Independence Day for many Americans is a chance to cut loose and demonstrate a little patriotism in the form of fireworks, however, a little patriotism can go a long way, and fourth of July revelers need to be aware of the laws governing the sale and use of fireworks. The Hereford City Code states that fireworks can only be sold beginning two weeks from the fourth of July and ending at midnight on the fourth. The code also states that fireworks can only be sold outside the city limits of Hereford and defines fireworks as roman candles, cannon crackers, torpedoes, sky rockets and all other firecrackers. Violation of this code is punishable by a fine from $10-$25 for each separate offense. The law does not stop there. It is a violation of the city code to shoot fireworks anywhere within the city limits of Hereford. There are two exceptions to this rule. Fireworks may be used in a dramatic public display or in an area designated by the city fire marshal. Violators can be fined as much as $100 for the first offense and up to $200 for the second offense. Police Captain Ray Morgan

'Major Victory' Won

Reagan Forces Celebrating

By CLIFF HAAS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's finesse and mastery of the Democratic House have yielded him a stunning victory that puts his budget-cutting plans well on the way to becoming reality.

For two straight days, culminating in victory Friday night on a critical 217-211 vote, Reagan and his allies held off assaults from House Democratic leaders who assailed Reagan for what Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas, called "a brazen attempt at a power grab."

With cooperation, as expected, from the Republican-controlled Senate in passing a roughly parallel measure Thursday night, Reagan's budget cuts now await action by a House-Senate conference committee to work out the differences between the two bills.

Republicans said the House bill, including the various revisions made in the package Reagan pushed, would total about $38.2 billion in cuts in fiscal 1982 and $145 billion over the next three years. The Senate version approved just before midnight Thursday has $39.6 billion in cuts next year. Reagan, resting at his California ranch, hailed the 217-211 House vote on his added cuts and the 232-193 vote on the entire package of reductions as a "major victory in the war against inflation."

In a written statement, he called the vote a "profile in political courage and (it) should inspire the gratitude of us all. It will renew the faith of millions of Americans who have waited so long just for those in Washington to listen and care and take action."

House Democrats hoped to keep 1982 cuts to $37.8 billion. Reagan asserted the extra $5.2 billion slash — mostly in longstanding social programs such as food stamps, Social Security, welfare and school lunches — was vital to his goal of a balanced budget by 1984.

In order to get enough Democrats to approve the added cuts in social programs, Republicans tossed in a few sweeteners, restoring some funds for items such as Conrail, medical aid for the poor, student loans and the Clinch River breeder reactor.

The sweeteners plus Republican substitutes for cuts favored by the Democratic leadership brought the total reductions in the package ultimately approved by the House to $38.2 billion.

"The vote today on this amendment is surely the most important vote of any Congress," said Rep. Leon E. Panetta, D-Calif., a key member of the House Budget Committee.

"We are rolling dice with the lives of millions of Americans," Panetta said in an impassioned speech to his colleagues.

Majority leaders, beaten back Thursday in a key parliamentary prelude to the budget showdown, charged there were "jokers in the deck" and a "hidden agenda" in the Reagan plan.

"That hidden agenda is a deliberate effort to transfer wealth from the struggling families of this country and award that wealth to those who are already wealthy," said Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr.

But with Reagan keeping up the lobbying pressure via long-distance calls from California, his supporters were able to rush through a single package of more than $5 billion in revisions to a $37.8 billion spending-cut bill supported by Democratic leaders.

"Once again, the president's personal contacts made the difference," White House deputy press secretary

Nieman Installed As New TPA President

FORT WORTH (Sp.)—O.G. (Speedy) Nieman, publisher of The Hereford Brand, was elected president of the Texas Press Association at its annual summer convention here Saturday.

Nieman succeeds James Roberts of Andrews as head of the statewide organization. With more than 550 weekly and daily newspapers among its membership, the TPA is the world's largest state press association.

One of the highlights of the three-day convention was the presentation of the Texan of the Year award to Army Master Sgt. Roy P. Benavidez (Ret.) of El Campo, Tx. He was recipient of the Congressional Medal of Honor from President Reagan in February of this year.

The luncheon speaker at the closing session Saturday was Sarah McClendon, colorful reporter from Texas who has covered the White House for 30 years. She has been widely noted for the prickly questions posed at presidential press conferences.

Delegates heard programs and speakers on such topics as newspaper management, newspaper law and libel, and computers in the newspaper industry.

Nieman is editor and publisher of The Hereford Brand and president of North Plains Printing Co. in Hereford. He is also a stockholder in five other West Texas newspapers and a partner in Blanco Offset Printing in Floydada.

A native of Lamesa, Nieman graduated from Texas Tech University with a major in journalism. After a three-year stint in the U.S. Coast Guard, he returned to Lamesa as editor of the newspaper. He served as editor of newspapers at Brownfield and Littlefield before becoming publisher of The Slaton Slatonite in 1964, and publisher of The Brand in 1972.

He has served as president of both the West Texas and the Panhandle Press Associations. He has been active in the TPA since 1964 and has served several terms on the state board.

Nieman was named "Man of the Year" in Slaton in 1970. He was president of the Slaton Chamber of Commerce and Slaton Lions Club. He has also been president of

Ancient Bus Explodes; 10 Killed, 17 Injured

SAN LUIS VARDINO, CALIF. (AP) — A bus that trapped and killed 10 people in a 35-year-old bus as it rumbled toward a family reunion started when a propane tank blew up, authorities believe. Seventeen other people were injured Friday leaping from windows of the flaming bus as it rolled backward down a mountain road. The bus crashed into a truck, which hit a station wagon carrying five people.

Aboard the bus were 25 people — all but one of them related — on their way to a Fourth of July family reunion in Decatur, Ala. They were to have stopped in Kansas City, Mo., to pick up more relatives.

The one unrelated rider on the bus was a child being taken to visit his grandmother in Missouri, officials said.

The bus was on Interstate 15 on the Cajon Pass when it began smoking and burst into flames as the driver piled onto the shoulder of the eight-lane mountain road. The bus, built in 1946 and later converted into a motor home, began rolling backward and hit the truck as screaming passengers kicked out windows and tried to jump to safety.

"I was sitting in the back of the bus listening to music, when all of the sudden there was a loud noise," said Kimberly Garrett, 16, of Riverside, Calif. "I turned around and there was fire everywhere except in the back of the bus. Everybody scattered, and I started banging on a window until it popped out. Then I jumped."

Robert Drake of Loma Linda, who was driving his car not far behind the bus, said: "The bus was engulfed in flames almost instantly. I saw one man manage to get out the back window, but there were many still inside screaming and crying."

Those who remained behind were trapped in the bus and started throwing children and women out of the windows," said California Highway Patrol officer William Snell.

Patrol investigators believe the inferno was touched off by gas from a propane tank, spokeswoman Barbara Fink said. She said it would be two to three weeks before authorities can determine the cause.

Snell said the bus originally had a rear emergency exit. (See WRECK, Page 2A)

Warrant Issued In Lubbock Case

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Police have issued a capital murder warrant in the slaying of a 10-year-old girl for a 32-year-old man who had lived at the home of the dead girl.

Criminal District Attorney John Montford said at a news conference Friday that Jodie Mack Oliver had moved out of the house about a week before Dawn Michell Stanley was reported missing Monday.

Oliver was once convicted of raping his stepmother, Montford said.

The girl's body, which police said had apparently been strangled, was found Wednesday morning wrapped in quilt under the house. Her mother, Rose Anne Dobbins, discovered the body after she noticed a foul odor coming from a crawl space in the closet.

Montford said the capital murder charge, which carries the death penalty, applies because Oliver killed the girl during a robbery.

Oliver was said to be 5 foot 9, 220 pounds, and have blond hair and blue eyes. He has tattoos of a cat on his chest, a cobra on his right shoulder and "MACK" on his chest and both arms.

Oliver was a witness in two murder trials of Fort Worth millionaire industrialist Cullen Davis.

Police said the girl's diary provided them with clues to the killing. The last entry was not signed, as the other entries were, police said, "as if she didn't finish."

Deaf Smith, Castro County Roadwork to Be Started

The Texas State Highway and Public Transportation Commission recently approved an estimated $682,000 in road repairs for Deaf Smith and Castro counties as part of a state-wide road improvement program.

Deaf Smith County road improvements are:

FM 1058 will be resurfaced in Hereford from U.S. Highway 385 westward 1.1 miles at an estimated cost of $190,000.

Loop 211, from U.S. 385 east 1.2 miles to U.S. 60 will be resurfaced at an estimated cost of $154,000. Castro County road improvements are:

FM 1655, from Deaf Smith County line to Lamb County line, will be resurfaced at an estimated cost of $220,000.

FM 168, from SH 194 to Lamb County line, 5.2 miles, will be resurfaced at an estimated cost of $88,000.

The road repairs are intended to upgrade existing roads to handle heavier volumes of traffic, and to reduce the amount and kind of maintenance necessary for the highways.

Work Stable In Nation's Middle

The backbone of the working force in the United States is a four-state swath which runs from Texas to Nebraska and includes Oklahoma and Kansas. According to figures released by the U.S. Department of Labor's Bureau of Statistics, those four states have the lowest unemployment rates in the country.

Across the U.S. unemployment rates rose 1.0 percentage point or more from April 1980 to April 1981 in nine states and the District of Columbia, while decreases of the same magnitude were recorded in three states.

Michigan, where the unemployment rate was about the same as last year, and West Virginia, where the rate rose in part because of the secondary effects of the coal miners' strike, had the highest unemployment rates in April 1981 (12.2 and 12.3 percent respectively).

Oklahoma had the lowest rate, 3.3 percent.

The data in this release are not adjusted for seasonal variation. Nationally, the unadjusted unemployment rate rose 0.4 percentage point from April 1980 to April 1981, from 6.6 to 7.0 percent.

Many of the States which had been reporting large over-the-year unemployment rate increases during the past 12 months were close to their year-ago rates in April 1981—since unemployment had risen sharply in March and April 1980—including Indiana, Kentucky, Michigan, Missouri, New Hampshire, North Carolina, Ohio, Utah, Vermont, and Wisconsin.

The nine States where unemployment rates rose 1.0 percentage point or more in April included four in the South (Mississippi, South

Judge Overrules

Hughes Claim

HOUSTON (AP) — A probate judge has ruled actress Terry Moore, who claims she secretly married billionaire Howard Hughes and bore him a child who later died, is not entitled to inherit part of Hughes' estate.

In a ruling Friday, Judge Pat Gregory said Ms. Moore will be excluded from a trial to determine the legal heir to the vast fortune.

Her lawyer, Art Leeds, said an appeal probably will be filed.

The judge ruled Ms. Moore, 52, has no legal basis to pursue any inheritance of the reclusive, who died five years ago as his plane carried his emaciated body from Acapulco to Houston for medical treatment.

The motion to exclude the actress was requested by Wayne Fisher, who represents Avis Hughes McIntyre and the estate of Rush Hughes, the children of the wife of Rupert Hughes, Howard Hughes' uncle.

Ms. Moore contends she was married in 1949 to Hughes on a ship sailing in international waters. She said the marriage was kept secret in order to save her movie image.

Launch Date Looks

Good For Shuttle

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Despite concern over possible problems with shock waves created by the space shuttle's solid rockets during ignition, space agency officials say the Sept. 30 launch date for the second mission of the Columbia looks good.

"We are still looking hard at the ignition over-pressure of the solid-rocket boosters during the first launch," said Dr. Robert Gray, director of the Space Shuttle Projects Office at the Kennedy Space Center.

Gray said at a briefing Friday that when the two solid rockets were ignited after ignition of the three main engines of the Columbia during its maiden launch in April, they created a "pressure pulse" that appears to have placed pressure loads four times higher than expected at the aft end of the shuttle.

When the solid rockets were ignited, he said, the ignition created a kind of a shock wave that bounced off areas beneath the launch platform and came back up to hit the spaceship itself.

"The data is very difficult to analyze and we really don't know whether the pressure wave is going to be a major problem or not," Gray said.

"It is being studied at the Marshall Space Flight Center (in Alabama). We are also trying to determine what kind of fixes could be made, if they are necessary."

LA PAZ, Bolivia (AP) — The army general command issued a declaration today relieving President Luis Garcia Meza as chief of Bolivia's military government, according to military radio broadcasts.

Troops and tanks were reported massing in the capital's main plaza and throughout the city, beginning at about 5 a.m.

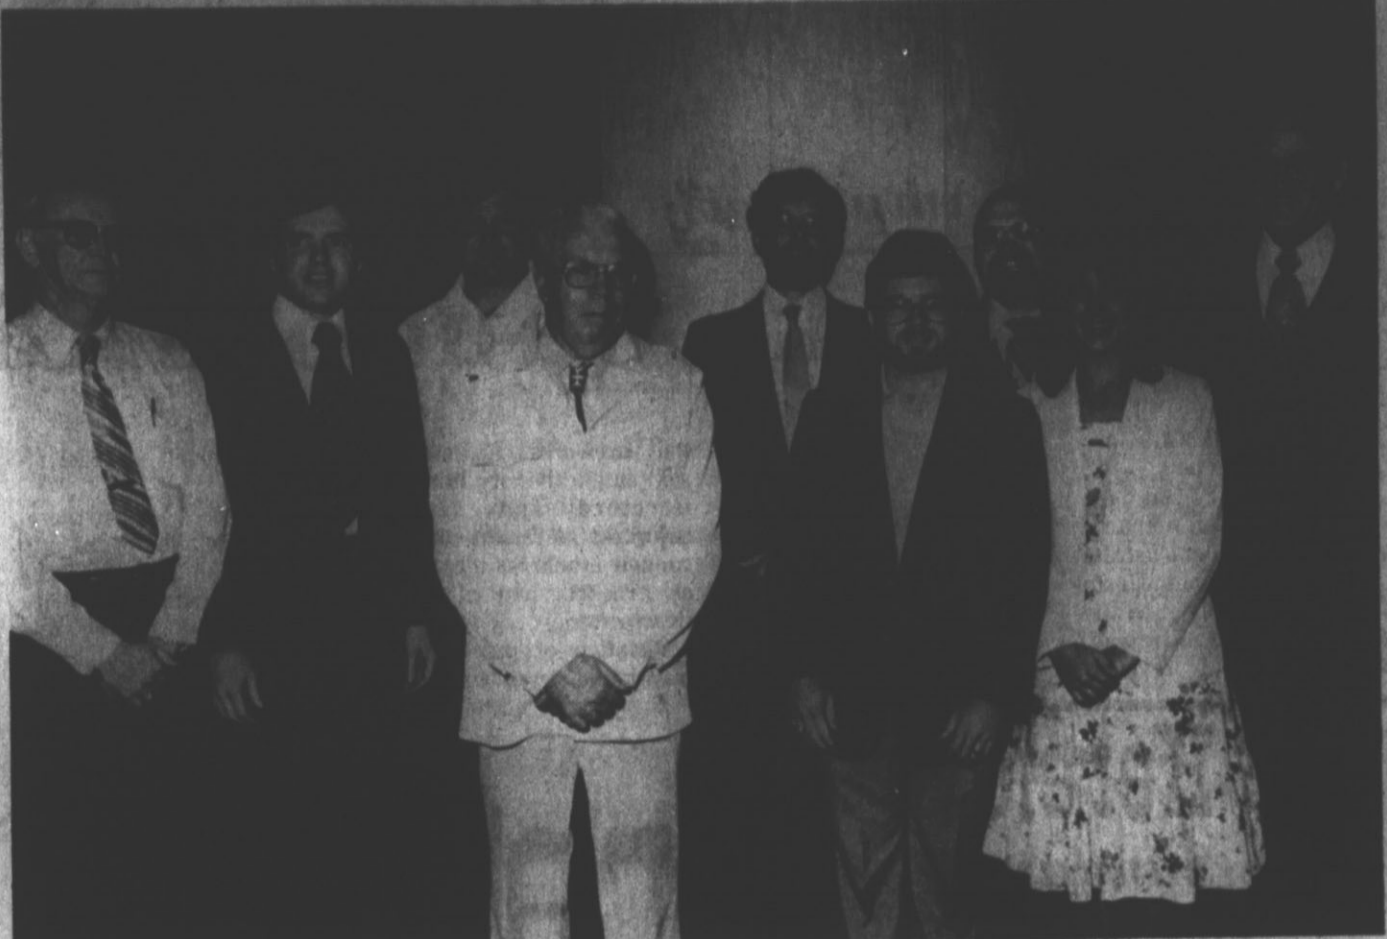

Initial reports said troops loyal to the president held the presidential palace and appeared to be mounting some resistance to the coup, but there were no reports of open fighting.

Gen. Humberto Cuyoja, heads the army's general command. It was not clear whether he was attempting to take over the government in his own name.

No other details were immediately known.

Texas Press Association Honors Sgt. Benavidez

FORT WORTH (Spl.) — The Texas Press Association honored Army Master Sgt. Roy P. Benavidez (Ret.) as its 12th Texan of the Year during the press group's annual summer convention June 25-27.

Benavidez, from El Campo, was presented the Medal of Honor, the nation's highest military award for bravery, on Feb. 1981 by President Reagan.

The sergeant, who was medically retired from the Army after 22 years of active duty, is credited with saving the lives of at least eight of his comrades in a battle in Vietnam in 1968. He had already been awarded the Distinguished Service Cross.

A few years later, however, his commander recommended him for the Medal of Honor, explaining that he "had not been fully aware of the voluntary and sustained nature of Sgt. Benavidez' actions when he made the DSC recommendation."

The Medal of Honor was years in coming, however because corroborating witnesses had to be located. Since the Medal presentation, Benavidez has been honored by many organizations in Texas, including a "Roy Benavidez Day" in Austin on March 31 when he addressed both houses of the Texas Legislature and was honored with a reception by Gov. Bill Clements.

Benavidez now lives with his wife, Lala, and their three children in El Campo. He spends much of his time talking to youth groups and schools, promoting pride in this nation and trying to rekindle "good, old-fashioned patriotism."

At almost the same moment, the helicopter pilot was killed and the aircraft crashed. Benavidez secured the classified documents and made his way back to the wreckage where he aided the wounded out of the overturned aircraft and gathered the stunned survivors into a defensive perimeter.

He distributed water and ammunition to the weary men and used a field radio to call for air strikes from supporting gun ships to prepare for another extraction attempt. He was wounded again in the thigh by small arms fire while giving first aid to a wounded team member, just before another extraction helicopter was able to land.

As he was helping the wounded to the second aircraft, he was clubbed from behind by an enemy soldier. In the ensuing hand-to-hand combat he sustained additional wounds to his head and arms from a rifle butt and bayonet before killing his adversary.

State as it has been for more than a year.

Durable goods employment continued to decline in Illinois in electrical equipment, instruments, primary metals, and transportation equipment; and was also considerably below year-ago levels in both the trade and government sectors. There were employment declines throughout the service-producing sector in Tennessee. In New Jersey, durable goods manufacturing employment was 8,000 below a year before, but service employment advanced by 41,000. Wyoming's employment growth continued strong, especially in mining; however, employment growth did not match the rapid labor force expansion and joblessness rose.

Unemployment rate reductions of 1.0 percentage point or more were reported in Alaska, Idaho, and Oklahoma. Employment increases in mining were a factor in both Alaska and Oklahoma.

Five States, primarily in the North and West, had unemployment rates of 8.5 percent or higher in April (Alaska, Indiana, Michigan, Oregon, and West Virginia). By contrast, the four States with the lowest rates (under 4.5 percent) were in the central part of the nation—Kansas, Nebraska, Oklahoma, and Texas.

Unemployment rates increased 1.0 percentage point or more from April 1980 to April 1981 in 48 of the 221 metropolitan areas for which data were reported for both periods. The largest increases—at least 3.0 points—were in Dubuque, Iowa, Vineland, New Jersey, and Kenosha, Wisconsin.

There were 20 areas where unemployment rates fell 1.0 percentage point or more from a year before. The largest decline—3.7 points—was in Janesville-Beloit, Wisconsin, where the rate fell to 6.2 percent in April 1981, as transportation equipment manufacturing employment showed improvement from last year's low point.

A total of 46 metropolitan areas had 8.5 percent or higher unemployment in April, including 10 areas in Michigan, six in Indiana, and five in California. By contrast, 25 areas had unemployment rates below 4.5 percent, including seven of the 12 reporting areas in Texas.

Carolina, Tennessee, and West Virginia), three in the West (Oregon, Washington, and Wyoming), Illinois in the North central region, and New Jersey in the Northeast. In almost all of these States, the April increase was smaller than in recent months. Employment declines were generally concentrated in the goods-producing sector, according to estimates from the payroll employment survey. In addition, government employment was generally lower.

Employment in Mississippi and South Carolina declined in both durable and non-durable manufacturing, especially electrical equipment, furniture and fixtures, textiles, and apparel. In West Virginia, coal mining payroll employment was down because of the strike and employment in construction and manufacturing was below year-ago levels in this charges.

Rep. James R. Jones, D-Okla., the chairman of the House Budget Committee, said the lack of copies of the legislation amounted to a "shameful charade of a legislative process gone mad" and an "utter humiliation of the legislative process."

Nevertheless, 29 Democrats joined with 188 Republicans to give Reagan the critical 217-211 vote he needed to seal the victory. Only two Republicans, Reps. Charles F. Dougherty of Pennsylvania and Claudine Schneider of Rhode Island, jumped ship to join Democrats in opposing Reagan.

the police department intends to enforce these regulations.

It seems last year the fire and police departments were kept pretty busy.

The fire department received 20 reports of fireworks-related fires during the two-week time that fireworks were legally sold. Seventeen of those fires occurred in the first four days of July, and on the fourth, firemen at one time were fighting six fires with six trucks and had four other fires waiting on them.

Hereford Fire Marshal Jay Spain said most of the fires were grass fires, but he estimated that the city last year lost about $75,000 in buildings.

Also, according to Spain, many of these fires were caused by the bottle rocket variety of firecracker. Bottle rockets can go as high as the top of a house, become lodged in the roof and start a fire. Recently, Senator Bill Saraulius of Hereford introduced legislation to outlaw bottle rockets, but Spain doubts it will go into effect this year usually are available to the public and reporters. Copies of the Reagan package were not available, although Republicans briefed reporters on its contents.

At one point, Republican Leader Robert H. Michel of Illinois raised the possibility of "dirty tricks" and accused Democrats of a "certain kind of interception" the night before that delayed delivery of the legislation to the printer.

O'Neill replied: "I don't know if such a thing happened or not."

Wright told a boisterous House that the substitute package of cuts contained "one or two sneaky provisions." Republicans denied the fact that six fireworks stands are located within walking distance from Hereford residential areas doesn't help much either. Spain said kids aged 9-13 are the ones who shoot the most fireworks, but that older kids can think of more things to do with them.

Hereford this year will not have the public fireworks show in Veteran's Park that it had in years past. The show was intended to make a safer Hereford on the fourth of July by discouraging people from shooting off their own fireworks, but the plan backfired. Some people shot fireworks into the crowd gathered to watch the show and the vinyl roof of a car was burned.

Morgan said parents should take their kids to shoot fireworks, since parents are ultimately responsible for their kids' use or misuse of fireworks. Parents can be fined upon if their kids misuse fireworks. Morgan suggested people find a nice safe place out of town, and away from any remaining wheat fields, to shoot fireworks.

The CPSC also reports that the majority of fireworks-related accidents are result of product misuse, and not product malfunction.

Despite rules and regulations about fireworks, the temptation to shoot them in town is sometimes just too great for kids to resist. The

POW Camp Construction Was a Massive Job

(Editor's note This is the first part of a three-part story about the Hereford prisoner of war camp written by staff member Debe Graves. In this initial installment the construction of the camp and its general layout is detailed. Part two will cover some of the memories of the camp from some local men who worked there, and the final part will include an interview with a former prisoner, who a few weeks ago, made his second visit to the camp since the war ended.)

By DEBE GRAVES
Staff Writer

The year was 1942, songs like "Apple Blossom Time" were radio hits. Roy Rogers was a box office hero. War nickels and steel pennies were in use. Sugar, shoes, tires, and gas were being rationed, and movie starlets led women in donating silk hosiery for the "common cause."

The "cause" was World War II, and though battles in distant lands might have seemed strange to the folks back home, the war was followed with an intense interest as the outcome would effect the world.

Hereford was then a struggling little town of 2,300. Local families must have initially been a little frightened of a prisoner of war camp, designated to house more than twice their number in prisoners, was constructed just five miles southwest of town by the War Department.

Authorized June 30, 1942, by the War Department, construction on the $2 million prison camp began in the latter part of July. Represented by A.C. Kellersberger, the U.S. Engineer's Office had over-all supervision of the construction project. Coloal Wyley was Chief Engineer. General contractor was the Dallas based Russell J. Brydon Company with S.J. Churchill, superintendent. The Brydon company began work on the main buildings at the camp in September.

Fred Lawrence was superintendent for the company of Sherman and Eberett contractors for the installation of water and gas lines and the sewer disposal system for the camp. J.K. Alewine was Chief representative for the firm of Freese and Nichols architects for the project. The American District Telegraph Company of Fort Worth received the contract for construction of an automatic fire alarm system for the camp.

CONSTRUCTION CONTINUES

By October the Hereford Military Reservation and Reception Center towered above abundant fields of sorghum, potatoes, and onions. In a time before tall grain elevators, superstructures, pre-fabricated houses, and "Texas" size skyscrapers, the rapid rising buildings, guard posts, and water tower must have been awesome as several thousand laborers and craftsmen raced against time to complete the center.

Though the building were not set up as permanent structures, precautions were taken to make the camp escape-proof in accordance with War Department specifications.

The camp which covered a section of land was surrounded with two high fences buried four feet deep in concrete pilings. The inner fence carried a heavy electrical charge. The "no man's land" area between the two fences was floodlighted at night. Any prisoner within the area of the compound fence and the camp fence was subject to be ing shot by guards with machine guns posted in towers located at each corner. The fences were also closely guarded by foot patrols. Tall, strong barbed wire fences separated the prisoner areas from the administrative sector and were also guarded by military police.

Guards were kept on 24-hour duty at the camp site and entrance could be obtained only with authorization from an officer. The visitor then must have checked in at the gate and checked out again upon leaving. Weapons were forbidden within the compound area, even guards carried only billy clubs in this area.

The camp itself consisted of four compounds each with its own chapel, recreational area, and facilities.

There was a common building with toilets, shower baths, lavatories, shaving mirrors and a laundry room. Each prisoner would have been assured of plenty of hot and cold water, soap, combs, brushes and even shaving brushes issued by Uncle Sam.

Across the street from this building was a theatre, the Teatro Gloria, in which the prisoners would perform their own productions in competition with other compounds to see who could put on the best and most impressive stage show.

LUXURIES AVAILABLE
Across the street from the theatre was the compound post exchange building where prisoners could spend up to $10 per month of their earnings in coupon books on luxuries such as tobacco, candy, popples, drinks, shaving lotion, and other items.

Next door to the post exchange was a building where the prisoners would visit the captured men. Most of the men had relatives who were naturalized Americans.

Close by was a building where, at their own request, prisoners could learn the American language.

One of the most impressive buildings was the dining hall, while under the supervision of American soldiers, the hall was operated strictly by the prisoners. The meals, though planned by the Americans according to the orders of the day governing American men, were prepared by prisoners cooking the way they preferred their food.

The tables and floors were kept spotlessly clean as was the immaculate kitchen with a huge coal range, chopping blocks, dish washing vats, and serving tables.

FOUR COMPOUNDS

As mentioned previously there were four compounds, each compound was surrounded by a barbed fence. There were 10 yards between each compound and then the fence surrounding the entire camp.

Between the fences was a "bull pen" where the prisoners stood until guards gave the order to march out the outer gate.

The first compound was used to confine men who were unwilling to work. Some of these men were adamant Fascists and trouble makers.

The second compound contained enlisted men who were laborers and worked the area farms along with the several hundreds of acres of land in the reservation to provide food for the self-sustaining camp.

The third compound was used when new men came in and was vacated again as the prisoners were sorted. This sorting process was necessary to keep friction down.

The fourth compound was reserved for captured officers who would not be required to work.

The first three compounds consisted of hundreds of barracks but the officers' compound were more like apartments with only four men to an apartment if they were lieutenants, two captains shared quarters, and a major, the highest ranking captured officer ever stationed here, had an entire apartment to himself.

3,000 MEN HELD
Average occupancy rates of each compound was about 600 men and though the camp had a capacity for many more it usually held around 3,000 prisoners.

Resting on 800 acres of the land, the Hereford Camp was the second largest Prisoner of War Camp in Texas. According to a biennial report of Chief of Staff General George C. Marshall in September 1943, the Herford camp had a capacity of 5,000 men. There were twelve POW camps in Texas which had a total capacity of 44,000 prisoners. The largest camp was located near Mexico, having a capacity of 5,800.

NEXT: Bill Phillips and Major Schroeter recall some of the incidents which occurred while the POW camp was in operation.

Historical Novels Available

By DIANNE PIERSON
County Librarian

Historical novels by Jean Plaidy head the list of new books available this week at the Deaf Smith County Library. With a combination of historical accuracy and vivid writing, Jean Plaidy continues her stirring Plantagenet saga with the story of John, once rival of and now heir to Richard Lionheart in volume four.

THE PRINCE OF DARKNESS focuses on John, who is chosen to succeed Richard Lionheart to the throne. John's unpleasant character soon reveals itself, and his unbridled sensuality, his fierce and terrible temper, his cruelty, his sloughfulness and indifference to duty, his injustice and cynical methods of taxation drive the barons to revolt. People believe the legend that the House of Anjou has been infected by Satan's blood and that John is, indeed, the Devil—the Prince of Darkness.

The fifth book in Jean Plaidy's magnificent Plantagenet saga is entitled, THE BATTLE OF THE QUEENS. During the first half of the thirteenth century, two women dominated the scene. They were Isabella of Angouleme, who had been Queen of England, and Blanche of Castile, who was Queen of France.

Isabella, one of the most sensually alluring women of all time, became the wife of King John and the mother of Henry III, Blanche was the wife of Louis VIII and mother of Lois IX. Isabella and Blanche share two qualities—beauty and ambition. In THE BATTLE OF THE QUEENS Isabella with her husband, Hugh, is determined to destroy Blanche and will stop at nothing, not even murder, in order to do so. Jean Plaidy is the pseudonym of a well-known author who resides in England and has captured the world with her writing.

Other books available this week at the library include TILLY WED by Catherine Cookson. TILLY WED is the second independent volume of a trilogy about one of the most fascinating Cookson heroines. In this new novel a master storyteller brings her most enchanting heroine to the American frontier.

TILLY WED is a vivid recreation of life on the frontier, full of the cruelty and color of the American West at its wildest and most forbidding. TILLY WED will add new members to the legion of Mrs. Cookson's admirers.

THE WHITE HOTEL by D.M. Thomas, currently on the New York Times Bestseller List, is also available this week. Other new books include LOVE DAD by Evan Hunter, A BODY FOR A BUDDY by Aaron Marc Strain, and SWEETSIR by Helen Yglesias.

Q. A friend and I have had a long standing argument concerning productivity relative to the average workweek for Americans. He maintains the workweek is at or very close to 40 hours. I say it is considerably less. Are there any figures which will settle our friendly debate?
A. According to the International Labor Organization, the United States has the world's shortest workweek at an average of 35.6 hours. Interestingly, the U.S. is one of only four countries with workweeks of less than 40 hours. They include Sweden, close behind the U.S. at 35.7 hours, Belgium at 35.8 hours and New Zealand with 37.6 hours. The ILO found that for most of the rest of the world, the 40-hour workweek is rather elusive, with most countries posting an average at somewhat above 40 hours. In France, for example, the average is 41.2 hours, while Switzerland is long-hour leader with 44.5 hours.

Unsettled Question

There have been a number of bankruptcies among the grain elevator industry in the past year or so, and out of these bankruptcies have come some questions that deserve to be answered for the benefit of those who produce grain and then store it. The question revolves around warehouse receipts. How good are they? For years farmers have assumed that once they put their grain into storage in a government bonded elevator and received a fancy warehouse receipt on safety paper like a bank check, then this meant that their grain was safe. Bankers had the same faith in a warehouse receipt and accepted these at face value as collateral for a loan on the grain they represented. However, it has come to light that a warehouse receipt doesn't mean much as far as guaranteeing that there is grain where the receipt says it is. Elevator bankruptcies and the validity of the claim to ownership represented by a warehouse receipt were thrust into the national limelight by the dramatic action last February by a Missouri farmer, Wayne Cryts. Reinforced by about 500 farmers from Missouri, Oklahoma and other agricultural states, Cryts, in violation of a court order, rolled a caravan of trucks past federal marshals to remove about 30,000 bushels of soybeans from the James Brothers bankrupt elevator in Ristine, Mo. Cryts had official warehouse receipts from the James Brothers firm showing he had placed a specified number of bushels of soybeans in the elevator. However, when the elevator went bankrupt, a federal judge ruled that the soybeans owned by Cryts and covered by a warehouse receipt didn't mean anything. All he had was a claim against the elevator owners, and a claim no better than those who advanced money for other purposes. After this well publicized incident, and after finding out that a warehouse receipt for stored grain is worth only as much as the stability of the firm that stores it, a lot of grain producers and grain dealers naturally became concerned. Several pieces of legislation have been introduced to correct this situation. One bill would put a warehouse receipt on a par with a bond or cashier's check and would set up safeguards to insure that the owner of grain stored in bonded storage would be guaranteed either his grain or the money it represents. This seems simple enough, and fair enough, too. After all, there needs to be some teeth in a law designed to safeguard stored grain. It should have as much protection as money does for those who put it in a bank.

THE SNOOTIES Did you ever notice how people who work in snooty stores become snooty themselves? They may make only $90 bucks a week but they look down on all but the wealthiest customers. The fact that they are working while we are free to shop never enters their minds. They give us the once over twice and decide we are poor white trash with no business entering their haughty domain. Like a fellow said, "I believe in the Golden Rule. Them what's got the gold does the ruling." I hate to go in some "name" restaurant and be made to feel like an Okie with a mattress tied on top of the car. I hate to go into a clothing store and be made to feel like there was nothing there I could possibly afford. The trouble is, haughty works. When they get through with me at the restaurant I am compelled to order the best just to show them. I have choked down Lobster Newberg in Boston...I hate lobster and do not even know who Newberg is. I have bought suits I did not like and could not afford just because I could not leave the place with them thinking their estimation of my wealth was correct. I tie the suit on top of the mattress and head on to California. I have found a cure. Get them to talking. If they talk long enough, they will reveal they have no coath or suave either. Two ladies from Oklahoma had to go to Nieman-Marcus while in Dallas. They just had to see the place. When the clerk laid the haughty on them they fell. Nothing would do except their buying something just to show the old gal. They decided the only thing they could afford was a handkerchief. The clerk held up the handkerchief with a look of pure disdain. When asked the price she said five dollars. One lady could not help herself. Okie or no, she said, "Five dollars for a handkerchief?!" The clerk pulled up her haughty and said, "Well, my word, Lady! They're hand did!" I'll bet the clerk had a mattress on top of her car. Warm fuzzies, Doug Manning

It's My Turn

I became a "conventioner" week before last as the wife and I joined Sid and Susan Shaw on a trip to the 64th Annual International Lions Clubs Convention in Phoenix. We decided to take the scenic route and drive a van out there and back, an act which threw the poor vehicle nearly into its death throes. We had to have minor surgery done on its air conditioner before the whole affair was finally over. We had no problems driving out there, but three days of driving in temperatures over 110 degrees, along with 13 percent humidity, literally had the van screeching in agony. After coming up with about three different possible causes, we finally discovered it was just a broken belt, and a friendly mechanic remedied the problem. Along the way we visited the Painted Desert and the Petrified Forest and drove through some of the prettiest country we've ever seen. Only thing was, we thought we'd never see the plains again after driving through the mountains of forests which cover Eastern Arizona. Stops along the way included Albuquerque and a very genuine-looking establishment called "Fort Courage." The place even had signs along the highway advertising "Lions Information." Not until we stopped, anticipating a shrine to the old "F Troop" gang, did we find out that the only information available was a chance to buy a raffle ticket for something a local club was giving away. Another misconception we encountered after finally arriving in the sunny city was that it does not, repeat, not get cool there when the sun sets; especially downtown, where the sun-baked streets continued to reflect the day's scorch until well into the night. The failure of the air conditioning system in our motel did little to smooth out the rough edges in our temperament the first two nights, but a room change in the middle of the week took care of that. As they say, it was a nice place to visit, but who'd want to live there? The palm trees were nice to look at, the view of the mountains was spectacular, and the eateries were excellent, but I'll take the winds of the Texas Panhandle anytime. It was sure nice to get back home!

The Bootleg Philosopher

Editor's Note: The Bootleg Philosopher on his Deaf Smith County grass farm on Tierra Blanca ranges widely over several different subjects this week. Dear Editor: You can say this for economists and weather forecasters, they never look back. If a forecaster predicts continued dry, farmers cut hay, and a cloudburst hits, it was the weather that was wrong, not the forecaster. Department of Agriculture economists a month ago predicted steer prices would rise in June. Now that they haven't, they explain it this way: "It appears steer prices will miss our market forecast." In other words, it was the steers' fault, not theirs. I predict we'll never whip inflation as long as people will pay $40 for a pair of $10 jeans that used to cost $5. Since most politicians, when asked a question, won't stick to the subject, I won't either. I read about a sheep rancher who, bothered by Yours faithfully, J.A.

Thumbing Back

50 YEARS AGO The planned program at the Star theatre for the coming week runs mostly to comedy and light entertainment features, which is in keeping with the demand that cheerful themes should relieve the drabness of every-day existence. Showing for the last time in a regular one-cent special sale by which two persons are admitted for a cent more than the price for one. George Bancroft plays in "The World and the Flesh," along with a comedy featuring Zasu Pitts. 25 YEARS What's the proposed "new" Bull Barn going to look like? It will be a first class building in appearance and size - one that will be a credit to the community if the current thinking of members of the Commissioner Court is translated into masonry and steel. 10 YEARS AGO An investigation into the discovery of counterfeit $20 bills in the area turned up two such bills in Hereford recently. The city commission, prompted by a sudden outbreak in the number of persons in this county who have been treated for possible rabid animal bites, currently adopted an add-on ordinance that will alleviate some of the problems being faced by the out-dated animal control ordinance. 1 YEAR The steady snick of shears clipping away the root slumps and green tops of onions was more audible than the urgings of roadside strikers, and for two crews working acreage here of late, the immediate concern was to get harvest-ready onions in field sacks to cars before the oppressive June heat ruined them. Many economists believe the nation's battle against rising prices is far from over, even though inflation's rapid pace has slackened in the past two months as the recession has deepened.

THE WAGMAN FILE Bob Wagman

Reagan again in 1984?

By Robert J. Wagman WASHINGTON (NEA) — Last year most political professionals assumed that Ronald Reagan's 1980 campaign for the presidency would be his last regardless of its outcome. By 1984, they pointed out, Reagan would be 73 years old. Now the president's closest aides are saying not that he might run for a second term but he will definitely do so. The political professionals, however, are accepting these declarations with several grains of salt. For the past month or so, Lyn Nofziger, the president's chief political operative, has been telling any reporter willing to listen that his boss is certain to run for and win a second term no matter who the Democrats put up in opposition. Then James Baker, the White House chief of staff, confirmed in a nationally televised interview that Reagan would seek re-election in 1984. But professionals in both political parties and in the press say that it is far too early to evaluate whether Reagan should or will run again and whether he can win if he does. The first consideration is Reagan's age and health. His youthful appearance, vigor and speedy recovery after his March shooting belie the fact that he is 70 years old and will be 73 by the time of the next campaign. The Oval Office has taken a great physical toll of most of its occupants. The president's political health is another consideration. It's true that he is riding high in the public-opinion polls. But 1984 is a long way off. Jimmy Carter was more popular among the American people at this point in his term than Reagan is today. The bottom dropped out for Carter when it became apparent that he did not have the cure for the nation's ills, the same could happen to Reagan. The professionals say that Reagan is gambling his political future on the success of his economic-recovery program of tax and budget cuts. If his proposals are adopted but fail to produce the desired results by 1983, Reagan could be in as deep political trouble as was Carter in 1979. Why, then, are Reagan's operatives saying so unequivocally that he will run and win in 1984? Because they know that in this town nothing is quite as lame as a lame-duck politician. Thus, they are trying to defuse immediately any notion that Reagan will not be around for another seven years. Reagan is in the midst of a major battle to get his economic program through Congress. He also wants to see the Republican Party take control of the House next year. To succeed on both scores, he needs a unified Republican Party. Unity could crumble quickly if various factions in the party thought that they would be choosing a new standard-bearer in 1984. The party could split into moderate and conservative camps, with the moderates lining up behind Vice President George Bush and the conservatives splintering even further behind such candidates as Sen. Paul Laxalt of Nevada and Rep. Jack Kemp of New York. Republican fighting coupled with renewed Democratic vigor at not having to face an incumbent in 1984 could spell disaster for the Reagan economic program and for the 1982 congressional campaign. So, to put party rivals on hold and to persuade the Democrats — especially the conservatives — that they will be dealing with a Reagan administration until nearly the end of the decade, the White House is declaring in absolute terms that Reagan will seek and win a second term. Of course, the professionals are not taken in by all of this. The White House statements probably will keep the intra-party rivalries behind the scenes — at least for now — but will not stop various Republican contenders from laying the groundwork for 1984 just in case those statements prove premature.

Hidden Taxes!

Some years ago I sought to backtrack on the production of a single loaf of bread to determine how much of the purchase price was "taxes." My search led all the way back to the tires on the farmer's tractor and the sales tax on his seed. I noted that the truck which delivered the wheat to market paid an assortment of taxes — as did the miller and marketer. With my search probably incomplete, I found that on one loaf of bread there are four hundred separate taxes! Recently you and I were pinched to pay federal and state income taxes. Enormous as those levies have become, however, most of us are paying out even more in "hidden taxes." Sam Smith for Chicago's Tribune computes that in his city an average family of four with an income of $20,000 pays 24 percent of that income in federal taxes, another 6.65 percent in Social Security taxes and 2.5 percent in Illinois state tax. But that's not all... On your $50,000 suburban house you are paying an annual property tax of $1,633. When the lights and appliances are operating in your house you are running up a utility bill PLUS state and local taxes totaling an extra 6.5 percent. For the heat you use in your house you must pay the state an extra 2 percent and the city an additional 5.5 percent. Use your telephone and the state adds its 2 percent, and the city adds its 6.5 percent and the federal government wants another 2 percent. Your phone bill is 10.5 percent taxes! And these are Chicago figures which are LESS than New York, Philadelphia, Milwaukee or Los Angeles. In Chicago the sales tax is 4 percent on food and drugs, 6 percent on anything else. At the ball park you pay a 4 percent amusement tax plus a 30 percent parking tax. Of the price of each gallon of gasoline in your car 23 cents is tax. And that windshield sticker represents a $40 tax. Smoke or drink and the tax man really socks it to you. On every gallon of alcohol $13 is tax. On every pack of cigarettes there's a 5 cent city tax, a 5 cent county tax, a 12 cent state tax plus a 30 cent federal tax. During the past 10 years taxes, federal, state and local, have increased 155 percent — almost twice as fast as consumer prices. The Tax Foundation, Inc., calculates that your taxes now amount to more than 30 percent of your earnings. That means that three hours of every workday you are "working for the government." And history says that when people are taxed more than one-third of their income, incentive is destroyed and the national economy stagnates and declines. What President Reagan is trying to do — relieve the federal overload — is not enough — but it is a necessary beginning.

Voice of Business

A Tax Cut for All Americans

"Within six months, you'll be in the race of your lives." That was the prediction — and the challenge — issued to the American business community by Treasury Secretary Donald Regan at the June meeting of the U.S. Chamber's Board of Directors in Washington. It is based on the Administration's hope that its entire economic package will be in place by the end of the year. Then, once such shackles as excessive taxation and over-regulation are removed, Secretary Regan said, "we'll see what American business can do." I know that the U.S. Chamber's 146,000 members, as well as the entire business community, are eager to take the Secretary up on his challenge. That's why the U.S. Chamber's Board of Directors recently reiterated its support for the President's bipartisan tax plan, along with the rest of his economic program, will turn every American worker and business loose in the free marketplace to produce and prosper for the benefit of all. As expected, the Reagan tax bill, introduced recently in the House by Reps. Barber Conable (R-NY) and Kent Hance (D-TX), has touched off a series of questions and controversies over who will reap the greatest shares of its benefits. What will individual taxpayers get out of it? Will the rich benefit at the expense of the not-so-rich? Will big business benefit while smaller ones suffer? These questions miss the point. In fact, the President's tax proposals will benefit all Americans and every segment of our economy. For example, the proposal to cut income tax rates across the board by 25 percent would provide every working American with additional income as well as increased incentives to save, invest and produce. At the same time, the "progressive" nature of our income tax code would be untouched. The family of four who now earns $50,000 and pays 4.6 times the tax as a family making $20,000 would still be paying 4.6 times as much as much after the tax cut. The individual tax rate cuts would help the business community as well. Almost 90 percent of American businesses — mainly small ones — now pay taxes at individual rates. A 25 percent cut would provide small firms with the wherewithal to expand, create new jobs, and in many cases, to simply survive. The benefits of another feature of the President's program — faster and simpler depreciation allowances for capital investments — would also be shared by the entire economy. Business and industry would have more capital to invest, modernize and compete once again in foreign markets. That means more jobs for the

From Chicago to Hondo N.M., Via the Bicycle

By GAIL FIELDS and JULIE SMILEY
Staff Writers

Many Hereford residents have taken up diets, jazzercise, jogging or swimming for the summer to get back into "shape." Pat Kelly is shaping up the fun way - he's bicycling from Chicago to Hondo, N.M.

"I thought it would be a fun way to get in shape," said Kelly, 31, of his 1,340-mile trip which started May 19 in Chicago.

Kelly said he tries to bike about 60 miles a day, five or six days a week, a moderate pace for a biker. The Red Carpet Inn, Hereford, was his home Thursday night, and Friday night will find him in Clovis, N.M.

An orange, five-foot biker's flag waving above his head, Kelly said he doesn't attract much attention on the road. He wears a tiny rear-view mirror attached to his glasses which enables him to see large trucks approaching from the rear.

Clad in gym shorts, flat-soled biker's shoes, leather and mesh biker's gloves, sweat band, safety helmet and greasy sun screen on his shoulders and back, Kelly was off to a fairly early start Friday morning, biking west of Hereford on Highway 60 about 9:30 a.m.

"Not too many days left to Roswell, thank God," he said of his nearly-completed trip. Too much wind in the Panhandle and an occasional flat tire have slowed him only a little.

Kelly said the greatest problem is wind. "It's so hard to peddle when the wind's against you, and you even have to peddle downhill."

"I fell down once, on a railroad-track crossing. And don't cross those cattle things you have (cattle guards), those are real hard to cross on a bike," he said with a smile.

"It's good exercise and it's cheap," said Kelly. His trip is costing about $30 to $40 a day, because he stays in a motel each night. But, many bikers carry a tent and spend $10 or less a day. "Food is really your only expense when you travel that way," he said.

Straddling his $250 Schwinn LeTour, Kelly said, "It's fun except when conditions, like a flat tire, wind, and sunburn make a long day."

He has had lots of time to think on his cross-country tour. "There's just enough going on around you to keep you occupied, but it's not a strain."

"You know, I drove through Texas on my way to Mexico in December, and nothing much stuck in my head about the trip.

"What's crazy, is how much everyone drives a car, and they're overweight. Just to get a hot dog, they drive their car," Kelly said.

"In Europe, everyone rides a bike." However, he did agree that maybe a pickup truck was necessary in the farming and ranching economy of the panhandle.

Hereford is on the southwest bike route of the Trans America Bike Route which was mapped in 1976 for the bicentennial. Kelly said Hereford is a good stop for many bikers on their way west and to California.

When I get to Hondo, I have a friend meeting me there with a car. I'm going to take this bike apart and ride in the car to California and spend some time out there," he concluded.

Wealth and Poverty Mix In Poorest Metropolitan

McALLEN, Texas (AP) — Welcome to the poorest metropolitan area in America, a way station on the road from Mexican poverty to the good life in the United States.

It is a land of stark contrasts: wealthy Mexicans arriving by plane to spend their pesos in fancy shops, while poor countrymen sneak across the Rio Grande to seek jobs and a new life; affluent neighborhoods for a fast-growing professional and management pool and impoverished colonies of immigrants; long lines of food stamp recipients in Texas' most bountiful agricultural county.

On some days, a visitor driving south of the city can, with a sharp eye, detect "los indocumentados" wading the Rio Grande from Mexico or just waiting on the river's southern banks for the U.S. Border Patrol to look the wrong way.

Some of these illegal visitors are caught but more probably escape to start American life on the bottom rung of the socio-economic ladder.

"We're the entry point, as are all the border cities, for the migrants from Mexico, illegal or legal," Mayor Othel Brand said.

"There are two kinds, the doctors and the lawyers, and then the extremely poverty stricken from rural areas of Mexico who are willing to live in what we would consider unsuitable conditions but in reality are an improvement for them."

Almost one in four of McAllen's 67,000 residents is a permanent alien, a Mexican citizen who resides legally in the United States. Mexican-Americans make up 80 percent of the populace, with some families tracing their ancestry to the days when Spain controlled Mexico and Texas and granted colonists large tracts of land.

Kelly...Long Ride Nearly Over

Brooking Lives With A Touch of Yesterday

By BILL JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer
OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Levi Brooking is a breath of yesterday in a throw-away world.

He shows up at his cluttered downtown shop at 7 a.m., five days a week — ready, willing and able to repair cigarette lighters and fountain pens.

That may make him the loneliest repairman in town. "There was a time I'd have maybe 150 pens in here at a time to fix," he said. "Pens were sent in from eight states."

"Now, I get maybe eight or 10 people in the office in a week, a lot of times a lot less, and once in a while someone mails in a pen for me to fix."

But if you're a purist and don't hold with the new-fangled, throw-away ball points and felt tips, you take or send your pen to places like Brooking's Pen & Lighter Repair. Brooking feels there aren't too many purists left.

He didn't criticize people who use ball point pens, but noted crisply, "I've never used one." Then he reached into his desk and pulled out an envelope addressed in flowing script by his daughter-in-law in California. "You can't do that kind of work with a ball point," he said.

Brooking — a 76-year-old, curly-haired, elfin man who reels off joke after joke — said he got into the pen repair business rather by accident.

One section of wall, the only area not covered by antique guns or old photographs or tropical fish tanks or bowling trophies or darkened by the ivy that twines in masses across the ceiling and wall to wall in the back room, holds the certificates from the nation's major pen manufacturers. They are dated 1946.

He proudly pulled out tray after tray of antique pens. "How much do you think this one is worth?" he asked, holding a Parker pen more than an inch in diameter. "I just got off the telephone a little while ago with a guy in Michigan who wanted to know if I'd take $500 for it."

He chuckled as he showed other pens, then turned to some of the lighters sitting in his case, waiting for owners to return. One, a gold Dunhill, has been in his shop since March 21, 1978.

"A guy keeps coming in here and wanting to buy it," he said. "But I tell him, 'Well, the guy that brought it in said he was going to come back for it.'"

There was a time when he was at his bench all day, but now he readily admits his work is more of a hobby. He says he would retire and go home to Ludie, his wife of 56 years, "if I thought my gun collection would be safe at home and nobody would break in and steal it."

Pctite Mother Never Sees A Dull Moment

BY DENISE SMITH
Staff Writer
Petite, 29-year-old Maureen Self is into a little bit of everything these days ranging from sewing for the public, raising a family, and teaching summer school. The young mother, whose talents are unnumbered, has sewn for the public six years, using her skill in the house, for the family, schools and community affairs.

Her summer is spent teaching, canning and putting up fruits. She cans "anything I can find," according to Mrs. Self. In the little spare time she has, she can be found cooking, crocheting, and reading with three "little people," whom her life evolves around. "My time is their time (referring to her children). They really like swimming now so any spare time I have is spent swimming," said the soft-spoken mother. Somewhat hyperactive, Mrs. Self when not busy is unsure of what to do with herself. She teaches herself such crafts as decoupage, macrame, and growing plants when they're healthy and "not being ugly to me." Having the desire to learn something new every year, Mrs. Self expands her field of crafts to make holiday gifts for friends and families. Beginning her day at 5:30 a.m., Mrs. Self is efficient in making breakfast for the children, fixing their lunches during school, cleaning house and then going to work only to return that afternoon devoting her time to the children. Mrs. Self has sewn since high school, making a lot of her own clothing. Her mother and father worked during the day, and she was forced to learn cooking and cleaning the house early. Mrs. Self is "a homemaker at heart." Having married young Mrs. Self wants to attend college to receive a degree in education. "This will only be possible though when my children are grown," she said.

Working in the fall as a teachers aide, next summer the energetic mother will teach a summer school for orthopedically handicapped children, ranging from age 6 to 9 at Aikman. "I really enjoy being around and working with children," she stated. Mrs. Self finds children fascinating. "they can make your life special. You often find yourself reliving experiences of your childhood that at the time you didn't appreciate," she continued. Mrs. Self is the mother of three children, ages nine, six and four. Born and raised in Tullia, she has resided in Hereford for 10 years. She belongs to the Young Mother's Study Club of which she was named "Mother of the Year" in 1979. It's a family-oriented study club according to Mrs. Self, the other women and club itself are rewarding she says. Her husband, James, is presently selling insurance. He previously coached for 10 years. As a family, the Selfs enjoy going to the movies, going out to eat, picnics and having other families visit. Below follows a recipe that Mrs. Self acquired when she first married. This recipe, according to the "fun" mother, is the families favorite.

Lear Will Fill In The Gaps

By FRED YAGER
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — "Like in the beginning days of television, there's an explosion in the need for material to fill expanding cable and subscription markets," says Norman Lear, whose company intends to help fill that gap. "I was there when television was born," says Lear, "so I remember the ravenous appetite to fill hundreds of hours on just three networks. With the multiplicity of channels to homes today, the need for programming is larger than we've ever seen before." To accommodate some of that demand, Lear's T.A.T. Communications and its sister company, Tandem, have expanded into cable and subscription television. T.A.T. also has opened an office here to buy and develop properties for production in New York. "T.A.T. is no longer just a 30-minute sitcom company," says Lear, who made a name for himself in the early '70s with hit shows like "All In The Family," "The Jeffersons" and "Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman." Some of his other prime-time shows included

"Maude," "One Day at a Time" and "Sanford and Son." Lear has long since given up the day-to-day supervision of his comedy shows. "We've broadened our base into a communications company," he says. "We're going to hit all points on the compass and develop programming for all the new technologies. It will encourage new kinds of expression. "We may do some public service-type shows," he says. "A debate format that would be as commercial as anything else is under consideration. We plan to develop shows in an off-off Broadway fashion, directed at only a half-million viewers so we'll be able to test a lot of things there." Lear departed from his 30-minute situation comedy format last year to develop "Palmerstown, U.S.A.," his first dramatic series, which was written by Alex Haley, author of "Roots," which became the top-rated miniseries of all time. "People's need for entertainment in the home seems to know no end," Lear says. "I'd like to see the economy as stable as the new television technologies." Lear, 58, got his start in television 31 years ago as co-writer of a weekly one-hour variety show, "The Ford Star Review." He followed that as a writer for the Dean Martin-Jerry Lewis "Colgate Comedy Hour," as well as for Martha Raye's and George Gobel's TV shows. Lear is involved, meanwhile, in People for the American Way, a non-profit organization he helped create for a national campaign to counter what he says are "the intolerant messages and anti-democratic actions of moral majoritarians." He says the group intends to distribute public service announcements to commercial TV stations to combat what he maintains is a "climate of fear and repression" in the TV industry.

Leprechauns Make Chronically Ill Children's Dreams Come True

CLEVELAND (AP) — Leprechauns are making dreams come true for chronically ill children at two Ohio hospitals, bringing lobster dinners, music and even a large chicken to the youngsters' bedsides. Ron Cady, a 17-year-old cystic fibrosis victim, had always adored the San Diego Chicken — the giant feathered mascot who flapped his way to fame as a San Diego Padres crowd-pleaser. One day, something of a furor erupted in the hallway outside Cady's room at Children's Hospital Medical Center in Akron. People jammed corridors as the Chicken strutted toward Cady's room. A leprechaun found the teen-ager sitting on his bed. "I said, 'Ron, the San Diego Chicken has come to see you,' and Ron said, 'Oh my God! This is better than Farrah Fawcett.'" Such exclamations of delight are the only reward the publicity-shy members of the Leprechaun Foundation seek. About 30 people belong to the group fashioned after a Philadelphia organization called the Sunshine Foundation, but they are reluctant to enter the spotlight. "It's not that we are not proud of what we do by any means," said Red Simmons, president of the leprechauns. "We have a group of people who are not out trying to get their names in the paper," he said. "I don't think it matters to a kid if Red Simmons, John Doe or Al Capone gave him something he always wanted." What they do is more important than who they are, the leprechauns say of their work for the Akron hospital and Rainbow Babies and Children's Hospital here. Leprechauns provided Rainbow patients with chemocaps — ice caps for children with cancer undergoing radiation treatments — that reduced head swelling and stopped their hair from falling out. Since then, one sick child got the guitar he always wanted but his parents couldn't afford. Another got his wish for a lobster dinner, all he could eat. Joe Wilson got the next best thing to meeting his idol. "This boy lived, breathed and mimicked 'The Fonz,'" one leprechaun said. "This was his idol in life, so our team went to work." Henry Winkler, who plays Fonzie in the television series, "Happy Days," could not come to Akron. So he placed a 20-minute phone call to Wilson and sent him a script from the show and a record. Most of the leprechauns are federal law enforcement officials in Akron and Cleveland. They depend on hospital personnel to screen requests and forward only those that will most help a sick child, said Simmons, an agent in the Labor Department's racketeering and organized crime investigation section. He said the leprechauns don't concentrate on fund-raising because a bank account doesn't necessarily make a charity. "There's bad publicity surrounding groups that just raise money," Simmons said. "That money can sometimes get lost. I think if we needed to raise money, we could do it, but we rarely need to."

Transcontinental television was inaugurated Sept. 4, 1951, when President Harry Truman addressed the Japanese Peace Treaty Conference in San Francisco.

Plague Nuclear Plant Delayed

By ANDREW M. WILLIAMS
Associated Press Writer
BAY CITY, Texas (AP) — A year ago this month, millions of South Texans were to have begun receiving low-cost electric power from the South Texas Nuclear Project in this Gulf Coast town south of Houston.

Instead, the plant is nowhere near completion, the most conservative estimates say its price has tripled — and just about everyone involved is angry at someone else.

No one knows for sure when — if ever — the massive construction project will be completed.

Plagued with problems that forced safety-related concrete pours and welding to be halted for months in 1980, the start-up date has been pushed back twice, once to 1982 and now to 1984.

The problems have led to considerable friction — and two activist groups are trying to convince the government in public hearings that the utilities involved lack the character and competence to operate a nuclear power plant.

Houston Lighting and Power is the controlling member of the four-utility partnership building the project. The other members are the city-owned utilities of San Antonio and Austin, and Central Power and Light of Corpus Christi.

HL&P and chief contractor Brown and Root are angry at the government. Their main complaint is that there is too much regulation.

An HL&P official says that the increase in Nuclear Regulatory Commission rules governing nuclear power plants — from 33 in 1973 to 203 in 1976 — are to blame for the delays and the price increases.

The estimated cost of the plant has grown from the $738 million originally quoted in 1973 to $2.7 billion current official forecast.

"The original estimates were based on nuclear plants that had recently been completed," says Graham Painter, HL&P's public relations manager. "The plants we are building today are bigger and what I would call beefier."

The NRC has been angry at the plant's builders before and is now checking to see if it is angry again.

Clyde Wisner, public affairs officer of the NRC regional office in Arlington confirmed that an investigation is being conducted following new charges of irregularities.

"We have a total of four allegations, but I can't go any further than that," Wisner said.

Lanny Sinkin, leader of the San Antonio-based Citizens Concerned About Nuclear Power, one of two groups asking the NRC to refuse HL&P an operating permit, also would not be any more specific, but he said the charges were made when "a guy walked off the job site and called me, saying, 'You gotta know about this.'"

The last time the NRC got angry — really angry — was in May 1980. The agency's bad humor cost HL&P a $100,000 fine and lots of explaining.

A six-man team's 1,100-manhour investigation confirmed many of the charges first leveled by Dan Swayze, who had been a quality control inspector for Brown and Root until he was fired.

Swayze said he was fired for doing his job too well to suit his bosses, but Brown and Root claimed he tried to exact a bribe from a construction foreman by threatening not to approve work.

The faults the NRC cited included threats made to quality control inspectors by construction workers. On one occasion the report said a worker offered to meet an inspector "in the parking lot with a .357 Magnum" revolver because the inspector refused to approve a piece of work.

Consequently, Swayze said, inspectors quit doing their jobs for five months.

"I've seen stricter quality control on a beer joint slab," Swayze said.

Steve Grote, senior vice president of Brown and Root's power division, said records show that Swayze's charges were unfounded. He said files show 27 inspections were carried out in those five months, "about the right ratio."

But Swayze said that though the forms were signed, the inspections were not done. In many instances, he said, the firm needed the paperwork before it could do necessary corrective work.

Problems included voids in the concrete reactor walls — one gap was 48 feet long — and welding on safety-related piping and reinforcement bars.

HL&P halted concrete pours for several months in 1980 because of the voids.

Brown and Root itself ordered welding stopped. Grote said it was because certain required paperwork had not been completed.

But during hearings in a congressional subcommittee, Rep. Edward Markey, D-Mass., said the NRC found 60 defective welds of the 77 it inspected.

"What does it take for the NRC to pull a construction permit?" he asked.

That's what Sinkin and his group have been asking.

"If this were any regulated endeavor other than a nuclear power plant, it would have had its license jerked long ago," he said.

Citizens Concerned About Nuclear Power and a Bay City group, Citizens for Equitable Utilities, cite the past problems as evidence that HL&P should not be licensed to operate a nuclear power plant. They are arguing their case before public NRC hearings that have been in progress since May and are scheduled to last until September.

HL&P and Brown and Root say the construction problems have been resolved, but cost escalation continues to stir controversy.

San Antonio Mayor Henry Cisneros said after a conference with HL&P officials in May that he wouldn't be surprised to see the price rise to $3.5 billion.

Golfrey Connally, an economics teacher at San Antonio College, figures even that is on the low side. A study he did two years ago predicted the minimum cost would be $4 billion and said $5 billion was not out of the question.

Tan Without The Sun!!

The aging, wrinkling and skin cancer - inducing effects of the sun are recognized as Important Health Considerations. The fashionable tan is still an objective, but its importance has levelled off as more emphasis has been placed on health considerations.

Skin care has become the key, whether the effect is the acquisition of a cosmetic tan or the prevention of sunburn, skin cancer or premature wrinkling.

Carotene Plus Tanning is uniquely different. It's the type of tan often referred to as "a healthy complexion."

No longer will you have to fear burning discomfort, disfigurement or premature aging. You gain and maintain an all season healthy look, without exposure to the harmful rays of the sun.

You can keep a beautiful tan all year around. Most skins begin to show a healthy outdoor look in seven days or less. In 21 days you can look as if you just returned from a world famous resort. Even people with pale skin and red hair — who normally sunburn easily.

Strike Enters Third Week; Negotiations Dim

NEW YORK (AP) — There again will be no major league baseball this summer weekend, and when — or if — the season will resume is anybody's guess.

As the players' strike entered its third week Friday, the latest round of negotiations collapsed in an atmosphere of pessimism.

Federal mediator Kenneth Moffett, who earlier in the week averted a threatened strike by air traffic controllers but is having noticeably more difficulty trying to resolve this dispute, felt no further talks would be scheduled for at least several days.

Meanwhile, the players accused the owners of having some sort of timetable that forestalled an immediate settlement and charged them with avoiding the key issue of compensating teams which lose premium free agents in the annual re-entry draft.

The mood was perhaps best expressed by Kurt Bevacqua of the Pittsburgh Pirates, who sat in on the talks for the first time.

Describing himself as "an average major league player, a utility man," the 34-year-old seven-year veteran said:

"I sat there and listened and I didn't see any sign of any type of settlement whatsoever. The only thing I saw was adamancy. I'm ready to sit out all season if I have to, and when the strike started that was the last thing I wanted to do. We're no closer to a settlement than we were a year ago."

The collapse of the negotiations came just one day after Ray Grebey, the owners' chief negotiator, said he was "encouraged."

An obviously weary Moffett described the stalemate by saying, "Both sides are locked in." He said the talks collapsed "probably because both sides ran out of gas as far as finding a way to resolve the issue at this time.

We've been over and around and addressed the compensation issue just about every way it can be addressed. The problem, of course, is the way it's going to be resolved."

The players have suggested a pool of players from which teams losing free agents could draw while the owners want compensation in the form of a professional player directly from a team signing a free agent. Present compensation is an amateur draft choice.

The talks broke down shortly after a U.S. District Court in Philadelphia threw out a lawsuit brought by the Major League Umpires Association that sought to block payment of up to $50 million in strike insurance to the owners.

Judge Donald Van Ardsalen dissolved a temporary restraining order that had been granted Wednesday in Common Pleas Court. "There is no precedent in law for such an order," he ruled.

The hearing was moved from the lower court on a motion filed by Lloyd's of London, the chief insurer, which said the case should be considered in federal court because of baseball's national character.

At the same time, the National Labor Relations Board postponed a scheduled hearing from next Monday until July 6 on a charge by the players that the owners have engaged in unfair labor practices. The players are seeking to force the owners to open their books, claiming management has cited financial hardship as a reason for wanting to change the method of free agent compensation.

"Whenever we broach the major issue, we get nowhere," said Rusty Staub of the New York Mets. "We're exhausted just about everything we can try to solve this thing. It's becoming more and more obvious to us that they must have some kind of timetable they're working on and it's obvious their timetable isn't ready to solve this.

"It's hard to believe on the 15th day of a strike, but every time we try to address ourselves directly to the issues we get off on tangents that are very easily solvable like what statistics should be used to determine "ranking" free agents. This is such an easy thing to solve. It's not an issue. We can find those top players."

Steve Rogers of the Montreal Expos, the third player attending Friday's session, said there was "no movement and no indication of movement. We're going to wait until they (the owners) have some new proposal on the issue — who pays compensation and what level that compensation will be."

Donald Fehr, the union's general counsel, described the owners' position as "not fundamentally different from the one of May 12, 1980," adding, "The fact that they are still with it draws you to the inescapable conclusion that it will either be done their way or there will be a long strike."

What little air of optimism there was came from Ray Grebey, the owners' chief negotiator. He conceded that "we mostly discussed players' statistics and how to identify 'ranking' free agents. The players association says that's no longer an issue and is insignificant, but it was a major issue they raised when the strike started and it was an issue when compensation went on the table.

"We're far apart, I agree, but I can't be discouraged when I find that some issues that were paramount in statements by the players association are now insignificant or not a problem."

'Top O' Texas' Rodeo Features Clydesdales

PAMPA, Tex. — West Texans, as everybody knows, love horses. And eight of the biggest, best-loved, most famous and certainly most pampered horses in the world, the Anheuser-Busch Clydesdales, will be featured in the 35th Annual Top O' Texas Rodeo July 9-11 and a Top O' Texas parade July 11.

The parade starts at 10:30 a.m. at Coronado Center and ends at the intersection of South Cuyler and Craven streets.

The Clydesdales will also appear at all three rodeo performances July 9-11 at 8 p.m. The public is invited to see and photograph the gentle giants, as the magnificent horses are called, at Clyde Carruth Pavilion in Top of Texas Recreation Park July 8-11.

Their visit to Pampa, the first in 25 years, is made possible through the efforts of Budweiser Dist. Co. of Borger, Inc., local wholesalers of Budweiser and other Anheuser-Busch beers. A Budweiser tradition for nearly 50 years, the Clydesdale travel some 40,000 miles annually for over 400 public appearances, ranging from regional events like Top O' Texas Rodeo to national events like the Cotton Bowl Parade.

Each Clydesdale weighs over two tons and stands at least 18 hands high. The gentle giants are characterized by their bay color, four fleecy white stockings and feet, a blaze of white on the face, and a black mane and tail. Each wears a custom-made black and brass harness, valued at $30,000 and custom-forged shoes, which weigh four pounds each.

Over 120 cowboys and cowgirls are expected to compete in the three-day PRCA rodeo.

Tickets are $4.50 for adults and $3.00 for children under 12.

Borg, McEnroe, Connors Find Top of List Easy

WIMBLEDON, England. (AP) — It has all been so easy for Bjorn Borg, John McEnroe and Jimmy Connors.

Borg, bidding for a sixth straight Wimbledon title, has not dropped a set in reaching the fourth round of this year's All-England championship. Connors is in the same position.

McEnroe did drop one set to Raul Ramirez of Mexico in the second round, but he was back in top gear Friday.

Borg defeated Rolf Gehring of West Germany 6-4, 7-5, 6-0 Friday and then admitted he would like a tough match at some stage.

"I feel ready for a long hard match," said the 25-year-old Swede, who faces his friend and practice partner Vitas Gerulaitis today.

Connors defeated fellow American Tony Giammalva 6-4, 6-4, 6-0, while McEnroe blitzed compatriot Bob Lutz 6-4, 6-2, 6-0.

Eight Americans are in the 16-player field were joined by four unseeded Australians, a South African, a Pole, an Indian and the inevitable Borg. Paul Kronk, a 26-year-old Australian who is troubled by a back injury, staged the biggest upset of the day, ousting ninth-seeded Jose Luis Clerc of Argentina 2-6, 6-4, 6-1, 7-6. Only six of the 16 men's seeds have survived, while 11 of the women — including all of the top eight — made the fourth round.

Two-time Wimbledon champion Martina Navratilova, who defeated American Sharon Walsh 6-1, 2-6, 6-0, thought she had an explanation for the disparity.

"There is more depth in men's tennis, but also the men were seeded a lot on their clay court performances. The women do not vary so much on different surfaces, so the seedings tend to hold up a lot better," said Martina.

Navratilova feels there is more depth in women's tennis each year.

"The way I see it, any of five players (herself, Czechoslovakian Hana Mandlikova and Americans Chris Evert Lloyd, Tracy Austin and Andrea Jaeger) could win the women's title," she said.

"I'd be surprised if Andrea won, but she is a definite threat. Five players makes it a lot more potential winners than there have been in past years."

Austin, 18, was given a scare by Australian Susan Leo and had to save three set points in the second set before winning 6-2, 7-6. But Lloyd, Mandlikova and Jaeger all had relatively easy victories.

Lloyd ousted Lele Forood of the United States 6-2, 7-6; Mandlikova downed American Andrea Buchanan 6-3, 6-0 and Jaeger crushed Leslie Allen of the United States 6-1, 6-2.

Pate, Strange, Mitchell Lead in DTMG Classic

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — The three men sharing the halfway lead in the $300,000 Danny Thomas-Memphis Golf Classic had decidedly different outlooks for the final 36 holes.

"The way I'm playing, I'm not at all optimistic," said former U.S. Open champion Jerry Pate.

Curtis Strange, however, was confident despite what he called "a couple of stupid mistakes. What I like about my play is that I'm putting better and better every day. I feel real good about it."

And Jeff Mitchell is just trying to figure out a way to get the ball in the fairway.

Despite his troubles off the tee, he managed to birdie two of the last three holes Friday for a 68 that tied him with Pate and Strange at 139, 5 under par for two trips over the 7,249-yard Colonial Country Club course.

Strange and Pate, a former U.S. Open champ who hasn't won in almost three years, each had a 70 in the warm, breezy weather.

A single shot back at 140 at the tournament's midway point were David Thore, Jerry Heard, Scott Simpson and first round leader Tom Kite, who slipped to a 73 that he called "a very poor round of golf, one of the worst I've played in a long time."

There, who needs to win $1,931 in this tournament to retain his PGA Tour playing rights, one-putted 11 times on the way to a 68. Heard's 66, the best round of the tournament, was highlighted by two chip-in birdies. Simpson shot 71.

Lee Trevino, the defending titleholder and a three-time winner of this title, had to rally from a watery double bogey for a 71 that put him at 141, only two shots back. Trevino birdied the last two holes after his tee shot on the par-3 12th hit a gallery-roped stake and bounced back into a pond in front of the green.

Bruce Lietzke was another stroke-away at 142 after a 71.

George Burns and Bill Rogers, who tied for second in last week's U.S. Open, both failed to make the cut for the final two rounds here. Burns shot 75-149 and Rogers was 75-150.

Mitchell, 26, now in his fifth year of tour activity, scored his only pro victory last season in the Phoenix Open.

He put himself in the title hunt with a strong finish started by a 5-foot birdie putt on the 16th. He drove into trouble on the 17th and had to drop a sidehill 25-foot putt to save par on the 17th. And on the 18th, he again found trouble off the tee, had to hit a full one-iron over the water on his third shot to the par-5 but got it to eight feet and made the putt.

"I'm not optimistic," said Pate, a consistent money-winner despite his lack of victories in the last two seasons. "I'm just throwing away too many shots," he said.

But Strange was very optimistic.

"This is just the time of the year when I start playing good," he said. "The thing I like most about my play is that I'm putting better and better every day."

Meyer Deals with SMU Probation Sentence

DALLAS (AP) — This is the time of year when most college football coaches are chasing rainbow trout and relaxing mind and matter for the grinding Saturdays of autumn.

But not Ron Meyer. He's still answering letters and telephone calls trying to explain why the Southern Methodist Mustangs got a year in the slammer from the NCAA.

Meyer won't be going on vacation this summer. "Professionally it's the low point of my 18-year career," said Meyer. "I've never been involved in anything like this. I've had disappointing Saturdays and overcome them...I'll overcome this."

SMU was placed on probation for two years by the NCAA. The penalty includes sanctions for one year that will prohibit the football team from playing in bowl games and on television.

Some SMU backers feel the infractions were so minor it was like getting five years for stealing an Eskimo pie.

Others believed the Mustangs were under the microscope because of past probation and the NCAA was ready to pounce at the slightest rules deviation.

There also was the counterpoint that the Mustangs were guilty of greater sins and the NCAA settled for the lesser trespasses.

"My mail has been 1,000 per cent supportive," said Meyer. "The SMU alumni have been fantastic."

He said he has spoken with every player on the football team.

Emotions ranged from "disappointment to anger," said Meyer.

"There was very much a set jaw type of approach about the coming football season," said Meyer. "Just because we can't play in the Cotton Bowl Jan. 1 our players want to make sure folks have an SMU nick on their record. A notch-on-the-gun-belt attitude was prevalent."

He added, "I've even had four or five players call and encourage me."

Meyer has had numerous opportunities to coach elsewhere, but said not only is he glad to still be at SMU but he hopes he will finish his college coaching days at the school.

"If they give me a lifetime contract I'm willing to sign it," said Meyer.

Asked if he could be enticed by an offer from the professional ranks, Meyer said, "My plans are to be here on a long-term basis. I've made a commitment and I'm going to see it through."

Meyer said his biggest concern at the moment is the players who will be seniors on the 1981 team.

"I wanted them to be in a bowl as a reward," said Meyer. "This season will be unfair to them. We've just got to make sure it never happens again around here."

The NCAA found SMU guilty of improper recruiting inducements and entertainment of prospects among other items.

It was the third time in the last seven years the SMU football program had been caught doing something wrong.

Meyer added, "I'm embarrassed by this thing. The stigma attached to it is a lot greater than the alleged violations that were committed. A lot of people just read the headlines. Not many read the allegations."

The only way the Mustangs can overcome their red faces is on the football field this fall. Many have already picked them to win the championship. All they've got left is their pride.

The medical term for the fear of work is Ergophobia.

Yesteryear Stars Enjoy PGA Senior

MARLBORO, Mass. (AP) — There's still a lot of money up for grabs and the competitive drive remains, but many of golf's stars of yesteryear are finding the PGA Seniors tour a lot more enjoyable than their pressure-cooker younger days.

"I'm enjoying playing more, having more fun, and I should be more relaxed, but I don't know," says 57-year-old Art Wall Jr. "I'd probably do better if I was more relaxed, but you still have to play hard. They play just as hard here as they do on the big (PGA) tour."

"There's a little more comradeship and it's a little bit more of a fun outing, but it's still not easy going for those crucial short putts," says Dan Sikes, who qualified for seniors competition when he turned 50 last December.

Wall, winner of 16 tournaments and owner of 42 holes-in-one in his PGA career, and Sikes conquered whipping winds and tough greens for 2-under-par 69s and a share of the first round lead Friday in the $150,000 Marlboro Classic-PGA Seniors event.

Starting on the back nine, Sikes had a 35-34 with three birdies and one bogey in the morning. Then Wall duplicated the effort in the afternoon on Marlboro Country Club's 6,174-yard hilly course.

That gave the pair a one stroke lead over veteran Bob Goaly, who had a 33-37-70. Goaly, who still plays on the regular tour, was the only other player in the field of 50 veteran pros to better par.

There was a six way tie at 71. Equaling regulation were Julius Boros, Ken Nagle, Gardner Dickinson, Jim Ferree, Lionel Hebert and John Kalinka.

Don January, winner of two events on the seniors tour this year, 66-year-old Sam Snead and Tom Nieporte were next at 72. Paul Hardy, Bill Collins, Howie Johnson, Billy Maxwell and Don Fairfield were another stroke back.

Gene Littler and Bill Casper, two of the pre-tournament favorites, were in a group at 74. Casper is playing as a senior for the first time, having turned 50, on Wednesday.

The old pros each played with three amateurs as a program event was part of the first round. However, with $25,000 first prize money at stake, they were left to battle it out on their own today in the second round. The 54-hole event is scheduled to wind up Sunday.

Nancy Lopez-Melton Leads LPGA Tourney

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Nancy Lopez-Melton has spectators at the $125,000 Sarah Coventry wondering what she could do in perfect health.

While dealing for the second day with a stomach disorder, she conquered the Locust Hill Country Club's 6,155-yard course Friday with a remarkable charge — four birdies in the first six holes — on the way to a 4-under-par 69 and a 143-stroke total for a share of the lead in the Ladies Professional Golf Association tournament.

"I didn't think about conditions that much ... maybe I was thinking more about not getting sick," said the 24-year-old golfer.

"I didn't feel well when I came out this morning," she said. "I was just thinking about playing the best I could, and I definitely did not want to withdraw."

Pat Bradley and Jan Stephenson, the only two of five first-round leaders who survived the second-round blazes, fired rounds of 73 and 74, respectively. Bradley was tied with Lopez-Melton at 143, and Stephenson was third at 144.

Catherine Duggan fired a 3-under 70 — second-best round of the day — and moved into the chase just two strokes off the pace at 145.

Mardell Wilkins and Kathy Martin, a co-leader Thursday with a 70, were at even-par 146, while six golfers were bunched at 147. H.B. Duntz, with 70-79 and Lenore Muraoka, 70-82, fell out of contention.

Seventy-four of the 76 golfer who entered — including all 72 remaining pros — made the cut at 17-over-par 163. Amateur Carol Lynn Donald missed the cut after matching rounds of 83-83.

Lopez-Melton has reason not to exit from a tournament at Locust Hill. In two tries here, she has won twice.

"I might be a little more confident than anybody else out here because I've played well here, but there's a few other girls that have played well here that also feel the same way I do," she said. "I like the golf course. It's like you can almost talk to the hole, like, 'You're not going to get me this time.'"

"You feel something for the hole and you just know it's waiting to grab you if you let it."

Bradley, 30, also has special feelings about the course. She finished second to Lopez-Melton by one stroke last year, won a tournament here in 1977 and has never finished lower than 12th here.

She said she started the chilly, windy day wanting "only to shoot par."

"I felt that if I shot par today, I'd be pretty close to the hunt as long as somebody didn't come around and shoot 5 or 6 shots under par. If that happens, you just have to say it was a hell of a round."

Leonard, Hearn's Head Toward Welterweight

HOUSTON (AP) — Sugar Ray Leonard said he talked to Thomas Hearn about their universal welterweight championship showdown and, he agreed that I will knock him out."

Leonard grinned. He had been asked at a news conference Friday about the battle of words that heated up after he won the World Boxing Association junior middleweight title and Hearn retained the WBA's welterweight title.

Leonard's ninth-round victory over Ayub Kalule and Hearn's four-round knockout of Pablo Baez paved the way for their big-money clash Sept. 16.

Leonard, who also holds the World Boxing Council welterweight title, said he suffered a jammed middle knuckle on his left hand, but, "I don't think it will affect the fight in September at all."

Hearn already has signed a contract. Mike Trainer, Leonard's attorney, said he had an agreement and a contract would be signed.

Harry Wald, president of Caesars Palace in Las Vegas, Nev., the expected site, said before Thursday night's fights that there were still some details to be worked out.

After watching Leonard become a double champion, Hearn said he would make Leonard quit when they fight. Told of that remark, Leonard suggested that if Hearn's head were opened, no brains would be found.

Hearn stopped Baez at 2:10 of the fourth round with a barrage of punches climaxed by a savage right.

"Tommy Hearn is a pretty hard puncher, but I don't think he's a one-puncher knocker out," said Leonard. A guy who is mobile a guy who can move will put Tommy Hearn in his place.

"I'll take the fight straight to him, make him miss and make him make mistakes, and I'll correct them."

Hearn didn't appear at the morning-after news conference, but Emanuel Steward did, and Hearn's manager-trainer said of Leonard's victory at 2:59 after the ninth round, "... his performance was a lot less than I expected."

"Based on what I saw last night Leonard is still selling his speed, which he doesn't have any more."

Leonard got a share of the 154-pound division title — the welterweight limit is 147 — when referee Carlos Berrocal of Panama stopped the bout after Kalule got up from the first knockdown of his 37-bout pro career.

The Ugandan, who lives in Denmark, didn't complain about the fight being stopped. But his manager, Mogens Palle, said the round was over and the fight shouldn't have been halted.

Leonard said he had heard a bell, but, "It was quite evident the fight was over. I really hope Kalule and his people don't disappoint me like some people in the past and make excuses."

Court Grants Prisons On Reform

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The Texas Department of Corrections has been given a temporary reprieve from implementing massive reforms in the state's prison system after an appellate court stayed a lower court mandating the changes.

The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals Friday set no date for full arguments on the appeal after it handed down a 3-0 decision that halted prison reforms ordered last January.

U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice ordered sweeping changes in the Texas prison system after David R. Ruiz and other inmates filed suit against the Texas Department of Corrections. The U.S. Justice Department later joined in the suit.

Ruiz, who recently was granted a parole, and the other plaintiffs in the suit charged TDC facilities were unconstitutional because they were, among other things, overcrowded, lacked adequate rehabilitation and medical facilities and adequate supervision.

Justice ordered that only one inmate could be put in each cell, and he told state officials they would have to build more prisons to house the state's 35,000 inmates.

But state officials appealed the ruling, claiming that the steps they already taken to improve the conditions would be sufficient.

The Legislature has appropriated $35 million for the construction of new prison facilities, ordered the work-furlough program to be expanded so inmates could be released earlier and approved additional parole officers.

Attorney General Mark White said in Austin, "I am hopeful that after the court reviews the facts, they will reverse the lower court's decision, and I intend to exert every effort in preparing our case for out appeal before the Fifth Circuit."

Gov. Bill Clements said he was "delighted with the judicious, thorough and timely consideration" by the appellate court in granting the stay.

"As I have stated repeatedly," he said, "William Wayne Justice overstepped his powers and incorrectly assessed the facts presented him in the Ruiz case. I am grateful to the U.S. Department of Justice for its assistance in critical areas of the motion for a stay."

The 5th Circuit temporarily delayed the following changes ordered in Justice's ruling:

—Placement of some inmates in single cells beginning Aug. 1, 1982, with extension of the program to all inmates by Aug. 1, 1983.

In staying this section of Justice's order, the 5th Circuit referred to the U.S. Supreme Court ruling on June 15 that keeping two prisoners in a cell designed for one inmate is not unconstitutional.

—Rotation every 10 days of all prisoners held in cells containing three inmates. The appeals court was not asked to stay a part of the order forbidding the so-called triple-celling of inmates after Aug. 1, 1981.

—Release of a specified number of inmates on work furlough and temporary furlough by certain deadlines beginning Nov. 1, 1981. At least 2,500 inmates would be released on work furlough and at least 1,000 others on temporary furlough by Nov. 1, 1982.

—A TDC review by Nov. 1, 1981, of the record of every inmate who has not received credit for so-called "good time" while in prison and consideration whether such inmates should receive retroactive credit.

—A Nov. 1, 1981, deadline for the TDC to give Judge Justice a plan for establishing more minimum security prisons, honor farms, halfway houses and other such institutions.

The appeals court said Justice should not have required such a plan.

"No matter how desirable community corrections may be, their use is a policy matter for the people of the state to decide — acting through their legislative representatives," the 5th Circuit said.

—A moratorium on selecting sites for any new prison or for housing any inmates until TDC proves to the district court that certain conditions are met.

—A report by Aug. 1, 1981, that certain conditions are complied with in construction of the Beto prison unit and the proposed Grimes County prison unit.

—A moratorium on starting construction of any new facilities or cell blocks at existing prisons until the district court is assured that certain conditions are met.

—A requirement that TDC must be reorganized into units and sub-units housing no more than 500 inmates.

—Approval by a court-appointed special master before any departures from a court-approved minimum security staffing plan that was to take effect by Nov. 1, 1982.

—Reassignment every 30 days of inmates assigned to building jobs. The appeals court said this portion of Justice's order probably would be scrapped on appeal since administrators maintain it "would constitute an administrative nightmare" and demoralize inmates.

The 5th Circuit refused to stay all other aspects of Justice's order, but did not specify what they were.

And, in the mandated downgrading of Huntsville Unit Hospital to an infirmary by Nov. 1, 1981, it said Texas was free to file new, more complete stay motions with Justice before pursuing that matter further with the appeals court.

In a preface to its 44-page decision, the appeals court tried to define the responsibilities of the state and federal courts in prison administration.

"It will never be the responsibility of this or any other federal court to decide what a good prison should be or how it ought to be operated. That is for the corrections experts and the policy-making offices of the State," said the opinion.

"The federal courts may interfere only to protect prisoners against cruel and unusual treatment, because that is prohibited by the Eighth and Fourteenth Amendments of the United States Constitution."

Officials Crack Down On Computer Abuse

NEW YORK (AP) — A computer programmer who allegedly set up a race-track betting system in Board of Education computers has been arrested as officials crack down on "little gigs and games" employees have been playing with city computers.

Theodore Weg, a 44-year-old computer systems manager, was scratched from the payroll and arrested on charges he used school computers to store his wagering system and create programs for the benefit of Castellani Stables, a horse farm he owns in Pecksville, Pa.

Weg, who was described as "a good employee and very talented at what he does," also was accused of using the computer to trace the genealogies of his horses back seven generations.

The disclosure of his arrest came Friday as Mayor Edward Koch issued a directive to the heads of city agencies to order their employees to "remove immediately all unofficial data files and programs from city computer systems."

One city official said the concern with the data processing equipment arose because "We've been finding people with a lot of little gigs and games that they've been playing."

Favorite pastimes reportedly include electronic chess matches and contests similar to "space war" games found in arcades.

Another school system employee, whose name was not disclosed, faces disciplinary charges for inventing a space game on the computers.

"It was so complicated that it had four different force shields, and you could adjust the speed of energy ships," the official said.

E. Gordon Haesloop, a deputy commissioner in the city Department of Investigation, said investigators also found Weg had used school board equipment to send letters to other horse owners seeking a refund of stud fees.

Attorney Irwin Herschlag said his client would plead innocent when arraigned Thursday in Criminal Court in Brooklyn. Weg could not be reached for comment.

Consumer Scoreboard

Trying to calculate the best return on your savings dollars is almost as hard as earning the money in the first place, and bills passed by House and Senate committees this week make things even more complicated.

The legislation proposes a new tax break at the expense of an old one. It generally will help consumers in high tax brackets with a substantial sum to deposit for one year. People trying to save a few hundred dollars a month, with no investments other than savings, could lose money.

The moves are designed to help the savings and loan industry regain customers who have been taking money from thrift institutions and putting it into flexible, high-interest, money-market funds.

The separate bills passed by the Senate Finance Committee and the House Ways and Means Committee create a one-year savings certificate with tax-free interest of up to $1,000 for individuals and $2,000 for married couples. Under the Senate bill, the certificates could be offered by all banks, S&Ls and credit unions. The House bill would restrict the certificates to mortgage-lending institutions. The House bill also requires that the certificates be available in denominations of $500 or less; the Senate bill has no limit.

The certificates could be offered for one year only, beginning Oct. 1. The maximum interest would be 70 percent of the interest rate on one-year Treasury Bills — now about 13 percent.

To make up for some of the tax money the government would lose on the new certificates, the House and Senate committees voted not to extend a tax break given to small savers last year. The program lets taxpayers deduct $200 worth of interest and dividends — $400 for a married couple — from 1981 income for tax purposes. The new legislation would authorize the deduction for dividends only and would limit it to $100 for individuals and $200 for married couples.

Suppose you have $1,000. Put it in a passbook savings account, with interest compounded daily, and you'll earn about $55 a year. You have ready access to your money. You may cut your earnings if you make a withdrawal, but your balance can fluctuate and, if you average about $1,000, you won't lose much. Under 1981 rules, you pay no federal income tax on the interest. It's less than the exemption.

If you keep your money in the passbook account next year, you'll pay tax on the $55 under the proposed legislation. If you put your money in one of the new certificates, at 9.1 percent interest based on a 13-percent Treasury Bill rate, you'll receive about $95, tax-free, but you must leave the entire sum on deposit for the full year.

Now suppose you're trying to save $200 a month and you're in the 30 percent tax bracket. If you put $200 in a passbook account at the beginning of each month, you'll earn just under $75 in one year. With the existing tax exemption, you keep all $75. Under the finance committee plan, however, interest on savings is subject to federal income tax unless you buy one of the new certificates. You'll pay tax on the $75 at the rate of 30 percent; you get to keep only about $52.

ALL THIS AND HEAVEN TOO!

Peter said, "We have left our homes and followed You."

"Yes," Jesus replied, "and everyone who has done as you have, leaving home, wife, brothers, parents, or children for the sake of the Kingdom of God, will be repaid many times over now, as well as receiving eternal life in the world to come."

Gathering the Twelve around Him He told them, "As you know, we are going to Jerusalem. And when we get there, all the predictions of the ancient prophets concerning Me will come true. I will be handed over to the Gentiles to be mocked and treated shamefully and spat upon, and lashed and killed. And the third day I will rise again."

But they didn't understand a thing He said. He seemed to be talking in riddles.

As they approached Jericho, a blind man was sitting beside the road, begging from travelers. When he heard the noise of a crowd going past, he asked what was happening.

He was told that Jesus of Nazareth was going by, so he began shouting, "Jesus, Son of David, have mercy on me!"

When Jesus arrived at the spot, He stopped. "Bring the blind man over here," He said. Then Jesus asked the man, "What do you want?" "Lord, he pleaded, "I want to see!"

And Jesus said, "All right, begin seeing! Your faith has healed you!"

And instantly the man could see, and followed Jesus, praising God. And all who saw it happen praised God too.

Worst Food Brings 'Em Back For More

HINES, Ore. (AP) — Betty and Bernie Hannaford cheerfully offer Roloids to customers who eat at their Worst Food in Oregon restaurant in this eastern Oregon wayside.

"It's the worst food you ever ate," says the 53-year-old Mrs. Hannaford. "Service is worse," adds her husband, 56.

That's the name of the place — "The Worst Food in Oregon." The signs bring abashed motorists in for a cheap meal — and back for more.

"They can't pass the place up," proclaims Hannaford, who does the cooking while his wife waits on the five small tables and eight counter spots.

The menuurget eaters to "Come in and sit with the flies," although none of the critters was flitting about the spotless premises.

The Hannafords have run the place for 11 years. They live in a mobile home a soggy meatball's throw from the one-story building.

It can't be said the two haven't had a chance to develop their culinary skills. Hannaford was a grocer, and the couple ran diners in Florida and Wagonite, Ore.

Previous owners, says Hannaford, hadn't had much success with the restaurant. When the Hannafords bought it, business was a little slow for the first few days, until the signs went up. "I don't know how I came up with it," he says. "I was thinking (of calling it) the best, like a lot of restaurants do. I said the hell with that, I'll go with the opposite."

Actually, the food isn't the worst. The portions are generous and the prices are low, circa 1970. The Hannafords sell ham'n'eggs for $1.60 and a full rib dinner for about $3.50.

And the word has gotten out.

Hannaford says a well-heeled couple from Salem, 250 miles to the west, heard of the place in Tokyo, several thousand miles further west.

Ad Prompts Cover-Ups

By PHIL CANNADAY
Associated Press Writer
She hasn't exactly been banned in Boston, but she's been covered up in Kansas City, cropped in Cleveland and censored in Chicago. She's been dressed up, written over and dropped altogether. In some places, she's simply been ignored.

She is Nancy Stafford, a model whose backside and legs have become the center of attention in ads for the latest James Bond movie, "For Your Eyes Only," which opened in some cities Friday. She is wearing only a skimpy, knit bikini bottom and high-heeled shoes.

The advertisement began running in newspapers last Sunday. By midweek, Nancy and the ad had undergone changes around the country.

The Nashville Banner and The Tennessean put more substantial bikinis on the young woman. The Omaha World-Herald penciled black panties over her entire rear end. She wears short-shorts in the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette and The Pittsburgh Press.

The Waterbury Republican in Connecticut doesn't show her at all, just a figure of Roger Moore, the actor who plays Bond, crouching with a gun in his hand.

A number of papers, such as The Boston Globe, Boston Herald American, Dallas Times Herald, Journal-Courier of New Haven (Conn.), The Salt Lake Tribune and The Deseret News, show only her legs.

Yet other papers — The New York Times, The Star-Ledger of Newark (N.J.), The Indianapolis Star and The Indianapolis News, The Washington Star, The Washington Post, Lansing State Journal (Mich.), Los Angeles Herald Examiner and San Francisco's Chronicle and Examiner — ran the ad just as they got it from United Artists.

"The peculiar thing with this situation rests that as a poster, it (the ad) has been hanging in theaters since last December," said Eddie Kalish, vice president of domestic distribution for United Artists.

"There was not one note of negative reaction the whole time the posters were up ... and they were viewed by millions of people," Kalish said Friday from his New York office.

The Bulletin in Philadelphia first carried the ad unaltered, later airbrushed on a pair of shorts and finally cropped everything but Nancy's legs out of the picture.

"The ad was sent straight to our production department, bypassing the ad department," said Walter Holt, advertising manager of The Bulletin. "The first time I saw the ad was Sunday, after my wife saw it and said 'Wow!'"

Kalish said all movie ads first are cleared with the Motion Picture Association of America, and that United Artists has been advertising Bond films for a long time without any problems.

He points an accusing finger at newspapers' retail pages. "Are you going to tell me there are no bikini ads?" Kalish also noted some papers run advertisements for X-rated films without changing the ad copy.

"The point is, the movie business is show biz; it's entertainment," Kalish said. "It is the nature of advertising that it attracts attention. The ad was designed, along with the concept of the James Bond film, to do the job of attracting people to the movie."

Ralph Rowe, ad manager for the Kansas City Star, which cut off the picture just below the model's buttocks, said his paper "reserves the right to change any ads which we believe will make our readers uncomfortable."

Some newspapers make changes in ads before they are put in print.

"Every so often we touch up a movie ad," said Richard Zeak, advertising director of the Waterbury Republican and Waterbury American in Connecticut.

The Bond ad was the subject of a complaint to The Patriot Ledger of Quincy, Mass., by a citizens' group called Morality In Media In Massachusetts.

"I feel this (the ad) is reflective of the vulgarization and decivilization of society," said Barbara Anderson of Melrose, Mass., spokeswoman for the group.

"Some newspapers have received complaints?" asked Bob Smith, the manager of advertising acceptability at The New York Times.

"I can't say I've received one complaint," said Bill Zvoncheck, a member of the committee of the copy acceptance department for the New York Daily News.

Holt said when The Bulletin decided to discontinue running the original ad, some theater advertising people in the city threatened to pull back the Bond ad altogether.

However, Holt said he told them: "Sorry, that's it. No ifs, ands or ... buts."

Fountain of Youth: Staying Younger

BOSTON (AP) — Sooner or later, everybody dies. But the way you eat and sleep, work and play and live your life all share a role in setting the time of that inevitable end.

Some think the ideal average lifetime is fixed, possibly at around 85 years. Yet in the United States, the average age of death is now 73.

Of course, many diseases and tragedies are unavoidable no matter how cautiously a person tiptoes through life. But by sensible living, doctors say, you can improve the odds of reaching your potential full life span.

"I would say that in the United States, it is the lifestyle that prevents people from achieving a much better old age," says Dr. William P. Castelli, director of the Framingham Heart Study. "I think it is possible for any individual to improve the quality and the length of his life."

The rules of longevity are by no means clear. But one study conducted at the University of California in Los Angeles provides some hints. Doctors surveyed 6,928 people in Alameda County and found that the healthiest followed seven habits:

- Never smoke cigarettes.
- Get regular physical activity.
- Use alcohol moderately or never.
- Sleep seven or eight hours each night.

—Maintain proper weight.
—Eat breakfast.
—Avoid eating between meals.

Ten years after the first survey, they checked again to see what had happened to these people. The death rate was far lower among those who followed the rules. They calculated that the life expectancy of 45-year-old men who observed all seven health practices was 11 years longer than those who heeded three or fewer.

The researchers, led by Dr. Lester Breslow, could not say for sure that all these living habits stretch life, but they felt their surveys support the idea that "following poor health habits leads to earlier death and following good health habits leads to longer life."

Not all doctors endorse all seven of these rules. Some add others of their own.

When you can change the temperature to very comfortable from unbearable in a tin sided building with sheetrock in the kind of heat we have had you have really done something. # Miss Tina White, Langehennig Pledge Vows Saturday Evening

Two seven-branch chandelabra entwined with greenery flanked the communion table of First United Methodist Church Saturday evening when Miss Terri Tina White and Terry Don Langehennig exchange vows and rings uniting them in marriage.

Two hurricane style aisle lamps decorated with greenery sat at each of the mother's pews. The altar arrangement was of pink gladiolus, burgundy dubonet, pink carnations and baby's breath.

Dr. Jordan Grooms, retired Methodist minister from Amarillo and a former Hereford resident, officiated at the nuptial ceremony.

Two deep ruffles of schiffli lace edged the yoke and formed cape sleeves. The A-line skirt was adorned with schiffli lace which flowed into a chapel length train.

She wore a white upturned derby held with a white rose featuring venise lace at the brim and waltz length illusion. She carried a bouquet of silk flowers consisting of burgundy and pink carnations and roses, white and mauve roses and carnations with white satin, burgundy, pink and velvet ribbon streamers.

For jewelry, the bride wore a pink antique amethyst ring set in a fold filigree tyfany mounting belonging to her grandmother. She also wore a pair of sapphire earrings given to her by the groom. She completed her attire with a blue lace garter with pale blue pouch attached containing two pennies with the brides and groom's birthdates.

Attending the bride was Miss Patricia Gauthreaux, maid of honor; Mrs. Donald Brown of Dumas, matron of honor; and Mrs. Donald Klaerner of Fredericksburg.

They wore formal length dresses of pink satin with pink silk overlays. The dresses featured spaghetti straps and pink silk wrap-around capes. Pink picture hats with silk pink and burgundy roses attached to pink satin ribbon streamers in the back completed their attire. They each carried nosegays of pink, white, burgundy silk spring flowers with a lighted votive candle in the middle. The nosegays were accented with pink, burgundy and white lace streamers.

Attending the groom was the best man Donald Klaerner of Fredericksburg, and groomsmen Paul Franzetti of Dallas of Dallas and Norman Wright Jr. of Amarillo.

Scoring guests to their seats were Dee White, the bride's brother; Travis Langehennig, the groom's brother of Austin; and Ricky Burgess, brother-in-law of the groom from Kerrville.

Marysa Burgess, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ricky Burgess, was flower girl. She was escorted by the ring bearer and her brother Brent Burgess. Candle lighter was Cary Burgess.

Kenny Shore of Canyon sang "The Lord's Prayer," accompanied by Mrs. Tony Calkins on the organ. Ray Jenkins of Hereford accompanied Mrs. Calkins on the organ. Ray Jenkins of Hereford accompanied Mrs. Calkins on the processional by playing the trumpet on "Trumpet Voluntary," by Purcell and, again on the recessional, playing "Trumpet Tune," by Purcell. He also played a violin solo accompanied by Mrs. Calkins, selection being "Ave Maria," by Gounod.

A dinner reception followed the ceremony in the church fellowship hall. Guests were registered by Mrs. Denny Eitzler of Austin.

The bride's table, covered with white lace overlaying white satin, were decorated with green potted plants. The wedding cake was a four-tier cake iced in pale pink. The bottom two tiers were stacked and decorated with large pink roses and dainty sprays of rosebuds. Traditional bûchers were used. Six flowering vine pillars beneath a hexagonal tier gave the effect of a temple.

small cherub was sitting in the temple adorned with roses, rosebuds and tiny drop flowers. A pink fan flanked with net, lace and a spray of rosebuds complimented the top tier.

The groom's cake was made of chocolate and iced in chocolate butter cream. The cake was round and flanked in the center was the bride and groom's monogram. Large chocolate swirls and shells complimented the cake.

Mrs. Ricky Burgess, the groom's sister, served the bride's cake. Miss Tanya Gauthreaux and Mrs. Travis Langehennig served the groom's cake.

After the dinner reception a dance was held at the Knights of Columbus Hall with Frank Garrett of Amarillo providing the music.

Ann Landers Unfair Punishment

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My parents are getting divorced. Dad refuses to give Mom money to send my sister and me to boarding school because he is mad.

Why is he mad? Two reasons. First: He says Mom should not have agreed to the divorce when he asked for it. Second: He is mad because when Mom had the invitations to my Bar Mitzvah printed, she left his name off. They were separated at the time, but she asked him if he wanted to split the cost and he said yes. He thinks this entitled him to be on the invitation.

Do you think it is fair for Dad to punish us kids by withholding money for our education? We need to know if we should tell him how we feel or just let it slide.—In The Middle like to clarify the matter of the Bar Mitzvah invitations because it figures in your father's anger.

Even though your parents were separated at the time, your father's name should have been included. It is unfortunate, however, that he is using you and your sister to get even with your mother. Letting the matter slide will only drive your resentment underground. Tell him how you feel. And soon.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My husband has one habit that is making me old before my time.

Fred gets up in the middle of the night and lights himself a cigarette. He does this in his sleep. I have found cigarette holes in the bedsheets, the blankets and the carpet. Last week there was a cigarette hole in his pajamas. This morning, when I got up, I discovered he was asleep with a cigarette butt between his fingers.

I have tried hiding the cigarettes, but this only leads to a fight. So, I wonder every night if he is going to burn the house down and me and the kids along with it.

Please, Ann, give me some help with this.—If I Should Die Before I Wake

DEAR IF: If your husband MUST smoke in the middle of the night, the least he can do is relieve you of the worry. The solution is as follows: NO CIGARETTES IN BED. The pack must be left in the bathroom, so he will have to get up and go in there to smoke. If he cares about you and the children, he will agree to this—starting tonight.

She carried silk flowers of apricot, blue, and yellow with white ribbon streamers decorated with tiny blue flowers.

Her attendants wore blue, apricot and yellow dresses of cuprammonium rayon featuring square necklines, short puff sleeves, and long full skirts tied at the waist with ribbon of a matching color. They each carried matching silk flower bouquets.

A reception followed the ceremony in the church. Seated at the registry was Melanie Culp.

The bride's table was decorated with a light blue table cloth covered with netting edged in lace. Large white bows were tied at each corner of the table. The three-tiered wedding cake, each tier being separated by pillars, was decorated with blue daisies and apricot roses. The bottom tier held by six pillars featured a fountain beneath and six heart-shaped smaller cakes.

Tonya Landers and Kim Foster served the wedding cake. Punch and coffee were served by Kari Sanders.

For a wedding trip to Amarillo, the bride chose to wear a light blue sundress with matching jacket. The sundress was trimmed in white.

The couple will make their home in Hereford after June 29.

The bride and groom are both 1981 graduates of Hereford High School. He is

Couple United in Marriage in Candlelight Ceremony

St. Anthony's Catholic Church was aglow with candlelight Saturday afternoon as Kelly Lynn Scoggins and Alan Kent Almanza were united in marriage. The couple knelt between brass spiral candelabras entwined with ivy and white daisies. A sunburst of yellow gladiolas, white daisies, yellow and white carnations and mums rested upon the altar. The ceremony was officiated by the Rev. Paul Haefner, pastor.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Scoggins on Ave. H and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. G. Almanza of Summerfield.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore as her something old, her maternal grandmother's antique rose gold brooch with black enameled vines caressing three tiny white pearls, on the victorian collar of her white quiana wedding gown. The sheer yoke of her gown was covered with venise lace enhanced with small seed pearls. Her empire waistline flaired to create a cathedral length train with venise lace edging the hemline. The bride's something new was her cascading silk bouquet of yellow roses and white daisies dotted with satin rose buds.

Following a family tradition of the groom, she carried the groom's maternal great-grandmother's wedding ring in her bouquet.

Her three-tiered chapel length veil of bridal illusion was attached to a Juliet cap of venise lace and seed pearls. For something borrowed, the bride wore a pair of pearl earrings belonging to Mrs. Ray L. Johnson of Summerfield. Something blue was the traditional blue satin garter.

Serving the table as maid of honor was Miss Sherry Strain. Bridesmaids were Willa Lawson, Beth Anderson, and Susie Gilliland.

The bride's attendants were dressed in yellow quiana floor length dresses with yellow silk chiffon capes edged in white lace. They wore white and yellow daisies in their hair and carried small nosegay of yellow roses and white daisies.

The groom, wearing white tuxedo with tails, white ruffled shirt and white bow tie, was attended by Bruce Edwards of Amarillo as best man. Groomsman were Kent Scott of Moorland, Okla., Eddie Lindeman, and Ruben Vargas of Hereford. Serving as ushers were Mike Hale of Amarillo and Trent McCushtian of Hereford.

Kent Mayo, nephew of the bride, carried the rings on a white satin pillow. The groom's attendants wore yellow tuxedos with white ruffled shirts.

Registering guests was Patty Scott of Moorland, Okla.

Mrs. Morris Hacker rendered traditional wedding selections on the organ. "Ave Maria" was played as the couple lit the unity candle.

Following the ceremony a reception was held in the Antonian Room of the church. Yellow ribbon accented the net overskirt of the white satin cloth covering the bride's table. Silver candlesticks holding yellow tapers complimented the four-tier wedding cake which was set above a small yellow flowing fountain surrounded by the bridesmaid's bouquets. The cake was decorated with small yellow roses and cupids danced between each tier. The traditional bride and groom decoration was set beneath the canopy formed by the top tier. The wedding cake was served by Miss Jana Grimsley and Miss Syndy Moore served punch.

The groom's cake, formed into a Bible with the couple's scripture written on its pages, rested on a brown table cloth edged in ecru lace. A brass coffee service and brass appointments also adorned the table. Serving the cakes was Joycelyn Aven and serving coffee was Mrs. Kent Scott.

For a honeymoon trip to various points of interests in New Mexico, the bride chose to wear a jade oriental street length dress with white accessories. Upon returning the couple will reside in Amarillo.

Out-of-town guests attending the wedding arrived from Odessa, Kress, Lockney, Friona Dallas, Amarillo, Pampa, and McLean, Texas; Orlando, Fla.; Roswell, N.M.; and Marana, Ariz.

The groom's parents hosted the rehearsal dinner Friday evening in El Monterey Restaurant.

Beef Cooked On Grill Excellant For Summer

The marvelous aroma and flavor of beef cooked on the grill is truly one of the joys of summer. Fortunately for the cost-conscious cook, beef on the grill not only adds appetite appeal to meals, it also offers a whole new dimension to cooking on a budget.

There are many economical beef cuts that are delicious cooked over the coals. However, since a number of the more "thrifty" beef cuts are naturally less tender, barbecuing beef on a budget does call for careful cut selection and the use of some special preparation techniques, advises the National Live Stock and Meat Board.

Budget-Conscious Steaks
The secret to successfully cooking less costly steaks, such as those cut from the chuck and top round, is to marinate them before broiling in a mixture containing an acid food such as lemon juice or vinegar. The marinade not only tenderizes, it also provides many possibilities for flavor variety.

An old law once on the books in Indianapolis, Ind., makes it a crime to argue on Sunday.

Miss Holly Haynes, Eades Marry in Chelsea, Okla.

Miss Holly Rose Haynes and Wesley Martin Eades were married recently in Chelsea, Okla., First Baptist Church.

The bride is the daughter of Rev. and Mrs. Henry P. Haynes III, of Chelsea, and Eades is the son of Mr. and Mrs. R.W. Eades, Hereford.

Officiating at the ceremony was the bride's father, the Rev. Haynes, and her brother, the Rev. Michael P. Haynes, Kansas City, Mo.

For her wedding, the bride wore a gown of white fashioned with a fitted bodice which had brief full sleeves and high neckline of sheer lace. Lace was further used on the bottom of the skirt which extended into a chapel train. Her long veil of illusion edged in lace was held in place by a coronet of pearls. The bride carried a colonial bouquet of roses.

The bride was attended by her sister, Rebecca Messar as matron of honor; Joni Daniel of Luling, La., Betsy Blizzard of Grove, Guyia Shook of Kansas City, and Elaine Dye of Chelsea. They were gowned alike in frocks of deep summer colors, red, violet, green, yellow and purple with white.

Best man was the groom's brother, Brian Eades. Groomsman were Roger Eades of Dallas, brother of the bridegroom; Randy Messar of Oak Grove, Mo., Mark Bekkadahl of Kansas City, Rick Ross of Ripley and Bob Lipscomb, El Paso.

Presenting nuptial music were Bill Smiley of Edmond, pianist; Rick Rose and Mark Bekkadahl. The bridegroom sang his own composition.

The ceremony was followed by a reception in the church Fellowship Hall. At the refreshment table were Mrs. Michael Haynes of Kansas City, sister-in-law of the bride; Mrs. Richard McClain of Edmond, the bride's aunt; Mrs. Gregory Osten and Miss Sheri Shriver, Chelsea, Okla.; Mrs. Bob Dean, Stillwater, was at the registry.

At the conclusion of a trip to Dallas, the couple are establishing their home in Kansas City.

Beneath the Glamour

By Denise Smith

Have you ever wondered what a bride and groom went through to reach that forever dreamed about state of Holy matrimony? Well, being the one behind the scene actually in charge of getting the nervous couple married in front of the whole town, I do!

Not only do I have to work with overly-anxious mothers, but the bride also. After going through the sometimes shocking and never-ending job of helping a bride-to-be and mother-to-be gather information, descriptions, defining coutours, colors and special features, then getting the bride-elect and her prospective mate actually married...sometimes never to see or hear from them again, I can't help but sit at my desk and ponder over if the wedding went the way I had planned.

Often I wouldn't blame the couple for changing the wedding plans I have written. I mean when you have the already nervous groom getting married in a silver tuxedo and white pleated skirt it's a wonder he doesn't back out, if just out of embarrassment.

Then there's always the problem of having the couple married and on their merry way to an exciting honeymoon in the Caribbean, only to find out the day after the wedding was printed, that the couple had a minor disagreement and canceled. If that wouldn't break your heart. And then, too, there are those that you spend many hours on the telephone with the bride trying to come to some sort of agreement; reaching one, and a day later having the mother of the bride call you back with a completely different wedding. It's a wonder I don't have a nervous breakdown with each wedding I write. Come on moms, lets face it, it is your daughter's wedding!

Okay, so we get the couple publicly married, then what? Well, then there's the inside story. The one that only the bride, herself and the groom know.

She stands at the altar beautifully dressed looking as serene as possible. But underneath that full skirt her knees shake uncontrollably and she's thinking "Oh my God, turn around and get out girl. No I had better not, Dad is standing right there and he'd kill me"....she glances back, sweetly smiling at the man who, from the very beginning, was against the entire wedding.

But let's give the bride some credit. Here she is fixing to pledge her entire life to a man that just the night before she swore she'd never speak to again. That takes alot of courage folks.

Now comes the time when lights are dimmed, the couple turn to face one another, and those forsaken words of commitment are spoken. Have you ever noticed that the first word "I" comes out so strong only to be followed by a mumbled "do." You can't help but wonder if the couple are afraid of someone hearing them say "Do." I'm sure it's hard to pledge your life to one person, but to the entire town.

Then the bride begins to cry, is it that she just realized she has chosen the wrong man or is it just the fact that the whole incredible thing is over with until she remarries.

With everyone's attention having been directed toward the bride and groom, the father is often left out of the picture. But don't fret, father will soon be getting all the attention he needs from the nearest bank.

How to Include 'After-The-Honeymoon' Realities in Approaching Marriage Plans

COLLEGE STATION - Are you planning a Cinderella marriage or a realistic one?

Many Texas couples tend to believe that the Cinderella myth of living happily ever after will "just happen" rather than understanding that they must resolve major conflicts and issues before marriage, says a family life education specialist.

Because of this unrealistic syndrome, young (and older) couples find it difficult to discuss - and cope with - real and often painful issues that will confront them during marriage, says Dorothy Taylor.

Mature, wise couples, on the other hand, plan beyond the wedding day, she says.

Ms. Taylor is on the home economics staff of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

There are 12 primary areas of conflict that couples need to discuss and, hopefully, resolve before marriage, the specialist advises.

"These 12 issue are the ones families fight about: other family members, money, religion, death, love, leisure, politics, friendships, sex, work, aging and personal taste on such things as appearance, living standards and habits.

"These values rank differently in importance to every person in a family, and everyone can justify his or her own list." Ms. Taylor says.

Approaching each other about these sensitive topics is difficult.

One way is to answer several questions together - honestly, openly.

REMEMBER: There is no "right" or "wrong" answer to any of these questions. The important thing is that you work out answers that you can both live with - by agreeing or by compromising in a way that is at least comfortable and fair in both your minds.

Don't hide your special personal goals and dreams for your life together - or misgivings, resentments and dreads, either - no matter how small or large. State them. Tell your partner why you think they're important so he or she will understand your goals and special dreams, along with your fears and special pains.

Build these things into your agreements and compromises as much as possible. Be honest about mixed or unsure feelings that you can't deal with yet.

Acknowledge the fact that feelings about issues and family members can change - as you grow in years, experience and wisdom. Encourage each other to always state feelings through the months and years of marriage that follow the wedding, so you can constantly adapt your marriage to fit the needs of both partners.

Here are the questions:

1) How do you feel about my family?

How much do you think they should be involved with us?

Where will we spend holidays?

Have you discussed this with your parents? Do you feel you need to?

2) Who will decide how money is spent in our home?

3) What will we do about church - now and, if there are children, later?

4) When someone in the family or one of us dies, what should we expect of ourselves?

If there is an inheritance, how would you feel about my getting money or property?

What happens when one of our parents is widowed?

How important is "being young" to you?

5) How important is love to our marriage?

How do you feel about extra-marital affairs for personal or business reasons?

6) How do you feel about work - hours to be put in to get a job done for either of us, dual-career family, shared household tasks and the relationship between home life and work?

7) How strongly do you feel about children?

How will they affect our relationship?

How will they affect our careers and life goals?

How will we affect their lives?

8) There are certain things that are really important to me - new or expensive car, home in a particular part of town, clothes, savings, eating out or attractive appearance. How do you feel about these?

9) How do you feel about my friends?

Will you expect me to accept and/or associate with - or drop any particular friends of yours or mine?

10) How do you resolve quarrels?

How did your parents resolve disagreements?

How do you feel about fighting or striking another person - adult or child?

All of the categories listed above are difficult to answer. Looking back over the questions, remember that they do require deep, serious thought, Ms. Taylor reminds.

"Avoiding a response may be an indication of the pain or seriousness of the issue to you or your partner personally," she stresses.

"Talking about these issues before they become problems is one way to ensure newlyweds they can live happily ever after if they work at their marriage," she says.

'My Vacation-My Home'

Every homemaker's dream - a few days alone in your own home! I got mine! Hubby took all three children to Arkansas and stayed several days. Guess David had a vacation, also! He cut and baled a couple thousand bales of hay alone. But he said he did enjoy it - as to, it being a change of routine.

And boy did I have a change of routine. And was it ever great! First thing I did was unplug radio and television. I loved the quiet and it really didn't bother me that I didn't even watch the news. Had no way of knowing how hot it got and didn't even care.

Didn't bother to fire up even one burner on the cook stove. Got serious about the diet and ate leftovers from the refrigerator. My main meal of the day was the one eaten out at noon while at work. Have to admit - the refrigerator was bare by the time family came back and I was hungry. But, oh it was nice to have no dishes to wash.

It was so nice to be able to get up and go to work and not have to cook breakfast, hear a quarrel or even a noise, or worry about scheduling the family for the day. I even had ample time to dress.

The real reason I chose to stay home this time was to clean house. My house is so clean. I love to admire the fruits of my labor. It's easier to clean the children's rooms when they're away. Once we had a great controversy over a rock I was about to discard. It looked like any old rock tome. However Allison cried lovingly, "But, it's my favorite rock!" The rock stayed.

I am a collector of things. I suppose my children inherit the tendency. However, they have it worse than I do. I'm not into collecting gum and candy wrappers, church bulletins, and the cellophane wrappings of each toy. It took ten grocery sacks to haul those discards to the dumpster.

I had the neighborhood in a stir. I monopolized the dumpster space with my housecleaning. Think everyone wonders how I managed to have found space for it in my house.

Upon return of the children (only two returned), they were in total shock. Their first question - "How can I find anything?" The next hour or so was spent explaining how I had organized their tidbits. They pointed to the bed and asked, "What is it?" Being hidden under debris, they had not seen it in six months.

It seems all enjoyed our change of pace. But it was so nice to have my family back again. Life would be terribly boring without them. Without them, I wouldn't have anything for a news column!

Educational programs conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service serve people of all ages regardless of socio-economic levels, race, color, sex, religion, or national origin.

Putting You in the Picture
 Planning A Family Nostalgia

BY JO ELLEN JORDE
 As we get ready to celebrate the good old fourth of July, a wave of nostalgia sweeps over us. We think of the good old days. Porch swings, home-made ice cream, picnics and times when the whole family were together playing catch outside or inside playing old-maid.
 Why not have our own nostalgia time; start with an old-fashioned fourth. Include a family council and talk about a family nostalgia night at least once a week. Some simple suggestions that will preserve our most precious heritage for the young follow:
 1. No baseball to watch, so do this: The sports pages of the newspapers have stories to interest everyone. Who was the star of yesterday's game? Who will pitch tomorrow? Ask questions like these and find the answers together.
 2. Books can be friends to the whole family: The excitement of meeting an old friend or making a new one can be shared. Do you remember Cinderella? Snow White? The Wizard of Oz? Find your favorites and read your favorite parts. Ask your child to share his or her favorite story with you.
 3. On a hot summer afternoon everyone needs time out: A quiet time in the middle of an active busy day, is an ideal time for a book or magazine with many pictures. Look for pictures of everyday objects or animals, or for people doing everyday activities. Talk about them.
 4. Be a nature person: Find a "story" tree in the backyard or the nearest park for those moments too hot for active play. Books about bugs and birds and leaves will make it a great discovery time.
 Most of all just spend some one-to-one time with your child.

At Wits End

BY ERMA BOMBECK

There is nothing more pitiful on God's green earth than to watch a woman whose family has rented a cabin for the summer try to "relax" and get close to nature.

A woman may leave her own home, but she takes her pride and her guilt with her. I have seen these surrogate housekeepers move fireplaces to clean behind them, wax the plumbing under the sink, launder dust balls and replace them under the bed where she found them.

I am one of them.

We went that route about five years ago. The couple was going to Europe and offered to rent us their home by the beach for six weeks. My family was ecstatic. They dumped their luggage in the middle of the floor, got into their bathing suits and my husband said, "Well, what shall we do first?"

"I think I'll scour the fresh air vent over the stove. If we don't fry anything, I won't have to do it again until we leave."

"We're here to relax," he said, "not clean house. Surely she expects us to live in the house."

"Like what?" I said, "A religious commune that worships white rings on the table? Get that wet towel out of the living room. And help me with these draperies. The sun is bleaching that sofa white."

During the weeks that followed, while the family turned brown and healthy, I took off the faucets and cleaned them with a toothbrush, alphabetized and cross-referenced the mail, sucked sand out of the sliding door track with the sweeper attachment, bleached dish cloths and laundered the plastic bags each day and hung them out to dry.

One day when they came in for lunch, I was in tears.

"What's the matter?" asked my husband.

"It's the fig tree in the bedroom. It's dying."

"It's not your fault," he said, putting his arm around me.

"There'll be questions. An investigation. The family should know. They'll want to be here."

He nodded to the children who silently began to pack.

That was five years ago. Once I was home, things returned to normal. There were poker chips in the planters, the mop stuck to the floor and someone wrote in the grease behind the stove, "FOR A GOOD TIME CALL MARILYN 555-5544."

Someone mentioned renting a cabin again this summer and relaxing. I don't think I'm well enough.

BARBS

Phil Pastoret

When you were 20, you viewed financial future through rose-colored glasses. After 40, you find that it's in the red.

People who consider the spirit of '76 to be vintage booze undoubtedly flunked American history.

Faith is what enables you to believe that you look as attractive in shorts as your 20-year-old neighbor does.

One way to look at it: If you're up the creek without a paddle, you at least still have the canoe.

Court Hands Second Defeat to Womens' Rights Advocates

By KEVIN M. COSTELLOE
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — A day after ruling that women can be excluded from the military draft, the Supreme Court decided Friday that divorced women have no right to share their ex-husbands' military retirement pay.

"It's been a tragic week for women," said Phyllis Segal, legal director of the National Organization for Women's defense and education fund.

By a 6-3 vote, the court ruled that allowing state courts to award ex-wives part of their husbands' military retirement pay would frustrate the program set out by Congress.

Under the congressional plan, the retired member of the Armed Forces has the exclusive right to the money, the court ruled.

In other decisions Friday, the Supreme Court:

- Ruled that cities and towns cannot be subjected to potentially costly "punitive" damages in cases of alleged civil rights violations. The decision limits recovery by an individual to compensation for the actual harm done.
- Decided that federal employees who sue for alleged illegal age discrimination have no right to a jury trial.
- Upheld a $5,000 federal limit on annual contributions by unincorporated associations and individuals to any one political action committee.

In both the retirement pay and draft cases, the court made clear that it would defer to the congressional power over the Armed Forces even when equal rights claims are involved.

"We have very recently re-emphasized that in no area has the court accorded Congress greater deference than in the conduct and control of military affairs," Justice Harry A. Blackmun wrote, referring specifically to Thursday's draft case.

Joining Blackmun were Chief Justice Warren E. Burger and Justices Byron R. White, Thurgood Marshall, Lewis F. Powell and John Paul Stevens.

The ruling overturned a California appeals court decision allowing Patricia A. McCarty a little less than one-half of her ex-husband's military retirement pay under that state's community property laws. That was in addition to the alimony she received.

Mrs. McCarty was divorced in 1976 from her husband, Army cardiologist Dr. Richard J. McCarty, after 19 years of marriage. He left the Army in 1978, when he began receiving $1,507 in retirement benefits each month.

Dr. McCarty, who was ordered to pay his ex-wife $500 a month in alimony at the time of the divorce, resisted her attempts to make a further claim to the military retirement pay.

Female Golfer Keeps Up With The Best

By DENISE SMITH
Staff Writer

Coming from a well-known family of male golfers, it isn't a wonder that Karen Marsh's field of sports would be golf.

Mrs. Marsh, 24, began the growing women's sport while a senior in high school in 1976. Coached by her father, Cuby Kitchens, a golfer himself, the young woman spent every day after school and during the summer learning and improving on her golfing skills.

And she has an older and younger brother, both active golfers, available to give any special advice or tips needed in becoming a "good golfer."

According to the female golfer it took two years to really learn the art in its completeness, and Mrs. Marsh feels she is still learning.

A competitive sport among both men and women, Mrs. Marsh hangs in there with the best. Often playing in tournaments with her father, the younger golfer is shooting in the 80s with a handicap of 16, which as stated by Mrs. Marsh, "is good for me."

Never considering going pro in the field, Mrs. Marsh after recently adding a new member to her family, still keeps active with her golfing, not only playing in local tournaments but several out-of-town tournaments.

The young mother now has a 10-month old son, Cory who, like her golf game, is a new learning experience each day.

Having recently played in the well-known West Texas Womens Golf tourney held in Brownwood, Mrs. Marsh was placed in third flight. Many women who have played in this tourney have gone pro, she said.

In addition to golfing and raising a family, the young mother has recently begun playing tennis. Her other hobbies include water and snow skiing and macrame. Mrs. Marsh is also a member of the Hereford Women's Golf Association.

This weekend, the energetic woman will be playing in a two-day low-ball tourney in Dimmitt with her partner Susie Mannschreck. She is also scheduled to play in tournaments at Farwell and Childress in July.

Mrs. Marsh is the wife of Jim Marsh, who farms west of Hereford.

KAREN MARSH AND SON CORY ...only 10 months old, Cory is destined to become a golfer like his mother.

Some 50,000 newspapers of various sorts are published in Britain.

Wheat Emerging Again as Cattle Feed

By JULIE SMILEY
Staff Writer

For the first time since the early 70s, cattle feedyards are buying wheat from producers for cattle feed.

Usually, wheat is too expensive and not economically profitable used as a cattle feed. But, with the price of wheat (on June 22) at $3.62 per bushel at a local elevator, a cattle feeder can offer a producer 20 cents above the current daily market price. Wheat, at this price, can be an economical feed for fattening cattle.

Is the wheat price, which, according to many producers, is below the cost of production, an end result of a cheap food policy, the grain embargo, inflation and higher costs of production or poor management on the producers' part?

According to statistics put out by the Texas Wheat Producers Association (TWPA) on U.S. wheat supply and distribution, domestic consumption of wheat has stayed about the same for the past 10 years.

Leo Witkowski, a Hereford farmer and member of the TWPA board, said the only hope for U.S. wheat producers, since domestic use remains stable, is an export market at a price for a reasonable profit.

He said the current financial situation of wheat producers is not due to poor management. "A lot of farmers may not be here next year," said Witkowski. "Increased costs in interest, natural gas, machinery, labor, and farmers getting less for wheat is creating problems for producers."

According to some local producers, the top price for wheat in 1980 was about $4.24 per bushel, and many sold wheat for $4 to $4.10 per bushel. Interest rates last June were between 16 and 17 percent. "And we thought that we high," remarked one farmer.

Another facet of the lower-price situation is the tillage this year of one million more wheat acres outside traditional wheat growing areas in Texas.

Witkowski said that in 1971 Texans produced about 31 million bushels of wheat on one-third less acres than today. In 1981, forecasts show a harvest of about 178 million bushels in Texas. The higher yield comes from the usual acres harvested in the wheat belt, plus one million more cultivated acres near Dallas and in East Texas.

These producers, outside traditional growing areas, are raising soft red winter wheat, which is not the quality baking wheat grown in the Panhandle, said Witkowski.

The expansion is due to new higher yielding varieties of soft red winter wheat, good weather conditions and its role as a major second crop with corn, soybeans or sometimes rice.

The U.S. Wheat Associates (USWA) newsletter of June 19 said, "Recent production expansion of U.S. soft red winter is now placing severe downward pressure on wheat market prices."

In addition to depressing prices, soft red winter wheat producers are going to market first with their wheat and they will end up getting the best price," he said. The direct delivery of soft red winter wheat from harvest to market is maintaining the supplies at the Gulf.

The extra harvest of soft red winter wheat has also created spot shortages of harvest equipment in the traditional hard red winter wheat regions. Once harvested, the newsletter said soft red winter could dislocate fall harvested corn and soybean crops in the Midwest because of the limited storage availability.

In addition, the soft red winter wheat could injure foreign markets if mixed with hard red winter wheat because of its (SRW) poorer baking qualities, according to Witkowski.

Another factor affecting lower wheat prices is the larger-than-usual carryover of total wheat supply resulting from embargoes and large production.

As harvest continues northward in the United States, Witkowski said there will be a decrease in short-term prices unless a sale to China, Russia, India or the tentative sale with Mexico develops.

The U.S. must be competitive in its wheat pricing on the world market, he said, but producers must be able to make a reasonable profit on their produce, without a handout from the government.

For example, Canadian grain producers will receive $81 million as compensation from the Canadian government for economic losses resulting from Canada's participation in last year's grain sales suspension to the Soviet Union, according to the USWA newsletter.

The price per bushel of Canadian wheat was weakened about 13 cents and producers of wheat, corn, oats and barley will be compensated based upon farmers' delivery record for business conducted between January 1980, when the embargo was initiated, and July 1980, the letter said.

Witkowski said U.S. farmers do not want government subsidy or handouts. He said farmers want to be able to sell their produce in the marketplace and make a living.

A U.S. negotiating delegation may meet with Soviet officials in July to discuss a possible long-term grain agreement to replace the current accord which expires in September. Soviets have shown no hard evidence of buying grain since the London talks of June 9, and a price for the grain has not been disclosed.

Key Crawford, state coordinator for the American Agriculture Movement, said a fair profit is good, but the profit shouldn't cripple other segments of the economy. "Someone is making a terrible profit between here (producer) and the receiving end (consumer)," said Crawford.

he cited the example that one bushel of wheat in 1950 and one bushel today feed about the same number of people. However, five bushels will buyone shirt in 1981, and one bushel of wheat in 1950 would have bought the same shirt.

Crawford said wages since 1947 have gone up 20.2 percent, net interest income has gone up 290 percent, and income to farm proprietors has decreased 83.3 percent.

"America is in for a depression if we don't return a fair profit to the 'natural resources of our country,'" said Crawford.

Citing the export market as the only hope for American wheat producers, Witkowski said, "Our system is not perfect, but it's better than the Canadian and Australian wheat board doing business for the farmer."

America's 200,000 dairy farmers start each day by moving their cow herd on the first two or three daily trips to the milking parlor. Within hours, over 3 1/2 million gallons of milk will be delivered to families and stores across the country.

Food For Thought

Gerald McCathern

"Polish Pork"

If you are a "news-watcher," then you have been aware for several months of the economic problems which now exist in Poland. I wonder, however, if you have analyzed their (Poland's) problems to see what the "causes" might be?

On the surface, it appears that the major problem has been the failure of the Communist system to supply the goods and services of a progressive thinking and energetic group of people, the Poles. I believe that the problems go even deeper, and relates directly to the exploitation by the system of its most important economic segment, Polish agriculture.

As in the United States, the Polish farmers have become the minority, and consequently, economic decisions affecting their welfare are being made by non-farmers. The farmers, themselves, were among the first to start the political protests which have been so prevalent over the past twelve months, however, they were the last to receive concessions by the government allowing them to organize. Even their fellow "comrades," the Polish workers, were reluctant to support their (the farmers) efforts for a better economic deal—after all, it might cause the price of Polish food to escalate!

If you remember, the first news story that we saw on television relating to the economic and political unrest in Poland, the major problem seemed to be empty grocery shelves, long food lines, and the total absence of any red meats for the consuming public. The problem was not that food was too high, but that food was not available!

Why? Perhaps you will be as surprised as I was at the answer.

I am a statistic watcher. As a result, while pouring over some USDA statistical records, I discovered that in 1980, the United States imported approximately 80 million pounds of pork from, of all places, Poland! Now this was at a time when the Polish people were unable to obtain enough pork to satisfy their own needs.

As Paul Harvey would say, "Here is the rest of the story."

1980 proved to be one of the worst years in history for U.S. pork producers as far as price is concerned. Pork prices fell to devastating lows, due to over-production, according to the marketing experts. Many of my personal friends who were hog producers were forced into bankruptcy because hog prices were so far below production costs. Even Secretary of Agriculture John Block, who is a large hog producer in Illinois, testified that his hog operation was a losing enterprise.

We must ask ourselves, how could this be? Poland, with an agriculture industry based on pork production, unable to supply its own population with enough pork, exporting over 80 million pounds of mostly boned and canned hams to the United States, where U.S. farmers were already burdened with an apparent over-supply of pork and drastically low pork prices!

It seems that someone had their priorities reversed, either the Polish government which allows food needed by its own people to be exported, or the U.S. Government which allows food to be imported, which is not needed and results in the bankruptcy of thousands of U.S. pork producers.

If this is free trade: no thanks!

A final note, Grain prices were depressed due to the U.S. pork producers feeding less hogs; beef prices were depressed due to competition of cheap pork, and U.S. workers lost their jobs due to the lack of demand for goods and services in rural America; all because the Polish people were denied food in the form of pork which was exported to the United States.

That is food for thought, June 28, 1981.

Livestock Market Shows Upward Trend Again

WASHINGTON (AP) — The livestock market may be gradually turning upward again, which means better news for cattle and hog producers, government analysts say.

But that will mean some increase in retail meat prices after holding at moderate levels earlier this year.

Paul C. Westcott of the Agriculture Department's Economic Research Service said Tuesday that recent market price increases for cattle and hogs probably will be reflected when new government statistics for June are ready a month from now.

"Those farm price increases or wholesale increases will be coming through" to consumers, he said. "What doesn't come through in June will start coming through in July and perhaps some more in August."

The Labor Department reported Tuesday that retail prices of food and beverages in May declined 0.2 percent. Grocery store food prices dropped 0.5 percent from April.

Beef and veal prices at stores rose 0.7 percent during the month, reflecting at least part of an April increase in

For Legal Fund

GSPA Seeking Support

By JULIE SMILEY
Staff Writer

The Grain Sorghum Producers Association is requesting support for a proposed lawsuit against the USDA.

Corn, shipped by the government from northern corn-belt states, is being sold in competition with grain produced by High Plains farmers, and GSPA believes this is illegal.

GSPA Executive Director, Elbert Harp, Abernathy, said

GSPA has exhausted all political avenues. Three law firms, one in Lubbock and two in Washington, D.C., have stated that farmers and elevators in the High Plains have legal grounds to initiate a lawsuit to block the sales or recover damages sustained as a result of this policy.

Following the Russian grain embargo, USDA bought about 200 million bushels of corn from grain-buying companies and put it in storage.

The grain companies had bought the grain from farmers to fill orders.

Nebraska and other Midwest corn-belt states had to relocate stored corn to make room for the 1980 crop. Forty-five million bushels of corn were shipped to the northern High Plains, Harp said.

The corn, said Harp, was shipped almost 1,000 miles at $1.25 per hundredweight from May 1980 through January 1981. Two-thirds of the 45 million bushels is being stored in Plainview and the remainder within a 75-mile radius of that city. Under normal conditions, Harp said the corn would never have been shipped to the High Plains.

GSPA is fighting for a policy to exclude all sale of such grain except for export. "We have put pressure on the Democrats in Congress and the Reagan administration to exclude this grain from sale except as export," said Harp.

He said the High Plains grain market is based on the price of corn in Kansas and Nebraska, plus the freight charges to ship it to the High Plains.

"When the corn is sold to the highest bidder, then it is in competition with local producers and it takes away the freight differential in the price," Harp said.

The average farmer in the High Plains stands to lose about $5,000 per one million pounds of corn produced, or 50 cents per hundredweight, according to Harp.

One month ago, 30 million bushels of the corn shipped to the High Plains was earmarked for disaster use only. Harp said it was set aside for use only in a natural disaster, like a drought. It is to be distributed only in the form of government relief.

This disaster-use policy can change any moment, according to Harp. He said the corn can be sold if USDA determines it is in danger of going out of condition, and USDA can buy it back and maintain it elsewhere.

The balance of the corn shipped to the High Plains, some 15 million bushels, is being sold at their rate of 165,000 bushels per week, stated Harp. It is being sold in the Texas High Plains said Harp, because "average market price of grain here is higher than anywhere in the country."

In an effort to stop the sale of this corn and have a precedent set, Harp said GSPA is asking 1,000 farmers to give $250 each to help fund the legal work required, should the case be tried eventually by the Supreme Court.

The deadline for farmers to respond to GSPA's Legal Fund is July 10. If enough interest is shown by that date, GSPA will proceed with the lawsuit in behalf of farmers.

If not, the money will be returned, less any expenses incurred by GSPA pertaining to the proposed suit, Harp said.

Not only will the sale of this relocated grain affect the price of corn in the Texas High Plains, said Harp, but it will also depress prices of grain sorghum and wheat, since wheat is being bought as a cattle feed.

Harp said, "It will affect the entire grain complex in the High Plains area."

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cold weather put a big dent in this year's cherry harvest, which the Agriculture Department says is expected to be the smallest in many years.

Officials said Tuesday that production of tart cherries, which are used primarily for processing, is estimated at 141.9 million pounds, down 35 percent from 1980. It would be the smallest tart cherry harvest since 1945.

Production of sweet cherries, which are sold mainly as fresh market fruit, was put at 138,900 tons, down 19 percent from last year and the smallest output since 1972.

Square They're Not!

Anderson's Kickers 'Super'

By JOE EDWARDS
Associated Press Writer
NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — If you ask Paula Anderson to dance, be prepared. She square dances, clogs, does the Cotton-Eyed Joe, twirls and kicks. She's attractive, bubbly, and won't step on your toes.
Ms. Anderson is founder and leader of the Nashville Super Kickers, six professional dancers who'll dance at a mere tap on the shoulder.
"We're not strictly square dancers or cloggers," Ms. Anderson, 25, said in an interview. "We dance to country music, but some of it is a little jazzier."
At any rate, when the band strikes up "Alabama Jubilee," "Sugarfoot Rag," "Down Yonder," "Hey, Good Lookin'" or "The Cotton-Eyed Joe," you can hardly keep these three young women and three young men off their feet.
"Sometimes I call it cheese cake dancing because of the short outfits," Ms. Anderson said, chuckling.
The group, which just expanded from two members, has appeared on the cable television show "Music World" and has performed with singer Billy "Crash" Craddock. The Super Kickers also have appeared on the Nashville Jubilee, a defunct scaled-down rival to the Grand Ole Opry.

"No one has made us off the stage yet," Ms. Anderson said.
Ms. Anderson, who's been dancing since age 5, and fellow Super Kicker Andie Albert, recently performed for six weeks in Mexico City and Acapulco.
"With the language barrier, they related to dancing," Ms. Anderson said. It was the first time such an act had appeared in Mexico.
"Western fashion there is big," she said.
A special feature of their public appearances is when they go into the crowd and teach the audience how to do "the Cotton-Eyed Joe."
"It's easy to learn the Cotton-Eyed Joe and clogging steps," said Ms. Anderson, who has a background in jazz and tap dancing. "Some of our things require a dance background, but what we show is easy."

The group routines are kept to country standards.

"Superman II" From Warner Bros. Pictures. Executive Producer Ilya Salkind. Directed by Richard Lester. Starring Christopher Reeve, Gene Hackman and Margot Kidder. Rated "PG."

"SUPERMAN II"

By STEVE K. WALZ—FILM CRITIC

If you enjoyed "Superman I," then you'll love the sequel. The effects in "Superman II" are even more dazzling than those in the original, and the storyline is just as exciting. In fact, the last hour of "Superman II" offers more action per minute than any film I've seen so far this year. One columnist has suggested that Chris Reeve, who portrays the legendary superhero, be nominated for an Oscar.

The second story, penned by Mario Puzo, with help from David and Leslie Newman, picks up where the original left off. The Kryptonian outlaws who were sent to the Phantom Zone by Superman's father are released when the caped hero hurls a nuclear device, which was placed in the Eiffel Tower, into outer space. The ensuing shock waves from the explosion send the criminals, Ursa (Sarah Douglas), Non (Jack O'Halloran) and Zod (Terence Stamp), to the moon where they destroy an Earth expeditionary force. They then proceed on to Houston, Idaho. Meanwhile, Lois Lane (Margot Kidder) and Clark Kent are sent on an investigative assignment to a Niagara Falls honeymoon rip-off hotel. There Lois also discovers a startling secret about Clark. And, if things aren't heating up enough already, Superman's nemesis, Lex Luthor, escapes from jail, finds the superhero's Fortress of Solitude and then links up with the three aliens from Krypton.
This sets the stage for a power-packed adventure which culminates in a colossal battle in and around the streets of New York City. It simply boggles the mind to see how Colin Chilvers achieves the film's visual effects, which are urged on by John Williams' upbeat score.
The acting is first rate, although I think there are times when Chris Reeve overplays Clark Kent a bit too much. Sometimes Clark looks as if he's an absolute twit, which isn't the way George Reeves played him on the tube. Margot Kidder's Lois Lane is way too hip, but does an overall credible job.
"Superman II" is one of those films that you can enjoy over and over again with the kids. Heck, I saw the first one three times. Oh yes, "Superman III" will commence production sometime in 1982—can't wait!

REVIEW

CBS Wins Race With Six News Shows in Prime Time

NEW YORK (AP) — With three news shows in the week's Top 20 — an extraordinary number in a period normally dominated by entertainment — CBS won the networks' prime-time ratings race for the fifth consecutive week, figures from the A.C. Nielsen Co. showed.
CBS' "60 Minutes," no stranger to the Top 10, finished the week ending June 21 in seventh place, with Part II in the five-part documentary series, "In Defense of America," tied for 17th, and a special edition of "Walter Cronkite's Universe" 20th.

CBS had seven other programs among the 20 highest-rated, including "M-A-S-H" in first place for the third straight week, and compiled an average rating of 13.9 to 13.5 for ABC and 12 for NBC.
The networks say that means in an average prime-time minute, 13.9 percent of the nation's TV-equipped homes were watching CBS.
The rating for "M-A-S-H" was 20.6. Nielsen says that means of all the homes in the country with television, 20.6 percent saw at least part of the program.
News shows often are among the lowest-rated prime-time offerings, but CBS held its ground with a half-dozen of them.
"In Defense of America," an hour of prime time on each of five consecutive nights, registered a rating of 15.2 for the first installment June 14 — included in the previous week's tally — and 16.8 for Part II, then fell progressively through the week.
Part III on Tuesday night was No. 33 in the ratings, with Part IV tied for 39th place and the fifth installment in 48th place.

Ford Didn't Mind Being Second Choice for Part

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — It doesn't bother Harrison Ford one whit that he was second choice for one of the prime roles of the year: the adventurer-archeologist Indiana Jones in "Raiders of

"Star Wars." Spielberg remembers being attracted to a film "that blends Lash LaRue, Spy Smasher, Masked Marvel and Tailspin Tommy with elements from Edgar Rice Burroughs and George's great imagination."
Both filmmakers had to carry out other commitments before they could arrange to collaborate on the $20 million "Raiders," which Paramount Pictures is releasing.
As the main antagonist, Ford appeared in virtually all the filming, which took place in England, France, Tunisia and Hawaii. He plays a searcher for the Ark of the Covenant, which 1936 Nazis are also hunting because of its mysterious powers.

Entertainment

the Lost Ark." The film may well be the most excitedly awaited of the summer onrush of product, being the collaboration of two of the industry's most successful wunderkinds, George Lucas and Steven Spielberg. Their original choice for the star: Tom Selleck, who had to drop out a month before shooting because of the pickup of his television series, "Magnum P.I."
"George called me and asked if I would like to do the picture," Ford recalls. "I said it sounded good, and I met with Steven, whom I'd never really tackled with before, although we had met a few times. When I read the script, I realized it was something I really wanted to do."
The previous role, of course, was the space swashbuckler Han Solo in "Star Wars" and "The Empire Strikes Back." Ten years ago, Ford also worked for director George Lucas in "American Graffiti."
On "Raiders of the Lost Ark," Lucas serves only as executive co-producer and co-author of the original story. But there can be little doubt that it is his baby, and he had admitted that he wanted to make "an action-adventure kind of serial film." He told his idea to Spielberg when they met on Hawaiian vacation in 1977, a week before the opening of

"20-20" and "Three's Company," both ABC, tie; "Fantasy Island," ABC; "M.D.," both CBS, tie; "Love Boat," ABC, and "CBS Reports: In Defense of America," Part II, tie, and "Dallas" and "Walter Cronkite's Universe," both CBS.

Bandits Shot By Women

MOUNT CLEMENS, Mich. (AP) — Mary Markham said she never thought she'd have to use the guns she stashed under the counter at her liquor store. But when two masked bandits walked in, put a gun to her son's head and shot her husband, she killed them both in a hail of gunfire. Several Mount Clemens police officers described it as "something out of the Wild West."

"Quick justice," said Lt. Max Patrick. "I'm really sorry about what happened," Mrs. Markham said. "I saw a gun at my son's head. What more can I say?"

Mrs. Markham, 44, had been training in the use of firearms since a January robbery when her family was out of the state.

At 10 p.m. Wednesday, she was in Bob Davey's Wine Shop with her 13-year-old son, Chad, when two men walked in wearing ski masks and carrying pistols.

One put a gun to the teenager's head and demanded money. The other put a gun to Mrs. Markham's head.

"I said, 'I'll give you all the money, but leave my son alone,'" she recalled Friday.

She started to empty the cash register and had managed to set off the store's silent alarm when her husband, Richard, 41, came out of his office and demanded to know what was going on.

The bandits shot him, but it was a small-caliber bullet and he was able to grapple with one of the gunmen.

In desperation, Mrs. Markham reached under the counter for her .357-caliber Magnum handgun and .32-caliber pistol and started blasting away, one gun in each hand, as bystanders hit the floor.

Police rushed to the scene within minutes, but by then both gunmen were dead.

"One man was hit five times, the other three," said police Lt. Nick Rouns. "That's pretty good shooting from two hands — for anyone."

Macomb County Prosecutor George N. Parris said the incident was under investigation and he had not decided whether charges would be filed.

Hours after the shooting, Mrs. Markham was back at work with an armed security guard who is to remain until Markham returns to work. Her husband was in stable condition at the intensive care unit of Mount Clemens General Hospital with a wound in his left side.

The two dead men were identified by Rouns as Jerome Kelly, also known as George Jones, 37, of Mount Clemens, and Demarze Strong, 31, of Detroit. Mrs. Markham said that when she saw photographs of the two men on television, she realized one had been in the store previously.
