Work to continue despite 13 strikes

By EDWARD MILLER AP Auto Writer

DETROIT (AP) - The United Auto Workers union struck 13 General Motors Corp. plants in nine states at midnight Friday in disputes over local issues, but said it would keep most of its workers on the job and continue bargaining on a national contract.

It was the first widespread walkout in 14 years against the world's largest manufacturer, and took 59,000 of the UAW's 350,000 GM workers off the job. The struck facilities were assembly plants in Van Nuys, Calif., Doraville, Ga., Linden, N.J., Arl-

At the Buick Division plant in Flint, Mich., 14,000 workers went out at midnight, said Fred Myers, president of UAW Local 599.

"They're whooping and hollering," Myers said. He estimated that about 1,000 workers were on the picket line shortly after the strike began.

A plant security guard at the Chevrolet Corvette assembly plant in

At San Jose Catholic Church

Large parish prompted assistant priest

When Father Joe Bixenman arrived at San Jose Parish in March of 1983 there were 300 families listed on the parish rolls.

Judging from the size of the congregations during the four masses he offered every weekend, Bixenman realized the parish was much larger than the records indicated. He began a push for registration, doubling then tripling the number of families accounted for. As of Sept. 1, there were 915 member families in the predominately Hispanic parish.

By KIMBERLY THOGMARTIN

Staff Writer

Once he established the true size of the parish, Bixenman began his plea for assistance. He felt another priest was needed to help him administer to the spiritual and physical needs of the congregation.

On July 1 that wish was granted. Father Joe Lindley, who had been serving in one of the seven Amarillo Catholic parishes, willingly made the transfer to Hereford. For the first time since it was organized as a mission of St. Anthony's in 1950, San Jose has two full-time priests. Despite the fact that he had not studied Spanish since high school and had some things to learn about Spanish traditions, Lindley said he has felt very welcome here, very accepted.

"They told me to just be myself," he remembered. "I immediately felt

While Lindley bones up on his Spanish, his couterpart takes up the slack. Bixenman is fluent in the language and offers three of the four weekend masses in Spanish. The priests also say a mass every evening at 8:00.

Bixenman said he had plenty of tasks to share with Lindley, everything from answering the telephone and writing letters to paying the bills and working on the parish census. The priests also teach classes, attend meetings, provide pre-marriage counseling and visit

Now that routine duties are not quite so difficult to keep up with, Bixenman said he can think about instituting some special programs he has had in the back of his mind. Topping the list is what he calls an "evangelization of members."

Bixenman said he wants the parish to "reach out to those who aren't coming to church, to bring them back home." He also sees needs among those who are actively participating, but have not thoroughly been taught the doctrines of the Catholic faith.

Having spent his entire career as a priest ministering to Spanish speaking Catholics, Bixenman possesses special appreciation for the people and their culture. His desire is for those who have grown up in the United States to "rediscover their cultural background. It's important for them to hold on to it."

Bixenman expressed regret that many of the children are not learning Spanish in the home. "They have a beautiful opportunity to know two languages, and they're losing it."

Situated just to the southeast of the San Jose Chapel, built in 1980, is the matching brick fellowship hall. Completed earlier this year, the building serves as a meeting place for the various church organizations and houses one or more wedding receptions nearly every weekend.

The structure was financed by accumulated savings, special collections, fund-raising activities and Jackie Presser of the Teamsters donated labor. Because so much of the work was done by the parishioners, the building was erected for about half the usual cost.

"No other church in this diocese has done anything like this," Bixenman proudly pointed out. Every inch of the building is paid for; in fact, most of the money came in before it was ever built.

An Amarillo native, he said he feels comfortable in Hereford and described the atmosphere as "relaxed." Lindley said he enjoys working with the Mexican people because they are "more open and don't hide

Industry sold to avoid pitfalls

DALLAS (AP) - Former Texas Gov. Bill Clements and his family agreed to sell the company Clements founded 37 years ago probably because they have tired of the ups and downs of the offshore oil drilling business, an industry analyst said.

Clements, chairman of Sedco Inc., and the company's directors agreed Friday to support a takeover bid by Schlumberger Ltd. that will offer more than $1 billion in cash and securities to Sedco Schlumberger, in turn, acquires the top firm in the offshore drilling field, said Kevin Simpson, an oil industry analyst for the New York investment firm of Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc.

"It's a sensible acquisition for sure," he said. Schlumberger, with headquarters in New York, provides geological services and contract drilling for the oil industry and makes semiconducters and other electronic equipment.

Analysts said the takeover was a surprise and could spawn other offers for Sedco or additional takeovers in the oil services industry. Simpson said Clements, who is expected to remain with the rest of his management team, was one of the attractions to Schlumberger.

Lucas hints at accomplice

GEORGETOWN (AP) - The Department of Public Safety is investigating a claim by condemned murderer Henry Lee Lucas that an unidentified truck driver was his accomplice on part of his killing

Authorities previously thought that Ottis Toole was Lucas' only accomplice during the spree that left about 170 people dead. Toole is on death row in Florida

Williamson County Sheriff Jim Boutwell said Friday that Lucas told him this week that "there was another man he had travelled

"But he was not able to give us a whole lot (of information). He said he was a cross-country truck driver, and that he liked to pick up young female hitchhikers and kill them. He could still be killing people," the sheriff said.

Lucas did not know the man's name, according to the sheriff. Texas Ranger Bob Prince said Lucas' statements about the previously unmentioned accomplice have not been corroborated. The information has been passed on to the DPS, which has been coordinating the investigations involving Lucas.

Soldiers getting fair shake

Three officers shot, one dead

SAN DIEGO (AP) - Three police officers were wounded, one fatally, in a barrage of gunfire late Friday night while patrolling near Balboa Park, said authorities who were searching for several assailants.

The dead officer, a 24-year-old woman who was not identified, died just before midnight Friday, 10 minutes after she was flown by helicopter to the University of San Diego Medical Center, said hospital spokeswoman Pat Jacoby.

A male officer was in serious condition and undergoing surgery at the medical center, said police Lt. Dave Spisak. Ms. Jacoby identified him as Timothy Roupp and said he had been shot in the face.

The third officer, who called in the report despite his wounds, was taken to Mercy Hospital. He was listed in stable condition with a left.

Pair sharpen attacks on style

Democratic challengers Walter Mondale and Geraldine Ferraro, gearing up for a face-to-face meeting with their opponents, have sharpened their attacks on Ronald Reagan, calling him a "cameo appearance" president suffering from "before the election amnesia" about his policies.

Mondale, Ms. Ferraro, Reagan and his Republican running mate, Vice President George Bush, will share the same platform tonight for the first time since the campaign began, at an awards dinner held in Washington by the National Italian American Foundation. Speeches by all four candidates are scheduled.

Using some of the toughest language in the campaign so far, Mondale and Ferraro on Friday blasted Reagan's policies on the environment, civil rights, arms control and education. But their harshest words were aimed at the style of Reagan's bid for re-election.

Mondale, in a speech at Washington University in St. Louis, accused Reagan of running a "happy talk campaign," refusing to give the answers America wants about the future of the country

"I am not sure which is worse, the arrogance of Mr. Reagan's isolation or his confidence that the American people will let him get away with it," Mondale said.

The Arlington plant was one of 13 struck by the UAW in selective strikes in nine states, taking 59,000 of the UAW's 350,000 GM workers off the job, officials said.

Larry Hartman, international UAW representative from Detroit, said management in Arlington was especially rigid in negotiations with the union and that led to the walkout here three hours before the normal shift ended.

He said little progress was made during the past two weeks.

"This is one of the plants furthest away from settlement," Hartman said. "Local management has taken a very rigid stance on local issues."

The local issues included more than 2,000 unsettled individual grievances, health and safety items and a dispute over what constitutes a normal work pace for employees, Hartman said.

John Childers, the president of Local 276, said the local first contacted the national union about the possibility of a local strike two weeks

As negotiations continued on the national and local levels, the word came at 11 p.m. A whistle blew inside the plant and

Childers, who was standing outside, said: "That's it. Tell them to come out."

Workers followed the orders and filed outside the plant, some shouting "Yea, union!" and honking horns as they left the parking lots on their way to union headquarters about three miles away.

Local 276 prepared for the strike throughout the day Friday, Childers said, readying picket signs and informing workers about benefits such as the $85 a week they will receive in strike benefits.

UAW President Owen Bieber and chief bargainer Donald Ephlin said in a joint statement shortly before 11 p.m. CDT that "the failure to reach agreements at the local level at some locations has made local strikes unavoidable at 13 GM facilities."

The statement said the union was "still making progress in some areas. However, we will continue the national negotiations and work without a new national agreement."

The other struck facilities were assembly plants in Van Nuys, Calif., Doraville, Ga., Linden, N.J., Wilmington, Del., Bowling Green, Ky., Shreveport, La., Wentzille, Mo., and five plants in Michigan.

In Arlington, white metal signs saying "UAW Local 276 On Strike" went up at each of six gates. Some picketers wore "Mondale-Ferraro" bumper stickers on their backs.

The UAW represents 350,000 workers at more than 130 GM plants in 27 states. Of the plants, only 29 are assembly plants, where finished cars are turned out.

Hearing closed on hazing death trio

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) - Texas A&M University officials met behind closed doors in a disciplinary hearing for three students who were present when a Corps of Cadets member who was forced to do rigorous exercises in high heat and humidity suffered a fatal heat stroke.

Officials would not disclose details of the meeting, saying only they had read the trio their rights and informed them of the charges against them by the university. "We're protecting their privacy,"

Bill Kibler, assistant director of student affairs, told reporters after the meeting. The three corps members who ap-

University officials have said Goodrich and his roommate, John McIntosh, both sophomore transfer students, were forced to run and do push-ups and sit-ups for almost an hour starting at 2:30 a.m. with temperatures and humitidy in the upper 70s.

Cuadra's attorney, Hank Paine of Bryan, graduated from Texas A&M in 1974 and has defended more than 20 students involved in two separate hazing incidents in the last two years.

Paine has said he doesn't expect indictments in the case.

"If they want to indict these kids, they ought to indict every football coach who ever lost a player," he said. Paine said the exercise was only intended to instill "conditioning and motivation" in underclassmen.

Other hearings are planned in the trio's case, but university officials refused to say when they would be scheduled.

If the students are found guilty of hazing, they have the right of appeal to a student-faculty board.

UAW President Owen Bieber and chief bargainer Donald Ephlin said in a joint statement in Detroit shortly before midnight that "the failure to reach agreements at the local level at some locations has made local strikes unavoidable at 13 GM facilities."

'Dying' tree blooming

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Bean, who live at 809 Country Club Drive, have discovered blossoms on one side of their apple tree.

Mrs. Bean reported that about a month ago the same side of the tree appeared to be dying, and they believed it had been affected by the weed killer 2,4-D. Now, she said Friday, the tree has become healthier and is producing blossoms.

Apple trees, incidentally, usually bloom only in the spring.

The farm problem

Both Democrats and Republicans have talked about the farm problem in the election campaigns this year and each party accuses the other of being insensitive to the needs and problems of farmers.

Neither party seems to have a clear cut solution to the problem.

One reason is that there is no general agreement among the farm organization that are supposedly advising members of Congress. The grain producers have one idea while the livestock producers have quite

An attempt has been made to identify specific areas of farm problems by the Southern Extension Policy Committee, composed of policy experts in the southeast U.S.

The primary concern seemed to be the need to make production controls more effective. In other words, these farm organizations realize that when farmers produce more than people can eat the price goes down.

Production controls on grain and cotton historically have been less than fully effective. When production controls were imposed, the diverted land has been used for growing crops that were not controlled.

When acreage is controlled, the least productive land is taken out of production and the remaining acres were farmed more intensely.

Voluntary programs have resulted in complying farmers reducing production while non-participants increased production.

The most effective kind of production controls involves mandatory marketing quotas where farmers can sell only so much grain regardless of how much they produce. Yet because it involves dictatorial controls, this has not proved very popular.

The farm organizations polled said that increasing farm exports would help the situation. yet recent history has shown that politics enters into the export of farm products and no farmer is able to predict what situation will trigger another embargo.

Since the 1930s the major tool of the government is support farm prices has been a government loan program whereby the government agrees to loan a certain price on stored grain. If the market drops below the loan price, farmers store the grain. If it continues below they let the government have it and the result has been some huge government stocks of grain upon which Uncle Sam pays storage costs.

Since 1973 the target price program has been the main method of supporting farm income. Through the program, participating farmers receive a direct payment from the government equal to the difference between the target price and the higher of the market price over a period of time.

These payments have not been popular as consumers regard them as a giveaway and farmers don't like the welfare connotation of them.

In general, producers and marketers and others agree that production must be reduced if the law of supply and demand is to operate and raise farm prices.

The trouble is that nobody in either political party has come up with a farm program that will restore farm prices and keep food buyers happy at the same time. We wonder if there ever will be such a solution. -The Perryton Herald

THE COMIC PATROL

Years ago I had a friend who was a highway patrolman in Oklahoma. He was kind enough to occasionally let me ride with him. I discovered some sound psychological truths in the process of these adventures.

To call them adventures is probably a misuse of the term. Highway patrol work is hours and hours of sheer boredom, interspersed with a few moments of sheer terror. I never did get in on any of the terror. We spent most of our time chasing speeding cars and drinking coffee. Highway patrolmen have cast iron stomachs. They can drink the worst coffee in the world and

They tend to get a little jaded over the years. They not only see it all, they hear it all. Every ticket produces another weird excuse. "I know I was speeding, officer, but I have to get home to see if the light goes off in the refrigerator when the door is closed."

The psychology I discovered is that while the officer is in pursuit they are preparing themselves for the ordeal of excuses. If they guess which excuse is to be used, the driver has no chance of escape. The officer has already worked up a mad about that excuse and the answer is a ticket.

I sometimes think if I could hit them with an excuse they do not expect, the dazzling effect will stun them into letting me go. So far this is just a theory. It has never worked. I was riding with a wild driver one night. He passed a car on a hill and almost ran over a highway patrol car.

When we were stopped, my friend began telling the patrolman how he had started to pass and the hill caught him in midpass. He said that he thought it would be safer to go on with the pass than to hit the brakes and pull back into line. The patrolman said, "If brakes were dangerous they would not put them on cars."

My patrolman friend and I chased a car with only one headlight. While the chase was on the patrolman began telling me how the conversation would go. He said, "The guy will ask 'What's wrong, officer?' I will say, 'You have a headlight out.' He will say, 'Is that so,' as if he had no idea about the problem. Then he will get out of the car to go look. When he sees the headlight is out he will bang on the fender of the car, as if jarring the thing will make the light come on again."

I am sure this particular driver is still mad at me and will never understand my lack of sympathy. When he said, "What's wrong, officer," I giggled. When he got out to look, I laughed. When he banged on the fender, I fell in the ditch and rolled.

The remarkable thing about the whole experience is that the patrolman did not crack a smile. He just grunted once and wrote the ticket. Those guys have a tough job. They deal with the best comedy in the world and can't laugh.

Bootleg Philosopher

Editor's note: The Bootleg Philosopher on his Deaf Smith County grass farm discusses rivers and politics approximately this week.

Dear editor:

At their conventions this past summer both the Republicans and the Democrats claimed they're "in the mainstream of American life."

I don't believe either party has given proper attention to that figure of speech. Anybody caught in any main stream or any of its tributaries would be wise to get out as fast as he can and be sure not to swallow any of the water. It might be a good idea also to immediately take typhoid and polio shots. Who'd want to swim in the Mississippi? Or the Hudson? Or, right there in Washington, the Potomac? Or most any river or creek anywhere else?

Anyway, if they'll get out of the main stream, dry off and take their shots, politicians ought to turn their thoughts to the deficit, which is now more than 175 billion dollars. And every day of the week, including Sundays, the government goes deeper in debt. The deficits run up in the last three years total more than all the deficits compiled since the nation

In the dense nighttime fog of northern Africa, Rick bids farewell to a tearful Elsa. "Here's looking at you, kid." Eventually, after his love's plane has disappeared into the heavy mist, Rick walks off with the lifesaving police chief. So ends a typical televised presentation of the 1942 film, "Casablanca."

Most everybody watching the classic, of course, know's Rick's character is portrayed by Humphrey Bogart and Ingrid Bergman plays the Norwegian heroine. Many recognize Claude Rains as the police chief and Peter Lorre and Sydney Greenstreet in earlier appearances. Only an ardent "Casablanca" fan, however, would likely know any of the other actors' names.

Unfortunately, the scene at the airport does not mark the end of the movie. As is the case with most feature films - especially older ones shown on television, the closing credits are omitted. That seems an irritating practice to those of us who consider ourselves movie buffs but were not around when some of these marvelous films were made.

The need for constant action and split-second cuts to advertisements has probably prompted credits' editing. Having minute names designed for theater viewing - slowly roll up a TV set's window is apparently deemed a boring and unnecessary maneuver by television executives.

Admittedly, watching credits is something many viewers cannot comfortably handle; reading names requires a little thinking. It should be an option, though, for those of us who have thoroughly consumed the rest of the movie and feel cheated when closing credits are not shown.

After all, attribution is unfailingly given to those who help put together news shows, documentaries, sitcoms and sporting events. Credits are also never edited from made-for-TV-movies, which are almost universally worse than any pre-1960 theater film appearing on the small screen.

So come on, television stations, pacify the reel viewers. As Rick might say, "I think it would be the start of a beautiful friendship."

Analysts see President Reagan ahead

AUSTIN (AP) -Democratic and Republican party leaders, along with some of the state's top political observers, say President Reagan is leading in Texas - but all warn that the presidential campaign is not over.

"I keep telling the reporters from the North that elections in Texas are settled in the last three weeks," said State Democratic Chairman Bob Slagle of Sherman.

"The polls look good, but I don't believe in polls," said Slagle's counterpart, Texas Republican Chairman George Strake of Houston.

There have been no published polls on the presidential race in Texas, but Slagle said some private campaign tallies indicate Reagan currently is running ahead of Democrat Walter Mondale in Texas by 12 to 13 percentage points.

The Texas Employment Commission is considering changes that should minimize language barrier problems at its offices, and is asking the citizens of Texas for suggestions about designing such a program.

A series of hearings is planned this month and next, with each meeting to begin at 7 p.m. to accomodate working Texans and special interest groups. Simultaneous interpretation will be provided at the hearings to allow the participation of Spanishspeaking persons who attend.

Recommendations the TEC is considering include the translation of agency forms and the selective distribution of those forms to areas with concentrations of Spanishspeaking residents; a hotline information system for remote areas where field offices are not located and the hiring of personnel who meet recently developed classification requirements for agency interpreters.

The meeting nearest to Panhandle residents will be in Lubbock at the Garden and Arts Center, 4215 University Drive, Sept. 27 at 7 p.m.

HOUSTON (AP) - Guns are enshrined in Texas' frontier history, revered in memories of the Confederacy, cowboys and cattle drives, and preserved in some of the most liberal gun laws in the nation.

Firearms are as fundamental to the Texas way of life as chili, longnecks and boots in about 70 percent of the state's households, by some expert estimates.

The frontier has passed and hunting now is a seasonal sport, not a matter of survival, but social scientists say guns remain a mark of manhood in Texas. Learning to shoot and then acquiring guns are, for many, maturity milestones as important as the first date, the first car and graduation.

"The same relationship exists between Texans and their guns and Texans and their cars," said Patrick Dalager, a Texas A&M professor of sociology.

There are no official statistics on general gun ownership in Texas because there is no requirement to register ordinary guns. Most of the numbers on firearms in the state are educated guesses.

But there are 1.2 million licnsed hunters in the state, one of the highest per capita in the nation. And, according to the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, Texas has enough registered machine guns for a small army - a total of 10,310, the most in the nation.

The state has more than 190,000 members of the National Rifle Association, second only to California, and Houston regularly hosts what is regarded as the nation's largest gun show.

"It would not surprise me at all if Texas led the nation in firearm ownership," said John Akins, a spokesman for the NRA Washington.

Guns are easy to get and keep in the Lone Star State. Most felons are forbidden to have the weapons, but for other Texans, firearms are as easily purchased as beer and cigarettes.

State law forbids the sale of guns to people who are under 18, intoxicated or known to be planning an illegal activity, but there is no waiting period or registration as required by many states.

Texas' only major firearms possession restrictions are on sawedoff shotguns and rifles, handguns, and machine guns, but even these prohibitions have exceptions.

Any adult Texan who is not a felon can own a handgun, but the law forbids him to carry it except when and ranch families. 'It doesn't make any sense for a 14-year-old to have a gun in Houston and yet they do," said Joe Feagin, a professor of sociology at the University of Texas. "We have a lot of values in this country that don't really fit any more. Those values last a long time and become part of our culture." Thousands upon thousands of such guns are left unused in closets for years, but the tradition often is passed on to sons and daughters, who are firearms. In Houston, for instance, all 15 commercial gun practice. ranges do a big business.

At a recent gun show, Houston Post reporter Glenn Lewis was able to routinely purchase the parts and instructions to assemble a machine gun. Lewis reporter he had to stand in line, waiting on others making the same purchase. No one asked for identification.

The weapon he purchased was the same type a gunman used in California to slaughter 21 people at a McDonald's restaurant.

Guns of all types in private ownership turn up as currency in the underworld, police say.

One study showed nine guns were stolen in burglaries for every one ever used to protect a home. These stolen guns often are used in other crimes or are sold into the under-

In Houston last year, according to police spokesman J.C. Mosier, firearms were used in 67.2 percent of all the city's homicides. In Dallas, homicide Lt. Ron Waldrop said 80 percent of all murders involved firearms.

Firearms also are the most popular weapon for suicides. Mosier said it is common for officers investigating a suicide to find on the body a receipt for the recent purchase, often the same day, of the death weapon and its ammunition.

And police officers confiscate guns by the thousands.

Some are taken during criminal investigations,)uc the vast majority are found in cars stopped for traffic violations or seized from people carrying them illegally.

"Any officer knows that Texans have the reputation as being more likely to have guns on them or in taught to shoot and to respect their cars than in most other states," Mosier said.

> Last year, Houston officers confiscated about 8,000 pistols. Many were returned by court order, but Mosier said about 3,000 are melted down annually by the police department, which sells them to a contractor who makes manhole covers.

Social scientists, however, say it is not the mere presence of guns, nor their easy acquistition, that makes them such a common element in crime. In fact, the precise relataokship between common gun ownership and the use of guns in crimes still is not well documented.

"It's a very complicated thing that isn't about to be explained as yet," said psychologist Ran Evans of the University of Houston.

Statistical studies often are contradictory or confusing. For instance, gun ownership is almost universal in some rural areas, yet the crime rates are highest in cities where guns are less common.

"In Tel Aviv, Israel, there are 25 automatic weapons per city block and yet there are few murders with guns. It's not part of their culture," said Dalager of A&M, an expert on domestic violence.

Dalager and other social scientists, however, say there is a increasingly frequent use of guns for crimes and murders in Texas. And they believe it will get worse.

But the guns are merely the tools of expression for significant social events, including the explosive population growth in Texas.

John C. Pollock, a New York sociologist who is an expert on violence in the U.S. and its causes, believes the rapid population increases in Texas create "the classic

condition for high crime rates" and the violent use of guns.

"Texas is not substantially different from some other states in the South in gun ownership," Pollock said. "What makes Texas different is dislocation of people. You have many, many new neighborhoods. I think Texas is headed toward a serious crossroads."

"Dislocation" is the phenomenon of hundreds of thousands of people moving into an area within a short period of time. These people suddenly are thrust among strangers, far from the familiar. The result is crime and violence, Pollock said.

The situation is aggravated when thousan-s.of the newcomers are from another culture, speaking another language, such as English-speaking Anglos moving into Spanishspeaking neighborhoods.

Crime rates generally drop in longestablished neighborhoods where most everybody knows everyone else, Pollock said. Strangers, he said, are more apt to rob or assault strangers.

Dalager says statistical studies also forecast that a major rise in Texas crime and violence is coming.

In 1972, there were 11.6 million people in Texas and 309,000 index crimes, the types in which guns often are used, he said. But in 1982, said Dalager, there were 15 million Texans and 962,000 index crimes.

By 1995, he said, there will be 24 million to 27 million in Texas - living mostly in the triangle formed by San Antonio, Houston and Dallas and the number of indexed crimes could reach 1.5 million.

"If it is bad news now," Dalager said, "it'll be even worse in the future."

Government matches people with horses

COLLINSVILLE, Texas (AP) -Glen Wilson balanced on the third rung of the red wood fence, mopped his dripping face and pointed into the herd of milling wild burros in the dusty pen below.

"That's it right there - no, that one. Wait. I think it's that one over there."

Finally, he clambered over the fence and joined Albert Hite in the pen, searching for just the right burro to take home. His choice - a dark, doe-eyed jenny with a white muzzle and belly — protested at being cut from the other burros and loaded into Wilson's cattle trailer. After all, only weeks before she'd been running wild in the deserts of Arizona.

Now, thanks to a federal adoption program for wild mustangs and burros, Wilson has a new "pet" to join the stallion and two mares he's already acquired through the program. In addition to its pet status, the burro will have the duty of helping tame the wild horses.

"I'll take it down and tie a wild horse to it to tame the horse," Wilson said. "The horse will drag that jenny till she gets tired. Then she'll sit down and that horse is through.

'My wife told me not to bring this one home," he joked. "She said we stallions had arrived from Nevada, didn't need another jackass on the place."

The adoption program began in 1973 as a humane method for disposing of excess animals removed from public lands. Because the animals are protected by the Wild Free-Roaming Horse and Burro Act of 1971 and have no natural predators to limit population growth, their numbers are increasing rapidly.

The program, administered by the Bureau of Land Management, allows the animals to be rounded up in their natural habitat, moved to distribution points around the United States and adopted by qualified people. According to BLM literature, more than 45,000 animals have been placed by the program to date.

Texas' only permanent adoption center is two miles west of Collinsville on FM 902, about 35 miles northeast of Denton. The center is operated by Albert Hite. During the "adoption season," it moves a fresh load of mustangs and burros about every three weeks from early summer to Thanksgiving, Hite said.

He recently celebrated the first anniversary of the center with a special adoption day that included free barbecue for all adopters. A new supply of more than 50 mares, colts and and by mid-morning, nearly half had been adopted.

"We have appointments up until 7 tonight. I'm afraid we're going to run out of animals," said Sharon Paden of the BLM office in Santa Fe, N.M.

Ms. Paden had traveled to Collinsville for the anniversary celebration and spent the day taking pictures of happy new adoptive "parents" and explaining to them their duties and obligations.

The cost of adopting a mare with colt, a single mare or stallion is $185, she said. The fee for adopting a burro is $110. That in no way compensates the government for rounding up the animals and transporting them, she explained, but about covers veterinary fees for shots, worming and Coggins tests for swamp fever that each animal must have before crossing state lines.

Each animal is also freezebranded on the neck with numbers that show the animal's age and place of origin.

Adopters must be legal residents of the United States, be of legal age, have no prior convictions for inhumane treatment of animals and have adequate facilities and means of transportation to provide humane care and proper treatment for a wild horse or burro.

Each person is limited to adopting four animals per year.

Donnie and Carol Smith came from Vivian, La., to browse among the mustangs at the center. They adopted a mare and colt recently at a temporary center in Longview, and while both agreed they wouldn't adopt more until their 10 acres were fenced, Mrs. Smith looked at the sturdy little mustangs with longing. "I could have got into quarter horse raising, but I chose mustangs," she said. "They're good, intelligent horses, and not everybody has $1,000 to buy a kid a registered horse. I plan to adopt as many as I can handle on our place."

Paul McClendon, who helps out at the center, proudly showed off his newly adopted little mustang. The horse, which had been running wild the previous week, nuzzled visitors and allowed McClendon to pick up all four feet without protest.

"This animal came in here Thursday wild. I put a halter on it and it nearly flipped. I tied it up and two hours later I started leading it. I've only worked with it about four hours altogether, and just look how gentle it is," he said. "'Course, I can't guarantee they'll all be that good."

The sentiments of some of the animals were apparent as they were

They didn't want to be in Collinsville; they didn't want to go wherever their new owners were taking them; and they weren't about to nuzzle anyone for attention. Hite and his cowboys paid no heed to the rowdy protests and loaded them

Hereford loses second straight

Rain continues to fall on Whitefaces

By DENNIS BALL Sports Editor

If Friday night's Palo Duro-Hereford High School football game had been a baseball contest, maybe the Herd would have had another chance.

Maybe the rains would have started early enough and been heavy enough for the game to have been postponed, and Palo Duro wouldn't have had the chance to put 21 unanswered points on the board. The game was football, though, and when it was over the Dons had handed

Hereford 'ts second straight 21-0 defeat.

Hereford 'ands at 0-2 for the season and 0-1 in District 3-5A play. Palo Duro moves into a first-place tie in league competition at 1-0 and 1-0-1

"Our offense improved 100 percent," Palo Duro coach Doug James said, "and our defense did a super job. I didn't think we could hold them without any points."

Part of the reason the Dons offense improved so much is because James on Monday had moved Richard Owens to the tailback slot from fullback. Owens made his coach look good by picking up 145 yards on just 17 carries.

"I've still got some more in me," Owens said after the ball game. 'They (the coaches) said I'd be faster at tailback."

Fast he was. Owens got Palo Duro's first score on a 72-yard rundown the left sideline. The play came on a third-and-two call from the Dons' 28.

"Because of their speed, after they broke through the line we just seemed to be arm-tackling and diving at their feet," Herd coach Jerry Taylor

Palo Duro scored twice on its speed by making long runs, the 72-yarder in the second period and a 45-yarder in the third by Gerry Smith. Ironically, the only pass the Dons completed was good for another score, a 45-yard pass-andrun play from quarterback Cal Hero to Smith in the fourth quarter.

"It depended on how the game was going, but I expected them (the Dons) to pass more than they did,"

assistant coach Gary Wilhelm said. "But of course, since they were blocking us really well, why not run?"

Junior Stefen Hacker started the ball game for Hereford at quarterback. Hacker couldn't seem to light a fire under his team, however, in the first half, and Mike Scott began the third quarter.

Scott had been injured a week earlier in the game against San Angelo Central.

"I felt like it was really important to get him in the game," Taylor said. "I thought maybe he could get us into the end zone. He's been doing everything he could to get ready to play tonight."

But Scott couldn't do much either to get the team motivated. The senior signal-caller completed the only pass he threw, but it was for no gain to Rodney Torres on secondand-eight in the third quarter.

Hacker was 0-for-5 with one interception.

Even though the first quarter was scoreless, Hereford failed to make a first down, while Palo Duro chewed up much of the clock, using 19 plays and making four first downs. Had not Torres intercepted a Hero pass in the end zone, the Dons may have gained momentum earlier with a quick six

"We picked up momentum after we scored our first touchdown," James said. "Scoring first may have been the key to the win."

On that first TD drive, what little there was of a drive, Palo Duro took the ball on its own 20 following a 51-yard punt by Hacker. Smith picked up seven yards on a sweep left, and Ernie Williams got one on a dive play. Owens took it from there for the 72-yard scoring play. Oscar Villarreal was good on the point-after try

The three-play scoring "march" came in the second possession of the second quarter for the Dons, the first ending in a missed 37-yard field goal attempt by Villarreal. The Herd looked like it might get something going immediately following the missed field goal, but runningback Alan Dudding slipped on a damp field just shy of a first down at the Herd's 29-yard line. He picked up four yards on the play.

Dudding finished the night with 46 yards on 12 rushes.

The next scoring play was on the Dons' initial possession of the second half. With a first-and-10 from the Hereford 45-yard line, Smith took a wingback sweep to paydirt. Villarreal again added the PAT.

Things were sour for the Whitefaces throughout the entire third quarter. Twenty-two total yards comprised Hereford's offense. And even a punt went awry for only one yard, out of bounds on the left sideline.

"Well, you know, Scott wasn't at full speed," James said. "I'm sure that hurt them some. The weather had to change both teams' game

plans some, too. "The wind especially changed

For the night, Palo Duro ran the ball 50 times at Hereford, picking up 333 rushing yards. James earlier in the week had said he would try to establish some consistency with the passing game, but showed only four attempts.

Individual rushing totals for Palo Duro listed the Dons with three players with at least 80 yards.

"Palo Duro has a good team," Taylor said. "There are some good individuals that contribute to that team effort, and tonight their individuals out-maneuvered and outpowered our individuals."

Hereford fumbled five times, losing only one. But the one the Whitefaces lost was a costly one, leading to Palo Duro's third TD and ending the Herd's hopes to get back into the game.

Scott pitched to his right to Vincent Brown from the Palo Duro 47, but the pitch wasn't handled and the Dons recovered on the Hereford 48-yard

Again it took three plays for Palo Duro to get into the end zone. The scoring play, a 45-yard pass to Smith from Hero, came with only 3:37 remaining in the game. The PAT was good, and the final score was on the board.

Hearns-Hutchings match not center-stage

By ED SCHUYLER JR. AP Sports

SAGINAW, Mich. (AP) - On a big day of team sports in Michigan, there stood Thomas Hearns alone.

Well, not alone. Fred Hutchings was on hand today to try and take the World Boxing Council super welterweight championshp from the Hit Man from Detroit in the first world title bout held in this city of 77,000 about 90 miles north of Detroit.

By placing the fight here, CBS, which was to televise the scheduled 12-rounder live, did not have to black out Hearns' hometown of Detroit, where the Tigers, with the best record in baseball and closing in on an American League playoff berth, were set to play Toronto.

The fight, scheduled to begin about 4:30 p.m. EDT, was to be part of CBS' Sports Saturday, which was to follow the network's national telecast of the Michigan-Washington football game at Ann Arbor.

The fight was blacked out here, and the local CBS affiliate was to follow the Michigan-Washington telecast with a telecast of the Michigan State-Notre Dame game at East Lansing.

Two football teams in the immediate area also were at home -Saginaw Valley against Hillsdale and Central Micigan vs. East Carolina.

So Hearns was not exactly center stage as he returned as a champin to the city where he fought three times, winning all by knockout, early in his

Dorsett tries to get Dallas untracked as Cowboys meet Eagles today in Irving

By DENNE H. FREEMAN AP

Sports Writer

IRVING, Texas (AP) - Going back to the 1983 season, it's been five games since Dallas running back Tony Dorsett has produced a 100-yard day but the Cowboys feel they can correct that problem Sunday against the Philadelpia Eagles.

"To have your running game going you really have to be coordinated," said Dallas Coach Tom Landry. "Everybody has to do their job.

"Right now Tony is running as well as he ever has run. He probably would have rushed for 100 yards easy if we hadn't fallen behind the (New York) Giants 21-0 last Sunday. We hope to pickup our running game,"

Dorsett rushed for 95 yards on 15 carries in that 28-7 loss and is just 85 yards away from becoming the sixth leading rusher in NFL history.

Dorsett has 8,512 career rushing yards, shy of Jim Taylor's 8,597.

In the past three Dallas Philadelphia games, Dorsett has been held to 92, 51 and 69 yards. He last gained more than 100 yards against the Eagles on Dec. 13, 1981 when he had 101 yards on 28 carries.

The Cowboys are 37-2 in games where Dorsett registers 100 yards or

"We've been doing a lot of shuffling in our offensive line but I believe things are settling down," said Dorsett. "We'll start running the bal pretty good."

Dallas and Philadelphia, each 1-1 collide Sunday at Texas Stadium in the Cowboys' home opener. The Cowboys are rated an eight point favorite with the oddsmakers in the p.m. CDT tilt.

The Eagles have a pretty good running back of their own in Wilbert

Mongtomery, who didn't play against Dallas last season because of

"Playing Dallas will always be something special to me," said Montgomery, who was a running back at Abilene Christian before the Eagles drafted him in the sixth round in

"That playoff game in 1980 was the highlight of my career." Montgomery beat the Cowboys for 194 yards rushing to ignite the Eagles to a 20-7 National Football Conference championship.

Muncie undergoes drug investigation

Press Writer

MIAMI (AP) - "It's over," said former All-Pro running back Chuck Muncie as his short stay with the Miami Dolphins ended in a cloud of drug-related controversy.

The nine-year National Football League veteran was referring to his hopes of joining the Dolphins, which were skuttled when he failed a urine test Friday. But he unwittingly might have been describing his NFL future as well.

Commissioner Pete Rozelle has ordered Muncie to undergo a complete drug evaluation, barring him from playing in the league "until successful completion of any prescribed

Miami Coach Don Shula said Muncie passed the orthopedic half of the physical, but failed the urine test. Muncie told reporters that traces of tetrahydrocannabinol, the active ingredient in marijuana, were discovered, though Shula refused to confirm or deny that.

walked out of the Dolphins' St. Thomas University camp dejectedly. "It's over," he said. "They said they found traces of THC." Muncie claimed the THC in his system had to be nearly 21/2 months old. He said he went through his latest drug rehabilitation program 78 days ago. Muncie also entered a drug and alcohol detoxification center twice during the off-season in 1982.

Because he flunked the physical, Muncie once again becomes a property of the San Diego Chargers, the team which traded him to Miami last Monday in exchange for a secondround draft choice in 1985. But Muncie won't be playing for the Chargers anytime soon.

The Dolphins had acquired Muncie Monday to fill the gap left when starting fullback Andra Franklin was knocked out for the season with a knee injury.

"He belongs to San Diego," Shula said. "And we are now again going to look around to see what's available."

Patriots-Seahawks clash heads slate

By DAVE GOLDBERG

AP Sports Writer The New England Patriots, who haven't looked like the up-andcoming team they were billed as at the start of the National Football League season, open at home Sunday against a team that has, the Seattle Seahawks.

For the Patriots, trounced last week by Miami, the team it has to beat in the AFC East, it's a key test.

New England Coach Ron Meyer calls the 2-0 Seahawks "on a par, if not better," than the Dolphins and linebacker Steve Nelson puts things in perspective:

'This is a big game. We've got three tough games in a row with Seattle and Washington and Miami. We have to come out from that with a couple of victories."

The patriots-Seahawks clash is one of 13 on Sunday.

Seattle, which made the playoffs for the first time has started off like it will repeat with ease. The Seahawks have beaten Cleveland 33-0 San Diego 31-17, leaving them tied for second in points scored and fiarris, without any preseason, stepped right in and picked up 46 yards rushing last week.

But, the Patriots, who have scored just seven points in the last six quarters after taking a 21-0 halftime lead in a 21-17 opening game win over Buffalo, are worried about their own offense. In last week's 28-7 loss to Miami, there were five turnovers, Steve Grogan was intercepted four times and the Patriots lost a fumble.

"We've got to throw the ball a lot better than we're doing now, and catch it. They're just too good," Meyer said. "We're a good rushing team. Right now we're not the greatest. We just aren't executing completely."

The Cowboys, trying to regain their traditional form after a 28-7 beating by the Giants last Sunday, will have an old friend in Irving, Texas, to greet the Eagles, Harold Carmichael, wearing the No. 17 he wore as Philadelphia's all-time leading receiver.

The 34-year-old Carmichael, sign-

To division crowns

Cubs, Padres move closer

By The Associated Press

Last year, the numbers for San Diego and Chicago were fourth and fifth as in places in the standings. Now, the numbers that matter are six and seven as in magic numbers for division titles.

The Padres defeated the Houston Astros 4-2 Friday night, while the Cubs downed the New York Mets 7-1 earlier in the day. That was two victories for the National League's firstplace clubs over the second-place teams.

In other NL games Friday, Los Angeles edged Cincinnati 6-5, San Francisco downed Atlanta 3-0, Philadelphia pounded Montreal 9-5 and Pittsburgh needed 12 innings to beat St. Louis 8-7.

"We needed a sweep to have any realistic chance," Mets Manager Dave Johnson said. "But until you're mathematically eliminated, stranger things have happened in the game.'

Things would have to be downright eerie for the Cubs to blow their first title since 1945 as any combination of seven Chicago victowbs nd New York losses will clinch the division.

For the Padres, the climb is a tad easier but there is a third team involved. Atlanta is tied with the Astros, 101/2 games behind San Diego. Any combination of six San Diego victories and losses by each of the second-place teams means the first-ever title for the Padres.

"We can handle six of the last 16 to win it," San Diego starter Eric Show said. "The sooner the better because we can give our starters a rest."

Padres Manager Dick Williams agrees that rest would be nice as the best-of-five playoffs approach.

"It's important that we clinch the division as soon as possible so we can give our regulars a few days rest and then play them a few innings near the end to get ready for the playoffs," Williams said.

Cubs Manager Jim Frey isn't worried about rest; he still has wrapping things up on his mind.

"We're all trying to be under control here until someone walks in and says 'you've won," Frey said.

What tore open the game for the Padres was a two-out, ninth-inning, pinch-hit double by Kurt Bevacqua. The winning hit almost wasn't as

Houston left fielder Jose Cruz apparently caught the ball before crashing into the wall and dropping

"I hit it hard enough for it to get out of any park in baseball," Bevacqua said. "I saw it disappear over Cruz' head but I heard everyone yelling so I stopped at second."

Jackson homer closes AL West race

By KEN RAPPOPORT AP Sports Writer

Thanks to a slump-busting home run by Reggie Jackson, the tightest division race in baseball is even tighter today.

"I look for someone to win the pennant on the last day of the season, and for the Halos to win it," Jackson said after his first homer since Aug. 12, a three-run job, helped the California Angels beat the Chicago White Sox 5-0 Friday night.

Gives cattlemen boost

Strong market brightens future

COLLEGE STATION - A strong season this fall. feeder cattle market this fall could brighten the livestock picture and give U.S. cattlemen a much-needed

"A number of factors point toward a much better fall market for feeders," pointed out Dr. Ed Uvacek, economist in livestock marketing with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System. "We should seeprices for 600 to 700-pound feeder cattle move about fed cattle prices. That could result in $80 to $90 feeder calf pricesa bullish signal to most cattlemen."

Uvacek said the following factors will likely bolster the feeder cattle market:

-The January 1 cattle inventory report showed 1 percent fewer beef cows and 2 percent fewer beef replacement heifers than a year ago, resulting in a 2 percent smaller calf crop for 1984.

-The PIK grain program and drought drove feed prices upward last year, thus boosting corn plantings this year. A large corn crop could lead to lower feed prices this fall and winter and cheaper feeding costs.

-Severe winter snows in the north and drought conditions in the south, particularly in Texas, have caused early marketings of feeder calves this year. The result should be light supplies coming to market in the more traditional feeder purchasing

-Continued economic gains suggest that the demand for fed beef will be healthier as fall approaches, and particularly on into 1985. That should stimulate additional interest in feeding cattle this winter.

-Reduced fed beef production this fall and winter is expected from the lower number of cattle on feed. This should allow fed cattle prices and feedlot profits to improve this fall, substantially helping the demand for feeder cattle.

Special emphasis needed

COLLEGE STATION - Special emphasis is needed to bring down deaths and serious injuries which occur in the unique environment of farms and ranches across Texas and the nation, said Dr. Gary S. Nelson, safety specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service and vice president for agriculture, Texas Safety Association.

Gov. Mark White has issued a proclamation declaring Sept. 16-22 as Farm and Ranch Safety Week in Texas. A statewide campaign to inform rural residents about accident prevention will be sponsored by the TSA, the extension service of the Texas A&M University System, Texas Farm Bureau, Future Farmers and Future Homemakers, and the Young Farmers of Texas.

"The rural work environment is unique in a number of ways," Nelson pointed out. "Each unit has its own hazard potential based on the type of heavy machinery used, topographical features and ground cover. In addition, the independent farmer or rancher does not have the benefit of structured safety training and safety guidelines that are present in the urban corporate environment."

Agriculture has the highest level of general stress among U.S. occupations, according to medical experts. That stressful environment includes uncertain weather conditions, disease and pest control, and fluctuating economic conditions, Nelson noted. In this stressful environment the farmer and rancher operates a variety of sophisticated machinery with moving parts. Stressful conditions that divert an operator's attention away from such machinery can contribute to tragic accidents.

"Individual farmer and ranchers can make a conscious effort to manage for safety and health for themselves and for their labor force. which often includes their families," Nelson said. "With the educational materials and expertise available from various rural-oriented organizations, they can devclop safety procedures and management to fit their own particular operations.

"While resources for safety are available, it is up to the individual farmer and rancher to tap those resources for thes afety and productivity of his own operations."

Accent on Agriculture

By DENNIS W. NEWTON Extension Agent

Sept. 16-22 has been designated by Gov. Mark White as Farm and Ranch Safety Week in Texas.

In an effort to cut down on the number of accidents associated with agriculture operations, farmers and ranchers are urged to use this week to evaluate the safety precautions used on individual farms and ranches.

Grain harvesting and storage operations are about to get into full swing in Deaf Smith County. With all the activity involved, safety precautions essential to an accident-free harvest season are often overlooked. Here are some safety pointers for grain operations: -Review carefully and follow

operating, maintenance and safety recommendations in instruction

-Make sure all workers are properly trained and competent.

-Use appropriate personal protective equipment, such as a hard hat or bump cap, safety shoes, hearing protectors and safety eyewear. In dusty conditions, use a filter respirator.

-Adjust your speed to ground and visibility conditions. Avoid obstacles, ditches, steep hills and other hazards that could cause overturns. When you feel tired, stop for rest and refreshments to restore

-Keep shields and guards in place when operating equipment.

-Keep children off of and away from equipment. Enforce the "no riders" rule.

-Stay clear of moving parts. Always disengage the PTO and turn

-Keep equipment in good working off the engine before unclogging, adjusting or servicing machinery.

-make certain portable elevators are stable. Lower them before moving, being especially wary of overhead power lines.

-Hazards of grain bins include oxygen deficiency and being buried by grain. Enter a grain storage bin only after all unloading equipment has been deactivated and locked out.

-If grain should bridge, break it down from outside the bin with a pole. Enter such a bin only with a life-line attached and 2 people standing by to help you out in case of a

Farmers harvesting huge fall corn crop

By DON KENDALL AP Farm surveys, was down 1.6 percent.
Writer "Much of the Corn Belt experienc-

WASHINGTON (AP) - A new production estimate by the Agriculture Department shows farmers are harvesting a bumper corn crop this fall, despite some deterioration in vields last month because of hot, dry weather in parts of the country.

The department's Crop Reporting Board said Wednesday that based on Sept. 1 surveys, the corn harvest is expected to produce 7.55 billion bushels, up 81 percent from the sharply reduced 1983 harvest.

A month ago, in the department's initial production forecast of this season, corn output was estimated at 7.67 billion bushels. The latest estimate, based on Sept. 1 field report. The record was 2.81 billion

ed very dry weather during August, but the July rainfall appears to have helped carry the crop," the report

In 1983, as a result of drought and the government's acreage prstimated at 2.03 billion bushels, is up 29 percent from last year. However, that was down 7 percent from the August forecast of 2.04 billion bushels. The record was 2.27 billion bushels in 1979.

The wheat harvest, which is virtually completed this year, was estimated at 2.57 billion bushels, up 6 percent from 1983 and 1.6 percent more than indicated in the August bushels in 1982. Cotton production was estimated as of Sept. 1 at 13.3 million bales, up 71 percent from last year's small harvest and 5.5 percent more than forecast last month. It would be the largest crop since 1981's 15.6 million

Despite the August deterioration in some areas, the corn harvest still is expected to be the fourth largest in U.S. history, exceeded by the record 1982 harvest of 8.24 billion bushels; the 1981 crop of 8.2 billion; and the 1979 harvest of 7.94 billion bushels.

President Reagan on Tuesday said the Soviet Union will be permitted to buy an additional 10 million metric tons of U.S. wheat and corn in 1984-85, raising the potential under a long-term sales agreement to 22 million tons. The pact had guaranteed Moscow the sale of 12 million tons until Reagan's announcement. A similar waiver was issued for 1983-84.

In a related report, the department said total Soviet grain output this year is expected to be 175 million tons, down five million tons from previous estimates. By comparison, the U.S. corn harvest by itself is expected to be about 192 million tons. A metric ton of 2,205 pounds is the equivalent of 39.4 bushels of corn or 36.7 bushels of wheat.

The September production report said farmers have about 71.1 million acres of corn for harvest this year, compared with 51.4 million acres in 1983, the smallest U.S. corn acreage in more than a century.

Corn and soybeans provide the main ingredients in feed used to produce the nation's beef, pork, poultry, eggs and milk. Larger production is expected to ease feed costs and encourage livestock production in the coming year, thus helping dampen further food price increases.

Food prices this year are expected to average about 4 percent higher than in 1983, when they gained 2.1 percent, the smallest annual gain in 16 years. The USDA has not issued a forecast for 1984.

Overall, the department's "all crops" production index as of Sept. 1 was reported unchanged from August at 110 percent of the base year of 1977. It sagged to a nine-year low of 87 percent in 1983 after rising to a record level of 118 percent in

Net farm income, which was a 12-year low of $16.1 billion in 1983, is expected to rebound to $29 billion to $33 billion this year, according to the latest USDA forecast. Most of the increase will be in the value of crop inventories, which were depleted severely in 1983.

According to the latest production report, 1984 corn yields are expected to average 106.3 bushels per acre, compared to 81 last year. The August estimate put yields at 107.9 bushels

Soybean yields were indicated at 30.3 bushels per acre against 25.3 last year and the August estimate of 30.5 bushels.

The average wheat yield was estimated at 38.8 bushels per acre, compared to 39.4 in 1983 and the August forecast of 38.2 bushels.

Cotton yields were estimated at 615 pounds per acre, compared to 506

Children, machinery don't always mix

COLLEGE STATION - "Boy Crushed Under Tractor," "Youngster Falls From Combine," "Farm Tractor Injures Child."

"The headlines point to the tragedy that can result when children and machinery mix," according to Gary Nelson, safety engineering specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service and vice president for agriculture, Texas Safety Association.

"In no other industry are family members, including children, exposed to the operation of complex mechanical equipment associated with such severe injury potential as in farming or ranching," Nelson said. "Excluded from even touring most manufacturing plants, young children often use farm equipment as a playground."

Children are strongly attracted to farm machinery, the specialist noted. They play with a tractor and machinery toys and delight in the chance to see the real thing in action. They also may plead fo a ride. Before relenting, machine operators must remember that every "joy" ride contains the potential for "tragedy."

Begin cutting firewood

COLLEGE STATION-It's not too early to cut firewood for next winter. Firewood cut now will be dry by the time cold weather rolls around, according to a forestry specialist.

"It takes as much as a year for split and stacked firewood to reach an 'air dry' condition," pointed out Dr. Michael Waltersheidt with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System. "This is when 20 percent of the wood's weight is water. However, four to six months storage will dry wood enough for use."

Walterscheidt suggested stacking the wood off the ground, in an open area to allow air circulation. Covering the wood pile to keep off the rain will speed up the drying process.

When cutting firewood, safety should be a primary consideration," Walterscheidt emphasized. "A chainsaw is probably the most dangerous piece of equipment most people efer handle. Chainsaws cause more than 30,000 accidents each year, mostly due to operator carelessness.'

The specialist suggested a copy of the extension service publication, "Safe Chainsaw Operation."

"If buying firewood, be sure you know what you're getting," Walterscheidt said. "First, ask if the wood is green or dry. Then, check on the amount and price. Firewood is often advertised for sale by the cord, but the seller usually means a 'face' cord."

WHITEFACE AVIATION CORP.

LOOKING FOR A GOOD ROTATION CROP FOR YOUR COTTON? Try wheat. A number of cotton producers who have tried wheat in rotation with their primary crop have noted the two work particularly well together. Wheat provides the needed organic matter for the soil, and helps in the control of nightshades. Cotton gives pernanent solution to the control of wild oats in wheat and tends to clean the land allowing for better wheat production Furthermore, transferring from a cotton crop to wheat is relatively easy. Usually, wheat is drilled directly into the cotton stubble. Th rheat, of course, won't make as well as it double-crop situation with both crops narvested within a single year's time. producers find it benefical to use grain rghum in the transition from wheat to cot seeding sorghum directly into the stubble

Out of love for our children, we must often say 'no' to them," Nelson

The risk of serious injury can be reduced through the use of a "NO RIDERS" policy. "No seat, no rider." Nelson stated. "If a rider must 'hang on,' then the risk is too high."

Two things should be kept in mind about farm machinery. First, to do its job, farm machinery must be designed to perform violent movements, the engineer pointed out. It is designed to cut, shred, crush, grab; compact, wrap and perform similar actions. Although major improvements have been made in machine guards, many danger areas must remain open for machines to do the job for which they are intended.

Second, farm machinery is dumbdumb in the sense that it can't tell the difference between a stem and a finger, a stalk and an arm, a job well done or the taking of a life, Nelson

So, what happens when children and machines come together?

Children fall from the operator's lap or lose their grip and fall under tractor wheels or into the path of trailing balers, shredders or other equipment. Children also may get caught in operating farmstead equipment, fall from farm buildings, or even play hide and seek in windrows or other crops being harvested.

Nelson pointed out that potential tragedies can be controlled through the strict policy of keeping kids away from farm machinery and work fields and enforcing the "NO RIDERS" rule.

Bay View Study Club social committee members have been researching the food that was served when the organization formed in 1909. These delicacies will be among the refreshments prepared for

Bay View Club members celebrate 75th anniversary

By SANDY PANKEY Lifestyles Editor

Essie Cardwell of Amarillo, a charter member of Bay View Study Club, will be honored at the club's 75th anniversary tea slated from 3 to 6 p.m. Thursday in the home of Mrs. James W. Witherspoon.

During the afternoon affair, refreshments will be served and guests are welcome to view an art exhibit on loan from the Canyon Art Gallery and other art work from the collection of Helen Langley, whose greatgrandfather was an early Texas artist.

According to the Canyon Art Gallery owner, Mary Elizabeth Cornette, one of the paintings to be exhibited at the Witherspoons' home is done by Raymond Thibesart entitled "L'Echardonneuse."

Anyone interested in the cultural and progressive development of the community is invited to attend the tea. Special invited guests include the governmental and educational entities as well as other study clubs in Hereford to continue the tradition of the purpose of the Bay View Study Club at its beginning. The purpose stated is "to promote the literary, cultural and progressive development" of the club and the community.

In the early pioneer days of Hereford, Mrs. B.S. Arnold felt the need for organized group meetings. She called on several ladies and in the fall of 1909 a group of women met and organized a study group known as Bay View Study Club.

Originating in the home of Essie Cardwell, the club then continued to meet in the club rooms of the County Courthouse.

While promoting few civic projects, the club has consistently cooperated and contributed to every worthwhile enterprise launched by other organizations.

In 1929, club members circulated a petition calling for an appropriation by the County Commissioners to set aside for the support of a county library. A special election was called and the commissioners were authorized by the people to levy a tax for the support of a county library.

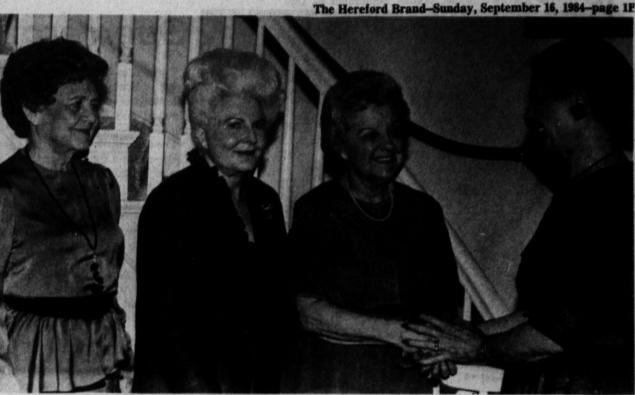

In 1932, the club erected a memorial George Washington monument and in the same year the club sponsored the organization of the Junior Bay View Club which now is known as Calliopian Study Club.

The women of the club have been contributing toward the culture and education in this area for 75 years. Beginning in 1970, the club conducted educational tours of the Deaf Smith County museum.

Among other contributions to the community was the establishment of a genealogy department in the Deaf Smith County Library.

On July 4, 1974, Bay View Study Club planned with the County Commissioners the dedication ceremonies of the new library and members of the club served as hostesses for its opening.

Bay View Study Club continues its support of the library, has always sponsored a Camp Fire group and contributes to the Empty Stocking Fund during Christmas holidays.

Elizabeth Witherspoon, second from left, will serve as hostess during the afternoon affair which will highlight the club's 75th anniverary. Refreshments will be served in the dining area and garden room of the

Gillentine, Amy Gililland and Charmayne Klett, seated.

Serving on the invitation committee are from left, Katherine Benefield, Ruth Kerr, Edna Gault and Clara Gillentine, chairman. These women were responsible for the tea invitations that were sent to governmental and educational organizations and other study clubs in Hereford.

An art exhibit loaned from the Canyon Art Gallery, which is owned by Mary Elizabeth Cornette, and other art from the collection of Helen Langley's greatgrandfather, will be on display during the tea. Pictured in front of the painting which is entitled, "L'Echardonneuse" by painter Raymond Thibesart, are from left, Meredith Wilcox, Nancy Josserand, Ruth McBride and Nancy Hayes.

It's been a while since I wrote a column for my mother. But here I am, one-year-old as of Sunday, Sept. 16. Mother says this year has really zipped by.

Let me tell you how we'll celebrate my birthday this weekend. We'll all fly down and spend Saturday in Rerrville at the Southwest Regaional Airshow, that is, if weather permits. It'll be my first airshow. Daddy doesn't want me to make it to my first birthday without seeing an airshow. However, I have flown several times the past year. My first plane trip was to Arkansas when I was five months old. On Labor Day weekend, I flew with my family on a little family trip to San Antonio. Guess you would call that my vacation this year. It was a most enjoyable trip for all.

On Sunday, my birthday, Mother says she'll bake me a cake (chocolate because my brothers and sister chose the flavor). And she'll decorate it as she's been into cake decorating for about 16 years. Then there'll be lots of pictures! Allison will take regular pictures. Dad will take slides and then my brothers will film me on the video tape machine.

Let me tell you what I'm doing. I decided to walk at 91/2 months of age and I've really been able to get around since. My legs may be short but most times I can go a lot faster than Mother. And I'm getting taller every day, now at 311/2 inches. Thats 101/2 inches this year. But I can pull lots of interesting things off the table, bar, cabinet, ironing board, and range. Last week I had a good time. Mother had put an egg on the range so it could get to room temperature for baking a pan of cornbread. By really stretching, I got the egg off the range. Mother didn't see me. I took it to the entry way, broke it, and smeared it everywhere. It was kinda different as far as feel. It really covered quite a large area of the entry. Then I tried to walk on the floor after I'd covered it with raw egg. Boy, was it slippery. I fell several times. A travel agent's first question should be 'What are you interested in doing?" You vacation dates and budget then have to be considered since hotel and airline rates can differ according to the season. The agent will help you choose a destination. Next comes the legwork. The agent is trained to make all the hotel, airline and rental car reservations; arrange sightseeing trips; and issue train or bus tickets. The agent will also provide you with visa and passport application forms, if required, sell you traveler's checks and advise you about travel insurance, order tickets for special events and provide background information on your destination. For all of this, you will be charged only for long-distance calls, telex or cable or other Wilbert B. Eichenberger will conduct the workshop entitled 'Possibility Principles For Growth." Registration is $35 per person. For further information concerning fees, contact the church at 364-2471 or 364-2574.

The five films feature Dr. Robert H. Schuller, senior pastor of the Crystal Cathedral of Garden Grove, Calif., and the internationally weekly televised "Hour of Power," as he lectures on the church campus during the Institute for Successful Church Leadership.

Churches of all denominations are invited to bring or send a delegation. The focus of the workshop is to share with all churches how the church can become most effective as a mission in the community by recruiting, training and mobilizing the laity.

Eichenberger, executive director of the institute, said that these are the same five lectures born out of Dr. Schuller's desire to share growth principles with neighboring churches which he has been given to thousands third-year medical student who complained about bossy, domineering, know-it-all nurses trying to run the show burned me up. He signed himself "A Witness." I, too, am "a witness"-and I'd like to give him an earful.

For years, nurses have been the eyes, ears and sometimes the minds for doctors. Nurses are with the patient from 8 to 12 hours a day-every day. The doctor writes an order. If he or she makes a mistake, the nurse is suppose to catch it. She (or he) is the last link in the long chain of medical events that can mean life or death.

Nurses DO make decisions, and often they are critical. But when things go well, it is the doctor who gets the credit, the glory and the money, even though he is at home asleep.-An R.N. In Michigan

DEAR MICH: You have a lot of support for your position. Read on:

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I have been an R.N. for 21 years. I can recall at least four instances when I stepped in at a crucial moment and prevented a phsycian from doing something I believed to be lifethreatening. One of those physicians was a third-year medical school student. He thanked me. But another one behaved disgracefully because he resented being caught in a mistake. I went over his head, knowing my job might be in jeopardy, but I knew the orders he had given were wrong. That physician avoided me like poison ivy forever after-but I felt good about what I had done. That's what nursing is all about.-Tulsa

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I worked as an R.N. in Decatur, Ill., for several years. Most of the doctors in this town think they can walk on water. I hear the same is true of the doctors in Springfield and Champaign. It is the fault of the patients that these doctors have such inflated opinions of themselves. Patients heap such praise and adoration on their doctors that they get swellheaded and impossible to work with. Of course, I won't sign my name. I need my job.-White Shoes That Have Been Stepped On Too Often

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Any doctor who feels threatened by a nurse should ask himself "why?" I treat all doctors according to the respect they

DEAR ANN LANDERS: That have earned. A doctor who refuses to order a medication because the nurse thought of it before he did can be hazardous to a patient's health. I've never had this problem with a female physician.-Warren, Ohio

> DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am an R.N. in the intensive care unit of a large hospital connected with Mayo's. I consider it my responsibility to refuse to carry out orders I feel are not in the best interest of the patient. I have done so on occasion and was thanked later. The doctors here are terrific.-Rochester, Minn.

DEAR ANN: As a first-year resident in a major teaching hospital I was disturbed by the letter from the third-year med student. I hope he realizes before he gets his M.D. that nurses, nurse's aides, ward clerks and people who mop the floors are part of his team, and should work together in the best interest of the pa-

When he drops his antagonistic attitude in favor of one of cooperation, he will find his job a lot easier. Nurses in general are overworked, underpaid and underappreciated.-In The Know In Houston

DEAR HOUSTON and all others who wrote: The mail has been awfully lopsided in favor of the nurses. If any physicians out there want to speak out, I'll give you equal time.

Red Cross Update

The Deaf Smith County Chapter of the American Red Cross is one of 3,000 chapters over the United States that make up the American Red Cross. It takes all of the Chapters working together to provide disaster assistance and help for military families. Together we form a network of assistance all over the United States.

One Chapter working by itself can not provide the help for so many people that all of us working together can. Many people critize the amount of our funds that go out of our county to help others, but service men and women and their families from our county are scattered all over the world and help is not denied to them at their bases and other chapters because they are from out of town. We also are a part of the International Red Cross.

The International Red Cross, born of a desire to bring assistance without discrimination to the wounded on the battlefield, tries to prevent alleviate human suffering wherever

Local resident offers new product

The Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce in conjunction with Wendel Clark, owner of Rocky Mountain Chocolate Factory, have designed a promotional gift item to be offered to local businesses and individuals who are interested.

The gift is a wooden box with the Hereford logo and name burned on, and filled with 11/2 pounds of chocolate "baby bull chips" made with caramels, pecan, and pure chocolate.

"These boxes are really good gifts for businesses to use as promotional items," Mike Carr, executive vice president of the Chamber of Commerce said. "We are also making them available to businesses who would like to see them in their stores."

Carr also emphasized that this promotion is just another way for the Chamber of Commerce to spread the name of Hereford.

Two best-sellers are featured this week at the Deaf Smith County Library. They are "Crescent City" by Belva Plain and "The Miracle" by Irving Wallace. The master storyteller and best-selling author of "Evergreen," "Random Winds," and "Eden Burning" has now written a novel that captures the fabulous world that was New Orleans in the mid-nineteenth century.

In "Crescent City," Belva Plain tells the story of a Jewish woman's struggle in the midst of the cataclysmic Civil War to reconcile her duties as a Southern wife and mother with her passion for a forbidden man and a forbidden cause.

Nothing in Miriam Raphael's life has prepared her to cope with the terrors of her present situation. Brought by her doting father from their ghetto in Germany to this beautiful city, Miriam has been raised in the lap of idle luxury. The Raphael household is full of nothing but the finest treasures from Europe. So marriage to Eugene Mendes, one of the city's rising stars, seems the perfect end to a charmed girlhood.

But Miriam's brother, David, and their childhood friend, Gabriel Carvalho, both sense al is not right in the Mendes household. All their suspicions are correct. For indeed Miriam, a proper matron and mother of twins, cannot bear her husband's slightest tough.

It is Andre Perrin, Miriam's handsome lover, who opens up for her the world of true romance. The undying devotion of David and Gabriel enable Miriam to find new strength as she becomes engulfed in the tragic wave of war. In Miriam, Belva Plain has created her most memorable heroine since "Evergreen's" Anna.

Also featured this week is "The Miracle" by Irving Wallace. "The Miracle" is Wallace's most ingenious and compelling work since "The Word." It is a sweeping novel about Lourdes and a miracle that holds the world enthralled. The word from the Vatican is that the Virgin Mary is returning to Lourdes this very year to perform another miracle cure. The announcement stuns people throughout the worldespecially six who believe their own lives can be saved or changed by the Thousands of people are drawn to the grotto where the Virgin Mary first appeared before the young peasant girl Bernadette Soubirous in 1858. "The Miracle" has everything we've come to expect of Irving Wallace at his best: rich, authentic detail, intricate, fast-paced plotting; suspense; and vividly realized characters.

Other novels by Irving Wallace are "The R Document," "The Prize" and "The Second Lady." Also available this week is "Space Careers" by Charles Sheffeld and Carol Rosin, "Barbara's World of Horses and Ponies" by Barbara Woodhouse, and "Grow More Nutritious Vegetables Without Soil" by James Taylor.

Teenager isn't discouraged over loss

TYLER, Texas (AP) — In the year since 19-year-old Carolyn Prater sued a state university on the grounds it discriminated against her fundamentalist Christian beliefs, a remarkable thing has happened to the Tyler teen-ager.

An awkward schoolgirl matured into a poised young woman who said she expects to be a lawyer some day.

Miss Prater said the public flap when the suit was filed against Stephen F. Austin State University last summer caused her to gain 30 pounds and develop acne.

Yet Miss Prater, who will be a sophomore at Tyler Junior College this fall, says she would do it again, despite the notoriety it created.

"The most important thing I learned is that standing up for what you believe isn't always easy, but you need to do it," she said.

The federal lawsuit ended Aug.26, 1983, when U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice denied Miss Prater's request to attend SFA classes in Nacogdoches pending the trial of the suit, which claimed the university's admission requirements are unconstitutional.

Miss Prater said she was denied equal protection under the law when the university rejected her because the church school she attended, Grace Community School, is not state-accredited.

Miss Prater's attorneys saw the rejection as a denial of state benefits and a violation of her freedom of religion. They said her "B" average at Grace Community and 830 score on the Scholastic Aptitude Test were proof enough she could handle col-

The Praters have repeatedly said the lawsuit was meant to be a test case - a stage on which a devout, working-class family and their friends would fight a battle over whether the state has the right to tell churches what to do.

Miss Prater's trouble getting into college was a possible forum for a growing controversy between the government and churches that fight state regulation of Christian educa-

No one expected Miss Prater would have to face a row of microphones, television lights and reporters in the dining room of the family's modest house in the Azalea District.

Looking back, Miss Prater said the publicity taught her the media can take quotes out of context and present only one side of an issue.

"I felt like everybody was looking face was splashed across the front

'Some people would look at me, and then look again. They'd say, 'I know I've seen you somewhere.' It made me feel paranoid," she said.

Robert Provan, general counsel for SFA, said the suit was significant in restrospect because "had Miss Prater prevailed, we would have been been forced to abandon our admission policy of demanding graduation from an accredited high school, and I'm not sure what policy we would have replaced it with.

"There is a very rapid growth of schools affiliated with Christian fundamentalists who believe any control by the state of their children's education is a violation of their religious beliefs," Provan said.

"The public interest is running head on into the movement of Christian fundamentalism. Since the state can't compel a youth to go to a public school, there are attempts to control private schools," Provan said.

University administrators defended accreditation. Provan called it "a self-improvement process," while Grace Community church leaders adamantly opposed it, even though they said the school complies with most Texas Education Agency standards and all local safety and health

The non-denominational Christian church founded a kindergartenthrough-12th grade school in 1972. Bible study and religion are part of the curriculum.

The choice to stay non-accredited is based on a scriptural belief that parents and the church are the only two institutions which should educate children, administrators

The court, however, upheld the state's claim that accreditation ensures a minimum level of teacher competence, course work, counseling and library materials. Justice said non-accredited schools are "unknown quantities."

"It may be that Grace Community is a superior secondary school. However, because no outside agency at me," she said of the days when her had made that assessment, Stephen F. Austin and its officers feel that they have no way of knowing whether Grace is a superior school or one which is inferior," Justice wrote. Grace Community ardently wants the school to remain an "unknown quantity" - at least to the state.

Miss Prater's father, Jack, who owns a home decorating business in Tyler, has sent his other three children to Grace Community. He said he would have pursued the case beyond the preliminary injunction hearing if money had not run out.

Neither he nor his wife, Patsy, regret filing the suit.

"The reason we did it was to make a point to the school (Stephen F. Austin) about how unfair they are. Some of the other universities make provisions for the children (graduates of non-accredited schools)," Mrs. Prater said.

Charles Ives center for arts Alicia Myers (MCA) to be opened

DANBURY, Conn. (AP) — A decade ago, 8,000 music fans sat in stifling heat at the old Danbury State Fair grounds for a concert of music by Charles Ives, a composer who never wanted to make his artistic work a business.

Leonard Bernstein conducted the American Symphony Orchestra, as part of a nationwide centenary celebration of the Pulitzer Prizewinning composer who died in 1954, and it brought home to those in Ives' hometown that he deserved a

On Sept. 29-30, the Charles Ives Center for the Arts will be unveiled during a two-day celebration of Danbury's centennial.

Located on 39 acres adjacent to Western Connecticut State University's West Side campus, the center has slowly taken shape: an octagonal covered bandstand growing out of a manmade pond facing a gentle slope that can seat more than 10,000 peo-

In keeping with Ives' work, Musical Fair America will showcase nearly every type of American music symphonies, string ensembles, ragtime, jazz, blues, gospel and barbershop quartets.

Performers on the main stage will include the Chick Corea Jazz Septet, the American Brass Quintet, the American Symphony Orchestra, the West Point Military Band and the Abyssinian Baptist Church Choir. Jugglers, mimes and break dancers will wind their way through the growd, creating a busy agglomeration of sound.

"This is quite in keeping with what Ives did with his music," said Don Weeden, chairman of the center's board of directors, in an interview. He took from those sounds of Danbury, New York, and incorporated them in his work. He took from ragtime, jazz, marches. He was very oriented toward the kinds of folk music that were out there." Listening to Ives' compositions is like standing at the center of a New England green and hearing to two marching bands - one coming from the left, the other from the right playing different tunes.

Ives was a church organist in New York, Connecticut and New Jersey and was in the insurance business from 1898-1930. His compositions received little recognition until 1939 then his second piano sonata, "Conord" (1909-15), was performed. His torks included orchestral suites, horal works, symphonies, sonatas and chamber music.

Gina Lollobrigida's career branching out

By BOB THOMAS Associated Press

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Gina Lollobrigida, as voluptuous at 56 as she was when she made her first movie in 1947, has taken on two new challenges: She's joining the cast of a nighttime soap opera and making her debut in a Broadway play. She was here recently to begin filming five segments of CBS's "Falcon's Crest," in which she turns up as the Italian half-sister of the venomous Angela Channing (Jane Wyman). Next, she begins rehearsals for Tennessee Williams' "The Rose Tattoo," in which she will tour for 12 weeks before opening in New York. On a day off from "Falcon Crest," she was interviewed in her suite at Beverly Garland's Howard Johnson Studio Center, where Lorimar Productions films the series.

The busty Lollo frame is as impressive as when she first starred in postwar Italy, and perhaps more so because she recently dropped 12 pounds - "eight for 'The Rose Tat- 'It's OK, Gina?"" too,' four for 'Falcon Crest," she

Her role in "Falcon Crest" came about very quickly she said. "I was in New York, and 'Rose Tatoo' was postponed - again. Lorimar called

"They changed the character and the situations to make it more suitable," she continued. "My character is Italian, and that's good. She and Angela have the same father. He went off to Italy, met a pretty girl and had another daughter. Naturally Angela is not happy to find a new sister and has to share her land and wealth with her." Miss Lollobrigida had been warned about the fast pace of televison filming, but she was still surprised. "I thought we were doing a rehearsal and the director says, 'That's a take," she said.

"I don't mind speed in movies. I Hotel in North Hollywood near CBS have always worked very hard. In the first picture I did with Frank Sinatra ('Never So Few'), they were rewriting the script every night. Frank said, 'If you want another take, just say so,' which was unusual for him.
