Pitts' is still undetermined," Davis said. A nationwide teletype was issued identifying Pitts as a missing person, Davis said. "At this time, we believe he's still alive," he said.

Davis said the quantity of blood found was extremely small; that fragments of the bullet are lodged in a pattern in the driver's seat, indicating no one was seated there when the bullet was fired through the windshield.

Family, drifters plead innocent

KERRVILLE, Texas (AP) - Three members of a Texas Hill Country ranch family have pleaded innocent to charges they tortured and killed a 23-year-old drifter who was allegedly kidnapped and forced to work on the ranch.

During an arraignment Friday, State District Judge Murray Jordan reduced bond for Walter Wesley Ellebracht, 53, from $250,000 to $100,000 after Ellebracht testified he made less than $10,000 last Bond for Ellbracht's son, Walter Jr., 31, and his daughter-in-law, Joyce, 29, was lowered from $250,000 each to $50,000 each.

The three had not posted bond Friday night and remained in jail, where they have been since April 12. They were originally charged with murder and kidnapping but on June 28 they were named among nine people indicted on organized organized crime charges in connection with the March 13 death of Anthony Bates, a drifter who was allegedly held captive at the Ellebracht's ranch.

Reagan planning three day trip

WASHINGTON (AP) - In the days leading up to the Democratic presidential convention, President Reagan will travel from the shores of Chespeake Bay to Kentucky's Mammoth Cave in three campaign-style trips designed to demonstrate his concern for the environment.

The president's excursions, one a day from Tuesday through Thursday, will keep Reagan in the political spotlight as suspense builds over last-minute jockeying among Walter Mondale, Gary Hart and the Rev. Jesse Jackson and the selection of a running mate for the Democratic nominee. The Democratic convention opens July 16 in San Francisco.

Reagan's travel plans were announced Friday as the president was winding up a three-day trip to Texas, Michigan, Alabama and Florida on a recruiting mission for blue-collar political support. Together, the two weks of trips represent a sudden quickening in the pace of Reagan's political travels.

During Reagan's stop in Texas, the White House released the transcript of an interview in which the president said many people paying into the Social Security system probably will never get all their money back. He vowed the administration would keep trying to fight back that probability.

Jackson kicks off tour

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) - A sultry summer night sparkled with explosions, lasers and music when singing sensation Michael Jackson and his brothers kicked off their eagerly awaited Victory Tour before 45,000 fans at Arrowhead Stadium.

Michael, Jermaine, Tito, Marlon and Randy sang and gyrated on a mammoth stage for about an hour and 45 minutes, performing many of their group hits from the 1970s as well as songs from Michael's blockbuster "Thriller" album.

The brothers, dressed in glittering outfits that were changed several times during the performance, dazzled the audience with special effects, including red and green lasers, explosions, fireworks and a mechanical crab-like creature encrusted with lights.

One special effect that was missing for most of the concert, however, was Michael's trademark sequined white glove, which he stripped off after the first number. He put it back on toward the end of the show, which got under way at 10 p.m.

Officials reported no arrests and no significant problems with the crowd, which included middle-aged spectators and parents with young children and more resembled an audience for a Sunday afternoon baseball game than a late-night rock concert.

Hollinger said the longer an injured victim or heart attack patient goes without oxygen, the greater the chances of oxygen damage. "CPR not only saves lives, it saves health too," he stressed. He said CPR and first aid skills are especially vital for those who live in the country. "If their heart stops or they stop breathing, the ambulance just can't get there soon enough unless the person has had effective CPR," he pointed out.

Hollinger listed the basic things a family can do to increase a victim's chances for recovery. "Arm yourself with CPR and basic first aid skills," he said. "Keep the police phone number available, and make sure you can give good directions to your location.'

Patiently waiting on the ambulance is another essential, Hollinger believed. "Some people get impatient and decide to haul the patient themselves. They forget that we have our best people and equipment on the ambulances. We can start care long before we arrive at the hospital.'

The basic first aid course also takes eight hours as taught by the Red Cross. It includes instruction on how to control bleeding and restore breathing as well as how to treat heat stroke, exhaustion, strangulation and poisoning victims.

WASHINGTON (AP) - A little over half of the 30,000 or so Texas farmers who have taken out $1.5 billion in federal loans are behind on their payments, but the federal government doesn't expect to be owning a lot of farms.

The policy of the U.S. Department of Agriculture is "if anybody has a chance of making it, we stay with them." said Merlin Aycock of the Farmers Home Administration, the farmer's lender of last resort.

Most of Texas' total $13.7 billion farm debt is in commercial loans, but in 1983, Texas took out more federal farm loans than any other state - $287 million. Arkansas was second with $151 million. FmHA has a total of about $25 billion loaned na-

Texas' 51 percent delinquency rate is fourth highest in the nation, Aveock said. Florida has 61 percent, Georgia 60 percent and Arizona 57

Aycock said the figures are misleading anyway because any borrower more than 15 days late on payments is categorized as "delinquent." He said the department has no figures on how many are further behind than that.

"We're not unduly concerned" about the delinquency rate, he said.

The Texas Department of Agriculture is concerned about the delinquency rate and has charged that Reagan administration economic policies are responsible.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture blames circumstances beyond its control - especially weather - for farmers' economic hardships.

Half of the farmers listed as delinquent are behind in their payments by three years or more, said Heather Ball, a TDA economist, "and that we have from FmHA's own figures."

There are no delinquency or foreclosure figures on commercial loans, she said.

Farmers can only borrow from FmHA if they cannot get a commercial loan.

Although foreclosure is an option, the agency avoids it, Aycock said. Of FmHA's 270,000 loans, 253 have been foreclosed.

"We realize these are unusual times for everybody," Aycock said. Foreclosure, he said, is "the absolute last resort. There's no merit in that for us, taking the farm. We don't want somebody's farm."

Ms. Ball said 42 Texas farmers were foreclosed on by FmHA during fiscal year 1983. Another 642 were sent "acceleration letters," which means the farmer must pay the full amount of the loan or face possible foreclosure. FmHA "discontinued" 526 farmers, Ms. Ball said. That meant they sold out voluntarily rather than have a forced sale that would bring them less money.

Of Texas' 254 counties, 161 are currently labeled disaster areas because of a two-year drought. Emergency loans account for about half of the amount Texas farmers have borrowed from FmHA. The delinquency rate on the emergency loans is 82 percent, according to TDA. "Throwing more loans at them is not the answer," said Ms. Ball. But Aycock said FmHA assesses a farmer's balance sheet annually, usually at the end of the crop year, and if it appears a farmer will eventually be able to pay, he is carried or refinanced.

Museum showing off Texas High Plains

By MIKE COCHRAN Associated Press Writer

FRITCH, Texas (AP) - Beneaththe water tower and across from the Dairy Queen is a tiny museum with a dead rattler, a live catfish and a director named Midge Savage who

"Each day I come in and do a head count to see who's eaten who during the night!"

What Ms. Savage needs is a muzzle for her 30-pound catfish or at least a sign at the Lake Meredith Aquatic & Wildlife Museum that warns: "Beware of Catfish."

"One night that rascal ate my turtle, two walleyes, a yellow perch and a sand bass ... I did say a few unkind words to him."

With unfailing good humor, Ms. Savage oversees this splendid little museum jammed with visual delights rarely found in larger and more sophisticated facilities.

It showcases the wildlife and archeological wonders of the Texas High Plains and the fish and fowl found in and around nearby Lake Meredith, a sparkling oasis in this dry and windswept geographic region known as the Llano Estacado, or staked plains.

Fritch itself, "the heart of Lake Meredith," is a spunky little Panhandle town of 2,500 north of Amarillo and just south of Borger. It lies midway between Dallas and Denver and is closer to the state capitals of New Mexico and Oklahoma than Austin.

Fritch considers itself the gateway to the Alibates Flint Quarries National Monument, an archeological goldmine still under development by the National Park Service.

Archeological traces of prehistoric Indians abound throughout the entire Alibates flint are on display in the museum.

The museum, which resembles a desert outpost in a very old John Wayne movie, was dedicated in 1976 as a bicentennial project of the City of Fritch, the National Park Service and the local bicentennial commit-

It stands today as a self-styled "monument to community pride and dedication" and the home of the hungriest catfish in captivity.

Ms. Savage said the museum attracts an average of 20,000 visitors a

It features five aquariums containing 11,000 gallons of water and everything from walleye, bass, crappie and carp to the aforementioned flathead catfish.

Counting turtles, there may be 16 species to look at.

"You'll notice, the fish kind of like to look at us, too," observed Ms. Savage as she and a visitor peered at a large mouth bass, which peered right back.

The most visually stunning of the exhibits are six lifesize dioramas of preserved wildlife in their natural Canadian River system, and tools habitat. They include bobcats, and weapons fashioned from turkeys, raccoons, coyotes, eagles and pronghorns, the latter an antelope-like deer.

"You can hunt the pronghorn legally, but the ranchers won't let you," said Ms. Savage. "And the pronghorns are all on the ranches. So it's Catch-22. You can but you can't."

Paintings by local artist LaNelle Poling provide the backdrop of each display and range from a starkly beautiful wintertime scene with bobcats to a springtime romp with a family of coyotes.

"Covotes will eat anything and one of their favorite foods is watermelon," Ms. Savage said. "They also kill lots of rabbits and rodents, and if it were not for coyotes, we'd be overrun by both."

Ms. Poling photographed a variety of places around Lake Meredith and throughout the Canadian River Valley and recreated them in her oil paintings, giving viewers a sense of realism and a powerful feel for this unvielding land.

Actual dirt, rock and vegetation from the area are used in the foreground along with small animals and reptiles indigenous to the High Plains - including a diamondback

"Our specimen is in a sunning posi-tion," said Ms. Savage, "and he's about four feet long.

The diamondback is said to be among the largest and most dangerous serpents in North America, and Ms. Savage's "specimen" looks it.

'He was caught on an oil lease in this area." she said.

Perhaps the most imposing diorama is one depicting a golden eagle, its mate and a nesting eaglet a common scene along the rocky ledges of the canyons and the breaks of the Canadian River.

'The eagle is protected by law, and no one is allowed to own one, said Ms. Savage. "Ours are on loan from the government."

comments regarding the rights of homosexuals (July 1, Brand).

Most of us, including some state lawmakers, still don't know for sure what will take place as a result of educational reforms passed in the special session. Gov. Mark White says some changes will be seen soon. State Education Commissioner Raymon Bynum said it will take 10 years to measure the success of the

Regardless, Texas taxpayers are supposed to cough up an additional $4.6 billion in order to improve highways, reform education and keep Gov. White's promise to the teachers for a pay raise.

Our highways need more money just to save and maintain the present system; some of our teachers are in need of a salary increase, and some of the reforms will benefit education in Texas. Few Texans, however, perceived our educational system to need fixing as bad as did H. Ross Perot.

The school package includes a restructured State Board of Education, competency tests and pay hikes for teachers, pre-kindergarten classes for students who need the help, graduation tests for high school seniors, reduced class sizes in the early grades, a ban on "social promotions," tighter control of extracurricular activities, and more state money for poor schools.

Some school officials have said that the controls on extracurricular activities could result in some school districts having to spend millions of dollars for new gyms, since there is no way to handle all the kids under the new time limits.

Some teachers are insulted about having to take a compentency test, but we don't see anything wrong with that. However, we don't think it will indicate whether a person is a good teacher or not-only if they know the information to be covered. Our concern is that the reforms may not do that much good. Almost everyone knows what's wrong with education, not only in Texas but in the nation. No one wants to talk about it because it may have been a bullet we had to bite, and perhaps we went about it the wrong way. Public education is in trouble because of courtordered integration. Because of the way it was carried out, educational standards for students and teachers were lowered to accommodate minorities. Federal judges decided how it was to be accomplished, and they are not experts in public education.

Just how these new reform measures will bring our public school standards up to par remains to be seen.

Restoring fairness

The U.S. Supreme Court handed down a decision a couple of weeks ago which restores some measure of common sense and fairness to the hiring and firing practices of American businesses.

The Supreme Court ruled that seniority is more important than affirmative action goals when layoffs take place. Only employees who can prove that they personally are victims of discrimination can benefit from affirmative action in such cases.

The ruling came from a suit brought out of Boston where white members of the fire department were laid off, regardless of their seniority, in order that blacks and other minorities could be retained on the job.

The white firemen contended, with some justification, that their rights ought to be as good as those of minorities and that they were entitled to justice in the hiring hall. The Supreme Court in effect agreed with Affirmative action programs are the result of laws passed over the past couple of decades to guarantee persons of minority races jobs on a priority or preferential basis. The government has decreed that employers holding any sort of government contract have to qualify by hiring a certain percentage of minority workers, regardless of experience or qualification.

This is because persons of minority races have been denied full participation in the mainstream of American society and have not had access to good jobs in the past because of their race. These laws are an attempt to correct all of the past grievances against minorities.

75 YEARS AGO

A little work on the part of Secretary Helman of the Commercial Club, with the assistance of other good boosters, brought Hereford into line for free mail delivery, having reached the $10,000 minimum which the department requires. The month of June showed a business of $1,1010.72, while the total was about $10,075. This amount puts Hereford in the list of illigibles and Postmaster Smith says the department will take notice at once.

The Penultimate Word

MY COUNTRY TIS OF THEE

My Country

Does not denote ownership. My country is not mine by automatic right of birth. It becomes my country by a personal act of committment and love. I do not own my country and my country does not own me. When I am committed to the well being of this land it is committed to my well being in return then, and only then, does it become "My Country."

Tis Of Thee

No love affair can live without expression. There must be times for evaluating the meaning and the value of this, our native land.

Sweet Land of Liberty

The word-smith loves the sound of phrases. There are some words that join together in such a delightful manner that they say it all. Sweet Land of Liberty is such a phrase. These four words are not to be explained. They are for rolling around in the mouth and savoring their rhythm while the meaning sinks into the soul.

Of Thee I Sing

At times our song of praise may feel like a solo sung in a high wind on a deserted mountain. While all others seem to be singing the grating notes of discord and criticism, let us sing on. Somehow, singing is contagious. If we sing on, sooner or later and one by one, we will build a choir.

Land Where My Fathers Died

The most remarkable thing about our history is that the men who died to make history were not supermen. They were human with all of the faults, doubts, fears and greed found in each of us. In a time of need these normal men rose to the occasion. Our future rests on the hope that in time of need, normal men can do it again. Land of the Pilgrim's Pride

Their pride came not from the beauty they found, for there was harshness instead of beauty. Their pride came not from their accomplishments, for they barely survived. Their pride came from their freedom. They came for freedom. They did not find it-they made it-fought for it-hewed it out of blood and tears, and it was good.

From Every Mountainside Let Freedom

Freedom is a bell never rung by chance. Freedom is a bell only rung by a people who are willing to walk through Hell if need be in order to hear the sweet tones of freedom ring in their land. Let freedom ring is not a wish nor a prayer, it is a rallying cry, a call to arms, a pledge from each of us. It happens to a people who are rolling the phrase "Sweet land of liberty" around in their mouths and savoring the rhythm while the meaning skins into the soul.

New data on those I.Q. tests

There was a radio program in the 1940s called QUIZ KIDS. It featured super-smart youngsters who knew all the answers.

What do you suppose happened to them. What are they doing today?

One of the QUIZ KIDS of the Forties was Ruth Duskin Feldman. She. now a journalist, has traced the careers of others featured on that program, has written a book called, Whatever Happened To The Quiz Kids?"

The book is contributing to a reevaluation of the I.Q. of youngsters, of how it is measured and what it is "What is an 'apteryx'?"

The boy who, at age 7, knew the answer to that question: "A small New Zealand bird" was Gerard Darrow. He was on the cover of Life magazine when he was 9.

After years of menial jobs and welfare checks, Darrow died of alcoholism at 47.

But then-James Watson was a Quiz Kid and he later discovered the key to genetic engineering, received a Nobel Prize for DNA.

"What is an 'arachnida'?" A spider.

"How far does a phonograph needle travel when it plays a 10-inch record?"

Answer: "Two-and-a-half inchessideways."

Surely society was justified in expecting great things of the youngsters who knew things like that. But when Mrs. Feldman sought out and relocated 80 former Quiz Kids it became obvious that they had enjoyed neither more successnor less than others less scholarly.

Harve Bennett produced the 'Stark Trek" movies.

Jack Lucal interprets the Pope's pronouncements.

Vanessa Brown became a movie star. Joel Kupperman became a pro-

But author Feldman deduces that those who succeeded less as a result of their extraordinary intelligence and more as a result of two other factors: persistence and willingness to work.

"Intelligence can be a trap," says Mrs. Feldman. "It can lead a young person to expect success will come easily. It almost never does."

ing funny-an illusion many columnists labor under-but Bolivia considered he was being insulting and immediately withdrew its athletes. The columnist apologized but it didn't do any good.

You'll never catch me in such a fix, as I don't believe anybody in Bolivia reads my column. What's The Brand's circulation down there?

Acupuncture means relief for Parisians

PARIS, Texas (AP) - Henry Davis said he's had back problems

He blames his latest pain on a donkey basketball game he took part in a year or so ago at North Lamar High School. It was just too much.

Unles you've suffered from back problems, it's doubtful you can imagine what the pain is like. Being "down in the back" is not as simple as it sounds. The pain is agonizing, and more often than not it's prolong-

Last year, Davis underwent surgery on his fifth lumbar vertebra in a Dallas hospital. But back pain seldom goes away so simply. Even after the operation, he said pain continued, particularly along the sciatic nerve in his left leg.

"(The doctor) said it would probably eventually get all right." But Davis isn't waiting.

Phu Vinh Bui arrived from Vietnam about five montth ago. He now lives in a small frame house on 3rd Street SE with several of his relatives. He's one of the Boat People who risked storms, pirates and government patrols to escape the communist regime of his own coun-

When Phu was 11, he was injured while taking lessons in one of the martial arts. In Vietnam, he said through an interpreter, there are few doctors. For help he went to an old Buddhist priest trained in acupuncture. It worked.

Phu lived with the priest for 14 years, he said, learning the art of acupuncture and eventually helping others. Now, Davis said, Phu is helping him. "Even though it's a different custom ... it won't hurt to try it," Davis said. "Fact is I even talked to my doctor over in Dallas after I had done it a while ... He said it's not uncommmon. He said lots of people have taken acupuncture.

"I'll tell you this: Those needles can be in my leg, and 10 minutes after they've been in there, my leg feels like the other leg.

"I know it's helped me. (The pain) has gone to the lower part of my leg, and it's not up as high as it was."

Davis jokes with the family. They're friends. Phu's uncle, Hien Van Phan, has lived here for the past 10 years and worked with Davis for a time before getting on at the local Davis sits on the couch while Phu brings out the needles, tiny slivers of silver and gold soaked in alcohol to prevent infection. Some are not more than an inch or so long; others are about four inches.

One above the eye, two below each eye, one in each temple. Davis rolls up the left leg of his pants. Several more needles go in various places up and down his leg. No pain, Davis said. Nothing to it.

The walls of the living room are covered with intricate wood carvings, so detailed the eye must stop and take them in. Most are created by Hoi Huu Ngoyen, another of Hien's nephews who recently arrived from Vietnam.

Fifteen-year-old Phan Thanh Hung - everyone calls him John - brings out one of his carvings. He's a student at Crockett Junior High, but Hoi has been passing his talents along to Davis sits patiently, moving very little. If you move too much, he said, the action of the muscles may bend the needles.

After 15 minutes, the needles are removed.

"It's a gradual deal," he said. "He told me it would take about 30 treatments the first time he grabbed my leg. I can tell some days my leg is (more numb than other days), and he can tell without my telling him."

The topic turns to warts. Phu says he can remove a wart in three minutes, and it will not return. Davis' nephew, Eddie "Bubba" Merryman, a 15-year-old freshman at North Lamar High School who had accompanied his uncle on the visit,

Phu placed a sewing needle in the wart, heated it with a flame and removed the wart. There was some pain, Bubba said, especially when the alcohol was applied.

Another "patient" arrives at the house. He has much the same problem as Davis, plus some circulation problems in one of his hands that causes it to go numb.

He requested that his name not be

"It's all right," he said of the treatment. "It's beginning (to help)."

He's had four or five treatments over a period of a week or so, he said. "No way," he said of his initial reaction to the thought of acupunc-

Waco Indian tale one of broken culture

By BOB DARDEN Waco Tribune-Herald

WACO, Texas (AP) - The original inhabitants of Waco lived perilous lives. A distinct part of the Wichita nation, the Waco Indians share common culture and language with the Wichitas, as well as their war-like habits. And in the end, their fighting skills could not save them from the flood of white-skinned immigrants from the East and a paralyzing series of forced marches that reduced a once-proud people to virtual ex-

In pre-civilized times, the Wacos who called themselves the Kitkiti'sh, or "original people" - were a classic hunter-gatherer people, roaming Central and North Texas, following the buffalo migrations, living in temporary shelters. There were four major Waco Indian settlements, the largest being an ancient site between the old Waco High School and Indian Spring Park in downtown Waco.

Some historians, including the late Dr. Robert T. Hill, claim that Waco is the site of the oldest permanent settlement in North America. Spanish maps show a settlement here as early as 1541 - called "Guasco" - 23 years before St. Augustine in Florida was founded.

Wacos and their allies the Tawakonis (sometimes called Tehuacanas) fought continuous battles with marauding bands of Osage and Cherokees to the north and the blood-thirsty Lipas to the south, and occasionally even scrapped with Comanche and Apache war parties. While many often were injured, few were killed during the forays since their weapons had progressed little beyond the Stone Age.

That all changed in 1541 with the intrusion of European explorers, most notably Vasquez de Coronado. The Spanish conquistador unwittingly introduced the Wacos and Wichitas to horses and - later guns. This drastically changed the Waco lifestyle and in a few short generations, the Wacos became accomplished horsemen, riding and shooting with deadly abandon.

In time, the Wacos and Wichitas even defeated a small Spanish army in pitched battles in 1749 at the Taoyaya Spanish fort and in the destruction of the San Saba mission. But the Wacos never were able to barter (or steal) enough rifles to compete effectively wth the larger tribes to the west and north.

That lack of firepower proved deadly in the largest battle ever fought on what now is Waco soil. Wilbarger's "Indian Depredations in Texas" records that a roving band of Wacos stole all the horses of two Cherokee villages in northeast Texas in late 1829. The Cherokees were well-equipped with the latest rifles and even had Negro slaves and modern wagons. Infuriated, they made a forced march to the main Waco village, located near the old Waco High School.

The Cherokees attacked at dawn, firing a volley from their rifles that killed dozens of Wacos. The Wacos were particularly low on rifles at the time, but fought back stubbornly with bows and arrows under the leadership of chief Illah-Tong before withdrawing behind their crude fortifications. Wilbarger claims that the Cherokees were planning an all-out assault to finish the village when they heard the noisy arrival of 200 Tawokonis from the East, summoned by an alert Waco runner.

Though the Tawakonis did not have rifles - and remained prudently beyond rifleshot - the Cherokees melted into the Brazos River bottoms and quietly withdrew, without their horses, but with 55 Waco scalps.

Relations between the Wacos and encroaching white settlers were little better. Sporadic fighting broke out, and Sam Houston once stripped a Waco chief named Narhashtowey "Lame Arm" of his rank of chief for an alleged depredation. The Cherokees continued to harass the Wacos and by 1837, drove the Wacos from the village on the Brazos. That I felt a little silly as the weighty needles wobbled from side to side with the movement of my head. Later, after seeing photos of myself, my suspicions were confirmed: I looked even sillier.

Results? None noticeable. But Phu did say I needed more than a single

Brazos to control the Indians, but even the Rangers soon were forced to

Most Texas Indian tribes signed an agreement with the Texas Republic the following year at the mouth of the Washita River in Fannin County that permitted the Indians much freedom, so long as they submitted to state supervision. The Comanches and the Wacos never accepted Texas' jurisdiction and often fought on alone.

The situation continued to deteriorate until 1843 when a threeday council was held on Tawakoni Creek (about four or five miles east of Waco near Highway 6 in the vicinity of Harrison Switch), when the last great chief of the Wacos, Acaquash, urged the Wacos to sign a treaty with Texas. It took him two years to convince the Wacos to sign.

It didn't work. Warfare between the settlers and Indians simmered continually, occasionally breaking out in open war. Contemporary accounts claim that the Wacos were superb horsemen and often got the better of their white enemies. But the tide of settlers threatened to overwhelm them and farmers simply killed the Indians and took over the land assigned to them by the treaty.

In 1855, Texas, by then a member of the United States, rounded up all of the smaller tribes and a few of the Comanches - who continued to harrass the invaders for years to come - and forced them to resettle on a reservation on the Clear Fork of the Brazos in North Texas, near Fort claiming that land as well and the harried Wacos suffered badly at the hands of the better-equipped immigrants. When the state government tacitly approved "open season," the Indians including the remaining Wacos, were forced into the Indian Territory, to a tiny reservation on the Washita River, on land leased from the Choctaws and Chickasaws.

When the Civil War broke out, the confederacy made overtures to the Indians, and some frustrated Wacos even joined the so-called "Caddo Battalion." Others simply were forced from their lands and scattered throughout southern Kansas, where many died of disease and starvation during cruel winters on the poor land.

After the Civil War, the powerful, seasoned armies of the United States subdued even the once-mighty Comanche, Kiowa, Cheyenne and Arapaho bands, gathered the few remaining Wichitas and Wacos together — now numbering about 800. - and forced them into yet another reservation in central Oklahoma. Their children were sent to boarding houses on the East Coast and the Wichitas were forced to submit to an intensive Americanization program supervised by federal agents that forced them to become subsistence farmers on poor land. Their language and customs were vigorously eradicated.

The surviving Wacos and Wichitas eagerly embraced the Ghost Dance movement of the 1890s, a Native In-

The government bloodily crushed the movement and punished the adherents who dreamed only of a land before the white man came.

In 1900, even this semblance of a nation was denied to them when the government abolished the reservation system in Oklahoma and broke up the plots into 160-acre allotments, despite vigorous, capable lobbying from their chief, Tawakoni Jim. Tawakoni Jim later brought a number of Wichitas who could boast some Waco blood to the original Cotton Palace Pageant in 1912.

Institute eyes Mexican future Cardenas and wrote a highly

MEXICO CITY (AP) - The Summer Institute of Linguistics began its work of preserving unwritten native languages 50 years ago in Mexico and has since spread to 36 other countries. But the Dallas-based group says it may not be able to stay here much longer.

An institute spokesman acknowledged there has been growing hostility toward it since the beginning of this year.

Robert Goerz, director of communications for the institute in Mexico, said the group may decide on its own to leave Mexico, even if the government does not kick them out as critics are demanding.

"I am sure we are reconsidering our position," Goerz said.

In the last several months a flurry of news columns has alleged that the institute is disrupting indigenous the CIA.

Columnist Manuel Buendia, one of the most prominent in the country before he was killed by an unknown gunman in May, wrote that the Protestant group is offering "espionage services" to the United States along Mexico's border with Central America. He made the charge last March in Excelsior newspaper.

Few of the accusations offer strong evidence to support them

The group's goals in Mexico are to alphabetize 108 indigenous languages and then translate the New Testament into them, said Robert G. Schneider, an international coordinator for the institute.

With work completed on 42 of the languages, institute workers had hoped to complete the remainder by about 1990, Schneider said.

But there have been recent reports of brawls in rural areas between traditionally Roman Catholic townsfolk and those who embrace the ways of the Protestant "missionaries." Other critics doubt the quality of the institute's work and say the job should be left to Mexicans who know the native culture.

In what is believed to be the first act of violence against the institute here, a June 13 bomb shook the buildings at institute headquarters in Mexico City but injured no one.

"The Mexican government has been powerless to expell (the institute) from the country" and "the only recourse we have now is violence," said flyers left at the bomb scene. The flyers were signed by the Mexican Revolutionary Command, a group unknown to police investigators. The institute is no stranger to hostility from the political left. In Colombia, the M-19 rebel group claimed responsibility for the March 1981 murder of institute worker

Chester Bitterman. But the institute once felt it had a special bond with Mexico, which welcomed the missionaries with open arms back in 1934. William C. The church, a national landmark, is surrounded on three sides by walls containing a large proportion of stained glass. On the fourth wall, behind the altar, is another six-foot circular section of stained glass.

The value of the windows, Foster said, is "very subjective." Many of them are not of great significance by themselves, as they weren't made with any special type of glass or by any famous artist, but they are of great value to the church curators, he said.

Foster returned the first section to Philadelphia in November and picked up a second in January. He said he probably will pick up the last section sometime this month.

Foster says he is about 80 percent finished with the next-to-last section of windows.

To get the sections of window to Bryan and back, Foster puts them in crates and hauls them in his 34-ton truck with each section insured for about $50,000.

Foster began working with stained glass as a hobby but made it his fulltime profession nearly seven years ago. Before that he had been doing research at Texas A&M University. He has a master's degree in biology.

Foster's wife, Betty, also works with him. He says she deals a lot with color and design of windows.

The couple and their helpers both make new windows and restore old ones. The work they do ranges from very traditional to modern.

Foster said design decisions for the windows are dictated by the design of a building. Modern, he said, tends to emphasize patches of color compared with traditional which often incorporates lifelike figures into the

AT SECURITY FEDERAL, CHECKING IS ONLY $4 PER MONTH.

AND THERE ARE THREE WAYS TO GET IT FREE!

Alot of people are paying $10 or $12 a month for checking. But why? Security Federal's Security Checking has no service charge with a $200 balance. No service charge with a $5,000 savings balance. And no service charge for senior citizens.

And if you drop below the minimum balance, it only costs $4, regardless of the number of checks you write.

Security Federal even earns 54% interest on every dollar. So why pay a lot of money on service charges? Make the switch to Security Checking. It saves plenty.

There are a number of upcoming baseball tournaments for youths in the city's Kids Inc. program.

The Babe Ruth 13-year-old all-stars will host a state tournment here beginning the week of July 16. The 14-15 year old all-stars will travel to Plainview the same week.

The boys Major League all-star squad (11-12 year olds) has just been selected. The first-place Yankees send five members to the team- Benny Gonzales, Russell Backus, Jim Anima, Alonso Ramirez and Anthony Mondragon.

The Astros will be represented by John Cornelius, Carl Schumacher, Max Mungia and Jason Walterscheid.

The rest of the team is made up of Blas Kantu and alternate Bubba Longof the Rangers; Ralph Cervantes (White Sox); Amado Lopez (Braves); and Keith Kelso and Shane Kapkaof the Dodgers.

The boys Majors will play a tourney in Dimmitt July 16-18.

Kids Inc. officials are seeking volunteers to provide housing to young baseball players.

The youths will be in Hereford the week of July 16-21 for the West Texas State Tournament of the Babe Ruth League baseball.

At least 15 temporary foster homes need to be located, with each household to accomodate two or more players.

Families wanting more information are asked to contact Karen Page at 364-6603 or Carolyn Delozier at 364-0140.

Coach Ruben "Pudgy" Vargas will be instructing tennis lessons for Hereford YMCA's Summer Tennis

First session is July 16-20. Enrollment is limited to 16 youngsters from grade-school age through junior high.

Students will meet with Vargas 9-10 a.m. at the Hereford High School tennis courts.

The second session, also limited to 16 participants, is to run from July 23-27.

Youths are asked to furnish own racquet and can of tennis balls.

Cost for the classes are $15 for YMCA members and $20 for nonmembers. For additional information or questions, contact Weldon Knabe at 364-6990.

Bell wants Parrish, O'Brien to be All-Stars

day morning Buddy Bell was expressing his happiness over being named to the American League All-Star Team for the fifth straight year.

But he was also voicing his disappointment that his Texas Ranger teammates Larry Parrish and Pete O'Brien, who have combined for 105 RBIs did not make the team, did not make it.

"I wanted to go," said Bell. "But not at the expense of LP (Parrish) and Obie (O'Brien)."

Parrish and O'Brien will stay home over the break while Bell will travel to San Francisco for the All-Star game, but Friday night all three were definitely together as they combined for four of the Rangers runs in a 5-3 victory over the Detroit Tigers.

Part of Bell's reasoning on why Parrish and O'Brien should have Parrish scored twice, drove in a run and had a single, double and homer to assist Bell's attack.

Catcher Jim Sunberg

Ex-Ranger named as All-Star

MILWAUKEE (AP) - There were times during the offseason when Jim Sundberg wondered if he still had a place in baseball.

He was coming off an injuryplagued season with the Texas Rangers in which he batted a meager

And he found himself expendable after spending 10 seasons as the Rangers' catcher. In December, he was traded to the Milwaukee Brewers for catcher Ned Yost and a minor-league pitcher.

But those self-doubts were erased

Sundberg, 32, had some personality conflicts with Texas Manager Doug Rader last season, which affected his overall game.

"The mental part of the game can really affect the physical part." he said. "When you're not hitting well and you're not doing well, it really affects you, psychologically. To get "The atmosphere (at Milwaukee) has been one thing - a more winning attitude even though we haven't been winning. There is a difference."

Sundberg has proved to be a steal for the Brewers, both offensively and defensively.

Going into Friday night's game, he was hitting a solid .294, with four home runs and 28 RBI, including seven game-winning RBI. Defensively, he ranks No.1 among regular American League catchers by throwing out 25 of 44 baserunners for 57 percent. Because of those numbers, Sundberg thought he had a good chance of making the All-Star squad.

"I guess I was anticipating it for a couple of weeks," he said. "I thought there might be a chance and I started looking at the statistics. I thought there was a chance to go.'

Over the last 22 games, Sundberg is hitting at a .354 clip.

Sundberg is a proven defensive catcher, earning six Gold Glove awards in his career.

His hitting was the big question mark coming into this season. But Sundberg said not feeling the pressure to contribute on offense has helped him at the plate.

"Spring training I set out to see if I was OK physically," he said. "I pretty much convinced myself in spring training that I was fine physically. Although I didn't have great satistics in spring training, I knew that it would come.

"And if I happened to get a couple of breaks, and get off to a good start, I knew the confidence would come. That's what happened, I just set my mind to certain things and I really wasn't going to be bothered by it. I never felt the pressure to hit on this club. I just felt that really wasn't my job. I had to catch, and I knew that I probably could hit.

On young athletes

Doctors using sports medicine

HOUSTON (AP) - When a 12-year-old tennis player tried to imitate John McEnroe's explosive court behavior, Dr. David Yukelson, a sports psychologist, was there to explain the benefits of psychological programming for peak performance - minus the histrionics.

When a high school basketball player thought his career was over because of a congenital bone defect in his knee, Dr. James Butler came up with a special brace that allowed the young athlete to resume playing.

Dr. William Risser correctly diagnosed the cause of an involuntary arm motion in a young sprinter. Treatment allowed the youth to drastically improve his times.

The doctors are part of a team of physicians and specialists at the Hermann Hospital Center for Sports Medicine, which specializes in the athletes from 6-year-old figure help youngsters match skills and inskaters to 19-year-old weight-lifting enthusiasts. "There is a real tendency among doctors who don't know much about sports to just say quit," Risser said. "These young people were not getting answers to their questions so there was a need for something like this. "The common response from most doctors is 'if it hurts don't do it.' We try to find out why it hurts and help the young athlete to continue playing," Risser said. Yukelson, who serves as administrative manager of the center, deals with the psychological stresses encountered by young athletes. "We had a 12-year-old who was a pretty good tennis player for his age group," Yukelson said. "His idol is John McEnroe. Well, his parents started noticing him throwing his racket around the court and having tantrums and suddenly they were asking themselves 'whose kid is McEnroe, famed for his on-court eruptions, knows exactly what he is doing when he challenges a call or berates a linesman, Yukelson said. But 12-year-olds, who haven't learned how to handle some competitive situations, are merely imitators, he added.

"We try to redefine what winning is all about," Yukelson said. "Kids have a way of determining their self worth by how they perform on the field. If they win they feel worthy. If they lose they feel unworthy."

Yukelson said the young tennis player came to realize that he could not stroke a tennis ball perfectly every time.

"Success is peace of mind and knowing that you lived up to your own potential and not those of other kids or the competitive urges of your parents," Yukelson said. "Johnny can go 0-for-4 and still walk away feeling successful if he did all he could do to get a hit."

Risser and Butler evaluate and treat all types of medical problems related to sports participation. They conduct an extensive preparticipation exam that might turn physical and emotional care of young up unknown congenital defects and

U.S. should get all Gold Medals

Lewis is a magnificently gifted athlete, a sprinter-long jumper extraordinaire in the mold of Jesse in 1896

Mary Decker is a running machine; turn her on and she races away from her opposition.

Edwin Moses is the ultimate technician in the intermediate hurdles, skimming over the barriers with the sharpness and skill of a surgeon.

Individually, they perhaps are the greatest athletes ever in their events.

Collectively, they represent the United States' best hopes for gold medals in the Olympic track and field competition, which runs from Aug. 3-12 at the Los Angeles Col- in 1983.

They head a team judged by some to be the best ever to represent the United States in Olympic track and field, carved from a rugged set of national trials last month that left some of the sport's top names off the roster. "Absolutely the best team we have ever sent to the Olympics," said Ollan Cassell, executive director of The Athletics Congress, the sport's U.S. governing body. "Some of the performances at the trials were unbelievable." "I think this is our greatest men's team," said Larry Ellis, the coach for the men's squad. Brooks Jackson, the women's coach, also expressed satisfaction with his team.

Based on performance, the U.S. team can be touted as the finest the nation ever has produced. But that also can be subject to argument, because over the years - in this case, four years, the time between Olympiads — the caliber of athletes always is improving. In addition, the team is relatively young, lacks tough international competition and is mostly unfamiliar with the pressures of Olympic competition, since the United States has not participated in the Summer Games since 1976.

Still, the American team is a skilled group and, buoyed by the boycott of the Soviet-bloc nations, is looking forward to reaping a gold medal bonanza in what generally is judged as the Olympics' blue-ribbon sport.

Of the 41 track and field events -24 for men, 17 for women - the Americans have a realistic shot at winning 18 golds. Only once since the modern Games began in 1896 has the U.S. track team ever won that many, collecting 22 in 1904. That year, however, the Games included such events as the standing high jump, standing long jump, standing triple jump, 60-meter dash, 200-meter low hurdles, four-mile team race, 56-pound weight throw, the all-around and the tug-of-war all now discontinued events. Of the 24 events - all for men - in 1904, the Americans lost only the weight throw and all-around competition.

Women began competing in Olympic track and field in 1928, and since then, the American women have not done well except in the 100-meter dash and 400-meter relay, winning five gold medals in each event.

This year, there are three new women's events - the 3,-000 meters, the 400-meter intermediate hurdles and the marathon. In addition, the heptathlon has replaced the pen-

Decker fought off some tough challenges from Soviet Union runners and captured the women's 1,500 and 3,000 meters, and the indomitable Moses, unbeaten since 1977, continued his remarkable winning streak in the 400-meter intermediate hurdles at Helsinki. Through the Olympic Trials, he had won 90 seconsecutive finals at that distance.

Decker had been aiming for a 1,500-3,000 double in the Games, but doubts arose when she was nipped by Ruth Wysocki in the 1,500-meter final in last month's trials. Decker, however, may still decided to race in both events.

Weightlifting turns into farce

LOS ANGELES (AP) - When the Soviet Union and its allies announced their boycott of the 1984 Olympic Games, they instantly changed the weightlifting competition from a showdown to a shambles.

Those missing from Albert Gersten Pavilion at Loyola-Marymount University in Los Angeles from July 29-Aug. 8 will include the owners of nearly all the sport's world records, the two-time weightlifter of the year and all of the top-rated lifters in 1983.

But their absence, as U.S. weightlifting officials see it, will make competition suspenseful in all 10 weight categories. And leaders of the United States Weightlifting Federation hope the Games will stimulate a revival of interest in the sport in America.

Others view the Games as an opportunity to attone for the embarrassment of a doping scandal that disqualified 11 lifters at the 1983 Pan American Games and barred the United States' best weightlifter from participating in Los Angeles.

Still, the boycott will have a stark impact on weightlifting, for arguably in no other sport are the Soviets and the Eastern European nations so

In the 1983 world championships, Soviet lifters - led by 1980 Olympic 181-pound gold medalist Yurik Vardanian - won 30 medals and took sixtitles. Right behind the USSR was Bulgaria, with two-time world weightlifter of the year Blagoi Blagoev at 198 pounds, which won three other titles.

The Bulgarians reversed the order at the 1984 European championships by winning six classes. Their leader this time was teen-age titan Naim Suleimanov, who won at 123 pounds and kilogram-for-kilogram soon could become the most dominant lifter in the world.

But instead of seeing them on the medal platform in Los Angeles, the world may hear the names of China's coach of the 10-man U.S. squad.

With the competition denuded, several nations could figure prominently in the medals chase. The Chinese and Japanese particularly are strong in the lower weights, while West Germany, Australia, Romania and the United States are better in the heavier classes.

In fact, Newton said each U.S. lifter should place in the top 10 in his class, "and I anticipate some will break into the top six."

If Newton's prediction comes true, it would represent a dramatic turnabout. The sport withered in the United States during the late 1970s and early 1980s because of the retirement of many of the country's top lifters and the dearth of a comprehensive juniors program, said Murray Levin, president of the U.S. Weightlifting Federation.

He and Newton hope a strong American showing in the Games will accelerate the rebuilding efforts.

"We're going to have good broadcast coverage and it will definitely help for people to see our guys," Newton said.

The cameras, however, won't be focusing on the snatch's and cleanand-jerk's of Jeff Michels, the nation's best weightlifter.

Michels, a heavyweight who was the only American to crack the top 10 rankings in the world last year, won three events at last year's Pan Am Games.But he and 10 other lifters were disqualified - and Michels was suspended for two years by the International Weightlifting Federation after testing positive for banned; substances.

The Pan Am incident shocked the world weightlifting community and; prompted IWF President Gottfried School to issue a call to all sports federations to cooperate to "overcome this 'disease' tainting the sport." Schodl also pledged in an editorial: in World Weightlifting magazine late ! last year that the IWF would "continue to do its best in order to be a flag-bearer of fair play and cleanliness in sport."

Drugs, though, are not expected to be the focus of weightlifting during the XXIII Olympiad. In these Games, as it was four years ago ! when the United States led the boycott, it will be on those who stayed away.

"Let's face it," Levin said. "The boycott will have a profound effect, o because the Russians and the Eastern Europeans are so dominant in our sport."

ou

The Eastern-bloc boycott means some of the world's top track-andfield stars will miss the Games, including world record holders Sergey Bubka of the Soviet Union in the pole vault, Udo Beyer of East Germany in the shot put, Marita Koch of East Germany in the women's 200 and? Jarmila Kratochvilova in the women's 400 and 800.

Cabbage is one of the nice vegetables grown locally. When purchasing, a head of cabbage should be solid and heavy for its size.

To store, remove discolored leaves from head of cabbage. Place in a covered container or moistureproof bag, or wrap in foil or wax paper, and keep in the refrigerator.

Raw cabbage is a very good source of vitamin C and some vitamin A. During the cooking process, however, there may be some vitamin

One cup of finely shredded raw cabbage has only 20 calories with one cup of cooked cabbage having only 30

Have you ever tried making sauerkraut? Try conserving that extra cabbage that you have in your garden or that you can buy at a reasonably low price this way.

Twenty make 16 to 18 quarts of sauerkraut. Start by removing the outer leaves and undesirable portions from 50 pounds of mature heads of cabbage, then wash and drain them. You'll need a six gallon crock.

Cut the heads into halves or quarters and remove the core. Use a shredder or sharp knife (a meat slicer is excellent) to cut the cabbage into shreds about the thickness of a

In a large container, thoroughly mix three tablespoons of salt wit five pounds of shredded cabbage. Let the salted cabbage stand for several minutes to wilt slightly. This keeps the cabbage shreds from excessive breaking and bruising.

Pack the salted cabbage firmly and evenly into a clean crock or jar. Using a wooden spoon or your hand, press it down firmly until the juice comes to the surface. Repeat the shredding, salting and packing of the abbage until the crock is filled to within three or four inches of the top of the crock or jar.

Cover the cabbage by placing a plastic bag filled with water on top of the fermenting cabbage. The water filled bag seals the surface from exposure to air, and prevents the growth of a film of yeast or mold. It also serves as a weight. For extra protection, the bag with the water in it can be placed inside in another plastic bag.

Any bag used should be of heavy weight, water tight plastic and in-

By DIANNE PIERSON Librarian

Historical novels will be featured this week at the Deaf Smith County Library. "Charleston," the family saga that thrilled thousands, continues here as Garden Tradd flies in the face of antebellum conventions and Charlestonian notions of proper behavior.

Turning her back on Tradd family ambitions and intrigues, Garden follows her own fortunes beyond her native city to New York and on across the Atlantic to England and France during the Roaring Twenties.

Garden's years pass like days measured out in spangled gowns and spilled champagne and the embrace of endless full-moon nights...until her compulsive searchings, her headlong wanderings return her to Charleston and its revenge and, finally, to its very special kind of forgiveness.

In the twilight of the Old South, in the glare of the Jazz Age, to the old rhythms of a city named Charleston, and to the new, wild modern beat of a dance craze known as the Charleston, Alexandra Ripley in "On Leaving Charleston," tells the dramatic story of a family and an

Couple united in wedding ceremony

Herb De La Rosa of Amarillo were united in marriage Saturday afternoon at San Jose Catholic Church with Father Phillip Lindley officiating.

Church decorations included a teal and pink flower arrangement, candelabra, and unity candle, and white pew bows.

The bride is the daughter of Fidel and Paquita Reyna Sr. of 801 S. Avenue K and the bridegroom is the son of Gonzalo and Tomasa De La Rosa of Pacoima, Calif.

Serving as maid of honor was Hilda Garza, and the bride's brother, Jerry Reyna, was best man.

Madrinas and padrinos included Mr. and Mrs. Ernesto Garza, padrinos de lazo: Mr. and Mrs. Fidel Reyna Jr., padrinos de cojines; Mr. and Mrs. Sammy Sanchez, padrinos de arras; Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Reyna, padrinos de biblilia and rosario; Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Villegas, padrinos de buque.

Others were Mr. and Mrs. Fabian Martinez, padrinos de iglesia; Mr. and Mrs. Epifanio Lucero and Mr. and Mrs. Santiago Sanchez, padrinos de cake; Mr. and Mrs. Rafael Tarango, padrinos de invitaciones.

Lee Reyna and Baldemar Reyna, brothers of the bride, served as ushers. Pages were Charlie Reyna Jr., nephew of the bride and son of Charlie and Cyntia Reyna, and Amanda Gaitan, daughter of Danny and Nelda Gaitan.

Michelle Tarango, daughter of Rafael and Socorro Tarango, served as flower girl and Dion Reyna, son of Fidel and Beatrice Reyna Jr., was ring bearer. Fabian Reyna, son of Rose Mary Reyna of Hereford and Fidel and Beatrice Reyna Jr., was candle lighter.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor-length gown of white, sheer organza and reembroidered chantilly lace over satin featuring sheer bodice and sheer window sleeves with deep lace cuffs. Her floor-length tiered veil was edged in scalloped lace and fell from an azar pearl crown.

She wore her mother's gold and diamond tear drop earrings and carried a bouquet of teal and pink carnations with pearl drops and white, pink and teal silk ribbons.

Her madrinas wore long, teal dresses of chantilly satin and carried long-stemmed pink carnations with pink and teal ribbons.

A reception followed the ceremony in San Jose Church Hall. Tables were decorated with basket arrangements containing teal and white tulle dried flowers centered with miniature bride and groom. The three-tiered white cake was decorated with pink and teal flowers, topped with miniature bride and groom and surrounded by two heart-shaped parent cakes.

The couple will be at home in Amarillo after July 12.

The bride is a 1976 graduate of Hereford High school and is to graduate from West Texas State University in August with a B.A. in elementary education with bilingual education endorsement. She is presently employed by the Hereford Independent School District.

The bridegroom plans to graduate from West Texas State University in December with a B.S. in political science. He is currently employed by Amarllo National Bank.

Part of the problem with cocaine is its "Jet Set" image which makes it glamorous to some. The rest of the problem is that it is addicting.

According to Dr. Mark Gold, director of research at Fair Oaks Hospital, Summit, N.J. "cocaine stimulates cocaine taking," thereby producing an addiction.

Gayle Cotten honored during board meeting

Members of the Child Welfare Board met Thursday afternoon in regular session in the Commissioners Courtroom with Carolyn Johnson presiding in the absence of Beverly Jayroe, chairman.

Highlighting the meeting was the presentation by the Golden Spread Foster Children's Association to Gavle Cotten, CPA, who has worked volunteerly for the organization for one-and-a-half years requesting a tax exempt status for them. The presentation was made by Ira Purdy, foster home coordinator of the state for the Department of Human Cotten reported that the status is almost complete and that money given to the foster care for children can be tax free.

Foster parents attending the meeting included Judy Cross, Terry and Charlene Connally and Cynthia Streun. They gave update reports on the foster children they are keeping and some of their needs.

One foster family requested a trampoline for the children and it was also noted that many of the foster children come to them so abused and emotional that trampolines and swimming are two of the best things for them physically and emotionally. If anyone has a used trampoline they would like to sell or donate, they may contact board member Lavon Nieman at 364-6957.

During the business meeting, it was reported that three films have been ordered. The films concern child abuse and will be shown to different age levels of students in the local schools. Ms. Johnson volunteered to be in charge of training people to show these films.

Judy Baker gave the financial report and Avis White read the minutes.

Cindy Burnman, case worker, reported that another case worker is needed here and anyone that would like to apply should call 1-376-7214. Applicants must have a college

Kirk Merker, case worker, told the board that he is transferring to Amarillo and thanked the board for being so concerned about foster children and helpful to the case

Board members in attendance included Bill Johnson, Avis White and Ms. Nieman. Absent were Laura Walker and the Rev. Ron Cook.

Political skills workshop planned

"Making A Difference; Women in Electoral Politics," a one-day skills workshop to prepare more women to enter public policy arenas, will be offered to all women Aug. 18 in Lubbock by the United Methodist Women of the Northwest Texas Conference.

The program to be held in St. Johns United Methodist Church, 1501 University, Lubbock, is part of a nationwide emphasis of the Women's Division, General Board of Global Ministries, United Methodist Church, according to Donna Echols, Friona, chair of the workshop. The Northwest Texas Conference covers a geographic area that includes all of the Texas Panhandle and the South Plains and extends south to Midland, east to Abilene, and north through Vernon to the Oklahoma Line.

Some 60 conferences around the nation have scheduled similar workshops in 1984. Professional trainers for the workshops are being provided by National Women's Education Fund, the non-partisan National Training and Information Service for Women and Public Leadership, with headquarters in

Washignton, D.C. "This United Methodist Women's emphasis and the workshop which we are sharing with all women of the communities within our geographic bounds is a response to the fact that only 10 percent of all elected officials are women, although womena re 53 percent of the population," Donna

Echols chair of the workshop stated.

The day's agenda will begin at 9:30 a.m. with a session of worship and analysis of the Biblical and theological foundations for social action. The skills training program will begin at 10:30 a.m. The agenda will concentrate on skills presentations and exercises under the direction of the National Women's Education Fund trainer, using materials provided by the NWEF.

The registration fee for the workshop is $25 which includes lunch and child care. Registrations may be sent to Helen Releford, 1415 Ave. M, Lubbock, Tx 79401. Naving registration forms and checks in by Aug. 1 is desirable, but registrations will be accepted through Aug. 11.

The national goals of the project are to educate 10,000 women in workshops across the country, to identify 400 potential candidates, and women will be ready to run for office

Miss Landers feted with bridal shower

Friends and relatives gathered to honor Tonya Landers, bride-elect of Frankie Garcia, at a bridal shower held recently in the E.B. Black Receiving guests with the honoree were her mother, Joyce Landers, and the prospective bridegroom's mother, Aurora Garcia. Also visiting with guests was the bride-elect's grandmother, Sadie Shaw.

The refreshment table was decorated with a contemporary silk flower arrangement of fall colors placed in a rustic basket graced by a delicate brass butterfly. The arrangement was a gift from the hostesses.

A variety of cookies and fruit punch were served, and Leta Kaul provided background piano music for the group.

Out-of-town guests included aunts and cousins of the bride; Ruth Smith, Kay and Julie Malicoat and Barbara and Betsy Ross. Also, attending from Amarillo were sisters of the prospective bridegroom, Amanda Greene, Audrey Muro and Annabelle Marino.

Hosting the event were Angie Baros, Amanda Greene, Anna Moreno, Anita Ramirez, Aurora Garcia, Pauline Trevino, Margie Ford, Glenna Tooley, Sandra Martin, Janice Brownlow.

porch swing from the Historical Society, and two shade trees from the honoree's niece, Helen Sears Cox, and her nephews, Jim Sears and Wheeler Sears.

In 1977 when the Black House came into the care of the Historical Society, Sue James began landscaping its grounds which had been untended for several years. She removed dead and decaying trees, high weeds and rough grasses, and installed watering systems.

In response to her appeal, many businesses and individuals donated replacement trees, shrubs, balbs, and grass seeds. Ms. Jones personally bought flower seeds and gardening

She also planned a formal flower garden with walks leading to a central point, a gazebo, which was designed by Society member, Mrs. Juston McBride.

Ms. James sowed the beds to perennials, daisies, larkspur, columbine, delphinium and others and ramdomly planted them as old fashioned gardens were done. She also developed peony plants.

Chicken barbecue tips given

COLLEGE STATION - Texans enjoy backyard barbecing and eating as much as anybody in the U.S., and chicken barbecue is an all-time favorite.

A few simple steps will enable you to enjoy mouth-watering chicken barbecue to your heart's content, said James Denton, poultry marketing specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System.

Chicken barbecuing involves four basic steps: first, split the birds in half and sprinkle each half generously with salt and black pepper before placing on the pit, Denton advised. To shorten barbecuing time cut halves into parts.

Second, make sure coals are white hot before putting the chicken on the grill. Any type of cooker can be used, but keep the coals 8 to 12 inches from the cooking rack for best results, the specialist said.

Another basic step for top-notch chicken barbecue is to use a basting sauce during the cooking process which contains no tomato product or sugar because such sauces burn easily. A basting sauce will keep meat moist and juicy and add a desired flavor. Apply basting sauce and turn chicken halves frequently.

Denton suggested, these ingredients for a basting sauce: 1 tablespoon salt, 1 teaspoon black pepper, 1 stick butter or margarine, 2 tablespoons Worcestershire Sauce and a few drops of hot sauce or red pepper. Heat the mix over a low flame until the butter or oleomelts; then add the juice of one lemon (vinegar may be substituted). Next fill the pan with water and heat but do not boil. Spices such as garlic salt or lemon pepper can be added to suit personal preference. To top off the barbecuing process, apply a finishing sauce to the chicken about the last 20 to 30 minutes before cooking is complete. This is the most critical time during the entire cooking process, Denton emphasized.

WHITEFACE AVIATION CORP.

LOOKING FOR A GOOD ROTATION CROP FOR YOUR COTTON? Try wheat. A number of cotton producers who have tried wheat in rotation with their primary crop have noted the two work particularly well together. Wheat provides the needed organic matter for the soil, and helps in the trol of nightshades. Cotton gives per-ment solution to the control of wild oats heat and tends to clean the land allowing for better wheat production. Furthernore, transferring from a cotton crop to wheat is relatively easy. Usually, wheat is drilled directly into the cotton stubble. The wheat, of course, won't make as well as it harvested within a single year's time. Some producers find it benefical to use rain sorghum in the transition from heat to cotton, seeding sorghum directly frequently to avoid burning the finishing sauce.

Several types of finishing sauce are available and vary from mild to hot. To prepare your own sauce (for 10 chicken halves), use the following: 1 cup cooking oil, 1 cup vinegar, 1 cup catsup, 1/4 cup sugar and 1/2 cup water. Add salt, Worcestershire Sauce, hot sauce, garlic and other seasonings to taste.

Chicken barbecue should be complete in about 11/2 to 2 hours. Cooking longer with less heat usually results and cooking style, Denton said. The in the most flavorful, juicy and four basic steps outlined can be tender barbecue. Placing the cook-

Sandblasting

Check the meat carefully and turn it ing rack closer than 8 inches to the coals will reduce barbecuing time, but the meat will be drier and less tender, Denton pointed out.

A test for doneness is to twist the drumstick which is connected to the thigh. If the joint between the thigh and drumstick is loose, the chicken is ready to eat. Another test is to cut into the meat at this joint. The moisture in the joint will run clear if the meat is done.

The fun part of chicken barbecuing is to develo varied to suit your style and taste.

Madagascar periwinkle

Flowering plant suggested

COLLEGE STATION - Need a flowering plant that withstands summer heat, has few insect problems, and tolerates city smog?

Try the Madagascar periwinkle. This colorful plant is finding its way into more and more gardens each summer because it is so tough and heat tolerant, said Everett Janne, landscape horticulturist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University

At the same time, plant breeders have been able to bring new characteristics into this plant that has made it even more desirable for home garden use. A good example is the variety Morning Mist. It is the first periwinkle with clusters of flowers.

Each flower is pure white, centered with a red eye.

Periwinkle varieties presently available have white, pink, rose or lavender flowers (many with a contrasting eye), but flower breeders have additional varieties almost ready to release that will further extend the color range.

The foliage is one of the Madagascar periwinkle's most attractive features with its narrow, dark-green, glossy leaves, Janne noted. The contrast between the foliage and the flower is as attractive as any summer flowering plant available.

Periwinkles are superb for Texas gardens where heat frazzles many other plants. They will deliver a fine show in full sun throughout the summer until a killing frost gets them in the fall.

Some newer varieties have a spreading growth habit, making them excellent for border plants, Janne said. These include Morning Mist, with its white flower and red eye; Little Delicata, a baby pink flower accented with a deep red eye; and Little Blanche, with its snowwhite flowers.

Two others in the "Little" series include the deep orchid-colored Little Linda and Little Pinkie, which was initially introduced as Coquette. For hanging baskets or a mass carpet planting, few varieties make a better show than Polka Dot, Janne pointed out. It has a low creeping growth habit, with each plant spreading about 2 feet across and onop your own secret recipe ly 4 to 6 inches tall covered with snow white flowers, each centered with a velvety cherry red dot.

Periwinkles will survive and thrive in locations where other plants would languish, such as by the foundation of houses with south and west exposures, on the balcony of high-rise apartments, or next to walks and drives with reflected heat. All they need for survival is an occasional watering plus a little fertilizer every six weeks or so, Janne said.

Controls both Banks grass and two-spotted mites in corn and sorghum.

Choose your corn and sorghum miticide carefully, this year. If it's not COMITE', you're risking mite resistance and repeated, very costly miticide applications. No other miticide delivers more protection on both Banks grass and two-spotted mites than COMITE.

This broad spectrum coverage on corn and sorghum is important when mite resistance situations develop with other chemicals.

COMITE long-lasting fuming action lets you spray early when mite colonies first appear. Early control of mites means maximum yield protection. And COMITE is easy on beneficials. Keeps them working for you.

Ann Landers

Afraid of being alone

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I would like to reply to "Star Witness," who wonders why so many intelligent, attractive "classy" women stick with a fourth-rater. (He called them bums.) I am all of the above and perhaps I can supply an answer.

Deep down we are afraid we can't do better. We tell ourselves that nobody is perfect. My man drinks. My best friend's fellow has a violent temper. When he gets angry he hits her. My cousin's sweetheart won't work. (Yes, they are all live-ins).

We stay in these less-than-blissful situations because we are afraid of not having anyone. We feel it is better to be with a man whose faults we know and can live with than to start "looking" again. Honestly, Ann, what's out there is so crummy you wouldn't believe it. My best friend, my cousin and I have planned our lives so we don't have to be around the creeps a lot. Distance is maintained, and there is an ever-widening gap. We all hope one day to meet a man who is up to our standards and we are looking, but for now we are-Hanging In There

DEAR HANGING: The vital ingredients missing in all three of you women is confidence and selfesteem. I know of no way to package these attributes and send them on.

There are females in this world who would rather be alone than put up with men who drink, are physically abusive and won't work. Too bad you lack the courage to unload those losers because the chances for meeting someone worthy while sharing living quarters with a klunker are very small indeed.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I read your column with the letter about an "Uncaring Sitter." While I agree there are many babysitters who don't care, many do. May I speak for

I am a child care "specialist." I have two toddlers who have been coming to my home for two years. We have a story hour, coloring and painting time, exercises, healthful snacks, outdoor activities and music.

I feel like crying when I care for a child all week and he comes back Monday morning with a black-andblue mark on his little backside because a parent didn't have the patience to put up with his repetitive questions, whining and mischievous

These same parents keep their kids up too late. I can tell from the circles under their eyes; they want to nap forever. I have one child who wears the same clothes every day for a week, and they aren't washed in between! Many times I have given "my kids" a bath and washed their clothes while they napped because I couldn't stand to see them dirty and neglected.

I've tried talking to the parents, but I get nowhere. They are educated, respectable, "important" people in the community, but when it comes to their children they have no interest. It's pathetic. – A Child Care Person In Williamsport,Pa.

DEAR PERSON: There is no substitute for loving parents, but the affection and kindness you are giving to the youngsters entrusted to your care is priceless. You are contributing more to their lives than you will ever know.

Cowgirl Hall of Fame to host third chili cook-off

expected to participate in the third annual Hall of Fame Chili Cook-off, scheduled Saturday, July 14, at the National Cowgirl Hall of Fame and Western Heritage Center.

Chili cooks and showmanship teams may still enter the cook-off. Entry fee is $15. An entry form is printed in today's Brand, or interested persons may inquire at the Hall of Fame.

Points are awarded to the winning cooks according to Chili Appreciation Society International (C.A.S.I.) and Tolbert Rules. Cooks may qualify with points obtained at approved cook-offs to be eligible for the World Cook-Off at Terlingua.

Proceeds from the local chili cookoff will go to benefit the Cowgirl Hall of Fame.

Goody bags will be presented to the first 50 cooks, and 10 chili trophies are to be awarded, along with three humanitarian trophy for the cook collecting the most money for the Hall of Fame at his or her booth, a traveling trophy for the participant traveling the farthest distance, and the peoples' choice trophy, given to the cook which the public votes best chili maker.

The gates are to open at approximately 9 a.m. on Saturday, according to Hall of Fame director Margaret Formby, with a cooks' meeting scheduled at 11 a.m. Showmanship is to begin at 12 noon, and chili turn in time is 2:30 p.m.

The public is invited to the festivities. Admission is $2 for adults, which includes a tasting cup to sample as many kinds of chili as desired, as well as participation in the games, cream pie auction and showmanship. Children under 12 will be admitted free of charge.

Boyles, Matchett vows exchanged

Laura Denise Boyles of Amarillo became the bride of Ricky James Matchett, also of Amarillo, Saturday afternoon in a wedding ceremony conducted at Paramount Terrace Christian Church of that city. Roy Wheeler of the church officiated.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Boyles of Pampa and the bridegroom is the son of Lois Matchett of 206 Greenwood St.

Decorating the church altar were two large flower arrangements of gladioli and lillies and a candelabrum holding 25 tapers. Diane Ray of Amarillo served her sister as matron of honor and Bobby Meyer of Hereford was best man.

The bride's sister, Debbie Atkin, was bridesmaid and groomsmen included Mike Culp of Hereford, Kent Ellis of Lubbock, Steve Fortenberry of Wylie, Steve Douglas of Oklahoma City, Okla., and David Walterscheid of College Station.

Janie Goodwin sang "The Lord's Prayer" and "The Wedding Song" and was accompanied by Bobbi Purcell.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was attired in a taffeta gown designed with large puffed sleeves set off by small rose buds. The candlelight gown was also fashioned with a dropped yoke waist and accented with lace at the neckline and rounded chapel-length train.

Her candlelight colored veil was gathered at a pearl band and she carried fresh lillies and ivory roses with Attendants wore lavender gowns fashioned with dropped yoke waists, lace accenting the necklines and rose bud designs sewn near the bands of large puffed sleeves. They carried fresh lillies and gladiolas with long stems.

Dee Ann Gray of Bedford invited guests to register at the reception held in the Palo Duro Room of the Fifth Seasons Inn.

Vicki Bailey of Lubbock served cake. Punch and coffee were served

The three-tiered wedding cake was topped with fresh flowers in contrasting shades of lavender and was placed on the refreshment table accented by an arrangement of lavender lillies.

Leaving for a wedding trip to Nassau, Bahamas, the bride wore a one-piece gray silk evening dress highlighted with a white lace collar and peace colored sash.

The couple will make their home after July 14 in Amarillo.

The bride received a bachelor of science degree in 1982 from West Texas State University, and presently teaches first grade in Amarillo Independent School District. She is a member of the Amarillo Classroom Teachers Association.

The bridegroom received a bachelor of arts and telecommunications degree in 1982 from Texas Tech. He is sales manager at KGNC Radio Station in Amarillo and is a member of Southwest Chapter of American Business Clubs.

Elks enter campaign against drug abuse

As the result of a nationwide survey asking mayors what community problems could be effectively addressed by volunteers, the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks has entered the campaign against drug abuse.

The program targets youth from fourth through ninth grades and their parents and teachers, providing information about the health risks of marijuana and cocaine.

The following information is part one of an educational series provided by the Drug Awareness Council of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks. The second part will appear in a later issue.

> DRUGS AND YOUTH: AN OVERVIEW

Drug abuse is the most serious problem facing U.S. communities today. This conclusion was among the findings of a recent national survey of U.S. Mayors conducted by the Benevolent and Protective Order of

According to a 1982 report by the National Institute on Drug Abuse (NIDA), roughly two-thirds of all young people in America have tried an illegal drug by the time they graduate from high school.

Additionally, about one in 16 high school seniors smokes marijuana daily. More than one-third of all American young people have used illicit drugs other than marijuana, according to the NIDA report which detailed national drug use trends from 1975 to 1982.

A number of organizations have formed throughout the country to address this problem, and other longstanding civic organizations such as the Elks have joined the war against drugs. As a result, a significant volunteer effort throughout society now is mobilizing to combat the drug problem that is producing a severe, long-term negative effect on American children.

MARIJUANA, THE BRAIN AND LEARNING Daily doses of marijuana's active ingredient, THC, administered to laboratory monkeys over a two to five year period has been found to cause brain damage, said Dr. Ethel Sassenrath, acting director of the Behavioral Sciences Laboratory in the department of psychiatry, University of California at Davis.

She recently reported that CAT scans of brains of live rhesus monkeys given an amount of THC equivalent to human intake of one marijuana cigarette per day for two to five years showed enlargement of the frontal horns of the brain - indicating cell death in the fore brain when tested one year later.

The fore brain, the most developed part of the brain in humans and primates, is thought to control selfawareness, initiative and planning and to stimulate the cortex, where abstract thinking takes place.

These recent findings are consistent with existing psychological profiles of long-term marijuana users. Lack of motivation, inability to relate to others, impaired memory and the inability to express emotions are common psychological effects of marijuana use over several years.

Short-term effects of the drug can include impaired immediate memory and reduced ability to think and learn.

A 1982 study by the National Institute on Drug Abuse of seniors in high schools across the U.S. indicated that six percent used marijuna daily and 29 percent had smoked marijuana within the last month prior to the survey. These statistics indicate a potential for serious - and Marijuana can be more dangerous to health than cigarette smoking, according to studies reported by the American Council for Drug Educa-

Marijuana contains tar, harmful gases and 50 percent more of some cancer causing agents than does tobacco, according to the Council. Marijuana smoke also can inhibit the lungs' infection fighting abilities and cause cell changes which can lead to cancer, researchers found.

Additionally, ailments such as bronchitis, emphysema, sinusitis, pharyngitis and laryngitis have been linked to marijuana use, reports the

The effects on the lungs for heavy pot smokers can be serious. The studies have shown that just a few years of habitual use of some forms of marijuana can have the same adverse effects as 10 to 20 years of cigarette smoking.

Unlike tobacco whose dangerous compounds are being reduced, marijuana is becoming stronger and containing higher concentrations of carcinogens and other harmful compounds, according to the studies.

Canyon - Although city residents have enjoyed nearly a month of good rains and thus little watering, water bills received early this week constitute the highest billing for the summer for most. Canyon received almost seven inches of rain in June, which decreased water use proportionately here. But the term of water use reflected in the bills received by Canyon residents early this week was for a period from May 13 through about May 10, said Howard Morris, director of finance for the city. Morris said during that period, less than a half inch of rain had fallen in Canyon and that water use was the highest it had been for the summer so far.

Farwell - This week marks a change in the traditional eightcolumn look of the State Line Tribune. As far back as our permanent files go, the paper has presented the public with eight columns of reading and advertising per page.

This issue begins the era of six columns to the newspaper page. This change is in conformity with the recommendations of the National Newspaper Association and major advertising agencies throughout the country.

Dumas - Nineteen Dumas and Sunray residents, employed at the Southwestern Public Service Company generating plant, are moving to new jobs since SPS put the power plant on "cold reserve" status Mon-

The power plant shutdown comes some two months ahead of a schedule announced last November by the electric power company. Twenty-two workers are employed at the plant, northeast of Dumas near the Diamond Shamrock McKee plant complex.

SPS originally planned to put the Moore plant on reserve about Sept. 1.

Bovina - Open House was held Tuesday, June 26, at the Bovina Pos Office to observe Quality Service Month and about 125 people signed the guest book. Open house was hosted by employees, Vi Hutto Flossie Rhinehart and Laur Bartlett.

'Ghostbusters' eyed

By BOB THOMAS Associated Press Writer

"GHOSTBUSTERS" hit the top of the box-office chart during its first two weeks of release, and no wonder. It is the ideal hot weather movie: fast moving, funny, thrilling and

Ivan Reitman, who is known for sophomoric comedy - he produced 'National Lampoon's Animal House" and directed "Meatballs" 'Stripes" - takes a big leap forward as director-producer of "Ghostbusters." He has a firm grip on character and handles action masterfully. Most of all, he understands how to integrate special effects, not allowing them to dominate the film. The premise of the script, written by Dan Aykroyd and Harold Ramis, is marvelously ingenious. They and Bill Murray play a trio of scientists who are fired from university positions and set up a company in Manhattan to track down and eradicate ghosts, ghoulies and other supernatural beasties.

is having an epidemic of unexplainable happenings, with mischievous wraiths floating all over town. But the activity is not as innocent as it first seems.

The action focuses on an apartment building with unworldy beasts carved on its roof. It turns out that a Sumerian demigod Gozer is planning a takeover of the world. "This is Armageddon time!" warn the ghostbusters.

As the battle between good and evil heats up, the action is relentless, and often hilarious. Reitman is not above cheap thrills, as when a hideous ghoul turns up as a New York cabbie.

Though the apartment building suffers a cataclysm and crowds below are pounded by debris, few people seem to get hurt. That is further testimony of the film's in-

Aykroyd, Murray and Ramis are good at this sort of thing, underplaying as chaos surrounds them, maintaining their ghostbusting professionalism under all circumstances.

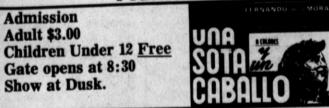

A strong performance is delivered by Sigourney Weaver, first as a concert musician, then as the high priestess of Gozer. She is totally convincing in both guises.

But there is a minor complaint. They pick a good time. New York The major villain is William Atherton, a hard-nosed Environmental Protection Agency investigator whose intransigence releases the evil ghosts: Why single out the beleaguered EPA as the heavy?

Optimistic, too

Martin remains cheerful despite tragedies

She has endured the loss of her husband, the death of her manager in an auto accident that threatened her own life, injuries on stage and off and cataracts in both her eyes.

But Mary Martin at 70 remains as cheerful as Peter Pan and as optimistic as Nellie Forbush.

She wears her hair short, as she did while flying through Never-Neverland in "Peter Pan," and as she did in "South Pacific" when she shampooed nightly to wash that man right out of her hair. Now the color is unabashedly white because Miss Martin has never been kittenish about her age, admitting to her birthdate of Dec. 1, 1913.

It's all in her book, "My Heart Belongs," first published in 1976 and now in paperback with updated chapters.

There are new items, such as living with the success of her "Baby Boy," Larry Hagman — the infamous J.R. of "Dallas"; the joy of her six grandchildren; her happiness with the PBS series, "Over Easy"; the sorrow of losing her dear friend, Ben Washer, in the San Francisco car crash that severely injured herself and Janet Gaynor on Sept. 5,

An interview with Mary Martin covers a lot of territory, from her

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP)- Texas beginnings to her Hollywood stardom to her longtime reign on Broadway.

Though she hasn't appeared on Broadway for 17 years, her life has been full. For three years she cohosted "Over Easy," the TV talk show directed at audiences in their mature years, but the series has suffered the common ailment of public TV: underfunding.

As for a return to Broadway, Miss Martin hasn't entirely ruled it out.

"One never says 'never," she said, "but I would not go back to doing eight shows a week. I'd love to do more TV, even a series if I could find a good one. More than that, I'd like to do some television movies. I did a 'Love Boat' last fall and had a wonderful time."

She limits concert appearances to one major event a year. The next one will be "Mary Martin and Friends," a benefit for the Trauma Center in San Francisco. That's where she, Janet Gaynor and husband Paul Gregory were taken after the crash. Miss Martin suffered a double pelvis fracture, broken ribs and a punctured lung and kidney.

Pop singer working to be star

NEW YORK (AP) - Some in the music business are predicting that British singer Paul Young will one day be a superstar. At 28, he's working hard toward that goal.

Young's first album, "No Parlez," is selling briskly and the reggaegospel single, "Love of the Common People," was 51 with a bullet on the best-selling chart of June 23.

He's building his solo career, writing songs, hunting for new tunes, touring and recording.

Young signed with Columbia Records as a soloist two years ago, after spending three years with the

"I had the best three years of ma life. I had so much fun," he said. "We made two albums, studio and live, and four or five singles but we didn't have a hit record. ... Colleges were falling over themselves to get us. But you can't keep asking for the same gig price with no record releases."

Young was born at Luton in Bedfordshire, son of an auto worker. He, an older brother and younger sister went to work at the plant. When he was 21, he got his first professional music job with the rock group Streetband. It folded a year later after Young damaged his voice.

As soon as he recovered, Young and a few members of Streetband formed the Q-Tips. "We invited a lot of friends up to play soul music in pubs and clubs. We did 'Shotgun' after a Junior Walker track and an old Joe Tex number, 'SYSLJFM,' the letter song," Young said.

As a youngster, his musical hero was Paul Rodgers, vocalist of Free. Otis Redding was the first American rhythm 'n' blues singer who appealed to him. "I think it's probably because I've got nearly the same range as him," Young said.

When Young started making music for Columbia, he didn't plunge into the whole album but recorded two or three tracks at a time. "Iron Out the Rough Spots" was released as the first single. It didn't sell.

Walking is wearing

as spending the day in an amusement park? Also, what about a day spent in a large shopping mall?

When I come home from a day of shopping, sometimes my leg muscles hurt. My husband says I'm crazy,

DEAR READER - It depends on whether you walk or stand. It's like swimming; it makes a dif-ference whether you're in the water and swimming or sunning yourself beside the As far as energy use is concerned you can estimate that you use an extra 60 calories for every mile you actually walk. That may not be many calories, but the continuous use of your muscles can make you tired. Standing still doesn't use any more energy than sitting down but almost everyone gets tired from simple standing. Why? Again, it's because of the prolonged strain on your muscles even if they aren't contracting and relaxing regularly. Walking is often easier on person than standing. When you stand still, blood pools in the veins in your legs, interfering with the normal exchange of oxygen between the circulation and your leg muscles. Standing also makes varicose veins worse. When you walk, your contracting leg muscles massage the blood upward toward your heart.

of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. DEAR DR. LAMB - I recently read that the male hormone, testosterone, actu-ally accelerates the aging process. Can a woman absorb testosterone because of sexual relations? DEAR READER - First, I don't believe one can say that testosterone accelerates aging. But your ques-tion reveals a basic problem many people have in under-standing hormones or endoc-rines. The male secretions won't give testosterone to a woman. Hormones are released into the body through the circulation. That is why the hormone level can be measured in the blood. The metabolic products of some hormones are eliminated through the urine after the kidneys have filtered the blood. Many chemicals in your body are released through ducts. Bile is a good example. It's a secretion from the liver and it passes through the bile duct to the digestive system and doesn't use the circulatory system for transport. Endocrines aren't released through ducts and the glands that form them are often called ductless glands. Testosterone, formed by the testicles, is released directly into the circulation of the man and not through his semen. It's analagous to estrogen being released by the ovaries into the circulation of the woman rather than through a secretion. Semen contains sperm cells and various fluids but is not a source of testos-

DEAR POLLY — Could you please repeat the recipe for homemade vanilla? I cut it out some time ago, bought the vanilla beans and now can't find the recipe! — MRS. D.C.

DEAR MRS. D.C. — This recipe, contributed by one of our readers, is easy and fun to make. Cut one vanilla bean into

DEAR POLLY — After watching my friends do battle with their young children at bedtime, I devised this plan when mine were very young.

I simply announce that it is bedtime; do they want to "walk" or "ride?" If they choose to ride, you can carry them piggyback or have them ride on Daddy's shoulders or carry them in your arms, depending on their weight or the shape your back is in. Since I started this little procedure, my children actually argue about those turn it is to go in first, instead of balking.

If you have children who tend to have disturbing dreams, plant an idea as you tuck them in, such as, "Soon we'll be going on vacation — just think of all the fun things we can do at the beach," or "Grandma is coming over tomorrow —

DEAR POLLY - Can you tell me how to kill grass growing in cracks in the sidewalk? I thought I'd read something about using salt and something else. - EDITH DEAR EDITH - To kill grass or weeds growing through sidewalks or cracks in cement porches or patios, dissolve a pound of salt in a gallon of boiling water, then pour this over the greenery you want to destroy. Also pour the solution in any cracks where grass or weeds are likely to sprout. (Obviously, be very careful in working with this hot mixture so

However, be careful not to let the salted water run onto grass, gardens or other places where you want vegetation to flourish. It will kill grass and plants in the desirable areas just as easily as in those places where you don't want growth. — POLLY DEAR POLLY - I have always had difficulty swallowing pills. Recently, I found that they go down easily if I carefully take the accompanying liquid through a straw. — HELEN DEAR HELEN AND READERS — If you try this, be very careful that as you suck up through the straw, you don't aspirate the pill into your air passages. Suck gently, please. — POLLY DEAR POLLY — Instead of buying an expensive self-basting turkey, buy a regular turkey. Before you put it in the oven, add one cup of water to the turkey cavity. The meat will be more moist and more juicy, just like in a self-basting bird. — MRS. G.C.

don't forget all the things you want to show her." This way they go to sleep thinking about nice things and are less likely to have bad dreams. Above all, never, never use being sent

DEAR POLLY - I used my food processor to chop some onions and couldn't get the onion smell out of the container. Even soaking in baking soda and water didn't help. Finally, I put vinegar and water in the bowl; this was successful in eliminating the odor. — M.E.K.
