Blazes whip across Florida

PALM COAST, Fla. (AP) — Dozens of fires being pushed through drought-parched Florida by unpredictable winds raged on Saturday after being blamed for two deaths, forcing thousands to flee their homes, knocking out power and closing highways.

In the most devastating of 32 major fires and dozens of minor ones statewide, hundreds of Palm Coast residents were forced to leave homes which officials said probably won't be there when they return.

As many as 200 houses in the Palm Coast area have been damaged by fire, officials said.

The fires, whipped by 30 mph winds, raged through more than 30,000 acres of countryside Friday in 25 counties, forcing the evacuation of thousands of residents, said Larry Amison, a spokesman for the state Division of Forestry.

The worst of the damage came in the northern part of the state, where two firefighters died.

But in south Florida, an estimated 4.5 million people were left without electricity Friday in a midday blackout caused by a brush fire-singed power line.

Traffic snarled, businesses closed, people perspired in un-airconditioned offices, and elevators and the drawbridge leading to the Port of Miami got stuck.

Police directed traffic at busy intersections throughout the four-county area.

The Miami Fire Department said it got 58 calls during the first two hours of the outage, most of them to rescue people stranded in elevators.

After three hours, Florida Power &

Light said most power was restored. A nine-month drought has made the state a tinderbox, but the causes of the fires haven't been determined, Amison said.

"I'm sure some of them will be arson and some of them have been accidents," he said. "We suspect lightning may have caused some. But right now we're just worrying about putting them out."

"The big factor in the last couple of days has been high, very erratic winds and low humidity," he said.

Gov. Bob Graham authorized the National Guard to fight fires throughout the state, said Steve Hull, a spokesman in the governor's office.

Firefighter Robert Tabor, 50, of Lake City died late Thursday in a blaze that burned 1,000 acres of prime North Florida timberland. Another fireman suffered a fatal heart attack Friday night while battling a blaze in Santa Rosa County near the town of Nevarre, Amison said. The Santa Rosa fireman's name was not immediately released.

Charles C. Hall of the Florida Highway Patrol, at the state disaster headquarters in Tallahassee, said various agencies report that anywhere from 50 to 200 homes have been destroyed, along with two schools, in the Palm Coast area. He said information was sketchy because phone lines were down throughout Flagler County.

All roads leading into Flagler County were shut down, including Interstate 95, U.S. Highway 1 and State Road A1A, according to Amison.

Reagan says hammer never bought

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, expressing frustration at publicity about Pentagon overpayments, says the military never bought a hammer costing more than $400. Yet, the Navy admits it did.

During a speech Friday, the president put himself at odds with previous Navy statements on the matter when he departed from his prepared text and ad-libbed that the Pentagon was successfully uncovering attempts to overcharge it.

Reagan, speaking before a Republican audience, said his administration is "talking about how to cure some great misconceptions that are the result of a drumbeat of ceaseless propaganda that's been prevalent in the land with regard to national defense.

"Just give you one line about it," Reagan added. "That $436 hammer — we never bought that."

"We're the ones that found out that that's what they'd been asking for, and we didn't buy it," Reagan told the National Republican Heritage Groups Council. "And that's true of all those other horror stories. The truth is they're success stories. We are the ones who have been uncovering all that trash and doing something about it."

Actually, the Navy openly admits it spent more than $400 for a hammer; the only question is how much it paid.

A Navy memorandum acknowledged the service paid $435 for a single claw hammer that was available in hardware stores for $15-$20. It was part of an $847,000 contract signed in 1982 with Gould Inc. of Rolling Meadows, Ill.

Navy Secretary John F. Lehman

later complained to the company about overcharges, and the Pentagon received $84,000 in refunds for the hammer and other items.

"Yes, we paid $426 for a claw hammer, but we bought only one at that price and then demanded and received reimbursement," Adm. James D. Watkins, chief of naval operations, told the Senate Armed Services Committee last February. "And, yes, we did purchase two diodes for $104 apiece. However, we received a full refund for both and purchased 122,000 of the same diodes at 4 cents apiece."

Asked about Reagan's remarks, White House spokesman Albert R. Brashear said the government "didn't really buy it (the hammer) because we got our money back."

In some instances, the military has caught overcharges before it paid them — the point Reagan apparently was trying to make.

Hospital board meets Tuesday

A regular monthly meeting of the Deaf Smith Hospital District board will be held at noon Tuesday in the hospital conference room. The agenda includes routine reports and discussion of an employee insurance program.

New postmaster arrives

After serving three years as postmaster at Wellington, Hereford's new postmaster said coming here is a "good opportunity." Charles Britten, 38, a native of Stratford, arrived Thursday for his first day on the job. He replaces an interim postmaster who had served since the retirement earlier this year of Nolan Grady.

Britten holds a degree from West Texas State University and served four years in the U.S. Army. He has been with the U.S. Postal Service since 1974.

Britten said he doesn't see any drastic changes in store for the Hereford post office, and he will concentrate simply on providing the best customer service possible.

Britten and his wife, Janetta, have two daughters. Paula is 11 and Belinda is 14. While in Wellington, he belonged to the Kiwanis Club and the Collingsworth Voluntary Ambulance Service and was a director of the Chamber of Commerce.

Britten's hobbies are fishing and hunting.

Postmaster selections are made on

Red Cross finishes hail assistance, halts rumors

Within 48 hours of the May 8 hailstorm, the Deaf Smith County Chapter of the American Red Cross had assessed roof damage in the Hereford area and was ready to begin providing disaster assistance.

More than 700 residences were damaged by the 20-minute hailstorm, and the Red Cross found that 106 of those homeowners were eligible for roofing materials. The disaster relief was targeted for homeowners who did not have insurance, and in some cases to help elderly persons on fixed incomes who had policies with big deductibles.

A team headed by Paula Martin, field service manager for territory 3, arrived in Hereford last Friday to begin processing claims and making home visits. Martin brought with her a staff of four paid workers and eight volunteers, which was supplemented by help from 40 local volunteers.

Applications were accepted on Saturday and Sunday afternoons, after which home visits were made. Once an application was approved and the damage assessed by a Red Cross building advisor, vouchers were issued for materials to be purchased at local lumber yards.

According to Betty Henson, director of the local chapter, the assistance has resulted in the circulation of rumors which are simply not true and could be damaging to the Red Cross. She said one rumor was that local building supply companies had been asked to reserve all their materials for persons given vouchers by the Red Cross.

"It was on a first-come, first-served basis," Martin explained. "We did not tie up any materials at any lumber yard. In fact, the lumber companies were watching out for us. One person tried to take materials back and trade them for cash, and the lumber yard refused."

Another rumor was that the Red Cross was replacing entire roofs of expensive, "cedar shake" shingles.

"We only helped four families with cedar shingles," Martin said. "It amounted to a total of five-and-a-half squares." She explained that even though one might expect a home with such a roof to be adequately insured, in some cases those homes were in the country and the family had lost entire wheat crop. "Those families had real cash-flow problems," she said.

"There's a lot of money coming back into this community because of the Red Cross assistance," Martin added. "We could have come down here with semi-trailers and started passing out materials, but instead we had them buy from local dealers."

Martin said the materials purchase amounted to $26,000, and she would start paying the voucher bills on Monday.

Henson said local donations are welcome, to supplement funds from the Red Cross national disaster assistance program. Contributions can be mailed to the office at P.O. Box 1371, Hereford.

Bullard hopes hospital tours will show industry changes

By JERI CURTIS
Managing Editor

Hospital administrator Jim Bullard hopes that today's open house at Deaf Smith General Hospital will not merely be a viewing of the physical plant, but that it might be a way to subtly change some attitudes about "small town" health care and show how the medical industry is changing.

From 1 until 5 p.m. today, hospital employees and volunteers will be conducting guided tours of the facility, showing off the services available from equipment and staff. Personnel will be in their respective departments for questions.

"We would like people to see that we really have modern technology,"

Bullard said. "We hope that those who have been dissatisfied with our aesthetic appearance would take a look at how renovations have improved our facility. And we hope that newcomers to the area will take this chance to examine the hospital."

The rapid technological changes in health care in recent years has left many would-be patients feeling that "bigger is better" and that the "best" care is found in Amarillo or Dallas. For certain cases that is true, but when that subject comes up, Bullard likes to mention what all can be done in Hereford.

"Not every community our size has a registered respiratory therapist - we do. Not every community has a physical therapy department in its hospital - we do," touts Bullard. "We have several employees who are registered for advanced cardiac life support. Very few communities our size can provide the kind of surgical staff that we can or can perform such as vascular or urological surgery. Very few hospitals can do arteriography (study of arteries) - but we do."

The last two years has seen a great change in the way hospitals operate, says Bullard, with the advent of prospective payments. Medicare, and some other third party payment systems, have begun paying a set amount for a particular procedure or diagnosis regardless of length of stay in the hospital. Thus, hospitals, to cut costs, have tried to become more efficient and created shorter lengths of stay. That, then, causes a drop in census.

"This has required us to be much more productive, because with a drop in census, there's obviously a drop in revenue. So we've entered a new environment in health care - competition," Bullard says.

Bullard admits that there will always be a choice, and not everyone will want to opt for care in Deaf Smith General. And he says there are some areas of care that the local hospital will never be able to provide.

But what the big task is, is finding the things that DSG can compete with, and even compete with Amarillo on.

"One of the things that we have tried to do, and it is the foremost thing, is to recruit and employ a high skill level of personnel," Bullard explains. "Those who have not been recruited, have been trained. In essence we try to provide as quality a personnel as possible."

The high calibre of personnel has drawn patients from area towns who prefer to be at DSG than Amarillo.

The census of DSG, at 45 to 50 percent occupancy, hasn't changed drastically in the last three to four years. Bullard credits that to the avant garde physicians in Hereford who saw the changes in medicine coming and prepared for it.

Efficiency is a key word in that case. Bullard says the top notch doctors and the high technology provided here helps get patients home quicker, and allows many to be treated on an out-patient basis. The new trend in shorter stays also combines with recent popularity in home care, which many believe is better for a patient's recovery.

Although rising medical costs are constantly in the news, in some ways the new trends have cut those costs. Many insurance companies now offer higher deductible so that policy owners may pay lower premiums. Some companies offer incentives of lower premiums for non-smoking, low risk persons.

"I think that as a rule, the consumer is satisfied with the changing

Budget cutting lobby formed

AUSTIN (AP) — Former Republican U.S. Senate candidate Rob Mosbacher on Friday announced formation of a lobbying group designed to create public support for budget-cutting proposals in the Congress.

Mosbacher, a Houston businessman, said President Reagan "has gone more than half way" in compromising on federal spending plans, and the Democratic-controlled House now must cut spending on domestic programs.

Letters have gone out to more than 150,000 people in selected congressional districts around Texas urging them to contact congressmen in the lobbying effort.

"If we can generate 1,500 letters to Washington, or a 1 percent response, on behalf of reducing the deficit, we will have made a major contribution," he said.

'Moody Park Three' charged again

HOUSTON (AP) — Three people calling themselves the "Moody Park Three" are facing charges for a second time in connection with the May 1978 riot at a Houston park.

Travis Morales, 32, Thomas Hirschi, 31, and Mara Youngdahl, 37, were convicted in 1979 of rioting in Moody Park on the city's northside. Morales and Youngdahl were sentenced to five years' probation, and Hirschi was fined $1,000.

However, their convictions were overturned last year by the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals in Austin.

They now face the same charges and are scheduled to go back to court next week.

The riot occurred about one year after Joe Campos Torres drowned while in police custody.

During a Cinco de Mayo celebration at Moody Park, a riot broke out. Police cars were overturned and 15 people, including three police officers, were injured.

Death toll at 11 Philadelphia

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The search for bodies in the burned-out MOVE headquarters has ended with the death toll at 11, and officials are turning to unanswered questions about the radical group and rebuilding the ruined neighborhood by Christmas.

Federal Housing and Urban Development Secretary Samuel Pierce Jr. on Friday toured the west Philadelphia area and pledged $1 million in federal aid to rebuild the 1 1/2 blocks burned in a fiery confrontation between police and the radical group.

Mayor W. Wilson Goode said legal steps are being rushed to permit quick demolition and cleanup so construction can begin by July 1 and end by Christmas.

"But what also has to come out, and must come out, is who are the people behind MOVE? And why does a group that calls itself back-to-nature feel it is necessary to fortify themselves inside a house with machine guns, with automatic weapons and shoot thousands of rounds at police officers and firefighters?" he asked.

"There will be attempts at revenge, and I think we're far from out of the woods on this," he said. "This is not over yet."

He declined to say whether he, the police or any other authorities here have been threatened by MOVE.

MOVE is a radical cult founded in 1978 by a man who calls himself John Africa, and all members adopted his surname. The group shuns organized society and its laws and practices a back-to-nature philosophy that includes living in dirt and garbage with dogs, rats and roaches.

The MOVE house caught fire Monday afternoon when police dropped a bomb on the roof after trading gunfire with those inside.

NAACP opposing Reagan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The NAACP says it's planning more aggressive opposition to Reagan administration civil rights policies, and the organization's chairman began the campaign by calling the president a "reactionary and racist."

"The NAACP is taking off the gloves in relation to dealing with the Reagan administration," board chairman William F. Gibson told a news conference Friday.

Gibson and Benjamin L. Hooks, executive director of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, spoke prior to a conference that was to map out the new strategy. Some 100 civic, professional, religious and educational groups are attending.

"For the past few years, we felt Mr. Reagan is a nice guy who doesn't know what's happening," Gibson said.

"Today we see a change. We see the kind of a change where we'll be calling Mr. Reagan what he is. I've said some time ago he's basically a reactionary and racist. And we're preparing now to tell the story to the world."

White House press spokesman Dale Petroskey said he had no comment on the remarks.

Judge identifies burglar he shot

HATTIESBURG, Miss. (AP) — A Texas judge who traded shots with a burglar has identified a photo of a man hospitalized here as the man who broke into his home last Sunday night, authorities report.

"John Evans, the man laying up there in the hospital with two bullet holes in him, has been identified by the judge as the man who burglarized his home," Hattiesburg Police Lt. Jimmy Dale Williams said.

A burglary charge was filed late Friday in San Antonio and bond was set at $100,000.

Evans, who remains in the hospital under guard, is accused of breaking into the home of Bexar County Judge Anthony Ferro of San Antonio late Sunday night. Williams said Ferro and Evans exchanged 11 or 12 shots and Evans was shot twice in the chest.

Evans was fingerprinted Friday afternoon by detectives armed with a court order authorizing doctors to sedate him if he refused to cooperate.

Britain snubs IRA party

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's government says it will not talk with the political wing of the outlawed Irish Republican Army, despite the party's gains in Northern Ireland's municipal elections.

In final results announced Friday, Sinn Fein took more seats than the mainstream Roman Catholic party in Belfast's key Catholic stronghold and won 59 of a total of 566 seats across the province. It will be represented on 17 of 26 local councils.

But Nicholas Scott, Britain's undersecretary of state for Northern Ireland, said no British government ministers would meet with Sinn Fein councilmen until the party renounced its support for IRA violence.

Julius Bodner, manager of J.C. Penney Co., recently presented Kathy Holmes with a gift certificate worth $100 in sportswear as the drawing winner of J.C. Penney's annual Fashion Expo Contest. Dog returned home after two years

LA MARQUE, Texas (AP) — Bear, a 50-pound red chow dog who disappeared nearly two years ago during Hurricane Alicia, is finally back with his owners.

"After a year we had just about given up hope," Harriet Fretwell, 38, said. "But I just knew he wasn't dead. I felt like we would know if he were."

After months and months of advertising and offers of rewards, a friend of the family visiting the Galveston animal shelter recognized the dog there and led to the reuniting of Bear with the Fretwells.

"My friend was there looking for a cat. It was pure luck," Ms. Fretwell said Thursday.

"Bear didn't recognize me until I pulled the car keys out of my purse, shook them and said 'C'mon Bear, Let's go take a ride in the car.'"

A crooked tooth in the dog's mouth made her certain that the dog really was Bear, who disappeared in August 1983, when the hurricane blew down a backyard fence and the animal escaped.

"People would call and say they were convinced they had found our dog," she said. "We'd drive all the way there and the dog they were talking about would be an Irish setter or something like that. We drove all over chasing leads but without any luck."

Ms. Fretwell said the reunion between the dog and her two sons, Perry 16, and Richard, 15, was just like in the movies.

"As soon as Bear saw the boys he let out with the strangest yelp and he actually started to have tears in his eyes," she said. "I'm still in shock over this. I look out into the backyard just to make sure he's really there."

Some of the dog's movements since the disappearance have been traced.

Gail and Rocky Clair of Galveston delivered the dog to the shelter last week and put him up for adoption because it kept jumping the fence a.m. to midnight to show support for legalized abortions.

"We are encouraging people to feel the personal connections they share with women who have had to choose abortions. These are the people our opponents like to believe don't exist," she said.

One letter read was sent by a woman who had an abortion while she was a 20-year-old college student. At the time abortions were illegal, the letter said.

The U.S. Supreme Court legalized abortions in a 1973 decision.

Because the abortion was done covertly, she had to leave behind a friend that accompanied her to the street corner where she was picked up.

"No one knew where I was," the letter said. "If something had happened to me, there would not even have been any way to find me."

A physician sent a letter to the organization writing that while working in a hospital while abortion was illegal he witnessed many women dying because of incorrectly performed abortions.

In the letter he said he was emotionally impacted when a woman died because lye had been poured in to her uterus.

To be eligible for the honors list, students must be enrolled in 12 or more hours of academic subjects and make a grade point average (GPA) of 3.4 or above. The scholastic honor list is published at the end of each semester.

Robert B. Murray, Jr., 215 N. Miles is carrying 18 semester hours of credit and is a major in air conditioning and refrigeration.

Registration for Summer I at Amarillo College is June 3 from 9:00 a.m. till noon and from 7:00 to 8:00 p.m. in the College Union Building on the Washington Street Campus.

Fast typing contest 'war of nerves'

BALTIMORE (AP) — The Eighth Annual World's Fastest Typist Contest was as much a test of nerves as of speed, says this year's winner, a repeat champion who won using the typewriter that was her prize last year.

The contest Friday for 25 women and one man ended five minutes and, for most of the contestants, 600 words after it began.

The winner, Linda Williams, a secretary for Chevron in San Francisco, was so nervous that at the bottom of the official contest sheet she put her home address in the space that called for her company's address.

"Nerves took over this year more than last," she said, although she still managed to break the record of 124 words per minute she set to earn the title last year.

Test results being returned

Students who took the California Achievement Tests earlier this year will be bringing home test scores on Monday.

The percentile ranks will be a comparison score which indicates the percentage of students taking the test who earned higher or lower test scores. A percentile rank of 72 would mean that this student did better than 72 percent of the students of who took part in the national sample - and 28 percent of the students in the national sample did as well or better.

The normal curve equivalent score has a mean with a range from one to 99. It does not represent equal units but can be used to compute averages and for making comparisons.

The scale score expresses achievement with a three-digit number on a scale that spans kindergarten through twelfth grade.

The narrative report points out the child's individual strengths and weaknesses as reflected on the test.

east-west route across the state, was closed and residents of 60 to 80 homes were advised to evacuate just west of Ocala National Forest, where an 800 acre fire raged, said Linda Barber of the forestry division office in Ocala.

In Georgia, a man died and 2,000 acres of swampland were burned in 13 fires which raged two days near the Okefenokee Swamp along the Georgia-Florida border.

"We've got all the fires out at the present time," Echols County, Ga., Sheriff C.E. Carter said Friday night.

Foster Smith, a ranger with the Georgia Forestry Commission, said the dead man was not immediately identified.

Carter said Alonzo Padgett, whose age and address were unknown, was charged with third degree arson and driving under the influence in connection with one of the fires.

HOSPITAL

trend in health care," Bullard said.

Perhaps the satisfaction is evident for DSG in the community support, notes Bullard. He said donations for equipment usually runs about $10,000 annually and that is a favorable amount for a community of this size. Although that amount is not a large percentage of the hospital budget, it leaves Bullard with a good feeling about DSG's rapport with Hereford when he sees clubs working together for the hospital and when individuals feel the desire to help out.

In the last five years DSG has purchased close to $1 million in equipment; some new, some for replacement of outdated pieces. When talking about equipment, Bullard starts touting again. He'll mention ultrasound, nuclear medicine, automated chemistry, fetal monitors and the four-bed ICU section.

Ironically, with all the equipment and staff at DSG, the costs are lower. According to the American Hospital Association, the average charge per stay on the national scale is $2,245. The average in Hereford is $1,750. The average stay in hospitals of DSG's size is 6.1 days. The average stay is 4.3 days in Hereford.

That might be enough to convince some consumers, but Bullard says that DSG doesn't have its head in the sand so deep that it doesn't realize that everybody won't use the local hospital.

"If we have good communication with the consumer and we have the kind of organization that allows them to feel comfortable and free to express displeasure, then we can try to do everything we can to resolve problems and let them feel comfortable about obtaining health care here.

Texas Most Wanted Fugitive

ROUND ROCK, Texas — It had been an evening of music, dancing and drinking.

Before it ended, the night had been punctuated with a series of gunshots that left one woman dead and two men seriously wounded.

The October 16, 1983, shooting incident was the apparent result of an argument over a woman, said Lieutenant Chris Bratton of the Round Rock Police Department.

Lt. Bratton said Martin Gallegos, an illegal alien who had been working at various odd jobs in the Round Rock area, had been dancing with Helen Ochoa, 56, at a local tavern.

Sometime during the evening a dispute developed between Gallegos and two other men over Ms. Ochoa, Lt. Bratton said. As Ms. Ochoa and the two men were leaving the tavern, they were fired upon. All three were hit with small-caliber bullets.

Ms. Ochoa was pronounced dead on arrival at a nearby hospital. The two men recovered from their wounds.

A warrant charging Gallegos with Helen Ochoa's murder was issued on October 17, 1983.

This week Gallegos has been placed on the Texas Most Wanted list. A reward of up to $1,000 is being offered for information leading to his arrest.

Gallegos, 22, is 5-6, 140 pounds, with wavy brown hair and brown eyes. He usually wears a mustache, but occasionally trims it or cuts his hair to alter his appearance.

Police say he has told friends that he will kill any police officer that attempts to arrest him.

For this reason, law enforcement officers throughout Texas have been warned that Gallegos should be considered armed and extremely dangerous.

Lt. Bratton says Gallegos uses several aliases, including Martin Gallegos Jaramillo and Natilde Gallegos. He was born in San Miguel de Avende, a community about 70 miles north of Mexico City.

Investigators believe Gallegos has remained in the central Texas area, possibly between San Antonio and Austin. He usually finds work as a roofer or bricklayer.

Anyone with information about Gallegos' whereabouts is asked to call their local Crime Stoppers or the Texas Crime Stoppers Advisory Council toll-free at 1-800-252-8477. In all cases, callers do not have to reveal their identities.

Minister of school vows to continue fighting state

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — Wiley Cameron doesn't have the fiery personality of Lester Roloff, but he does share his passion.

Cameron, pastor of the controversial People's Baptist Church, has carried on Roloff's fight, and now he's carrying it to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Cameron and his followers believe the spirit to turn drug addicts and alcoholics into Christians should supercede the need to be regulated by state agencies.

The state has tried for more than a decade to regulate the homes, but their founder, Roloff, went to jail, briefly closed the homes and fought until his death in 1982 to keep them free from state control.

Cameron argues that the three homes founded by the outspoken fundamentalist preacher and now operated by the church do not receive state aid and should not be regulated by the state.

State courts, however, have interpreted it differently, ruling as recently as last December that three of the church's five homes for troubled children must abide by rules governing child-care facilities for those under age 18, regardless of the religious affiliation.

Roloff's successors now are taking the battle to the Supreme Court and have retained a noted constitutional attorney who last week planned to file initial motions asking the high court to review the case.

State officials, however, predict the lengthy battle soon will end with justices refusing to hear the case.

Cameron says the real battle the church is waging is to get problem children off the streets.

The church's homes are filled with children who were drug addicts, alcoholics, abused and neglected. Some tried to kill themselves or others before being brought to the facilities southwest of this South Texas coastal city, Cameron said.

"Our only motive is to help young people. I think the crises with our children should supercede whether or not you have a certain piece of paper," he said.

Cameron said the church submits to safety inspections of the facilities, but is refusing the efforts of state regulations that would put the church in the hands of the Department of Human Resources.

Cameron said that state institutions are in disarray and that patients in some institutions are abused and neglected.

He said some of the state regulations would prohibit the church from using the Bible in its teachings and would prohibit compulsory church attendance and would require sex education.

The church has lost benefactors since Roloff's death in a plane crash. But church officials still use Roloff's writings and recordings to help in fundraisers and to motivate the youths.

Cameron said through love, understanding and Roloff's inspiration, he and other staffers try to rid youths of bad habits bolstered by sex, drugs and rock 'n' roll.

"Rock music has so influenced their behavior — no one can control them," Cameron said about most new arrivals. "What we try to do is show them the real world — that there's something more to life than sex and drugs."

"If that's brainwashing, then we stand guilty," he said.

Cameron said the church spends about $18,000 daily to feed, clothe and educate the more than 500 children at the facilities.

He said more than 10,000 people were turned away from the church last year.

The church itself is the nucleus of the 600-acre operation. The church is flanked by perhaps the most famous of the five homes, the Rebekah Home for Girls. Also nearby are an academic building, a cafeteria, a garden, a playground and the Jubilee Home, for older girls.

Boys are housed a mile away in the other homes — Anchor, 18 and under; Lighthouse, 18-25; and the City of Refuge, over 25.

Radios, televisions and dancing are prohibited. Children eat very little sweets and meats, mostly vegetables grown on the church's farm. Reading materials are closely screened.

Religious activities are constant.

The children work academics at their own pace, from kindergarten through the equivalent of grade 12. Although they are not accredited, Cameron said the students rarely have problems getting into college because they can earn a General Equivalency Diploma.

The operation went from eight homes to five, from several states to one after Roloff's death in a plane crash, but Cameron said the belt-tightening changes were to enhance their work for the children.

Jerry Rodriguez, who evolved from heroin addict to director of Anchor Home for boys, said there is a constant battle with the youths.

"Rock music — I think is destroying their minds. It's the rock that goes with the sex problem. It's a struggle on a daily basis," he said.

Several girls said they had changed once they entered the home.

"I was a real bad girl. I drank a lot," said Scarlett Halsey, 17. "I had bulimia, that eating disorder. I became so depressed one night I tried to kill myself."

She said she now eats regular and doesn't force herself to vomit.

"I am a different girl now," she said.

The office wimp, accused of being a "yes man," says it's not so. He's only practicing affirmative action.

New home found for six species of penguins

AURORA, Ohio (AP) — Penguin Encounter, a $3.2 million shelter of snow and sea water, opens Saturday at Sea World here in northeastern Ohio. More than 100 Antarctic penguins of six species will live in the 10,000-square-foot center.

The birds' home, kept at a brisk 26 degrees Fahrenheit, will simulate a polar mountain and ice shelf. Visitors looking through a 60-foot-long tempered glass window can watch the penguins on the ice or in an 8-foot-deep pool between the shelf and window.

The exhibit area is only a small part of the complex. Support systems to filter the 50,000 gallons of seawater and produce the 5,000 pounds of snow blown onto the ice shelf daily are located behind and above the penguin habitat.

The first penguin destined for the exhibit has already earned a zoological footnote, hatching in a Lear jet over the Chilean Andes enroute to San Diego's Sea World.

It was one of 450 penguin and sub-

Antarctic shore bird eggs gathered from a remote island off the tip of South America by Stan Searles, curator of birds and mammals for the Ohio Sea World, and two other officials.

The other birds were hatched at the San Diego facility, and those earmarked for the Ohio exhibit were transferred in April.

1984 in 1985

George Orwell's "1984" world, where Big Brother knows our every move and inner thought, didn't come true, but we may be getting there faster than we like to believe.

Through the IRS and other federal government programs, Big Brother knows more about us than we'd like to admit. We live in an age where more and more information is gathered and stored, and it has become available to more and more people.

Companies can find out from files of credit card companies who spends a lot and who pays promptly. Mailing lists are now available with specially tailored prospects by age, sex, income and special interests.

Market research people are getting more and more sophisticated in storing information about the average American. The Wall Street Journal covered this very thoroughly a while back and its disclosures make some of us uneasy.

For example, Mom may know you better than anyone but does she know how many times you blow your nose each year? Kleenex does. The average person blows his nose 256 times a year. How many ice cubes do you put in a glass? Coca Cola knows the answer to that one—it's 3.2 cubes for the average American.

Coca Cola also knows that the perfect temperature for a vending machine is 35 degrees and that several million Americans drink Coke for breakfast. The Hoover people know that the average housewife spends 35 minutes a week with the vacuum cleaner, and the average household sucks up eight pounds of dust a year, using six bags.

Market researchers are constantly asking questions and making surveys. They have found that 38 percent of all Americans would rather have a tooth extracted than take their car to the shop for repairs. This, of course, indicates that auto repair shops need to improve their images.

You've seen figures on how old we're getting, but some studies have been made to see how old we feel! On the average, says one study, we feel about nine years younger than we really are. The same study reveals that we think we look about five years younger than we really are.

Toothpaste makers have really been thorough. Among other things, they know our favorite color for a toothbrush is blue and that only 37 percent are using one that is more than six months old. They know that 47 percent of us put water on our brush before we apply the paste; that 15 percent put water on after the paste, and that 24 percent of us do both.

The researchers still don't know us individually but they know that 20 percent are "achievers" and 38 percent are "conformists". They know the average person consumes 156 hamburgers, 96 hot dogs, 283 eggs, five pounds of yogurt, nine pounds of cereal and two pounds of peanut butter. We spend 90 minutes a day preparing food and only 40 minutes eating it. This may account for the fact that we spend $650 million a year on antacid tablets.

Big companies figure out a lot of things about the average American, and it pays off in selling the products. However, it doesn't change the fact that each of us is an individual with different likes and dislikes. The more things change, the more they remain the same.

LEND ME YOUR EAR

Since the Baptists insist on fighting over theology I have been forced to try to figure out where I stand. So far I have not had much luck. I have about decided that I do not have much of a theological position. What is more disturbing is I am not sure I want one. If having one means I have to argue about my stand or judge someone else because of their stand then I think I will pass.

My religion is quite simple. I am a fan of Jesus Christ. I want to be like Him. The thing about Him I admire the most is the fact that He was interruptible. He went about being interrupted. When we study His life we study His interruptions. He somehow had the time to stop and listen.

I find this trait to be important because everyone is looking for someone to hear them. Everyone wants to tell their story. Why is it so difficult to find someone to listen? The human ear is the most powerful part of our body. Somehow we get so busy talking we never get around to listening and the whole world goes around frustrated with a story to tell and no one to listen to it.

I visited the Vietnam Veteran's Memorial in Washington, D.C. I think they did a great job in design and construction of this memorial. The wall containing the names is like a shrine. The statue is so lifelike I expected the men to speak.

As I walked along the wall I saw a Vietnam veteran who had attached himself to one of the guides. I am sure the guide felt torn feeling he should be doing his job, which is to help people find names on the wall. He could not do his job because he could not tear himself away from the vet. The vet was going into great detail telling about the war. As I passed I heard him tell about the planes flying over and defoliating the forest. I should have stopped and given the guide some relief. I am sure he gets caught every day and is constantly torn. I walked on by before the significance hit me. That vet needed to tell his story and he needed to tell it right then. It is tough on the guide and some folks don't get served but what could matter more than the vet getting to tell his story?

The whole world seems to be saying, "Friends, Romans, countrymen, or anyone, lend me your ear."

Mr. President, stay home

Our president's recent 10 days in Europe are now far enough behind us to be seen in perspective.

It was an unproductive mistake. Mister President, please stay home!

If ceremonial travel by national leaders ever did serve the best interests of diplomacy...not any more.

In the first place, with a traveling army of competing newscasters, inevitably inevitable aberrations will be emphasized.

The world will hear less about what you said at Bitburg than what history says about Bitburg.

The world will hear less of what you told the European and Portuguese parliaments than that a handful walked out on you.

If you imagined that you'd have a better chance selling your Nicaraguan policy and your economic summit face-to-face with Europe's leaders — you didn't.

Let's let this trip be a learning experience for you and for your successors.

Europe does not see past, present or future through our eyes. Our president was over there warning about a "Soviet military threat" amid people whose nerves are yet rubbed raw by a war that killed 40 million people.

Whether our president is right or wrong is less important on this anniversary of that war than the fact that Europe's present comparative tranquility is best left undisturbed.

For us, the barbed war that separates East and West Europe is ugly, repugnant, intolerable.

For Europeans it represents a semblance — however imaginary — of mutual security.

By the unbecoming way in which those parliaments' minorities behaved, Europe has demonstrated that it has lost its grandeur and even its good manners.

Our president's stirring, visionary words about a someday Europe "in which one can travel from Moscow to Lisbon without a passport" sounds vapid to Europeans content if they can merely escape catastrophe.

It is very easy for an American president to be convinced by those around him that he is the ordained leader of the free world. Not necessarily.

If ever he can be that, he can be that only by example — by staying home and minding his own business so well that our nation becomes for the leaderless and the misled — a lighthouse.

That makes our president's first responsibility keeping the light lit!

Bootleg Philosopher

The great political party switch

Editor's note: The Bootleg Philosopher on his Johnsongrass farm on Tierra Blanca creek examines a new political development this week.

Dear editor:

According to an article I read the other night because I couldn't decide which re-run on TV was worse than another, some Republican Party leaders have announced plans to "convert 100,000 Democrats."

At first, just reading the headline, I thought it was a religious drive, and began trying to think of some Democrats around here in need of salvation. I thought of some, but at the same time began thinking of some Republicans in the same shape.

But when I got down into the article I found it wasn't a religious drive, it's a political drive. Some Republican leaders want to convert 100,000 Democrats into Republicans.

What interested me is how they plan to do it. They're going to try to do it by mail and telephone. It won't work. You might get a fence-rider here and there to switch by phoning him, and maybe a few by sending them a letter, but to get the kind of mass conversions needed to swing 100,000, you need to put up a big tent or hire a hall. You need somebody, a movie star if you can find one, to lead them in patriotic song, and then you need a spell-binder to get them to confess their sins and come forward to join the party.

I don't know why the Republican leaders feel the need to do this. The way the votes went in the last Presidential election, it looks like the Democrats ought to be trying to convert some Republicans.

As Shakespeare said, there is a time and tide in the affairs of men when, if you can figure it out, switching parties is politically smart.

Yours faithfully,
J.A.

Budget games

By RICHARD L. LESHER,
President

Washington — When is a $20 billion increase considered a $50 billion decrease? When it applies to the federal government's budget, that's when.

Now that I have your attention, I would like to make a very simple statement to show how misleading the news coming out of Washington can be. Despite all the rumors that you have heard about massive federal budget cuts and how the White House-Senate compromise on the federal budget is going to gut and cut federal spending, all of these stories have one basic fallacy. They are wrong!

The 1986 federal government budget is not being cut. In fact, it would increase government expenditure by $20 billion in fiscal 1986 and more than $40 billion in fiscal 1987 and 1988. According to this "austere" budget program, the federal government will be spending more than $100 billion more three years from now than it is spending this year — $435 more for every man, woman and child in America.

The Congress and the president are going to attempt to control the federal budget. For the last two decades, the federal budget has been going up at twice the rate of inflation and now the goal is to bring the increase in federal outlays in fiscal 1986 to one-half the rate of inflation.

The president and Republican Senate budget compromisers are in a tough position. They are caught in the middle. If they don't reduce the record deficits, they will be taunted by the big spenders who got us into this fix in the first place by placing the automatic mechanisms in the budget that have resulted in much of the budget being out of the reach of the Congress and president. But if they take reasonable steps to control spending, the same people will scream the loudest about the heartless cuts that will be taken from the poor.

When is a 2 percent increase considered a decrease? When it is applied to Social Security or any other social program.

Before the ink was even dry on the compromise budget resolution, screams were heard around Washington about how it would cut Social Security benefits and how this would be so unfair to the nation's old people. Once again, this isn't the case at all. The budget would not cut benefits, but would guarantee at least a 2 percent increase. But this is Washington, and a 2 percent increase is considered a 2 percent decrease.

One question arises when it comes to many of the people-oriented programs. What is the goal of a program and just who is the program supposed to help? For example, the justification for continued increases in Social Security is that old people are poor and that to slow the growth of any benefits to these people would result in throwing even more of them into poverty. The fact is that there are old poor people and young poor people; but if you are young, your chances of being poor are greater than if you are old. In fact, after you take into account all the benefits that our senior citizens get, one is about three times more likely to be poor if he is young than if he is old.

There is an old saying that the difference between the rich and the poor is that the rich have money. But the poverty professionals around Washington have created a myriad of programs that give people everything but money, so that even if they are living middle class lives they would be doomed to permanent statistical poverty. For example, we spend over $20 billion on food stamps, but that isn't counted as money so it is not included in the income data on poverty, even though you can go to the supermarket and buy a steak with them. We spend over $100 billion on medical care that you and I would have to pay for by taking money out of our pocket, but that isn't money and that doesn't count in reducing poverty. We spend billions on subsidizing housing to give people good places to live at a low price, but that isn't money and doesn't count.

It appears that the poverty professionals have sought to make sure that the problem will never go away no matter how much we spend—and that's the way they like it. It keeps them working and keeps us paying taxes. The fact is that we can no longer afford to be intimidated by a runaway federal budget. The only way we can rein it back into control is through a weaning process that limits growth in federal spending — all federal spending.

Valentine is not a 'get-fixed-quick man'

By JAMES LITKE
AP Sports Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — Bobby Valentine appears to be one of those rare guys who could have boarded the Titanic in its final throes and described the problem as nothing more serious than a small leak.

"Pressure is the fear of failure, and I've got no fear of failing," Valentine said Friday night, moments after making his managerial debut in the Texas Rangers' seventh straight loss, this one a 4-2 decision awarded to the Chicago White Sox.

"Except for the three-run homer (by Chicago's Carlton Fisk, the decisive blow in Friday's game)," continued Valentine, "I liked everything I saw."

It's that kind of attitude that helps explain why Valentine traded a coaching post with the New York Mets and baseball's best record for a manager's job with the Rangers and the game's worst mark.

He's just not a "get-fixed-quick man."

"I haven't been close enough to say why things have happened the way they have to date," said Valentine, who replaced Doug Rader on Thursday night and inherited a 9-23 record and a six-game losing streak when he arrived at Comiskey Park.

"But I'm here to see that things happen differently from here on out," he added.

"I think we've got the talent to win the AL (American League) West," Valentine said. "If this were a 50-game schedule instead of a 162-game one, I'd be a lot more worried."

Valentine becomes the 11th manager in Texas Rangers history — not counting two interim managers — and said money wasn't his main consideration in taking the job.

"That was the least of my requests," he said. "What I said I did want was time. I made it clear I'm not a get-fixed-quick man."

At 35, Valentine is the youngest manager in the major leagues, a self-described devotee of skippers Tommy Lasorda of Los Angeles and Davey Johnson of the Mets.

Valentine said he would blend "a

Annual Maroon, White spring game

Herd football scrimmage set Tuesday

Hereford High School football fans will have an opportunity to watch the 1985 version of the Herd when the HHS team has a scrimmage Tuesday at 7 p.m.

The annual Maroon & White Spring Game will be played at La Plata Field.

Earlier Tuesday, at 3 p.m., a sophomore scrimmage will be played, also at La Plata Field.

Coach Jerry Taylor, head coach of the Herd, reports that 26 seniors, 24 juniors and 47 sophomores will participate in the spring game Tuesday night.

The game will be a controlled scrimmage, with a special scoring system designed for the defense.

"Players will play only one way, and certain aspects of the kicking game will be employed," Taylor notes.

The sophomore scrimmage on Tuesday afternoon will also be a controlled scrimmage. The players in this game, however, will play on both offense and defense.

The 1985 season opens on Sept. 6 for the Herd varsity with an 8 p.m. game at San Angelo Central.

District 3-5A action begins for the Herd on Sept. 13 against Palo Duro in an 8 p.m. game in Amarillo. The second district game is at home versus Lubbock High School on Sept. 20, and the third district contest will be versus Amarillo High School on Sept. 28 in Amarillo.

The rest of the 1985 schedule is: homecoming game versus Lubbock Coronado, Oct. 4; at Clovis in a non-district game, Oct. 11; at Caprock on Oct. 17; at home versus Plainview on Oct. 25; at Lubbock Monterey on Nov. 1; and at home versus Tascosa on Nov. 8.

In addition to Hereford playing at San Angelo Central the first week of the season, other non-district games for 3-5A teams on that evening will be Palo Duro versus Clovis, Lubbock High versus Lubbock Dunbar, Amarillo High versus Odessa, Lubbock Coronado versus Midland Lee, Plainview versus Lubbock Estacado, Lubbock Monterey versus Midland, Tascosa versus Canyon, and Caprock versus Dumas.

Clovis, the Herd's non-district opponent midway through the season, plays Canyon the second week of the season. Clovis then plays Pampa, Albuquerque Eldorado, and Albuquerque Sandia before battling Hereford on Oct. 11.

Abdul-Jabbar leads Lakers over Nuggets

By JOHN MOSSMAN

AP Sports Writer

DENVER (AP) — "Kareem Eats Quiche" read one of the banners intended to taunt the Los Angeles Lakers' star center.

During pre-game introductions, he was booed loudly by the partisan Denver fans, and every time he touched the ball in the first half the fans got on him.

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, who was ejected from Tuesday night's playoff game after twice having altercations with Nuggets' backup center Danny Schayes, insisted he saw and heard none of it.

"Were they booing me?" he asked in response to a reporter's question. "I didn't even notice."

Abdul-Jabbar let his 27 points do the talking for him Friday night as the Lakers routed the Nuggets 136-118 to take a 2-1 lead in their National Basketball Association playoff series.

Game 4 of the best-of-seven Western Conference championship series is set for Sunday afternoon in Denver. The Lakers now have won nine straight games in Denver, dating back to January 1982.

Abdul-Jabbar, rebounding from a miserable 4-for-16 shooting performance Tuesday night that preceded his ejection, led a third-quarter surge that buried the Nuggets.

The Lakers shot 70 percent in the second quarter to open up a 79-68 halftime edge. Then Los Angeles outscored Denver 11-2 in the first two minutes of the third period, with Abdul-Jabbar accounting for six of those points. He added a "Sky Hook" moments later, then converted another hook shot as L.A. extended its lead to 26 points, 114-88, after three periods.

James Worthy took scoring honors for the Lakers with 28 points, while Byron Scott had 21 and Michael Cooper 20.

little" of the skills of both his mentors "with a lot of Bobby Valentine's ... Ultimately, baseball is a people business ... and as far as technical skills, I don't think there's a better teacher."

After being tagged as the Dodgers' No. 1 pick in the 1968 free-agent draft, Valentine played 10 years in the major leagues with Los Angeles, California, San Diego, New York and Seattle, logging a .260 batting average and playing both the infield and outfield.

His playing career may have been shortened in 1973 when he broke his leg in two places crashing into a wall while playing centerfield for the Angels.

Valentine retired in 1979 and went to work in the Padres' minor league organization in 1980-81, before being appointed third base coach for the Mets in 1982.

"When I ran into the wall and broke my leg, a lot of people, my friends, told me I should consider staying in the game as a coach or a manager. I guess from that day on," said Valentine. "I've dreamed of being a big league manager."

Three run-scoring singles in 9th inning

Cardinals rally to defeat Astros, 8-6

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON AP Sports Writer

Jack Clark, Andy Van Slyke and Terry Pendleton delivered run-scoring singles with two out in the ninth inning as the St. Louis Cardinals, who trailed 6-1 after three innings, rallied to defeat the Houston Astros 8-6 Friday night.

With the Astros leading 6-5 and two out in the ninth, Willie McGee and Tommy Herr singled off Jeff Calhoun, 0-1, starting a string of five consecutive hits. Dave Smith relieved and Clark, Van Slyke and Pendleton all singled to produce the three runs.

The game produced 30 hits, 10 of them for extra bases, including home runs by Houston's Terry Puhl, Phil Garner and Jerry Mumphrey.

The Cardinals took a 1-0 lead in the first inning. Vince Coleman led off with a single, moved to third on Herr's single and scored on Clark's sacrifice fly.

Houston jumped on Danny Cox for four runs in the bottom of the first. A solo homer by Puhl, an RBI double by Jose Cruz and Garner's two-run homer accounted for the runs.

The Astros made it 6-1 in the third. Cruz singled and Mumphrey hit a towering home run to center field. Cox was then ejected by home plate umpire Jim Quick for arguing a called ball to Garner, the next batter.

The Cardinals cut the lead to 6-5 in the fourth on a solo home run by Clark, a two-run double by Tom Nieto and an RBI grounder by Coleman.

Bill Campbell, 1-1, was the winner in relief.

Mets 7, Braves 5

Atlanta's Bruce Sutter and Chicago's Lee Smith provided some rare relief Friday night ... for opposing hitters.

The two relief aces, among baseball's premier firemen, both blew save opportunities in consecutive innings before Smith emerged with a victory as the Cubs pinned a loss on Sutter by scoring three runs in the ninth inning and defeating the Braves 7-5.

"I was all over the place," Sutter said. "I pitch in 60 or 70 games a year. I'm not going to have great stuff all the time."

Atlanta's two-run eighth against Smith included singles by Terry Harper, Ken Oberkfell, Gerald Perry and Claudell Washington. Perry was thrown out at the plate attempting to score on Washington's hit and Sutter came on to try and protect a 5-4 lead.

But pinch-hitter Richie Hebner singled with one out and Leon Durham also singled, sending pinch-runner Davey Lopes to third. Keith Moreland followed with a game-tying single and, after Ron Cey was hit by a pitch to load the bases, Jody Davis lined his two-run single to left-center.

Mets 3, Giants 2

The Mets won for the 23rd time in their last 24 extra-inning games dating back to July 26, 1983, when Gary Carter's single with one out in the 12th inning scored Wally Backman from second base with an unearned run.

The Mets, who had been shut out for 16 consecutive innings, tied the score 2-2 in the seventh inning when San Francisco starter Dave LaPoint issued a leadoff walk to George Foster and Ray Knight followed with his first home run of the season.

Expos 2, Padres 1

Andre Dawson doubled home Tim Raines in the 10th inning as Montreal snapped a four-game losing streak.

Raines singled off reliever Tim Stoddard with one out and stole second. Dawson's hit followed an intentional walk to pinch-hitter Terry Francona. Montreal relief ace Jeff Reardon worked three innings for the victory.

Phillies 10, Dodgers 5

Von Hayes and Juan Samuel hit two-run homers and Garry Maddox drove in two runs with a pair of doubles as Philadelphia won for the second time in 11 games. Kevin Gross allowed three runs and eight hits in eight innings and struck out 10, equaling his career high. The Phillies took a 3-0 lead against Jerry Reuss in the first inning and led 10-1 after five.

Reds 6, Pirates 3

Dave Parker belted a two-run homer among his three hits and Alan Knicely hit a two-run double. Winning pitcher John Stuper survived a 2-hour, 15-minute rain delay before the start of the game and checked the Pirates on one hit over five innings. He was chased in the seventh. Loser Jose DeLeon is 0-6 and has dropped 15 of his last 16 decisions, including a nine-game losing streak in the second half of the 1984 season.

In Bobby Valentine's first game as Texas manager

White Sox hand Rangers 7th straight loss, 4-2

By JAMES LITKE AP Sports Writer
CHICAGO (AP) — Chicago's Tony LaRussa, at 39 a wizened veteran of six years service in the major league managing wars, has this bit of advice for Bobby Valentine, at 35 the youngest as well as the newest member of the fraternity: When you leave the dugout to argue, argue.

"You can't worry about how little you've been around or how long you plan to be around," LaRussa said Friday night after his Chicago White Sox handed the Texas Rangers their seventh straight loss, this one a 4-2 decision that spoiled Valentine's managerial debut.

"If your gut tells you go, you go," said LaRussa.

The advice grew out of an inning-ending double play in the seventh. With Texas trailing 3-2 and Rangers on first and third with one out, Tommy Dunbar grounded sharply to Chicago's Ozzie Guillen at short.

Guillen got the force at second and Tim Lulett's throw narrowly beat

Men's, women's '3-2' softball tourney set in Canyon

A class D men's and women's 3-2 double eliminatin softball tournament has been scheduled June 7-8 in Canyon by the First United Methodist Church of Canyon.

Entry deadline for the tournament is May 31, and the entry fee is $65 per team.

Trophies and shirts will be awarded to the first place teams in both divisions of the tournament. Trophies will be awarded to second place and consolation winners.

For more information on the tournament, contact Joe Young at 1018 Holly Lane, Canyon, TX, 79015, or call Young at 655-1417.

Tommy Dunbar at first to kill the threat.

Dunbar, who appeared to break stride just before first base and made a final, desperate leap at the bag, suffered a severely sprained ankle and had to leave the game on a stretcher.

"If he ran through the bag," said Valentine, "we've got a tie ballgame. Even so, it was a close play. Until he went down, I was going out to argue. Instead I ended up seeing how he (Dunbar) was," he continued.

"It just didn't seem like a good idea for me to start arguing too soon. I'm going to be tested as it is."

Carlton Fisk had erased the Rangers' 1-0 lead in the fourth when he teed off on a fastball from loser Dickie Noles, 2-4, and parked it in the upper deck in left, scoring Greg Walker and Oscar Gamble ahead of him.

"I've been working on it," Fisk said of the swing that has served him well enough to produce seven homers this season and 237 during his 14-year big league career.

No. 237 pushed him ahead of Gabby Hartnett and into sole possession of the fourth spot on the all-time home run list for catchers. Johnny Bench heads the exclusive category with 389.

But it wasn't Fisk's bat that impressed LaRussa on Friday night as much as the way his 37-year-old catcher handled winning pitcher Richard Dotson, 2-1, and coaxed some tough relief work from Bob James, who put down uprisings in the eighth and ninth innings to earn his seventh save.

"He's caught well for us in the (five) years he's been here, but never better than tonight," said LaRussa. "He manages to get the best out of our staff."

Valentine, on reflection, was plenty happy with the Rangers' first foray under his guidance, but he promised a little clinic on baserunning sometime in the near future.

"Except for the three-run homer," Valentine said with a straight face, "I liked everything I saw."

That would include most of Noles' 7-2-3 innings of work, during which he struck out five and yielded no walks. Shortly before giving way to reliever Dave Schmidt, however, Noles served up a second gopher ball to Rudy Law.

Buddy Bell staked the Rangers to a 1-0 lead in the third with an RBI single, and Dunbar pulled them within 3-2 in the fifth when he hit his first homer of the year off Dotson.

Red Sox 5, Indians 0
Roger Clemens pitched a five-hitter and Wade Boggs cracked three hits as Boston beat Cleveland and snapped their losing streak at four games.

Clemens, 4-4, struck out 10 and walked two while pitching his third complete game and first shutout. The 22-year-old right-hander leads the American League in strikeouts

Former Indy racer says today's duels are safer

By STEVE HERMAN AP Sports Writer

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — There is a tendency to equate speed with danger in automobile racing, but you'll never convince Louis Meyer that today's duels at 200 mph are any more threatening than those he had a half-century ago at half that speed.

Meyer, 80, the first three-time Indianapolis 500 winner and the oldest living former winner of the world's most famous automobile race, is a survivor of the era of no fireproof uniforms, no helmets and no tests to determine if a driver had the ability to race.

"It's much safer now," said Meyer, who lives on a farm near Kirklint, Ind., about 20 miles northwest of Indianapolis. "Just look at the record book, the number we used to lose in the 1930s and late '20s."

The number, in fact, is staggering. In the 14 years from 1926 through 1939 — roughly Meyer's heyday — 12 drivers and eight riding mechanics were killed either during practice or in the race itself. And of the 32 other drivers who started the 1936 race with Meyer, 12 were later killed racing either at Indy or at other tracks.

By contrast, in the past 14 years, only four drivers have been killed at Indianapolis and three other Indy drivers died at other tracks. And since 1973, there has been only one fatality here, the 1982 death of driver Gordon Smiley during a warmup lap before qualifications.

"I don't think any of the drivers have a sense of danger. You grow into it. If we did, I don't think we'd climb in the cars," said Meyer, who won at Indianapolis in 1928 in his first year as a starter and added victories in 1933 and 1936.

"It's hard to make comparisons," he said. "We didn't have all this modern equipment. We were driving with 59. Loser Bert Blyleven, 2-4, yielded 11 hits, struck out eight and walked two.

Royals 3, Brewers 0
Bret Saberhagen faced the minimum of 27 batters while hurling a two-hitter and Jim Sundberg stroked three hits and scored two runs to lead Kansas City over Milwaukee, for the Royals' sixth straight victory.

The 21-year-old Saberhagen, 3-3, allowed only two singles in his second career shutout.

Twins 7, Blue Jays 6
Tom Brunansky's run-scoring single in the bottom of the 11th inning lifted Minnesota to a come-from-behind victory over Toronto.

Brunansky's hit came off Luis Leal, 2-3, the sixth Blue Jays' pitcher.

Toronto starter Dave Stieb had allowed the Twins only three singles in seven innings and led 6-0 lead when he was forced to leave with a stiff pitching shoulder.

Yankees 6, Angels 0
Phil Niekro allowed just two singles in 7 2-3 innings and the Yankees took advantage of loose California play to score five runs in the eighth inning and beat the Angels for their fifth straight victory.

Niekro, 5-2, allowed both hits to Gary Pettis, in the first and eighth innings, before leaving the game. Mike Witt, 2-4, left the game with a three-hitter in the five-run eighth inning.

Tigers 10, A's 2
Darrell Evans drove in four runs with a homer and a single and Jack Morris, 5-4, worked six innings for the victory, while Aurelio Lopez finished up for his third save in pacing Detroit over Oakland.

The Tigers jumped on Oakland starter Don Sutton, 3-4, for seven runs and nine hits in the second and third innings and coasted the rest of the way.

Orioles 11, Mariners 3
Fritz Connally belted a grand slam homer and Cal Ripken added a three-run homer as part of a 13-hit attack to lead Baltimore over Seattle.

Connally's homer was his second in the majors, both grand slams, and featured a big first inning off Seattle left-hander Matt Young, 2-5.

Winner Ken Dixon, 4-1, worked the first five innings, yielding six hits and three runs. Nate Snell pitched the final four innings for Baltimore to earn his first save.

REMEMBER THESE SAFETY TIPS

- Watch for power lines when climbing in trees.
- Do not climb electrical poles, towers or structures.
- Do not trim trees near power lines.
- Do not set ladders or scaffolds near power lines.
- Do not shoot at insulators on poles, towers or structures.
- Never climb on or go inside a substation fence. Call SPS to help you retrieve anything thrown into the substation or caught in its fence.
- Avoid using electrical tools like lawn mowers or hedge clippers when grass and leaves are wet.
- Be careful when digging. Call SPS to find out if there are any buried electrical lines in the area.
- Electrical cords should not be spliced or taped. Repair by shortening them or replace them entirely.
- Beware of exposed wires.
- Don't touch portable appliances (coffee makers, radios, hair dryers, etc.) with wet hands or while standing or sitting in water.
- Don't post signs on utility poles. A lineman hitting a nail with his cleat could slip and fall. Also, nails can snag protective gloves and destroy their insulation value.

Examining Irrigation

Dr. Kenneth Porter, a wheat breeder with the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station, examine the irrigation on new wheat varieties in preparation for the Wheat Field Day. The USDA research lab at Bushland is sponsoring the field day on May 23.

Farm

Annual Wheat Field day scheduled May 23

Interested in new wheat varieties, grazing wheat, irrigating wheat, conservation tillage for wheat on dryland and irrigation, fertilizing wheat and economics of irrigating wheat?

Learn about this and more at the annual Wheat Field Day at the USDA Conservation and Production Research Laboratory at Bushland. The event will start at 1:00 pm on May 23, 1985, according to Dr. Bob Stewart, director of the Research Laboratory. "Wheat looks especially good this year because of above average rains, and we invite people to see our research at its best," Stewart said. Field tours to research plots will begin after a few remarks by Dr. Stewart and Bill Nelson, executive director of the Texas Wheat Producers Association.

New wheat varieties, including TAM 107, TAM 108, and several experimental lines, on both irrigated and dryland, will be featured at the event. Previous new varieties developed at Bushland have had a large part in making wheat the biggest crop in Texas. Acres of wheat in Texas has increased from 4.1 million acres in 1972 to 8.2 million acres in 1985.

The tour stops will include the irrigated and dryland wheat nurseries. Dr. Kenneth Porter and Gary Peterson, Texas Agricultural Experiment Station researchers will describe the research and show people the new varieties. They will also show visitors barley and oat varieties.

Dr. Steve Winter, plant

physiologist with The Texas Agricultural Experiment Station, will show people a grazing trial on irrigated wheat. His results from 1982 and 1984 indicate that grazing up to February 1 can reduce yield of heavily irrigated and fertilized wheat. He says, "After grazing, wheat plants cannot produce enough leaf growth for yields of up to 100 bushels per acre."

Reggie Jones, USDA Soil Scientist will show and explain some of his recent experiences with conservation tillage. No-tillage has proven the most economical method of rotating from wheat to sorghum; however, sweep tillage is the best way to go from sorghum to wheat.

There are many phases of wheat research at Bushland and Etter that will not be discussed during the research tour. This information will be summarized at the Field Day in a handout covering wheat research at the two locations. Research Staff members will be available to answer questions.

The Field Day is being sponsored by Texas Agricultural Experiment Station, U.S. Department of Agriculture, Texas Agricultural Extension Service, and The Texas Wheat Producers Association.

Pioneer officials to speak

PLAINVIEW - Area farmers will get a chance to view Pioneer Hi-Bred International's two hard red winter wheat varieties at a wheat field day May 30 on the Steve King farm near Dimmitt.

Pioneer officials will be on hand to discuss Pioneer (R) brands 2157 and 2165 and to compare the varieties with competitive wheat varieties on the market.

The tour will start at 10:00 a.m. The King farm is 6½ miles north on Highway 385 and west ½ miles on Country Road Dimmitt.

A fresh team for today's farmer

Producers would like to sell under brand names

WASHINGTON (AP) — Big poultry outfits like Frank Perdue and Holly Farms have shown that it pays to advertise under a brand-name label. The beef industry would like to follow suit, an Agriculture Department livestock specialist says.

"Actually, the idea has been around for a long time," says Terry Crawford of the department's Economic Research Service. "But the industry needs to overcome some major problems before it can sell brand name beef directly to consumers."

The major stumbling block is the beef industry's absence of central packagers. Poultry companies such as Perdue and Holly control production and marketing from the farm to delivery at supermarkets. And they not only put their label on a chicken, they also advertise and create demand.

Beef, however, is cut and packaged at retail stores. The stores put their labels on packages. Many fear that if all stores carried the same beef brands, consumers would not identify quality beef with a particular store, according to Crawford.

The report was included this week in a new issue of Farline magazine published by the USDA agency.

"Poultry processors forced stores to carry brand name poultry by running large advertising campaigns that created consumer demand," the report said. "Without brand identity on the packaging, large beef processors cannot capture the benefits of a national advertising campaign." Crawford explained other problems with processors packaging beef — shelf life and color. Packaging at the store lets in small amounts of air and bacteria, which reduces shelf life. Processors can solve this by using a vacuum wrap to keep out bacteria. But that affects color.

"In most vacuum packaging, beef appears bluish red until it's unwrapped. It turns red when oxygen strikes it."

But consumers may not readily accept bluish-red beef because they associated red beef with freshness and quality. In poultry, vacuum packaging isn't a problem because the pale pink or yellow of chicken isn't significantly changed.

The industry has considered freezing beef, but many consumers avoid frozen beef because of its darker color. Some believe it's not as good as fresh beef.

"Consumers may freeze beef they buy fresh, but many have a prejudice against buying it already frozen," Crawford said.

There already is at least one market for brand name beef that could be open for further development, he said. Many restaurants and hotels use some vacuum-packed beef with recognized brand names, such as Monfort of Colorado and Swift.

Institutions may prefer the vacuum-packed beef because it stays fresh and is shipped in large quantities, usually about 40 pounds to 60 pounds, that are convenient for their high-volume needs. Most importantly, consumers don't see the beef's in-

Other procedures also are being tried, but Crawford is not optimistic that beef soon will join chicken in the parade of brand names.

"Unless consumers are willing to judge meat on something other than bright red color, I don't expect to soon see brand name fresh beef as a major force in stores," he said.

Reagan removes quotas

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan has removed the import quotas on some "sugar-containing products" that were imposed earlier this year to help protect the U.S. sugar industry.

The items range from certain cake decorations and crushed coconut meat to minced seafood preparations. Reagan's action, announced Friday at the White House, will be subject to review by the U.S. International Trade Commission, officials said.

In a related report, the Agriculture Department said world sugar production in 1985-86 is forecast at 99.6 million metric tons, up slightly from the revised estimate of 99.4 million tons in 1984-85.

The largest regional increase is expected to be in Asia, where sugar output is forecast to increase 7 percent from last season, the report said.

Committee approves resolution

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Agriculture Committee has unanimously approved a resolution to recognize the 100th anniversary of the Holstein-Friesian Association of America.

Sponsors were Reps. Kika de la Garza, D-Texas, chairman of the committee, and Edward R. Madigan, R-Ill., ranking minority member.

The resolution notes that the association was organized on May 25, 1885.

A CORN ROOTWORM PROBLEM that began in Illinois will likely spread to other corn producing areas, according to entomologists. The problem: An apparent insecticide immunity showing up in rootworm populations. According to USDA scientists, soil insecticides, applied year after year, can build up soil microbes which can eat the insecticide before it has a chance to do its work. Pesticides are apparently biodegrading faster than desired. The USDA scientists have some recommendations if you find that your soil insecticide isn't doing the job against rootworm. Their first recommendation is to go to another crop. If you must grow continuous corn, however, they suggest you consider spraying for rootworms when they emerge, or prior to egg laying in August. You might also try alternating soil insecticide classes to prevent soil microbe buildup.

Holocaust survivor recalls dark days, liberation

WHITE OAK, Texas (AP) — The pages in the photo album have wrinkled through the years. The photos have yellowed around the edges. But the pictorial memories of friends and family his children will never know remain as vivid as if the atrocities of Hitler's concentration camps never occurred. But Coen Rood of White Oak won't forget.

Forty years ago, from the floor of a Nazi concentration camp, his tired eyes beheld a miracle. The 68-pound Rood, half-conscious and wanting badly to die after spending three years in and out of 11 Nazi concentration camps, looked up from the floor where he had planned to die and saw his liberator.

"There he was — a big healthy-looking American soldier who came in and said, 'Comrade, you are free,'" Rood recalled. "He grabbed me by the collar and held me in his arms. Here I was with all my teeth rotted out and I smelled like death, and he picked me up and kissed me. Can you imagine?"

The American soldier then poured some alcohol down the Holland Jew's throat which cleared some of the cobwebs. "That alcohol shocked me so much that I stood on my feet," Rood said with a smile. "And I'm still standing."

Forty years after being liberated from the Ampfing concentration camp, the bitter memories of the "unprovoked war" leaves Rood giving no ground or concessions to Nazis who murdered his brother, sister and mother in the gas chamber.

"Like a dog, my little sister was brought to that gas chamber and killed," said Coon, voice raising in volume pointing to her picture in a photo album. "Then they take my mother, at 62 years old, and take her from her house and kill her. Then they took the fat from their bodies and made soap that we (in concentration camps) washed with. 'We were human beings!' Rood exclaimed as the photo album is closed.

Amsterdam, Holland was gripped in a worldwide depression in the late 1930s before German troops invaded the Netherlands in May 1940. The Dutch army surrendered after four days, although the navy and merchant fleet escaped to aid the Allies.

But the German presence did not mean escape from the Depression. Under the direction of Dutch Fascists sympathetic to the Nazis, labor camps similar to the ones set up by President Franklin Roosevelt to put people back to work were established in Holland.

On April 23, 1941, Rood received a card at his Amsterdam home from the "green police" or German Gestapo ordering him to report for a health inspection and be dispatched to a labor camp. "The Depression was all over the world," Coon said. "These camps were for the bread winners of the family. They could make a little money, get a bite to eat and send some money back to their family."

But the Dutch Fascists and Gestapo wanted more than just putting people back to work; their plan was to group the "young, able-bodied" Dutch Jews together and get rid of them. "There was no such thing as deportation or being tortured," said Rood, part of only an estimated 25 percent of Dutch Jews who survived World War II.

Jews were treated like any other Dutch citizens before the Nazis invaded, Rood said. "We were citizens like all else," he explained. "We were not second-rate. We were just Dutch with another religion." But the Nazis changed that.

Within two years after the invasion of Holland, Dutch Jews still remaining in Amsterdam and other citizens were segregated. Jews could not buy from the same stores as non-Jews; non-Jews could not hire Jews; non-Jewish doctors could not help Jews. "We could not even walk the same sidewalk," Rood said.

Earlier in 1941, the Germans had to find a reason to deport the able-bodied Jews, Rood said. They posed the only threat to the Nazis or Fascists in the Netherlands. Without provocation, Dutch Fascists went into the now-segregated Jewish neighborhood in Amsterdam "yelling and screaming. They wanted to provoke the Jews to fight, then they could deport them," he explained. Rood said the young people of Amsterdam bonded together and helped fight back the Fascists, only to be raided by the Germans later.

As a result of the German raid on the Amsterdam neighborhood, the city went on strike. After three days of strikes, the Germans promised to return the Jews who were forcibly removed from their homes and sent to labor camps and stop harassing the Amsterdam Jewish neighborhood if the city will go back to work. The Dutch agreed and kept their promise. The Nazis did not.

By October 1941, Dutch non-Jews were sent home from the labor camps and forcibly replaced by virtually all of the young, able-bodied Jews. Rood dug canals at the camp and stayed there despite the fact it was not a "forced" one. "But we stayed there because our family would have reprisals against them if we did not follow the rules," he said.

With their only threat safely away at labor camps, the Nazis had a "free hand to pick up all the young people, women and old people." Rood's sister, brother and mother were taken to an Auschwitz gas chamber, where they were killed.

On Nov. 2, Rood chose to go on to another camp, Westerbork, after seeing what the Nazis did when someone did not show up for their re-assignment. If someone did not show up for re-assignment, the Nazis would grab anyone else not in their barracks and transport them to the new camp.

"Sometimes, I learned they would grab some from the orphan homes and fill the trains with them," Rood explained. When Rood was transported to the Westerbork camp, he along with many other Jews on the train, were thrown off, as many families and friends saw each other for the last time. "You saw mothers trying to hold on to their sons, children holding onto their fathers, and mothers onto their husbands," Rood said. "It was a very dramatic scene." As the train doors were hammered shut and the train left, Rood said the "wails of the people on the train were louder than the train itself."

At Westerbork, Rood saw poor living conditions as men slept on steel beds, and soup was little more than water. The camp built for 1,200 contained 18,000 Jews when Rood first arrived. After spending a short time at Westerbork, Rood was transported in and out of two more camps before ending up in the Gleiwitz concentration camp just east of Berlin, where he spent 26 months.

Rood's nightmare deepened at Gleiwitz. "Within three months, we just could not work anymore," he explained. "We were exhausted. We had no shoes. Our clothes were gone." Unable to perform the necessary functions demanded by the Nazis of the Jews at the camp, approximately 170 of the 200 were led off to another camp and killed.

Rood, one of the 30 who remained at the camp was a handyman the Nazis could not afford to lose. He was a railroad worker, coal worker, rail track worker, high steel construction worker, brick layer and welder, among others. He said the process of bringing Jews and the other European prisoners into Gleiwitz, working for approximately three months until they could not perform their duties, lasted his entire stay at the camp.

In Gleiwitz, and other concentration camps, Rood said many crimes centered around food — a scarce item for Germans and virtually nonexistent one for Jews. The Germans rationed prisoners to 500 grams of bread a day. But after the baker, who was in "cahoots" with the German camp, would steal the flour to make the bread, and what was left was picked over by the camp cook and other soldiers, little more than 250 grams was given to the Jews. With the Jews working 14-16 hours a day in 40 below zero weather, eating what little bread there was and the watery soup, many were "dying like flies."

One woman, who was pregnant when she came into the concentration camp, killed her baby when it was born because she didn't want it to grow up facing such horrors. Because the camp doctor, who was somewhat sympathetic to the Jews, did not tell the camp commander she was pregnant, she and the doctor were sent to another camp. "He wanted to kill the child," Rood said of the commander who did not get to kill the Jewish baby. "That was a blessing for that child."

Another time, a man got his arm caught in the spokes of a machine. As the spokes of the machine continued to turn and bones continued to break in the man's arm, the German officer watching over the Jews sat back and "thought it was funny." Finally, when the arm was wrinkled after being broken so many times, he was able to pull it out of the spokes. During the next two weeks, Rood and several others who were painting a hospital near the camp helped steal surgical tools, sedatives and bandages to amputate the arm.

By November 1944, news had reached prisoners that Russian troops were getting closer to the concentration camp. In January 1945, Rood said cannons could be heard bombing other nearby camps. Gleiwitz was on the Russian Front. "Most of the Germans fled the camp except for a few fanatics who still wanted us to work," Rood said.

Those in the camp who were working in a nearby factory decided when they returned to the factory the next day, they would escape while German troop numbers were down. That night, the Germans evacuated the prisoners, beginning three months of continuous evacuation. Marching in "knee-deep" snow, many of the 1,500 people evacuated from Gleiwitz fell. "Those who fell were shot," he said.

After three days of avoiding the Russian Front, the prisoners ended up back in Gleiwitz, where they slept on the freezing German streets. The next day, the Germans loaded prisoners from Gleiwitz and other camps onto a train, packing 70 per car. The "Death Train" trip, which lasted eight days, went through Germany and Czechoslovakia. "Every stop we made on that train trip, we had to throw the dead and the ones we thought would die out," Rood said. "We would grab them and throw them over the side."

Those who were not dead and thrown over the side were shot by Hitler's secret police, the SS. The train stopped at the Auschwitz death camp one day simply to unload some of the bodies. Rood said prisoners who had had relatives and friends killed there, recognized the camp and panicked. "One old man climbed over the side (of the train)," Rood said. "He then got down on his knees and said 'Guards, please shoot me.' He was begging the guards to be shot!"

"The guards just laughed and said 'we will shoot you if you sing and dance for us,'" he added. The old man began singing a Jewish prayer, "Sjema Israel." "When the old man was through, he looked up at them, and they shot him."

During the eight-day train ride through much of Eastern Europe, 8,000 prisoners died. Rood and other prisoners were moved primarily by foot from camp to camp by the Germans in the final months of the war, trying to escape the Allied Forces and find a concentration camp that was not overcrowded. "No camp could have us," Rood said. "There was no food and no room."

In that time, hunger became an even more important term, as supply lines were further cut as the Allies pressed forward with their offensives. Rood and others learned from the Russian prisoners how to eat one of the leaves on a blade of grass for nourishment. But much of the grass contained manure. As a result, prisoners became infected with typhus and dysentery, among other diseases.

By April 24, the prisoners were too weak to work, eat or escape as more and more German guards fled from one of Rood's last camp when American troops landed. "The gate was open, but we couldn't flee," Rood said. The one old guard the Germans left behind got carrots and potatoes stored near the camp by the Nazis and fed the prisoners.

But the next day, the Germans returned, backed into a corner by American troops. The prisoners again were loaded onto trucks and evacuated to a nearby airport. As the convoy of trucks approached the airport, the Americans bombed the area. All but the truck containing Rood, which was having engine trouble, moved to the wooded area to avoid being shelled.

As Rood and the other prisoners waited for the truck to start, American planes shot the truck, killing everyone but Rood. After being turned down by concentration camps unable to admit any more prisoners, the Germans took the remaining 1,100 prisoners to Ampfing. It was there Rood said he had decided he wanted to die. "They told us we had to go to work, and I refused. They threatened to shoot me and I told them to."

At noon May 2, the camp commander gathered all prisoners together. "He said all those from Western Europe, step aside," said Rood, who at this time weighed 68 pounds, had a poisoned lung, eight ulcers and chest covered in boils. "They said they were leaving us (at Ampfing) to stall the Americans. They told us to tell them (the Nazis) treated us well and like human beings."

As the Germans marched the East Europeans out the gate, Rood and the others went back to their barracks. It was there where Rood laid down and planned to die. Forty years later, Rood still wonders why he survived those three years of living hell while so many others did not.

"I don't know," he mused. "But I made a promise to the ones that died. I promised to tell the story over and over so they will not ever be forgotten."

DR. GOTT

Kidney problem can be serious

DEAR DR. GOTT — Several months ago I was diagnosed as having a kidney infection. The nurse who explained the problem to me said it probably would occur again, and that, if it does, I'd have to return to my doctor and get another diagnosis before I could be given a prescription. I understand why I can't call my doctor and ask him to write out another prescription simply because I have the same symptoms. However, by the time I can schedule a doctor's appointment, I'll have had the infection for several days. Then, once I do see the doctor, he'll tell me what I already know and I'll be paying $35 for an office visit in addition to the cost of the prescription. Is there any alternative?

DEAR READER — This is a valid question, and I don't have an easy answer. Let's walk through it together.

If you have had one urinary infection, you are in the majority of all women. At one point or another in their lives, most females experience one or two simple bladder infections. Once you have been treated, it is important — despite the added cost — to have a urine culture to make sure the bacteria have been eradicated. That should be the end of it.

Repeated infections are more troublesome and, in my opinion, require more extensive investigation. In particular, some women suffer from chronic urinary infections that can spread to the kidney and produce more serious damage.

You and your doctor can decide together what would be an appropriate course of action for you to take. While it's true that bladder infections can increase your medical bills, you don't want to risk developing complications that, in the long run, could cause more danger and expense.

Congressional offices cost $13.5 million

WASHINGTON (AP) — Top employees of Texas congressmen made almost as much as their bosses, according to reports filed by the Clerk of House of Representatives for 1984.

The reports also indicate that the Texas delegation did itself proud when it came to equality of the sexes — half of the 10 top-paid staffers were women, including the two highest-paid.

"I guess I'm one of the senior A-As and one of the few to work consistently for the same member," said Gail Beagle, who came to Washington as administrative assistant to Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez, D-San Antonio, when he first took office in 1962.

Ms. Beagle and Celia Hare Martin, administrative assistant to Rep. Eligio "Kika" de la Garza, D-Mission, both earned the maximum $66,400 as of the end of 1984. Their bosses were making $72,300.

It cost $13.5 million to operate Texas' 27 congressional offices last year, according to the reports, which are filed quarterly. The last report for 1984 became available earlier this month.

The average cost of running a Texas congressional office, including office expenses and staff salaries, was $500,593.

Congressmen were limited to spending $411,324 on staff salaries for the year. Their offices expenses vary according to the size and distance from Washington of their district and the cost of renting office space.

The yearly allotments have to pay for a staff big enough to handle the problems of and letters from an ever-increasing constituency. The advent of expensive computer equipment has added to the burden, staffers say.

"The workload has greatly increased and we have not kept up with the pace in the growth of staff," said Ms. Beagle.

She said she has one employee who juggles a half-dozen office accounts such as clerk-hire, stationery and travel.

Gonzalez spent $545,140 running his office and paying his staff, who averaged 16 and made the highest average salary among the Texas delegation at $26,000.

Many have been with Gonzalez a long time, thus the higher salaries, said Ms. Beagle.

Texas' congressional neophytes generally spent the most and had the most employees while the old-timers rewarded honed-down staffs with higher salaries, the figures indicated. But since office expenses, salaries and staff size are limited by the House Administration Committee, they do not vary too widely.

Of the Texans, Rep. Ron Coleman, D-El Paso, spent the most on office expenses and staff salaries combined — $550,464. Coleman was followed by Rep. Jack Fields, R-Houston, who spent $546,001. Rep. John Bryant, D-Dallas, was third at $545,862 and Gonzalez was fourth.

Rep. Bill Patman, D-Ganado, who was defeated last year, had the highest office expenses — $203,024.

Rep. Marvin Leath, D-Marlin, spent the least on expenses and salaries combined — $406,320, followed by Rep. Bill Archer, R-Houston, who spent $419,363.

The average Texas congressman's employee earned $19,596 in 1984, and the average number of people working for a congressman was 19.

The figures include only the delegation's congressional offices. Leadership figures, such as Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Fort Worth, and committee and subcommittee chairmen have additional staffs for those offices.

The highest-paid male administrative assistant was Alan Kranowitz, who worked for Tom Loeffler, R-Hunt, at $66,200.

The average salary paid to male administrative assistants of Texas members was about $53,000. The average paid the female administrative assistants was slightly higher, about $55,000.

Of 24 administrative assistants, eight were women. They worked for Steve Bartlett, R-Dallas; Jack Brooks, D-Beaumont; de la Garza; Martin Frost, D-Dallas; Gonzalez; Phil Gramm, R-College Station; Kent Hance, D-Lubbock; and Charles Stenholm, D-Stamford.

T-BILLS

U. S. Treasury securities that generally appeal to an individual investor are Treasury Bills. Cash-basis, individual taxpayers have an opportunity to control their tax liability by effectively timing the receipt of income. Under the cash method of accounting, income is reported, for income tax purposes, in the year it is received. An individual with a good estimate of income for 1985 and 1986 may be in a position to save tax dollars by shifting income between those years. Since a T-bill is issued at a discount, interest is not taxed until the bill is sold or matures. Thus, interest income on a 12, 26, or 52 week T-bill that matures after year-end will not be taxed until 1986.

For more information on T-bills and other financial matters, come into your local full service accounting firm of RICK ROBERTS, CERTIFIED PUBLIC ACCOUNTANT (364-7525), 128 Third, Suite A. We are local people who care about our community and you. We make sure that each of our customers gets the personal attention that his/her financial needs require. We are here Monday thru Friday 8:30-12 and 1-5. Stop in and see us soon.

Of all U.S. Treasury securities, T-Bills have the shortest term of maturity.

MRS. KENNETH DUWAYNE GRABB
...nee Tammy McCathern

McCathern, Crabb exchange wedding vows here Saturday

Wedding vows were spoken by Tammy McCathern and Kenneth Duwayne Crabb, both of Plainview, during a candlelight ceremony Saturday afternoon in Avenue Baptist Church of Hereford. Dr. David Jester, president of Wayland Baptist University in Plainview, officiated.

The bride is the daughter of Jau Don and Janet McCathern of Hereford and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Billy G. Crabb of Los Alamos, N.M.

Every other church pew on the inside aisle was decorated with pink and burgundy colored flowers and greenery and two spiral and three arch candelabra decorated the main church altar. A fresh floral arrangement was placed at the foot of the cross.

Suzi Baxter was matron of honor and best man was Eric Filer.

Bridesmaids included Tracy McCathern, the bride's sister; Mrs. Baldo Skinner, the bridegroom's sister; and Trena Shelburne and Margaret Welch.

Serving as groomsmen were Eric Filer, Baldo Skinner, brother-in-law of the bridegroom; Andy McCathern, brother of the bride; Javier Franco and Byron Rutledge. Ushers were Ray Thomas and Scott Greene.

Tiffany and Timmy Skinner, children of Mr. and Mrs. Baldo Skinner, were flower girl and ring bearer, respectively, and Lacey Walker and Derek Heck lit candles.

Belinda Bounds and Chuck Canfield vocalized wedding selections including "The Wedding Song", "Truely," "Stronger With Each Year" and "Theme From Ice Castles." They were accompanied by Mrs. Gene Streun.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a romantic gown of organza with beaded schiffli yoke and collar and silk Venice bodice. It was also fashioned with Victorian sleeves, basque waist and circular flounced semi-cathedral-length train.

Flowers with leaves and pearl filament sprays made up the pencil edge two-tiered fingertip veil designed with ruffle poof, all sprinkled with pearls.

She carried a cascade bouquet of white, pink and burgundy silk roses and camellias accented with stephanotis, pearls, lace and greenery. Three mini-bouquets of roses and camellias attached to satin tubing fell from the lower level of the cascade. She wore her paternal grandmother's wedding ring.

Bridal attendants wore pink satin dresses with scalloped overskirts trimmed with bows. They were fashioned with fitted bodices and off-the-shoulder three-quarter-length puffed sleeves.

Each carried matching lace fans trimmed with white, burgundy and pink silk flowers and ribbon and pearls complimented with satin streamers. Their headpieces were full wreaths of silk roses, lace and greenery.

Catherine Lee invited guests to the reception held at the Hereford Country Club.

Punch and coffee were poured by Angela Fuller and Peggy Stewart.

Vicki Heck, Tammy Marshall and Susan Hick served the three-tiered strawberry cake iced with pastel pink butter cream frosting and decorated with burgundy and pink icing roses. It was accented with scallops and shells and placed on crystal like plates held by tall crystal pillars, enhanced by a cascading pink water fall with lilies surrounded by fresh flowers and greenery. Miniature figurines of the traditional bride and groom adorned the top tier of the cake.

The two-layer groom's cake was a round butternut chocolate cake iced with chocolate butter cream. Large chocolate roses clustered around miniature Garfield bride and groom figurines and the borders of large shells accented the cake. The couple will make their home at 903 Vernon, Apt. 6 in Plainview.

The bride, a 1981 graduate of Hereford High School, is presently working at Carolyn's in Plainview.

The bridegroom graduated from Los Alamos High School in 1982 and is a senior sociology major at Wayland.

BRENT BOYD

Brent Boyd graduates

Robert Brent Boyd, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bobby Boyd, recently graduated summa cum laude with a bachelor of science degree in geophysics from Texas A&M University.

Boyd, who was valedictorian of his 1981 graduating class from Hereford High School and was awarded the Gathright Award for being the highest academic senior student in the College of Geosciences.

He was active in Singing Cadets during his four years at Texas A&M serving as its vice-president, was selected to Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities, and is a member of Phi Kappa Phi, honor society. He will be working as a geophysicist for Atlantic Richfield Exploration in Plano.

Ann Landers Thanks for input

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'd like to respond to Shamokin, Pa., who was upset because her mother's doctor didn't attend Mom's funeral.

I work for a doctor who doesn't attend funerals either. May I tell you why? Dr. C is up before the sun making hospital rounds. The moment he arrives at his office patients are waiting. He spends the rest of the day in and out of the examining rooms and receives countless telephone calls from people who MUST speak to him.

Sometimes emergencies call him back to the hospital in the middle of the day. When he goes home in the evening he is exhausted - but he is always on call - even through the night.

But the reason Dr. C. doesn't attend funerals is not because he's busy and overworked. It's something much more personal. A physician who becomes emotionally involved with his patients will become a burn-out early, and he knows it.

Shortly after I began working for Dr. C. I became upset because a patient I'd grown fond of was facing terminal cancer. The doctor sat me down and explained that life and death are in God's hands and all we can do is render the finest medical care possible. More than competence is involved. Of equal importance is a non-involved kind of compassion and positive reinforcement. Sometimes it's difficult for physicians to maintain that "space," but it is essential to their mental health. Doctors are people too. Sign me—PROUD TO E WITH DR. C.

DEAR PROUD: Thanks for the input. Here's another letter on the same subject.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: When I began to practice medicine, many years ago, I was deeply saddened by the death of an infant patient. I planned to attend the funeral when an older and wiser physician told me the following story. It changed my mind in a hurry.

Dr. L. was the physician for the "Jones" family for many years. When Mother Jones died (at the age of 84) he felt he should attend the funeral.

In the middle of the service, the daughter of the deceased woman stood up, pointed at the doctor and screamed, "There he is! The man who killed my mother!"

That was the last time he attended a patient's funeral.—M.D. IN OHIO

DEAR M.D.: I'm not surprised. Thanks for writing.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am sure others have this problem and would appreciate a solution. Can you help? Every day I buy the newspaper that prints your column and take it to work. A group of co-workers always if they can see the paper after I have finished with it. Of course, I say yes. Yesterday at least seven people read my paper.

It irritates me that every day freeloaders get the same pleasure and information that I do from my paper, and it doesn't cost them a cent. I'm annoyed but I don't know what to do about it. Any ideas?—ON THE SPOT IN THE SOUTHWEST

DEAR SPOT: It would be nice if your co-workers were to buy their own papers, but they won't so long as they can read yours for free. So, continue to be gracious.

Work at changing your attitude. Figure you are providing pleasure and information to seven co-workers for a measly few cents a day. How else could you do so much for so many for so little?

Don't flunk your chemistry test. Love is more than one set of glands calling to another. If you have trouble making a distinction you need Ann's booklet, "Love or Sex and How to Tell the Difference." Send a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope with your request and 50 cents to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611.

Playing cards were originally modeled after the currency of the T'ang dynasty in ancient China.

VanDeCarr, Morris nuptials spoken

Tina Michelle VanDeCarr of Plano and Terry Lee Morris of Hereford exchanged wedding vows Saturday afternoon in First United Methodist Church in Plano. The Rev. Ben Feemster of the church officiated.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Don VanDeCarr of Plano and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Doug Morris of 417 Ave. I.

Christy Byrd of Plano vocalized "The Lord's Prayer" and "And On This Day" and was accompanied by Lynette Little of Plano.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of traditional white chantilly lace and chiffon. The high neckline featured a yoke of illusion net and shifflie lace above the bodice of chantilly lace sprinkled with pearls. Leg-of-mutton sleeves complimented the bodice while the chiffon skirt, which was bordered with chantilly lace, flowed into a chapel-length train.

The white satin and shifflie lace hat was sprinkled with pearls and rainbow sequins with flowers and loop pearls arranged at the side of the crown and accenting the poof. The illusion net veil fell to finger-length.

She carried a cascade of pink pixie carnations and white button chrysanthemums with English ivy and baby's breath arranged on a lace Bi-

Attendants wore long gowns of pink organza fashioned with fitted bodices, scoop necklines and puff sleeves. The full skirts fell from a natural waistline and were designed with flounced apron effects. The hemlines were finished with deep ruffles. They carried nosegays of pink pixie carnations and white button chrysanthemums with English ivy and baby's breath and wore white and pink floral wreaths in their hair.

The bride's cousin, Elaine Shirley of Buda invited guests to register at the reception held in the church.

Cake was served by Sharie Shaw of Big Spring and Dee Dee Shelton of White Settlement. Punch and coffee were poured by Sherri Bishop of Richardson.

The three-tiered white cake was decorated by pink frosting roses scattered on each tier. The top was decorated with white bells and pink flowers. It was centered with a three branch candelabrum draped in greenery and accents of greenery also encircled the cake.

Remove marks

DEAR POLLY — Could you please tell me how to get white water marks off a coffee table? — LELA

DEAR LELA — Here are three methods. First, try rubbing the mark lightly with a cloth dipped in white vinegar. If necessary, finish off with your usual furniture polish. If this doesn't work, cover the mark with a cloth soaked in vegetable oil. Let it sit for 15 minutes or so, then polish dry with a clean cloth. Or, rub in a little petroleum jelly, let it sit for 15 minutes, then buff with a soft cloth. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — When visiting a foreign country, follow these tips. Purchase a pocket dictionary and become familiar with often-used phrases and questions.

If you plan to shop, check the prices of desired items at home before you go. This way you can avoid "bargains" that aren't.

When traveling overseas, always carry your passport and tickets with you. Don't keep them in suitcases. Make photocopies of them as well and keep them separate from the originals. Of course, you cannot use a photocopy as your passport so always keep the original with you. If you lose your passport, report it immediately.

Limit your luggage. Plan on packing sensibly to cut down on toting heavy bags. One large suitcase is enough. Remember to carry a change of clothes in a small separate bag, just in case the big one is lost. — MARILYN

DEAR MARILYN — With vacation season just around the corner, your timely travel tips are just what Polly ordered! If I may add one note: also be sure to keep any necessary medications with you instead of packing them in your suitcase. If your checked bags get lost, you could be facing a medical emergency if you don't have items such as insulin, blood pressure medication and so on at hand. Your helpful Pointer earns you the Pointer of the Week award, a copy of my book "Polly's Pointers: 1081 Helpful Household Hints for Making Everything Last Longer." Others who would like this book can order it for $6.50. Make check payable to POLLY'S POINTERS and send to POLLY'S POINTERS, Box 1216, Dept. 55, Cincinnati, OH 45201. — POLLY

Polly will send you a Polly Dollar ($1) if she uses your favorite Pointer, Peeve or Problem in her column. Write POLLY'S POINTERS in care of this newspaper.

Between the Covers

By DIANNE PIERSON
Librarian

Bestselling novels are featured this week on the New Book Shelf at the Deaf Smith County Library. "A Creed For The Third Millennium" by Colleen McCullough and The Class by Eric Segal are the novels featured this week.

"A Creed For The Millennium" is set in the United States in the not-too-distant future. It traces the progress of a truly good man from obscurity to worldwide fame. Dr. Joshua Christian's work as a clinical psychologist daily presents him with bitter tableaux of a people spiritually impoverished by too much change. Joshua's deep compassion and extraordinary personal magnetism have created a devout following among his patients, but he yearns to reach out and help on a much larger scale.

Dr. Judith Carriol, a brilliant senior official from the Department of the Environment, recognizes in Joshua the personification of her desire to influence the history of her country. Together they embark upon a crusade designed to regenerate the nation's morale by radically changing the outlook of its people. But always it is Judith who engineers, Joshua who must execute. With the skill that has made her one of the world's best-loved and most popular storytellers, Colleen McCullough has written an extraordinary novel of powerful emotional intensity. Its shattering climax will haunt readers long after the final page is turned.

"The Class" by Eric Segal is a very compelling novel. It is the saga of a generation and the moving story of five members of the Harvard class of 1958, and of the women with whom their lives are intertwined. From their first days on campus, we share the passions, laughter, burning ambitions, and the sacrifices they must make to achieve success. The five members of the 1958 Harvard class are: Danny Rossi, the musical prodigy, who risks all for Harvard; Ted Lambros, an outsider, who is obsessed to climb to the top of the Harvard academic ladder; Jason Gilbert, the Golden Boy, who learns he cannot ignore his Jewish background; George Keller, a refugee, who masters the power structure of his new country; and Andrew Elliot, who is haunted by three centuries of eminent Harvard forebearers. The five men and the women who share their destinies form an engrossing portrait of a generation. "The Class" is Eric Segal's greatest success. He is the author of the famed "Love Story."

Other new books available this week at the library are "Queenie" by Michael Korda, "Chapterhouse" by DUNE by Frank Herbert, and "SURELY YOUR'RE JOKING, MR. FEYMAN."

LIBRARY EVENTS: Thursday morning story hour - 10 a.m.

MRS. JOHN E. BARTON, JR.
...nee Michelle Lynn McNeely

Wedding vows spoken recently

Mr. and Mrs. Burke Inman's granddaughter, Michelle Lynn McNeely of Dallas, recently became the bride of John E. Barton, Jr., also of Dallas. The Rev. Bob Waters of A&M United Methodist Church in College Station performed the ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Sandra Lee Inman McNeely of Dallas and the bridegroom is the son of John E. Barton Sr. and Frances Moore, both of that city.

Wedding vows were exchanged in the home of Mrs. John C. McNeely of Bryan.

Kelley Marie Foster served as maid of honor and Tom Jenneman was best man.

The bride wore a cotton lace dress designed with a drop waistline. She carried a bridal bouquet of mixed spring flowers including lilies and roses.

A reception followed in the McNeely home.

The couple left for a wedding trip to Las Vegas, Nev.

The bride is a student at Southwestern University at Georgetown and the bridegroom graduated from a Dallas high school and is employed a general manager of Biff's Restaurant and Bar in Dallas.

Nuptials exchanged Saturday afternoon

Allison June Estrada and Eddie Abel Ramirez were married Saturday afternoon in Municipal Gardens in Lubbock. A pastor from Colgate Church of Christ in that city officiated.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Felix Gabriel Estrada of 100 Campbell St. and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Antonio Ramirez.

Wedding vows were spoken beneath a trellis arch with a carpet runner extending to it from the back of the terrace. Four columns, trimmed with various floral arrangements, decorated the garden.

Veronica Estrada served her sister as maid of honor and best man was Raymond Cervantez.

Bridesmaids were Sonia Estrada, Beck Cadenas, Loree Adams, Alma Torres, Susie Casas and Connie Ramirez.

Flower girl was Sandy Ramirez, daughter of Connie Ramirez, and ring bearer was Ricky Thomas, son of Mr. and Mrs. David Lay Thomas.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white wedding gown of bridal silk. It was designed with a Victorian neckline, fitted bodice, featuring lace appliques, and short bouffant sleeves extending to fitted lace sleeves. The full skirt, which fell to a chapel-length train, was scalloped at the hem and was decorated with matching lace appliques.

Her finger-tip net veil was attached to a crown of pearls and flowers and she wore a pearl necklace, matching pearl earrings and her engagement ring.

She carried a nosegay of mixed summer flowers with white ribbon streamers.

Attendants wore rainbow colored dresses and baby's breath in their hair.

A reception was held in the Travel Lodge reception room in Lubbock.

Martha Ortiz and Alma Torres served the cake and punch and coffee were poured by Sandra Thomas and Mary Helen Gomez.

The three-tiered rainbow colored bride's cake was decorated with colored flowers and was separated by a bell. A ladder trailed from the bottom layer.

The bride is employed at Lubbock Radiology Associates and the bridegroom is employed by Lorenzo Manufacturing.

DAR Chapter meets for closing luncheon

The closing luncheon of Eos Ciboleros Chapter, NSDAR, was held at the Hereford Country Club Saturday.

Mildred Drake gave the opening prayer and lunch was served.

Following the luncheon, Ruth Knox, Regent, called the meeting to order and led the opening ritual. Charlotte Clark led the Pledge of Allegiance; Allo Reeve, the American's Creed; and Violet Reinauer, the National Anthem.

The Regent welcomed members and special guests, including Gladys Short, an aunt of Carroll and Ruth Newsom; Brandy Norvell, granddaughter of Nell Norvell; Anna Messer, a guest of Charlotte Clark; Faye Holt and Connie McGill, special guests of Violet Reinauer; and Mary Lee Singer and Thalia Fulkerson, guests from Palo Duro Chapter, NSDAR, Tulia.

Leesa Clark read the President-General's Message; Kathryn Ruga gave the national defense report; Newsom gave a treasurer's report; and Ruth Fish read the correspondence.

The Regent made a few special comments concerning the membership and participation in chapter activities of one of the charter members, Lana Downing. Lana, Trent and the children are moving to Louisiana and Lana was presented with a farewell gift and best wishes from the members.

Violet Reinauer, Vice-Regent, introduced Mary Lee Singer of the Palo Duro Chapter of Tulia to bring a report on Continental Congress, held in Washington, D.C. April 15-19.

Singer was a voting delegate to the Congress and told of meetings, social activities, entertainment and tours enjoyed during the week.

Patricia Robinson, organizing regent of Los Ciboleros, gave a brief history of the 15 years the chapter has been organized. She reviewed the officers, special events and activities and called attention to the chapter scrapbook being displayed in the room. The members applauded Ruga for her work compiling and assembling this book for our 15th birthday.

Downing then conducted the installation of the officers for 1985-1987. The meeting adjourned.

Others present were Margaret Ann Durham, Margaret Bell, Leta Kaul, Sarah Lawson and Sue James.

RUGS OF INTRIGUE

Oriental rugs are always in fashion. No other addition to a home's decor incorporates as much color, individuality, myth and history. Oriental rugs may get their names from a geographical location (Bokhara), a nomadic tribe (Tekke), their pattern or style or their function (prayer). Whatever it is called, each rug is woven in the same way. The warp and weft, either wool or cotton, are strung on a loom. Brightly colored threads of wool or silk are knotted around the individual strands of the underlying grid to form the pile and establish the pattern. Once the knotting process is finished, the pile is sheared to a uniform height. Knot count per inch is not necessarily a particularly good criterion for judging value.

However, there are other criteria one can utilize to assess the quality of both oriental rugs and carpeting in general. The quality of the weave, dye and design are often indicative of the overall quality of a rug. Consult FINISHING TOUCHES. We have all the answers and enjoy coming up with solutions for the most difficult design questions. Call us at 364-8870 for an appointment or drop by anytime during the week at 501 E. Park Street between the hours of 9 to 5.

Although it does not affect their value, Orientals with strong geometric designs usually have a relatively low knot count.

Volunteers needed for marriage research project

LUBBOCK — Retired couples who have been married 30 or more years are being sought to participate in a Texas Tech University research project on long-term marriages.

Human Development and Family Studies Professor Jean Pearson Scott is conducting the study to determine the characteristics of long-term relationships in late life.

The study will attempt to identify factors that enhance the quality of close friendships and the quality of long-term marriage relationships and to determine self-perceived changes that occur in marriage and friendships over time.

Each couple will be asked to participate in a personal interview and complete a questionnaire. The time involved is approximately two hours.

"The interview will not delve into highly private matters," Scott said. "We don't want to put couples in an uncomfortable situation. All information will be kept confidential."

Each couple will receive $10 as a token of appreciation for the information, Scott said.

For more information or to volunteer for the study, call 742-3000.

Cost may be lowered for controlled blood pressure

Prolonging your life is one incentive for keeping high blood pressure under control, but here's another: you may be able to save money on your health and life insurance premiums.

The American Heart Association in Texas wants you to know that if you had uncontrolled high blood pressure when you applied for your insurance policy, you're probably paying a higher premium than you should. By proving your blood pressure is under control, you can ask for a review of your case and re-rate your policy.

Each insurance company has its own requirements, some requiring evidence of control for one year, others for two. Your agent can help you determine what your insurer requires.

High blood pressure occurs when the smallest arteries of the body become narrowed and the heart must pump harder to force the blood through.

High blood pressure—or hypertension, as it is sometimes called—is a major cause of heart attack and stroke. It significantly reduces life expectancy, and the higher the blood pressure, the greater the reduction in length of life.

Yale University's Marvin Moser, M.D., a veteran Heart Association volunteer, worked with others to survey major U.S. insurance companies. In a report to the Journal of the American Medical Association (JAMA), they reported that the dollars saved through insurance programs for controlled hypertensives can be substantial.

The study cited that a 35-year-old man with uncontrolled high blood pressure of "170 over 95" would pay a premium of approximately $847 annually for a $100,000 five-year-term life insurance policy. But the same man with normal or blood pressure under control would pay a premium of $410, a savings of $437.

In the case of a typical whole life policy, the same person with uncontrolled high blood pressure would pay 28 percent more than the "normal range" person.

These savings also apply to your health insurance plan. Many health insurance companies use a sliding scale—the greater the risk, the higher the premium. A 35-year-old person with high blood pressure of "150 over 95" typically pays 15 to 25 percent over the standard premium. And a person with "180 over 102" would pay an extra 75 to 100 percent.

The stance of the insurance industry on blood pressure control contains an important message, according to James M. Atkins, M.D., President of the American Heart Association in Texas.

"Insurance professionals have reviewed cases over many years. Based on the facts, they're willing to back, with millions of dollars, what the American Heart Association has taught for decades: a person with uncontrolled high blood pressure is at risk for stroke, heart attack, and other lethal diseases," Atkins said.

"But a person who keeps high blood pressure under control—provided that prior neglect hasn't permanently damaged any organs—can live as long and healthily as a normal person."

"People who have worked to control their high blood pressure deserve the same consideration as people who have normal blood pressure," Atkins said. "Like any other major purchase, we should approach buying insurance as careful consumers. Look for the insurer and the policy that will give the most credit for your efforts to become a healthier person."

Although not included in the JAMA study, employees in group health insurance plans can benefit financially if group members keep their blood pressure under control. Although this isn't a direct savings, it can be beneficial. It is based on the employer's past experience with the entire group—how much the insurer paid for claims in the past. When members keep their blood pressure under control, fewer will fall victim to heart attack and stroke, meaning that the employer may pay lower premiums in the future.

"People with high blood pressure need motivation to stay with their treatment," Atkins said. "As we identify incentives such as reduced rates for insurance, lifetime control can be somewhat easier."

For more information on controlling high blood pressure, please contact your local office of the American Heart Association, listed in the White Pages of your telephone directory.

Senator Bill Sarpalius Reports

AUSTIN — Not too long ago, a football coach was struggling through a particularly difficult spring training. One afternoon after practice, a sportswriter asked the coach if he could see the proverbial light at the end of the tunnel. "Yeah," the coach said in reply, "but I'm afraid it's an oncoming freight train."

We've reached that point in our legislative struggle to balance the budget. Only two weeks are left in the session, and the balancing effort has cleared numerous hurdles. Just a few points of contention are left between the House and Senate versions of the spending bill. We'll soon know whether we're seeing daylight or a headlight.

The budget passed last week by the Senate was far from a perfect piece of legislation, but it was an improvement over our previous efforts. The measure cut real spending for the next biennium, made sure no agency dies a needless death and begins federally mandated improvements in our prison and mental health/mental retardation systems.

For all those good deeds, the $36.8 billion price tag is still $200 million more than anticipated revenues. We would have preferred a budget that was within state means, but we don't serve on the Senate Finance Committee.

By raising a variety of state fees. Most were for obscure permits the state must issue. A few — like a slight increase in the driver's license fee — were for permits used by a majority of adult Texans.

By increasing the fees charged for these permits, the Legislature was letting the agencies that administer the programs know that it was time for the programs to pay for themselves. A fee for a permit should cover the cost of printing the permit, mailing it, etc. Your tax dollars no longer will be used to subsidize these programs.

A fee increase in the short term will help make the state budget balance insure there is no tax increase in the foreseeable future. In the long run, it serves an even more important purpose.

Cutting permits free of tax support should hasten the day again when Texas has budget surpluses. Maybe when those days return, continued responsible action by the Legislature will guarantee they never go away again.

As always, we'd like to hear from you about the fee increase or other issues. Please write us at P.O. Box 12068, Austin, TX, 78711.

Chemical warfare capability necessary

SAN ANGELO, Texas (AP) — The United States would have no defense against chemical warfare without its own arsenal of the weapons, according to U.S. Rep. Tom Loeffler.

"The Soviets will have us on our knees," Loeffler said. "We would have nothing to defend ourselves."

"If we have the capability, the Soviets are not as likely to use it, because they would know we could retaliate in the same way," the congressman told the San Angelo Standard-Times.

Loeffler, R-Hunt, was interviewed Friday night prior to addressing a banquet for graduating San Angelo Central High School seniors. He answered other questions on the defense budget and also affirmed he is moving closer to a candidacy in the 1986 Republican gubernatorial primary.

His comments on chemical warfare came in reference to actions taken by the U.S. Senate earlier Friday during debate on the 1986 defense budget.

The Senate bill includes $163 million to resume a U.S. nerve gas program which ended 17 years ago, a Reagan request Congress has refused the past three years.

Speaking in general terms about the defense budget, Loeffler said he supports the Senate version, which sets

Fiscal Year 1986 defense spending at 1985 levels with increases limited to the rate of inflation. The Senate bill represents a savings of $56 billion in federal expenditures.

The version reported out of the U.S. House Budget Committee offers $40 billion less in savings than the Senate, "so that means it doesn't go far enough," he said.

Commenting on his gubernatorial aspirations, Loeffler said, "My inclination is to go for it. At any rate, I am thinking about it in a positive way."

He has filed formal notice naming June Deeson of San Antonio as his campaign treasurer, and named Richard McBride "to direct further the exploratory efforts." McBride was campaign manager for U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm in 1984.

Loeffler has been traveling around Texas assessing reactions to his potential candidacy and "to date, the reaction has been extremely positive," he said.

He said he will make a decision "some time in the middle to latter part of the summer." But later, in responding to a question on the Education Reform Act of 1984, Loeffler said, "When I make my formal (candidacy) announcement, I will address the issues."

Miss Liberty on block in Mexico

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The Statue of Liberty is for sale — in Mexico.

Well, not the real Statue of Liberty that has stood in the mouth of New York harbor greeting immigrants to the United States for nearly 100 years, but a replica built for filming an American adventure film.

The filming of "Remo: The First Adventure," starring actors Fred Ward and Joel Grey and directed by Guy Hamilton, is over.

And those working on the movie now are wondering what to do with the 75-foot-high polyurethane foam and fiberglass model. It sits, torch held aloft, atop a dusty hill in the southern part of the city, facing its famed volcanoes Iztaccihuatl and Popocatepetl and attracting the curious up a dirt road leading to the site.

One idea for disposing of the Mexican imposter is to try to sell it to an amusement park in the United States to capture what the film's associate producer Judy Goldstein calls "statue fever," expected to break out next year when the real Miss Liberty celebrates her 100th anniversary.

If no one wants the fake, it may have to be destroyed.

"We don't want to destroy her," Ms. Goldstein said in a telephone interview from Hollywood, Calif. "No one can bear the thought of having to get rid of her."

Ms. Goldstein said the model is identical in scale to the 151-foot-high statue on Liberty Island, off the southern tip of Manhattan, but duplicates the original only from about the middle of the chest to the top of the torch.

"It's an exact replica," she said. "It's the only one that's ever been done to scale."

She said it cost about $500,000 to build but wouldn't say how much the producers would like to sell it for. She said a number of people, both in the United States and Mexico, have expressed interest in it but wouldn't identify them.

The model was designed by John Jensen. Planning began last August and the work was finished in March.

Filming of "Remo," scheduled to be released in October by Orion Pictures, included shots of the Statue of Liberty in New York.

But for the actors to do stunts in, on and around it, a replica had to be built.

To do so, the designers fashioned a wooden and pipe base, covered it with polyurethane foam and sculpted Miss Liberty's prominent features. The crown was built of wood.

The foam and wood were coated with fiberglass and painted a light green to match the oxidized color of the original. Searns, rivets and even stains under the nose were duplicated to match the real thing.

The model is complete in front but partially open in the back.

During filming, the designers also erected scaffolding to reproduce the web of aluminum scaffolding that has been put up during the $39 million restoration work on the original.

The producers insist filmgoers won't be able to spot the counterfeit Miss Liberty. "It's a perfect match," said Ms. Goldstein.

The film is produced by Larry Spiegel; its executive producer is Dick Clark.

An increasing number of American movies have been made in Mexico in recent years partly because the crash of the Mexican currency, the peso, in 1982 made production costs cheaper than in the United States. Those lower costs, though, have been eroded somewhat by double-digit inflation.

Among the recent movies filmed here were "Dune," "Romancing the Stone" and "The Falcon and the Snowman."

Crackdown nets arrest

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — A state senator's son was among more than 150 people arrested in what has become an annual end-of-school crackdown on drug peddlers, police said.

About 25 of the 181 people charged in felony and misdemeanor drug warrants still had not been arrested Friday night, according to city police spokesman Sgt. Hank DiMatteo.

One of those arrested was Richard Santiesteban, 19, son of state Sen. Tati Santiesteban, D-El Paso. The younger Santiesteban was charged with delivery of cocaine, DiMatteo said.

Also arrested and charged with two counts of possession of marijuana was Cody Poke, 18, an all-city running back from El Paso's Andrews High School, DiMatteo said.

Club meets for luncheon

Dawn Music Club members met for their final meeting of the club year Tuesday with a luncheon at the Hereford Country Club.

Special guests included Mrs. Joe Reinauer Sr., president of the First District Texas Federation of Music Clubs, Mrs. Don Cox and Mrs. J.B. Thompson, all of Hereford, and Marda Stribling of Lexington, Ky.

In the absence of Mrs. Gerald Parker, president, Mrs. Orval Galley, vice-president, presided at the meeting. A resume of the 1985-86 programs was given, the emphasis for the year being on Texas and Australian music and the Sesquicentennial.

Reports on the National Music Club Convention held in April in Wichita, Ks. were given by Mrs. J.B. Caraway, second vice-president of the Texas Federation of Music, and Mrs. Carl Wimberley, past district president and first district chairman of publicity. They went with Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Parker.

One of the highlights of the convention was the "Up, Up and Away" dinner sponsored by the Texas Federation of Music on Saturday evening, this being followed by an organ concert presented by Billy Nalle, artist in resident at Wichita, on the Wichita Wurlitzer which was in the former Times Square New York Paramount Theater when it opened in 1926. The organ is acknowledged to be one of the world's finest theater organs.

The following Sunday evening David Wehr, 1983 winner in piano competition of the National Federation of Music Clubs, was presented in concert. Another outstanding convention highlight reported was meeting people from all over the United States.

The club program for the meeting Tuesday was "The History of National Music Week" in which it was reported that this was begun by Charles Tremaine in 1924 and in 1959 the National Federation of Music Clubs became its permanent sponsor. This was presented by Mrs. Edgar Sowell.

Mrs. Galley led a discussion concerning "Crazy Lyrics" of the Gay Nineties music. Mrs. Sowell gave a musical reading of "Yes Sir, That's My Baby" with piano accompaniment by Wimberley.

Mrs. Bill Caraway led the group in singing with Galley, accompanist, the following musical numbers: "In the Good Old Summertime," "The Bird on Aunt Nellie's Hat," "Under the Bamboo Tree," "Everybody Works But Father", and the hymn of the month, "Come, Ye People, Rise and Sing."

Hostesses for the meeting were Mmes. John Stribling, Reece Stewart and Sowell. Among other members present was Mrs. H.V. McCabe.

Westway Extension Homemakers Club met last week. They had an excellent program I'd like to share with you. One of their Extension Homemaker Club members, Jeannette Ramey gave a program on "Genealogy." Genealogy is the third most popular hobby second only to stamps and coins. Jeannette stated your genealogy begins with you. One can't pick out a famous name they'd like to be kin to and work back. As a general rule, allow 25 to 30 years for a generation.

Your first question may probably be the same one I had - "Where do I start?" Ask the living kindred. Phone calls and personal visits work well. Get out the old pictures. Write names and dates while there is someone to remember them. Records used for genealogy include church records, fraternal lodges, landowners, military, marriage records, cemetery records, city and county records, gravestone inscriptions, and even telephone directories. Census records are also a source. If you're like me you thought that was confidential information. They privacy act protects census records for 70 years. The 1910 census records can become public now.

Jeannette gave an interesting program. I'm sure she would be glad to do one for your club. You might be interested in the local Genealogy Society. It meets the second Thursday of each month. However it will not start back meeting until September.
