Budget accepted, golf, sewer fees to be raised

By SHAWN COCKRUM
Staff Writer

The Hereford City Commission approved an annual budget of $3,816,700 for 1986-1987 Monday night during a regular meeting of the commission held in City Hall.

Along with the budget will be a slight drop in the city's tax rate from the previous 47 cents per every $100 of property value to 42 cents.

Hereford City Manager Darwin McGill said that the amount of income for the city is expected to remain the same as last year even with the slight drop in taxes.

Added into the budget will be approximately $125,000 for constructing a new water well for the city.

Commissioners also voted to raise the sewer rate from $2.50 per month to $4 a month. McGill said that this raise is needed so that the sewer department can get close to paying for itself instead of having to borrow from other departments.

Commissioners also elected to raise the fee schedule for the city golf course on May 1. The green fees will be raised from $4 to $5 on weekdays, and from $5 to $7.50 on weekends. The amount for a yearly membership, $250, will remain the same for city residents, but out-of-city residents will have to pay an additional $100 for an annual membership.

The commission also heard from Charlie Ruiz of the Amistad Housing Corporation who informed the commissioners of seven possible locations on which Amistad would like to build. Amistad is planning to construct a housing project for agricultural workers.

The possible locations are: Between Norton and Higgins Streets just west of 25 Mile Ave., Bradley Ave. across from West Central Elementary, 15th Street between Avenues F and G, 15th and North Ave. K, one half mile north of 15th on Ave. K, four blocks east of Ave. K and Fourth, and, approximately one block east of Main Street on Austin Road.

Ruiz said that Amistad should choose a site sometime in the next two weeks.

Commissioners also elected to adopt an ordinance that will allow residents to keep livestock within the city limits provided they are kept a proper distance from other houses. Persons wishing to keep animals on their property will have to purchase a permit from the city each year. Under the new ordinance, no permits will be allowed for those persons living in an A-Single Family housing zone.

Two REC directors elected

Two new directors were elected and a former leader honored at the Deaf Smith Rural Electric Cooperative annual meeting Saturday which celebrated 50 years of REC service in the county.

Mrs. A.W. "Dub" Anthony Jr. accepted a plaque from the REC honoring her late husband's contributions to the board. Anthony had served since 1965. His recent death ended 20 consecutive years on the board, the last four as chairman.

Wendol Christian of Bovina, who was named to Anthony's post was elected to Position 1 of the board of directors and Jerry Roberts of Simms was elected to Position 2.

Christian farms and ranches and is part owner and on the board of Agri-Sprayers and Bovina Pump Company. He is a lay leader in the Amarillo District of the Methodist Church. He is a past president of the Bovina School Board and was that city's Man of the Year in 1962. He and his wife Louise have four children.

Roberts and his wife Willie have lived in Simms for 19 years. His farming operation includes corn, wheat and milo. He has served nine years on the REC board. He is past president of the Simms Lions Club and was instrumental in forming the community's volunteer fire department, of which he served as fire chief. Roberts is a deacon of the First Baptist Church.

During his annual report, James Hull, REC manager, said that 70 cents of each dollar paid into the REC was spent on purchasing power. The rest was for operating; interests, taxes and depreciation, and margins.

Hull showed the packed Bull Barn - 1,210 meals were served - a slab from a pole used in the original installation of electrical line 50 years ago.

Texas senators disagree on oil fee

WASHINGTON (AP) — As oil prices fall and the industry warns of a crisis, Texans in Congress are presenting less than a unified front on how to deal with the situation.

Texas Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, a Democrat, has asked President Reagan to place a fee on imported oil to stabilize the price and keep domestic producers from going out of business. Reagan is opposed to import fees in general.

Texas Sen. Phil Gramm, a Republican, says the oil import fee idea offers only "false hope" and that the better approach is to lift government restrictions on production and pricing.

Bentsen says that without an import fee, the United States will once again become dependent on foreign oil and face a repeat of the Arab oil embargo of 1973, jeopardizing national security.

Analysts are predicting as much as a 1 million-barrel-per-day drop in domestic production by year's end. Bentsen says, and a study by two Southern Methodist University professors predicted, that 250,000 Texans would lose their jobs within five years if the price levels out at $15 per barrel.

The per-barrel price has dropped below $10.

"There is a crisis in the domestic petroleum industry, in the financial institutions that service it and in the state and local governments in which it operates," Gramm said in a recent editorial. "Such a crisis may make an import fee appealing, but it does not make such a policy productive or feasible."

Gramm argues that an import fee would necessitate a massive bureaucracy to process rebates to industries, such as petrochemical businesses that use crude oil in manufacturing who inevitably will seek exemptions from the fee.

Not to exempt them, he says, would mean crippling U.S. exports at a time when the country has a record trade deficit.

But Bentsen argued recently that "this is no free-market system" and that "the price of oil is being dictated in Saudi Arabia."

Most members of the predominately Democratic Texas delegation favor or would at least consider an oil import fee.

Yet Gramm isn't alone among the Texans in his views. Other Republicans are reluctant to impose government restraints on the market, though some say they would consider an import fee under certain restrictions and conditions.

Rep. Bill Archer of Houston has introduced an incentive package to deal with the problem that does not include an import fee.

But Joe Barton of Ennis, the Republican who succeeded Gramm in the House last year, says an import fee is necessary.

"The prospect of growing dependence on OPEC crude oil should be a matter of growing concern," Barton told a House committee last week. "I believe that the economic benefits of cheap oil should be weighed against the economic costs of oil supply disruptions."

Barton says he prefers to call the oil import fee an "energy security fee."

"I believe that we must take firm measures to save U.S. production, and I believe that an oil import fee would save U.S. oil production that would otherwise be shut down," Barton said.

Gramm says the better approach is to lift pricing restrictions, expand the market and repeal the Windfall Profits Tax. He also wants to deregulate natural gas still under government controls.

"Few industries have suffered so much for so long from government intervention into their marketplace as the petroleum industry, and it is a great paradox that in a time of crisis so many in the industry look to government intervention for salvation," Gramm said.

Head-on crash kills seven in Amarillo

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — Seven people were killed and two were critically injured in a head-on collision in the westbound lanes of Interstate 40 in this Panhandle city, authorities said.

The crash took place about 10 p.m. CST Monday just inside the west city limits, police said.

Preliminary investigation indicated a station wagon, occupied by a man and a woman, was traveling east in the westbound lanes when it collided with a westbound Oldsmobile carrying seven women, said Cpl. Gary Franklin of the Amarillo Police Department.

The seven women in the Oldsmobile were Malaysian students from North Texas State University, police said. University officials told police they believe the women were on their way to visit friends on spring break. A university official went to Amarillo to help identify the victims, police said.

The woman driving the station wagon was thrown from the wreckage and died at the scene, Franklin said. Two of the women from the Oldsmobile were dead at the scene, according to the investigator.

Three of the women from the Oldsmobile were pronounced dead

State

$4,000 of budget money spent

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Last weekend, after assuring Gov. Mark White in February "there is no fat in the budget of the state treasury," State Treasurer Ann Richards spent more than $4,000 in state funds to host 28 top aides at a lakeside overnight retreat, the Dallas Morning News reported.

Bill Cryer, a spokesman for Ms. Richards, said the contract for the retreat was signed Jan. 27 — three weeks before White urged all state officials and managers of the state's 200 agencies and universities to help bridge the budget gap by trimming their budgets by 13 percent.

Ms. Richards wrote the governor in late February, however, that she could cut the treasurer's $3.5 million general fund budget by only $200,000, or 5.6 percent, this fiscal year.

If she cut the full 13 percent, she told the governor, she would have to lay off 32 employees and severely curtail the computer operations that help the state manage its tax flow.

"The treasury would be in the position of a person who had just bought a new car, but could only afford three tires. It just won't run. Frankly, governor, it's hard. There is no fat in the budget of the state treasury," she said.

Father fights for custody

AUSTIN (AP) — A custody battle being waged before the Texas Supreme Court could decide the rights of unwed fathers in decisions made about their children, officials say.

At issue is the constitutionality of a state law requiring an out-of-wedlock father to prove that custody of his child serves the child's best interests. Mothers may have custody of their children without proving that it is in their child's best interest.

State attorneys argue that the father, Billy Dean Wise, should have to meet tougher standards than the mother, charging that he demonstrated irresponsibility by conceiving the boy in an extramarital affair.

But Wise's attorney, Wichita Falls lawyer Holly Crampton, contends the law violates the Texas Constitution's guarantee for equal rights on the basis of sex.

Wise filed the suit three days after the child was born. According to court records, he fathered the child while separated from his wife and living with the baby's mother, Laura McLean. The child was given up for adoption by his mother.

Ms. McLean acknowledged that Wise was the father of the boy, born in April 1983. But she had arranged for the child's adoption before his birth, and the adopting couple already had the necessary papers the day after the boy was born.

National

Computers used to find frauds

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal investigators looking for fraud are using computer technology to poke into some of the most private areas of people's lives — not just tax returns, but also death certificates, divorce decrees, marriage licenses and even school attendance records.

The growing use of this "computer match" technology is of concern to civil liberties groups, who fear that linking distant computers for frequent checks may lead to the backdoor creation of a national databank — a vast repository of detailed information on the citizenry.

"If you can access HHS, Social Security, Medicare, Medicaid, veterans benefits, driver's licenses, bank records, divorce records and marriage licenses, you've got quite a lot of information," noted Jerry J. Berman, director of the privacy and technology project of the American Civil Liberties Union.

But the problem is dismissed by Richard P. Kusserow, inspector general of the Health and Human Services Department and one of the most aggressive leaders in computer match technology.

"Any computer match that does not consider privacy, fairness and due process as among its major goals is not a good project," Kusserow has said.

Court rejects Marcos bid

NEW YORK (AP) — A federal judge refused to intervene in a request to prevent the financial records of former Philippines President Ferdinand Marcos from being turned over to the new Manila government.

It was not known if Marcos was mounting a further challenge to block the transfer at the last minute.

On Monday, Judge Dominick DiCarlo of the U.S. Court of International Trade ruled that two Marcos aides who sued the Customs Service last week to prevent the transfer did not have standing to sue on the former leader's behalf.

Marcos, who has been in seclusion at Hickam Air Force Base in Hawaii since Feb. 26, was not a party to the case.

The aides, Ramon Azurin and Gregorio Araneta, accompanied Marcos into exile and described themselves in court papers as his "attorneys in fact."

The documents at issue were among two plane loads of people, valuables and records that accompanied Marcos when he fled the Philippines as his 20-year-old government collapsed.

OPEC eager to strike deal

GENEVA (AP) — OPEC leaders, eager to strike a deal that could stabilize declining oil prices, appear ready to cut their oil production without insisting that their non-OPEC rivals do the same.

The sentiment, emerging after two days of talks among oil ministers from the 13 member nations, pointed to a retreat from an earlier OPEC vow to defend its "fair share" of the oil market.

If the group manages to reach agreement on a new system of production restraints, world oil prices probably will rebound sharply from the current level of about $15 a barrel, said oil analyst Bryan Jacoboski of Paine Webber Inc., in Geneva to observe the cartel's deliberations.

Mitterrand to choose new premier

PARIS (AP) — France's Socialist president, Francois Mitterrand, picks a conservative premier today who must operate with the smallest legislative majority in the history of the Fifth Republic and an ideologically hostile president.

Mitterrand said Monday he would name a new premier today on the basis of the results from Sunday's National Assembly elections narrowly won by a center-right coalition.

Most of the speculation centered on Paris Mayor Jacques Chirac, leader of the neo-Gaullist Rally for the Republic.

With two of the 577 assembly seats still not decided, the coalition had won 291 seats or two more than it needed for a majority.

shortly after arrival at Northwest Hospital's emergency room and another died during the night, said nursing supervisor Jay Davis.

Ms. Davis identified the woman driving the station wagon as Linda Scott, age unknown, of Fitch, Texas. Her husband, Wayne, 38, remained in critical condition Tuesday, as did the survivor from the Oldsmobile.

Amarillo Police Sgt. Rick Landers said cars apparently hit head-on and overturned. The station wagon came to rest in the westbound lanes, and the Oldsmobile skidded into the grass center median, Landers said.

Calliopian Study Club members greet guests

Members of Calliopian Study Club met for their guest night Thursday in the home of Kay McWhorter.

President Sherry Kerr appointed a nominating committee then turned the meeting over to Kathryn Ruga who gave an informative review of "Michener Texas."

Ruga told of the different kinds of people who traveled west to live in the new land of Texas and listed some of the great difficulties they had in establishing homes here. As the population grew, many families became rich from their cattle herds and their cotton crops. Later when oil was discovered that added to the wealth and the development of the state.

Because of the moon's tidal drag, days are increasing irregularly at the average rate of about a millisecond per century. Some of course, seem to have increased by much more than that.

Following the book review, refreshments were served to Mmes. Ann Landers

Stepdaughter justified

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I need your clear-headedness. This is the situation: My 18 year-old stepdaughter, with her father's permission, installed a Yale-type lock on her bedroom door.

I maintain that I have the right to go into any room in the house, but not look in my stepdaughter's dresser drawers or the desk where she keeps her personal papers. (I admit I have done this at times.)

This child and her older sibling have lived with us for 14 years, since her mother died. She doesn't smoke or use drugs but I think she drinks a little. The girl has a parttime job and gives her father 20 percent of her paycheck for room and board. She has a few thousand dollars from her mother's estate and is responsible for her own car.

I am well aware of the larger problems problems this letter reveals—poor communication and a lack of trust and openness. Would you believe my husband and I are both psychotherapists?

I am angrier with my husband than with the girl, because he gave her permission to install the lock. Please tell me how this situation looks through unbiased eyes.—SOMEWHERE IN INDIANA

DEAR SOMEWHERE: Your stepdaughter was justified in putting a lock on her door, since, by your own admission, you snooped in her room. If she were 13 and you suspected she was using drugs, it would be a different matter, but an 18-year-old who pays room and board deserves privacy. If it takes a lock to get it, so be it.

I suggest joint counseling for you and your stepdaughter. That's where the trouble lies. The conflict between you two is poisoning your marriage.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a widow, 78 years old. In order to keep my bills paid I take in college students. I have had 21 young men in my home in the last several years and never had any trouble with any of them, until I rented a room to "George."

His quarters looked like a pigpen. He broke the bed and left it with the nails sticking out of the headboard. He always left the lights on, and sometimes the water in his sink was left running. He sneaked out with his belongings in the dead of night leaving a $62 telephone bill and owing me $135 in rent.

Recently I learned George has rented a room from a woman who lives on the other side of town. I am not a vindictive person, but I hate being cheated out of what is rightfully mine.

George works part-time as a security guard so it is not as if he doesn't have any money coming in.

My minister says everyone has a spark of decency in him and that in time George will make good his debt. What do you say, Ann?—PERPLEXED IN ILLINOIS

DEAR P.: I say if that spark hasn't ignited by the time you read this in the papers, I hope you will contact George and tell him that if on his next payday, he doesn't hand over the first installment against his debt, you will take him to small claims court. If he doesn't come through, don't hesitate to make good your threat.

DEAR READERS: That nostalgic

essay, "Wet Oatmeal Kisses," was sent with a request to run—"author unknown." Apparently the only two people in the U.S. who didn't know the author were the sender and me. I am being blitzed with letters saying, "It's Erma Bombeck, you idiot." My apologies to a fine writer and a dear friend.

It's not always easy to recognize love, especially the first time around. Acquaint yourself with the guidelines. Read Ann Landers' booklet, "Love or Sex and How to Tell the Difference." For a copy, mail 50 cents and a long, self-addressed envelope with your request to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611.

In 1976, Congress repealed the Homestead Act of 1862 in all states except Alaska, where it will expire this year. In the 114 years of its existence, the act helped more than 1.6 million settlers claim more than 270 million acres of public land. It led to the development of such states as Oklahoma, Kansas, Nebraska and North and South Dakota.

Job seeking welfare mothers get training

BRYAN, Texas (AP) — Hazelle Pearson has lived on a diet of beans, cornbread and pork bone almost every day of her 39 years.

Because of her meager diet, she became ill a year ago, quit her job and went on the state's welfare roll. A doctor determined that both she and her 13-year-old daughter were suffering from malnutrition.

Now, after a year, she's healthier, she's graduated from a special training program and she's ready for work. Her problem, however, is getting a job.

Workfare, it seems, has its own Catch 22.

Ms. Pearson is among a group of local women who have been given about six months to find a job or get cut from Aid to Families with Dependent Children and other social welfare programs, including food stamps.

Ms. Pearson and three other women, all recent graduates of a job skills workshop conducted by the Department of Human Services, agreed to talk because they have tried to find jobs many times in their pasts, but know that getting a job while on welfare is a tough proposition.

"They (employers) automatically think you're lazy," said Marilyn Lynch, 29, "and I've been working for most of the last four years."

Mrs. Lynch has three children, ages 10, 11 and 13. She receives no support from her estranged husband.

Mrs. Lynch's fear, of being identified as a "welfare mother" when she looks for a job, is not an imagined stigma, says Walt Baker, the administrator of the local Texas Employment Commission.

In addition to employers stereotyping a person on AFDC as lazy, Baker said job applicants who have been on welfare usually have other problems as well, including educational barriers, lack of day care, flaws in their job histories and a lack of transportation.

Since a new mandatory work law for AFDC recipients went into effect in Texas last year, TEC's record at placing those job applicants, who are mostly women, has been dismal. The new law states that once an AFDC client's children turn six or older, she must find work.

From Sept. 1 through Jan. 31, DHS referred 81 single, welfare parents to the employment commission for work. Of that number, 56 were required to find work and 25, whose children were still under 6, volunteered to seek work.

But TEC has been able to help find jobs for only nine of those 81 women. For the 1985 calendar year, TEC was able to find jobs for only 24 AFDC clients.

Esther Flores, a family self support worker at DHS, says she cuts about three women off the AFDC rolls every month. Other caseworkers cut off others, but Ms. Flores said there are no records of why people are cut off.

The women who are pushed out of the program may reapply for aid in three months, but they receive no benefits to pay their rent and bills or food stamps to feed their children between enrollments in the programs.

Baker said the worst employment-related problem poor women face is transportation, because few have cars or vans that work.

"Even the most altruistic employer can't afford to hire someone who can't guarantee that he'll be on the job every day," Baker said.

Ms. Flores said that a transportation barrier was an adequate reason last year to keep a woman and her children on welfare until the woman found a job she could walk to or she found reliable transportation.

But transportation problems, no matter how legitimate, are no longer accepted as a reason for not finding a job within three to six months, she said.

Lack of day care is also a significant problem for many AFDC mothers. Social workers are concerned that the mandatory work law will mean more and more Texas children will become "latch-key kids" with their mothers gone when they return home from school.

Finally, even in the best of times poor people have a hard time finding work, says Baker. And these are not the best of times.

People with good educations and reliable transportation are having a tough time finding work in Bryan-College Station, says Baker, who describes the job market as "tight, tight, tight."

The mostly unskilled AFDC women are competing with skilled people — laid-off Texas Instrument employees who are staying in the community, for instance — for the few job slots that exist.

It is the worst job climate since the oil industry layoffs of 1982, Baker said.

Ms. Pearson, who is luckier than most AFDC mothers because she has an associate degree in business, is optimistic that she will find some work to tide her over until she obtains her instructor's certificate as a beautician.

Despite a chronic colon condition, caused by her years of malnutrition, Ms. Pearson is on DHS's "mandatory" list to find work. Ms. Pearson said she has been on AFDC a total of only about 2½ of the last 15 years.

Ms. Flores of the human services department, and Rebecca Moses, another DHS family self support worker, hope their job skills course will give the AFDC clients a more positive attitude toward seeking a job.

Baker said that many of the women who have depended on welfare have had negative experiences in the job world and don't believe in themselves.

"It's hard to convince someone who has never had a good job experience that they can do it," Baker said. "Because they feel so negative about their abilities, they often reflect that in job interviews, making it almost a self-fulfilling prophecy that they won't find work."

Baker and Ms. Flores hope their placement rate for AFDC women will improve under a new contract in March. DHS will work more intensively with the women from the start, instead of simply referring them to TEC.

Mrs. Lynch said she learned from her week-long job training class that she often wears her makeup too heavy and her earrings too big to impress most employers. She said she has learned to be eager, but not too eager; to be well groomed and present a good attitude toward prospective employers.

Mrs. Lynch is also hopeful that she will find work. She said she wants to receive her high school graduate equivalent degree and expand her nurse's aide training. She said she has been out of work since Sept. 20, but loves working with people, especially children.

Deborah Laird, 29, has an 8-year-old daughter and recently started back to work as a housekeeper at an apartment complex.

Ms. Laird, who had quit her job in order to care for her diabetic mother, has had some college courses in physical education and home economics. She said the apartment manager called her to ask her to return to the job.

Like the other women, Ms. Laird has no choice but to return to work if she is to have any income at all to support her mother and daughter.

Willie Ruth Gooden, 35, the mother of four children, ages 10, 12, 13, and 16, said she believes she has a better self-image after working with Ms. Flores and Ms. Moses.

Ms. Gooden, who dreams of one day designing shoes, said the course gave her something to look forward to each day and the feeling that she was doing something positive in her life.

Ms. Gooden also said she is eager to apply for a six-week course to obtain her GED and that she is determined to find work.

"A lot of these women are ashamed, but I'm not," Ms. Gooden said about being on AFDC. "I'm not ashamed that I've been on AFDC. I needed it."

DR. GOTT

Identify fungus for treatment

DEAR DR. GOTT — Three years ago I had my gallbladder removed. Since then, I've had some sort of fungus on my stomach, shoulders, arms and back. Vioform clears it up for awhile, but then it comes back. Is it in my bloodstream? Could I have gotten it while having surgery? Is it so deep-rooted that it will never clear up completely? I'm very uncomfortable, itchy and embarrassed about it. Can you help?

DEAR READER — I doubt that the fungus infection of your skin has anything to do with your gallbladder surgery. Vioform is a useful topical treatment for yeasts, but these infections are difficult to clear up using creams and lotions.

Like other inflammations, the fungus disorder you describe may be due to one (or more) of a number of agents. The specific yeast causing your problem must be isolated and identified before appropriate treatment can be given. See a dermatologist, who will scrape parts of your skin to obtain a fungus culture. Then the yeast can be checked against a variety of antifungal medicines to find out which one would be the best to use.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Can you please explain Graves' disease of the thyroid, which also affects the eyes?

DEAR READER — Graves' disease is a form of excess thyroid-hormone production that causes protuberant eyes, as well as the usual signs of hyperthyroidism, such as weight loss, nervousness, rapid heartbeat and heat intolerance. It is more common in women and tends to occur between the ages of 20 and 40.

Experts are not certain why some types of hyperthyroidism affect the eyes. In Graves' disease, there seems to be a type of hormone present that stimulates the fatty tissue behind one or both eyes to grow. This enlargement tends to push the eyes out of their sockets, giving the pop-eyed appearance so characteristic of the disease. Treatment with thyroid-suppressor drugs is usually effective, but, occasionally, eyelid surgery may be necessary to enable the patient to blink, thus keeping the eyes moist. Thyroid surgery and treatment with radioactive iodine, although appropriate for other types of hyperthyroidism, may worsen the eye symptoms of Graves' disease. Therefore, drug therapy is preferable because it can be stopped or modified if the eyes become worse.

Rabbits don't perspire. Neither do guinea pigs.

Blind French painter writes autobiography

NEW YORK (AP) — The last thing Hugues de Montalembert saw was a drug-crazed mugger throw a vial of acid in his eyes.

Still, the French painter's inner vision was not extinguished through permanent blindness.

Where de Montalembert, the son of French nobility, once used paint to express life's poetry, he now chooses words. He tells his tale of tragedy and triumph in his first published book, "Eclipse: A Nightmare" (Viking, $15.95).

His story began seven years ago during a visit to New York. As he returned from an evening stroll, two men followed him to the Greenwich Village apartment he had borrowed. They pushed their way in, stole $30, and when that wasn't enough, ordered him to remove his clothes and taunted him with a knife.

"The danger is palpable," he writes of that moment. "I know that if I don't do something I am going to die." He reaches for a poker from the fireplace. There is a fight.

He faced one man. "I stare into his eyes to anticipate his next move, and it is at that moment that I receive hot liquid full in the face," he writes. The loss of sight is immediate.

Defeated, he writes, "Out of this devastation, out of these ashes, no flower can ever bloom again."

The impassioned autobiography, begun in a hospital as a way "to become an observer, not a victim," soon became a voyage of self-discovery and a love story about life and beauty, de Montalembert said in an interview.

"I looked at people more than I listened; that's all changed radically."

To retain images he once saw, he "makes television" visually in his head, replaying events and scenes over and over. "I must remember," he said. "It's too beautiful to forget."

Left with "shipwrecked hopes" after a failed attempt to revive his sight, the 42-year-old de Montalembert accepted his fate and wondered about the future: "I had no idea what it meant to be blind in the middle of your life." To overcome what he calls a "wall of fear," he resumed his life of travel in the United States and to Africa, Europe and Southeast Asia, living off the proceeds of his book, which was a best-seller in France.

He learned to walk with a cane, read Braille and write following the edge of a piece of cardboard.

Scorning dark glasses, yet wanting to protect his eyes, de Montalembert wears a band of steel cut in the shape of glasses. "The metal reflects the light of the city, other people's eyes, like mirrors used to catch larks. It covers my fear, my wound, with a kind of brutal arrogance. This band rules out pity," he writes.

He has taken up the piano and is writing a second book.

And he has learned to see things that light makes invisible.

"The obvious hides the secret," de Montalembert said. "When I meet somebody, the obvious is in his or her face and the expression they want to put on their face; it is the dress, they want to project a certain image."

"Now, all that drops. The person without knowing is totally naked."

Texas Congressmen not so 'green'

WASHINGTON (AP) — A national conservation lobby group says Texans got lower average "green grades" for their votes on conservation measures than did the Congress as a whole.

The League of Conservation Voters said two Texans — Tom DeLay,

R-Sugar Land, and Marvin Leath, D-Marlin — tied for the lowest scores in Congress as far as voting the way the group would have liked on 12 environment-related measures in 1985.

Texans voted the way the League wanted 45 percent of the time, compared with 52 percent for Congress as a whole, the group said.

The League says its ratings are used by conservationists to decide which congressmen to support for reelection. The group said it spent $1.25 million aiding the campaigns of 61 candidates in 1984 and that two-thirds of those candidates won.

The highest "green grades" in the Texas delegation went to John Bryant, D-Dallas, and Mickey Leland, D-Houston, who both scored 83 percent.

The League based its ratings on 12 votes on legislation affecting toxic waste clean-up, water pollution, soil conservation, international family planning, water and energy projects and highways.

The League gave "honorable mentions" to Henry B. Gonzalez, D-San Antonio, and Ron Coleman, D-El Paso.

Singled out by the group for "dishonorable mentions" were Beau Boulter, R-Amarillo; Ralph Hall, D-Rockwall; Tom Loeffler, R-Hunt; Charles Stenholm, D-Stamford; and Larry Combest, R-Lubbock.

Whitefaces win baseball tournament at Dumas

The Hereford Whiteface varsity baseball team won the Dumas round-robin tournament last Friday by defeating Dumas 17-7, shutting out Pampa 8-0, getting past Palo Duro 3-1, and beating Borger 13-3.

The four victories give the Herd a 4-3 season record. Hereford is scheduled to play its home opener of the season today at 4:30 p.m., against Dumas.

The Whitefaces began the tournament Friday with a bang, scoring 10 runs in the first two innings of their 17-7 win over Dumas.

The first two runs of the game came when Stefan Hacker belted a home run over the left field fence. Scoring ahead of him was Keith Herrera, who had singled.

Hereford added two more runs in the first inning on two walks, a batter hit by a pitch, and Doug Watts' single.

A six-run second inning gave the Whitefaces a 10-0 lead. Six consecutive batters hit singles—Hacker, Rodney Torres, Philip Webster, Curtis Cotten, Kyle Streun, and Watts. Dumas then committed an error, and Paul Maes also singled.

Dumas closed the gap to 10-5 in the third inning, but Hereford came back with two more runs of its own in the top of the fourth. Maes triples and scored on an error, and Herrera singled and scored on a double by Hacker.

Dumas scored two runs in the bottom of the fourth. In the top of the fifth, Hereford added five runs on three walks, three errors and one hit. The hit was a single by Hacker.

When Dumas failed to score in the bottom of the fifth, the game ended because of the 10-run rule.

Bobby Medina pitched a complete game for the Herd, allowing seven hits, striking out four batters and walking two batters. Two of Dumas' hits were home runs.

Hereford had 14 hits against Dumas.

The Pampa game was originally scheduled for Friday night, but the contest was postponed to Saturday morning because of rain.

Keith Anderson hurled a complete game for Hereford, facing 26 batters in seven innings. He limited Pampa to five hits, all singles, recorded five strikeouts, and walked just one batter.

The Whitefaces, who had 11 hits, scored one run in the first inning and two in the second inning.

In the first inning, Hacker singled, advanced on the basepaths on a Dumas error, and was batted in by Cotten who singled.

Anderson singled in the second inning and scored when Robby Collier hit a double. Collier later scored on an error to give Hereford its early 3-0 lead.

After three scoreless innings, Hereford scored five runs in the sixth inning. Bobby Martinez began the rally with a double, and Anderson singled.

After a Herd batter was walked, Herrera, Torres and Bill Ruckman all hit singles.

In its second game Saturday, Hereford received another fine pitching effort, this time by Donny Reeves. Reeves pitched a five-hitter in Hereford's 3-1 win over Palo Duro.

Reeves struck out four Palo Duro batters, and walked only two of them.

Each team scored one run in the second inning. Kyle Streun tripled and scored for the Whitefaces in the top of the inning.

Hereford broke the tie in the sixth inning with a pair of runs. Philip Webster hit a double, Curtis Cotten singled, Streun sacrificed, and Anderson singled.

Hereford had seven hits in the game. One of the other hits was a double by Keith Herrera.

For the fourth straight contest, Hereford had a pitcher hurl a complete game. Stefan Hacker pitched a two-hitter to help lead the Whitefaces to their 13-3 victory over Borger.

Hacker walked only one batter, and struck out three.

Hereford took advantage of two walks and an error to score one run in the top of the first inning. Borger moved into the lead, 2-1, in the bottom of the inning on a single, double and two errors.

The Whitefaces then regained the lead, 7-2, in the second inning. The sequence of events in the inning included a double by Bill Ruckman, an error, a triple by Herrera, another error, three straight walks, and a single by Ruckman.

Two walks, and an RBI single by Donny Reeves led to one Hereford run in the third inning for an 8-2 lead. Borger scored a run in the bottom of the third.

The Herd increased its lead to 12-3 in the fourth inning. Ruckman walked, Rex Baxter and Herrera both singled, and then Borger committed three errors.

Hereford's lead became 10 points in the fifth when Robby Collier tripled and Ruckman hit an RBI single. The game ended after five innings because of the 10-run rule.

Only one rookie has ever won a major-league batting title. Tony Oliva of Minnesota did it in 1964 with a .323 average.

Bob Feller of the Cleveland Indians pitched three no-hit games to three different catchers—Rollie Hemsley, Frank Hayes and Jim Hegan.

Task force to start investigation

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Jim Lyon's dairy farm didn't show even a small profit until last year, and then "the whole world caved in" when the milk he produced was found to be tainted with pesticide and he was ordered to dump it.

"It was a nightmare," said Lyon, one of 100 dairy farmers scheduled to tell their stories today to a federal task force probing the contamination that has forced officials to pull the milk from store shelves in eight states and led to warnings that some nursing mothers should stop breast-feeding.

"We're trying to get our heads on straight, to recover," Lyon, who farms near the northwestern Arkansas town of Gentry, said Monday.

"Other than being broke, I guess I'm OK."

Milk from his farm was declared tainted with heptachlor Feb. 24. The chemical also was found in the milk of 10 nursing mothers in Eureka Springs.

"The whole world just caved in about that time," said Lyon, 45, who estimated his losses average about $11,000 a month since the recall. "I'd hate to lose everything I've worked so hard to get."

Scientists said it would take six months to a year for the cows to rid their bodies of heptachlor, depending on the concentration of the chemical in their fat cells.

The federal task force, headed by Michael J. Masterson, a special assistant to Agriculture Secretary Richard Lyng, was to visit dairy farms at Gentry and Lincoln today and hold a public meeting at Fayetteville.

Masterson has said the panel's mission is to determine if the problem has been contained.

More than 100 dairy farms in Arkansas, Oklahoma and Missouri have been ordered not to sell their milk because their cattle were found to have eaten feed contaminated with heptachlor. The pesticide was banned by the Food and Drug Administration in 1983 after it was linked to cancer in laboratory rats.

Officials say the pesticide was in mash, grain which has been fermented to make alcohol, used in feed sold by Valley Feeds of Van Buren. It obtained the mash from its sister company, J.E.W. Inc., a gasoline operation.

Milk, cheese and other dairy products from the affected farms have been pulled from store shelves in Arkansas, Kansas, Louisiana, Mississippi, Missouri, Oklahoma, Tennessee and Texas.

Warnings are being sent to 1,200 physicians urging them to tell nursing women who may have drunk the milk to halt breast-feeding their infants.

"If there are the same levels of heptachlor in a mother's milk as what resulted in milk being pulled from shelves, that translates into the baby getting two to three times the allowable intake of heptachlor," said Dr. Donald R. Mattison of the University of Arkansas for Medical Sciences.
