County hits snag on lines

By GEORGIA TYLER
Staff Writer

The U.S. Justice Department has denied preclearance for the Deaf Smith County plan for redistricting for county commissioner and voting precincts.

Preclearance is required by federal voting laws for changes that may affect elections.

County Judge Tom Simons said he learned Friday that the Justice Department wants more information before the plan, prepared by the Austin law firm of Jim Allison and Associates, may go into effect.

"Analysis indicates that the information sent is insufficient to enable us to determine that the proposed changes do not have the purpose and will not have the effect of denying or abridging the right to vote on account of race, color or membership in a language minority group," said the federal notification sent to the Austin law firm. The notice was sent by fax to Simons.

Commissioners began redrawing precinct lines when the Austin law firm was retained early last year to prepare the plan. The lines must be redrawn every 10 years after the release of census figures.

Simons said Friday that plans from at least eight counties in West Texas were returned at about the same time.

"They all had the same problem," Simons said.

Among requirements to be met now is a compilation of returns for statewide, legislative, judicial, county and school board elections between 1980 and 1990 that included a minority candidate.

A general check-list sent with the Justice Department material asked for some information that Simons said was sent in the original submission in October or in additional information sent in December.

"We feel we've provided this information but we will try again," Simons said, adding that he will give a report on the situation to Commissioners' Court in a special meeting scheduled Monday for other purposes.

"We won't take any action -- I'll simply tell commissioners what has happened," the county judge said.

Another item that the Justice Department has asked for is any other plan for redistricting that was prepared by another group. Simons said he's aware of one that Texas Rural Legal Aid devised.

"That's the only one I know of and I think it was sent with our application," he said. "I'm not aware of any protest filed by any group, either."

The Austin attorney who has worked extensively with the Deaf Smith County plan, Bob Bass, notified Simons of the Justice Department's requirements and the denial.

Simons said the law firm will continue to prepare materials needed to obtain the preclearance, required by the Federal Voting Rights Act of 1965.

There is some urgency in the matter, Simons said, because of primary elections in the spring.

Farmers charge DPS harassment

PLAINVIEW (AP) - A late sugar beet harvest in the Panhandle due to rainy weather has prompted several farmers to illegally overload their rigs with sugar beets in order to get them processed before they rot, authorities say.

Department of Public Safety officials have been stopping trucks along the main routes in the Panhandle to weigh the trucks and issue citations.

"We're not here to shut the harvest down," DPS license and

CSF helps 138 homes in county

A total of 138 households were assisted with food, clothing, utility or medical bills during the Christmas Stocking Fund campaign this holiday season.

A CSF spokesman reported that 55 food baskets--containing a variety of canned goods and 45 turkeys--were delivered prior to Christmas, in addition to 50 baskets provided by Kiwanians. CSF spent about $8,000 on clothing and blankets, and another $3,000 on vouchers for utility and medical bills.

A total of 266 children were provided with clothing and other items by the holiday charity. The total funds for the charity amounted to $17,258.57. A CSF spokesman said all but $100 (for a prescription) of the contributions were spent locally.

The Christmas Stocking Fund is administered by an anonymous group of volunteers, representing a cross-section of community residents, and it does not discriminate on the basis of race, religion, sex or national origin.

Four more donations were received after Christmas to run the fund-raising total to $17,258.57. The total was just $768 short of last year's campaign.

Prison committee's focus on incentives

By JOHN BROOKS
Managing Editor

With an option on land for a proposed prison facility being committed by the City of Hereford, the Prison Task Force is moving its attention to incentives which might be included in an application package to be submitted to the Texas Department of Criminal Justice.

Committee chairmen on the task force met Thursday afternoon and began discussions on enhancements to be offered if a prison facility is located in Deaf Smith County. The group is working toward a Jan. 15 deadline on having the proposal completed.

The City of Hereford announced last Tuesday that it is committing 300 acres of land for the proposed site. The tract is located about 6.5 miles east of town, just east and south of the city airport.

O.G. (Speedy) Nieman, task force chairman, said the group hopes to "nail down those incentives" early next week. He explained that the enhancements offered in the package will not be announced until after Jan. 15, because of the competition between cities seeking a prison site.

A rough draft of information to be included in the application was submitted by coordinator Mike Hatley Thursday. "We've still got a lot of work to do, but I think the package is coming together and we'll have it ready before the deadline," Nieman added.

The task force chairman praised the city and county for their cooperation and support in the project. "Securing an option on city land for the proposed site gave us a big boost, and now the county is working on the access road situation," said Nieman. "This has been a united effort and we feel like the entire community is behind us."

The committee has run into a problem on getting the required soil borings at the land site. Wet weather has prevented equipment from being moved in for the tests. Chester Nolen, city manager, said the site was too muddy this week, but he hoped to get the tests made Monday. If not, Nolen said he feels the committee can get an extension on those tests, alone.

All the communities seeking prison facilities must submit their proposals before noon on Jan. 15. No dates have been announced for the TDCJ to make a final determination as to which sites are chosen and what type of facility will be placed at each location. There has been mention that the sites could be announced at the TDCJ April board meeting.

A "short list" of communities is expected to be announced in February or March, then oral presentations would be made in Austin by those cities chosen as finalists.

Three announce candidacy

Three candidates for political office made their official announcements this week for offices.

Candidates had been facing a deadline last Thursday, but the deadline has been changed to Friday. The deadline for filing was moved back as part of a court order that also led to the Texas Legislature meeting in special session to redraw boundary lines.

Mike Morrison has announced that he will seek the Democratic nomination for Deaf Smith County sheriff, subject to the March primary. Morrison will oppose current sheriff Joe Brown in the Democratic primary.

Morrison is a native of Deaf Smith County and served four years on the Hereford Police Department, 1982-86. He received his basic law enforcement certification from Amarillo college and completed other law enforcement continuing education programs.

Morrison is currently employed by Oglesby Equipment and is a reserve deputy with the Deaf Smith County sheriff's deputy.

Tony Castillo Jr. of Hereford has announced his candidacy for county commissioner of Precinct 1, subject to the Democratic primary.

Castillo will oppose incumbent John Stribling in the primary. Castillo, 45, is a graduate of Lampasas High School and Amarillo College. He is a US Navy veteran of the Vietnam War, and has lived in Hereford for the past 14 years.

Castillo is a self-employed trucker and is an active member of San Jose Church, where he is a fourth degree member of the Knights of Columbus. Castillo has also been actively involved in Kids Inc. for many years.

Paul Hamilton has announced his candidacy for Deaf Smith County commissioner for Precinct 3, subject to the Democratic primary in March.

He will oppose current commissioner Troy Don Moore in the primary. Hamilton, a Hereford native, is employed by WT Services. He served two terms as a Hereford city commissioner. He was unsuccessful in his bid last year for mayor.

Hamilton is a board member and immediate past president of the Hereford Noon Kiwanis Club, is a member of the Hereford Volunteer Fire Department and worked with Hereford EMS for 15 years.

Building permits hit 33-year low

By GEORGIA TYLER
Staff Writer

Construction in Hereford during 1991 started slowly in January and failed to pick up momentum as the year progressed.

Building permits issued by the City of Hereford for the year amounted to $838,614, the lowest total since 1958 when permits were issued for $831,450 in construction projects.

The '91 report from the city shows permits issued for two new homes--a small bright spot, compared with the single new home permit in 1990.

The city issued 99 permits during the year for new construction, repairs and additions to existing facilities.

Two new residences in Hereford were the reason for $100,000 in permits and a new structure for the Fellowship of Believers was listed at $130,000.

Repairs, additions and alterations of business buildings in Hereford amounted to $241,242 in permits.

Residential additions and repairs totaled $107,000, and Hereford schools added to the total with portable buildings costing $80,000.

The gloomy year in construction opened in January with only four permits for $28,500. In February only four permits were issued for $5,300 and the total for two months stood at $33,800.

During March, the figures were more than doubled with 9 permits for $78,342 taken out for construction by businesses and individuals.

Spring brought a mild increase with 13 permits issued in April for $75,900, lifting the total for the first third of the year to $188,042.

Winding up the first six months of the year, eight permits for $141,400 in May, and 11 for $61,550 in June raised the total to $390,992.

July fell off to $38,890 on eight permits and August was only slightly better, nine for $45,650.

Ten permits were issued by the city in September for $103,800 in construction work and another $19,530 was added in October on five permits.

November was the best month of the year as 15 permits were taken out for $148,752 in building in Hereford.

The December total was $91,000 on three permits.

The 99 permits issued by the City of Hereford in 1991 is the lowest since 1982 when the same number was reported. However, the dollar figure was higher that year, standing at $1,352,000.

Construction in Hereford has been on a roller coaster ride for several years.

The all-time high in building permits was recorded in 1985 when the worth of 168 permits was placed at $11.8 million. The second-highest on record was 1976 with 284 permits for $7.4 million.

As recently as 1987, $6.1 million was the third-ranking high in Hereford building permit records. Fourth on the list of high levels was 1978 with 249 permits for $6.09 million.

In 1977, the city issued 305 permits for $5.7 million, the fifth highest on record.

After the all-time high in 1985, construction dipped to $2.01 million in '86, recovered to $6.1 million in 1987, then slid to $3.4 million in 1988.

Permits in '89 slipped to $2.2 million and recovered slightly, to $2.5 million in 1990. The '91 total is slightly less than a third of the 1990 total.

New home building

Among building projects started in 1991 is a new home in northwest Hereford. The city issued permits for $838,614 in construction last year, the lowest total since 1958.

Council will re-hear plea

A request for a zoning change, turned down by the Hereford City Commission in December, will make a return trip Monday evening.

Oralia Guzman has asked that property at 319 Avenue C be zoned MH to permit a mobile home, the same request she made to the planning and zoning board on two occasions, the latest last Monday.

The lot originally was the site of a mobile home but when the building was moved, the property reverted to a residential, R-2, designation.

Mrs. Guzman has asked for the waiver so the mobile home may be returned to the site for her son's family.

After the change was denied by P&Z in December, the commission upheld the decision but suggested that Mrs. Guzman take her case back to the board, along with a list of names of persons she said lived in the neighborhood and had no objection to her request.

However, last Monday night written protests were received by the board and persons opposed to the change appeared at the meeting. The board voted unanimously to recommend denial of the request.

City ordinances require that the commission make the final determination of zoning changes. The planning and zoning board is an advisory group.

The commission will hear another request for zoning changes from Davis Ford who has asked for mobile home designations for several lots.

A proposed re-organization of city personnel will be discussed in an executive session. Recommendations for appointment of a city secretary and assistant city manager will be heard in open session.

The changes are occasioned by the expected retirement in February of Bonnie Duke, city secretary for a number of years.

City Manager Chester Nolen said the assistant city manager will assume finance duties currently handled by Mrs. Duke as well as other assigned projects.

The commission meeting will begin at 7:30 p.m. Monday.

The fear of fear

What do Earl Campbell, Aretha Franklin, Sir Laurence Olivier, Willard Scott and Carly Simon have in common? They've all had panic attacks. So have millions of other Americans. By John Barbour.

NEW YORK (AP) - Every day millions of Americans live in dread of fear itself.

In their lifetimes, 26 million will be visited by irrational terror, some by a choking, heart-racing, dizzying, paralyzing panic so severe that they think they are dying or going crazy.

For some, it means insulating themselves, locking themselves up in their homes alone, or, paradoxically, making sure they are always with someone they trust in circumstances they can trust.

Each new attack reinforces the last.

Dr. Jack Gorman and his colleagues at Columbia University's Department of Psychiatry and the New York State Psychiatric Institute say patients with panic disorder often describe their first panic attack with remarkable vividness. They recall in detail what they were doing on the day of the first attack, what happened, and how they felt afterward.

"Such descriptions convince the clinician that panic attacks are devastating," Gorman says. "Feelings of dread, fear, and a sense of impending doom overwhelm the patient who becomes lightheaded, dizzy and faint."

Dr. Alan Goldstein of Philadelphia's Temple University, says, "At the core of all this is a learned fear of fear."

"Just as someone bitten by a dog comes to fear dogs, so does one bitten by panic come to fear panic. Just as the body mobilizes for an anticipated dog attack with the 'fight or flight' response, so it does with anticipated attack from within by panic."

An estimated 9 percent of Americans are afflicted with anxiety-phobic disorders in any six-month period, a third more than those suffering from alcohol and drug abuse, and almost a third more than those suffering from depression and related disorders.

Doctors who intervene to break the chain of fear frequently force the patient to face his fear. Dr. David Clark of England's Oxford University says patients sometimes interpret an increased heart rate as evidence of a heart attack, or breathlessness as a sign they are about to suffocate, or racing thoughts as a sign they are going mad.

He asked one patient who feared he was going mad if he had ever actually gone mad. The patient said no. Then why not, asked Clark, and the patient said he always mastered his thoughts just in time. Then, if you can do that, said Clark, then certainly you could reverse this skill and make yourself go mad, at which point the patient realized that he couldn't go mad, even if he wanted to.

Panic disorders are different than - but sometimes lead to - phobias.

But phobias also can cripple a person's ability to perform, as was the case with the late Sir Laurence Olivier. In at least five years at the close of his career he suffered from stage fright, a phobia that was first documented during his role in "The Master Builder" in 1964. On opening night, the great actor told the audience, "Ladies and gentlemen, I am very sorry, but I am rather ill and..." His voice trailed off.

While the nature of a phobia is clear to the sufferer, he or she being afraid of going out or crowds or elevators, the trigger of a panic disorder is not. It strikes almost anyone, says Jerilyn Ross of the Anxiety Disorders Association of America, including such celebrities as singers Aretha Franklin and Carly Simon and football running back Earl Campbell.

What begins as an innocuous activity, riding in an elevator, getting into a car, sitting at a desk, becomes an absolute horror, lasting up to 10 minutes, sometimes longer.

Campbell, the Football Hall of Famer, recently told a group from Congress how the panic would hit him: "I would just be sitting there, and all of a sudden I would be hit...with this unbelievable terror. I could do nothing. I was afraid to move."

It all came on him after Campbell retired from football and went into business. "I would wake up with my heart racing, breathing real fast, and I would just be afraid to do anything." By doing research on his problem, he says he's been able mostly to cure it. "I've been lucky."

Broadway and movie actor Phil Bosco ("Lend Me a Tenor," "Breaking Legs") remembers his first visitation with terror when he was a pre-teen, baby-sitting his younger brother who fell off a bed and separated a shoulder. He remembers it as a "night of terrible fear" when he could not quiet his brother's crying.

But his first real attack probably came when he was 19, driving a truck somewhere around Rahway, N.J. when he encountered a low bridge. "I thought I was dying," his heart racing, short of breath, filled with "an urge to flee." He pulled into an illegal lane, and when he got to the other end of the bridge a police car pulled him over. The officer, seeing his plight, let him go. That led to a fear of bridges. Bosco, now 61, lived with his phobias which began to include tunnels and elevators. Once he could not make it to a rehearsal for what he recalls was Shakespeare's "King Henry IV," and the director led him to psychiatrists who could not really help. Panic disorder was not truly defined until a decade ago.

It was his wife's interest in medicine that finally led him to psychiatrists who prescribed tricyclic antidepressants. "The last seven years was like a liberation. You begin to fear fear itself."

weights trooper Curtis Sanders said Friday. "We just want them to comply with the law."

The Panhandle beet harvest is finally under way after being delayed several weeks because of downpours of rain and snow.

Farmers are concerned that pulling the trucks over could jeopardize processing.

District attorney Terry McEachern of Kress said he received calls from farmers "whose basic complaint was that they didn't want the trucks tied up because the processing plant (Holly Sugar in Hereford) needs so many tons a day or it has to shut down. If the plant closes, farmers lose the beets still in their fields."

But McEachern said the DPS was detaining the trucks for only a few minutes to issue overweight citations.

"They weren't making them unload the trucks like they could have done," McEachern said.

Sanders and trooper Jesse Mendoza stopped 10 trucks Friday afternoon. The overweights averaged 10,000 pounds, with some of the trucks as much as 26,000 pounds over their registered weight, the officers said.

Of the 10, seven were allowed to continue after delays of 15 to 20 minutes while citations were written, the officers said.

The remaining three were detained until other drivers could be found because the original drivers weren't properly licensed.

Authorities say a typical fine on a truck that's 10,000 pounds overweight ranges from $60 to $125. According to the drivers, a truck's owner is responsible for the fines.

The drivers are paid primarily by the ton and maintain that they have to break the law to make money.

"With the price of fuel and tires, we can't make it," one driver, who asked not to be identified, told the Plainview Daily Herald. "A legal load is worth about $100. An illegal one is about $150 and we get 25 percent of what the truck makes."

"We would make a little on legal loads - about minimum wage. We've got to overload to make it worthwhile. But I don't blame the DPS. They're not harassing us. They're just doing their job. It's what they're there for."

DPS license and weights supervisor Sgt. Larry Henry in Lubbock said farmers can't be given special privileges.

"If they continue to overload, the farm roads will turn to junk," Henry said. "Part of our responsibility is to protect the highways and make sure vehicles are safe. They need to go up on the rates if they can't make it."

Police arrest six Friday

Six persons were arrested Friday by Hereford police, including a man, 18 at Fourth and S. 25 Mile Ave. for theft; a man, 26, in the 400 block of Barrett for Class C assault domestic violence; a man, 40, at Grand and Ave. H for driving while intoxicated; a woman, 28, in the 200 block of N.

Lee for running a red light and no driver's license; a man, 25, at the entrance to Veterans Park for driving while license suspended; and a man, 27, at Highway 60 and Lawton for public intoxication.

Reports included theft in the 100 block of S. 25 Mile Ave. and in the 700 block of Thunderbird; burglary of a residence in the 400 block of Ave. B; criminal mischief in the 900 block of Irving and in the 400 block of Ave. G; and a person with mental problems.

Police issued six citations Friday.

Sentences given in district court

A seven-year prison sentence was assessed a defendant when his probation for an aggravated perjury conviction was revoked in 222nd District Court.

Antonio Ortiz was sentenced to seven years in the Texas Department of Criminal Justice institutional division by Judge David Wesley Gulley. He was convicted on the aggravated perjury charge in 1989.

A 10-year probated prison sentence was given Christopher Todd Danley, who entered a guilty plea to burglary of a building, in connection with a break-in at a Hereford school. He also will be required to make restitution of $2,964.95.

A guilty plea to felony driving while intoxicated was entered by Daniel Santiago Garcia. Judge Gulley sentenced him to five years probation and a $1,000 fine.

Probation was modified for two defendants.

A one-year extension of probation was assessed Raymond Uvalle, convicted of aggravated perjury in 1989.

An extension of one year on his probation also was given George Palacios for two offenses, unauthorized use of a motor vehicle and theft over $750 and under $20,000, both committed in 1988.

AT&T break up hard to do

By BART ZIEGLER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) - Ten years ago this week American Telephone & Telegraph Co. agreed to give up its local phone companies, ending its role as the world's largest corporation and ushering in a new era of telephone competition.

The agreement settled one of the most important antitrust cases in U.S. history, comparable to the 1911 breakup of Standard Oil Co.

It ended 97 years of near-mono-poly long-distance service by "Ma Bell" and led to the transformation of the sluggish phone giant into a leaner, more aggressive organization.

Today, consumers can choose their long-distance phone company much like they pick a brand of toothpaste. Such choice was virtually unheard of a decade ago.

"We clearly have a more competitive telecommunications environment, with many more services and competitive prices and better quality," said Mark S. Fowler, who was chairman of the Federal Communications Commission at the time.

"The real question is, was it worth the price that was paid? That price was wholesale customer confusion" before and after the breakup, he said.

Others say the AT&T agreement replaced one relatively benign phone monopoly with seven more aggressive ones - the regional phone companies that resulted from the breakup.

The regional companies - Ameritech, Bell Atlantic, BellSouth, Nynex, Pacific Telesis, Southwestern Bell and U S West - ended up owning AT&T's 22 local phone companies.

Because they control the local switches, the electronic devices that shunt calls to the correct numbers, they have a monopoly over distributing calls to homes and most businesses.

Cooper's group contends these "Baby Bells" have overcharged for local phone service and used excess profits to enter risky unregulated businesses, such as real estate and computer services. The companies deny the accusation.

"Divestiture created turmoil and problems," said Mark Cooper, research director for the Consumer Federation of America. "The deep-seated problems are the difficulty of restraining the abusive practices of the local monopolies."

The consumer federation is especially critical of a federal court's decision last year allowing the regional companies to enter the information services business and provide data like stock quotes and news reports over phone lines.

The consumer group believes the regional companies will subsidize these services with local phone profits, giving them an unfair advantage over other electronic information providers.

The federation has little problem with AT&T itself, which faces strong competition in long-distance phone service from MCI Communications Corp. and Sprint.

"At least you've got competition to impose some discipline," Cooper said. "In the local market you simply do not have that discipline."

However, the past few years have seen the beginnings of competition in local service, although only for business customers. Several startup phone companies have installed lines linking companies with long-distance carriers, bypassing Bell, Bell switches.

The antitrust case that led to AT&T's breakup was filed by the Justice Department in 1974. It contended the phone giant unfairly limited competition in long-distance service and phone equipment.

AT&T had virtually blocked long-distance competitors by limiting access to its local switches. The practice led MCI to file lawsuits and press the FCC and the Justice Department to take action on antitrust grounds.

As for equipment, AT&T and its local companies bought the overwhelming majority of it from AT&T's Western Electric Co. The government said that squeezed out competitors and drove up costs. AT&T fought the case for years. But it finally realized the tide was turning against its monopoly position, said Charles L. Brown, AT&T's chairman from 1979 to 1986.

Among the indicators: FCC decisions favoring nascent long-distance competitors and bills proposed in Congress to introduce competition.

Brown called the attempts to break AT&T's monopoly a "three-ring circus" that caused paralysis at the company. To end it, Brown began secret negotiations with the Justice Department that led to a consent decree outlining the company's breakup.

"It became apparent this was one way to cut the knot and get free of this entangled mess. We would be rid of the uncertainty that had been on our backs," he said.

PANIC

At his wife's urging he has conquered his fears of tunnels, bridges and elevators. "I'm going to work on my fear of flying," he says.

Willard Scott, the NBC weatherman who also serves on the board of directors of the Anxiety Disorders Association of America, says, "The broadcast phobia really hit me one morning just out of the blue...I was on the air...and, like that, I started to hyperventilate...to the point I was barely able to speak."

Panic disorder was separated from the rest of human anxieties only about 10 years ago. Panic attacks are sometimes, but not always, associated with some dire life circumstance, loss of a loved or trusted companion, an accident, or a life-threatening illness.

While pregnancy seems to be a shield from panic, panic sometimes occurs shortly after delivery of a child. Some people with thyroid disorders have attacks during stressful situations and many people have their first attacks while using mind-altering drugs, marijuana, cocaine, amphetamines.

None of those preconditions is necessary, however. Some doctors think there is a biological basis for panic and cite genetic susceptibility. Others think of it as a behavioral process gone astray, something which behavioral training can fix.

Summing up recent developments in the field, the National Institutes of Health issued a consensus statement on panic disorder treatment, concluding that a combination of antidepressants and selected psychosocial treatments are effective. It defined the disorder as a cluster of four spontaneous attacks within a four-week period.

It listed 13 discrete symptoms, including shortness of breath, palpitations, trembling or shaking, hot flashes or chills, chest pain or discomfort sweating, numbness or tingling, depersonalization or derealization, nausea or abdominal distress.

Even when critical life circumstances are solved, panic lives on. Dr. Gorman cites cases in which patients with thyroid problems can be treated and even after their return to normalcy still fall victim to panic.

Panic attacks, he says, have "a life of their own."

"After the first panic attack, the patient usually forgets about the incident and anxiety returns to a normal level, without evidence of serious anxiety symptoms. A few days to weeks later, however, a second spontaneous panic attack occurs."

The same paralyzing set of symptoms.

Usually victims seek emergency medical treatment, and because they report heart or respiratory involvement, doctors order complete medical workups. When no problem is found, they are reassured and given broad-ranging common tranquilizers. These drugs are effective in lowering general anxiety, but fail in the face of panic. When attacks continue, patients tend to overdose themselves.

Having failed to find a medical answer, many victims try to go it alone. Some go on for years fighting off several attacks a week. Some turn to alcohol or illegal drugs, in spite of the fact they only mask the situation temporarily and panic rebounds even more strenuously when the initial relief ebbs.

Repeated failure leads to self-diagnosis, which leads to broader phobias.

The utter failure of self-confidence in the face of panic becomes crippling.

Gorman says no one knows why, but about a third of the patients with panic disorders go on to develop agoraphobia, a fear of public places, and others do not. Some associate what they were doing or where they were at the time of the attack as the trigger for the attack.

"For example, a patient who experiences the first few panic attacks while driving a car may believe that avoiding driving will reduce the frequency of panic attacks. Second, and perhaps of greater significance, the patient begins to avoid situations where egress is difficult and help is not immediately at hand."

The list is long. Subways, buses, airplanes, cars that can get stuck in traffic jams on bridges, crowds in a public theater, elevators.

Although the onset of panic disorders most frequently occurs in teen-agers and young adults, doctors doubt that it is responsible for the high suicide rate in those years.

Depression remains the prime psychiatric disorder preceding suicide attempts, especially among young people, says Dr. Susan Blumenthal, chief of behavioral medicine for the National Institute of Mental Health. Doctors can do much to catch impending suicides, she says, since about half the people who commit suicide have seen a physician in the few weeks to a month before they take their lives.

When doctors become aware that their patients are suffering from panic disorders, they have some potent weapons at hand. Two classes of antidepressants are especially effective, tricyclics and monamine oxidase inhibitors and high-potency benzodiazepines.

But in a study of 43 patients with panic disorder, Dr. William Coryell of the University of Iowa School of Medicine found that one in four given only placebos, rather than drugs, markedly improved, hinting at least that a sizable portion of the problem is in the head.

In the long term, some therapists believe that behavioral training can clear up the concomitant phobias. Patients are encouraged to approach the terrorizing agent, such as the elevator door for instance, one step at a time, then to ride for a few floors, building confidence with each progression. Others suggest psychotherapy.

There are a variety of self-help programs, perhaps the broadest-based being the Anxiety Disorders Association of America, formerly the Phobia Society of America. "Amazingly, phobias, the most common of all psychiatric disorders - so long one of the most misunderstood - turn out to be one of the most treatable," says Ross, the head of the association. "Yet sadly, thousands of people still have not been helped because they have been unable to find and/or afford effective treatment, or are too frightened or embarrassed to ask for help."

Her organization tries to connect people with phobias with each other and with professionals to get them to confront their fears and their isolation. It has established some 300 groups around the country.

Freedom From Fear is another self-help organization, connected with New York's Columbia University. Its founder, Mary Guardino, is a former phobic. She finally turned to treatment one day when she had to interrupt a car trip to a mall with her three children.

"I couldn't tell them we can't go to the mall, your mother is having a panic attack," she says.

Records set for homicides

By MITCHELL LANDSBERG
Associated Press Writer

In Dallas, the 501st and final homicide of 1991 came at 15 minutes to midnight on New Year's Eve. Police said a man caught someone trying to steal his car and shot him.

In Milwaukee, homicide No. 168 was the result of gunfire at a bus stop on New Year's Eve. In Anchorage, Alaska, a murder-suicide that day went into the books as homicides No. 25 and 26 of the year.

For all three cities, as with many others across the country, 1991 was the deadliest year on record.

"Whether you personally are ever shot at or not, you should be concerned," said Mayor Richard Vinroot of Charlotte, N.C., where the 115 homicides in 1991 easily surpassed the 1990 record of 93.

Explanations for the homicide records vary. Drugs and gang warfare get much of the blame, although some experts also point to a bulge in the population of people in their teens and early 20s, the most violent age group.

Criminologists also have noted an alarming increase in killing among young black men.

In Milwaukee, police said about 75 percent of the year's homicide victims were black males, many of them victims of violence involving street gangs, drugs, sidewalk holdups and thefts of fashionable clothing.

Milwaukee's record was partly the doing of Jeffrey L. Dahmer, who confessed to killing 17 people, at least 13 of them in Milwaukee. Most of the killings occurred in 1991.

Among the nation's 10 largest cities, records fell in San Diego, Dallas and Phoenix.

San Diego had 179 homicides, breaking a record of 163 set in 1988. The 501 in Dallas was up from a record 444 in 1990. Phoenix's 150 broke the record 142 set in 1990.

Los Angeles police had statistics only up to Dec. 21, but they appeared to put the city on track toward a record. There were 1,006 homicides, up from 966 at the same time in 1990. The previous annual record was 1,024, set in 1980.

New York City police said there were between 2,220 and 2,225 homicides in 1991, by far the most of any city. That was down slightly from 2,245 in 1990, when 87 people died in an arson fire.

"It's the first time in six years that murder is down in the city and the first time in four years that we haven't broken a record," said Tom Repetto, head of the Citizen's Crime Commission, a law enforcement watchdog group.

"Obviously I'm glad it went down a little bit, but 2,220 murders is still an awful lot," Repetto added.

New York, Chicago and San Antonio all recorded their second-highest homicide totals. Chicago reached 924 with the New Year's Eve shooting of a South Side security guard. San Antonio had 211 homicides.

Detroit's unofficial total of 610 homicides was well short of its record 714 in 1974, but up 5 percent from 1990. Philadelphia had 468 homicides in 1991; Houston, 671. Both were shy of the cities' records.

Among the smaller cities setting records was Washington, which was the nation's murder capital in 1990, based on its per-capita rate of almost 78 homicides per 100,000 people. In 1991, the nation's capital recorded 490 homicides, up from 483 in 1990.

Per-capita rates, which are issued annually by the FBI, are not yet available.

Other cities setting records included Oakland, Calif., with 165; Minneapolis with 62; Anchorage, with 26; Columbus, Ohio, with 139; Colorado Springs with 26; New Orleans with 346; Rochester, N.Y., with 66; and Little Rock, Ark., with 52.

Irrigation meeting is Tuesday

Timely information on irrigation systems, considerations for purchasing center pivot systems, water management for efficient crop production, pumping equipment performance, chemigation and potential changes in water rights and law will be discussed Tuesday at the annual High Plains irrigation conference and trade show in Amarillo.

The conference will begin at 8:30 a.m. in the Texas A&M Research and Extension Center, 6500 Amarillo Blvd. West. Two continuing education units are being offered to private and licensed commercial and non-commercial pesticide applicators who complete the conference training.

Your Realtor Reports

HOME INSPECTION

A home is a big investment, maybe your biggest, so doesn't it make sense to get as many details as you can about your purchase, before you invest your money? A home inspection can save you thousands of dollars when you are purchasing a new home, a second home or a sound investment. As thousands of home owners have learned, there can be many slips between the sale and the satisfaction. New home warranties and insurance groups have reduced the chances of winding up without recourse with a troublesome house. However, you can avoid problems that sometimes confront the buyer, by having an inspector give you a full report on the condition of your investment. If this is spelled out before you go to escrow, you have a much better chance of a faster close that is more equitable to both the buyer and seller. Buyer and seller may even want to split the cost of the inspection as it is of mutual benefit.

This first "Bull" column of the new year brings good memories of the past. We've now been writing this column in The Brand for 20 years, and that's a lot of bull! It makes us think of a Putt Powell quote, the other day--It takes a wise man to run a newspaper, but any fool can write a column.

There were good times and bad times for us in 1991, but the good ones far outnumber the bad and we're better off than we likely deserve. Overall, if you have your health, you are far ahead of the game. We are looking forward to the New Year with anticipation, excitement and enthusiasm. We are going to try to feed our faith and starve our doubts!

I'm not too high on New Year's resolutions, which seem to be made only to be broken. Instead, I set new goals for things I'd like to achieve or improve in the new year. That way, I don't break a pledge--I just don't always reach the goal!

When you wish someone a Happy New Year, it takes different strokes for different folks to be happy, but here is a wish that should satisfy one and all:

- In this coming year of 1992, it is our hope that you may have--
- Enough happiness to keep you sweet,
- Enough trials to keep you strong,
- Enough sorrow to keep you human,
- Enough failure to keep you humble,
- Enough hope to keep you happy,
- Enough success to keep you eager,
- Enough friends to give you comfort,
- Enough wealth to meet your needs,
- Enough enthusiasm to look forward,
- Enough faith to banish depression,
- Enough determination to make each day a better day than yesterday.

With political activity picking up, an old story about fence-riding politicians recently caught our attention. We had heard the story some years ago but had forgotten exactly how it went. The story was originally written by William Safire in the New York Times magazine, after he was told that a certain politician gave an "if-by-whiskey" speech. He traced down the meaning of the phrase and found it came from the campaign of a Florida governor in the '50s, who was running for office in a year that counties were voting on local options to permit the sale of liquor.

Asked for his position on the wet-versus-dry issue, he reportedly stated:

"If by whiskey, you mean the water of life that cheers men's souls, that smooths out the tensions of the day, that gives gentle perspective to one's views of life, then put my name on the list of the fervent wets.

"But if by whiskey, you mean the devil's brew that rends families, destroys careers and ruins one's ability to work, then count me in the ranks of the dries."

Politicians don't call it fence-riding, they call it "calculated ambivalence."

Expensive politics

Gov. Ann Richards will convene the State Legislature in special session on Jan. 2. The Governor, a Democrat, feels she must assemble the Legislature to protect the Democrat majority in both the Senate and the House of Representatives.

The original redistricting plan drawn by the Democratic majority was notable for two items. It mandated districts that were constructed to allow Democrat incumbents to win easily. Stretching down lines, sometimes only a city block wide, the Legislature plan contrived districts with at least 60 percent traditional Democratic voters for their party incumbents.

The other item for which the plan was notable was that it packed as many traditional Republican voters as possible in as few districts as possible. Many Republican districts have as many as 85 percent Republican supporters.

In this process, no consideration was given to common economic, community or other interests. Many counties, cities and areas were fragmented between many Senate and House districts.

The federal courts have seen the true intent and purpose of the Democratic redistricting plan for Texas. They have found that the plan does not meet the guidelines for fair apportionment of voters throughout the state and have redrawn the lines to redistribute voting strength.

It is that redistribution that cause Gov. Richards to call a special session of the Legislature. Most of the protection given incumbent Democrats has been stripped away by the court plan and 10 incumbent Democratic senators will have to run against each other in 5 districts in the court plan.

The loss of five Democrats in the Senate could end that party's 140-year domination of the Texas upper chamber. To keep Democratic control, Gov. Richards is willing to spend $1 million of taxpayer money on the January special session.

That is a high price for the taxpayers of Texas to pay for partisan politics.

Letters to the Editor

Dear editor,

The Golden Spread Foster Parents Association would like to thank all the caring people that participated in this year's Adopt An Angel program that was a huge success.

We would like to thank everyone at Gibson's for allowing us to set up our tree there, and we would like to thank everyone who made a donation to the association. A special thanks goes out to Ray Rangel, who was Santa's special helper at our Christmas party.

We are still in need of donations for certain needs throughout the year. Anyone can make a donation to our account at Hereford State Bank or to any member of our association.

Anyone interested may join us at our monthly meetings, the third Tuesday of each month at 7 p.m. at the Hereford Community Center.

An AP News Analysis

Bush faces risk on trade issue

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent
WASHINGTON (AP) - The political risk in President Bush's traveling trade show is that he's oversold it at home with his talk of breaking open export markets to boost American payrolls. And today's expectations can bring tomorrow's backlash.

There are Democrats waiting with punitive trade legislation to force cuts in Japanese automobile sales in the United States, a measure they call fair and Bush considers unacceptable protectionism.

To counter them, Bush needs to gain commitments to expand Japanese markets for U.S. goods. Otherwise, Rep. Richard A. Gephardt and his co-sponsors are going to gain headway for legislation to force down the trade deficit with Japan or restrict automobile imports.

They may even find allies among Bush's traveling companions, the 21 businessmen who are part of the American delegation. The top men in the troubled Big Three U.S. automobile manufacturers will be on hand during Bush's three-day Tokyo visit to underscore his demand for open markets.

Bush said his top priority abroad would be jobs for Americans through expanded exports, promising to do everything he can to drive down trade barriers.

"We cannot expect to achieve complete accord," Bush said as he began the 12-day Asian journey on Monday. "This trip won't solve all the trade issues that now concern us, or produce a new export boom overnight."

That cautionary message has been muted, left largely to the U.S. officials who conducted no-name background briefings on the Bush mission and said he shouldn't be expected to come back with a settlement in hand.

"When people come to the Oval Office, they don't write contracts on the president's desk," one of the officials said. "And when the president travels abroad... he doesn't go in and try to write a contract. You don't produce that kind of result."

Bush hasn't promised a deal, and has avoided setting specific goals. But in speech after speech on his postponed and transformed Asian mission, he has said it is part of his program to stir the sluggish economy and cut unemployment.

That repeated message deals with one problem, the perception planted by his critics and growing in the polls that Bush spends too much time and attention on foreign policy, not enough on domestic matters. As he departed, Bush said "the sharp lines" between the two have been erased by the need for expanded trade to put Americans to work.

But that message may contribute to another problem by suggesting an immediacy that will be difficult to deliver.

The Japanese reportedly are considering steps to reduce their $42.6 billion trade surplus with the United States by increasing purchases of American-made automobile parts, and possibly by rebating part of the tax levied on imported cars.

Measures like those would give Bush something to take home, but they are short of what he's seeking, and far short of what Gephardt and company want to force by legislation.

Their bill would require Japan to reduce its trade surplus with the United States by 20 percent in each of the next five years, or face sanctions curbing Japanese automobile sales.

That formula is unlikely to be enacted - the precedent would be dangerous for U.S. exporters who have a $20 billion trade surplus with Europe, Republicans say it would start a trade war and the White House would fight it with veto warnings.

Nevertheless, legislation to protect the American automobile industry could gain political momentum, especially if the economic slump persists into the campaign season.

Bush's answer is to convince the Japanese to open their markets concentrating on persuasion, not legislation. "I think they'll understand when this trip is over that to the degree there are barriers that make this trade less than fair, that they better do something about it," Bush said last week.

That suggests an unstated "or else" line.

Presidential jawboning can prompt Congress to try to fill in the blank.

That's what happened when Bush tried to talk down credit: card interest rates last fall. The Senate voted to compel a cut, the stock market plunged and the administration had to talk Congress out of making Bush's wish into its command.

90 YEARS AGO

Jan. 3, 1902: E.J. Better work, if that is possible, may now be looked for among the students.

75 YEARS AGO

Jan. 6, 1917: Beginning with this issue, the publication day of the Brand will be changed from Friday to Thursday. The change is made for what seems to be a good reason. First, it enables the paper to reach all subscribers in time for Saturday's mail. Second, it gives advertisers a better opportunity to advertise Saturday sales the same week. ...The rain and subsequent mud, in the place where the walks ought to be, interfered with the attendance at the watch meeting Friday evening. At midnight, the town was awakened by the ringing of the bells, beneath whose joyful notes of glad welcome to the New Year, could be heard a minor cadence of farewell to the old.

Babbling Brooks

I ran into State Sen. Teel Bivins a couple of weeks ago in Amarillo.

I told him I had heard a caller on a KGNC Radio talk show say that Bivins' state senate service was only a "hobby."

"Expensive hobby," Bivins said. The expenses just went up Thursday when the Texas Legislature began its, what, 400th, special session to try to re-do all the various boundary lines.

The legislators are worried that no one cares about what they are doing in Austin.

Guess what? The legislature finally got one right!

There are a couple of books on the market: "Latin for All Occasions" and "Latin for Even More Occasions."

The books bring back the days (before my time) when you could actually study latin in places like school.

For the unedified masses, like me, you can look up a phrase for any situation.

George Bush, when referring to challenges by David Duke, could use "Primum id abscedemus, tum id occidemus." That means, "First we're going to cut it off, then we're going to kill it."

Or, when asked if he has a quick cure for the economic blues, he could tell the press, "Ne feceris ut rideam." "Don't make me laugh."

They're pretty good books. If you enjoy insulting someone without their knowing it, it could be a good book for you.

bb

Since everyone in the world is talking about the movie JFK on the toob, I might as well talk about it in my column.

I have not always been a great fan of Oliver Stone's movies. The Doors, while I liked the music, was not that good. Platoon was good, but I can't say I enjoyed it in the same sense I enjoyed Naked Gun 2 1/2. Born On the Fourth of July was not good.

I liked JFK.

The movie is too long; well over three hours. Go to the pottier first, then make a really huge investment and get a soft drink, popcorn and all that other overpriced stuff, then bunker in. Make sure you get plenty of sleep the night before you go. The human brain has been conditioned, for thousands of years, to go to sleep when in the dark that long.

If your faith in the American government hasn't already been shaken by the savings and loan crisis, it will be shaken after you see JFK.

And never mind all those critics who have railed the movie. Oliver Stone made a movie, not a documentary. He's a director, not a teacher.

Enjoy.

If you really want to be entertained, however, watch The Prince of Tides.

You will especially enjoy it if you had a not-real-good relationship with one or both parents. Even if your family was great, you'll love the movie.

I was not a big admirer of Barbra Streisand's acting ability before the movie. She's better than I thought. Maybe she's been taking lessons.

There are times in the movie when you will cry, other times when you will laugh out loud, and another couple of times when you will want to give a standing ovation.

It's the best movie I've seen in a long time.

Capitol press loses old quarters

EDITOR'S NOTE - For decades, much of the news Texans got about their politicians came from a cramped corner on the second floor of the state Capitol, midway between the House of Representatives and governor's office. Hundreds of reporters - including a kid named Cronkite - have worked there. But at month's end, the Capitol Press Room is scheduled to close for good as restoration work overhauls the building.

By MICHAEL HOLMES
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) - It was dark, dingy, crowded, hectic, noisy and usually overheated.

But for more than half a century, the powerful, would-be powerful and powerless came calling on the Capitol Press Room.

Housing the Austin bureaus of news services, newspapers, radio and television stations, the press room drew almost everyone who ever hoped for a Texas headline.

When a Capitol reporter looked up, the doorway could be filled by a presidential candidate or an ex-con.

U.S. senators, congressmen, governors, judges, legislators, lobbyists, candidates and crazies passed through to chat, complain, criticize or cajole.

Lost tourists stumbled in looking for directions. Lost souls wandered by looking for a sympathetic ear. Both usually found what they needed.

A few steps from the front door of the Texas House and adjacent to the governor's office, the second-floor press room served as a conduit for news of all kinds since the 1930s.

"All the governors came in and out of there," recalled Ted Powers, a retired Associated Press photographer who covered the Capitol through four decades.

Jon Ford, who first entered the press room in 1953 as a reporter for the San Antonio Express, stayed and eventually became Gov. Bill Clements' spokesman in the 1970s.

In earlier days, he said, politicians "would come through there and just kind of call on people, make themselves at home. It was more relaxed than now."

Visitors frequently included Lyndon Johnson, although he bypassed the room after becoming president.

"When LBJ came through, he was working the crowd, introducing himself to those he didn't know and shaking hands with those he did," Ford said.

"He used to come in and sit down on our desks. He'd sit on the corner desk there and talk to us almost every time he came in the building," Powers added.

In 1984, John Tower spent part of his last election night as a U.S. senator perched on a press room desk. Tower, who was retiring, watched a news teletype print out word that his successor would be fellow Republican Phil Gramm.

"That was always something that surprised me - you'd never know what face would show up," said Jorjanna Price, a former Houston Post reporter now with the Texas Education Agency.

The face could belong to a Supreme Court justice carrying a legal ruling, an agriculture commissioner carrying Christmas grapefruit or someone less savory carrying a grudge.

"I looked up once and there was this guy standing at my door with no shirt and tattoos all over his arms," Ms. Price recalled. "He said, 'I just got out of TDC and I'm here to give somebody a story about Texas prisons.' The guy made me nervous."

"I remember when a farmer protested at the door to the governor's office, right outside the press room.

He stayed for 20 days, fasting. He had a sleeping bag and stuff," said Saralee Tiede, formerly with the Dallas Times Herald and Fort Worth Star-Telegram. "A lot of different people came through."

But no more. News bureaus were ordered to evacuate by Dec. 31. A new, smaller press area is planned for a below-ground annex under construction north of the Capitol.

As part of its multimillion-dollar restoration project, the State Preservation Board will remodel the press room space from its current squalor to its Victorian-era splendor.

Capitol architect Allen McCree said some floor space from the old press room is being converted to a conference room and some turned back into the ornate Rotunda area.

McCree's research indicates that 1881 Capitol plans called for third-floor press rooms in the Senate and House wings, plus special balconies for reporters in both legislative chambers. But those press rooms weren't built.

In 1919, reporters were assigned to a second-floor room on the building's north side, McCree said. In the 1930s, many were moved to the current spot, which once housed the Railroad Commission.

Other rooms housed reporters at various times, as well. A 1970s remodeling added a second level to the press room and stuffed two tiny photo darkrooms into a triangular air shaft.

"I got there in 1933. I think we had a dozen, maybe 15 people," said retired Dallas Morning News bureau chief Richard Morehead, who has researched Capitol press corps history.

Between then and the late 1970s, the number of reporters exploded to somewhere around 100, Morehead said.

"But when I first came here, the entire state government - the courts, everything - was in the Capitol. They didn't have all these buildings around the Capitol and out in town. That's how government has grown, and that's why press coverage has grown," he said.

Newsgathering equipment changed, too, but not technical problems.

Where some 1990s reporters struggle with cranky lap top computers, Morehead remembers his earlier colleagues battling newfangled manual typewriters.

"They had guys when I first came who still wrote their stories with pad and pencil. One guy tried typing 'em, but the telegraph operators said they couldn't tell whether he wrote the stories on a typewriter and corrected them with a pencil, or wrote with a pencil and corrected them on a typewriter."

Morehead also remembered one young reporter who quit the University of Texas before graduation to cover the Capitol.

"Walter Cronkite came a little bit after me... and worked in the Capitol for a year or so," Morehead said. Cronkite would go on to win acclaim covering World War II and eventually claim the CBS-TV anchor chair.

While its Capitol address - and some of its occupants - may have been prestigious, the press room apparently never was.

When he arrived in 1953, Ford said reporters were packed into two open rooms - cutthroat competitors working elbow-to-elbow.

"I didn't even have a telephone. There was a press room number, and we had extensions off that," Ford said.

"Margaret Mayer of the Times Herald had one on her desk and I had one on mine. Margaret got tired of calling me to the phone, so she rigged up an old cow bell in the doorway (between the rooms) and put a rope on it. When one of the calls to the press phone was for me, she'd yank on that old cow bell."

Rough-hewn also described the decor.

"Everybody had old, beat-up furniture. When they remodeled in the 1970s, people began to encourage their less-affluent colleagues to buy some better furniture and put up a better front," Ford said.

It didn't help much. Ms. Price recalled many a hasty meal gobbled in the press room during all-night legislative sessions. Pizzas were delivered. Popcorn littered the floors. A radio reporter once even opened a deli in his tiny cubicle.

"People would walk through the day after a Legislature adjourned and say that the press room smelled of pizza and stale beer," she said.

"It did. It was just awful." Dark, dingy, crowded, hectic, noisy and usually overheated. But exciting, too.

"That was such a real, colorful place," Ms. Price said. "It's really something that it's not going to be there anymore."

AT&T

The decree was announced Jan. 8, 1982, shocking AT&T employees, investors and the public. Two years later, on Jan. 1, 1984, the actual breakup took place.

It led to vast changes at the company. The loss of the local phone companies eliminated about three-quarters of AT&T's assets, although the remaining long-distance service was more profitable.

AT&T could no longer support bloated payrolls. Tens of thousands of jobs were eliminated in coming years and operations were decentralized.

Freed of restrictions on what businesses it could be in, AT&T began to sell computers, something it had sought as phone and computer technologies blurred.

But AT&T lost more than $2 billion on computers in its first seven years and failed to gain more than a minuscule market share. That led to its decision in 1991 to buy NCR Corp. through a hostile takeover offer, a move observers called a radical departure for AT&T.

AT&T also entered the credit card business and enjoyed surprising success with its Universal card, which combines a calling card with a Mastercard or Visa.

The breakup led to a new culture at AT&T, one driven by marketing and greater concern for customers, observers say.

"I think the arrogance has been taken out," said Richard Toole, a telephone industry analyst at Merrill Lynch & Co. "They now know that they damn well better take care of the customer."

Better customer service was prompted by the fact AT&T saw its long-distance market share drop precipitously. It has stemmed the defections in the past year or so, analysts say.

Currently, AT&T has about 69 percent of the market, compared with 12 percent for MCI and 8 percent for Sprint, according to Yankee Group Inc., a consulting and research firm. Smaller companies comprise the rest.

Competition also drove AT&T to modernize its phone network with distortion-free fiber optic cable years before it would have done otherwise, Toole said.

Although the main part of the AT&T case was settled 10 years ago, side issues continue to drag on in the courts. The Baby Bells are seeking permission to make phone equipment, something banned under the agreement.

Another issue is that AT&T's phone rates remain regulated, a situation the company considers outdated and unfair since MCI and Sprint face no such control.

Although AT&T's breakup produced clear benefits, Toole said he's not sure Americans are better off today.

"It's so muddy to say whether service is better or whether you're getting a better bargain," he said.

Long-distance rates have dropped about 40 percent since 1984, the analyst said. But local rates have risen, in part because AT&T used to subsidize them with long-distance revenue when it owned the local companies.

In addition, AT&T had a string of embarrassing and disruptive service outages over the past two years, something Toole traces in part to the company's cost cutting. AT&T disputes the charge.

YOUR EYES

GLARE CONTROL WITH CATARACTS

Sunlight and glare present special vision problems for people with developing cataracts and even those adjusting to an implant after cataract surgery. Ordinary prescription sunglasses are not helpful enough and may leave vision hazy and the eyes uncomfortable. What is effective in cases like these are glare control lenses that filter out visible blue light as well as ultraviolet light. They are now available in a wider range of attractive shades. Some of the lenses are photochromatic; that is, they darken and lighten automatically in response to sunlight and other bright lights. These glare control lenses can be ordered plain or ground to your prescription. Because these lenses may alter color perception, it's advisable to have one's color vision evaluated before wearing them for driving or other activities in which response to color changes, such as changing traffic lights, is important.

Boys fall; girls' comeback shocks Dunbar

Wall of defenders

Hereford's Leo Brown (40) is surrounded by defenders as he drives the baseline in the Herd's game with Lubbock Dunbar Friday in Whiteface Gym. Dunbar won, 56-45.

The Hereford boys' basketball played the ultra-quick Dunbar Panthers to a draw in the first half Friday in Whiteface Gym, but the Herd's 2-for-17 shooting in the third quarter helped Dunbar to a 56-45 win.

Also Friday, the Lady Whitefaces staged a dramatic comeback in Lubbock to edge Dunbar 51-50 on a last minute three-pointer by Jamie Simpson.

"We were down by 16 with five minutes left in the game," Hereford girls coach Dickie Faught said. "We had our best quarter of the year in that fourth quarter. The press was effective and we got a lot of steals."

Hereford outscored Dunbar 22-9 in the final quarter, as the Lady Panthers made only five of 14 free throws.

"We were down by two with less than a minute to go," Faught said. "(Simpson) hit that one to put us up by one with 50 seconds left. And, by the way, that was our first lead of the game. We led for 50 seconds and we won the game."

Jennifer Bullard led the Lady Whitefaces with 22 points, including two three-pointers in the fourth quarter. Simpson totaled eight points.

Faught also singled out Wendy Hollingsworth as having a lot to do with the win. "She scored six and played outstanding defense," he said. "She made an impact on the press and on defense."

The girls are now 7-14 on the season.

The score in the boys' game was tied at halftime 26-26. Hereford came out and hit two of its first shots, then went cold and stayed stuck on 31 for most of the quarter while Dunbar built a 10-point lead.

"We gave up some layups after missed shots," Hereford coach Jimmy Thomas said. "They got the rebound and took off. They're really quick. It hurt us when it was 3-on-1, 2-on-1."

The Herd showed signs of rallying with five minutes left in the game. Kyle Hansen drew two offensive fouls in consecutive Panther possessions, the second of which led to an easy basket for Leo Brown on an inbounds pass. Moments later, Richard Sanderson stuck a three-point shot from the top of the key to cut Dunbar's lead to 50-41. That was as close as Hereford got, however.

Hereford fell to 5-12 on the season.

"When you shoot 23 percent (for the game), you're not going to win many games," Thomas said.

Both of Hereford's junior varsity squads returned to action after the Christmas break and came away with wins.

The girls' JV had no trouble in Lubbock against Dunbar, winning 31-4 behind Shambryn Wilson's seven points.

The boys' JV had some trouble at home against Dunbar, but only in the first quarter, when they managed only one point. They ended up winning 52-42.

"Bad shot selection," coach Oscar Rendon said of his offensive offense in the first quarter. "We didn't play any defense. (Dunbar) always had the ball."

Dunbar had its problems, too, and took only a 6-1 lead after the quarter. Hereford ran away by outscoring Dunbar 35-20 in the middle two periods.

"The kids started hustling," Rendon said. "They got into the game, and we started pressing. They just started playing better defense."

Michael Melendrez led the JV with 17 points with Greg Coplen right behind with 16.

The New York Yankees had seven players who played in 50 or more World Series games.

Mickey Mantle and Reggie Jackson tied for the lead in career home runs in post-season games, with 18.

The New York Jets were 17 1/2-point underdogs when they defeated Baltimore, 16-7, in the 1969 Super Bowl.

Rod Martin of Oakland set a Super Bowl record for interceptions with three in 1981.

Lakers in trouble, lose ugly game to Pacers

By The Associated Press

The Los Angeles Lakers, who responded to the retirement of Magic Johnson with a nine-game winning streak, are facing adversity again.

They lost their fourth consecutive home game Friday night, 114-87 to the Indiana Pacers, and their 33 percent shooting performance was the 11th consecutive time they've been under 50 percent.

Los Angeles is four games behind Golden State in the Pacific Division the Lakers won nine consecutive years until Portland snapped the streak in 1991. They are 6-10 since the nine-game winning streak following the shock of Johnson's retirement.

"It was an ugly game," said coach Mike Dunleavy, who kept the locker room closed for 15 minutes following the Lakers' worst home loss in 17 years. "We were outplayed in every facet of the game. Our defense has broken down in communication, both mentally and physically, in the last couple of games. We have to look in our hearts, take a gut-check and find out who we are and where we're going."

Reggie Miller scored 29 points and Chuck Person 19 for the Pacers.

Elsewhere in the NBA, it was Cleveland 111, Boston 100; Washington 112, New Jersey 108; Detroit 106, Dallas 96; and Milwaukee 113, Chicago 108.

Hereford's Hafliiger on track to Olympics

By JAY PEDEEN
Sports Editor

Superman would do pretty well in the decathlon. He's more powerful than a locomotive, faster than a speeding bullet and able to leap tall buildings in a single bound.

The ten events of the decathlon require speed, skill and strength—a combination that marks the gold medalist in the Olympic decathlon as the closest a human can come to being Superman. The Olympic decathlon champion is the World's Greatest Athlete.

For most people, competing in the Olympic decathlon would be an unattainable dream. For Hereford's Mark Hafliiger, though, it is a definite possibility.

Hafliiger, who works at the John Hafliiger Dairy seven miles west of Hereford, hopes to be in Barcelona this summer for the 1992 Summer Olympics. However, it's not like he was hurling cowchips one day and decided he was ready for an Olympic discus.

After graduating high school in California, he joined the track team at the College of the Redwoods, a California NAIA school, as a high jumper. He went to the national meet his first year and jumped 6 feet, 11 inches. A knee injury slowed his athletic career, but about two years later he started doing the decathlon. Now, he's serious about the Olympics.

"It's a really legitimate shot for me," he said.

A decathlon consists of these ten events: 100-meter dash, 400-meter dash, 1,500-meter run, 110-meter hurdles, long jump, high jump, pole vault, discus throw, javelin throw and shot put. Decathletes get points in each event based on how well they do in that event. A certain number of points is awarded for specific distances, heights and times, as prescribed by a scoring table.

To make an Olympic team, a decathlete first must qualify for a nation's Olympic trials. To do that, the decathlete must score high enough—a pre-set minimum total—at an accepted meet. The minimum total required is set by each nation.

Hafliiger has the option of two nations: the United States or Switzerland. He has the choice because he has dual citizenship through his father and grandfather.

He's considering Switzerland partly because of a lower minimum standard and partly because of friends and familiarity.

"I have sentimental ties to Switzerland," he said. "I've competed and worked out over there since I got out of college.

"They set a (minimum point) standard for all countries. Here, there'll be a lot more people who'll make the standard. Over there, I'll be with my friends. Here, I'd be alone."

His friends there are "present decathletes and guys who have retired, guys who can help me, guys who came over here to train while I was in college."

The U.S. trials might be cheaper (travel costs), but the Swiss team would be easier to make. Each country is allowed to enter three decathletes, and Switzerland—with a population of 6.4 million and an area roughly the size of Iowa—does not produce quite as many good decathletes as the U.S.

The minimum point total needed to compete at the Swiss Nationals is 6,200. That's shouldn't be a problem for Hafliiger.

"Without any disasters, I should walk into the nationals. At nationals, it'll be a different story," he said. "From talking to my contacts, they have three guys who have scored over 7,800—two guys over 8,000. And it's possible there'd be more than that."

"I'll have to have a good meet, no doubt," he said of his chances of making the Swiss Olympic team. "But if I'm in good shape and injury-free, I'll have my good meet. I expect to be right there with them."

"I think if I play all my cards right, I'll have a realistic chance. Nothing's guaranteed, but it's worth a shot."

Hafliiger knows he has a shot at those kinds of scores because of a process called doping up. It has absolutely nothing to do with steroids or any other drugs; it is the slang term decathletes use to determine what their scores will be, or should be, on a given day that's a good day, according to Hafliiger.

"You get your scoring table book, take where you're at in each event and total it up," he said. "It gives you a feeling of where you're at."

"You're looking at a safe but good mark—not your absolute best) because you never know how it's going to go. Your absolute best may be 8,500, but that's not realistic."

Doping up is not an exact science, but some things are going as planned for Hafliiger. He competed in a meet in California Dec. 14 and 15, and before the meet, he was concerned about the high jump because of his old knee injury.

"It's probably the most sensitive as far as being risky," he said before the meet. "I can probably still go 6-foot-4 or 6-6, but I haven't pushed it this year so I don't know what I'll do. To get the scores I want to get, I'm doping up to go 2 meters (about 6-7). That's what I need to get the points I need. Of course, I'd like to go higher but I won't count on it. We'll see what happens."

After the meet, Hafliiger was especially pleased with his performance in the high jump.

"It was the first high jump since I had knee surgery. I ended up going two meters. That was fun for me. That's the one thing the doctors told me I'd never do again."

On the other hand, some things didn't go too well. He didn't get any points in the pole vault—one of his better events—because he didn't clear any of the heights. Overall, though, Hafliiger said the meet went well, and he had no problems with a bruised heel which had been slowing his training.

"My scores were below what I'd hoped for, but under the circumstances, they were fine. The time that I took off to heal my heel cost me in some events. The conditioning I lost was the biggest factor. After the first day (of the meet) the focus changed from getting a good score to finishing the meet. Overall, it was a positive situation and I'm in pretty good position to accomplish what I want to."

After the meet, Hafliger said he planned to start training at South Plains College in Levelland where he can get coaching from Lance Bingham, a former Texas junior college champ. Previously, Hafliger had been training only at West Texas State University, where he got conditioning help from Mike

Chandler, who also is WT's athletic director.

"I'll do more of the intense interval training and technical events (at SPC), and the days I don't go down there, I stay (at WT) and work alone," Hafliger said.

Actually, sometimes he's lucky if he gets to train at all. For some time he was limited in his training by his bruised heel. Then in late December, when he was finally getting past the heel injury, the rainy weather kept him busy at the dairy. Helping to take care of 850 cows is not a job which is conducive to collecting gold medals.

"As soon as the weather screws up that handcuffs me," he said. "Things get tough at the dairy. It's a balancing act between job and training."

He has an understanding boss, though: John Hafliger, Mark's brother. John co-owns the dairy with their father, Henry, who lives in California.

"John's real good about getting in my training, and I appreciate that," Mark said. "On the other hand, I hate to leave him in a bind, so I do what I can."

As for which country he'll try to represent in Barcelona, he'll make that decision some time in the spring, perhaps after the Texas Relays in April.

"I'll wait and see how my scores go," he said. "Then we'll have a better look at how we're doing."

Whichever country he goes through, the Olympics is the important thing. He says it's the pinnacle for decathletes.

"I think for all decathletes, that's all there is: the Olympics. There's no other reason for doing the decathlon. It's rewarding and it's a challenge, but I think the ultimate payoff would be to compete with the best. That would be at the Games."

Life!

Kleuskens turns dream into reality

By DANEE' WILSON
Lifestyles Editor

After two years of hard work, Tonya Kleuskens saw her dream come true.

Two weeks before Christmas Kleuskens' pet project finally hit supermarket shelves and has made her dream a reality.

Kleuskens is the mastermind behind the new pancake and biscuit mixes made in Hereford called Grain Waves.

"In January of 1989, I went to Arrowhead Mills and said that I had a mix I would like to try and market," said Kleuskens. "They were very helpful in showing me what I needed to do."

The recipe for the mixes are a combination of recipes handed down from friends and family.

"I combined these recipes, added and subtracted until I had a perfect recipe. My pancake mix makes a perfect pancake every time. The baking soda in it reacts to moisture, not heat, and the pancakes begin to fluff before they are put on the grill."

She was inspired to start the business because she had a hard time getting her family to eat the healthy foods.

"My family just didn't like the whole grain organic foods," she said. "I wanted to make something that was healthy and that tasted good."

Non-fat milk powders, aluminum-free baking powder and premium quality flour made from organically grown wheat make up the mixes.

After she had committed herself to marketing her product, Kleuskens contacted the Texas Department of Agriculture who helped her to develop a questionnaire for a survey about her product.

"I sent my questionnaire to people, restaurants, distributors and did a sample survey. I got enough positive response that I was encouraged to develop the product."

In April of 1991, Kleuskens obtained a trademark under the "Grain Waves" name. She had originally wanted to use the name Amber Waves, but found out later that name already had a trademark.

"I had a lot of help getting the product ready to market," she said. "Suzanne Stevens helped design the package on her computer and I then found a company that could make the bag I wanted. We wanted the look to be down home."

Kleuskens achieved the "down home" look by making the bag a tan color with a blue grain pattern throughout the package.

She has hired a sales representative out of Houston who has a place on the World Trade Center to help her market the product. Arrowhead Mills is in charge of mixing the 500 pound batches of mix and packaging them.

People across the U.S. have expressed an interest in the product and the Kleuskens have also developed a mail order service.

"My daughter Larissa thought of the 800 number for the mail order service," said Kleuskens. "My family has been real supportive. My other daughter, Heather, helps out with designs and she proof reads all the written work."

The girls are helpful, says Kleuskens. They offer their opinions and help with the packing for shipping.

Kleuskens has enjoyed baking for many years, but also enjoys gardening.

"I am an avid gardener," she said. "In the winter I plan my garden for the spring. I also enjoy canning and freezing the vegetables."

Tonya has shared some of her favorite recipes that can be made with her new mixes.

Bake 25-30 minutes at 400 degrees.

BEER BREAD

3 1/2 cups of mix
1 tbsp. of yeast
1 8 oz. can of beer

Mix together thoroughly. Pour batter into oiled 9" x 5" loaf pan. Bake at 350 degrees for 25 to 30 minutes.

This bread is slightly sweet and any combination of raisins, nuts or other dried fruits may be added. This bread may be served as a coffee break treat or at the end of a meal with butter and jelly.

For more information or to order the product, contact Kleuskens during business hours at 1-800-530-4743 or after hours at (806) 258-7583.

Kleuskens takes orders

Tonya Kleuskens is busy taking orders for her new product Grain Waves. Made in Hereford, the pancake and biscuit mixes will soon be widely available.

Women's division to meet

The first quarterly meeting for the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce Women's Division will be held Jan. 7 at 6:30 p.m. at the Hereford community Center East Banquet Room for a buffet dinner catered by Mary Beth Messer.

Women's Division members and guests are invited to attend this meeting which will be highlighted by the announcement of the Women of the Year.

Plaques will be presented to outgoing directors and Marilyn Culpepper will install new officers and directors.

The telephone committee will call members for reservations. Any non-member wishing to attend may call 364-0420 for reservations.

Private ceremony unites pair

Kenny Chambers, a former Hereford resident, was married to Renea Eccles of Canyon, in a private ceremony recently.

The wedding was conducted by Jim Hickman, pastor of Dawn Baptist Church. Pat and Carolee Smith of Dawn were witnesses.

The groom is a 1987 graduate of Hereford High School and is employed by Pat Smith of Dawn.

The bride graduated from Booker High School and West Texas State University with a Bachelor of Science in education and is currently teaching at Bonham Jr. High in Amarillo.

Parents of the groom are Pat and Trisha Briscoe, former residents of Hereford and Kenneth and Pat Chambers of Dawn.

Parents of the bride are Geraldine Eccles of Booker and Larry Eccles of Pampa.

Following the ceremony they were greeted by guests at a surprise reception dinner at the Country Barn Steak House in Amarillo. After dinner, the couple and their guests enjoyed wedding cake, punch and coffee. The wedding cake was a white cake with purple and peach flowers and was adorned with a cowboy groom and bride.

The couple will make their home west of Canyon following a brief honeymoon.

XEA hears program on optimism

Xi Epsilon Alpha Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi Sorority met recently at the Gift Garden/Merle Norman's with 15 members repeating the opening ritual.

A program was presented by Sharon Bodner and Cyndi Walker on Optimism vs. Pessimism. They presented members with a saying done in calligraphy that encourages people to face the day with some optimism.

Walker discussed how attitudes affect whether we are optimistic or pessimistic. It has a lot to do with self image, worth and esteem. It is not always easy to be optimistic, but Walker stated that she had found that it is a lot easier if you have a strong faith in God.

President Holly Bixler conducted the business meeting following the program.

Service co-chairman Linda Arellano quizzed members on the twelve days of Christmas and the words to "Silent Night, Holy Night."

Members were able to donate $75 to the Christmas Stocking Fund.

Ruby Lee made a motion to pay any chapter bill, with a second from Dalene Burns. Sharon Bodner, Rosebud chairman reported the Kay Williams' aunt, Joanne Blackwell had past way and that she would send a card.

With no further business, President Holly Bixler lead the closing ritual and the Mizpah. Members then exchanged presents with their secret sister and enjoyed all the great food.

Bodner and Denise Hafliger were hostesses, with the members also providing their favorite Christmas munchies.

The next meeting will be Jan. 7 with the program presented by Peggy Hyer and Susan Shaw, co-hostess will be Rudy Sanders.

Members present were Arellano, Marge Bell, Bixler, Bodner, Dalene Burns, Susan Cardinal, Danell Culp, Hafliger, Deann Harris, Melinda Henson, Peggy Hyer, Lee, Connie Matthews, Gaye Reily, and Susan Shaw.

Red Cross Update

The flooding downstate has caused millions of dollars of damage and the Red Cross has been sheltering and feeding victims and workers. Now hundreds of families will need help with clothing, housing, food and other items needed to resume living normally. We are collecting aluminum cans at our office. The proceeds from the sale of the cans will be used for Texas Disaster Relief.

This past year has been an expensive year for disaster relief services. The combination of more disasters and fewer donations caused a shortfall of $32.8 million in the fiscal year 1991. All Chapters will be raising funds for disaster relief in order to assure assistance to disaster victims.

I would like to thank all of the volunteers that made the Christmas Toys Program possible. We had 364 families put in an application for Christmas Stocking and the Toys Program. Toys were delivered to 809 children in our community. Thanks again to the volunteers that gave of their time, talents and toys! We are already collecting and cleaning and repairing toys for next year.

The Deaf Smith County Chapter of the American Red Cross is a United Way Agency.

The word "bicycle" is a combination of a Latin and a Greek root: bis is Latin for twice and kylos is Greek for circle.

Service award given

Carol Turner, program assistant for the Hereford ASCS office, received a 25 year service award at her retirement reception held recently. Pictured giving the award are (l) John Fuston, district one director; and Ted Peabody (r), county executive director.

Harz, Brock exchange vows in Amarillo

Christy Dawn Harz of Amarillo and Jerry Freeman Brock of Hereford exchanged vows recently at the Wedding Chapel in Amarillo.

Rev. Danny Lucas of Amarillo officiated the ceremony.

The church was decorated with an arch of greenery and candelabra on either side.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore an ivory satin Southern belle gown with a full scalloped skirt accented with bow at each scallop. The fitted bodice was accented with pearls and lace and featured a bow at the back of the waist. The gown also had puffed scalloped sleeves and a cathedral length train.

Her veil was an ivory net with baby pearls and lace. She carried a bouquet of ivory and royal blue roses with baby's breath. The bouquet was accented with ivory, royal blue and black ribbons. She wore her aunt's pearl necklace.

Serving as maid of honor was Ty McKinney. She wore a royal blue dress with a black lace overlay.

Brady Wilson was best man. Mike Harz, brother of the bride and Jeremy Brock, cousin of the groom, were ushers and candle lighters.

Prerecorded selections of "Everything I Do, I Do For You," by Brian Adams; "Vows Go Unbroken," by Kenny Rogers, played during the lighting of the unity candle; and "Daddy's Hands" by Holly Dunn, played for the bride's father; were the principle songs.

A reception for the couple was held at the Wedding Chapel. Karen Hughes invited guests to register.

Hughes served cake from a table covered with a white lace table cloth. The cake was a two tier cake topped with wedding bells. The groom's cake was decorated in chocolate domes. Shelly Sutphen served punch and coffee and Michelle Brock assisted.

The bride is an honor graduate of Tascosa High School and attended Amarillo College and works at Athletic X-press in Amarillo.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Otto R. Harz of Amarillo.

The groom graduated from Hereford High School in 1991. He was Lt. Governor of Key Club and attended Amarillo College and is employed Moore's Jack and Jill.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Kelly Morton of Amarillo. He is grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Gene Brock of Hereford.

There are some who would say that all a "good" library needs is to be wellstocked in fiction...or mysteries...or biographies. Actually, in MY opinion anyway, a "good" library is known by the quality and variety of services it offers to its users. Using that criteria, Deaf Smith County Library is one of the best libraries around, considering its size and service area.

One of the features of the library that you may be unfamiliar with is our Large Print Book collection. We have approximately 800 large-print titles covering the same spectrum of topics as our general collection. A portion of these are on a rotating basis with other area libraries, so the selection is always changing.

We have recently received a new shipment of large-print with some titles that aren't even available in our general collection. Toujours Provence, by Peter Mayle, was on the New York Times Best Seller list for a number of weeks, but this is the only copy we have acquired. Mayle regales his readers with his experiences in France. If one understands French, or is prepared to overlook the liberal insertion of French words and phrases, this could be a highly entertaining book.

Loves Music, Loves to Dance is a new large-print addition. About the only thing I know about Mary Higgins Clark latest novel is that it has been very popular. If you've been waiting to read this book this may be your chance. I've got a feeling that this copy will be out as much as the original.

Anna was only four years old when she was found on a London dock, but she had an astonishing ability to ask and answer - life's largest questions. Mister God, This is Anna is the true account of a little girl and her special friendship with "Mister God." The publisher calls this book by Fynn "irresistible." Maybe it is. The publisher also says it's sentimental without being maudlin, funny without a trace of course humor. If not irresistible, it's certainly refreshingly uncommon.

Other large-print titles hitting the shelves this week include three mysteries; Final Cut by Eric Wright, Thicker Than Water by Bruce Zimmerman, and Murder By The Book by Frances and Richard Lockridge.

General Fiction includes The Search for Temperance Moon by Douglas C. Jones, and Object Lessons by Anna Quindlen. Quiller Bamboo by Adam Hall provides adventure and suspense, and Eugenia Price's New Moon Rising rounds out the collection with a Civil War Romance.

A wide variety of general non-fiction topics are being released this week. The list of titles pretty much tells the story:

Bug Busters: Poison-Free Pest Controls

The Way of Marriage

Rocks and Minerals

Landscaping with Native Plants of Texas and the Southwest

The Complete Relocation Kit

101 Sewing Secrets

Troubleshooting and Repairing VCRs

A Horse In Your Backyard

The Encyclopedia of Country and Western Music

Fellowship to meet Thursday

Hereford Flame Fellowship will meet Thursday at 7 p.m. at the Community Center. The guest speaker will be Patricia Blair of Levelland.

Out of tragedies in her life, Blair has made a commitment to serve the Lord and love people. This remarkable woman cannot read music and has never had professional training.

She picked up a tape and started singing to people in nursing homes. From there she was invited to sing at a church in Lubbock. There was a man in the church service who was a manager, and he asked her if she would like to do a concert at the Civic Center, which she did. Following the show the manager asked her if she would like to go on tour with the "Florida Boys." She decided to go on tour.

Within the time span of six months she has gone from singing at nursing homes, to touring with famous musicians. She ministers in prisons and hospitals.

Come hear this lady's amazing story. Everyone is invited to attend.

School group makes holiday donations

A group of high school and junior high girls from Hereford decided to help those less fortunate by donating to several charities.

The group donated $750 with $250 going to each Rape Crisis/Domestic Violence Center, Hereford Boxing Association and Hereford YMCA.

To raise money, the group sponsored a dance. They made posters, handed out fliers and promoted the dance at school.

Representatives of the charities thanked the group and explained how their donations would be spent.

Weldon Knabe, Hereford YMCA director, congratulated the group and said the money would help children in the scholarship program at the YMCA participate in events that they otherwise could not afford.

The Hereford Boxing Association motivates area boys though hard work and discipline.

The Rape Crisis/Domestic Violence Center helps families effected by domestic violence and sexual assault.

KELBY HAGAR

Hagar earns BBA degree

Kelby Dane Hagar, son of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Hagar, recently graduated from Angelo State University with a Bachelor of Business Administration degree in accounting.

Breast Cancer often stays hidden for several years before it can be revealed through a conventional physical exam. A mammogram is the only way to discover breast cancer in its earliest stages. The test, conducted by a trained specialist, takes just a few minutes — a few minutes that could have life-saving results. One out of nine women will develop breast cancer. This year, 38,000 will die. Those who discover the disease early have a better chance of recovery. Call today: 364-2141, ext. 248.

MR. AND MRS. ALEX SCHROETER
...Sue Curtis

Couple exchange wedding vows

Sue Curtis and Alex Schroeter, both of Hereford, were married during an intimate ceremony recently in the First Presbyterian Church with Lanny Wheeler, chaplain of King's Manor officiating.

Clyde Peterson of Ft. Worth provided the music.

A reception for the couple was held at 705 Country Club Drive. Those assisting include Janice Brownlow, Billie Kelley and Sue Malaman.

The couple left for a wedding trip to Angle Fire N.M.

Out of town guests were from Medicine Bow, Kan., Weatherford, Ft. Worth, Cisco, Amarillo and Kileen.

Researchers are looking for new ways to help people with arthritis.

Ask Dr. Lamb

DEAR DR. LAMB: I have been coughing since I was 17 and I am now 54. I have been diagnosed as having bronchiectasis and told I will have the condition all my life. Is this true? Of course, I have learned to live with it. I also have sinusitis.

DEAR READER: Bronchiectasis refers to permanent dilatation of bronchial tubes in the lungs. It may involve only a section of the lungs or be more widespread. It can be caused by childhood diseases that affect the lungs, particularly whooping cough. Prevention of many of these diseases by immunizations has significantly decreased the number of individuals with bronchiectasis.

Yes, it is an anatomic defect that cannot be corrected. But antibiotics to control infections provide useful management. Controlling your sinusitis is important as well. The cough is caused by pooling of secretions in the involved areas of the lungs. Postural drainage and hydration help control this aspect of the disorder.

Dr. Lamb welcomes letters from readers with health questions. You can write to him at P.O. Box 5537, Riverton, NJ 08077. Although Dr. Lamb cannot reply to all letters personally, he will respond to selected questions in future columns.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Are you fascinated with lists? I mean the 10 highest paid actors and actresses, the best-attended movies, the most expensive colleges, the highest paid sports figures, the 10 most stress-producing jobs, the 10 most dangerous automobiles, the most philanthropic Americans, etc. Well, so am I, and I've just read a fascinating book on every kind of statistic you can imagine. It is called "The Best and Worst of Everything." The author is Les Krantz, the publisher, Prentice Hall. The price is $15.

I was surprised to learn that Chicago is the most segregated city in America, according to the Demographic Population Index of 1989. It is also the most architecturally spectacular. Sears Tower, the world's tallest building, is in Chicago. Read on for more interesting facts and figures:

Which airline has the best record for not losing your luggage? It's Southwest. Which airline has the worst? Airwest.

Which airline serves the best food? If dollars spent per passenger is the measuring stick, Pan Am was first, with $7.60. American is second with $6.88.

Which is the most unsafe car, according to deaths per 10,000 miles? Sorry, General Motors, it's the Chevrolet Corvette, which is involved in more fatal accidents than any other car. Next is the Chevrolet Camaro.

The auto most often stolen is the Nissan 300ZX. Second choice of thieves is the Ford Mustang, followed by the Volkswagen Jetta four-door. Next is the Cadillac Brougham.

Where should you send your child to college? If money is a factor, avoid Bennington College in Vermont. It's the most expensive. Next, is Bates College in Maine, followed by Dartmouth in New Hampshire, then Hampshire College, followed by Brown, Georgetown and Bard College in New York.

Who is the highest paid actor? If you think it's Arnold Schwarzenegger, you're wrong. It's Sylvester Stallone.

Which American athlete netted most from his winnings? Here's a surprise -- prizefighter, Evander Holyfield. He made $60 million in 1990.

Who is America's highest paid football player? Joe Montana of the San Francisco 49ers. He was paid $3.5 million in 1991 and missed several games because of a bum elbow.

Who is the wealthiest American? John Kluge, the owner of Metromedia, net worth, $5.6 billion. (He is also one of the nicest).

What is the most popular grocery store item? Marlboro cigarettes.

What's the most fattening fruit? The fig, with 48 calories each.

Which city has the most diagnosed psychiatric disorders? You guessed it - Washington, D.C. (It is also the murder capital of the United States.)

Which state has the most prison escapees? Michigan.

Where in the United States is gasoline the most expensive? Hawaii. It's $1.65 a gallon for regular unleaded.

What U.S. City gets the most rain? Mobile, Ala., with 64.64 inches per year.

Which state has the highest percentage of teen-agers? Utah.

Which country has the most hazardous waste? Japan, with 292,312,000 tons yearly.

Where in the world is taxation heaviest? In Sweden.

Which country has the most traffic fatalities? Portugal.

What's the windiest city in the United States? Wrong, folks, it's not Chicago. It's Cheyenne, Wyo.

Is that Ann Landers column you clipped years ago yellow with age? For a copy of her most frequently requested poems and essays, send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $4.85 (this includes postage and handling) to: Gem, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562.

DEAR ANN: I am a 21-year-old student who identified strongly with that young college girl who wants to die. I understand exactly how she feels because I, too, want to die and don't know why.

I am a college student who was once addicted to alcohol and drugs. I am 100 percent clean and sober now and intend to stay that way. I would never kill myself, but I lie in bed at night trying to figure out how to check out of this world without committing suicide. I wish I had cancer instead of my mother. I wish I had diabetes instead of my sister. I wish I had AIDS instead of a young friend I know.

I have no answers for the girl who wrote, but I did want her to know that she is not alone.--Rockland, N.Y.

From Indiana: I'm a teenager who secretly wants to die even though she has everything going for her. I don't actually want to die but I keep wishing

I would have an accident that would land me in the hospital for a few weeks. Why? Because I have always been the center of attention and when I am not, I'm miserable. Being in the hospital is a great way to get attention and that would make me very happy.

Jacksonville, Fla.: I hope that young girl who has a death wish gets the help she needs because she really does have a problem. If she were in her right mind she would know just how precious life is.

I'm 23 and want desperately to live. I am fighting like a tiger to do just that. I didn't wish for cancer but I have it. I would be the happiest person alive if God would grant me the years to see my two children grow up. I am doing everything in my power to cooperate with the doctors who are trying to help me beat this cruel and ruthless disease.

DEAR READERS: You have just read a sampling of some extraordinary and thought-provoking mail. I agree with this young mother from Florida. Anyone who has good health and "everything to live for" yet wishes to die is in need of professional help.

Always use your apartment/suite number and ZIP Code when you put your return address on mail.

MINDING YOUR OWN BUSINESS

It's Up To You

I have always been a big fan of the late Ricky Nelson. One of his biggest hits was a song titled, "It's up to you." I still enjoy the song and the title is the perfect headline for this week's column.

January is the dawn of another new year. It is a new beginning and a new opportunity for you. Now is a good time to decide what kind of year it's going to be. Will it be a rerun of 1991 or will it be the most prosperous and exciting year you've ever encountered? Take your pick - it's up to you.

I may be old-fashioned, but I believe the good Lord created us with some intelligence. I believe he expects us to make the very best of our current situations. Consequently, each of us can affect much of what happens to us this year.

All it requires is a little effort on our part. The longest journey begins with a single step. Let's get started, by playing a little game called "what if."

What If

- What if you decided to make 1992 the year you start running your business instead of letting it run you.
- What if you make this the year you really get a handle on what is happening with the financial side of your business. For example, you might work on generating monthly profit and loss statements, instead of waiting twelve months for a report.
- What if you make this the year you let a computer or electronic cash register help you keep track of sales, inventory and expenses.
- What if you make this the year you enhance your education with courses in marketing, advertising or management.
- What if you printed a thousand high quality business cards and passed them out everywhere you went.
- If you work for someone else, what if you decided to be worth a lot more than you are being paid this year.

Would you see any difference in your life? Are you willing to try some new ideas for fun and profit? It's up to you.

The Year of the Customer

You could decide that 1992 will be the year of the customer in your business. It's up to you.

- What do you think might happen if you personally called everyone of your customers this year and told them how much you value and appreciate their business?

- What opportunities might you discover by asking one different customer each day, "What can we do to serve you more effectively?"
- What changes might you make if you looked at your business every morning with the eyes of your customer? Would you add new signs? Would you dig the weeds out of the sidewalks or parking lot? Would you sharpen up the window displays? Do you need to add a fresh coat of paint?
- Would you need to change your operation if you asked your customers what hours would be most convenient for them? Do most of your customers work 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.?
- What might happen if you suddenly began to treat your employees just like customers? Your associates are people too, you know.
- What do you think might happen if you just read this column? Nothing - unless you decide to take some action. It's up to you.

I challenge you to make 1992 your most fulfilling, most rewarding and most successful year ever. I would like to share my personal guide for success with you. It involves tips on getting more out of your job, your life and your future. I'll send it free, if you will write for it. Please send a stamped, self addressed envelope to: "The A, B, C's of Success," c/o Minding Your Own Business, P.O. Box 67, Amarillo, Texas 79105.

SECLUDED MASTER SUITE HAS DESIGNER BATH

FEATURE HOMES
© BY W.D. FARMER, A.I.B.D.

This home plan is well suited to easy traffic flow. A separate entry foyer is direct to the spacious great room. This room exhibits an open appearance by means of the vaulted ceiling. The convenience of the dining room, kitchen and sun deck results in easy family living.

The large kitchen is full of cabinet space and a separate laundry room is from this area. Since the lady of the house spends most of her time in the kitchen, attending to the laundry is easy.

The master bedroom suite is away from the remaining two bedrooms and is adorned with sloped and tray ceiling, direct sun deck access and a luxurious bath room with two walk-in closets, two lavatories, separate shower and a separate commode area.

There are three bedrooms at the opposite end of the plan. These three bedrooms share a central bath. Stairs to the basement are in this bedroom wing of the plan.

The exterior is embellished with multiple light decorative window treatment, corner quoins, stucco finish and hip roof construction. The garage door is at the side of the home and not visible to the front perspective of the plan.

The plan is Number 2267. It includes 2,232 square feet of heated area. It is a computer generated plan. All W. D. Farmer plans include special construction details for energy efficiency and are drawn to meet FHA and VA requirements. For further information write W. D. Farmer, P.O. Box 450025, Atlanta, GA 30345.

Question-Answer

Q. - I'm concerned about the condition of our brick home. We bricked it two years ago. Every now and then, a white chalky substance appears on it. We would like to know if there is something we can do about it?

A. - The white substance is deposits of water-soluble salts called efflorescence. These salts may be contained in the bricks, the mortar or possibly the masonry behind the bricks. When efflorescence appears on a brick wall of relatively new construction, it's often the result of water absorbed by the bricks. The soluble salts dissolve in water (from rain, snow or ice) and are deposited on the brick surfaces when the water evaporates. However, it's also possible that water is entering the wall through open joints or poor construction methods, and has found a path to the surface.

When there is a sufficient amount of water to dissolve the salts, there will be an efflorescence buildup on the wall surface. In this case, you should examine the wall and construction details for open joints and possible sources of moisture penetration. All open joints must be sealed and poor construction methods corrected.

Efflorescing salts will generally disappear of their own accord with normal weathering - especially when they are the result of absorbed water. However, you can remove the salts by dry-scrubbing with a stiff brush. Heavy accumulations of stubborn deposits may be removed by scrubbing with a solution of one part muriatic acid to 12 parts water.

It is imperative that the wall be saturated with water before and after the solution is applied. Wetting down the wall enables the acid to work on the efflorescence, and wetting it down afterwards rinses off the acid which might otherwise damage the surface or pose a danger to people, plants or animals.

Before you go to the acid, however, try several sessions of hosing down the whitened area of bricks to wash away the deposits, and see if that doesn't do the trick.

It takes more than blind luck to pin down the right home.

Sure, you could go on stumbling through the housing market. Running into dead ends and getting cornered with too little information. Or you could nail down that new home the easy way. By consulting an experienced real estate agent. An agent can point out options you may have missed. Get you inside interesting homes that you may never have seen otherwise. Even do a lot of the groundwork, so you don't have to. Like researching financing packages. Checking through the multiple-listing service for homes that fit your needs -- and your pocketbook. Negotiating with the seller. And arranging for inspections. He or she will even be there at closing. So instead of forging ahead without knowing what's out there, get some help from an expert. A real estate agent. Inside The Hereford Brand, you'll find both qualified agents and valuable information about home buying. Everyday, the real estate classifieds list many properties and agents. And The Brand's Sunday housing section examine the latest market trends and housing opportunities. With the right guide, hitting your mark can be child's play.

CLASSIFIED ADS
 Classified advertising rates are based on 15 cents a word for first insertion ($3.00 minimum), and 11 cents for second publication and thereafter. Rates below are based on consecutive issues, no copy change, straight word ads.

TIMES	RATE	MIN
1 day per word	.15	3.00
2 days per word	.26	5.20
3 days per word	.37	7.40
4 days per word	.48	9.60
5 days per word	.59	11.80

If you run ads in five consecutive issues with NO changes, you get the same ad in the Reach 4 More free. The regular charge for that ad would be $4.00.

CLASSIFIED DISPLAY
 Classified display rates apply to all other ads not set in solid-word lines-those with captions, bold or larger type, special paragraphing; all capital letters. Rates are $4.15 per column inch; $3.45 an inch for consecutive additional insertions.

LEGALS
 Ad rates for legal notices are same as for classified display.

ERRORS
 Every effort is made to avoid errors in word ads and legal notices. Advertisers should call attention to any errors immediately after the first insertion. We will not be responsible for more than one incorrect insertion. In case of errors by the publishers, an additional insertion will be published.

Canyon's Lair master of deceit, bridge

By CHARLES RICHARDS
Associated Press Writer
CANYON, Texas (AP) - When he's not competing, professional bridge player Mark Lair is considered "a good Christian" and noted for his honesty and upstanding morals, his peers say.

"But at the bridge table, he's full of larceny and deceit, always trying to outwit his opponents to take advantage of the slightest hint of weakness," says Mike Passell, who has been Lair's steady bridge partner for almost 20 years.

Lair, 44, of Canyon, won more events last year than any other player in the American Contract Bridge League in winning the Barry Crane 500 award, which goes to the player who has won the most masterpoints in a year.

"Mark Lair is a real gem in the bridge world. He has an easygoing manner away from the table, but his obvious intensity at the table is one of his major attributes," Passell said.

In the two decades that Lair has been playing bridge professionally, he's won an estimated 400 championships in regional tournaments across the United States and a dozen or more championships in national tournaments.

When the opponents have the balance of strength, Lair frequently is in the bidding auction, making aggressive bids or overcalls, hoping to keep the opponents off-balance.

His colleagues say he is intense, imaginative and aware, trying to squeeze everything possible out of the play and out of the bidding, hating to lose.

Lair and Passell, who lives in Dallas, won two team events at the fall ACBL nationals in Indianapolis in November, although they failed to win the prized Reisinger Board-a-Match national team championship that also barely eluded them last year.

Playing with them were three other of the nation's top bridge professionals: Paul Soloway of Mill Creek, Wash., Bobby Goldman of Dallas and Eddie Wold of Houston. In last year's ACBL matchpoint race, Lair was first, Soloway third, Passell fifth, Wold sixth and Goldman seventh.

There's a regional bridge tournament somewhere across the United States almost every week, but the ACBL has three 10-day national tournaments each year that attract virtually all of the nation's top players, as well as some international stars.

It's at the nationals that the competition and the will to win are the fiercest.

"I feel incredible adrenaline when the national team championships start narrowing down to the finals," Lair said.

"The most difficult feat in high-level competition is breaking another top pair's momentum and turning a match around with your own partnership poise and performance," Lair said.

"There is an element of luck, but both teams do hold the same cards at each table. You make a lot of your own luck by choosing the right situations to be aggressive or conservative. At the highest level, you get punished for your mistakes."

Lair was playing rubber bridge for money in Oklahoma City when he met Passell about 1972.

"Mike really helped me. He was already on the tournament trail, and I wasn't," Lair said. "I got acquainted with some of his peers, and he played with me some. He thought I had considerable bridge talent, and one thing led to another."

Over the years, Lair said, "Mike and I through our enduring partnership and friendship have learned how to handle adversity much stronger than we did in our early years. We don't let bad results get us into ego battles at the table. We're good friends at the card table, very supportive of each other, and that's important in a good partnership."

In Lair's successful drive for ACBL's top masterpoint ranking in 1990, he played "95 percent of the time" with players of lesser ability who paid him several hundred dollars for two 3 1/2-hour sessions of play.

It's the equivalent of a local golfer getting to play in a tournament with Jack Nicklaus and getting instruction along the way.

"He has a way of getting the most out of me," said Mrs. James Stickney of McComb, Miss., who has been playing with Lair for "about 20 years." They've won numerous championships across the nation.

"His technique, his card play is the main thing. He just is real good, analyzing what other people have in their hand. Mark improved my game a lot by teaching me different things, and I pass them along to my favorite partner back home," she said in a telephone interview.

At Indianapolis, Lair had two high finishes with clients; finishing first overall with Mrs. Bobby Marcus of Detroit in one regionally rated pairs event and second overall with Mrs. Stickney in another.

When play to a hand begins, Lair begins the process of trying to determine the makeup of the unseen hands. Using the clues available through the bidding, the opening lead, and the play, he usually is able to work out the location of the key missing cards.

"I thoroughly enjoy playing professionally," Lair said.

"I enjoy the challenge of winning with numerous clients with various levels of skill and seeing them go on to get better results in the future, even when they're not playing with me, because they learned a lot of little gadgets and little psychological things that come up at the table that they never thought of before."

New novel mirrors famous Davis case

By MIKE COCHRAN
Associated Press Writer
FORT WORTH (AP) - The Cullen Davis murder case is alive and well, as lurid as ever and lurking in the pages of a new work of fiction entitled "Rich as Sin."

Well, sort of. The novel by Fort Worth author Patrick Anderson is set in his hometown, revolves around an oil rich Texas family and features a mansion murder no less mystifying than the massacre that occurred 15 years ago at the remote Davis estate.

What's more, the story embraces the pricey, old-line Rivercrest area of Fort Worth and turns on a murder trial that splits both the troubled family and the city itself, much as the Davis case did in the 1970s.

And the drug of choice in Anderson's saga of sex and sin is Percodan, a popular pain-killer for principals in the Davis case.

In its promotional material, publisher Simon & Schuster points out that Anderson attended school with Davis in Fort Worth and, with no hint of subtlety, adds:

"Davis, as many in Texas will remember, went on to become a billionaire industrialist and a notorious celebrity in the rich social circuit after being acquitted of murdering his wife's lover and daughter."

Well, sort of. Davis, once one of the richest men in America, was in fact acquitted of killing his wife's young daughter. But he never was tried for the slaying of her lover, a former Texas Christian University basketball player named Stan Farr.

And while once a "notorious celebrity," Davis was never more than a pseudo-social butterfly. He lost millions in the oil and real estate bust of the 1980s and sold his showplace mansion for a paltry $30 million-plus.

In "Rich as Sin," Anderson tells the story of twin sisters torn apart as children, their reunion years later and their tragic encounter with the fictional and fractured Nash family of Fort Worth.

The Nashes consist of "a mother and three sons whose fabulous wealth threatens to destroy them."

Actually, it's not the Nash money that is so deadly but one of the Nash boys, Sonny, "a cruel and brilliant killer who lusts for revenge against the brave woman who brought him down."

Sonny Nash is a villain's villain, deadlier than a rattlesnake and meaner than a junkyard dog, yet deviously clever and crudely charming.

Among his more vicious acts is the rape of a child actress, whom he lures to his "dream house" at Eagle Mountain Lake and attacks just hours before she is to star in a black-tie theatrical performance.

The guests of honor at the Fort Worth event: President and Nancy Reagan.

Anderson, incidentally, "was a speech writer in three presidential campaigns and among his previous books is "The President's Mistress." He now lives in Washington, D.C.

A bit soapy at times, "Rich as Sin" is a fast-paced, decidedly chilling story of money, murder and madness with even more twists and turns than the Davis case itself.

Anderson rarely portrays his hometown or his home state with much affection and some of his observations are a mite much:

"At its outskirts, Fort Worth seemed the ugliest place in the universe, a raw, desolate shantytown stretched out beneath the pale, pitiless sky."

"Jessica ... had forgotten the violence of the elements, the blistering summers, spring's blinding sandstorms, winter's relentless ice storms, the northers and tornadoes that came racing across the prairie any time."

Weight Loss Surprises Researchers

WASHINGTON --A nutrition organization was hopeful that a nutritionally complete "hi-tech" food tablet would help erase world hunger problems, until a study revealed that one of the ingredients could cause significant weight loss.

Although other studies and scientists may not agree, researchers in Europe found that the ingredient, a natural plant colloid, actually caused people to lose weight, even though specifically instructed not to alter normal eating patterns, according to one study published in the prestigious British Journal of Nutrition. Researchers in an earlier study had speculated that the weight loss was due to a decrease in the intestinal absorption of calories.

While the project of National Dietary Research, aptly named Food Source One, would not be used to successfully fulfill its original goal, the formula which has since been improved with other natural colloids has been a windfall for some overweight people. A Daytona Beach, Florida woman fighting a weight battle for 12 years used the product on the recommendation of her physician and lost 30 pounds. She stated, "Not only have I lost 30 pounds but my cholesterol has dropped from 232 to 143. I have two closets full of clothes which have not fit me in two years that I can now wear." In a separate report, a telephone interview revealed that a Wilmington, North Carolina pharmacist lost 14 pounds in 3 weeks on the product and was never hungry.

Food Source One tablets are part of National Dietary Research's comprehensive plan to bring a rapid end to obesity in this country. A variety of nutritionally sound diet plans, specially prepared by NDR, accompany each bottle and provide a natural, drug free alternative for confronting the problem of obesity.

Robert Urich and son 'Survive the Savage Sea'

Mark Bellou, Ali MacGraw (in shadow) and David Franklin star in the fact-based adventure Survive the Savage Sea, airing Monday, Jan. 6, on ABC. The drama, which also stars Robert Urich, depicts a family's struggle on the open ocean after their schooner is sunk in the South Pacific.

Human spirit meets Nature head on

By Dan Rice

If you thought your family's dream vacation turned into a nightmare, you should watch Survive the Savage Sea, premiering Monday, Jan. 6, on ABC. More frustrating than infinite lines at Disney World, more desperate than finding a room in New Orleans during Mardi Gras, a ride on the Savage Sea tantalizes the voyager with the ultimate prize: life itself.

Based upon a true story, Survive the Savage Sea takes the Carpenter family on a journey that not only tests their individual levels of endurance, but also teaches them the value of faith and teamwork. Jack and Claire Carpenter (Robert Urich and Ali MacGraw) sell the family home and with their four children, fly to Australia and buy a schooner for the family sea adventure they've planned for years. Daughter Susan (Danielle von Zerneck) decides to back out of the trip and stay in Australia, forcing Jack to replace her position on their crew with Wally, a local 20-year-old (David Franklin) whose claim of extensive sailing knowledge turns out to be greatly exaggerated.

While en route to the Cook Islands, their boat is struck by usually docile killer whales, most likely in a feeding frenzy. As the craft sinks, there is only time to release the dinghy and life raft, but Jack braves the rising waters to rescue the ship's log. With meager supplies provided by a survival kit in the life raft, the Carpenters and Wally strive to make it to the shipping lanes far to the north before their rations give out.

The family's predicament between the ruthless sun and the shark-infested waters worsens with each crashing wave, and thanks to a narrative device at the film's beginning, we're never sure what the outcome will be. Despite a mediocre start, Survive the Savage Sea becomes quite engaging; viewers will find themselves wholeheartedly rooting for Jack to catch a fish. And the transformation of Wally from a liability to a much-needed asset is testament to the inherent potential of all people.

Robert Urich, whose son Ryan was cast as one of the Carpenter sons, reports that this role was "without a doubt, physically the most uncomfortable thing I've ever done. We were always wet. It was winter there, and the water was not warm. It was a confined space (the raft), I'm a little claustrophobic, and it seemed like somebody was always either stepping on you, or kicking you, or poking you in your face, and I just found it really annoying."

Most famous for his hit TV series Vegas and Spenser: For Hire and his part in the enormously successful miniseries Lonesome Dove, Urich has a long track record in television and films. Last August he took over as host for National Geographic: On Assignment, a job which takes him out on photo-safaris to exotic locations with wildlife cinematographers. A demanding schedule, yes, but Urich finds the experiences with National Geographic very satisfying. "I have sort of this Bohemian-Gypsy blood in my veins. I need changes-of-venue; I don't do well when I have to stay in one place very long."

Also active in natural resource conservation, Urich's many projects (including a new TV pilot in development) keep his career afloat, yet it is his family which anchors him.

Program for future can be seen now

By Dan Rice

Watch it now, or much, much later. A&E has produced a 12-hour documentary series designed for audiences of the year 3000 but first visible beginning Sunday, Jan. 5. The Class of the 20th Century features 100 prominent Americans sharing their feelings about significant historical/cultural events and phenomena, all to be preserved for the distant future. Host Richard Dreyfuss introduces this diverse collection.

It's Murphy's Law on the high seas: Whatever can go wrong does in the adventure Shipwrecked, which makes its television premiere Sunday on The Disney Channel. Sail with young Haakon (Stian Smestad) on his first sea voyage, in which his ship is hijacked, then ravaged by a hurricane, leaving him marooned on a tropical isle with a stowaway girl (Louisa Haigh), where they face jungle perils and cutthroat pirates. Yes, he should have taken the bus.

Good help is so hard to find. The lazy people of a village in the Amazon jungle would prefer just to lie in their hammocks all day thinking those deep thoughts. They get their wish with the arrival of a strange man who can create servant monkeys, but soon chaos drops out of the trees. Narrated by Raul Julia and with music by Lee Ritenour, the still-animated fable The Monkey People premieres Tuesday, Jan. 7, on Showtime's We All Have Tales.

SOAP TALK

Soap Opera awards air Jan. 10

By Candace Havens

The eighth annual Soap Opera Digest Awards airs live Friday, Jan. 10, on NBC, and for the first time it will be shown during prime time. Each year I like to indicate my personal choices in each category (but not necessarily the nominees I expect will win), so here goes:

For Outstanding Daytime Show, I like Days of Our Lives, because, if nothing else, it is never boring. In the Outstanding Lead Actor category, I'd really like to see the funny and very talented Stephen Schnetzer (Cass, Another World) get it. For Outstanding Lead Actress, Elizabeth Hubbard as Lucinda on As the World Turns is the best.

In the Supporting Actor and Actress categories, I'd have to pick two from General Hospital: Stuart Damon (who plays Alan) and the devilishly fun Jane Elliot (as Tracy). And if you were giving an award for the evilest of evil deeds, the Outstanding Villain statuette would surely go to Michael Zaslow (who plays Roger on Guiding Light). On the distaff side, my pick for Outstanding Villainess is Lynn Herring, as the money-hungry Lucy on General Hospital.

In the Outstanding Newcomer categories, John J. York (who plays Mac on GH) gets my nod for being the guy who made the most impact on the television viewing audience. Victoria Rowell (as Drucilla on The Young and the Restless) has really come a long way and should win the prize.

For Outstanding Younger Leading Actor, I'd like to see Ricky Paul Goldin come away the winner. The prize for Outstanding Younger Leading Actress should go to Beth Ehlers (as Harley on GL). She's a talented lady and deserves to win.

This year's award for Best Wedding should go to Y&R for Danny and Cricket's wedding. Even though this entire relationship totally disgusts me, their wedding, filmed in Hawaii, was beautiful. AMC should get the award for Best Death Scene for the deaths of Tad Martin and Billy Clyde Tuggle, since these are the only two characters who have stayed dead. The award for Outstanding Comic Performance should go to the intensely funny Robert Mailhouse, who plays Brian on Days. And finally, the year's Best Love Story belongs to Jack and Jennifer on Days.

TIME OUT

ESPN holds center court in college hoops

By Steve Paschal

ESPN may have to take a back seat to NBC and CBS when it comes to the NFL playoffs, but the cable sports leader is way out front with its extensive and diverse coverage of college basketball.

This week, ESPN tips off its Monday-through-Thursday basketball schedule, which includes 10 games from eight conferences each week. Monday nights feature games from the Big East and Big Eight. The Southeast and Big Ten Conferences take the spotlight Tuesday nights, and Wednesday nights belong to the Big East and Atlantic Coast Conferences. On Thursday nights, ESPN presents key matchups from the already mentioned conferences, as well as the Southwest, Atlantic 10, Metro, Great Midwest and PAC-10 Conferences.

Too often, because of limited sports air time, the broadcast networks focus only on glamour games involving nationally ranked teams. But with its ambitious collegiate lineup, ESPN not only offers games involving 12 of last year's 13 winningest teams (NCAA sanctions prohibit Nevada-Las Vegas from appearing on television), but some of the best state and regional rivalries around to boot.

For instance, ESPN's schedule this week includes big names such as Kentucky and Georgetown, as well as less-publicized rivalries like New Mexico and New Mexico State.

STAR NOTES

Alexandra Wilson finds her 'Homefront'

By Lisa Otoupal

ABC's Homefront looks back at the period just after World War II. Authentic clothing and props provide an atmosphere which aids the actors in the portrayal of their characters. Alexandra Wilson has added to this atmosphere her own special spark to create the vibrant '40s woman Sarah Metcalf.

Born in Pasadena, Calif., but raised in Virginia, Wilson always wanted to be an actress... no surprise considering her grandmother was a Rockette and her mother an award-winning high school drama teacher. So she followed her dream to New York.

Once there, waitressing paid for her acting classes, which led to work in commercials and various TV roles before a part in the ABC daytime drama Loving. Wilson was excited to have a job, but hard lessons were learned. "In a way, I'm glad my first experience wasn't a good one," she says now.

When Wilson saw the script for Homefront, she immediately knew this was something she wanted to do. The actress seems perfect for the part of Sarah: When asked how she differed from her character, Wilson was hard-pressed to come up with any qualities she and Sarah didn't share.

While her immediate plans don't include feature films or theater work, she hasn't ruled them out. "I just want to act," she says.

'Davis Rules' leaves ABC, Murphy's Law behind

Randy Quaid (left) is Dwight Davis, an unorthodox junior high school principal; Emmy-winner Jonathan Winters plays his dad, Gunny, in Davis Rules, now airing Wednesdays on CBS.

Comedy finds new home on CBS

By Suzanne Gill
 Funny thing about ABC. They seem to have more comedies than sense. The network has four half-hours in the Nielsen top 10, but with dogs like Baby Talk and the rapidly deflating Who's the Boss? and Growing Pains still on the air, there hasn't been room for other series the network still has in production. A case in point has been the Randy Quaid-Jonathan Winters comedy Davis Rules, about a junior-high-school principal, his dad and three kids, which had the red-carpet treatment just last January, being introduced in the prime half-hour following Super Bowl XXV.

A similar situation existed two years ago for Coach, the series starring Craig T. Nelson and Shelley Fabares, which was put aside after a well-received spring season in favor of Chicken Soup. When the Soup soured, Coach came off the bench. Since then, the series has become a top-ten hit.

This season, the loss of Good & Evil and semi-retirement of Sibs made room for a drama, Civil Wars. So Carsey-Werner, the producers of Davis Rules, agreed to let the series be sold to CBS. After a Dec. 30 preview, Davis Rules officially debuted on its new network Wednesday, Jan. 1.

"I was really happy to hear that CBS picked up the show," says Quaid. "It was sort of languishing over at ABC. We were making these shows week after week, but we never knew when we were going to be on the air, and they couldn't really find a place for us."

"So when Marcy (Carsey) announced that we'd been sold to another network, it was just great news for everybody."

The sale makes sense for CBS, struggling to be thought of as a purveyor of quality comedy, and struggling even more since Redd Foxx's death put Royal Family, one of the darlings of its new season, into the shop. While not a break-out hit for ABC, Davis Rules has established name value, and it provides a much-needed partner for Brooklyn Bridge, another CBS property still seeking an audience. Obviously, CBS is betting it will have the last laugh. © TV Listing Inc.

FAMILY FAIRE

'Happy Birthday' family fun for a song

By Chris Carpenter

If most "poor little rich girls" got what they really deserved for their birthdays, BMWs and debutante parties might be replaced by credit card shredders and years of therapy as gift ideas.

Thank goodness, then, for little Olivia Orderly, the dainty yet down-to-earth heiress in HBO's half-hour animated special Happy Birthday to You, airing throughout January. As a member of the opulent Orderly family, Olivia could well demand the head of her servant for her upcoming 10th birthday if she wished. Actually, the thought has probably crossed her mind, as her servant, Snitchgrovel, rules the household staff with an iron grip and refuses to let Olivia have a normal childhood. Worst of all, he chases off the only friend her age she can find, a peasant boy named Barnaby (voice by Roger Daltrey), who had promised to compose a song for her on his harmonica.

Olivia's request of this song as her only birthday gift paints a wonderful, animated picture of maturing values. A tender reunion with Barnaby becomes inevitable when Snitchgrovel's attempt to compose a song provides nothing more than hollow lyrics that quickly draw tears from Olivia. At last her parents realize all the money in the world can't buy the warm glow of unconditional childhood friendship.

Reader very curious about Andrew McCarthy

By Taylor Michaels

Q: I would like to know about Andrew McCarthy ... where he is from, his home, his hangouts ... just about anything you can give me. I can't find anything about him in magazines anywhere. I would also like to know where he stays when he visits Maui. Has he ever gotten romantically involved with his co-stars and do they keep in touch. I have all of his videos. —P.F., Kihai, Maui.

A: Early details are sketchy. According to two references, McCarthy was born in 1963, but one says 1962. Two references say he was born in New York, but one lists his birthplace as Westfield, N.J. He decided to become an actor after being cut from his high school football team. Later on, while attending New York University, a classmate told him about the casting for an upcoming movie called Class. McCarthy won the starring role opposite Jacqueline Bisset. During the filming of that movie, he met Rob Lowe and subsequently became known as one of the "Brat Pack," mainly a media grouping of all the young, successful actors at that time. I don't know where he stays when he's in Maui or where he "hangs out." I've never heard of him getting romantically involved with any of his co-stars. He currently lives in Greenwich Village in N.Y.C. He's an avid Yankees fan and enjoys golf.

Q: When I was a small child in the '60s, I remember I was never allowed to watch Dark Shadows. My mom told me it was harmful to watch, and nightmares would occur and scare me. I am an adult now, and the show came back on television. I did not find it horrible or repulsive. I fell in love with the timely gothic but beautiful story. Is there a place where I can buy the story? —Natalie Adkins, Mount Pleasant, Texas.

A: Waldenbooks has both a printed tribute to the show and a companion book to the series. There are videos available of the old series, but not the most recent one, which was canceled with no plans to bring it back. If you are interested in buying the videos, you can call the Video Library of Philadelphia at 800-669-7157. Or check your local video store; maybe they can special order the tapes for you.

Q: A friend of mine has bet me that James Coburn is the son of the late actor Charles Coburn. I say he is not. Who's right? —Alesta Pacelli, Big Bear Lake, Calif., 92315.

A: I would have to say you're right. I can't find any mention that Charles is the father of James.

Q: Where can I write Jean-Claude Van Damme? —Mary Davies, T or C, N.M.

A: You can write to his fan club. The address is P.O. Box 4149, Chatsworth, Calif., 91313-4149.

Q: Would you please give me an address where I can write to Sharon Gless of The Trials of Rosie O'Neill? I have been following her career since Cagney & Lacey and think she is an inspiration to all women. —S. Wills, Morehead City, N.C.

A: Write Gless c/o CBS, CBS Television City, 7800 Beverly Blvd., Los Angeles, Calif., 90036. If you are a fan of the show, you might want to also write to that address and let the network executives know you like it. It was recently placed on hiatus and is in danger of being canceled.

Q: I am interested in obtaining a video copy of an episode of the show That's Incredible that aired in the '80s. Would you please supply me with the address for the network or whoever otherwise could assist me with this? —Ronald S. Donakowski, Enterprise, Ala.

A: Try writing to MCA TV, 100 Universal City Plaza, Universal City, Calif., 91608. They are the current distributors for the show. ©TV Listing Inc.

Charlie Rose returns to national television

Rose blooms again. Absent from national television since he quit the syndicated Personalities last year, Charlie Rose returns on Monday, Jan. 6, when his public affairs/discussion series on the PBS affiliate WNET begins its one-day delayed broadcast on The Learning Channel. The WNET program has drawn a cult following in New York, and TLC has high hopes that Rose will pull in faithful audiences for them. TLC will air new episodes of Charlie Rose Monday through Saturday with late-night repeats. The hour-long forum will examine topics ranging from AIDS to Broadway plays.

Charlie Rose

Now you can sleep with the soaps. Heartland Apparel, Inc., is introducing a line of sleepwear featuring the logos or designs of ABC's four soap operas. Besides a scrub-suit sleeper similar to the ones worn on General Hospital, there are nightshirts sporting the logos of GH, All My Children, Loving and One Life to Live. Amy Dorn Kopelan, an ABC vice president of marketing, claims, "Soap opera viewers tend to be very loyal to their shows and the Heartland line will remind them of the soaps they love so much." Sorry, torrid romance not included.

The results are in. Figures obtained from the National Cable Television Association indicate that 1991 was a very good year for them. Largely due to CNN's news-coverage coup in the Persian Gulf war, for the first time basic cable beat one of the major networks (ABC) in the ratings battle during the first six weeks of 1991, finishing third behind CBS and NBC. Since its deregulation, investment in basic cable programming has risen steadily. The NCTA stated that now 60.6 percent of all U.S. homes are cable households, and that the number of students who supplement their education with Cable in the Classroom doubled in 1991.

HAVE FUN at the Movies

EXCELLENT GOOD FAIR POOR DON'T WASTE MONEY

THE PRINCE OF TIDES:

Starring Barbra Streisand and Nick Nolte.

The Prince of Tides is an interesting movie based on the brilliant best-selling novel about the complexity of family relationships. Tides explores the effect that seriously flawed parents have on the lives of their children and how, as adults, these children deal with the scars of their childhood.

The movie fails to book because the focus in the film is on Barbra Streisand, not the troubled children. Director Streisand has cast herself as psychiatrist Susan Lowenstein, the high priestess of healing; a god-like deity who has her own troubled life. The character Lowenstein has been rewritten into the central character and has become the lightning rod for all of the suffering, revelation and healing. And as the director, Streisand, in this film, has no feel for dramatic balance. Every scene is so IMPORTANT that you could get seasick from the constant swelling of the music that accompanies them.

Nick Nolte is the troubled brother to a suicidal twin sister, and a man with a crumbling marriage. Dr. Lowenstein is his sister's therapist who helps him "look deep" into himself. Kate Nelligan is the twin's difficult mother whose love and drive has scarred her family. She is absolutely brilliant in the role and is the anchor that holds you to the film. While staying immersed in the story is a struggle, it is ultimately worth the effort.

However, the film's message, about forgiveness and coming to grips with the past in order to move beyond it, should have been told with less glorification of Ms. Streisand, who showboats relentlessly.

Finally, it is a visually beautiful film which was shot in New York City and in the wetlands of Beaufort, S.C. Unfortunately it is not subtly filmed. There is so much backlighting, diffused spots, golden hues and soft breezes gently blowing that it becomes extremely saccharine. It is also, under Ms. Streisand's hand, a long, lumbering, weepy tale. Rated R for language, violence and adult themes.

Two and a Half Boxes

PSYCHIATRY ON VIDEO

Psychology is a fascinating subject for filmmakers. The subject took its firmest hold in the middle of World War II, when so many people needed reassurance. The best of these during this era are:

THE SEVENTH VEIL:

(1945/British/Black & White) Starring James Mason. This is a superior psychological Gothic romance about a beautiful young pianist (Ann Todd) who runs away from her tyrannical guardian (Mason - with a limp, yet). Her life with her neurotic keeper has left her unable to continue her career or to choose between two boyfriends. A friendly psychiatrist steps in and uses hypnosis to enable her to regain her professional and personal sanity. The entire company is first-rate. The screenplay won an Oscar. Not rated. Would be a PG-13.

Three Boxes

SPELLBOUND: (1945/Black & White) Starring Ingrid Bergman and Gregory Peck. Director Alfred Hitchcock said in his usual, understated manner that "Spellbound is just another manhunt story wrapped up in pseudo-psychoanalysis." It is more than that, but we won't give away the plot. We will divulge that Ingrid Bergman plays the psychiatrist and Gregory Peck is the patient. The artist Salvador Dali provided the nightmare sequences, which garnered him an Oscar. Not rated. Would be a PG-13.

Four Boxes

THE DARK MIRROR: (1946/Black & White) Starring Olivia De Havilland.

Olivia De Havilland, who did this sort of thing extremely well, plays twin sisters - one good, one evil - enmeshed in murder. Lew Ayres is the shrink who must divine who is who as the evil sibling deftly connives to muddy the waters. Not rated. Would be PG-13.

Three Boxes

POSSESSED: (1947/Black & White) Starring Joan Crawford. A cold and clinical account of a loveless marriage, mysterious suicide, frustrated love for a scoundrel, murder and schizophrenia. The much-maligned Joan Crawford heads a fine, mature cast and gives one of her finest performances as a mentally troubled nurse whose head and heart problems destroy her life. The movie is extremely watchable. The opening scene is a real grabber. Not rated. Would be a PG-13.

Four Boxes

HOOK: Starring Dustin Hoffman, Robin Williams, Julia Roberts and Bob Hoskins.

The New Age Peter Pan. He grows up and learns to like it, in a $70 million extravaganza from Steven Spielberg called Hook. Because this idea seems to undercut the very thing that has made Peter so dear to so many people for so many years - his blithe revolt against turning adult - it makes it possible to dislike the film even before you see it. On the other hand, it is entirely possible to enjoy the movie for what it is: a bold attempt (that sometimes fails) at a spectacle that tells a genial story with energy and humor. The story itself is a bit of a stretch, a not-entirely-plausible extension of the original. Even J.M. Barrie didn't try to resolve the fear of accepting responsibility. In his story, you had to make a choice, to be Wendy, and take on the joys and limitations of adulthood, or to be Peter, and forever free.

With his wayward humor and aura of perpetual boyishness, Robin Williams easily pulls off the metamorphosis from workaholic grown-up Peter to spirited boy. Dustin Hoffman is wonderfully smarmy as a foppish Captain Hook whose life has been somewhat of a bore since Peter grew up and left Never-Never Land. Julia Roberts is wooden and often out of place as a less than adventuresome Tinker Bell. Maggie Smith is absolutely wonderful as the now older Wendy, whose beautiful memory brings back the spirit to the boy. But for the money, it's Bob Hoskins, as Hook's sidekick Mr. Smee, who chews the scenery and brings out the laughter.

A great film? No. It lacks magic and never truly soars. An interesting film? Yes. And, a chance to visit Never-Never Land with Peter Pan should not be missed. (Besides, Peter didn't really grow up. This, I believe with all my heart.) Rated PG. A warning to parents. There is a death of a young boy at the end which is treated somewhat callously.

NEVER-NEVER LAND ON VIDEO

There are two outstanding Peter Pan videos which will enthrall and delight the entire family. They are both entertaining and especially worth looking at before seeing Hook, so that all the references are easily understood.

PETER PAN: (1953/Animated) Walt Disney.

Voices: Peter Pan, Bobby Driscoll; Wendy, Kathryn Beaumont; Captain Hook, Hans Conreid; Mr. Darling, Hans Conreid; Mrs. Darling, Heather Angel; Mr. Smee, Bill Thompson; Michael Darling, Paul Collins; John, Tommy Luske; Indian Chief, Candy Candido; Narrator, Tom Conway.

While this 1953 Disney release doesn't seem to qualify as one of the studio's animated classics, it is nonetheless an entertaining version of James M. Barrie's children's play about the lost boys who live in Never-Never Land, and the three Darling children taken there by Peter Pan and his fairy companion, Tinker Bell. The picture cost more than $4 million to make, a huge amount for a film in 1953. This is because Disney filmed a live-action version of the movie first, in order to give the artists something to base their sketches on. Would be rated G.

Four Boxes

PETER PAN: (1960) Starring Mary Martin and Cyril Ritchard.

The magic is still there, remarkably, in this 1960 NBC Television production of the musical based on Barrie's book. Mary Martin, starring in her most beloved role, is absolutely smashing, magnificent, and wonderful as Peter.

This made-for-TV movie is an unusually high-quality release from Good-Times Video, which has added four minutes of footage not seen in twenty years. This one should be in your library. Would be rated a G.

Four Boxes

P.S. Don't let your children be turned off by this film's lack of pyrotechnics or Star Wars special effects. This is a beautiful telling of a lovely story.

Community Health UPDATE Deaf Smith General Hospital

VOL. 2 • WINTER EDITION

New Administrator Welcomes Challenge, Opportunities

Ron Rives is a man who enjoys a challenge. While working in the corporate offices of Methodist Hospital (Lubbock) Regional Services, he focused on assisting rural hospital administrators in overall operations and also on physician recruitment. Anyone can tell you that those two areas require great determination and innovation.

He helped develop the proposal for Methodist's affiliation with DSGH, and was named to serve as DSGH interim administrator when the agreement was formalized in September. Rives had been with the Lubbock hospital system for 14 months at that time.

A graduate of the Methodist Hospital School of Nursing, Rives understands the duties and structure of the employees of a hospital. His interests, however, led him into administration. He earned certification in health care administration from Trinity University in San Antonio.

From December 1986 to June 1990, he was administrator of the Medical Arts Hospital in Lamesa, a 40-bed acute care facility. Prior to that time, he was administrator of Trinity Memorial Hospital in Trinity, Texas, a 90-bed long- and short-term-care facility. He also served as administrator of Shamrock General Hospital in Shamrock, Texas, a 43-bed acute-care facility.

In the few months that Rives has been in Hereford, he has made a positive impression on the staff and the board. "Ron has a way of listening, planning and evaluating a situation, and then taking the action necessary for a positive impact. He stepped into what could have been a difficult situation and handled it very well," Raymond Schroeder, president of the hospital board, said. "Our affiliation with Methodist and association with Ron Rives mean that Deaf Smith General can look forward to some very positive developments."

Rives is joined in Hereford by his wife, Donna, and children, Makesha, 11, and Chayse, 9. Rives has another son, Michael, 21, who lives in Lamesa.

"I'm very happy to be working with the staff of DSGH," Rives said. "Both the facility and the people have a lot to offer, and we're going to make the most of both."

DSGH Home Care Makes House Calls

Deaf Smith Home Care service makes house calls for patients who still need care after they leave the hospital. Sharon Johnson, RN, the new director of the service, explained that the program permits patients to return to their homes, even though they still need some care.

"Most patients prefer the comfort of their own homes. When they reach the point where they no longer require constant nursing care, we can let them return to their own environments. This costs the patient less, and sometimes they get well faster because they're in familiar surroundings," she said.

Deaf Smith General Hospital provides the home care service because it extends the continuity of care beyond the hospital walls. "This is another part of our total comprehensive delivery of health care," Johnson said. "Home health is one of the trends in health care that helps the hospital stay

by Ron Rives

When Lubbock Methodist Hospital proposed an affiliation with Deaf Smith General Hospital, the tertiary care center promised to enhance the sound business practices already in place in Hereford, and to provide strong leadership to stimulate growth in the community. The system also promised that Deaf Smith Hospital would remain autonomous.

Since that affiliation took place in September, DSGH has undergone many changes. We've streamlined the efficiency of the operation, cutting the fat in many areas and beefing up services in other areas that required it.

We've been attempting a two-pronged effort to affect the fiscal viability of the hospital:

- * Cutting expenses
- * Increasing revenue

Through programs we developed to increase the managers' effectiveness and fiscal accountability for their departments, we've seen a natural decline in expenses. Our management team has responded to their increased responsibility by tightening the operation of each department.

Also, we've improved our methods of tracking inventory, both in the use and the purchase of supplies. By watching the pennies, we've found dollars.

We're also exploring methods of increasing revenues. One step we've taken is to implement fully the respite care and home health care programs. The cooperation and support from the managers and employees of DSGH, from the medical staff, and from the community have been tremendous. We have been greatly encouraged by the positive comments from the community. I would like to encourage any of you to share with us your opinions about the steps we're taking, and to share with us your ideas on how we can improve.

Our goal is to be pro-active and innovative in finding solutions to the problems that all rural hospitals face. With the help of a supportive board of directors, management team, dedicated employees, and a concerned community, we will continue to search for ways of becoming more efficient at providing the kind of care our patients expect.

Adult Respite Care Serves Area Residents

Adult Respite Care is one of the new services recently developed by DSGH. The program provides in-hospital care for adults who require around-the-clock care, but who live at home. Respite Care enable the primary caregivers (family members) much-needed temporary relief.

According to Ron Rives, Hospital Administrator, "Those who care for an invalid or an elderly family member in the home have difficulty finding proper help when they must be away from home. This type of responsibility is a heavy one, and we certainly recognize the need for such caregivers to take a vacation, or simply get away for awhile.

"By providing respite care at the hospital, we can help set the caregiver's mind at rest. Families know that their loved ones will be cared for in proper facilities, by skilled professionals, with necessary provision for emergencies."

Charges will range from $75 to $180 a day, depending on the level of care needed. Anyone wishing more information should call Renee Hammock, RN, Director of Nursing at 364-2141.

financially healthy."

The program has been in existence since 1982. Since DSGH joined the Lubbock Methodist system, the average number of patients in the Home Care Service has increased from about 28 to over 50 patients, with nursing visits averaging 25-28 daily.

Home Care staff provide nursing procedures, nursing assessment and evaluation, health teaching, nutrition counseling, physical therapy, and medical social services.

Lubbock Methodist Brings MedNet To DSGH

Lubbock Methodist has contracted with MedNet, a satellite network for the medical profession, to provide its services for Deaf Smith General Hospital. Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center is the source for the satellite link, which provides advanced and continuing medical training for the nurses, doctors, and allied health professionals.

The system was donated to Hereford as part of the management agreement with Lubbock Methodist Hospital system.

According to Peggy Oakes, RN, MedNet coordinator, the first programs began in early December. "Nurses must continually update their knowledge and skills because technology changes so quickly. With MedNet, our nurses can get CEUs (Continuing Education Units) to maintain their licenses and to stay current with the latest advances," she said. This also holds true with physicians and other allied health personnel.

All types of programming are available through the interactive video telecommunications network. Programs during the first month will be on topics ranging from information about the Patient Self-Determination Act to Alcohol Detox.

The programs are traditionally about 45 minutes long, followed by live questions from the remote satellite locations. These questions are transmitted to the center by telephone lines, and participants in each remote location can hear the questions and the answers. Programs are broadcast Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday between 12:30 and 1:30 so that staff can watch during their lunch hour.

"With this system our physicians, nurses and allied health professionals have the opportunity to hear medical experts discuss subjects in their field of expertise," Ron Rives, Administrator of DSGH, said. "Accessing this kind of knowledge for large numbers of our staff would be impossible without this type of programming. MedNet gives us the chance to stay on the cutting edge of change in medicine, and to serve our community better."

DSGH VOLUNTEERS

The Volunteer Auxiliary members are an important part of a Hospital and the DSGH Volunteers are no exception. We wish to recognize the members of this groups for their invaluable work, and their contribution to quality of life in our community.

Valucare Is Coming To DSGH

Have you heard? ValuCare is coming to Hereford. The popular program is a cluster of services designed for Medicare patients, and it's coming to Deaf Smith General Hospital later this spring.

The program, offered in conjunction with Lubbock Methodist Hospital, will give members discounts on co-insurance amounts, courtesy admission and discharge, special screenings, and discounts at area retailers.

Watch for the announcement.

UPDATE:

On Community Health News

Flu Season Is Here

Flu season is here, and although Texas is not experiencing the epidemic some states are, now is the time to get your flu shot. Vaccination is a safe and effective way to protect yourself from the flu, according to the U.S. Public Health Service, the American Lung Association, and most physicians.

Some of the flu symptoms include headaches, muscle aches, fatigue, sore throat, coughing and fever.

If you get the flu, stay in bed and drink lots of fluids. Take aspirin to relieve aches and fever. (Note: To protect against the possibility of Reye's Syndrome, use an aspirin substitute for children and teens.)

Eye Surgery Resumes at DSGH

Today, thanks to the new techniques of Phacoemulsification and small incision, modern cataract surgery is a pleasant out-patient surgery, and vision recovery occurs in days. Dik S. Cheung, MD, a board-certified ophthalmologist, offers the modern cataract surgery to the community at his Deaf Smith General Hospital offices. The cataract procedure used by Dr. Cheung is the same procedure as used in Amarillo.

Dr. Cheung, the medical director of the Eastern New Mexico Eye Clinic in Clovis since 1987, reopened his Hereford practice in September of 1991.

Patients may schedule appointments by calling DSGH at 364-2141.

News From Lubbock Methodist Hospital

A number of people in West Texas and Eastern New Mexico require heart transplants each year. Those heart transplants can now be done at Methodist Hospital in Lubbock.

"This program, the first in the West Texas/Eastern New Mexico region, is a natural progression of the hospital's commitment to the care and treatment of cardiac patients," said

William D. Poteet, III, FACHE, president and CEO of Methodist Hospital.

Overall medical direction is being provided by Paul A. Overlie, MD, a cardiologist with Cardiology Associates of Lubbock. John Seger, MD, and John Zias, MD, cardiologists with Cardiology Associates, will be involved with the program as well.

Previously, residents from the region who required a heart transplant had to travel east to Dallas or Houston, or west to Albuquerque or Phoenix for the procedure. Lengthy convalescence and postoperative monitoring sometimes required the patient and his or her family members to be away from home for weeks at a time.

Methodist Hospital has a tradition of providing premier cardiac services. The hospital was the site of the first open-heart surgery in the region, performed in 1970 by Donald L. Bricker, MD. Since then, more than 6,000 open-heart surgeries have been performed at the hospital.

Deaf Smith General Hospital affiliated with Lubbock Methodist Hospital in September of 1991.

Dietitian's Delight

Holidays and leftover turkey! Our dietitian, Charlotte R. Clark, MS RD/LD, suggests you use your leftover turkey in a way that is good for you and easy to prepare. Bon Appetit!

- 2 cups diced turkey
- 1 cup finely chopped celery
- ½ cup sliced almonds, toasted
- ½ cup round buttery cracker crumbs
- 2 Tablespoons chopped onions
- 1 can (10½ ounce) cream of chicken soup, undiluted
- 1 can (2-ounce) mushroom stems and pieces, drained
- ½ cup mayonnaise
- ½ cup crushed potato chips

Combine all ingredients except potato chips; toss gently. Spoon into a greased 1½ qt. casserole dish.

Bake at 375 degrees for 15 minutes.

Sprinkle potato chips on top; bake an additional 15 minutes.
