Concert featured at carnival

A free concert will highlight the annual Hereford Lions Club Carnival tonight, Friday and Saturday at 8 p.m. at Sugarland Mall.

"Texas Lace" will perform each night at the carnival, and the concerts are open to the public.

The group has performed through the South and Midwest since 1984 with special arrangements of country hits and popular songs from the 1950s and 1960s.

The carnival, moved this year to the Sugarland Mall parking lot, is the main fundraiser each year for the Lions Club, and proceeds benefit local and regional projects. On Wednesday, the club treated several visitors from Girlstown USA, one of the club's beneficiaries. The carnival will have a special matinee Saturday from 2-5 p.m. with door prizes to be given away to selected carnival-goers. A grand prize will be awarded Saturday night.

At Saturday's matinee, carnival-goers can ride all the rides of Pride of Texas Shows for $5 and two cans of food. All canned food will be donation to Operation Good Shepherd and San Jose Outreach.

Smithee files income tax ban

State Rep. John Smithee has filed a House joint resolution proposing a constitutional amendment to ban a state income tax unless a tax is approved by the state's voters.

"This is an idea whose time has come," said Smithee. "With all the talk of a state income tax, it is imperative that the voters have the final word."

A state income tax has been the subject of debate in recent months after it was proposed by Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock and endorsed by the Governor's Task Force on Revenue.

SMITHEE

Under the present constitutional provision, a state income tax could be enacted through a bill passing both houses of the legislature by a simple majority, and being signed by the governor.

Smithee's proposal would require that an income tax bill be approved not only by the legislature and the governor, but also submitted to the voters in a statewide referendum election. If the voters failed to approve such a tax, it would not take effect.

Smithee also proposed that any attempt to pass a state lottery should be tied to an income tax ban.

"State leaders keep telling us that a lottery is the only way to avoid a large tax increase," said Smithee. "I think that most of us voters would like that promise in writing."

The amendment proposed by Smithee would have to be passed by two-thirds of both houses of the legislature and be approved by the voters in the Nov. 5, 1991 election to be effective.

State tax hike likely

AUSTIN (AP) - Budget-writing lawmakers said a tax increase will probably be needed to balance the state budget when the Legislature returns in special session.

Meanwhile Wednesday, State Comptroller John Sharp's plan to reorganize state government continued to prompt howls of protest.

Sharp's proposals to merge state human service agencies, change higher education funding, and remove the state's minimum contribution to the teachers retirement system were all blasted by special interest groups.

Sharp lashed back in a news release praising Marc Stanley of Dallas, who as chairman of the Texas Public Finance Authority agreed with Sharp that the panel should be abolished and its duties transferred to the Texas Bond Review Board.

"Unlike some other bureaucrats, Marc is not spending time justifying his own existence. He's looking to improve state services," Sharp said.

Since January, budget experts have reported the state would fall $4.6 billion to $4.8 billion short of revenue to fund the current level of services during the 1992-93 budget period.

But lawmakers preparing for Monday's session say continuing the current level of services - in which Texas ranks near the bottom in many social service spending categories - is not enough.

Rep. Jim Rudd, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, said the revenue shortfall is more like $6 billion.

For instance, he said, the need for more prisons and a state employee pay raise ups the ante.

To bridge the widening gap, the Democrat from Brownfield said, "It wouldn't surprise me if you saw a quarter of a cent, or a half-cent, increase in the sales tax."

But Republican Party officials raised the stakes in the battle as Rep. John Smithee, R-Amarillo filed a proposed constitutional amendment to ban a state income tax.

Rudd said he believes the Legislature will adopt about $3 billion worth of cost-savings recommendations made by Comptroller Sharp.

Replacing the current business franchise tax with a tax on profits minus deductions for major expenses would produce another $1 billion. Add in the possibility of a state lottery - estimates range it would yield $450 million to $600 million - and lawmakers are still facing more than a billion-dollar hole, Rudd said.

Despite a blue-ribbon task force recommendation to establish a state income tax, legislative leaders concede passage would be political suicide. That leaves a sales tax increase as the likely avenue to more revenue.

Thomas' pot use dismissed

WASHINGTON (AP) - Supreme Court nominee Clarence Thomas "took several puffs" on a marijuana cigarette in college - and perhaps again in law school - but the White House says the matter is "inconsequential."

The conservative appeals court judge "believes it was a mistake and never repeated it," the White House said in a statement Wednesday night.

The statement said: "Judge Thomas took several puffs on a marijuana cigarette in college and perhaps once in law school."

"Judge Thomas fully disclosed this information on the FBI form and interview which were provided to the Senate Judiciary Committee in connection with the judge's nomination to the court of appeals," said the statement read over the telephone by White House spokeswoman Judy Smith.

"We view this matter as inconsequential," the statement said.

Ms. Smith said she could not immediately provide information beyond the statement but suggested that questions about dates and places might be cleared up today. Thomas is a graduate of Holy Cross College and Yale Law School.

The statement was prepared in response to a query by The Washington Post.

Another Supreme Court nominee in recent years was tripped up by marijuana smoking.

The Hereford Lions Club Carnival is being held this week on the Sugarland Mall parking lot. Lion members put in a lot of manhours on this project, which is the club's major fundraiser. Proceeds are returned to the community in a variety of Lions Club charitable activities.

Free concerts by "Texas Lace," a popular female trio, will be staged at the carnival the next three nights. Performances are scheduled to start about 8 p.m. each night.

The Hereford & Vicinity YMCA is holding its annual sustaining contribution campaign, and volunteer workers are seeking contributions and pledges to help fund the "Y" programs. Many businesses participate in the campaign even though they do not use the "Y" facilities themselves because they realize the organization is a real asset to the community.

"Y" officials report that daily use of the facilities ranges from 70 to 300 people, and youth programs will involve more than 1,500 registered participants during the year. Sustaining funds raised in the campaign will be used to supplement the cost of these youth programs. It's a worthwhile investment in our community!

Iraq's nuclear program 'larger than we thought' Hussein had enough uranium

WASHINGTON (AP) - International inspection teams have found that Iraq possessed enough enriched uranium to produce 20 to 40 nuclear weapons over a 10-year period, administration sources say.

"Call it a failure of intelligence, we just didn't know he had all this stuff," one administration official said.

The United Nations sent a team of inspectors to Iraq to ferret out the truth about Saddam Hussein's weapons of mass destruction. Under the Gulf War cease-fire agreement, Iraq is required to destroy all of its ballistic missiles as well as its nuclear, chemical and biological weaponry.

The inspectors briefing U.N. officials on Iraq's program told them that "given the amount of enriched uranium of all kinds that the Iraqis have, they could eventually make 20 to 40 nuclear weapons - but it would have taken them 10 years of uninterrupted work," said a senior administration official.

"That does not say that they, right now, today, could make 20 to 40 bombs," added the official, who spoke on condition of not being identified by name.

On a separate issue, sources said the administration is ready to announce its plans to participate in an allied rapid deployment force based in Turkey.

The announcement, which could come as early as Friday, is expected to pave the way for an expected mid-July withdrawal of the remaining U.S. forces in northern Iraq, said the sources, who also spoke on condition of anonymity.

Robert L. Gallucci, vice chairman of the U.N. Special Commission concerned with destroying Iraq's weapons of mass destruction, said commission members believe there is enough enriched uranium in Iraq to make "tens of nuclear weapons" if they used it carefully. He would not elaborate.

Witness defends actions of officer

FORT WORTH (AP) - An Explorer scout who was riding with the police officer at the time of the beating of a handcuffed prisoner says Fort Worth Police Chief Thomas Windham "jumped the gun" in criticizing the officer. Windham said Wednesday that he's not sure that the scout, Michael A. Tobey, is astute enough or mature enough to make such a judgment. Tobey, 20, took issue with Windham's assessment that it appeared, in the widely broadcast videotape, that Parnell had used unnecessary force. "That guy was scaring us," said Tobey, who helped Officer Edward

J. Parnell III subdue Ernest A. Anderson. "He was strong, unbelievably strong." "I've been a police officer longer than he's been alive. And I don't think he can pass judgment on what I do," said Windham. Tobey, an aspiring police officer, told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram in an interview that Anderson, 21, was attempting to squeeze out of Parnell's patrol car after kicking out a back window. Anderson said "Hit me in the head, kill me, I want to die," Tobey said. Tobey, 20, also said in a statement to police that Parnell acted properly when he restrained Anderson, who was struck at least 28 times with a baton. "I believe in my opinion, from being on the scene, that Officer Parnell did not use excessive force to restrain the suspect," Tobey said of the July 3 beating. Tobey said the beating began after Anderson kicked out the back side window and pushed himself halfway through. Parnell then stopped the car and tried to push Anderson back inside. "I do not remember how many times Officer Parnell struck the suspect, but I remember after every hit Officer Parnell instructed the suspect to get back inside the vehicle," Tobey said. "The suspect told us 'no' every time." In the statement, obtained by The Dallas Morning News, Tobey said Anderson repeatedly said he wanted to die and tried to dive from the window of the moving squad car into the traffic on Interstate 30. Tobey belongs to a Police Exploring program that lets young people interested in law enforcement careers experience police work. "I wouldn't go as far as to say he's a bad chief. I don't know the man that well. I just think he jumped the gun in what he's saying," Tobey said.

Leland was subject of FBI inquiries

WASHINGTON (AP) - The FBI investigated the late Rep. Mickey Leland after he testified in court about his ties to a black activist group and again when someone accused him of public corruption while serving in Congress, government files show. The FBI's first investigation of Leland began in 1971 after he testified in court about "police harassment of the black community" in Houston. The government, however, decided that while Leland had a "rooted allegiance" to the activist organization he was not a threat to national security. The second investigation, in 1987, was dropped after federal officials concluded the accusation was false. The information is in Leland's FBI file, obtained by The Associated Press through a filing under the Freedom of Information Act. Major portions of the furnished documents were blacked out. Leland was killed Aug. 7, 1989, when the plane in which he was traveling slammed into a remote mountain ravine in Ethiopia. Leland, as chairman of the House Select Committee on Hunger, was heading toward a refugee camp to focus attention on famine-stricken Sudan. Two years before his death, the Federal Bureau of Investigation had begun a preliminary inquiry into his activities after receiving an allegation of bribery, conflict of interest and public corruption. The person making the charge is not identified in the FBI file. Leland's response in an interview with the FBI in Houston is also blacked out. The FBI later discussed the case with the U.S. attorney's office, concluding that the allegation was false and no prosecution was warranted. The bureau began investigating Leland in 1971 after his ties to activist Carl Hampton were revealed following Hampton's killing by police during racial turbulence in Houston, according to the file. Leland, in his 20s at the time, was working as a pharmacy instructor at Texas Southern University when he became friends with Hampton, chairman of the People's Party 2. Leland went on to serve in the Texas Legislature in 1973 and was elected to Congress in 1978. Leland and Hampton had been involved in trying to establish a free health clinic in the black community in Houston, but Leland testified in court that it never got off the ground because of police harassment, according to the file. Hampton was 21 when he was killed July 27, 1970, by Houston police riflemen. Then-Houston Police Chief Herman Short said police opened fire only after they had been shot at from the street below. They had been on a church roof keeping watch over the People's Party 2 headquarters during a period of racial turbulence. Police identified Hampton and Roy B. Haile Jr. as gunmen who had fired at officers on the roof. Leland was called as a defense witness at Haile's trial. The FBI file says of Leland, "His statements on the witness stand concerning police harassment of the black community and (that) they felt they had to protect themselves by carrying weapons, are indicative of where his allegiance lies." In a July 1971 memo from the FBI's headquarters, the Houston FBI agent-in-charge was told to "make discreet inquiries" about Leland and to obtain background information to determine whether additional investigation was warranted. By that September, the FBI's Houston office said it believed Leland's name did not belong in the "security index," a list that no longer exists of people who were believed to be a threat to national security. However, the memo said that if Leland became "an active member of any black nationalist, militant organization, Houston will promptly take appropriate action." The file says Leland denied being a member of the People's Party 2, but it said "his testimony in support of Haile indicates his rooted allegiance." According to a newspaper account of Leland's testimony during Haile's trial, Leland said police were constantly harassing the black community and the "guys felt like they had to protect themselves" by carrying weapons. Leland said that after hearing about the shooting involving Hampton, he went to the area and witnessed numerous incidents of police brutality. He said he was slugger with a gun butt and charged with failure to move on, the account said. "He said a police officer, 'pointed a gun at my head and said 'Run, nigger, and when you run, I'm going to shoot you,'" the file said.

State funding needed to reduce escalating crisis in trauma care

AUSTIN (AP) - The state immediately must help fund the state's emergency medical care or risk an escalating crisis in the leading killer of young Texans, members of the Texas Board of Health said. Trauma care in Texas is on the verge of collapse, partly because the state's hospitals are losing an estimated $275 million each year treating trauma victims who can't pay for their care, health officials said Wednesday. "I'm afraid people think that this is the druggie, this is the knife and gun club victim, but really, it's anybody potentially. Nobody expects to have a car wreck who's going to work," said Dr. Ron Anderson, president of Parkland Hospital in Dallas and chairman of the Texas Board of Health. Dr. Robert Bonham of Dallas, chairman of the Texas Board of Health's Emergency and Disaster Committee, said: "We have a crisis in the state, and it's going to get worse." "It crosses all boundaries and it affects every citizen, because if you get in a major trauma problem, you're going to have to go someplace and get taken care of. And any day now, that may not be available," Bonham said. Trauma is the leading killer of Texans younger than 45 and the fourth leading cause of death for all ages, killing 30 Texans a day, said Dr. Robert MacLean, Acting Commissioner of Health. The health board Wednesday heard public comments on a series of rules for establishing Texas' first statewide trauma system, as mandated by the Legislature in 1989. Officials say that will help, but it won't solve the problem unless the state comes up with the money to help pay for uninsured patients. Otherwise, there is no incentive for private hospitals to take the overflow from public hospitals' trauma centers and lose money. "There is no business reason for these people to get into this. It's a community service, and it should be thought of as a utility for all of our society," Anderson said.

"We know what the problem is now. We know how to fix it. But we have to have funding to make the system work," Bonham said. Health officials have asked Gov. Ann Richards to allow the Legislature to consider providing trauma funding during the special session that begins Monday. The problem cannot wait until the next regular legislative session in 1993, Bonham said. Hermann Hospital in Houston has reduced the number of trauma patients it takes, Bonham said, leaving Ben Taub General Hospital as the main emergency provider for 3 million people. Parkland Hospital cares for two-thirds of Dallas' emergency patients, Anderson said. PATIENTS IN HOSPITAL

Now You're Cooking

BY KAY CRISMON
Staff Writer

Everyone has memories of the past and looking back we can see how we have grown in different areas. For Doris Jones some of her memories on cooking makes her the chef she is today.

"I remember the first thing I ever cooked," Doris said. "It was a coffee cake and instead of putting in one cup of brewed coffee I put in one cup of ground coffee. I was 10-years-old and didn't think of brewing the coffee. I was so proud of that cake. I'll never forget the look on my father's face when he took his first bite. It was something else.

"Who would have ever thought that later in life I would be cooking for ranch hands at the Herring Ranch in Stinnett. I canned and froze fresh vegetables, made jelly, raised, killed and plucked 80 chickens a year and still had time for my husband, Bob, and children, Pat, Marshall, and Cindy," she added.

"I remember when I was eight-months pregnant with our daughter, Linda, and some dignitaries from Japan came out to the ranch to film, 'The Best Part of the Golden Spread Morning.' That day I had 34 people for lunch. My mother was visiting and she helped me with the meal. We served roast, fried chicken, chicken fried steak, mashed potatoes, gravy, fresh green beans, homemade rolls, corn, beets, homemade pies and cakes, tea and coffee.

Doris explained that everyone ate in shifts. Being the hostess, she felt that she and her family should eat last. That is the way it had always been. The visitors from Japan insisted that she and her family eat first. They filmed the table of food and her family as they ate.

Later, after the film had been shown in Japan, she received letters and pictures from young boys who wanted to come to work on the ranch. They were impressed with the amount of food served that day.

"Whenever branding time rolled around and special events came up I would cook for large amounts of people," she said. "We were at the ranch for eight years and I guess I just got use to cooking. I love to cook so it really didn't bother me."

When their daughter, Pat, died they adopted her two children, Vanessa and Bobby. Vanessa was three-years-old and Bobby was a year old.

"Up until this last year we have always had children at home to cook for," she added. "I turned the children loose in the kitchen because I wanted them to learn to cook and they all turned out to be excellent cooks, even our son Marshall."

Bob and Doris Jones have lived in Hereford for 13 years. They are members of the Central Church of Christ. Bob is self-employed as a horse shoer.

Doris loves to sew and use to sew for the public. She paints T-shirts and enjoys different types of arts and crafts. She collects cook books and has over 40 books. Some of her books are from Louisiana (Cajun Cooking), Garvin County Oklahoma, Charleston, S.C., Mexico, and Texas. Included in her collection is a Norman Rockwell cookbook.

Bob is secretary-treasurer of Tri-State Professional Horse Shoers Association and they both enjoy being involved in special events and traveling to conventions.

Some favorite recipes that she enjoys cooking for her family are:

The most popular form of the card game bridge was thought up by the yachtman and railroad financier Harold Stirling Vanderbilt on a cruise (probably on the bridge) from Los Angeles to Havana in the mid-1920s.

A radio advertisement was once heard to offer: "Ladies and gentlemen, now you can have a bikini for a ridiculous figure."

Rangers primed for second half of season

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) - The Texas Rangers failed to get any respect at the All-Star game in Toronto, but their chance at redemption begins tonight against the Blue Jays.

AL West-leading Texas and AL East-leading Toronto meet in a four-game series at the Skydome, site of Tuesday night's All-Star Game.

With the limelight on Toronto, the Rangers never came out of the shadows.

Second baseman Julio Franco, the Most Valuable Player in last year's game, didn't even play this time. First baseman Rafael Palmeiro was intentionally walked his only time up, and right fielder Ruben Sierra struck out twice.

Franco, chosen behind Toronto's Roberto Alomar, was the only American League non-pitcher not to see action in the AL's 4-2 victory.

After the game, he appeared angry with AL manager Tony La Russa. "Wouldn't you be?" he said when asked if he was upset. "That's why

I came here, to play."

Alomar played the entire nine innings and went 0-for-4, but made several good plays in the field.

La Russa said the decision to keep Franco on the bench was not a slap at him. Instead, La Russa said it was designed to provide insurance for his squad and to help Franco recuperate from medical problems diagnosed as resulting from too much caffeine and hot weather.

"I kept him out in case of an emergency," La Russa said. "But I also thought it was a good way to give him a day off."

Palmeiro and Sierra also appeared upset with La Russa over his decision.

Rangers manager Bobby Valentine would like nothing more than for his three All-Stars to take out their frustrations at the plate.

The Rangers leave the All-Star break atop the AL West for the first time since 1983. But only 2 1/2 games separate the top five teams in the division.

Texas has won 10 of its last 13, all against the Oakland Athletics and California Angels, preseason picks to battle for the division title.

"We've come a long way," Nolan Ryan said after holding the Angels hitless for seven innings in the Rangers' last game, a 7-0 whitewash of California that moved the Rangers into first place by percentage points over the Minnesota Twins.

Texas leads the majors in hitting (.275) and runs (390). Their bats have made up for an unsteady bullpen and the loss of starting pitchers Bobby Witt and Scott Chiamparino to injuries.

The Rangers haven't won a pennant in their 19-year history and haven't been in a pennant race since 1986, when they finished five games behind California.

Some fresh faces have put them in the race.

Juan Gonzalez, in his second season, is hitting .303 with 12 homers and 54 RBIs. He would be the front-runner for Rookie of the Year honors had he not lost his first-year status when he piled up playing time after a late callup last season.

Mario Diaz, signed to fill a Class AAA roster, emerged from a crowded corps of shortstops to pad the Rangers' only weak spot in the lineup. His 13 RBIs and .287 average are a welcome addition, along with his reliable glove - his .993 fielding percentage is second-best among AL shortstops.

The defensive play of Ivan "Pudge" Rodriguez, the team's teen-age catcher, has been among the best in the majors. The staff ERA is 3.40 with Rodriguez catching, 4.28 with all other catchers.

Rodriguez was promoted for his defense. But he's equally impressive at the plate. Using all fields, he's hit in 14 of 16 games, amassing a .365 average.

Right-handed starter Jose Guzman was relegated to relief in spring training, then cut from the team. He agreed to a minor league contract and got his second chance when injuries depleted the Rangers' rotation.

He's kept the rotation afloat, winning four games, including a two-hitter. His 2.82 ERA is second only to Ryan's 2.71.

Sierra is having another MVP-like season with 12 homers, 58 RBIs and a .325 average that ranks third in the league.

After a slow start, Franco has raised his average to .318 with nine home runs and 40 RBIs.

Palmeiro is hitting .319 with 13 homers and 40 RBIs, and Steve Buechele is having a career year at the plate with 12 homers and 38 RBIs and at third base with a .991 fielding percentage.

Ryan has provided a season's worth of excitement, although he has just two victories since his May 1 no-batter against Toronto. The 44-year-old right-hander has missed three starts and taken himself out of two others because of strained shoulder muscles.

Opponents are hitting a league-low .162 off him.

"The key for me is to stay healthy," Ryan said after throwing seven hitless innings Sunday against California. "This is the best I've felt physically in quite a while."

Valenzuela gets new shot

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) - The California Angels are willing to give Fernando Valenzuela another chance to pitch in the majors. To earn it, he'll have to spend at least a month in the minors.

Valenzuela, waived last Friday by the Angels, agreed to a minor-league contract with California on Wednesday. Valenzuela's agent, Tony DeMarco, his attorney, Dick Moss, and Angels senior vice president Dan O'Brien came to terms on a deal that will send the left-hander to the minors for at least 30 days.

Club president Richard Brown was quoted as saying in today's editions of The Press-Enterprise in Riverside that: "The experiment continues."

The experiment began May 20, when the Angels signed Valenzuela nearly two months after the Dodgers released him. He performed well in three minor-league outings but was hit hard in a pair of starts with the Angels.

No records on horizon

NEW YORK (AP) - It might be a good idea for those who like records to check out Sergei Bubka's schedule for the rest of the summer.

For baseball fans, Rickey Henderson broke Lou Brock's all-time stolen base record on May 1 and that may be it in terms of biggies. There are some good seasons going, but nothing of the record-breaking variety.

For true optimists, Dodgers center fielder Brett Butler starts the second half with a 21-game hitting streak. The Los Angeles record is 31 by Willie Davis in 1969.

California's Dave Winfield is closing in on 400 career homers, but that's an achievement. And of course, Nolan Ryan breaks his own records almost every start.

There is one rather obscure record about to be broken. Cincinnati's Rob Dibble is 23-for-23 in save opportunities this season, tying John Franco's record. Of course, the Rolaids people only started to count save opportunities in 1988.

OK, so there may not be many significant records broken. But there's still some interesting batting races as the second half gets going tonight.

Baltimore shortstop Cal Ripken, the All-Star MVP, and San Diego outfielder Tony Gwynn have numbers that would make Joe DiMaggio proud. Ripken leads the American League with a .348 average and Gwynn paces the National League at .358.

Ripken is the first shortstop to lead either league in hitting at the All-Star break since Cleveland's Lou Boudreau hit .361 in 1947. Ripken's 18 homers are the most by a shortstop at the break in many seasons.

Even though the Orioles are going nowhere fast, Ripken could be the MVP.

"He's had that type of first half and he's on the top of a great career and he is seeing the ball so well," Oakland manager Tony La Russa said. "He's a great player, he's having a great year and he does great things."

Speaking of great years, Gwynn has 119 hits in 83 games. At his current pace, Gwynn would finish with a career-high 232 hits. He also leads the NL with eight triples and 35 multiple-hit games.

The best race in the second half might be for the home run title in the AL. Cecil Fielder and Jose Canseco both got hot heading into the break and share the major league lead with 21 home runs. Fielder leads with 65 RBIs and Canseco has 63.

Right behind Fielder and Canseco is red-hot Danny Tartabull of Kansas

City, who has 20 homers. Tartabull has homered in nine of his last 11 games, including three last Saturday against Oakland.

If Ripken doesn't win the MVP award, another strong possibility is Toronto's Joe Carter, who's hitting .302 with 19 homers and 58 RBIs in his first season with the first-place Blue Jays.

"I'm very happy to be here in Toronto but it was difficult for me and my family to leave San Diego after just one year there. But if I had to be traded somewhere this is the place to be traded to," he said.

"Every night, 50,000 fans come to the SkyDome and playing here is like playing in a country club. I can't wait to get to the ballpark."

Howard Johnson plays at somewhat-less-opulent Shea Stadium, but leads the NL with 19 homers and 63 RBIs. Johnson really isn't the type to be a home run king, and someone like George Bell (16) or Fred McGriff (16) might end up with the title. But it's obvious the NL has lost a little pop the last few years. Did you see the Home Run Derby?

Two of the league's most dangerous sluggers, Kevin Mitchell and Darryl Strawberry, have been hampered by injuries. With 14 homers, Mitchell could get right back in the race with a hot streak.

Official bocce courts run from 78 to 92 feet in length and 13 to 19 and one-half feet in width.

Aldine quarterback shot

HOUSTON (AP) - Jealousy was behind the wounding of the Texas schoolboy football star who quarterbacked his team to the Regular Class 5A state football championship last season, according to the victim's mother and friends.

Eric Gray, who quarterbacked Aldine last season, is recovering after being shot several times in the legs last weekend.

Gray was shot as he returned home from a meal at an area fast-food restaurant, his mother said.

"The only thing I can see or understand is there is a lot of jealousy involved," his mother, Valerie Gray said, declining to elaborate. "I don't really know what is going on."

Gray ran for 236 yards and two touchdowns to lead the Mustangs to a 27-10 victory over Arlington Lamar last Dec. 15 for the championship.

Gray rushed for 1,495 yards last year and passed for 1,099 yards for the Mustangs, who finished with a perfect 15-0 season. He was named to the All-Greater Houston team and is the second-team quarterback on Texas Football magazine's preseason Super Team.

The boy's mother said her son had five bullet wounds in his right leg and two holes in his left leg. He subsequently received a death threat, she said.

She said she hopes her son, who is not staying at the family home because of the death threat, can put the incident behind him.

"He's a little nervous and scared about what is going on," she said. "This has never happened to him before. But like I told him, after everything has calmed down, he still has to look at what he has to do. He's got to go on with his life and has to do for himself. I don't want him to be scared and make a U-turn and not go to school."

Gunplay touched Gray's life last year when a cousin, Marco Freeman, was killed in a drive-by shooting the night before the state championship game. He said after the game that he was dedicating his performance to his cousin's memory.

Two of Gray's teammates from last year's national and Texas Regular Class 5A state championship football team said Gray was not involved with drugs or gangs. They also said the shootings stemmed from jealousy.

At least one other Aldine athlete has been shot since Saturday. Shannon Mason, a freshman football player, was wounded Wednesday.

Aldine football coach Bill Smith said the shootings were random.

"I don't think it has anything to do with football. Eric didn't give me any indication about what (the motive) could have been except years ago he and this kid (who shot him) had a run-in."

Sanders not in Lions' camp

By The Associated Press

Barry Sanders wants a new contract. Wayne Fontes wants Sanders in camp. Neither got what he wanted.

Sanders did not show at the Silverdome on Wednesday for the Detroit Lions' first day of camp, mandatory for all players except for veteran offensive and defensive linemen and kickers who were with the team last year.

"The camp is a voluntary camp for some positions and mandatory for others," said Fontes, the Lions' head coach. "It was mandatory for all the skilled athletes to come in and Barry was one of them. I wanted him in here and for him not to be here surprises me."

Sanders, in the third year of a five-year, $5.9 million contract, is seeking a new pact. He will be fined $1,500 for every day of camp he misses.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I watched a TV talk show recently during which parents, professionals and teen-agers were discussing teen sex. A mother who adamantly advocated abstinence was shouted down by mothers who testified that they allowed their teens to have sex in their own homes when the parents were present.

I thought it might have been some kind of a sick joke, but no kidding, Ann, those mothers were actually encouraging their teens to have sex at home, because, as one woman put it, "We would rather know where they are and not have to pay chiropractor bills because they had sex in cramped cars." Another mother said, "Home is a safe place to have sex," as if you can't get AIDS, venereal disease or become pregnant if you do it at home.

My heart really ached for those children. One girl was only 14 and said she didn't see any reason to wait. She had been going with a boy for five whole months and was "ready." Why would mothers go on TV and proudly express such outrageous views? Please help me understand. I am a parent of teen-agers and this is totally incomprehensible. -- Southern Mom

DEAR SOUTHERN: Parents who permit their teen-age children to have sex at home have just plain given up. It was easier to give in than to force their children to adhere to standards.

In a sick sort of way, they figured they couldn't beat 'em, so they might as well join 'em.

The only way these kids can be helped is to see that they get adequate information to protect themselves against disease and pregnancy. As for standards of morality, I'm sorry to say, forget it. That train left a long time ago.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I've done at least $20,000 worth of business with a local printer. I've always paid my bills in installments, some as large as $1,000 a month.

Suddenly my printer told me my payments were too small and she had to have all her money in one lump from then on. I paid her off and took my printing elsewhere.

I've patronized the same dry cleaners for five years. They know me on sight and have never asked for identification when they cashed my checks. Suddenly, they are losing and damaging my clothes and acting as if it's not their fault.

This morning I drove into the service station where I've been a customer for three years. I asked the man to please check the pressure in a low tire. I was told that I'd have to buy gas in order to get "full service." When I said, "OK," the attendant continued to gripe and then the owner got into the act. I told them to forget it, that I'd go somewhere else. The attendant replied, "You want me to take the air back out of your tire?" Needless to say, they won't see me again.

I've even had a run-in with a doctor I've been seeing for six years. I walked out of his office after being kept waiting for an hour and a half. He's a good doctor, but I'm tired of being treated like a piece of meat.

Ann, what's wrong with these people? Why don't they value those of us who keep them in business? In these times of economic hardship, you'd think they would do everything possible to please their customers. Am I wrong to expect a little service and courtesy in exchange for my business? -- Fed Up in Dallas

DEAR DALLAS: It is no secret that the quality of service is not what it used to be. The way to make it better is to punish the slobs by refusing to put up with it. But before you leave, be sure to tell them why they lost you.

Planning a wedding? What's right? What's wrong? "The Ann Landers Guide for Brides" will relieve your anxiety. Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $3.65 (this includes postage and handling) to: Brides, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562. (In Canada, send $4.45.)

Ask Dr. Lamb

DEAR DR. LAMB: My 19-year-old daughter was treated for genital warts last year, and they seem to have been cleared up, according to her gynecologist. However, every time she has a Pap test done, it comes back as Class II. Therefore she has to go back about every six months. This seems excessive. Is this normal? Does this disease have any effect on being able to have a successful pregnancy in the future?

DEAR READER: Any female who has genital warts should be carefully followed thereafter. Not all, but some, forms of genital warts may cause cervical cancer. At least 95 percent of cervical cancer is related to one or more wart viruses, also called condyloma, moist warts and venereal warts. The viruses that cause these warts are called the human papilloma virus (HPV).

The classification of Pap tests has been changed, and it is sometimes difficult to be sure what a person means by Class II. In the old classification that meant atypical cells — the type that might be seen in various vaginal infections including trichomoniasis and yeast. It does not mean cancer, but it is not normal.

I have discussed the classification of Pap tests in my new Special Report 108, Pap Test and Early Cervical Cancer, which I am sending you. Others who want this report can send $3 with a long, stamped (52 cents), self-addressed envelope for it to THE HEALTH LETTER/108, P.O. Box 787, Gibbstown, NJ 08027-9908.

I would like to point out that a number of genital warts do not cause cervical cancer. Typing the virus, which is cumbersome and expensive, is the only way to identify if it is one of the types that is associated with cervical cancer.

No, neither your daughter's genital warts nor her Class II Pap test will cause her to be infertile. Even early cervical cancer, carcinoma-in-situ, can often be treated in such a way to not prevent a future pregnancy.

DEAR DR. LAMB: My internist stated that it was no longer necessary for me to get a Pap test since the incidence of cancer of the cervix in women over 70 years of age was negligible. He said he would not include it in my regular examination unless I specifically requested it. I have had a good and long relationship with my physician, but I would like your opinion also.

DEAR READER: Your doctor is probably trying to save you money. In the past there was a recommendation that the Pap test need not be done in women after age 65, but the sample studied to make that conclusion was far too small. Even if cervical cancer is slow-growing, the increased number of women who live to 80 and beyond increases the risk of invasive cancer if the precancerous changes are not detected early. It is now pretty much left to the discretion of the attending physician, but there is no age limit on doing annual Pap tests. If a woman has any increased risk factors, then annual Pap tests, or more often, are indicated regardless of age.

In the July 10, 1991, Furr's Supermarket circular, Dole blackberries and raspberries are advertised at 1.59 a pint. This is incorrect. Dole blackberries and raspberries are actually 1.59 for a 1/2 pint. We apologize for any inconvenience.

Local art talent, Jack Nunley, donated his picture to the Deaf Smith County Chapter of the American Cancer Society for their silent auction to be held Saturday during "The Taste of the Southwest." The event is the cancer society's annual fund raiser.

Home health care coverage can make recovery more comfortable.

Full recovery from a serious illness can take much longer than a stay in the hospital... especially if the patient is elderly. Recuperation at home can be more comfortable and secure. It can also cost your parents or your family a lot of money for which Medicare does not reimburse you.

That's why the CNA Insurance Companies, one of several major companies our independent agency represents, created a new Home Health Care Plan. It provides coverage your parents and your own family may need to help pay the costs of professional health services performed at home.

Contact our agency for a discussion that can make your whole family more comfortable about the future.
