HHS designated an 'island of safety'

Very strong penalties in force for gun, drug possession near school

By JOHN BROOKS
Managing Editor

If you're going to possess any type of drugs or carry some sort of gun, keep them away from Hereford High School.

If you are caught within 1,000 feet of HHS with any sort of gun or narcotics, you could be facing up to 25 years in a federal penitentiary with no probation offered.

HHS was officially designated as a drug-and-gun-free zone Friday at a special ceremony at the school auditorium. U.S. Attorney Marvin Collins of Dallas was joined by Jennifer Crabtree, director of Sen. Phil Gramm's Lubbock office, and Javier Gutierrez, president of the HHS Student Council, in unveiling the first drug-and-gun-free zone sign.

Congress passed an anti-drug law with some teeth in 1990. The law establishes gun-free and drug-free zones for 1,000 feet around all schools, playgrounds, youth centers, swimming pools and video arcade facilities.

The federal penalties range from 1 to 20 years for possession of drugs (including marijuana if over 5 ounces), with no probation for drug possession or distribution, to up to 25 years for possession of guns and drugs in a first offense, with no probation.

The federal law is harsher in many ways than a similar state law, which offers probation.

Collins, who made similar presentations at Pampa and Plainview on Thursday, said the law creates "islands of safety" in and around schools.

"President Bush and Sen. Gramm and others were so concerned about the problems with drugs and guns around our schools that we wanted everyone to understand clearly that drugs and guns are not allowed anywhere near or in a school," Collins told a group of about 50 HHS students. "We're concerned about your safety and you teachers' safety. We want to try to keep the drug scourge out of Hereford."

In a prepared statement, Collins said his office is serious about the new law.

"We will enforce the statute," Collins said. "We will vigorously prosecute violators in federal court, and those caught with drugs and guns within the zone will serve their sentences in federal prison where there is no parole. We take this statute very seriously."

Crabtree said the island of safety would allow students to focus on their education. She also urged the students, many of whom have made a drug-free pledge this year, to reinforce to younger children that "being drug-free is the norm. Let others know that HHS is the leader in this area."

Gutierrez reviewed safety and drug-resistance programs offered by the Student Council and other groups, including PALS and support organizations.

"We take it for granted that when we come to school we are in a safe environment," said Gutierrez. "We hope this program will help us become a safer environment."

"We appreciate legislators like Phil Gramm for helping us eradicate drugs and guns on campuses," said Charles Greenawalt, Hereford superintendent. "We all have an obligation to make this program work."

Door open for help

Patti Valdez and Michelle Hughes stand ready to serve anyone at the Hereford Outreach Office of the Rape Crisis/Domestic Violence Center.

Hughes ready to aid victims

By JOHN BROOKS
Managing Editor

A home-grown girl hopes to lead the Hereford Outreach Center of the Rape Crisis/Domestic Violence Center into more homes and lives.

It's not that Michelle Hughes thinks there will be an increase in cases of physical or sexual abuse.

"I just want people to know that we are here, ready to help them when they need help."

Hughes graduated West Texas State University in August with a BS degree in biology and psychology. At the same time, the director's post for the Hereford office was available.

"I knew the office was here from articles in the newspaper and other things I had seen, but I didn't really know anything about the program," Hughes said. "When I graduated here (from Hereford High in 1984) I wanted to pursue something in psychology or counseling, but I was encouraged to go into other areas. Plus, when you're 17 the prospect of eight more years of school isn't real enticing."

Hughes stuck to her guns a little, and thinks her original career ideas will pan out.

"I want to go back to school this summer and start working on my master's," she said. "That will really benefit the center if I further my education."

Her work has been cut out for her at the Hereford center. There were 382 victims who contacted the Hereford office in 1991; 304 of those were "new" victims who had never used the various services before. The center took 404 crisis calls and sheltered 59 women and children last year.

The center has two paid employees, Hughes and secretary Patti Valdez. It relies on 20 volunteers who logged 8,100 hours of service in Deaf Smith, Oldham, Parmer and Castro counties last year.

The volunteers have been through some tough times in the past few months.

"Many of the volunteers were unhappy after some events last summer, but I am very thankful they have stuck with it," Hughes said. "Our volunteers are very committed, and I think maybe we're stronger now because of what we have been through."

The volunteers have at least 30 hours of training coordinated by Hughes and JoAn Dwyer, executive

"I'm very thankful for the WHO program and the volunteers," Hughes said. "I believe WHO is paying dividends for us now and into the future."

Old tractors never die

Many find their way to James Voyles' farm for a complete restoration

By GEORGIA TYLER
Staff Writer

At the age of 11, James Voyles first drove a 1936 Model D John Deere tractor, beginning his love affair with the two-cylinder "Poppin' Johnny."

In the last few years, Voyles has indulged his interest by buying and restoring early models of the farm equipment.

Sitting in his front yard north of Hereford are four tractors that show the tender loving care required to put the antiques in mint condition. Another is in the barn ready to be re-assembled and a sixth is behind the barn waiting its turn.

The earliest tractors Voyles owns are a 1935 Model D and a 1936 Model B. He hasn't started work on the Model B, but the 1935 is among the four in the yard.

Tractors weren't the first farm implements built by the John Deere Company. The man whose name the firm bears moved from New England to the Midwest to escape creditors.

His first real success was a steel plow which farmers discovered would till the rich soil far better than the wooden instruments they had used.

Voyles attracts many visitors with his collection. He was on his barn roof one day when he thought the Hell's Angels were coming to see him.

As the company grew, a foray into tractors was initiated with purchase in 1918 of the company that had made Waterloo Boy tractors since 1914.

For the next 42 years, Deere built the basic two-cylinder models, called "Poppin' Johnnies" because of their distinctive sound. The little tractors and others of the time virtually eliminated the horse from farming.

Voyles estimates that he spends 250 hours on every tractor he restores, because of the care he takes. "I really don't know for sure how much time it takes because it depends on what all I have to do," he said.

(See VOYLES, Page 2A)

Ready to re-assemble

A 1939 Model H John Deere tractor being restored by James Voyles is down to the frame. He is ready to build the tractor back on the frame after a thorough cleaning and replacement of worn-out parts.

VOYLES

The first restoration he undertook was on a 1951 Model B that he bought from a neighbor. He was hooked.

"The further I got into it, the more I liked it," Voyles said. Most of the work Voyles can do himself but some must be farmed out.

"I have some done in a machine shop when I have to," he said. Parts are not hard to find, usually, because the company still has some. Many farm publications have classified ads with antique categories which offer some help.

When Voyles takes a tractor apart, he literally dismantles it, cleaning and sanding and sandblasting to remove old paint and rust. Some tractors require more heavy labor than others.

Although the engineering of the Poppin' Johnny is very simple and there are relatively few moving parts compared with today's tractors, the job is time-consuming.

"I like working with my hands, though," said Voyles. "And, I get a thrill when I get it going after working on it for two or three months."

Different model tractors performed differing farm chores, just as modern equipment is designed for certain tasks. Voyles said one model he owns probably was used more in the Midwest than one that was more efficient on the large acreages of Texas farms.

Some of the tractors were built with steel wheels but he has installed rubber tires on them. He said that even after rubber tires became a staple in the industry, steel made a return engagement in the 1940s.

"Because of World War II and the shortage of rubber, lots of the tractor wheels reverted to steel," he said.

A great deal of interest in antique tractors has developed in the Midwest, particularly in Nebraska and adjoining states.

As a matter of fact, he was startled by an incident involving a group from Nebraska.

"I was on the roof of my barn when I looked out and saw this big bunch of motorcycles go by," he related. "They went past, then suddenly turned around and came back."

Voyles quickly came down from the barn roof, got into his pickup and raced the short distance to his yard, alongside U.S. 385.

"By the time I got to the road, there were people all over the place, looking at my tractors. I wondered what kind of Hell's Angels they were," Voyles said.

He learned that the motorcyclists were anything but Hell's Angels. They were members of a Nebraska motorcycle club, touring around the country.

"They were really interested in my tractors," said Voyles, adding that hardly a day goes by that some traveler on the highway doesn't stop and inquire about his collection.

Born and brought up at Vega, Voyles has spent his life in agriculture, first working on farms as a youngster.

"Actually, I got into restoring tractors when I put most of my farm in CRP and sold my feedyard," said Voyles, who served 12 years as a Deaf Smith County Commissioner, for Precinct 4, and as a member of the Vega school board for 12 years before winning the Deaf Smith job.

Most of his tractors come from around here. He went to Avoca, near Abilene, to buy one. Voyles has restored all but one of the tractors he's bought.

"I bought one and had a chance to sell it and make a little, so I didn't keep it," he explained. Voyles doesn't seem to have any favorites among the six he has although the one sitting behind the barn seems to be calling him to get busy. He'll move it into the barn just as soon as he finishes the 1939 Model H that is now in pieces in the barn.

"All I lack is putting it all back together," said Voyles.

Besides the attention the tractors draw by themselves, holidays give Voyles and his wife, Esta, an opportunity to do something extra. "She thinks up things we can do and I do them," said Voyles, with a laugh. They have put Santa Claus on a wagonload of hay hooked up to a tractor. They've built Halloween displays and they've recognized many holidays with something special.

Whatever they do, the tractors are the stars of the show.

The 1935 Model D, 1945 Model D, 1951 Model B or 1948 Model M, with the bright green paint and yellow trim, give the traveler a bright spot beside the highway.

Suspect captured by police

Sometimes alleged criminals lead police in huge circles before the authorities get their man.

Early Saturday morning, a 17-year-old burglar led police through many circles in downtown Hereford.

Shortly after midnight Saturday, police received a silent alarm from Pickup Corner, at the corner of Main and U.S. Highway 60. On first inspection, officer Ronnie Lyons and Detective Richard Bacchus saw no damage or place of entry. Bacchus left the patrol car and waited at the back of the business while Lyons drove around to the front.

As Lyons turned the corner up the alley, he saw a man running to the west along the building. When the man saw Lyons, he began running alongside the patrol car. Lyons shouted, "Stop! Police!"

The man kept running, and running, and running.

With Lyons, in his patrol car, chasing the man, and Bacchus running after him, the alleged burglar took police up and down Second Street, across Main Street twice, down East Second and up S. Schley, and through parking areas of several businesses. Early in the chase, two other officers joined in the chase through Keyes Electric, Milburn Motors and Hereford State Bank parking lots. After the man almost ran into Lyons' car, Lyons began chasing the man on foot.

Lyons finally tackled the man in the middle of the 200 block of Schley.

Police arrested the man, charging him with commercial burglary and evading arrest.

Local Roundup

Nine arrested on Friday

Nine persons were arrested Friday by Hereford police, including a man, 17, for burglary of a building (see separate story); two women, 34 and 41, and a man, 23, for driving while intoxicated; two men, 43 and 44, for public intoxication; a man, 20, on warrants for failure to appear and minor in possession; and two men, 20 and 21, on warrants.

Reports included an incident at Hereford Junior High where two boys were apparently fighting and one struck his head on the ground causing injuries, but officials at the school declined assistance from authorities; theft in the 400 block of Ranger and in the 500 block of N. 25 Mile Ave.; credit card abuse in the 500 block of N. 25 Mile Ave.; two class A assaults in the 300 block of N. 25 Mile Ave.; burglary of a motor vehicle in the 700 block of Brevard; burglary of a business in the 100 block of W. First; and sexual assault of a child is under investigation.

Police issued 13 citations Friday and investigated three non-injury accidents and one accident with injuries.

Crimestoppers offers reward

A reward of up to $300 is being offered by Deaf Smith County Crimestoppers for information leading to an arrest and indictment in the Crime of the Week.

Hereford police are investigating three burglaries, believed to be related, which occurred in the past few days.

The first burglary was Jan. 24-25 at Hereford Buick-Pontiac-GMC-Chrysler at 142 N. Miles. Over $4,300 worth of items were taken, including jewelry, several gold Cadillac key chains and a Smith and Wesson pistol.

Another burglary occurred Jan. 26-27 at Hereford Frame and Axle in the 100 block of S. Avenue K. About $800 worth of tires were taken.

Later that night, burglars entered Warren Bros. Motor Company, 1400 E. Park. A radar detector and other items were taken from the business. If you have information about these or any other crimes, call the Clue Line at 364-2583. If your information leads to an arrest and indictment in the case, you will receive a cash reward of up to $300. You don't have to give your name; you may remain anonymous by using a code name or number.

County will meet Monday

Deaf Smith County Commissioners will meet in a called session Monday at 8:30 a.m. at the courthouse.

Bids for county insurance coverage for auto, commercial, fire and other policies will be opened.

City meets Monday night

Hereford city commissioners will meet at 7:30 p.m. Monday at Hereford City Hall.

The agenda includes award of bids for a truck chassis; costs, engineering plans and specifications for paving portions of Norton and Knight streets; and appointment of a representative for the local board for the Firefighters' Relief and Retirement Fund.

Man may have led officials

STINNETT, Texas (AP) — A Fritch man who escaped from a Georgia prison in 1975 and had started a new life with a wife and daughter over the past 17 years likely led authorities to his own front door.

James Sanders, 42, was arrested by FBI officials Jan. 24 about a month after he called the FBI, undecided about trying to clear his name.

Without identifying himself, Sanders dialed the FBI and asked hypothetical questions about a "friend" who Sanders said had escaped from prison 17 years ago.

"They could have traced the call," Sanders told the Amarillo Daily News from the Hutchinson County Jail Thursday. "They asked me if I was the one that made the call."

Two sentenced in check scheme

Two of four persons indicted last fall on organized criminal activity charges will serve five-year Texas Department of Criminal Justice terms, probated five years. Judge David Wesley Gulley pronounced sentences Thursday in 222nd District Court.

Deborah Lynn Provenge and Billy Dean Provenge entered guilty pleas to the charges, which grew out of what prosecutors allege was a check-cashing scheme.

Two other persons, Israel Galan and Rosie Enriquez Garcia, were indicted on the same charges by the grand jury last November. Their cases have not been heard in court.

In addition to the probated prison sentences both Deborah Provenge and Billy Provenge will be required to perform 160 hours of community service.

Restitution of $2,146.01 will be paid "joint and severally" by all defendants in the case.

Poppin' Johnny restored

Lewis recalls years in Austin

"No good deed ever goes unpunished" - House Speaker Gib Lewis.

By MIKE COCHRAN
Associated Press Writer

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) - The newcomer was at his seat on the floor of the Texas House of Representatives when the handwritten note arrived.

"Hello. I'm Mary Jane," it began. "I'm from your district and I'm a supporter and an admirer of yours. I'm up here in the gallery today, wearing a yellow dress. I would like to see you tonight."

"If you can meet me, just stand up and casually adjust your tie."

Turning ever so slightly, the freshman legislator spotted the yellow dress at once. It was worn by a voluptuous brunette. He arose slowly, grappling with his tie.

He did not see his colleagues eyeing him. But, too late, he did hear their laughter.

Texas House Speaker Gib Lewis and his buddies had struck again.

"Those were the fun days," says Lewis, 55. But no more. After 21 years in the Texas House, including an unprecedented five terms as speaker, the good times have diminished.

The Fort Worth Democrat announced in January he will not run again.

Following the decision, he sat down with The Associated Press and reminisced about two turbulent decades in Texas politics, including his prolonged conflict with Travis County District Attorney Ronnie Earle.

Lewis pleaded no contest to two misdemeanor charges after Travis County prosecutors in Austin dropped two ethics indictments that could have sent him to jail.

The plea bargaining arrangement ended with a $2,000 fine that Lewis says demonstrates the indictments were little more than political harassment.

The speaker dismissed with barnyard vernacular Earle's contention that he dropped the more serious charges only after Lewis agreed not to run again.

"What did you expect him to say?" Lewis asked rhetorically. "He was looking for a cover."

The legal dispute, he said, was just another example of Austin prosecutors and politicians groveling around in trivial pursuit while losing sight of the big picture.

"They're stomping on ants in the basement while the elephants are stampeding on the first floor," he grumbled.

But Earle defended his actions. He said Lewis was held accountable for wrongdoing, was driven from office, and the public benefitted by learning more about the behavior of lawmakers and lobbyists.

"The only clear winner in this situation is the public," Earle said.

Gibson D. "Gib" Lewis was elected to the Texas Legislature in 1970 and arrived in Austin as one of the state's great political scandals, Sharpstown, was heating up.

Right off, he saw House Speaker Gus Mutscher convicted of accepting a bribe. An omen, perhaps, though the verdict would be overturned on appeal.

Among the succession of speakers was Price Daniel Jr., a reformist who escaped town without indictment only to be killed by his second wife, a Dairy Queen waitress.

Then came Billy Clayton, a folksy, popular West Texas farm boy whose four-term reign as speaker was marred by another major scandal, Brillab.

Clayton was indicted but acquitted. Such was the checkered history of one of the state's most powerful offices in the early Eighties, a pivotal time in the Lewis saga. He was bored and burned out.

At a party in his Austin apartment, he broke the word to his staff.

"I told them this was my last term, that I was quitting," he recalled with a smile.

They argued against quitting, insisting instead that he seek the speaker's job. Lewis was reluctant. There were a dozen or so candidates and he was not among them.

"I'll go talk to some people," he conceded. "If one person tells me no, I'm not going to do it."

No one told him no. And Clayton himself insisted that he run.

"I think that's a hell of a good idea," Lewis quoted Clayton as saying.

"You're the only guy who can bring this thing together and keep control of it. Those other guys are gonna sit out there and cut each other up."

"You're kiddin'," Lewis replied.

"No, I'm serious as I can be..."

"Well, I'll think about it."

As he left the speaker's office, Lewis encountered a legislator from Breckenridge.

"Joe, I'm considering running for speaker. If I run, would you consider voting for me?" he wondered.

"I'll sign a pledge card for you right now on the spot," Joe replied.

As they say, the rest is history, albeit turbulent. He was elected speaker by a landslide in 1983, and his reign would be one of triumph, trauma and intermittent temper tantrums.

His colleagues returned him to office in 1985, 1987, 1989 and 1991.

Handsome and personable, Lewis' country charm, good-ole-boy philosophy, unswerving fairness and peacemaking ability won him friends and followers in and out of the legislature.

His sense of humor reduced tensions and soothed ruffled feathers.

It was Lewis who kept the system operating when Republican Gov. Bill Clements and Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, a Democrat, were at one another's throat, which was often.

Lewis embraced a philosophy as simple as it was sensible: "Lead, follow or get the hell out of the way."

It worked. Rarely did a governor, a state official or a fellow legislator criticize or even challenge his leadership, which sometimes was masterful and almost always shrewd.

In the often tense and tumultuous final days of every session, he quietly ordered air conditioners turned down to frosty.

"I'd tell 'em to keep it ice cold," Lewis chuckled. "If it's cold, people have a tendency not to get so mad or let their tempers get the best of them."

Although often at odds with the capital press corps, which he called the wolfpack, Lewis liked most of the reporters, and generally they liked him.

Of course, they criticized him constantly for his misdeeds, obsessively so, Lewis maintained. Time and again, news stories suggested he played fast and loose with ethics rules.

Reporters raised questions about the blindspots and the bookkeeping snafus and they wondered in print about his cozy relations with lobbyists.

The media labeled his verbal blunders "Gibberisms" or "Gibberish."

With a wry smile, Lewis conceded that his quaint use of the language seldom looked as "cute" in print as it sounded at the time.

"And I've been pretty outspoken over the years. I don't beat around the bush too much. To escape criticism, you say nothing, you do nothing and you are nothing."

"That's somewhat my attitude about it."

PROFESSIONAL NEGOTIATORS PART 1

When home buyers buy, and home sellers sell, would you say they share the same needs? Even if they are friends or relatives, sellers and buyers live in two completely different worlds, at least during the short period in which they are participants in a real estate transaction. Just take a look. Buyers want to pay the lowest price, sellers want the highest. Buyers want seller financing with a low down payment, sellers want cash for their home. The buyers don't want to pay closing costs, neither do the sellers. The buyers want the swing set in the yard and the gas barbecue grill on the patio, the sellers can be adamantly opposed. This is why a professional third party, can make an impartial difference. Next week we will explain why there is conflict in their positions.

Hereford lost another good citizen this week when Gene Brock lost his long battle with cancer. He "fought the good fight" much longer than most folks thought possible, and he did it with dignity and with determination.

We came to know Gene though his work with youngsters in the Key Club at high school, as well as those in the Hereford Satellite Work Training Center. Gene wanted to make sure that "his kids" were recognized for their successes and contributions to the community. He would bring press releases to the newspaper and set up photos when appropriate.

Gene, too, was recognized. He received the Key of Honor, the highest award given by Kiwanis International, for his work with Key Club youth. Among other awards, he was named Hereford's "Citizen of the Year" for 1986.

Gene was an outstanding teacher, preacher, and friend and advisor of youth. We'll miss him!

What are the top 10 scams in the United States? According to "Good Morning America", the top scams being inflicted on consumers are these:

*Post card you are a winner: gullible people send $9.95 or other amount to receive nothing in return.

*Loan brokers advertising advance fee loans.

*Fraudulent 900 number promotions.

*Precious metal investment schemes: gold, silver, etc.

*Toll card fraud using stolen numbers (obtained by people looking over shoulder, using binoculars, etc.)

*Headline grabbers: Jobs in Kuwait; ads taking advantage of current event emotions.

*Direct debit from checking accounts with stolen account codes used to transfer.

*Phony Yellow Pages invoices: many people do not check to see if invoice is legitimate.

*Phony credit card promotions: promise low interest, no payment, etc.

*Collectors items: gold coins, etc. Some of these scams find their way into classified pages of newspapers. The Brand usually rejects ads that do not appear legitimate, but we don't have the resources to check them all out. Borrowers should exercise caution before paying any advance fee to an unknown firm who claims they can find loans.

And, speaking of scams, businesses should be aware that a number of shysters already are taking advantage of the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) as a scare tactic to get business people to spend hundreds of dollars for "protection" against dangers that don't exist.

The Texas Press Association and the Better Business Bureau list these schemes to protect against:

1. Crisis seminars. You are contacted by a firm which implies that the ADA will "shut you down" unless you attend their expensive seminar or buy their expensive materials. Fact: Most of the ADA provisions are common sense and written in simple English. Many sources of advice are available free.

2. Crisis remodeling. You are approached with tales of disaster if you don't install expensive ramps, lowering equipment, etc. One firm explains you get a $5,000 tax credit for remodeling, and all of its "suggestions" seem to cost $4,999.

Fact: Some remodeling may be necessary, but perhaps not. One firm was told it had to lower all water fountains to make them wheelchair-accessible, but discovered that placing a paper cup dispenser nearby would comply. A drycleaner who worried about installing expensive ramps, learned that he could take care of disabled customers simply by providing curbside pickup and delivery.

3. ADA consultants. Some firms are pretending to be "certified", "approved", or "official" experts on the ADA. Fact: This is news to the U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission and the U.S. Department of Justice, neither of which "certify" anybody as ADA consultants.

This new law went into effect Jan. 26, 1992. Employers with 25 or more employees may not discriminate against qualified individuals with disabilities. The number drops to 15 employees after Jan. 26, 1994.

The Act also provides that people with disabilities must be provided access to public areas. The Act contains a list of specific businesses that are included, but a clause in the act infers that any building which is open to the public must comply.

Yes, we nerveless hounds in the media want to get to the real meat of the issues in this presidential campaign.

You all know what kind of jerks we are in the media. You'd better leave us alone, buddy. We know longer buy ink by the barrel. In order to meet mindless government regulations, a tanker truck comes to the paper and fills our 1,100-gallon tank! That's 20 barrels at a time that we buy, so watch your step!

First question: Does Bill Clinton have a thing for bleached blondes? C'mon governor, give us the low down. We've seen the old footage of Gennifer Flowers. Her hair used to be black. Now it's ash blonde. What about your wife. She's no Tammy Wynette, but does she stand by her Clairior more than her man? Let us know!

Second question: Have you really split the sheet with the Ku Klux Klan, Mr. David Duke?

Have you really burned your bridges, or do you still have a flaming cross to bear?

Third question: Is Pat Buchanan also Paul Bearer from the World Wrestling Federation?

Don't get me wrong. I don't watch the stuff all the time. Hulk Hogan made his first-ever appearance in Amarillo on Tuesday, but I didn't go. This guy Paul Bearer (manager for The Undertaker) looks like Pat Buchanan with a case of pancake makeup on his face.

Fourth question: What is a Tsongas?

Paul Tsongas used to be a senator from Massachusetts. I think maybe the wrong guy got beat up there. Can we trust a Democratic senator from Massachusetts?

Justice: most hated man in Texas?

By JACK KEEVER

Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) - As a result of a "steady procession of judicial thunderbolts," federal judge William Wayne Justice has been described as the most hated man in Texas.

But his biographer says Justice is hardly ever "outwardly combative," and Justice himself claims that he has never particularly liked controversy.

The nationally known judge and his major rulings are presented in a book by Frank Kemerer, a professor of education law and administration at the University of North Texas.

Justice, 71, had reservations about the proposed biography, Kemerer said, but mused, "I would like to leave a legacy."

Actually, the legacy was already in place.

By the mid-1980s, Kemerer noted, Justice had issued "comprehensive reform orders on statewide school desegregation, incarceration of juvenile delinquents in state institutions, the teaching of bilingual education in public schools, the operation of state prisons, and the care of institutionalized mentally retarded persons."

"In addition, he had been involved in landmark voter discrimination litigation and had ordered tuition-free public education for undocumented alien children."

Justice is "perhaps the single most influential agent for change in 20th century Texas," Kemerer said.

Justice attended the University of Texas law school, where he was in the same class with U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, and Fort Worth lawyer Tom Law. Students said they knew their class was destined for greatness with both Law and Justice in their ranks.

In June 1942, Justice enlisted in the Army. As a result of seeing how differently officers and enlisted men lived, "Later on in life when I was confronted with racial cases, it was very easy for me to empathize with blacks and other subordinate groups because I had a little insight into what a segregated existence must be like to them."

After World War II, Justice practiced law with his father, a die-hard Democrat who talked politics incessantly, Kemerer said.

William Wayne Justice and Sue Rowan from the Ben Wheeler area were married in 1947. Their only child, Ellen, was born on Christmas Eve 1949.

Justice served as Athens city attorney in 1948-50 and 1952-58, and envisioned a career in politics. "I was going to run for Congress ... and perhaps governor on down the line."

The two political personalities that most influenced him were Lyndon Johnson, who would become president, and former U.S. Sen. Ralph Yarborough, D-Texas, Kemerer said.

In June 1961, President John F. Kennedy appointed Justice to a 4-year term as U.S. Attorney for the 41-county Eastern District of Texas.

At that time, Justice began complaining of stomach pains. It turned out that his pants were too tight, Kemerer said.

But what convinced Justice to slim down was watching U.S. Supreme Court Justice Hugo Black, then in his late 70s, play tennis in the hot sun. Justice got down to 154 pounds in 1968, and hasn't varied since by more than a pound.

His personal habits also changed after he read an article about the hazards of smoking. That article, plus pressure from his wife and daughter, caused him to quit, and he has not smoked since, Kemerer said.

The biographer said as U.S. attorney, Justice was not the ardent integrationist he would become as federal judge. The 1964 Civil Rights Act was not enacted until well into his first term.

Then-Sen. Yarborough nominated Justice as U.S. District Judge for the Eastern District. He was sworn in 1968.

Kemerer said although Justice has an image of being an aloof and humorless man, he is optimistic and self-confident, has a quick wit and good sense of humor, and loves good stories.

He has a passion for fast sports cars, and admits to occasionally exceeding the speed limit, Kemerer said.

Professionally, Justice is known as a writing judge, and has a "penchant for working obscure vocabulary into his opinions."

Kemerer cites a 1984 opinion in which Justice considered the word "nerd." He wrote that "nerd" is a "polysemantic neologism" which must be viewed as a kind of "undifferentiated belittlement."

Justice also has a reputation as one of the toughest judges on white-collar crime, but he says sentencing "leaves me with an emotional bitter aftertaste which lingers for days."

A desegregation ruling by Tyler schools was so unpopular that one-sixth of the city's population of 65,000 signed

Speaking of senators from Massachusetts, I want to thoroughly examine Teddy's little "Play or Pay" national healthcare plan. What's the penalty for paying? Or playing? A weekend in the compound?

Fifth question: George, will you get a grip and get us out of this mess?

Pres, ol' buddy, I don't know if you really understand how bad things are out here.

I started working full time in my first career, back in another lifetime, in 1975. I am now making a week what I made a month just 17 years ago.

Guess what. I was better off back then than I am now. Sure, I lived with my mom for awhile, so I had a little more disposable income. I was, however, making car payments. I was making insurance payments (and they were about the same as what I'm paying now). That was back when I drank and did other things quite a bit.

The only thing better now than then: I was still associated with the woman who later became my ex-wife, and that really was expensive. Now I'm "significantly associated" with someone for whom I don't mind spending money, and it's for constructive things.

George, the country has fallen and we can't get up. We're pushing on this damn necktie as hard as we can, but the line seems to be busy. I know you can't do it all. If the guys in Congress won't cooperate, you can't do a whole lot. I don't know that $50 is gonna help me George. The cost of business is outrageous. Your government regulators are driving us crazy. That's why we have to buy our ink 1,100 gallons at a time, because we can't use the barrels anymore.

Help, George! Help! Help! Help!

Looking Back

(From past issues of The Hereford Brand)

90 YEARS AGO

Jan. 31, 1902: The advantages to be derived from the establishment of an institution of higher learning, such as is now contemplated, cannot be too highly estimated. The people of Hereford and the surrounding country have it in their power to take the lead and plant a college that will redound to the lasting benefit of our whole community. A noble start has been made. Money and property to the amount of about $12,000 has been subscribed. Twice that amount will not be any too much to invest in our college.

50 YEARS AGO

Jan. 29, 1942: The Deaf Smith County Rationing Board meets each day at 1 p.m. in the commissioner's courtroom and will then consider any requests for certificates for tire purchases. ...Harry Young, potato broker, reports that a firm is wishing to contract for the planting of carrots in this area. ...Names of registrants about to be inducted in the armed forces may be printed in the newspaper, the state selective service director told the local board. A ban still exists on the number of men covered by quotas and calls.

25 YEARS AGO

Jan. 29, 1967: Open house is scheduled today at the newly-remodeled Hereford Clinic, now one of the state's most modern medical buildings. The clinic is operated under the partnership of doctors M.W. Nobles, A.T. Mims, B.G. Beene, C.E. Hicks and C.E. THE VOICE OF BUSINESS

by Dr. Richard L. Leshar, President
U.S. Chamber of Commerce

WASHINGTON—In the Canadian province of British Columbia, it takes $6.25 to spring a pack of cigarettes from a vending machine. That is a lot of money, even though the Canadian dollar is worth a little bit less than ours, and the cost of tobacco products in other Canadian provinces is even higher.

Obviously, that price is far out of proportion to what it costs to produce and market cigarettes. Most of it is tax imposed by the Canadian government in a deliberate attempt to dissuade consumers from smoking.

In this case, the Canadian government appears to have gone a bit too far. Their cigarette tax is so high it has created a black market for tobacco, most of it smuggled in from the United States. Thus, tobacco money that once went to Canadian retailers and tax collectors now comes to the United States. I doubt if that is what the Canadian government intended to accomplish.

But that is another subject. My point is that everyone knows that tax policy can be used to discourage certain forms of human behavior. If you want less of something, you raise the tax on it.

Similarly, if you want more of something, you lower the tax on it. We are not talking rocket science. Rather, we are discussing a basic equation of human behavior that is simple and unremarkable. All of us — liberals and conservatives, Democrats and Republicans, business executives and union bosses — understand it.

And there is nothing our country needs more right now than capital investment. We need to pump capital into factories, businesses, homes, new products — the whole nine yards. This is the essence of economic growth, the kind of thing that promotes consumption, creates jobs and generates tax revenues. Most everyone outside asylum walls agrees that economic growth is a good thing.

Thus, it follows logically that to promote more economic growth, Congress should restore the favorable accelerated depreciation methods that prevailed in the early 1980s, and also cut the capital gains tax.

The prevalent notion that cutting the capital gains tax would be a windfall for the wealthy is simply nonsense. More than 70 percent of those reporting capital gain had ordinary income under $50,000 in 1987. More than a fourth of those were elderly. Clearly, a lower capital gains tax will encourage middle income people to invest more in capital projects — which is exactly what our economy needs.

The main impediment to economic growth in this country today is an unfavorable tax environment for capital investment. The time has come to remove this ball and chain from our economy. The sooner we do so, the sooner we can get our economy back on a growth track.

at all times, ready to respond to a call at any time.
 "If the victim is at the police department or sheriff's office or the hospital, we'll meet with them there," Hughes said. The victims are cared for and encouraged to begin seeking legal remedies to prevent further offenses.

On The Issues

EDITOR'S NOTE - The Associated Press asks the major presidential candidates a question each weekday about their views on a particular issue and assembles their responses. President Bush has declined to participate at least until he formally announces his re-election campaign. Here are the views of the major presidential candidates on the question: "Do you favor increasing the personal income tax exemption for children? If so, how?"

DEMOCRATS

Jerry Brown: Favors replacing current tax code with a 13 percent flat tax on all individual and corporate income. Would include only two deductions, for charitable contributions and rent or mortgage payments.
Bill Clinton: A spokeswoman said Clinton would replace the current exemption with an $800 per-child tax credit, the equivalent, she said, of an exemption from tax of $5,330 for a family in the 15 percent bracket. The change would mean a tax savings of $480 per child for an average-income family, she said.
Tom Harkin: "Clearly, the president's proposal is going to have no impact on the recession. His provision does not even take effect until October. Now, we must invest in the infrastructure, education and job training to rebuild America, putting people to work immediately. In the long term, we need tax fairness. And I favor far larger personal income tax exclusions, but they must be paid for progressively, not by adding to the deficit."
Bob Kerrey: "I support a tax cut that will provide relief for families who were blistered by the tax and economic policies of the 1980s. Especially in a recession, we need to relieve the strain on families who are trying to make ends meet and to provide for their children."
Paul Tsongas: "I do not favor increasing the personal tax exemption for children for two reasons. First, I think its basis is in political, not economic, policy. Second, it would result in no net savings for families - rather than pay tax, families and their children would be forced to finance a deficit already growing out of control."

REPUBLICANS
Patrick Buchanan: "We should replace the current tax deduction for children with a tax credit of up to $1,000 per child."
David Duke: Favors increasing the exemption. "The income tax exemption should be $5,000 per child."
President Bush: In his State of the Union address, Bush proposed raising the personal exemption for dependent children by $500 per child to $2,800.

"We encourage them to come to the office where we visit with them about their situation," Hughes said. "If they meet the criteria, we can apply for a protective order."

The order restricts an alleged offender from coming within 200 yards of the victim's house. The alleged offender also may not contact, through any means, the victim, the victim's family, and is restricted from making further threats or harassment.

"If the judge grants the original order, a hearing is set. After the hearing, the judge can invoke a full protective order for a full year. If the order is violated, the offender can be arrested and jailed for contempt of court or other charges."

Hughes said victims in Deaf Smith County are fortunate to have the support of District Attorney Roland Saul and his staff.

"Not every county around us gives the support these victims need," Hughes said. "Our DA's office is wonderful. They have helped with technicalities we have encountered. All I have to do is call Jim English and he is right after it. Jim and (county Judge) Tom Simons have been wonderful to me and the program."

"I know that in other counties you have to push and shove to get things done. Sometimes I can talk to Jim and he'll come talk to our clients. In other counties you have a hard time getting things done, but here we don't have any trouble."

Hughes said the center also offers a support group that meets on Tuesdays. "The support group is great because you have some who are just starting to rebuild their lives and others who are much further along," Hughes said.

"It is real encouraging to see other people, to hear how they had a problem just like you and how they have worked through their problems. It is nice to hear from another victim that you will be okay."

Hughes focus is on education. "For most domestic violence victims, they are assaulted or battered three to five times before they seek help or leave for good," Hughes said. "Many times they are afraid because they think it may be even worse for them if they leave."

"Every time you think, 'Well, he'll change.' Sometimes the batterer will say he'll change, he won't do it again, but a week or a month later it's back where it was."

Hughes hopes the program can cross cultural lines through more intense public education throughout the community.

"Sometimes we do face a cultural problem where wives are thought of as property for the kingdom," Hughes said. "That is something we must overcome through educating the current victims and educating the children that it is not right to be constantly degraded or belittled or battered or assaulted. "Sometimes a victim thinks it's their fault, whether it's a sexual assault or other physical assault. It is not their fault. They haven't done anything wrong. The only thing they need to do is call us and start breaking the cycle."

SWC grid coaches await recruits' decisions

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer
DALLAS (AP) - Gentlemen, start your fax machines.

Southwest Conference football coaches will be anxiously leaning over their fax machines on Wednesday to see which schoolboy football stars signed national letters-of-intent.

Under new NCAA rules, coaches won't be permitted to visit the players they've signed for 48 hours after signing day, so fax machines and express letters will be the only way they can be 100 per cent sure a recruit has signed.

Texas A&M coach R.C. Slocum is expected to get the best of the recruiting signatures.

Coming off a Cotton Bowl appearance and an upcoming nationally televised August date in the Disneyland Classic, the Aggies are most popular among the top 100 players in the state.

The Aggies lead the SWC in oral commitments from bigtime prospects. They pour in daily like a Who's Who in Texas schoolboy talent.

Such stars as Parade magazine All-American linebacker Jim Brady of Lamar, Deer Park quarterback Corey Pullig, Conroe McCullough wide receiver Kevin Beirne, and linebacker Keith Mitchell of Garland Lakeview say they are College Station bound.

Of course, Slocum, like the other SWC coaches won't rest easy until he sees the signatures, thus the sweaty wait over the fax machines. Oral commitments can change under last second pressuring. Coaches will be able to telephone prospects all day on Wednesday.

Texas A&M is looking for linebackers, defensive backs, wide receivers, and offensive linemen to shore up a team that went 10-2 last season. Slocum, who has recruiting organized into a fine science, should get everything he needs.

Other SWC schools will have to scramble harder, although new Texas coach John Mackovic has made an excellent early impression.

Mackovic expanded his base of operations to California, saying "at Illinois we recruited nationally and we've had a carryover from some of the kids we were looking at."

Texas fell to 5-6 under David McWilliams last year and the Longhorns need a football plasma shot.

Mackovic's primary needs are quarterbacks, wide receivers and defensive linemen. He could sign Ryan Fien of Simi Valley, rated the finest quarterback in California.

The Aggies and 'Horns appear on a race to finish 1-2, respectively.

Texas Tech coach Spike Dykes has been doing well in the commitment league, getting such solid players as Dallas Carter defensive backs Verone McKinley and Marcus Coleman of Richardson Lake Highlands to think scarlet and black. The Raiders, who won five of their last six games last year, need defensive help.

Baylor coach Grant Teaff has commitments from talented players such as defensive lineman Ervin Briley of Aldine, running back Detron Smith of Lake Highlands, and Dallas Carter quarterback Cedric Douglas. The Bears 24-0 loss to Indiana in the Copper Bowl shows Baylor needs a general upgrade of its talent level.

New Texas Christian coach Pat Sullivan had a disadvantage by coming in late to replace Jim Wacker, who left for Minnesota. Lucky for Sullivan his recruiting coordinator stayed. Most of TCU's early commitments were in the "take a chance" category. The Horned Frogs desperately need defensive help and another quarterback.

Rice coach Fred Goldsmith was working a solid class, the top prospect being wide receiver Emerson Allen of Jersey Village. The Owls need size and speed on defense.

Houston needs linemen, both offensively and defensively. The Cougars reached into Louisiana for commitments from offensive tackle Jason Jones of Zachary and defensive tackle Clifton Sylvester of Breaux Bridge.

Southern Methodist, winner of a lone game in 1990, and coach Tom Rossley need help at any position you can name. The Mustangs particularly could use another quarterback, size and speed on defense, offensive linemen.

Rossley, who was the quarterback coach for the Atlanta Falcons two years ago, reached into Georgia for one prospect, getting a commitment from linebacker Brad Mangus of Marietta.

It will be an anxious Wednesday for SWC coaches. And the MVP could be the maintenance man who takes care of the fax machines.

SWC baseball goes to home-and-away series

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS (AP) - The Southwest Conference has benched its post-season baseball tournament in favor of a 36-game, double round-robin schedule that could provide one of the most intriguing pennant chases in the league's 78-year history.

Instead of the SWC race starting in late February and early March, the league's seven teams will be going at it head-on beginning immediately. The plan calls for a six-game series between each school. It will be split with three games home and away.

The SWC coaches decided the post-season tournament was hurting their chances to get into the NCAA playoffs by chopping each other up while the pairings were being made.

The Texas Longhorns under venerable Cliff Gustafson are defending champions, but parity has arrived in the league. Texas won the title with seven losses last year; Texas A&M was second with eight.

On Friday, Feb. 7, coach Mark Johnson's Aggies will travel to Houston for Wayne Graham's debut as the Rice Owls coach and Texas Tech coach Larry Hays will take his Red Raiders to Austin to meet the Longhorns.

The games mark the earliest SWC series on record.

It also is the first home-and-away slate of SWC games since league schools began playing each other in 1915.

Arkansas, of course, has gone to the Southeast Conference so it will be a seven-team race. Southern Methodist doesn't play baseball.

Due to NCAA legislation, schedules have been trimmed from 60 to 56 games.

Texas must reload in 1992. Gustafson does get back Brooks Kieschnick, last year's SWC Player of the Year after hitting 14 homers as a freshman.

Speedy Calvin Murray with 92 stolen bases and 80 RBI in two seasons will return.

Kieschnick hit .358 as a designated hitter and posted a pitching record of 7-1 with an earned run average of 2.58.

Texas A&M also made the NCAA playoffs last year and the Aggies return one of the top pitchers in college baseball, lefty Jeff Granger. Granger also was a star on the United States Pan American team. Three A&M hitters who batted .348 or better return: Conrad Colby, Mike Hickey and Brian Thomas.

Baylor coach Mickey Sullivan got his Bears into the NCAA playoffs last year and he has another solid nucleus. Power hitters Jahn Finke and Kevin Ellis are back along with lefty Frank Foltyin, who has a 22-12 career record.

Houston, which came within an eyelash of making the NCAA playoffs, will be tough again under coach Bragg Stockton.

Freshman Brian Blair, who hit 404 in SWC games, will return, but losing pitching aces Al Benavides and Vaughn Eshelman could be a big blow to the Cougars.

Graham, the successful San Jacinto Junior College coach, will look to veterans Darrell Richardson, Donald Allen and Harry Duffey for the Owls. Graham won five national JC titles at San Jac.

Texas Christian coach Lance Brown will be getting some pitching help from Reid Ryan, son of Nolan Ryan who transferred from Texas.

The return of outfielder Mike Losa, who had 13 homers and hit .355 in 1990, should help. Losa was out with shoulder surgery last year.

Texas Tech fell just a game short of post-season play in 1991. The biggest hole in the lineup is catcher Tony Tijerina, who signed with the New York Mets, will be difficult to replace. The strength of the team is in the outfield where four seniors paced by All-SWC DH Wes Shook will return.

A&M coach takes flak for playing son

By DAVID WHITLEY
The San Antonio Light
 COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) - The Texas Longhorns were in town. A small but loud crowd at G. Rollie White Coliseum was working up a major lather.

The Aggie Youth hissed and cursed the introductions of Texas' players. Then came the A&Mers, who were given a hero's welcome whether they were worthy or not. Until the final introduction.

"Starting at guard, Tony Barone Jr.," the announcer yelled.

Silence. Some polite applause was finally registered, although it was countered by not-so-polite boos. It eventually amounted to a mixed reception and another painful moment for the Barone family.

"A toughening experience," Barone Sr. called it.

"It's just part of the game," Barone Jr. said. "People like to have things to talk about."

In College Station these days, the topic is him. Barone Sr. came here eight months ago to save a dying basketball program. Barone Jr. came to help him. So far, about all either has gotten are problems.

The Aggies are struggling, which isn't surprising considering the mess Kermit Davis left them in. Barone Sr. is finding out the rebuilding project will take longer than first imagined. He's also finding out A&M fans may not endure the wait gracefully.

Barone Jr. has become a focal point for discontent. The target was placed on his back by Barone Sr., who put his son in the starting lineup at the start of the year and has yet to take him out.

To skeptical fans, it doesn't wash. They know A&M is in the SWC cellar. They notice Barone Jr. averages 1.7 points, 2.0 rebounds and 1.1 assist per game.

They rub their eyes at the stat sheet, revealing he made 7 of 53 shots from the field and 3 of 30 three-pointers. They ask why?

Barone Sr. tries to be diplomatic. But his pugnacious Chicago nature sometimes gets the best of him. He responds like a proud coach who has just had his methods questioned, like a father protective of his son.

"People who think he plays because he's my son are people I have no respect for," Barone Sr. said. "I'm not here to coach my son. I'm here to coach basketball and win games."

"No one is going to tell me who to play and who not to play. And no one is going to tell me my kid can't play at the school where I coach."

It's one thing to play. It's another to start. Every time Barone Jr. gets announced, some fans detect a whiff of nepotism.

"Whether Tony is a player or not a player," Barone Sr. said, "he's a player that adds a dimension to this team, and one we want to use."

That dimension is toughness and heady play. Like a lot of coaches' kids, Barone Jr. knows how to play the game, he just doesn't do it with a surplus of elegance.

He's going through the college basketball shock most freshmen endure. A pinched nerve in his back has also slowed him.

"Maybe by the end of the year, I'll be able to put up some numbers," said Barone Jr., who's not on scholarship. "But right now, I'm still adjusting. That's not an excuse, that's a fact."

It's not like he is keeping Clyde Drexler on the bench. Davis left Barone an NCAA probation to deal with, not a lot of talent. The Aggies start three freshmen. The backup guards, Chuck Henderson and David Martin, are averaging 3.9 and 3.8 points, respectively.

They have better shooting touches than the 6-foot-2, 210-pound Barone Jr. But the coach's son knows his father's playing systems inside and out. He averages fewer than two turnovers per game. He's the type player who would dive into a courtside barbecue pit to get a loose ball.

He also knows that some fans would still demand that he re-light the charcoal before scrambling back into the game. Such is the double standard of acceptance coaches' kids live with.

"I just have this feeling when people are mocking you or gawking at you, they think you're smug about yourself," Barone Jr. said. "It's really not that way. But there are certain perceptions you can't do much about."

If not for the name, fans might never know better. Barone Sr. is short, round and looks like a character out of "The Godfather." He rages so fiercely on the sidelines that you wonder whether a coronary or an aneurysm will do him in first.

His son looks more like a cross between Harry Connick Jr. and James Dean. He doesn't always fly his emotions at full staff like his father. These days, that gets a little difficult.

"I kind of get mad," he said. "I'm not used to the fact there are so many people wondering why I play. My dad is not gaining any status by playing his son."

Barone Jr. admits he'll never be an NBA lottery pick. On a scale of one to 10, he said his basketball ability is about a six.

"I'm not that athletic," he said. "But I do everything else to try to make up for it."

He would hang from bars as a kid, trying to stretch himself into becoming Magic Johnson. When that didn't work, he bugged teachers into opening up the gym so he could practice.

"I always said, 'Some day, it will pay off,'" he said.

It did when he became a starter during his junior season at Creighton Prep High in Omaha, Neb. His father was coaching at Creighton University, so there were the expected whispers that Barone Jr. did not really earn the starting spot.

After graduating, he sat out a year just to take classes at Creighton. When his father was hired by A&M, Barone

Jr. knew he would have a chance to play.

What he didn't expect was to become a starter. Neither did his father, who wouldn't be starting a 13.2 percent walk-on shooter if he felt he had a choice.

"It's really unfair," Barone Sr. said. "If you're a coach's son, you probably don't want to play for your dad. Or you want to sit on the end of the bench and never go in and not face the criticism."

"I'd like to think we have a world at A&M that's real supportive of everything that goes on. And the fans aren't. There's always going to be a certain amount of criticism, and I don't have a problem with that."

He probably has to keep repeating that to himself everytime his son is introduced. The boos won't subside until the points and wins start coming a little more frequently.

Even then, Barone Jr. knows his best will probably never be good enough for some.

"I really have no complaints," he said. "I have my family down here and I'm playing Division I basketball. If people question it, I'd like to think either they don't understand the situation or maybe don't have a good attitude toward life in general."

"The only thing I can say is, it's the work I've put in and the time I've put in. That's what I wish people would respect."

Like any son who walked into the family business, Tommy Penders knew he had something to prove. At his first night at work, he tried to prove too much.

It was Midnight Madness, the first practice of the year for Texas' basketball team. Among the new players fans turned out to see was Penders.

They'd been admiring his father's coaching work for three seasons. Would the son measure up?

"I really tried too hard," he said. "I forced things, trying to do things

I don't do. I learned from that game to take things as they come."

For Penders, it is coming slowly. He is a backup guard for the Longhorns, averaging three minutes a game. Unlike Tony Barone Jr. at Texas A&M, Penders has had the luxury of a break-in process.

Texas has perhaps the best guard duo in the SWC in Terrence Rencher and B.J. Tyler. Backups Mike Richardson and Tony Watson have been strong. Penders has become the crowd favorite, a dubious honor usually given to the dorkiest player on the bench.

Penders knows that's mostly just a byproduct of his father's popularity. He has a nice shooting touch and will probably develop into a solid player. He can't wait until the day people respond to him as such, and not as the coach's kid.

"It's been kinda difficult. But after the first month or so, it got easier," Penders said. "Every time I get in the game, it seems I have added pressure."

So why did he choose to play for the Longhorns? He averaged 19.1 points a game last season at Mercersburg (Pa.) Academy prep school. Although not a major recruit, he could have gotten a scholarship at a school where his father's shadow didn't engulf him.

"I wanted the challenge," he said. "And I knew this was my chance to compete on a national level for a team that gets on TV and goes to the NCAA Tournament."

Penders has gone out of his way to be just another player. He said he's only been home about five times since school began in August. In practice and games, his father treats him like any other player.

There are exceptions, however. He can ask his father for $5 and not have the NCAA launch an investigation. Maybe Penders should have adopted Dexter Cambridge.

"I think I can do that," Penders said. "I know he gave me Christmas presents."

BRANDED WOMEN

By Sandy Stagner

Gee, has it really been nine months since I quit work? My dwindling bank account screams YES.

There has been some speculation as to why I decided to leave my job in the first place. The rumors have been running rampant. I have heard that "she went stark raving mad". (Totally untrue. I have always prided myself in being crazy.) Someone supposedly spotted me on the streets of Santa Fe selling clay pots out of an old beat up pickup. (How do these stories get started? I was in Aspen, Colo. skiing with Mel Gibson.)

Okay, so I have a vivid imagination. The truth of the matter is that I won big bucks in a sweepstakes, moved to Alaska and appeared in several episodes of "Northern Exposure." It was great fun until I was forced to eat whale blubber. Yuck!

You're tired of all this bull, right? I apologize but the truth is so boring. I had a thyroid problem but after 247 pills I'm back as good as ever. Scary, huh?

A couple of weeks ago I came to the Brand office and had a long talk with the publisher about returning to work. "You've got to take me back," I whined. "I'll do anything--wash the windows, your car, your hair, whatever it takes."

"Let's face it. I'm just not a motivated person unless I have a job," I continued. "Do you realize this is the first time in nine months that I've taken off my jogging suit and houseshoes?"

"I stay up all night watching T.V. reruns and then I want to sleep all day," I explained pitifully. "It's gotten to where my only enjoyment in life is taping old movies on the VCR. I WANT MY OLD LIFE BACK! I WANT MY JOB BACK!" (To ensure I had captured Speedy's attention, I let tears well up in my eyes and my lips were quivering. That tried and true tactic works every time.)

Before I "officially" began working, I snuck down to the office one night just to get the feel of things. Maybe old age is creeping up on me or perhaps I just have a short memory but to my amazement I could not recall how to operate the computer. I felt like I had entered the Twilight Zone and Rod Serling had zapped my brain of all its memory cells. But I'm happy to report that slowly I'm getting the hang of things once again. Just ask me what Control F6 means. On second thought, ask me in another week.

I have a new admiration for housewives since I failed so miserably at my attempt. For the last several months of unemployment I figured why should I get dressed if I had no place to go? Why put on makeup when I could let my skin "breathe". Why clean house when I knew none of my friends will be coming to visit because they have jobs?

Actually, for the first three months of my self-imposed exile, I wasn't bored at all because all I did was sleep. (I found out later that low thyroid will cause this condition. Actually, so does being lazy but that's another story.) I was blissfully unaware that summer had completely passed me by. One minute it was May 28, the next, Sept. 21. Oh, well, I loathe hot weather.

During the second trimester (sounds like I was pregnant), the thyroid pills finally kicked in and I had some energy. My husband, John, decided I needed to get out of the house and do something (ANYTHING) and implored his good friend, Mike Carr, to let me help out at the Chamber office. Unfortunately, what was left of my mind was shrouded in cob webs. Every time I answered the phone I'd either say, "Good morning. Deaf Smith General Hospital" or "Good afternoon. Hereford Brand." Feeling pity on his friend for having a wife like me, Mike showed a great deal of reserve. He'd pat me on the shoulder, smile and say, "You're doing a good job, Sandy, but perhaps tomorrow you can remember this is the Chamber of Commerce office. Maybe it would help if you jotted it down somewhere and you could just read it." (The man has the patience of a saint.)

For the last three months I have kept busy cleaning every surface of my house. I even attempted to clean out the attic as a surprise to my husband. He was surprised alright. Especially when he saw the hole in the living room ceiling. Why didn't someone tell me I couldn't venture off the attic beams? He was even more thrilled when he got the repair bill.

Bad went to worse. Two days later while oiling the electric garage door, I pulled something loose and the whole thing fell down. Within the next three weeks I managed to break the dishwasher door, the garbage disposal and the ice dispenser on the refrigerator. I'm just not cut out to be a housewife and my husband doesn't make enough money to allow me to stay at home and wreck the place.

So, it's great to be back in the real world. I just hope Speedy shows the same patience as Carr did. I really didn't mean to spill Diet Coke on the printer. Honest!

Weight Loss Surprises Researchers

WASHINGTON - A nutrition organization was hopeful that a nutritionally complete "hi-tech" food tablet would help erase world hunger problems, until a study revealed that one of the ingredients could cause significant weight loss.

Although other studies and scientists may not agree, researchers in Europe found that the ingredient, a natural plant colloid, actually caused people to lose weight, even though specifically instructed not to alter normal eating patterns, according to one study published in the prestigious British Journal of Nutrition. Researchers in an earlier study had speculated that the weight loss was due to a decrease in the intestinal absorption of calories.

While the project of National Dietary Research, aptly named Food Source One, would not be used to successfully fulfill its original goal, the formula which has since been improved with other natural colloids has been a windfall for some overweight people. A Daytona Beach, Florida woman fighting a weight battle for 12 years used the product on the recommendation of her physician and lost 30 pounds. She stated, "Not only have I lost 30 pounds but my cholesterol has dropped from 232 to 143. I have two closets full of clothes which have not fit me in two years that I can now wear." In a separate report, a telephone interview revealed that a Wilmington, North Carolina pharmacist lost 14 pounds in 3 weeks on the product and was never hungry.

Food Source One tablets are part of National Dietary Research's comprehensive plan to bring a rapid end to obesity in this country. A variety of nutritionally sound diet plans, specially prepared by NDR, accompany each bottle and provide a natural, drug free alternative for confronting the problem of obesity.

YOUR EYES

MIDDLE-AGED EYES

Most people, when they reach 40, will have some difficulty reading small print. At first, moving the book or newspaper further away will clear the print; eventually, that tactic won't work. There may be headaches, too, or blurred vision. Fact is, this is very common. It's called presbyopia. Inside the eye there is a small lens that automatically changes its shape in order to focus on things held within arm's length. At birth, that lens is soft as jelly, but as we age it hardens. And by about age 40, it isn't flexible enough to focus on print held at the usual reading distance. Moving the reading material away only works for a while because the condition continues to get worse. Fortunately, reading glasses can make up for the loss of focusing power. After a complete and expert examination, your optometrist will determine the precise prescription for your glasses.

New officers elected

Members of the Hereford Fire Department Ladies Auxiliary elected new officers when they met Tuesday at the Hereford Fire Department. They included, from left, Dee Hamilton, president; Krista Farrell, first vice president; Aida Lemus, second vice president; Lina Ruiz, secretary; and Lisa Paetzold, treasurer.

Auxiliary conducts election of officers

Election of officers was held during the Hereford Fire Department Ladies Auxiliary's meeting Tuesday at the Hereford Fire Department. This was the women's first meeting of the year.

Dee Hamilton will serve as president; Krista Farrell, first vice president; Aida Lemus, second vice president; Lina Ruiz, secretary; and Lisa Paetzold, treasurer.

POW camp topic of program

Joe D. Rogers presented a program on Hereford's World War II POW Camp when the Toujours Amis Study Club met recently in the home of Shannon Hagar.

Rogers gave the background information on how Hereford was selected as a campsite, how the camp was constructed and how it was operated. He also told some of the long term effects on Hereford from the camp being located close by. Following the presentation, members asked questions, traded stories and then expressed appreciation to the speaker.

Hostesses, Hagar, Trish Brown, Donna Kemp and Kim Bigham, served Italian cream cake and coffee to those present. They included Judy Barrett, Patti Brown, Melinda Bridge, Kim Buckley, Tami Charest, Diana Griffith, Sarah Lawson, Leisa Lewis, Kyla McDowell, Shelley Moss, Kim Porter, Becky Reinart and Marsha Winget.

LAS VEGAS, Nevada (AP) - Dana Plato, who co-starred in TV's "Diff'rent Strokes," was arraigned on charges she illegally obtained Valium pills with forged prescriptions.

She faces eight felony charges carrying a maximum sentence of 10 years apiece, along with revocation of her probation for the robbery of a video store last year.

Ms. Plato was held without bail following arraignment Thursday.

If convicted, she also would have to serve the six-year suspended prison sentence for the robbery. When she was placed on probation in the earlier case, she was ordered to abstain from drugs and alcohol.

Extension News

BY BEVERLY HARDER

Consumers today are subject to many dietary do's and don't's, many of which are deceiving. Women are particularly vulnerable to nutritious misinformation because of cultural factors emphasizing a slender figure. In hopes of achieving this, women turn to fad diets and quick fixes. This misinformation, along with poor food choices and inconsistent eating habits may be compounding the problem.

Recent research cited by the U.S. Department of Agriculture by Alanna Moshfegh showed that although women are now eating leaner meats and drinking lower fat milk, at the same time they are eating more rich desserts, salty snack foods, cheese higher in fat, mayonnaise, regular salad dressings and other fat at the table such as margarine or butter.

Nutritious, quick weight-loss solutions that classify foods as good or bad or eliminate certain food groups from the diet do not make good sense, scientifically. However, there are some types to use in evaluating nutrition advice from various sources:

-Read between the lines. Not all nutrition news can be immediately translated into food choices so try not to cut out certain foods or go overboard on others.

-Don't make too many assumptions. Just because a product has no cholesterol label does not ensure that it is a heart-healthy choice. This cholesterol claim offers no clue of the amount of saturated fatty acid within.

-Put diet/nutrition into context of your total life. No perfect foods exist. Diet is only one factor contributing to wellness. Consider your exercise habits and total lifestyle (smoking, alcohol use), too. Realizing that simply adding or eliminating a single food will not be the only remedy.

-Question claims portraying food as good or bad. No good or bad foods exist. What's important is your overall meal plan and how you fit in moderate portions of a variety of foods.

-Consider whether this is something you can live with. Quick fixes offer short-term results, and repeated dieting makes each pound harder to lose. For lasting results, make small but permanent changes in the way you eat. Balance, variety and moderation are keys to healthful eating that will serve you for life.

Educational programs conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service serve people of all ages regardless of socioeconomic level, race, color, sex, religion, handicap or national origin.

Red Cross Update

The aluminum can collection for disaster relief in Texas is continuing. Cans may be brought to the Red Cross office or call the office at 364-3761 to make arrangements to pick up cans.

A CPR class will begin at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at the RC office. Please call to register for the class.

A standard first aid class will be held from 7-8:30 p.m. Monday, Feb. 10, at the Stanton Learning Center. For registration information call John Matthews at 364-5941.

Volunteer orientation will be held at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, Feb. 20, at the RC office. This training session is for all volunteers that have not had orientation, for all new volunteers and for those who would like to know more about the Red Cross and what the organization does.

Special week designated

Mayor Tom LeGate recently signed a proclamation declaring Catholic Schools Week to be observed Feb. 2-8. Witnessing the signing were, from left, Camille, Abigail and Monica Caperton, daughters of Doug and Nancy Caperton.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am writing in response to the letter that appeared in your column signed, "One of the Lucky Ones." The writer spoke about the importance of intervening when a drunk wants to get in a car and drive. I am now in prison for doing just that. Here is my story, and just in case you want to check with the authorities in Sheridan, Ore., I will be here until Oct. 2, 1992.

The drunk I tried to keep from getting behind the wheel was my wife, neighbor, unaware that my wife was intoxicated, saw me struggling with her and trying to get the car keys. The neighbor called the police. My wife was three sheets to the wind and there was an open beer can in the front seat.

When the police arrived we were still struggling. Guess who they arrested? Me. I tried to explain what the struggle was about but it was useless. I was arrested and charged with domestic violence and fourth degree assault.

My wife appeared in court and told the truth about what had happened but it made no difference. I had to spend 30 days in the county jail before I was able to go to court and plead no contest in the hope that I could get out of jail, go back to work and support my family. But the system wasn't done with me yet.

I had the bad luck to be on federal parole when all this happened. So, after the state released me, the federal parole commission issued a warrant for what was deemed "new criminal conduct." The whole thing hinged on my honest response when asked if I physically restrained my wife from getting into the car? I said, "Yes." For that I was given 16 months.

My wife and I have no problem. We love each other. In fact, she was the one who sent me your column. We both feel that I was right to try to keep her from driving in that condition.

One last bit of information, Ann. Three weeks after I was placed in custody, my wife was arrested for drunk driving. She was given probation and a fine. Isn't it ironic that I should get 16 months while she gets probation? The one good thing that came out of this bizarre case is that my wife has stopped drinking. You have my permission to use my name.—Richard Klages, Sheridan, Ore.

DEAR RICHARD: Thank you for sharing your astonishing story. I'm sure that many lawyers in my reading audience could raise some interesting questions, but it does seem to me that you ran into some tough luck and I'm sorry.

DEAR ANN LANDERS; Recently you printed a Laugh for the Day that appeared in the Moosetown Moos. It seems that a woman on vacation in Las Vegas asked her escort at the roulette wheel what number she should bet on. He told her, "Bet your age." She put her money on number 25 and fainted when 38 won.

I'll bet she wasn't the only one who fainted. The highest number on a roulette wheel is 36. That was My laugh for the day.—An Ann Phan in Sioux City

DEAR PHAN: Yours and about 10,000 others. It's obvious that I'm not much of a gambler and know very little about roulette wheels. I wonder how many editors around the country caught this gaffe and changed it in their local papers. I'd like to hear from you.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: We are concerned about our 15-year-old son. He thinks he is madly in love with a 13-year-old girl. We thought it would be a two-week romance over the phone but it has turned into a serious love affair.

"Jason" told his dad that he has had sex with this girl several times at her mother's house. He said he did not use a condom the first time and was scared to death she might be pregnant. When she found out she wasn't, they didn't take any more chances.

His dad and I feel we should tell the girl's mother but we are afraid because the girl is only 13. If her mother goes to the law, our son could be charged with rape and his life would be ruined. Jason has always been very honest and open with us. He is an excellent student but his grades are not as high as they were before he started to see this girl.

We have punished him for breaking curfew but we haven't forbidden him to see her. He has dropped his friends and sees no one except this girl. When he isn't with her he's on the phone talking to her for hours. He says this is the person he's going to marry.

I worry that if we try to put a stop to everything he may run away, move in with her or try suicide, which he has mentioned.

Please help us, Ann. We don't know what to do.—Frightened in Michigan

DEAR MICHIGAN: You were wise not to read the riot act to Jason and insist that he not see the girl anymore. It would have driven them closer together and you would be perceived as "the enemy." Once teenagers start to have sex and think they are in love, they are not going to stop.

The fact that Jason has brought up suicide is an indication he is not very stable. If you could get him to talk to a counselor it might help. A competent counselor will make a friend of the boy and guide him appropriately. He will tell Jason that the girl is underage and he could be in serious trouble with the law. Meanwhile, stay cool, non-

Degrees conferred at WTSU

Degrees have officially been conferred on 46 West Texas State University master's candidates and 296 baccalaureate candidates who completed academic requirements during the 1991 fall semester.

Lagay D. Carlson, of Hereford, received a Bachelor of Science with a major in social work; Jacquelin E. Wheeler, of Hereford, a Master of Education with a major in professional counseling and Edward D. Wuerflein, also of Hereford, a Bachelor of Business Administration with a major in computer information systems.

Undergraduates with an overall grade point average of 3.50 or better were recognized as honor graduates and were eligible to wear gold honor cords at the Dec. 19 commencement ceremony. The three levels of recognition are Cum Laude (3.50-3.74), Magna Cum Laude (3.75-3.89) and Summa Cum Laude (3.90-4.00).

Three students, Maribeth Bavousett of Canyon, John R. Durrett of Amarillo, and Stacy R. Muno of Canyon, graduated with Summa Cum Laude honors.

Hints from Heloise

Dear Heloise: I had quite an experience: I lost my billfold, credit cards and $165 in cash. I laid my billfold on top of the car, then drove off.

I learned never to lay a package or anything on top of the car while unlocking it! — A Reader, Huntsville, Ala.

I am sympathetic. A friend of mine did the same thing. Fortunately, someone saw the purse on the top of the car and she was able to retrieve it before it flew off.

Thanks for sharing this experience. I hope others won't have to learn the hard way. As a precaution, try to break the habit of setting anything — purse, package or baby — on top of the car. — Heloise

A MUST READ

Dear Heloise: Recently I read about a baby in her walker who fell down the basement steps because a visiting neighbor child forgot to shut the basement door.

I'd like to tell you what my daughter did to prevent such a terrible accident. She put a screen-door spring on the door at the top of the stairs, hooking it to the middle of the door so it would close automatically if anyone went through it.

Believe me, it gave us all a little more peace of mind as it is so easy to forget to shut that door, and the situation is especially dangerous when there are guests. — T.S., Creston, Iowa roof style is hip. If your building site will accommodate a full basement, the first floor could be duplicated in its entirety, increasing the square footage to 2,420.

The plan is Number 245 V. It is available with either a crawl space or basement foundation. It includes 1,210 square feet on the main floor. All W. D. Farmer plans include special construction details for energy efficiency and are drawn to meet FHA and VA requirements. For further information write W. D. Farmer, P. O. Box 450025, Atlanta, GA 30345.

A stoop entry is direct to the spacious family area of this plan. The vast great room is a plus because it boasts a vaulted ceiling and is enormous in size. It presents an excellent arrangement by being connected to the kitchen. Complete visibility is to the treated wood deck and beyond to any spectacular view your building site may include. A stone chimney encompasses the fireplace and a basement stair alternate is available should your lot be sloped.

Identical bedrooms and baths are located at each side of the vast central family area. They too will have access and full view to the deck.

The facade pictured is the lake or view side. The exterior style is cottage, enhanced by vertical wood siding, symmetrical window placement and a stone chimney. The

Question-Answer

Q: My house has standard aluminum gutters and downspouts. The gutters are constantly getting clogged. On a recent trip to New Hampshire, I noticed that practically none of the houses had gutters. Instead, they had what looked like sheathing extending up the roof for about 3 feet. Would you know the principle behind this system?

A: What you saw was not the solution to clogged gutters or keeping gutters clean. In the Snow Belt, many houses don't have gutters because they contribute to ice damming or get torn loose by snow sliding off the roof.

The sheetmetal strip is slippery when wet and enables the snow at the lower edge of the roof to slide off easily, rather than build up into an ice dam, which can cause a backup of water under the shingles and into the house. The sheetmetal is generally extended far enough up the roof to cover a point at least 12 inches inside the interior wall line of the building.

Managing Inventory Part 1 of 2 Part Series

Joe and Mary opened their appliance store 17 years ago. Although they had no previous retail experience, the store prospered for the first 10 years.

During the past 3 or 4 years the store has been struggling. The inventory level has grown steadily and every year they move more and more slow selling merchandise into the backroom. The backroom is almost full.

Joe and Mary are experiencing cash flow problems because they have a lot of capital tied up in inventory. They are borrowing to bring in new inventory and the interest is reducing profits.

Small retailers across the country are experiencing the same problem. Inventories are increasing and available cash is declining. The good news is that inventory can be managed and turnover improved, even if mistakes have been made.

Inventory or Junk?

When inventory can't be sold it becomes junk. To most entrepreneurs this poses a real problem. They have an aversion to selling anything for less than its cost. They may keep inventory for months or even years rather than sell below cost.

I can relate. Fifteen years ago I was in the lawn and garden business. One of my suppliers came to me in the late summer with a real deal: Grass trimmers for $10 each. Ten dollars was less than half of the original cost, so I bought a hundred.

In the spring, the competition introduced a low priced model that sold for $13.97. I was trying to sell mine at $19.99 and I didn't sell any.

Let me try to show you what that bargain inventory really cost. I invested $1,000 into a product that I could not sell for 6 months. If instead, I had used the $1,000 to purchase Christmas inventory (gifts, trees, paper, etc.) which sells at twice the cost, I could have added $2,000 to cash flow. If I took half of the gross profits ($500) to pay store overhead, I would still have $1,500 left for spring inventory.

Now assume that I invested the $1,500 into spring merchandise (flowers, seeds, trees and shrubs) that carried the same keystone markup and sold all of it. I now have $3,000. Again, I use half of my margin ($750) to pay overhead and that leaves $2,250 for future inventory purchases.

Because I bought grass trimmers, I have the original $1,000 tied up. It has contributed nothing to overhead, let alone profits. In the second scenario, I would have paid $1,250 toward operating costs and added the same amount to profits.

The Turnover Key

The key to successfully managing inventory is to reduce the length of time it takes to sell the merchandise. By reducing the average age of your stock, you increase the number of times you can turn it each year.

If you work on a 100 percent markup, you double your available cash with each turn of your inventory. Of course some of this margin must be used to pay overhead expenses.

Today, I would handle the grass trimmer deal differently. First, I probably would not tie up my cash. Second, if I did purchase the 100 units, I would beat the competitor's price. As a last resort I would have a "Summer sizzler" sale and dump the units at cost or below.

Today I would keep inventory turning, even if it meant taking a loss. Carrying dead or dying inventory is a greater potential hazard even if the balance sheet looks better.

Next week, we will discuss five effective strategies for managing inventory. In the meantime, why don't you take a good look at your shelves, backroom and warehouse. If you don't like what you see, don't miss next week's column.

Applications being taken for '90-'91 crop disasters

Application for 1990 and 1991 crop disasters may be made from Monday through March 13.

The applications will be administered by the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service.

Producers should have already received necessary paperwork they must fill out before applying for benefits. A packet from the ASCS includes a letter summarizing the disaster program; a Farm Program Fact Sheet on the program; a worksheet; and information on acreages and program benefits for each crop.

Appointments will be made by the Deaf Smith County ASCS office for disaster program sign-up.

A bill was recently signed by President Bush providing $995 million for payments to producers who had crop losses due to natural disasters in either 1990 or 1991. Producers will select the year for filing, but do not have to use the same year for each farm. The payments will be in cash and computed according to the provisions of the 1990 farm bill. Payments to qualifying farmers could be made as soon as April 16.

Producers with qualifying gross revenues of less than $2 million per year may file claims on crops including sugar beets, wheat, feed grains, cotton, peanuts, soybeans, minor oilseeds and non-program crops, plus other crops not grown in the area.

Producers with crop insurance must have had losses greater than 35 percent; producers without crop insurance must have had losses greater than 40 percent.

A producer may not file on one crop on a farm for one year and a different crop on the same farm for the other. However, the producer may request benefits for 1990 on one farm and for 1991 on another farm.

Producers will get a more complete set of guidelines and a disaster program worksheet from the county ASCS office in the near future. The secretary said the producer must prepare the worksheet, gather supporting documents and make an appointment with the county ASCS office to apply for program benefits.

"Although the disaster loss application period will be from Feb. 3 through March 13, if further documentation is needed, the producer will be advised and given the opportunity to submit the required documentation no later than March 27," Secretary of Agriculture Edward Madigan said.

Applications filed will go to ASCS central computer facility. Benefits will be summarized and the national allocation factor for limiting total payments to the $995 million will be figured.

Corn Producers Board slates elections in four voting regions

The Texas Corn Producers Board (TCPB) announced that it will hold elections in four of its eight voting regions to elect six board members where current members' seats are expiring or where new corn production has created new board seats. The election will be conducted by voting regions. There are Two Seats open for election in Voting Region One which consists of Castro and Lamb counties; there is One Seat open for election in Voting Region Two which consists of Bailey, Oldham, Deaf Smith, Hartley and Farmer counties; there is One Seat open for election in Voting Region Eight which consist of Maverick, Atascosa, McMullen, Duval, Jim Hogg, Starr, Cameron, Zavala, Dimmitt, LiveOak, Jim Wells, Brooks, Hidalgo, Frio, La Salle, Webb, Zapata, Kenedy, and Willacy counties. There are Two Seats open for election in Voting Region Six, which consists of 121 counties.

A person is eligible to vote in this board election if he or she is, or for at least one production period during the three years preceding the date of this election (April 10, 1992) has been, a producer of corn or has caused corn to be produced for commercial purposes. This includes owners of farms and their tenants or sharecroppers if such person would be required to pay the assessment. Any person qualified to vote is also qualified to seek nomination for election to the board as a Director. However, qualified persons must reside within the TCPB voting region wherein they seek nomination. Nomination applications must be submitted to the TCPB signed by the applicant and ten other eligible voters in this election. Nomination forms are available at each county agent office in the 147 counties listed above in the four TCPB voting regions where elections are to occur, or they can be requested by mail directly from the TCPB, 218 E. Bedford, Dimmitt, Texas 79027.

If you request a nomination form by mail from TCPB, please include your county of residence.

Nomination forms are publicly available from county agent offices or by mail from the TCPB office after February 1, 1992. For a nomination form to be valid, it must be signed by an eligible applicant for nomination and ten other eligible voters, and must be mailed to the TCPB, 218 E. Bedford, Dimmitt, Texas 79027, with a postmark date of no later than March 2, 1992. Nomination applications with a postmark date later than March 2, 1992, will not be valid. Nomination applicants must reside in a county within a TCPB voting region where they seek nomination.

The TCPB is a research and promotion program for corn funded by a uniform corn checkoff, collected on a refund basis, from corn producers in every county of Texas. This election in four of the TCPB eight voting regions is the biennial election required by the Texas Commodity Referendum law.

State-federal teams gather market information daily

Three mornings a week before the sun comes up, a Texas Department of Agriculture Market News reporter is on the job at the Dallas Farmers Market, checking supplies, prices and the quality of fruits and vegetables. Within a matter of hours, the report is delivered to 50 state-federal Market News offices nationwide.

Meanwhile, every day at livestock auctions and feedlots, TDA and U.S. Department of Agriculture reporters gather the latest information on cattle, hog and sheep sales, which is also relayed around the country.

These reporters are part of a national information gathering team, a cooperative effort of state and federal government essential to the smooth, orderly flow of agricultural products to markets.

Texas has participated in the Market News service since the 1950s when it entered into an agreement with USDA to cover livestock, grain, fruits and vegetables, as well as poultry and egg markets. Administered at the local level by the Texas Department of Agriculture, the state program employs 15 reporters who often work side by side with 10 federal employees.

Reporters cover 60 year-round and seasonal statewide markets, including 20 livestock markets from Amarillo in the Panhandle to Alice in South Texas and from Sulphur Springs in East Texas to San Angelo out west.

By visiting wholesale and terminal markets, auction barns and feedlots, Market News reporters can get the most accurate, up-to-date information straight from buyers and sellers. And, they can accurately appraise supplies and the condition of crops and livestock headed to market.

This information helps producers make informed marketing decisions and get a fair price for their products.

Corn exports to be tested for aflatoxin

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Agriculture Department's Federal Grain Inspection Service will require that all corn exported from the United States after Feb. 20 be tested for aflatoxin prior to shipment.

The only exception will be corn whose purchasing contract stipulates that testing is not necessary, the department said in a recent news release.

At the same time, the inspection service will begin providing aflatoxin testing services for all grains, including corn.

The actions are necessary to implement 1990 Farm Bill requirements, said FGIS Administrator John C. Foltz.

Aflatoxin is any of several toxic or carcinogenic substances produced by a fungus found on peanuts, corn or other grains.

It also keeps shippers, wholesalers and other domestic and foreign buyers up to date on supplies and prices.

Making accurate marketing information available to producers and buyers is such an essential part of the success of agriculture that we added five new livestock markets in the past year. Located in Weatherford, Lockhart, Lampasas, Alice and Goldthwaite, these markets greatly increase the scope of our coverage. The Goldthwaite area, for example, produces sizable quantities of sheep and goats. And Alice is our first endeavor to cover the South Texas cattle market.

Marketing crops and livestock is complex business. Prices for perishable farm products fluctuate rapidly—often day-to-day or hour-to-hour—and products change hands many times before reaching consumers.

Without the availability of timely, unbiased information that Market News provides, prices could easily be manipulated. At one time, in fact, they were. Around the turn of the century, hearsay frequently dominated the market. It was easy to cheat farmers and ranchers by spreading false rumors about low prices; and con artists made use of this opportunity.

In 1915, the federal government took a step to eliminate this opportunity, establishing the Market News Service. The first office was opened in a log cabin in Hammond, Louisiana, then a center for strawberry production. Reports from Hammond proved so successful that 12 more federal fruit and vegetable offices were established, including one in Texas.

In 1946, Congress passed the Agricultural Marketing Act, providing Market News broad powers to collect, tabulate and disseminate statistics on prices, supplies, storage stocks and quantity, as well as the quality and condition of products. Soon after, the federal government initiated cooperative agreements with states.

Market News' highly trained staff and technologically sophisticated equipment are a far cry from that original office near Louisiana's strawberry fields. Reporters transmit their information by satellite via a state-of-the-art communications system. The data are fed to Washington, D.C., and from there across the country.

Reports fed to Washington are also available to national and international wire services such as the Associated Press, Commodity News Service and Reuters. TDA Marketing information thus is disseminated worldwide.

Not everyone works in the field. In Austin, for example, our reporters work by phone, gathering information from shipping points. Their data is also sent daily to USDA for nationwide dissemination. Reports from other states, in turn, are relayed to TDA and made available to buyers and producers.

In addition, our Austin staff compiles a weekly state and national livestock report that is mailed to subscribers. Two other reports on Texas produce are available from offices in Dallas and McAllen.

Up-to-date information is also communicated in other ways. Two toll-free telephone numbers provide grain and livestock market information 24 hours a day, while another provides news year-round on poultry and eggs, as well as seasonally on pecans, fruits and vegetables. Our market reports are also broadcast by radio.

By mid-1992, a new USDA computer database will connect every Market News office in the country. The network will improve efficiency and provide easy access to past and current information on commodities sold nationwide. This latest advance will serve to make Market News even more responsive to the needs of producers and buyers along the marketing chain.

USDA plans lime research

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Agriculture Department has issued regulations to establish a lime research and promotion program.

The program will be funded by a mandatory assessment of up to one cent per pound on domestic or imported limes sold in the United States. Producers or importers of less than 35,000 pounds of limes per year will be exempt from paying the assessment.

The program will be administered by a board of seven lime producers, three lime importers and a member representing the public, said Daniel D. Haley, administrator of USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service.

CLASSIFIED ADS
Classified advertising rates are based on 15 cents a word for first insertion ($3.00 minimum), and 11 cents for second publication and thereafter. Rates below are based on consecutive issues, no copy charge, straight word ads.

TIMES	RATE	MIN
1 day per word	.15	3.00
2 days per word	.28	5.20
3 days per word	.37	7.40
4 days per word	.48	9.60
5 days per word	.59	11.80

If you run ads in five consecutive issues with NO changes, you get the same ad in the Reach 4 More free. The regular charge for that ad would be $4.00.

CLASSIFIED DISPLAY
Classified display rates apply to all other ads not set in solid word lines—those with captions, bold or larger type, special paragraphing, all capital letters. Rates are $4.15 per column inch; $3.45 an inch for consecutive additional insertions.

LEGALS
Ad rates for legal notices are same as for classified display.

ERRORS
Every effort is made to avoid errors in word ads and legal notices. Advertisers should call attention to any errors immediately after the first insertion. We will not be responsible for more than one incorrect insertion. In case of errors by the publishers, an additional insertion will be published.

'Legacy' left to mankind for lessons, inspiration

An Egyptian boy surveys the timeless Nile River in Legacy, a probing six-hour series airing Sunday, Monday and Tuesday on PBS. The series travels over four continents in search of the heritage and people of the world's great civilizations, particularly those places where the ancient and modern worlds coexist.

Ancient civilizations unearthed on PBS

By Suzanne Gill

"Every man is brutish in his knowledge," wrote the prophet Jeremiah. Each of the world's great civilizations has struggled to smooth the rough edges off that brute, to attain self-knowledge as well as spiritual revelation.

Globe-trotting scholar Michael Wood replows that ancient furrow this week in Legacy, a six-hour documentary airing Sunday, Feb. 2, through Tuesday, Feb. 4, on PBS. According to Wood (In Search of the Trojan War, Art of the Western World), history has known at least six great civilizations, of which the Greek-descended West is but the latest. Part travelogue, part archeological expedition, part rallying cry aboard a voyage into the 21st century, Legacy invites viewers to scale a pyramid in Egypt, dine at an 800-year-old Chinese restaurant and explore a subterranean chamber in the ruins of a Mayan monument.

Civilization is not a continuum, Wood explains. Cities, written language, law, science and national identity, which are among the marks of civilization, are shown to have sprung up independently in five areas of the globe: Iraq, India, China, Egypt and Central America. The series visits each of these and comes to rest in the civilization of Europe, which, Wood maintains, owes much to the experience of the others.

Legacy opens in Iraq, where the world's first city was a by-product of the construction of the first communal place of worship. Here is the first of many revelations in the series: Church and state, far from being separate, are co-conspirators in the drama of civilization, and they have been in cahoots for more than 5,000 years.

Writer Michael Wood serves as host of PBS' Legacy, an examination of the world's great civilizations.

Linking the civilizations is a desire for peacemaking, for people of many beliefs to share tolerance and respect for each other. Stone monuments to the spirit, fertility rituals and centers of learning as well of trade all suggest to Wood a "deep common root" of humanity.

The undertaking is enormous, sending Wood scurrying through 14 countries to illustrate his stories, which he ticks off at breakneck speed. Each episode deserves at least two viewings. (Taking notes and referring to an atlas wouldn't hurt, either.) Even so, Wood does not leave us with a sense that we can return to these scenes without him, which might have been possible were a more generous or gifted teacher. And neither his decision to embrace all values equally nor to omit many of the darker deeds of these ancient peoples is necessarily a virtue. In some cases, Wood's efforts at myth-busting seem as unyielding and dangerous as the myths themselves, as in the dark picture he paints of the Roman Catholic Church's expansion into the New World.

STAR NOTES

Diminutive actor stars in tall tale

By Suzanne Gill
 "Quite often when I work, I am the special effect," says 3-foot, 7-inch actor Michael Anderson, who won fame as the Red Dwarf in Twin Peaks dream sequences.

Anderson, who was born and raised in Denver, says he did not pay special attention to his size until he was an adult. "I grew up in a wheelchair. I had a genetic bone disorder (that caused) over 300 broken bones before I was 25. So I didn't really realize the fact that I was a little person. It wasn't the biggest obstacle at hand."

After a decade on the road earning his living as a street musician, Anderson entered technical school, eventually working on NASA computer systems. Little Mike, a film documentary about his work on the "space shuttle, won international awards.

The two talents Anderson demonstrated in Twin Peaks — speaking backward and dancing — were picked up along the way as well, the former in high school, the latter in New York discos. Anderson will reprise the role in David Lynch's film Fire Walk With Me, which is due out this spring.

Also this spring, Anderson will appear on PBS' American Playhouse in Fool's Fire, an adaptation of an Edgar Allan Poe short story. He describes his role as the romantic lead in this fairy tale of the grotesque as the "photo negative" of his other parts. "Everything was a special effect except for me. I was the reality."

SOAP TALK

Soap awards prove ratings misleading

By Candace Havens
 The Soap Opera Digest Awards, held Friday, Jan. 10, on NBC, went as smoothly as any awards show could. There were the requisite number of mispronounced names, dresses that looked like they could pop off at any second and really bad jokes.

The tribute to editor Bill Bell (The Young and the Restless and The Bold and the Beautiful) was certainly deserved, and he seemed truly humbled by the attention. I had talked with Bell the day of the awards, and he gave no indication that he knew about winning the Editor's award.

I was surprised that many of you made the same choices I did in voting. It also shows how inaccurate the Nielsen ratings are, as the soaps that the fans rate highest are pretty low on the scale according to the Nielsens. For those of you who missed the show, here is a list of the winners:

Favorite Newcomer (female) went to the talented Alla Korot, and Favorite Newcomer (male) was presented to Paul Michael Valley, both of Another World. Best Death Scene belonged to Marcy Walker (Santa Barbara). Best Wedding was Jack and Jennifer's (Days of Our Lives). Melissa Reeves (Jennifer) was very cute and very pregnant.

Outstanding Villain was given to Michael Zaslow (Guiding Light), and Outstanding Villainess once again went to Lynn Herring (General Hospital). Jane Elliot (GH) picked up the award for Outstanding Supporting Actress. The Supporting Actor award went to the popular Doug Davidson (Y&R). Favorite Comic performance was given to a surprised Robert Mailhouse (Days).

Ricky Paul Goldin (AW) picked up the Outstanding Younger Leading Actor award, and a sincere Tricia Cast (Y&R) won the Outstanding Younger Leading Actress award. Once again, Outstanding Leading Actor was David Canary (All My Children). An out-of-work and pretty pathetic Anne Heche won Outstanding Leading Actress. She was practically begging for her old job.

The Favorite Soap award went to Days of Our Lives. While I picked Days to win this award, it amazes me that the show never goes above fifth place in the Nielsens. © TV Listing Inc.

FAMILY FARE

Animals perform 'Backstage at the Zoo'

By Chris Carpenter
 There's hardly anything more uplifting to a child than a close encounter with a representative of the animal kingdom. The trouble is, there's hardly any place more crowded and permeated with foul odor than the zoo. So, if the cat can't take another spin around the living room by the tail, and the local zoo is neither local nor much of a zoo, take heart. Backstage at the Zoo, The Family Channel's weekly tour of the world's most impressive man-made animal habitats, promises all the spider monkeys, giraffes and pythons a kid can eyeball. The Saturday-morning program is the inspiration of creator, writer and director Pola Miller, who realized it is easier to photograph a rhino from just outside its cage than from the back of a speeding jeep. Where other cameras have shown these animals being poached toward extinction, Miller's crew focuses on the less dramatic but valiant efforts to save them. Short on action footage, Miller enlivens the animals' daily routines with segments of fast-paced editing or slow motion, which can make a hippo seem more animated or slow a snowy owl's takeoff into an aerial ballet. Dennis Weaver, who's long been committed to wildlife preservation, serves as host and narrator. His country dialect adds a flavorful twang to the clever narration, which is used sparingly; it is the animals who are at the center of this stage.

'Fugitive Among Us' intelligent, engrossing

Strauss, Roberts shine in unpredictable film
 By Steven Alan McGaw

A simple synopsis of Fugitive Among Us might read, "A detective pursues an escaped convict," and, superficially, that's correct. At its center, however, this well-crafted, unpredictable drama, premiering on CBS Tuesday, Feb. 4, has a lot more to offer than that summary might indicate. "To me, the film is a study of obsession," says Peter Strauss, who plays Detective Lt. Max Cole. "It's not a healthy thing," the actor adds, and, indeed, Max's obsession with apprehending Cal Harper (Eric Roberts) proves unhealthy for both men. Cal is a cocky, gun-loving auto mechanic with an unfortunate hobby of impromptu target practice. One such escapade draws the attention of police, and soon Cal finds himself indicted for the attempted rape and near-fatal shooting of a young woman. The victim twice identifies Cal as her assailant and he is convicted. During sentencing, however, Cal makes a daring escape and hits the road. He doesn't stop until the gas and money run out near Las Cruces, N.M. For Cal, his flight from Texas means a time of assumed names and always looking over his shoulder. For Max, now divorced and relegated to a desk job, he sees in Cal's capture his own validation, even redemption. Strauss says Max has, "... a desperate hunger for forgiveness," to be absolved for his failed marriage, his temper, his single-mindedness. Only fate can bring the two together and set in motion events that will uncover the truth. Strauss finds every nuance in his character, while Roberts' intense performance is simply electric.

Elizabeth Pena brings warmth to her portrayal of another woman allegedly raped by Cal Harper. Fugitive Among Us is a work of rare style and complexity. Gordon Griesman's script, based on real events, is marked by skillful construction and pungent dialogue. Another asset is Stewart Copeland's dark score.

'Cats' composer profiled on A&E

By Dan Rice

When "Memory" was but a notion, Andrew Lloyd Webber played the tune fragment for his father and asked him what it sounded like. "Five million dollars," was his dad's reply. Not far off, for the composer of that memorable melody from his hit musical Cats has had an extensive line of successes that lay tribute to his talent and popularity. On Tuesday, Feb. 4, A&E Stage presents The Andrew Lloyd Webber Story, an overview of the life of the man who brought us the musicals Jesus Christ Superstar, Evita and The Phantom of the Opera. In addition to the composer, this special features appearances by Phantom star Michael Crawford and lyricist Tim Rice.

Woman seeks woman ... for murder. For a crime drama with a feminine touch, check out Daphne Zuniga in Prey of the Chameleon, premiering Friday, Feb. 7, on Showtime. Alexandra Paul portrays a sheriff on the trail of a serial killer (Zuniga) who assumes the personalities of her victims. James Wilder also stars in this Showtime original thriller.

Where's mama? The Discovery Channel's Global Family looks in on a critical situation Wednesday, Feb. 5, with an orphaned baby elephant starving for its mother's milk. Concerned park rangers cannot help the infant until proof is found of the mother's demise. See the outcome of this struggle for life in The Story of Ed, the Orphan Elephant. © TV Listing Inc.

'Magic' appears for NBA's All-Star game

By Steve Paschal

The National Basketball Association's All-Star Game is always a star-studded spectacular. But this year's classic, which will be televised Sunday, Feb. 9, on NBC, figures to have an extra touch of magic — "Magic" Johnson, that is.

The world was stunned Nov. 7 when Los Angeles Lakers guard Earvin "Magic" Johnson announced that he had tested positive for the HIV virus and was retiring from professional basketball. But while Johnson's revelation has been responsible for a new awareness about AIDS, his abrupt departure from the game left a void in the hearts of fans who haven't had a chance to bid a proper farewell to one of the game's truly great players.

In Los Angeles, fans will pay tribute to the former All-American when they retire his number during halftime of the Feb. 16 game against the Boston Celtics. But because doctors advised Johnson to retire immediately, fans in other cities will be deprived of showing their appreciation.

However, their love and respect for the man who was an integral part of five Laker championship teams in 12 seasons made him one of the top vote-getters in the All-Star balloting. Although Johnson's participation will almost assuredly be limited to a token appearance, his presence in Orlando, Fla., will eclipse anything else that could possibly happen on the floor.

Reader big fan of Christian Slater

By Taylor Michaels

Q: I was wondering if I could have the address for Christian Slater. I enjoy watching his movies and I really love his acting. So, I would really like for you to put it in Let's Talk. —Adrienne Hawker, Lake Crystal, Minn.

A: You can write to him care of CAA, 9830 Wilshire Boulevard, Beverly Hills, Calif., 90212.

Q: I am 11 years old and I was wondering if Mariah Carey's voice is really that high? If not, what instrument makes that high-pitched sound? —Kollin Groth, Creston, Iowa.

A: Carey's voice is indeed that high. Some people are fortunate enough to have beautiful, clear, high voices while others (like me) sound like bullfrogs with a cold.

Q: Could you please give me some information on Mel Gibson? Also, he has an early film made for television, I believe, called Tim, with Piper Laurie.

Christian Slater

I'm told the film is out of circulation. Can I ask why? And is there a video copy that can be either rented or purchased? —S. Weaver, Blanket, Texas.

A: Gibson was born on Jan. 3, 1956, in Peekskill, N.Y. He heard about Australia in stories about his grandmother, and when he was 12, his father moved his family back to Australia. He was treated as a loner at first (called Yank) and grew into one. Eventually, he drifted into acting. His big break came in what he calls "classy grade-B trash," meaning Mad Max, and it grossed $100 million. He is married with children to Robyn Moore.

The movie Tim is available on video and it retails for about $60. You might want to call the Video Library of Philadelphia at 800-669-7157. They specialize in mail-order video renting but they also sell videos.

Q: I am a big fan of Roseanne Arnold and her husband, Tom. Where can I write them? —M. Lawrence, Carlsbad, N.M.

A: You can write to them care of Roseanne, ABC, 4151 Prospect Avenue, Hollywood, Calif., 90027.

Q: I love the show Beverly Hills, 90210. Do you think you could give me Jason Priestley's address? —Curious, Monterey, Tenn.

A: You can write to him care of Beverly Hills, 90210, Fox Broadcasting Company, P.O. Box 900, Beverly Hills, Calif., 90213.

Q: Could you please tell me a few things about Jean-Claude Van Damme? Where he was born and what movies has he played in? —S.E.D., Nacogdaches, Texas.

A: Van Damme was born in Brussels, Belgium and moved to the United States in 1982. His American film debut was No Retreat, No Surrender and that role paved the way for a more substantial role in Predator. He has been in Cyborg, Kickboxer, Death Warrant, Lionheart and Double Impact. He is married and has two children.

Q: Why was Chuck Woolery's show canceled? He was the only one on television talk shows who was really interested in his guests and what they have to say. And he didn't find it necessary to have his show dwell on sex or violence. We are sick of all this being shoved down our throats! I hope he will be back on. Jenny Jones is so impressed by herself I simply turn the channel. Even reruns are better! —Carol, North Newton, Kan.

A: I'm sure many people feel the same way as you. Woolery's show was canceled due to poor ratings. Not because his show was bad, but because there are so many talk shows out there these days. It's difficult for newer shows to survive.

ABC designs shows for Burke, Lavin, Andrews and Day

Delta rises again. ABC Entertainment president Robert Iger recently added Delta Burke's name to the list of comedic actresses preparing to grace his network. Burke, who left CBS' Designing Women last spring after stormy disputes with the show's creators, will star in a series developed by producer Barry Kemp (Coach) for debut this fall. In addition, Iger is about to debut a series featuring Linda Lavin as the down-to-earth mother of a New York television producer, and is readying a comedy starring Julie Andrews and three TV movies to be written especially for Doris Day. Once he gets those projects off the back burner, he'll have to renegotiate his contract for Roseanne, which is about to expire. After the diplomatic challenge of keeping both Burke and Roseanne Arnold happy, perhaps Iger will want to retire to a quieter life ... say, Middle East negotiator.

Delta Burke

A candlelit dinner for 100 was the setting for a recent speech by entertainer and roundtable philosopher Steve Allen. "There's an old saying that it is better to light one little candle than to curse the darkness. And, given certain contextual factors, it is. But the observation should by no means be interpreted as discouraging darkness-cursing," said Allen. "We need a lot more darkness-cursing as well as candle-lighting, because after all, the one leads to the other. If it were broad daylight, who would ever invent the candle?"

Ventriloquist Shari Lewis has nothing but praise for Muppeteer Jim Henson. "Jim was absolutely a master," Lewis says. "Not just a puppeteer.

Robin Cook/Michael Crichon

COMA: (1978) Starring Michael Douglas and Genevieve Bujold. When inquisitive hospital physician Susan Wheeler (Genevieve Bujold) discovers that the unscrupulous higher-ups are doing strange, and funny things with health patients, she tells her lover Dr. Bellows (Michael Douglas), and he refuses to believe her. Bujold and Richard Widmark are well-matched adversaries in this original suspense that combines the best of hospital pictures and mystery thrillers. Look for Tom Selleck as one of the many corpses which are suspended from the ceiling - the most singularly eerie image in the film. Rated PG.

Frederick Forsyth

ODESSA FILE: (1974/British/German) Starring Jon Voight and Maximilian Schell. Set in 1963, this fine, fast-paced, edge-of-the-seat international thriller revolves around the efforts of Peter Miller (Jon Voight), a reporter and son of a WWII German soldier, to track down some old SS men who mysteriously vanish after the war. By chance Miller reads the diary of a death camp survivor and that chilling document sends him in search of Eduard Roschmann (Maximilian Schell), a Nazi who has gone into hiding. His investigation is sidetracked by members of the Odessa - a secret group of former Nazis. The group members, realizing Miller poses a threat to their existence, send a hit man after him. With the help of Israeli intelligence and lots of makeup, Miller assumes a new identity and infiltrates the Odessa en route to a plot-twisted finale. The film is a bit too long and convoluted but if one concentrates on the subtleties, it's a rewarding experience. Rated PG.

POINT BREAK: (1991) Starring Patrick Swayze and Keanu Reeves. Scrounging around for clues after a bank stickup in Southern California, agents from the-F.B.I. turn up a suspicious substance in a footprint wax. Well, it's a start, so Kathryn Bigelow's film sends a young rebel lawman, named Johnny Utah (Keanu Reeves), to infiltrate a surfing group suspected of the heist. There he encounters the group's leader, a sort of beach boy Svengali, named Bohdi (Patrick Swayze). Bohdi leads Utah on frantic chases, and in an escalating series of explosive encounters, Utah learns the truth of Bohdi's most important lesson which is, if you want the ultimate thrill, you have to be prepared to pay the ultimate price. The action scenes aptly display Ms. Bigelow's real talents as a director of fast-paced, high-adrenaline action. This is an action-thriller that's fun. Rated R for language and violence.

VICTOR BORGE IN LONDON: (1980/British) Starring Angela Lansbury, Elizabeth Taylor, Rock Hudson and Kim Novac. Angela Lansbury takes over the Miss Marple role in a film that offers a look behind the scenes of a movie set in the 1950s. Marina Rudd (Elizabeth Taylor) is a has-been actress who is trying to make a comeback while suffering a mental breakdown. Her problems stem from a mysterious accident in her past, which may or may not have been accidental. When a pair of murders shock the quiet English hamlet where the film is being produced, Miss Marple and her sleuthing nephew, Inspector Craddock, unearth the evidence that names the guilty party. Rated PG. It's a hoot of a mystery - especially with Elizabeth Taylor and Kim Novac, as catty rival movie stars.
