State plan dilutes minority strength

EDINBURG, Texas (AP) - The Legislature's redistricting plans dilute minority voting strength because they are based on data gleaned from a flawed census, a civil rights attorney says.

The 1990 census missed about 500,000 to 600,000 Texans, particularly minorities. That undercounting resulted in the development of inequitable voting districts, said Jim Harrington, the legal director for the Texas Civil Rights Project.

Harrington and other attorneys representing South Texas residents who filed a lawsuit saying they were not counted in the census went to court Monday in a bid to force the state to accept adjusted census figures.

They asked 332nd District Judge Mario E. Ramirez to issue an injunction that also would require lawmakers to develop a new redistricting map.

"The Legislature failed in its duty to create an opportunity for minorities" to vote equally, Harrington told the judge. "This court has the right to make the determination under Texas laws as to what voting rights are."

The suit contends that the districts were drawn up in such a way that they dilute minority voting strength and that the faulty plans are a direct result of inaccurate census figures.

However, Harrington also blamed the state for accepting those figures and not trying to adjust them.

"There are ways to deal with it, it's just that you don't want to do it," Harrington said.

He said he would present two alternative plans to the court that would prove there is a way of reapportioning the state's districts without hurting minority voters.

However, Renea Hicks of the Texas Attorney General's office said the redistricting plans couldn't have hurt anybody since they haven't even been approved on the federal level. The plans, one created by the state Senate, the other by the house, can't be enacted until they are.

Hicks added that the state is currently fighting its own battle in federal court to get the government to release adjusted census figures. He said there aren't any others available.

Hicks and other attorneys for the state are expected to present their defense when the preliminary injunction hearing continues today.

On Monday, Harrington presented several witnesses who testified that Hispanics and other minorities had been undercounted last year and that they would suffer as a result.

"Districts are drawn according to population and if minorities are being undercounted they are being discriminated against in political participation," said Alan Lichtman, a history professor at American University in Washington, D.C.

Lichtman, who was presented an expert witness on redistricting and the census, said that attempts to count the nation's population have always been flawed.

Another witness, Hidalgo County Judge Edgar Ruiz, who said census takers missed some 35,000 county residents, also said that the new district lines would dilute Hispanic voting strength by "packing" districts.

Packing occurs when a largely minority district is created, thereby pulling minority voters out of other districts.

Ruiz also said that the undercount would cost the county millions in state funding.

Boundary lines to go to Justice

AUSTIN (AP) - Texas' plans for redrawing legislative boundaries will be submitted this week for pre-clearance by the U.S. Justice Department, Secretary of State John Hannah said.

Hannah said Monday that he would submit the plan to the department's Civil Rights Division, which "will review the plans for a discriminatory purpose or discriminatory effect."

Such submissions are required by the Federal Voting Rights Act of 1965, he said.

Some legislative leaders had said they would prefer to send the redistricting plans to a three-judge federal court in Washington.

However, civil rights leaders objected to going straight to the court, saying officials were trying to protect white incumbents by bypassing the Justice Department.

Attorney General Dan Morales last week advised legislative leaders that submitting the plan to the agency would be faster than going through the court. The pre-clearance process could allow enough time to make any necessary changes and still hold 1992 elections on schedule, he said.

Life!

Ann Landers

DEAR READERS: This information could mean the difference between life and death to the 24,000 people who are waiting for an organ transplant. Please read it carefully.

In my column on Sunday, July 14, I printed a letter from Dr. Michael Kaplan, president of the Association of Organ Procurement Organizations in Washington, D.C., saying the families of organ donors do not have to pay any fees whatsoever for organ removal or transplantation. Dr. Kaplan was responding to several letters from readers who said they were no longer carrying organ donor cards because a friend or family member had been charged thousands of dollars after donating the organs of a deceased loved one to save the life of a stranger.

Dr. Kaplan made it abundantly clear that no family should be charged for organ donation. If family members are mistakenly billed, they should immediately contact the Association of Organ Procurement Organizations. The address is 1250 24th St., N.W., Suite 280, Washington, D.C. 20037.

Although I thought that column was carefully worded and straightforward, apparently the message didn't get across. Also, some papers did not print the column in its entirety and failed to run the response. The results have been catastrophic. The United Network of Organ Sharing (UNOS) which has 412 member institutions has been besieged with calls from readers of that column who said they were tearing up their donor cards and wanted their names removed from the registry. When asked why, the replied, "We didn't know that families of organ donors had to pay."

UNOS wants everyone to get this straight, and so do I. There is no charge for donating organs for transplantation. It is the ultimate gift of life and is regarded as such. Families are often unaware of the high costs involved during the final stages of trying to save a life. They sometimes interpret these charges as organ removal costs. Any and all questions about hospital bills should be discussed with the hospital administrator.

My Canadian readers were equally confused. Please note that in Canada, as in the United States, the families of organ donors are not charged for organ removal or transplantation.

I ask those readers who became alarmed and destroyed their donor cards to re-register immediately. Thousands of people are depending on your generosity. Please don't let them down.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'm guessing that Ray C. of Tulsa was serious with his neologisms for the blended family. Remember, he suggested "sister" for step-sister, "stunkel" for step-uncle, etc.

I have a better idea. Let's get rid of the ugliest four-letter word in the English language. It is "step." Step has become a pejorative -- a way to put down, disown and disengage from the other person. It's a not-so-subtle "distancer."

Often at a social function an adult will introduce a youngster as "my stepdaughter" or "my stepson." Who cares?! Our words reflect how we feel as well as what we are thinking.

I suggest that all families, starting today, stop using "step" and go straight to the heart of the matter.

How much kinder it would be for a parent to say, "This is my daughter" or "This is my son." -- Adele Borman, Redondo Beach, Calif.

DEAR ADELE: I second the motion. It's definitely a step in the right direction.

Planning a wedding? What's right? What's wrong? "The Ann Landers Guide for Brides" will relieve your anxiety. Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $3.65 (this includes postage and handling) to: Brides, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562. Coaching legend Brown dead at 82

By JEFFREY BRODEUR
Associated Press Writer
Paul Brown, the founder of Ohio's two professional football teams who died Monday, was described by one of his former players as "first-class all the way."

Brown, 82, died at his home in Cincinnati of complications caused by pneumonia, said Cincinnati Bengals spokesman Allan Heim.

NFL commissioner Paul Tagliabue said Brown's "enormous impact on professional football is an everlasting achievement. Following World War II, his team became the standard of excellence in the NFL."

"He always considered himself a teacher first. What he taught everyone in football would fill several volumes."

Tagliabue's predecessor as commissioner, Pete Rozelle, recalled Brown's influence on the game and support when Rozelle was approached about taking the job in 1960.

"All of us who were privileged to know Paul Brown are saddened by his loss," Rozelle said. "Whether they know it or not, nearly everyone in the game of football has been affected by Paul Brown. His wealth of ideas changed the game."

"When I was approached about becoming NFL commissioner, I expressed some initial reservations because I was so young (33), but Paul Brown reassured me and said, 'Don't worry, you'll grow with the job.' He was always supportive and remained a good friend."

Taylor Smith, president of the Atlanta Falcons, said Brown's influence is evident all over the NFL.

"He and George Halas (of the Chicago Bears) were like the fathers of the NFL," he said. "He is one of the true greats of all time in the history of the NFL."

Brown founded the Cleveland Browns of the All America Football Conference in 1946. His team were AAFC champions in every year of the league's existence, then joined the NFL when the leagues merged in 1950.

The Browns won the NFL title in that year, 1954 and 1955. Browns owner Art Modell fired Brown in 1962. Brown then formed the Cincinnati Bengals, who entered the American Football League in that year and joined the NFL when the two leagues merged in 1970.

Marion Motley, a fullback who played with Brown's Cleveland teams from 1946 to 1953, said Brown was ahead of his time.

"He was such an innovator. You know, he came up with the split end and he was the first to move the halfbacks around, so that the defense had to move with them. Everyone else just followed him," he said.

Motley said Brown also was one of the first coaches to make extensive use of game films, but because of Brown's personality, players dreaded the Monday morning ritual.

"I remember Dub Jones once scored five touchdowns against Chicago, and the next day Paul didn't find anything right with him," he said.

Miami Dolphins coach Don Shula, a defensive back for the Browns in 1951 and 1952, said Brown brought education to the game of football.

"With his introduction of classroom study, he was the first to bring teaching to coaching, which has come to be an intricate part of football at every level," he said.

Lou Groza, a Pro Football Hall of Fame member who was a tackle and kicker with Cleveland, remembered Brown as being organized and a stickler for detail.

"He was a dedicated person and he was not satisfied unless he had a winner," he said.

Motley said Brown was a true gentleman.

"He had a saying I'll never forget: 'It only costs a few more cents to go first-class.' Paul was first class all the way," he said.

Three teams shoot 60, car not won at Olds Scramble

Larry Richardson missed winning a 1991 Oldsmobile Cutlass Calais Sunday by about a foot and a half.

The car was offered to anyone who sank a hole-in-one on No. 3 during the Oldsmobile Scramble at Pitman Municipal Golf Course. No one won the car, but Richardson came the closest.

"We had to drive it back to the lot, and it's for sale again," said Jerry Stevens of Stevens Chevrolet-Oldsmobile, sponsor of the event.

Three teams finished the 18-hole scramble at 60. Winning on a scorecard playoff was the team of Gary McCulloch, Chip Guseman, Scott Keeling and Tom Coneway. They go on to play in the sectional tournament Aug. 29 in Midland.

The team of Terry Russell, Tom Simons, Raymond Schroeder and Cuby Kitchens finished second in the scorecard playoff, and the Amarillo foursome of Gary McMillan and Shane, Jim and John Shankle was third.

Nearly half the holes had some contest on it, such as closest-to-the-pin or longest drive. On No. 3, Richardson didn't get the car, but he did get a dozen golf balls for being the closest to the pin. Two other holes had closest-to-the-pin contests; Linda Stevens won on No. 10, and J.E. Saucedo got it on No. 14.

Shane Shankle had the longest drive on No. 7, Don Shaw had the straightest drive on No. 11, Rocky Lee sank the longest putt on No. 8 and J. Keeter sank the longest putt on No. 16.

Cowboys' Tuinei sticking around

AUSTIN (AP) - Mark Tuinei has faced his share of challenges from young, hungry offensive linemen brought in to become star players for the Dallas Cowboys.

But the 6-5, 293-pounder has always managed to outlast the rookies and free agents trying to take away his starting job. This time around, Tuinei is trying to keep another highly-touted rookie, Erik Williams, on the bench.

"He (Tuinei) is the toughest guy on the team - mentally and physically," says offensive line coach Tony Wise. "If he is starting, it's because he is doing as good a job as anybody on the offensive line, not because someone else is not doing better."

Tuinei is one of the Cowboys most versatile players. The nine-year veteran made the team in 1983 as a free-agent defensive tackle out of Hawaii. Two years later he was backing up Tom Rafferty at center.

In 1986 he began spring training rotating between center, guard and tackle, but injuries forced him back to the other side of the line. After starting at defensive tackle one week during the season, he started at offensive tackle the next.

Tuinei is one of only five current Cowboy players remaining that participated in Dallas' last playoff game in 1985. Tuinei says he believes the six-year drought may be over following the team's 7-9 record last season.

"There is such a different attitude coming in this season," said Tuinei, who started 13 games at left tackle in 1990. "Everybody is so upbeat and optimistic and people are really behind us."

Tuinei said that the familiarity with this year's squad had made a world of difference.

"There weren't a whole lot of moves made during or after the season and that helps you to settle down. You don't have to worry about someone coming in next week and taking your job."

"We look pretty good on paper and that makes me extremely optimistic."

His optimism for the team's success seems to overshadow his own desire to stay in the starting lineup. But Wise says Tuinei may be a fixture in Dallas.

"His attitude has a lot to do with it," Wise said. "You just can't get rid of the guy."

Free physicals for athletes

Physical examinations will be given to Hereford High School athletes Thursday at the fieldhouse at Whiteface Field, athletic director Danny Haney announced.

Here are the times each group can get physicals: sophomore, junior and senior girls at 7 p.m.; senior boys at 8; junior boys at 8:30; and sophomore boys at 9.

Athletes in seventh, eighth and ninth grades are responsible for getting their own physicals. Every athlete needs a physical before school starts if he wants to participate in a sport.

Pan Am Games: U.S., Cuban baseball teams dominating

HAVANA (AP) - The U.S. baseball team is thinking about going undefeated. And, according to the U.S. coach, the Cubans are thinking about the Americans doing just that.

"The Cubans have enough depth to win," U.S. coach Ron Polk said, "but I guarantee you they are very concerned about the Estados Unidos."

That's the name the United States goes by in Cuba, where the best amateur baseball in the world is played. Their murderers' row consists of players like Jose Raul Delgado, Omar Linares and Orestes Kindelan, and they strike fear in all but the United States, seemingly.

The Cubans opened the Pan American Games on Sunday with a 14-6 victory over Nicaragua that included seven home runs. The Americans followed the next day with a 6-1 pasting of the Dominican Republic, getting six-hit pitching from Jeff Ware of Old Dominion.

Ware, a 20-year-old right-hander, struck out eight and allowed three walks in beating the Dominicans. Three of the hits came in the fifth inning, when Ware allowed the only Dominican run.

Then the Cubans struck back by romping past Mexico 22-0 with four more homers, including two grand slams.

YMCA plans junior tennis tournament

The Hereford YMCA will have a junior closed tennis tournament Aug. 15-16 at the Hereford High School tennis courts.

There are events for age groups 12, 14, 16 and 18. For each of those, there are boys' singles and doubles and girls' singles. There is one girls' doubles event which is open to all ages. Also there are mixed doubles events for 18 and under and 14 and under.

All 12 and 14 events will be played Aug. 15, with 16 and 18 events on Aug. 16. The matches will be best two out of three sets with 12-point tiebreakers and no add scoring.

Entry is limited to three events in two divisions. Fees are $7 for YMCA members and $9 for non-members (double those for doubles events).

"The kids think they can go undefeated," said Polk, of Mississippi State. "I don't care about that. I just want to get into the medal round and let the rest take care of itself."

The United States does not play Cuba until Saturday.

What the Cuban team is to amateur baseball, the American women are to amateur basketball. Maybe even more so. And, after losing to Brazil the day before, they came back with a vengeance to beat Argentina 97-40 on Monday, holding the Argentines to 10 points in the second half.

The American women had won 42 straight in major international competition when they were beaten Sunday by Brazil, 87-84. Now, they're 2-1 and assured a spot in the medals round, where they're favored to win the gold.

The United States led 52-30 at halftime and could have cruised over a pretty woeful Argentine team. But that's kind of what happened against Brazil, when the U.S. team lost its concentration. This time, the women made sure, outscoring Argentina 45-10 in the second half.

Katrina McClain was the United States' high scorer with 20 points, followed by Theresa Edwards with 18.

The men got off to a slow start against Venezuela, leading 43-37 at halftime. But they dominated on the boards in the second half and held a 20-point lead or better for the last nine minutes.

The United States finished with a 31-25 rebounding advantage. Jim Jackson led the United States with 18 points.

At the track and field stadium, it was a day short on positive results and long on controversy for the United States. The host Cubans won six gold medals, the United States none. And at least one American, long jumper Llewellyn Stark, thought he was robbed of a gold medal by a phony foul.

On Starks' second jump, he sailed nearly 27 feet, 7 inches, which would have beaten the gold medal leap of 27-1 by Jaime Jefferson of Cuba. However, it was ruled that he fouled, and Starks said that during an argument afterward, an official covered the mark.

"I'm mad right now. ... I'm not contented with the silver when I should have won the gold," Starks said.

Starks was mad; Andre Cason, another American, was upset. And it might have been the biggest upset of the day.

Brazil's Robson da Silva beat Cason in the men's 100-meter dash. Da Silva, one of the world's top 200-meter runners but not outstanding in the 100, won in 10.32 seconds, with Cason second in 10.35.

Michelle Granger of Placentia, Calif., pitched the second no-hitter of the women's softball competition, beating Mexico 10-0. On Saturday, Debbie Doom had a perfect game.

Through three days, Cuba had compiled a big lead in the medals standings. The Cubans had 39, 26 gold, while the Americans trailed with 28, five gold.

"Helping You In What We Do Best"

Darling pays off in shutout of Mariners

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

Oh, my Darling!
Ron Darling did exactly what he and the Oakland Athletics hoped he would, making his American League debut a dandy Monday night with a 3-0 victory over the Seattle Mariners. Darling, pitching four days after the Athletics acquired him in a trade with Montreal, got his 100th major league victory. He shut down Seattle on two hits in seven innings, striking out six and walking two.

"Feels better than the National League, that's for sure," Darling said. "They traded for me to come over here and win ballgames, and that's what I intend to do."

Darling began the season with the New York Mets, where he went 5-5. He was traded to the Expos on July 15 and went 0-3 with a 7.41 ERA before Oakland, needing another pitcher for the stretch, got him for two minor league pitchers.

With the win, Oakland stayed five games behind Minnesota in the American League West. The Twins beat California 7-4.

Darling retired 16 of his final 17 batters. Rick Honeycutt got two outs and then it was time for Dennis Eckersley, who completed the combined two-hitter for his 29th save.

Darling won in his first game since he got pounded July 30 in a 10-3 loss to San Francisco. The Oakland defense helped him out early, with Rickey Henderson making a diving catch in left field and second baseman Mike Gallego turning a nifty double play.

Bill Krueger (9-4) gave up one run in 6 1-3 innings.

Henderson's speed set up the first run. He beat out an infield hit with two outs in the third inning, stole two bases and scored on Dave Henderson's bloop single.

Indians 9, Rangers 0
Eric King pitched a two-hitter and Mark Whiten hit two home runs. King (5-6) struck out seven and walked one.

Kevin Brown (7-9) took the loss.

Twins 7, Angels 4
Brian Harper and Randy Bush hit two-run doubles in a five-run first inning, enough for Kevin Tapani to win.

Tapani (9-7) gave up eight hits and struck out six in 8 2-3 innings, and Rick Aguilera got his 29th save.

Dave Winfield hit his 399th career home run.

The first six Twins batters reached base against Joe Grahe (1-2).

Royals 5, Red Sox 3
George Brett doubled twice for his 1,001st career extra-base hit. Gary Thurman singled home a run and David Howard doubled home another.

Jeff Montgomery (2-4) got the victory. Tony Fossas (1-2) took the loss.

Brewers 6, Orioles 5
Robin Yount doubled home the go-ahead run in the ninth inning.

Franklin Stubbs hit his 10th home run as the Brewers took a 5-0 edge in the third inning. Darryl Hamilton singled off Mark Williamson (3-5) in the ninth and scored on Yount's double. Doug Henry (2-0) was the winner and Edwin Nunez got his fourth save.

Yankees 7, Tigers 5
Mel Hall homered and drove in five runs.

Hall went 4-for-4 and matched his career high for RBIs. Don Mattingly also homered for the Yankees.

Scott Sanderson (11-7) struck out a career-high 12 in six innings. He gave up four runs and four hits.

Eric Plunk pitched two innings and Lee Guetterman got his sixth save. Walt Terrell (7-10) was tagged for five runs on seven hits in 4 1-3 innings.

Reds roll over Dodgers; Astros' streak continues

By The Associated Press

The Los Angeles Dodgers are losing their grip on the NL West race because they can't win on the road. The New York Mets may be falling out of the Eastern Division race because they can't win anywhere.

The Dodgers' road woes continued Monday night when their best pitcher, 14-game winner Ramon Martinez, couldn't hold a 3-0 lead. Glenn Braggs' first of two homers started a six-run third inning and the Cincinnati Reds beat Los Angeles 10-6, the Dodgers' fourth straight loss and 14th in their last 16 road games.

The Dodgers' lead over second-place Atlanta has dropped from six games to 2 1/2 since July 28.

"It's not a good time to go through what we're going through," LA outfielder Darryl Strawberry said. "You get through it, pick yourself up, and still believe until you get that win. When we get that win, we'll be on the right track."

Strawberry's former teammates in New York are hunting for that elusive win, too. After a 2-7 West Coast trip, the Mets had hoped that a return to Shea Stadium would help them catch the slumping Pittsburgh Pirates in the NL East race.

Instead, they take a six-game losing streak into tonight's home game with Pittsburgh after Chicago completed its first four-game sweep at Shea Stadium in 26 years with a 7-2 victory.

Astros 2, Padres 1

Baseball's hottest team, the last-place Astros, made it eight straight wins as Craig Biggio's 12th-inning RBI single shot down San Diego.

Rafael Ramirez and Steve Finley singled with two outs in the 12th off Larry Andersen (3-3) before Biggio's single to left. Dwayne Henry (3-0) got the win.

Astros starter Pete Hamisch allowed three hits and struck out a career-high 12 in seven innings, but San Diego tied the game off Curt Schilling in the ninth on Thomas Howard's RBI single.

Reds 10, Dodgers 6

The Reds made up a 3-0 deficit by battering Martinez (14-6) for six runs in the third inning.

Braggs started the inning with a homer. One out later, the Reds strung together six straight hits, capped by Paul O'Neill's two-run double, for a 6-3 lead. Braggs later hit a two-run homer.

Jose Rijo (8-2) won his seventh straight decision despite allowing six runs in six-plus innings. Rob Dibble pitched the last two innings for his 24th save in 25 chances.

Cubs 7, Mets 2

The Mets were blasted again by the Cubs, who reached .500 for the first time since June 16.

Luis Salazar drove in three runs, two with a first-inning single off Pete Schourek (2-2). Frank Castillo (4-2) overcame a shaky start to pitch a nine-hitter.

Braves 5, Giants 2

Atlanta moved within 2 1/2 games of the struggling Dodgers as John Smoltz continued his rebound with a six-hitter and Tommy Gregg capped a five-run third-inning with a two-run homer.

Gregg's homer capped the big inning off Giants starter Don Robinson (5-8), who had just come off the disabled list after a hamstring injury.

Smoltz (7-12) won for the fifth time in his last six decisions. He struck out six and walked none.

Ex-phenom Peters still fighting

By JOHN WERNER
Waco Tribune-Herald

WACO, Texas (AP) - There was no big crowd. No national media were on hand, nor were there starry-eyed kids clamoring for Jon Peters' autograph.

On a muggy afternoon, Peters was just one of many coaches with a team in the State Little League tournament. His Washington County team fought out of the loser's bracket to reach the Junior League championship game.

"Don't hit it unless it's right right here," Peters shouts from the third-base coaching box at a Washington County batter. "Make it your pitch!"

The batter swings at a knee-high pitch and drills a run-scoring double to left field. Peters does a crow hop and shouts, "All right! That's the way to do it!"

Peters likes coaching these 13 and 14-year-old boys. He likes it so much that he hopes to make coaching his profession when his baseball career is over. And because of a string of arm injuries, that career could end sooner than anyone could have imagined two years ago.

In 1989, Peters felt like he was on top of the world. Pitching for Brenham, Peters set a national high school record with 53 straight wins in his schoolboy career. People came from everywhere to see this phenom pitch.

Sports Illustrated put Peters on the cover of its May 8, 1989, issue and tabbed him, "Superkid." Reporters and cameras followed him everywhere as he made the run for the record. There was so much media in Brenham that Peters' high school coach put him off-limits to the press for a while so he could concentrate on pitching.

"All that attention was pretty amazing," Peters said. "I couldn't understand why everybody wanted to do a story on a high school athlete when they could be doing stories on pros. There weren't many days when somebody didn't interview me."

"I was shocked when they put me on the cover of Sports Illustrated," Peters said. "But at the same time, I felt honored and I was proud of it."

I look back at that as a very good experience."

Peters was a brilliant high school pitcher. Though he wasn't exceptionally fast, he had control that most major leaguers would kill for. Recruited heavily by major colleges, Peters chose Texas A&M, which is about 35 miles north of Brenham.

Trouble for Peters began immediately at college. In the fall of 1989, he underwent arm surgery to remove bone chips from his right elbow. After the surgery, he was unable to pitch at A&M in the spring of 1990 and decided to transfer to Blinn College in his hometown of Brenham.

Things were going well for Peters at Blinn last year as he made the starting pitching rotation. But in his second start last spring, he felt his elbow pop again. This time, he tore a ligament in his elbow and was forced to undergo surgery again.

After a fairy tale high school career, little has gone right for Peters since he stepped off the Brenham campus.

"I know that baseball can't last forever," Peters said. "Everything seemed so easy in high school. But since then, I've been through some really disappointing things."

"I think I've matured a lot through all these experiences," Peters said. Peters hopes to give pitching one more try. After months of rehabilitation, he has been throwing the ball softly and hopes to be ready to pitch for Blinn next spring. If he is successful, he hopes a major college will recruit him.

But he knows there are no guarantees - he might blow out his elbow again.

"The rehabilitation gets old," said Peters, who recently turned 21 years old. "But I've seen what it can do for other pitchers. I still want to give it a try."

"Jon has handled this whole thing very well," said Terry Logan, the president of the Washington County Little League and a longtime friend of Peters. "He was at the pinnacle of the baseball world, but then he had all these arm injuries."

"But the great thing about Jon is that he could never pick up a baseball again and he'd be a success," Logan said. "He's a very intelligent young man who knows what he wants to do with his life. I think he'll be a very good coach."

Peters' players on the Washington County team idolized him long before he started coaching them. They all grew up watching Peters set high school records at Firemen's Park in Brenham.

"I bet at least half of them were there when he set the high school record for consecutive wins," Logan said. "But I really think they look up to him now because they realize the fight he has gone through to try to keep playing. He's really been a great example to them."

"He's got a lot to offer the kids," said Chuck Machemehl, who assists Peters on the Washington County team. "He really knows the game and knows what it takes to become a successful baseball player."

Peters' Washington County squad lost to Houston Northwest 45, 7-1, in the Junior League championship game Thursday afternoon. It was a tough loss to take, but not crushing. Life has dealt much crueler blows to Peters the last two years.

But he's handled all the blows. He knows that life will go on, whether his arm heals or not.

Fourteen 4-Hers capture district wins at Borger

Deaf Smith County 4-Hers were on top of the winners circle at the District 1 4-H Fashion Show in Borger featuring an "American Made Fashion" theme.

Amid a vivid red, white and blue patriotic decorated stage, 14 Deaf Smith County 4-Hers were awarded for outstanding clothing and textiles knowledge and demonstrated skills in construction and comparative buying.

Junior winner in the top four included Staci Betzen in junior buying.

Intermediate winners in the top four included Jami Parker in casual construction and Karon Harder in active playwear construction.

The best cotton award was also presented to Karon Harder for creative use of cotton fabric.

Senior winners included: Stephanie Wilson in active construction and Lee Harder in non-tailored buying placing in the top four; Cheryl Schlabs winning alternate to State competition in evening construction; Amanda McMeen, first place winner in active sports buying, and Lori Urbanczyk, first place in evening wear buying. McMeen and Urbanczyk will represent the district in State competition on Aug. 22-24 in Nacogdoches.

Deaf Smith County 4-Hers representing areas in the district show included junior contestants Julie Schlabs in dressy daywear; Betsy Weaver in active playwear; Emily Parker in casual daywear and Cindy Harder in specialty wear.

Kinann Campbell, senior 4-Her, represented Deaf Smith County in the dressy daywear section.

The contest culminated a clothing workshop, county fashion show, fashion shows to Park Place Towers and the Continental in Amarillo, and will conclude with the State Fashion Show in August.

Educational programs conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service serve people of all ages regardless of socioeconomic level, race, color, sex, religion, handicap or national origin.

Hints From Heloise

Q. Can you tell me the best possible way to clean varnished wood kitchen cabinets, something that will cut grease so I will not have too much scrubbing to do? — Rachel Lee, Anaheim, Calif.

A. A leading wood specialist suggests cleaning varnished wood kitchen cabinets with mineral spirits. Use a clean cotton cloth or clean old sock and apply the mineral spirits to the cabinets. (Cotton will absorb the mineral spirits and help to spread it evenly over the cabinet surface; manmade materials will not do this.)

If the cabinets are really dirty, you can let this set for 10 to 15 minutes, then wipe over them again with a clean cotton cloth to remove the grease and grime.

Mineral spirits can be found in hardware stores and some discount or drug stores. In most hardware stores there are also professional wood cleaners available that will do the trick. — Helois

FAST FACTS

Other uses for empty roll-on deodorant bottles:

- Refill with paint and use for crafts.
- Refill with water and use to wet stamps.

- Refill with cologne — a dab will do you.

- Refill with suntan oil or lotion for easy application.
- Refill with liquid laundry detergent for pre-treating.

DIGITAL DISPLAY DILEMMA

Dear Heloise: Even with the brightness control of my digital alarm clock set on low, the display was still annoyingly bright in a dark room.

I bought a small piece of window-tinting film at an auto-accessory store and applied it to the digital display. Now it's suitably dim at night, but sufficiently bright in daylight. Some clocks may need two thicknesses of film to dim them at night. — John Fobian, Springfield, Va.

GAME PIECES

Dear Heloise: To keep game pieces together, for games where each player has to draw pieces, just put the pieces in a drawstring bag.

You can store them this way and just shake when ready to play. No more tedious turning over all the pieces in the game box before you can play. — J.L., McGaheysville, Va.

MAILING PACKAGES

Dear Heloise: When I send care packages to my college-student daughter, I use our small hometown weekly newspapers as packing material.

Not only does she enjoy receiving the goodies I send, but she looks forward to reading all the news from home in these newspapers! — Lois Drouhard, Canfield, Ohio

SOUND OFF

Dear Heloise: I have a complaint for major department stores. Why can't they all have automatic doors like supermarkets? I find it extremely difficult to hold those strong doors open and maneuver a stroller through at the same time. I often wind up getting hit by the doors.

If I have this trouble, how do the elderly or handicapped deal with the situation? — Barbara Marchitto, Colonia, N.J.

President Carter, in West Germany for an economic summit, presided over a "town meeting" in 1978 where he fielded questions from about 1,000 Berliners.

Wayland to host NCA cheerleader camp

The city of Plainview should be a bit more "fired up" than usual Aug. 12-15 when approximately 270 high school and junior high cheerleaders and their sponsors arrive for Wayland Baptist University's annual Cheerleading Camp.

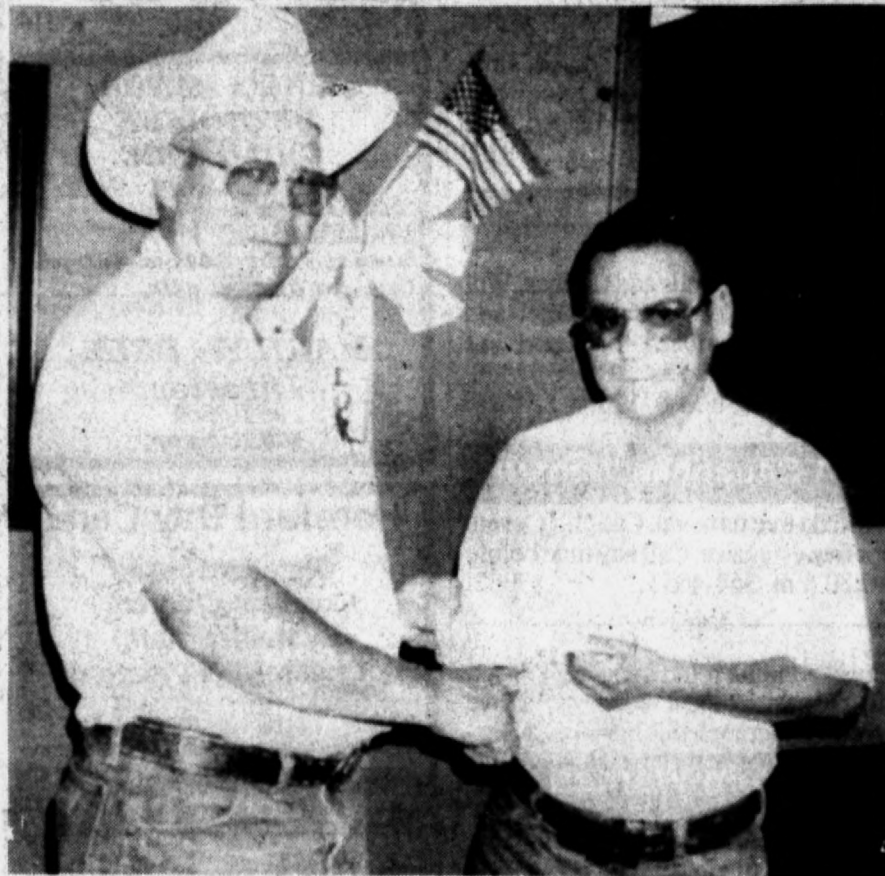

The Wayland camp is sanctioned by National Cheerleader Association (NCA), which provides all instructors. Hereford junior Andy Lucero, who serves as head cheerleader of the Wayland squad for 1991-92, is the first WBU cheerleader in history to serve as an NCA instructor.

Lucero is in his second year with NCA after having worked camps across the nation last summer and again this year. NCA instructors are carefully judged and screened from applications from colleges and universities across the nation.

Some 34 high school and junior high squads from across Texas and New Mexico, plus one squad from Kansas, will be in Plainview for the camp.

Special events planned during the camp include a get-acquainted party, a concert by the Lubbock group Diamond Back and a talent show featuring acts from the various cheerleader groups.

In addition to the NCA instructors, the Wayland cheerleaders, who recently returned from the All College Cheerleader Camp at Southern Methodist University in Dallas, will serve as hosts and counselors for the camp. Joining Lucero are Keller senior, Linda Brown, Plainview sophomore Terry Clark, Dallas sophomore Nicole Hart, Cotton Center sophomore Jenni Gast, Skellyton sophomore Jill Brown, Hereford senior Kevin Lindell, Cotton Center sophomore Tracy Dawson, Hereford freshman Rudy Barriontez, Clovis, N.M. freshman William Carson, and Spur freshman Robin Forbes, who will be Wayland mascot "Pioneer Pete" in 1991-92.

Senator Teel Bivins Reports
AUSTIN - As a young boy, my favorite part of ranch work was shipping yearlings in the fall. That is the time you get to see the results of all of your efforts during the growing season. One day when we had a group of cattle almost to the pens, I asked an old cowboy what he thought they would weigh. He turned to me and said that he never guessed the weight of cattle when he was that close to the scales.

This special session is somewhat similar to fall cattle work. We certainly see the results of all of the efforts by the Senate Finance Committee, the House Appropriations Committee as well as Comptroller John Sharp over the last six months. Like the old cowboy, I probably should avoid making any projections as to the outcome of this special session now that it has just begun.
But I am not going to follow his advise this time. Instead I will share with you my predictions for the special session. Then we can all see how right or wrong I was when we finish our work.
According to the Texas Constitution a special session of the Legislature may last for only thirty days. If the Legislature does not finish its work in that period of time the only option is for the governor to call us back for another thirty-day special session. Therein lies my first projection. We will not finish our work within the thirty-day period. It is human nature not to make tough decisions until forced to. The hard deadline for the Texas Legislature to adopt a budget for the next biennium is not August 15, the 30th day of this first called special session. Rather, the hard deadline is August 31. That day is the last day of this biennium. The next biennium, or two year budget cycle, begins on September 1. Most agree that day becomes the hard deadline by which time we must act.
Before you breath a sigh of relief and say to yourself, "Well they've only got 45 days to mess things up," remember there are exceptions to almost every rule. In fact in a similar situation in 1969 the Legislature failed to adopt a budget for the next biennium. Much like Congress did last year, the Legislature of that time continued their deliberations and debate into the next biennium before finally adopting a budget for that cycle.

My second prediction: A state income tax is dead. While we have heard much talk about the need for a state income tax, there are simply not the votes in the Legislature to adopt such a tax during this special session. The principal reason for this is the work done by Comptroller John Sharp in his performance audits and by the Republican caucus. The entire debate in Austin has now changed from what new taxes can be imposed on the people of Texas to how we can make government more efficient and control state spending. As I write today, my sense of my colleagues in the Legislature is that they are hearing louder and clearer than ever before the cry of Texas taxpayers that enough is enough.
Preaching that we must control state spending is great political rhetoric. The reality is that to accomplish this mission there must be some pain. For every dollar spent in state government, there is a constituency that argues loudly we should spend $2. To cut that dollar of spending will assuredly create a great hue and cry. In order for the new fiscal awareness in the Legislature to become a reality, the pain of spending cuts must be spread evenly and fairly throughout the state. That means what is sauce for the goose also must be sauce for the gander. Each of us in the Legislature must turn away from the pork barrel mentality and focus on what are truly the most efficient ways to deliver state services. If we can accomplish that, it will be one of the most significant legislative achievements in many, many, years.

Dr. Lamb

DEAR DR. LAMB: I, too, am afflicted with severe headaches. I can tell about 10 to 15 minutes before it happens that one is coming on. I get dizzy, have a very slurred speech and my reactions are slow. I look and feel like a zombie. If you didn't know better you would think I was drunk. I can't even walk very well when this happens.
I am a truck driver and this sickness has not only affected my health, but my job, family and friends. My employer knows about this but doesn't always let me leave. I feel it is dangerous for me to be driving, but I have no other choice. I wish you would comment on this so maybe other employees or families might understand more about this.
DEAR READER: You are right in that it is dangerous for you to drive when you have one of those attacks. No one wants a driver of an 18-wheeler who is incapacitated for whatever reason on the same road with him.
My previous column on headaches that you refer to was about basilar artery migraines. A major artery under the brain that affects areas involving speech and movement constricts, causing the initial symptoms which are usually followed by a severe headache. It can cause changes that make you think a stroke is about to happen, and it can be confused with being drunk or on drugs when that is not the case.
It is a type of migraine or vascular headache, and the treatments for migraines apply. I have discussed the management of migraines in Special Report 85, Headache and Facial Pain. Your family and employer should read it. Those who want this report can send $3 with a long, stamped (52 cents), self-addressed envelope for it to THE LOS ANGELES (AP) - The supermarket tabloid The Globe has apologized to Tom Selleck for a story he said implied he was gay and has reached a settlement of his $20 million libel suit.

Terms of the settlement with the "Magnum P.I." star were not disclosed Monday.
The July 2 story that prompted the lawsuit listed Selleck among celebrities whose pictures have appeared on placards posted around New York in recent months. On some of the photos was the statement "Absolutely Queer."
In an apology in Monday's edition of the weekly, The Globe said it "did not intend to express or imply that Tom Selleck is or ever was a homosexual."
Selleck said when he sued that he has a wife and daughter and a son from a previous marriage. "I am as proud of my sexual preference as those who happen to be gay are of theirs," he said.

Astronauts see 'beautiful place'

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) - Atlantis' astronauts did some sightseeing during their shuttle mission, gazing out at the Nile River, two hurricanes and black smoke rising from Kuwait's burning oil fields 184 miles below.

"This planet is an absolutely beautiful place. When you're up here looking down on it, you really realize that," Atlantis commander John Blaha said Monday. "We sure need to take care of it."

The crew members also conducted a real eye-opening experiment on their fourth day in orbit - inserting eye drops in zero gravity to help understand the effects of weightlessness. The task proved easier than they expected.

Astronauts also tested a system that could be used to cool the proposed space station, and tried out a portable computer that might also travel aboard the craft.

They transmitted signals through a window between the cabin and cargo bay with fiber optic cables in a test that was to be repeated today.

Payloads normally are linked to the flight deck via radio signals. A fiber optic system could be used as an additional communications link with spacecraft and other devices in the payload bay, said flight director Phil Engelauf.

Although the system is intended for use aboard the shuttle, it also could be used aboard the space station, Engelauf said.

The five astronauts got started on today's activities after waking to music from "Phantom of the Opera," performed by a high school orchestra that includes Blaha's daughter, Carolyn. Blaha told Mission Control the music inspired him "to say something significant."

"Now that I've been in space a third time for four days now, and we're going into our fifth day, it just reminds me as I watch (crew members) do all the research that they're doing, how important space flight is but yet how much more important and how much more we could learn if we could be here on a full-time basis," Blaha said.

The astronauts today planned an afternoon news conference with reporters from around the country.

Crew members also were to continue scientific and medical experiments, such as treadmill tests and measurements of ozone in the atmosphere.

During the astronauts' Monday sightseeing excursion, cameras beamed back dramatic TV images of Earth, including clear skies over the Sinai peninsula, wispy clouds over Indonesia and hazy patches over western Australia.

At least one astronaut took time to look the other way.

"I mean, that's really a beautiful sight I see out here," Blaha told Mission Control as he gazed out toward the Milky Way. "I knew you'd be interested in that fact."

The crew of four men and one woman beamed back magnified pictures of James Adamson's eyes as he applied the drops.

"It turns out it's pretty easy," Adamson said, blinking and wiping away tears. "You get a little bit around somewhere, but ... it works OK."

Liquid forms into little floating beads in weightlessness. An optometrist with the National Aeronautics and Space Administration wanted to see how eyedrops would work and asked the crew to do the test and videotape it.

The crew accomplished the main goal of the nine-day mission Friday with release of a $120 million satellite that will join a network that allows Mission Control to stay in almost continuous contact with astronauts.

Atlantis is scheduled to land Sunday in Florida.

Congress agrees to Iran probe

WASHINGTON (AP) - More than a decade after the alleged 'deal, Congress is going to use its subpoena power to investigate whether the Reagan-Bush campaign schemed with Iran to delay release of American hostages.

The House and Senate's Democratic leaders announced Monday they would assign their foreign affairs committees to look into "persistent and disturbing" allegations that the 1980 Republican campaign arranged for the 52 captives in Tehran to be held until after the election.

House GOP leader Robert Michel, R-Ill., immediately labeled the probe a politically motivated waste of money.

Besides, he said, "there's nothing there and people back home don't give two hoots about it."

But House Speaker Thomas Foley, D-Wash., and Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, said they had concluded, "along with former Presidents Carter and Reagan and President Bush, that these allegations should be laid to rest once and for all."

Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., who in 1987 chaired the House investigation into the Iran-Contra arms and money scandal, was designated to lead the House probe. Sen. Terry Sanford, D-N.C., will head the effort in the Senate.

"We have no conclusive evidence of wrongdoing, but the seriousness of the allegations, and the weight of circumstantial information, compel an effort to establish the facts," Foley and Mitchell said.

Both said they accept Bush's assertions that he knows nothing about any hostage deal.

In identical letters to the investigating panels, Foley and Mitchell said the probe should include "testimony, under oath, of individuals involved and the subpoena of all necessary documents and records." Whether to hold public hearings will be left up to the investigators, they said.

Rep. Butler Derrick, D-S.C., who has been among those pushing for an investigation, said a coordinated House-Senate probe "can quickly get to the bottom of these rumors."

"There may be people out there with information that has not come to light thus far," Derrick said. "A congressional investigation may prompt them to step forward, and I hope they will."

"If there is legitimate evidence and a real reason for an investigation, then they ought to get to the bottom of it," said White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater. "But if it's just a political witch hunt of some kind, then it's foolish."

Baker waiting on Palestinians

WASHINGTON (AP) - Secretary of State James A. Baker III is back home from the Middle East without word from Palestinians if they are ready to negotiate with Israel.

As a result, Baker already is thinking about another trip to the area next month, a senior U.S. official said Monday.

Baker was reporting to President Bush today and then heading for a vacation at his Wyoming ranch. He flew home Monday night after 23 days abroad.

In all, Baker flew 30,685 miles, attended an economic summit in London, a U.S.-Soviet summit in Moscow, a conference of Asian nations in Malaysia and made two trips to the Middle East.

His travels ended Monday in Algiers with a surprising offer to Libya to participate in talks with Israel on such issues as water resources and the proliferation of weapons in the area.

"We seek support for peace from whatever quarter, and we seek support for this proposal of ours from every quarter," Baker said.

He said the United States also would be "very pleased" if the North African group of Arab states sent an observer to the peace talks the United States and the Soviet Union intend to hold in October.

"That would be consistent with Israel's policy," Baker said at a joint news conference with Algerian Foreign Minister Lakhdar Brahimi.

The secretary said Israel for 40 years has sought talks with its Arab neighbors. He said "it would be preferable, of course, if those discussions could be held under circumstances in which the parties acknowledged the rights of each other to live in peace."

Libya, one of the most extremist Arab nations, is on the State Department's list of countries that promote terrorism.
