Witkowski to participate in Panama wheat conference

Longtime area wheat organizer Leo Witkowski is to participate in a U.S. Wheat Products Industry Conference for Central America next week in Panama City, Panama.

The Hereford resident is to fly to the Central American city Tuesday, stopping in Dallas and Miami along the way. The conference is set to run Wednesday through Friday, so Witkowski's return has been scheduled for Saturday.

U.S. Wheat Associates, for which Witkowski is an original member, is sponsoring the affair. Through that organization, Texas and 13 other states conduct foreign market development programs in an effort to expand markets for their products and enhance local prices through export demand.

Having never been to Panama City, Witkowski said he is looking forward to attending the conference. He believes one of the reasons he was asked to go was his inability to attend a modern bakery conference in China two years ago. Harvesting chores on his farm prevented the visit to China, which is now planning a second modern bakery due to the tremendous success of the original one, Witkowski said.

The Panama City workshop format session is designed to upgrade both millers' and bakers' knowledge and appreciation of U.S. wheats in the manufacture of their wheat-based products - with an eye toward greater use. Attendees are expected from Panama, Costa Rica, El Salvador, Honduras, Guatemala, Nicaragua and Belize, according to Winston Wilson, president of U.S. Wheat Associates, which invited Witkowski to participate as a representative of the Texas Wheat Producers Board.

Conference topics and participants range from "Profitable Bakery Management" by Dr. William Hoover, President of the American Institute of Baking, Manhattan, Kan., to "Wheat Handling and Grading," by Dr. Jack Carter, head of the agronomy department at North Dakota State University, Fargo, N.D.

Turnout of 1.8 million Salvador voters seen

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) - Bars and liquor stores were ordered closed for the weekend, voters were told to leave their guns at home and a turnout of 1.8 million people was predicted for Sunday's presidential election in El Salvador.

Officials said they did not expect a major disruption of voting by leftist guerrillas, who appeared to be confining themselves to threats, harassment and minor skirmishes with the army. As a precaution, the military, on full alert, increased its patrols in the capital and outlying districts.

Leftist guerrillas wrecked power lines Friday night, leaving 1.3 million people without electricity in the eastern provinces of Usulután, San Miguel, Morazan and La Unión. Details on the sabotage were not immediately available. The area has been blacked out dozens of times before.

Eight candidates are running for the post of president. If none gains a majority Sunday, there will be a runoff between the two top vote-getters.

That feller on Tierra Blanca Creek says he's an old-fashioned parent—he likes to tuck his children in bed, but he can't stay up that late.

After a particularly trying day with her young son, a young mother finally threw up her hands. "All right, Billy," she shouted, "do anything you darn well please! Now let me see you disobey that!"

Some folks out east of town are unhappy about the Valley View plan for an electrical generating plant, we've been told. And, they are unhappy with the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce for supporting the proposal.

While some folks here in town wondered why anyone was opposed to the idea, since there are feed yards and the city sewer odor already present, others who live downwind are concerned about the stockpile of manure that would be present at such a plant.

Part of the chamber's job is to seek new industry for the community, and directors apparently felt that such a facility would be an asset here. Besides creating more business and payroll, it solves a problem on getting rid of some of the manure from feedyards. But you can't please everyone, and some citizens east of town are a little hostile about this decision.

Like fingerprints and people, bottoms must differ from one person to another. The sensitivity of bottoms raised a real ruckus in Iowa Park recently. Bob Hamilton, a former Hereford resident, is publisher of the newspaper there and we read about the controversy.

Seems three vocational agriculture students each took a pair of new welding gloves from the classroom. The gloves cost about $7.00 a pair.

The three students were identified by school personnel, contacted by telephone, and instructed to return them immediately.

One at a time, they showed up at the principal's office. The first, right there in the principal's office and in the principal's presence, in accordance with the school policy book, received three licks from a paddle.

After he had left, the second student showed up, but in the company of his father. After the three licks were administered, the father said that wasn't enough, and three more were given.

When the third student arrived, he was also given six licks.

Well, the cheeks of his rear end were read, and even showed some signs of bruising. He was taken to the doctor, apparently by one or more of his parents.

But then came the television cameramen from Wichita

County officials to meet with Historical Commission

Deaf Smith County officials will be in Austin Monday for a meeting with the Texas Historical Commission and the Texas Commission on Jail Standards.

That was learned Friday morning following the regular meeting of the Deaf Smith County Commissioners Court which had been moved up from March 26, the usual date.

All four commissioners plan to attend the meeting at the state capitol building, along with County Judge Glen Nelson, Sheriff Joe Brown and Deaf Smith County District Attorney Roland Saul.

Commissioners said they had very little knowledge of what would take place at the meeting, but understood it was called because a proposed addition to the county jail would alter the Hereford city square.

In other business at Friday's meeting, commissioners voted to purchase a law enforcement professional liability policy from Lone Star Insurance Agency. The policy selected will have a $1 million limit with no deductible and will cover punitive damages. The annual premium is $4,704.70 and would cover sheriff's department reserves as well as fulltime employees and anyone the department might deputize in case of an emergency.

"This way you'll know that every officer is covered, and the county is covered, and you'll know what they're covered for," said Ken Rogers as he explained coverage options to the court.

Commissioners also passed a resolution requested by the state concerning the adoption of a 1 cent fuel tax. Receipts from the tax, if put into effect, would fund county roads and bridges.

A request for $252 from the Buffalo Lake Water District Board was honored, to reimburse board members for

Local political parties draw for name order on ballots

The Deaf Smith County Democratic and Republican county executive committees met during the past week to determine place order on ballots for the May 5 primary elections.

Democratic candidates for the United States Senate will appear as follows: Harley Schlanger, David Young, Robert Kruger, Robert S. Sullivan, Kent Hance and Lloyd Doggett.

For United States Representative, 19th District,

Don R. Richards heads the list. He is followed by Gary D. Condra, John Selby, Delwin Jones and Thomas M. Richards.

Mark Wallace is the sole candidate for railroad commissioner, while Sears McGee is followed by John L. Hill in the race for chief justice of the supreme court.

Franklin S. Spears runs unopposed for Place 1, justice of the supreme court, while C.L. Ray, Texas S. Ward and Shelby Sharpe are contenders for Place 2.

Sam Houston Clinton appears ahead of Oliver Stanley Kitzman on the ballot; they're running for Place 1 judge on the court of criminal appeals.

Place 2 contenders are George Martinez, Buddy Stevens, W.C. (Bill) Davis and Roy E. Greenwood.

There are seven candidates for Place 3 judge on the state court of criminal appeals:

Local Roundup

Wrong headline

One of Friday's headlines on page 1 of the Brand was incorrect, and it unfortunately involved our radio colleague, KPAN.

The local station recently started airing its AM broadcasts with those on FM at 6 a.m. Monday through Saturday and at 7 p.m. Sunday. Previously, the AM frequency initiated at sunrise.

Therefore, the headline, "Station starting at sunrise" was wrong.

Air quality hearing Tuesday

The Texas Air Control Board has scheduled a public meeting Tuesday in Hereford to discuss possible effects a manure-fueled electrical generating station might have on local air quality.

Valley View Energy Corporation, a Dallas firm, has requested a permit to construct the plant approximately five miles northeast of town, immediately south of Highway 60.

The meeting Tuesday is to begin at 7 p.m. in the banquet room of Hereford Community Center, 100 Ave. C.

The public is invited to participate in the gathering, which is to include TACB staff members. Valley View has also been invited to participate.

For further information, contact either Gerald Hudson, regional director, at 1-744-0090 or Priscilla Falzone of the TACB Austin office, 1-512-451-5711, extension 357.

Social security rep here

Tuesday, April 3 from 9:15 a.m. to noon is scheduled to be the first Hereford visit of a Amarillo Social Security Office representative.

The visitor is to be available to assist local citizens in filing applications for Social Security retirement, survivors, disability, Medicare or supplemental security income benefits.

If unable to attend a local visit, you may call 1-376-2241 to conduct any Social Security business. That Amarillo office, located at 3601 W. 15th St., Suite 16 (zip 79102), is open every weekday - except on national holidays - between 9 a.m. and 4:45 p.m.

The other visits, to be held at the same times at the same place - Deaf Smith County Courthouse - are slated for all Tuesdays through June 26.

Tornado siren test set

Barring a remarkable coincidence, the tornado siren local residents are supposed to hear at 9:30 a.m. Tuesday will be nothing more than a test.

The check of equipment is to be made by the Hereford Volunteer Fire Department.

4-H offers training sessions

A new series of 4-H leader training sessions are to be offered to all 4-H organizational leaders beginning at 7 p.m. Tuesday in the club room of Hereford Community Center.

County extension agent personnel are planning to give the training as well as answer any questions about the Deaf Smith County 4-H program.

All the county's 4-H organizational leaders are urged to attend, according to Susan Raney, county extension agent of home economics.

Jury deliberating libel case

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — A state district court jury entered its second day of deliberations today in the trial of a libel lawsuit filed by former Assistant U.S. Attorney James Kerr against The El Paso Times.

Jurors met for six hours Friday before State District Judge Edward Marquez sent them home at 8:45 p.m. MST.

Before beginning to deliberate, the seven-man, five-woman jury was told the owner of the Times, Gannett Co. Inc., had been dismissed as a co-defendant in the lawsuit that was filed by Kerr in 1979.

Kerr's attorney, Jerry Gibson of San Antonio, also told the jury Kerr was seeking $1 million in actual damages and "three or four million dollars" in exemplary damages. The original lawsuit had sought $10 million in actual damages and $30 million in exemplary damages.

The lawsuit alleged Kerr was libeled by a column written by Times reporter Ronald Dusek and published by the daily newspaper Aug. 6, 1978. The column stated "Kerr lied" to a federal jury hearing a drug conspiracy case.

Court asked to stop TDC

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — A federal judge has been asked to bar Texas prison officials from executing convicts by lethal injection until the U.S. Food and Drug Administration determines that the drugs are quick and painless.

The suit was filed Friday against the Texas Department of Corrections by Douglas Tinker, a Corpus Christi attorney representing death row inmates Doyle Skillern, Jerry Joe Bird and Henry Martinez Porter; and San Antonio attorney Gerry Goldstein, general counsel for the Texas Civil Liberties Union.

The suit said evidence suggests that execution drugs may cause intense, unnecessary pain and a slow death, especially if improperly administered, said Meg Schulman, a law clerk for Goldstein.

"There is no assurance that the inmate will be rendered unconscious," Ms. Schulman said.

U.S. Marshal seeks reopening

DALLAS (AP) — Texas authorities have been asked to reopen their investigation into the 1971 death of a man named by convicted swindler Billie Sol Estes as the alleged hit man in the murder of a U.S. Agriculture Department official, a newspaper reported today in a copyright story.

The Bryan-College Station Eagle reported that U.S. Marshal Clint Peoples said Friday that he is suspicious of the accidental death ruling returned in the 1971 death of Malcolm "Mac" Wallace, the president of the 1945 student body at the University of Texas, and a onetime USDA economist.

The newspaper and two others — the Dallas Morning News and the Dallas Times Herald — reported in their Friday editions that Estes testified Tuesday before the Robertson County grand jury that then-Vice President Lyndon Johnson ordered the 1961 murder of USDA official Henry Marshall.

Firm depressed stock's price

HOUSTON (AP) — Prudential-Bache Securities Inc. says Houston Natural Gas Corp. did not have the best interests of its stockholders at heart when it fought off a takeover bid by The Coastal Corp. last month.

Prudential-Bache, a brokerage firm acting as a stockholder based on its ownership of 90,000 shares of the gas pipeline firm, said in a lawsuit filed Friday that Houston Natural Gas wanted to "defeat the tender offer at any cost to the corporation."

The suit claimed that Houston Natural Gas eventually made an "unfavorable settlement agreement" under which it paid Coastal $42.1 million as a "peace payment."

Prudential-Bache sought an injunction barring Houston Natural Gas from selling certain assets. It is also seeking disclosure of all offers for Houston Natural Gas and shares of its stock made last month.

Coastal's subsidiary, Colorado Interstate, made a tender offer for Coastal's long-time rival Jan. 27. Houston Natural Gas made a counter-offer Feb. 1.

Houston Natural Gas spokesman Hardy Davis said his firm had not received a copy of the suit and had no comment.

Mondale, Hart step up attacks

While Walter Mondale is calling Gary Hart "chronically unsteady" on arms control, the Colorado senator is fighting back with new TV ads accusing the former vice president of ignoring the "lesson" of Vietnam.

The two Democratic presidential candidates escalated verbal attacks on each other Friday as the campaign heated up for the Connecticut primary on Tuesday and New York's on April 3.

"I am a consistent, solid, unwavering supporter of arms control," Mondale told about 200 supporters during a campaign stop Friday in Connecticut.

"His record on the most important issue — arms control — can only be described as one of confusion, of being chronically unsteady. He has offered not consistency, but confusion," Mondale said.

Hart, meanwhile, developing his campaign theme that Mondale was slow to learn the "lesson" of Vietnam, is preparing a series of ads that attack the former vice president's foreign policy record.

Writer claims ships destroyed

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iraqi jet fighters and navy vessels today destroyed four oil tankers and commercial ships near Iran's oil terminal of Kharg Island in the Persian Gulf, an Iraqi military spokesman said.

The unidentified spokesman, reading a communique over Baghdad Radio, said the "four oil tankers and commercial ships were attacked at 3 a.m. Saturday."

Iraqi jets and navy craft which took part in the attack "south of Kharg ... returned safely to base," he added, without elaborating.

Kharg, 126 miles southeast of Iraq in the northeastern gulf, is Iran's main terminal for oil exports in the gulf region.

Iran has threatened repeatedly in the past that if Kharg Island became a target in the 3½-year conflict, Iran would block the Strait of Hormuz, though which nearly 20 percent of the non-communist world's oil passes.

A number of commercial vessels have been attacked in recent weeks, according to shipping sources.

High winds strike

Cleanup continues after twister hits

DALLAS (AP) — Authorities say the cleanup continues in an eastern suburb, where a small funnel cloud took part of the roof off a fast-food restaurant and injured one person, and in a Falls County community hit by high winds. "There was debris being whipped about in a swirling motion that went all the way up into a cloud," said Mesquite police Lt. Asa Hughes of the tornado he sighted outside his office at City Hall Friday.

Hughes said large chunks of fiberglass and metal paneling churned overhead before the funnel touched down about 4:30 p.m. and caved in the roof of a fast-food restaurant, just across the street from his office.

One unidentified man suffered a minor shoulder injury several blocks away from where the spot where the funnel touched down, police said. Fire Department officials said about 30 homes sustained damage, mostly to shingles. A department spokesman said the roofs of two homes were nearly ripped off.

and Hunt counties — northeast of Dallas — after the twister left the Dallas suburb late Friday afternoon. A twister was spotted northeast of Rockwall in open country a short while later, but no damage was reported.

conditions in the far northern Panhandle, where forecasters said accumulations of three inches were expected Friday.

Falls County Sheriff Larry Pamplin said a line of violent thunderstorms swept through Rosebud about 8:30 a.m., leaving behind major property damage. Officials said damages may mount to several hundred thousand dollars.

The strong winds knocked over a cotton compress building, several sheds and numerous signs and billboards, Pamplin said. The winds also caused widespread roof damage, the sheriff said.

Pamplin said it was "a miracle" that no one was injured. No dollar estimate of the damage was immediately available.

Snow posed a late-season problem for the northern Panhandle with accumulations of up to six inches expected by early Saturday, the weather service said.

Dalhart and Spearman had three inches of snow on the ground, while another two inches was reported at Perryton. Although major highways were open, authorities posted a travel advisory and warned of hazardous driving conditions through at least early Saturday.

A flash flood warning was posted for Dallas and Denton counties following the heavy rains.

It is Van Lanschat, commodity manager of wheat of Continental Grain Company in New York will discuss "Wheat Purchasing and Transportation." An overview of "The Wheat Industry in Panama, Central America and the Caribbean" is to be offered by Donald Halman, general manager of General Mills de Panama.

Witkowski's principal role will be to be one of two U.S.

wheat producer-members of the sponsoring U.S. Wheat Associates present to lend farmer interest and support to the function, which is viewed as important to the future of U.S. wheat market development and expansion in that area.

Other U.S. participants include: Dr. Joel Dick, professor of cereal chemistry and technology, NDSU; Hugh Bright, manager, Biscuit Products Technical Assistance, AIB; George Pope, assistant general sales manager and assistant administrator of export credit, FAS, USDA; Glenn Sampson, USWA Washington staff; and Milo Schanzbach, a North Dakota wheat producer and farmer-elected chairman of U.S. Wheat Associates.

On going market development programs such as this Central American conference are supported by Texas and U.S. wheat producers through their Boards and Commissions to enhance their market share of international markets and to enhance local producer prices through expanded demand.

"Central America is currently one of the fastest expanding areas for Texas and U.S. wheat," according to Otis Harman, chairman of the Texas Wheat Producers Board from Tulla. "We are pleased to have Texas and U.S. wheat producers so well represented by an experienced wheat producer and organizational leader as Leo Witkowski."

JAIL

advertising costs associated with the election last November.

Dr. Tim Revell was appointed as county health officer, to replace Dr. Gerald Payne who no longer desires to hold the office. Revell will assume a two-year term on March 31.

County Surveyor Kenny Hagar met with the court to discuss existing county road policies. He pointed out a number of requirements which he says are often waived by commissioners.

Hagar suggested commissioners change current policies rather than waive them in some cases and not in others. He said they do have the right to do so under the deviance provision, but he felt many of the policies were outdated or inefficient and in need of change.

"I think you need to look at it hard, to study it," Hagar suggested. Commissioners voted to address the issue again during an April meeting.

County Clerk David Ruland presented the names of Charles Watson and Theta Seivers as judge and alternate, respectively, of voting Precinct 12. Commissioners approved the appointments.

Roy Dale Messer, Democratic county chairman, informed the court that he intends to pay his workers $4.25 an hour for officiating during the coming elections, and he asked commissioners to consider matching that figure for county election personnel.

The court moved to do so, making the raise from $3.35 an hour effective immediately.

Rumaldo Garcia, present for most of the meeting, spoke up then and asked why more people in the county are not trained as election judges. Ruland explained that there really is not much interest in the county, and training sessions are normally just attended by those who will actually work the elections.

Ruland said another problem is that a candidate for election judge really should work a few elections as a clerk, and because judges are allowed to choose their own clerks that may preclude some persons from getting the experience they need.

Commissioners adjourned just before noon, and at 1 p.m. went into closed session to discuss the Cervantez versus Deaf Smith County lawsuit. A report on the outcome of that meeting appears in a separate story.

BALLOTS

Bill White followed by Thomas B. Thorpe, William B. Phillips, Kerry P. Fitzgerald, Walter Boyd, George Ellis and Harry Heard.

Bill Sarpalius is unopposed in his bid for re-election as state senator from the 31st District, while Charles W. Crow precedes Justin McBride on the ballot as candidates for 86th District State Representative.

Charles Reynolds is the lone contender for chief justice of the court of appeals in the 7th judicial district.

Locally, Joe Brown, Jr. heads the list of candidates for Deaf Smith County Sheriff, followed by Paul Ramirez Jr. and Dean Butcher. Neil Miller is unopposed for the position of county tax assessor-collector, while Mark Campbell and Leroy Johnson Jr. vie for county constable.

In the county commissioners race, Tex Rhodes is first on the ballot for Precinct 1. Incumbent Bill Brady is next, followed by Don Cherry, Larry Ulibarri, W.L. "Bussy" Kaul and Nancy Hill.

Precinct 3 hopefuls are in the following order: B.L. "Lynn" Jones, Ron Crist, George Zetsche, Troy Don Moore and Larry D. Bain.

Each voting precinct is allowed one write-in vote for precinct chairman, said County Clerk David Ruland. Alfred Dziuk has filed for reelection as Precinct 1 chairman, as did Gerald Parker in Precinct 7 and Rumaldo Garcia in Precinct 2.

Roy Dale Messer has filed for the position of Democratic county chairman, after being elected last summer to fill an unexpired term.

On the Republican primary ballot, Ronald Reagan will appear as the United States presidential candidate.

Ron Moscaher heads the list of U.S. Senatorial candidates followed by Henry (Hank) Grover, Phil Gramm and Ron Paul.

tenders are listed as Tom Schaefer, Richard Wilder, Larry Combest and Ron Fleming.

John Thomas Henderson is unopposed in his bid for railroad commissioner, as are John L. Bates who is running for chief justice of the supreme court and Virgil Mulanay who wants a seat on the Court of Criminal Appeals.

For state representative, Roger Ponce heads the list followed by Garth Thomas and John Smithee.

Locally, William (Bill) Allen is running for Deaf Smith County Commissioner, Precinct 3.

COUNTY

Mathews went to the rear vehicle and "without a reasonable suspicion that plaintiff was involved in criminal conduct," asked Cervantez to produce a visa or birth certificate.

Cervantez reportedly told the officers he was a United States citizen and his documents were at home, but the men handcuffed Cervantez and took him to jail.

The suit goes on to describe how Cervantez was detained for the next three days and finally released after being interviewed by Smiley. TRLA attorneys claim Cervantez was never indicted, taken before a magistrate or informed of his right to legal counsel.

Lozano's complaint stems from event he says happened just five days later. Lozano stopped at the DPS office in Hereford to ask for directions, at which time he said Mathews demanded Lozano show him a birth certificate.

Lozano also claimed to be a U.S. citizen but did not have proof of such in his possession. He was detained at the DPS office for one hour, and according to the suit suffered "great humiliation, embarrassment, mental anguish and loss of earnings."

A motion filed later, asking for certification of defendant and plaintiff classes, is to be heard on the April 16 docket in Federal District Court in Amarillo.

Attorneys for Cervantez and Lozano ask that a plaintiff class be defined as "all persons of Hispanic descent who have been, are, or will be subject to the alleged illegal policies and practices of defendants occurring within the Texas Counties of DPS Region 5."

As a defendant class, TRLA suggests the judge certify a class action against Travis McPherson "individually and as class representative for all of the sheriffs of Texas counties within DPS District Five."

The plaintiffs' desire for alleged misconduct to be stopped — as described in eight separate claims for relief — is followed by a request for actual and punitive damages from the defendants.

Smith says that because one claim is injunctive and one is monetary, the two "do not run parallel" and should be segregated by the county and the sheriff's office as defendants.

"I will continue to assist the county, assist Charles White, and continue to represent the interests of the sheriff and the sheriff's department," Smith stated after the Friday decision.

Smith has been employed by the insurance company through which the sheriff's department should be covered against such a suit, however he has provided legal counsel to the county and sheriff's office free of charge since the case was filed.

"We've come to the point where we can't have the same attorney representing the insurance company and the county," said Saul. "The insurance company will employ a different attorney now."

The HHS concert will be preceded, on April 3, by the annual Stanton-la Plata Band Concert. It is also scheduled to start at 7 p.m. in the HHS Auditorium. Persons who buy tickets for this concert will also be eligible for the door prize.

BULL

Falls and photos of the student's behind were shown in full color on both the 6 and 10 p.m. newscasts.

Needless to say, Iowa Park residents hit the ceiling — and the television station.

During the filmed interview, the student with the red bottom said he had been beaten with a "sawed-off baseball bat."

Bob Hamilton ran down the facts on the baseball bat and said: "Folks, that 'bat' was originally a baseball bat. But it, many years ago, was shaved down on both sides to about three-eighths inch thickness, making it nothing more than a paddle. It has warned many a rear, and I suspect just as rightful a case as this one."

"The whole thing was nothing more than has taken place here and at other schools for years: the administration of punishment for doing something wrong."

"However, the charges made on television just succeeded in embarrassing our school system, which is the pride of our community, as far as I'm concerned."

And Bob ended his column this way: "And I'll guarantee you, if the student had attempted to show as much of himself to the public as the television station did, he'd had been arrested for indecent exposure..."

"To our school system for standing up to its policies, I give an A-plus. To those who complained about it, an F-minus."

And evidently the publisher of the newspaper is expressing the sentiments of a majority of the school patrons since that issue of the paper is filled with letters to the editor supporting the school's discipline policy.

As one letter writer wrote: "I expect the teacher who finds my child guilty of breaking the rules to apply the 'board of education' and further, my children understand that when they get home I will apply the same 'board' to their bottoms."

As we said at the beginning, bottoms, like fingerprints and people, differ from one person to another — even in Iowa Park.

Funerals, killings vivid

Rosemary Smith remembers years in El Salvador

SAN BENITO, Texas (AP) — She is substantial, giving, the quiet daughter of a labor organizer from Cleveland who has dedicated her life to the people of El Salvador.

And this week, the anniversary of the death of El Salvador's Archbishop Oscar Arnulfo Romero, layworker Rosemary Smith remembers the faces, work and events that filled her 17 years in the country she left in 1980, "a year of death."

"It seemed for a while that all we did was go to funerals of people who had been killed — priests, catechists, villagers and, of course, the archbishop," Miss Smith said.

Oscar Arnulfo Romero was sent to San Salvador by the Vatican in early 1977. Socially committed priests who daily ministered to people terrorized by right-wing death squads saw the new archbishop as a lightweight, a follower, a person not likely to challenge established order, Miss Smith said.

But in March 1977, she said a gentle, apolitical priest in a small village 20 miles north of San Salvador was assassinated for his work with the poor and the mild-mannered new archbishop began speaking out against the violence.

His words stirred hundreds of thousands of people throughout Central America who walked miles to hear him and believed they heard a savior, Miss Smith said.

Late in the day of March 24, 1980, while celebrating mass, Romero, 62, was assassinated. He died in the ambulance. No one was formally charged with his slaying but the U.S. ambassador accused the extreme right. Miss Smith attended Romero's funeral with her "team," a group of 12 priests, nuns and layworkers sent by the Diocese of Cleveland to work in rural Eastern Salvador in 1964.

"There were hundreds of thousands of people lining the streets the day of the funeral," she said. "It was a beautiful bright day and so hot, like always."

"People were still stunned, subdued, but were singing lovely songs, not somber ones, but songs of triumph. Every so often, on side streets, you'd see a soldier hiding behind a tree or in a doorway like they didn't want to be seen."

Because of the huge crowd, the funeral was to be conducted on the steps of the Central Cathedral above a packed plaza. Miss Smith and her group went inside the church and stood by the door.

"They had just begun the mass when we heard the shots and people began to panic. You couldn't tell where the shots were coming from, you could hear them from all sides."

"People started pouring into the cathedral, it was a giant swell of people and I was crushed against the wall and couldn't move."

"A woman next to me was crying, 'My granddaughter, my granddaughter,' she had lost her in the pushing, and I just thought, 'Well this is it, we're all going to die.'"

She said people waited, prayed and cried, but nobody moved for an hour.

"You could still hear shots outside and my fear was that the soldiers would just come in and machine gun the whole church," she said.

Finally, a space was cleared and people began passing the bodies of people who had been trampled to death overhead to the front.

"We wiggled our way out, walked with our hands on top of our heads to indicate we didn't have guns and stopped on the way home to have a scotch or two," she said.

Miss Smith was used to coping with random terror. Only a few months before, two of her co-workers had been murdered, and mutilated bodies turned up daily on the village streets and country roads she traveled, she said.

Miss Smith and her team worked at the Centro Reyna de la Paz or Central King of Peace, an educational center that served communities in southeastern El Salvador.

In the center, peasants could study reading and writing, health, farming techniques, religion, public speaking, community organizing and a variety of self-improvement and community development courses. "It was such a challenge and so exciting and people were so appreciative and eager to learn," Miss Smith said of her years of work. "I had intended to stay just one year, but I stayed and stayed."

In La Union, she gave classes in each barrio, in backyards along the waterfront of the Gulf of Fonseca.

"I taught women about planting their own little gardens, about different foods that were good. I taught basic health and child care, something I knew nothing about and had to read up on," said Miss Smith, who has never married.

"Ninety percent of the women couldn't read or write, but we just sat around and talked a little about things like dignity and the value of women's work."

"Just getting them to talk was something. Some of them had never been asked anything in their life, they'd only been told," she said.

The Cleveland team trained local people to take over the education center and when two of these workers were killed, she said it became apparent that others working at the center were in danger as well. The Cleveland team decided the center should close.

Miss Smith went to Washington, D.C., to offer the building to the International Red Cross. On her way home she stopped in Guatemala at a natural family planning conference and met a visitor from Salvador who told her it was too dangerous to return.

"Jean Donovan came up. She was going to Ireland for a wedding and came to get a tablecloth I had bought for her to take," Miss Smith said. "She said I should stay away for a while, just until the violence died down."

Miss Donovan, a layworker, and Sisters Dorothy Kazel, Maria Clark and Ita Ford, were found two months later murdered and buried in a shallow grave.

Since returning to the United States, Miss Smith has set up a halfway house, Casa Oscar Romero, for Central American refugees in a small town 15 miles north of Brownsville.

She has turned over operation of the house to a San Antonio couple and is waiting for a chance to return to El Salvador.

A poster at an earlier commemoration of the anniversary of Romero's death quoted the bishop as saying, "My Duty Is To Be With My People." Miss Smith said she knows what he meant.

Sunday Sports?

The governor's Select Committee on Education continues to make the news with various reports. We predict one of the latest recommendations will go over like a lead balloon.

A subcommittee has recommended that "Sunday afternoon should be sanctioned for co-curricular and extra-curricular competition." This comes from subcommittee chairman Jon Flemming who, surprisingly enough, is president of Texas Wesleyan in Fort Worth.

The proposal, if adopted, would mean athletic contests and other activities could be conducted on Sunday afternoons. Presumably this is because week days would be devoted strictly to classroom work for students, and Saturdays would not provide enough time for all the activities.

If Gov. Mark White and H. Ross Perot think they have stirred up a hornet's nest with their proposal to lengthen the school day and de-emphasize football, wait until the church people jump on this encroachment of the Sabbath.

Of course, Sundays are not devoted to church activities by everybody, perhaps not even a majority of Texans, but people want Sunday off—for religious purposes or otherwise.

Why 'Y'

The problem in the Bronx neighborhood was bad and rapidly getting worse. The generation gap between youths and the elderly, always wide, had become a gulf. Stereotypes hardened into distrust, then into open hostility that was poisoning the neighborhood.

Happily, something unusual happened on the way to real trouble. The Bronx YMCA of Greater New York came forward with a unique proposal: Instead of allowing the two groups to drift still further apart, why not use the schools to bring them together? "Let the neighborhood's senior citizens go into the classrooms and tutor youngsters in reading, writing and arithmetic."

The experiment worked wonders, right from the start. For seniors, "teaching" kids provided an escape from boredom and an opportunity to grow. For kids, the program meant one-on-one instruction not usually available in big-city school systems.

To children from broken homes, the senior volunteers often became proxy parents or grandparents. In their new "teachers" they found experience and authority tempered with gentleness and, above all, caring. The youngsters responded in kind. As one child wrote to his "teacher," a 77-year-old Italian-American who had himself been unable to read when he came to this country 63 years ago: "Thank you because you helped me to read. I feel you in my heart for the rest of my life."

Fortunately, the work of the YMCA is felt all over America. While the local "Y" is as familiar as basketball—which it supports along with soccer, swimming, tennis and summer camps—it is far more than the Young Men's Christian Association.

In fact, its name has become a misnomer. Today the YMCA serves people of all ages; more and more of them with special needs and problems; 44 percent of them females. "Christian?" Yes, in that the "Y" is founded on Christian principles of love, hope and caring. But its doors are open to all.

Keeping them open is a big, expensive job, especially with YMCAs managing hundreds of essential programs in thousands of communities. Like job-finding programs for unemployed Chicagoans; employee fitness programs in California; a shelter for runaway teenagers in Louisville; home-finding for Indo-Chinese refugees in Seattle; and minibike programs across the nation to help troubled kids get on the right track by building their self-esteem and teaching them mechanics.

The first "Y" opened in rented Boston quarters in 1852. While that was an otherwise unremarkable year — the last in Millard Fillmore's presidency — you have the opportunity to make 1984 one of the YMCA's best ever. Help support an organization that reaches out warmly and effectively to more than 12 million Americans through 2,170 units in all 50 states.

For more information on how you can reach out and help someone, contact your local YMCA.

MORE TALK ABOUT GOLF

Last week's article on talking about golf got a pretty good response. I think I hit a nerve. There are plenty of folks out there who are just like me. We do not really enjoy playing the game.

I played this week, so now I have the basis for about three months of talk. With any luck at all I won't have to play again until July. By then I may find an excuse for waiting until August.

Since there is so much interest in not playing I thought we should carry our study a little further. When we do play it is important for us to look like we play well. Our game will give us away, of course, but we can offset the game with excuses if we look like we are good golfers. There are some secrets we need to know.

Play with new balls, even if they must be borrowed. Old balls say we are hackers. A new ball, when facing a water hazard, says confidence. I remember a fellow who borrowed a ball from his playing partner and promptly hit it into the water. He borrowed another and repeated the act. After five borrowed balls the partner blew up and said, "Play your own balls. Those things are expensive." My friend responded with, "If you can't afford balls you ought not to play the game."

Dress, but do not overdress. This is tricky. Blue jeans are a no-no, but to look like a pro can be tacky. Somewhere in the middle with a slight casual look is best. When I first began playing someone gave me some real pro clothes. I went to a strange course to play. A gallery gathered on the first tee to witness the start of this sharp looking guy who must be a pro. Three slices into a nearby cotton field put the gallery back in the club house and ended my pro clothes stage.

Learn the lingo. Talk about half wedges, knock down shots, fades, draws, hooks and such. No one can hit these shots but it sounds great when explaining why the shot did what it did. "I was trying a knock down shot and came off of it," sounds more professional than, "where did it go?"

Lie about lies. No matter what happens, blame it on a bad lie. This is not actually lying since there is no good lie except when the ball is on a tee.

Over club. Since there is no chance of scoring well anyway, always hit too much club and go over the green. Announce that you are hitting a 9 iron and whack it with a 6. Nothing is as impressive as too much distance while everyone else is chili dipping their way to the green.

Talk about clubs. Read the advertising in golf magazines. Never read the articles. They will either confuse you or inspire you to play, which will certainly confuse you. Read the ads. Find out all the new stuff on the market and talk about buying it. For gosh sakes, don't buy the stuff. Some of it may work and then what?

Remember, in golf it is not whether you win or loose, nor is it how you play the game. In golf it is how you look while you talk about playing the game.

Warm Fuzzies,
Doug Manning

Letters to the Editor

Dear editor:

On behalf of the West Texas Nazarene Church, and all of our teenagers; I would like to thank you for the overwhelming welcome we receive from your city each year, as we come for our fine arts and sports finals, Youth-a-rama.

Of course, we are deeply grateful for the outstanding support we receive from Bro. Bob Huffaker and your local Nazarene Church. We couldn't serve 250 teens and sponsors without their work. We definitely feel a part of your city and again, thanks for a real Hereford welcome!

E. Dale Taylor, President
Nazarene Youth International Fort Worth, Tx.

Dear editor:

In response to the letter to the editor in The Sunday Brand dated 18 March 1984, and to the other "dry" letters.

When earning money through ones' endeavors and talents is considered greed, then most of us in Hereford are guilty of that. Nearly every business established in Hereford, or anywhere, was done so with the desire to make money. (Even churches have to show a profit or they will fold). Every member and organization of the community benefits from any business, sometimes more than the owner does.

We already have liquor in this town, and whether we vote wet or dry, we will always have it. If we buy it in another town or from a bootlegger, it's here. Whether we elect to receive any revenue and benefit from liquor sales and manufacture is up to us.

None of the alcohol-related problems that were referred to would be compounded by the opportunity to have local liquor sales. Instead there would be jobs, revenues in the form of salaries and taxes and the attraction of new businesses to the Hereford area. Businesses both related and unrelated to the liquor industry.

One company owner wanted to move his company from Oklahoma to Hereford but knew he could not get his key people to move with him. Not because Hereford is dry, but because of the attitude people of a dry town.

As far as liquor already flowing too freely in our town...PERHAPS so, but take the time to talk to the owners or members of the private clubs and fraternal organizations. Find out how many THOUSANDS of dollars that are given to charities, to needy families and to alleviate the suffering of children and adults...by these groups. If you prefer not to discuss it with these people, then read some of the back issues of this newspaper. Blind? We could say out of blind love for their fellow man.

We won't swap quotations from the Bible. As any student of the Bible knows, it gives us quotes for either side of any discussion.

The reality of a dry county is a harsh one.

Think about it, talk about it. Then VOTE.

Sincerely concerned,
Ray Blanton

Dear editor:

In a recent article you were supporting a friend for a political position by stating, "He is a good person. He doesn't smoke or drink."

We Christians need to support these good Christian men as well as support bills to help promote the well being of Christian standards in our community. The Christian's desire for the right fruit will be as the Holy Bible states in Galatians 5:22, "But when the Holy Spirit controls our lives he will produce this kind of fruit in us: love, joy, peace, patience, kindness, goodness, faithfulness, gentleness, and self control. There is no law against these."

The Holy Bible also comes against things that are wrong for one who is a Christian. How can a Christian fail to take a stand against the "wet vote" coming up for election? Galatians 5:19-21 "Now the deeds of the flesh are evident, such as immorality, impurity, sensuality, idolatry, magic arts, animosities, strife, jealousy, bad temper, outbreaks of selfishness, dissensions, factions, envy, drunkenness, carousings and everything of the kind, of which I warn you as I did previously, that those who practice such things will not inherit the Kingdom of God."

Are you going to support by a "wet vote" more divorce, child abuse, suicides, alcoholics, and increase in crime? Are you sending our loved ones by their lack of control of alcohol to hell? I Corinthians 6:9-10 "Do you not know that the unrighteous will not inherit God's Kingdom? Be not misled; neither homosexuality, nor thieves, nor the avaricious, nor drunkards, nor slanderers, nor robbers will inherit the Kingdom of God."

Please, citizens vote for Christian men and Christian standards that will benefit our community not cause our brother to stumble. Is your thinking in line with the person who had and still has the perfect character, Jesus Christ?

Doris Huckert

The Weakly Reeder

- a partial view of the news -

By REED PARSELL

Someone once said a reporter that does not ask a dumb question once in a while is a dumb reporter. The message of that statement is, rather than risk story mistakes through an artificial appearance of subject mastery, journalists must be willing to pry out details even if doing so might prove embarrassing.

Adhering to that practical advice gives reporters a certain amount of leeway to be outwardly ignorant. However, there are boundaries of naivete which should never be crossed, with one good example of such a violation occurring last week during an Amarillo news conference.

Journalists from several area newspapers and television stations were gathered to hear and question some U.S. Department of Energy officials. The DOE group was explaining a recommendation regarding its search for a nuclear waste dump site.

Most people of the Panhandle area know the DOE is conducting the search, which would indicate everyone in the area media - especially those covering the press conference - would be aware of that as well. This rule of thumb was effectively pricked, however, by one of Amarillo's female television reporters.

After sitting through introductions of the DOE personnel, several questions from her colleagues and countless mentions of the federal department, "Scoop" asked, "What is your name?"

"Linda McClain."

"Is that Linda spelled the traditional way?"

"Yes."

"Are you from the DOE?"

A pause followed to allow the stupidity of this latest dumb question to register. "Yes."

Was this a bad day for the so-called journalist? Apparently not when considering what happened the only other time she and Brand staffers covered the same event.

Back in January, then Democratic presidential hopeful John Glenn appeared in Amarillo for a breakfast fund-raiser. A press conference followed, during which Glenn addressed the nuclear waste issue. He said he had been involved in the issue since it started, was keeping close track of it and would not support any dump site until it was proven radioactive waste could be safely stored.

"Are you then saying you would support the nuclear waste dump being placed in the Panhandle?" asked Scoop.

Rightly blunt, despite his candidate status, the former astronaut replied, "I don't think you were listening to what I just said."

Excessive ignorance is not confined to the region's media, of course. Several years ago rookie TV commentator Oscar Robertson asked a member of the victorious Detroit basketball team, "Today's win gives you first place in the division. Do you think you can hold off Milwaukee the rest of the way?"

The former star player apparently did not consider it important each team had played only three games of an 82-tilt schedule.

What sport did you play during your basketball career, Oscar?

The Bootleg Philosopher

Getting set for political year

Editor's Note: The Bootleg Philosopher on his Deaf Smith grass farm gets set for a political year.

Dear editor:

When a reporter asked the head of a government bureau in Washington if it's true he had been secretly taping telephone conversations, he said no.

A few days later it turned out that he had been taping phone conversations, and he admitted it.

When asked why he lied the first time, he said he didn't consider it a lie, that what you say to a reporter has no bearing on the truth, a newspaper interview isn't a court of law and you can't be held accountable for it.

I won't touch on what classification this leaves a reporter in, or editorial writers or even columnists. Personally, I've never recorded anything. What I've said on the phone, and what's been said to me, I've never considered worth recording.

With national politics getting underway hot and heavy, some of the fun in between the boredom will come when newspapers and the TV networks begin calling attention to what candidates say today in stark contrast to what they wished they hadn't said a year before. They can say they were misquoted or the quote was taken out of context, but when some busy-body digs up a film clip showing exactly what they said 12 months ago, politics becomes much more enjoyable.

What politicians need is a law preventing television from re-running this year a tape of what they said last year. Some might argue the ban ought to extend to 10 years back, but that's not necessary. One year is adequate. Most of us can't remember a political promise longer than that anyway. I don't remember why I voted like I did in the last election, but it sounded good at the time.

Yours faithfully,
J.A.

Church launches billboard campaign for priesthood

BRIDGEPORT, Conn. (AP) — By means of a down-to-earth sign, the Roman Catholic Church hopes more men will hear a higher call to the priesthood.

As a tryout project that may be expanded across the country, the church has rented a billboard located in Bridgeport along the south-bound lanes of Interstate 95, aimed at motorists headed in the direction of New York City.

The message, in large gray letters, is simple: "God Calls To The Priesthood At Any Age."

"The Roman Catholic Church is experiencing a vocation crisis," said the Rev. Francis J. Fajella, director of the Second Career Vocation Project, an international campaign to attract older men to the priesthood.

Fajella said the advertising space was rented at the beginning of February and it sparked such a tremendous response in its first month, that he extended the rental for another month.

In addition to the message, the billboard has a picture of Pope John Paul II raising a chalice and a phone number for prospective priests to call.

Fajella said if the billboard campaign is successful, more will be rented across the United States.

"I'd like to put the next billboard in the middle of Times Square," Fajella said in a recent interview.

The 46-year-old priest said there are approximately 58,000 priests serving about 51 million Roman Catholics and, if the current trend continues, there will be about 25,000 priests by the year 2000. He said most priests are elderly and fewer priests are entering seminaries.

Fajella said it is his job to counteract that trend. He noted that the Second Vatican Council of 1962-65 authorized the church "to use whatever media it has at its disposal in a given country to further" the church's work.

Working out of Holy Apostles Seminary in the Hartford suburb of Cromwell, Fajella initiated the use of billboards, which are part of an international ad campaign to attract to the priesthood "adults who are presently in secular careers."

He said that having people in the middle-to-late-life range enter the church had been commonplace before the 1850s, but forgotten when modern educational requirements limited that resource.

Fajella said that "lack of commitment among youth" has been a byproduct of today's wealth in industrialized nations and has become a problem to Roman Catholics in recruiting priests.

Fajella noted that he had left the church at the age of 19 before returning and entering the priesthood at 39.

"There are some good youth of mind and spirit, but most do not have enough life experience," he said.

The church's conservative philosophy also contributed to the current vocational crisis as officials avoided modern means of advertisement, he said. "Previously," he said, "we relied on pamphlets and word-of-mouth."

Fajella said most people, like himself, must experience a "second conversion" and that the church is attempting with the billboard to raise a dormant alternative.

"How else do you compete with Gucci and Camaros?" he asked.

All dairy cattle, registered cattle, all bulls and 10 percent of the female grade cattle in Deaf Smith County are to be tested for tuberculosis. The testing will begin next week and will be under the direction of Dr. J. G. Porter of Fort Worth, of the bureau of animal industry.

Every year there are about 150 deaths in Texas from lockjaw, according to Dr. John W. Brown, state health officer. Most of the deaths have resulted from the most trivial or minor wounds or injury. Only recently a small child died from a small wound caused by a splinter being stuck in the toe.

25 YEARS AGO

Nancy Boardman, 13 year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herb D. Boardman of Hereford, Thursday won the annual Deaf Smith County Spelling Bee and the right to enter regional competition.

License plate sales for 1959 perked up this week as 822 tags were sold from Wednesday noon through Saturday morning. But clerks in the Deaf Smith County Tax Assessor, Collector's office are preparing for a "last minute rush" as more than 650 vehicle owners are expected to flood the office to register their cars Monday and Tuesday.

30 YEARS AGO

Hereford continued on the progressive trail during the month of March as city building permits for the year neared the $1 million mark and continued to run well ahead of last year.

The Hereford City Commission Monday night approved right turns against red lights at certain lighted intersections in Hereford.

More than 80 mph winds slammed through Hereford Tuesday causing heavy damage to many homes and structures. A mobile home owned by Henry Rayburn, about five miles southwest of Hereford was toppled by the wind and the wind caved in the side of the City Incinerator, causing total damage to the $18,000 structure.

The Deaf Smith County Crimestoppers, Inc. board of directors Friday approve the payment of $900 in rewards to persons who supplied information leading to the arrest and indictment of suspects involved in local crimes over the past nine months.

Last weekend Hereford police issued 76 citations and in one day this week wrote out 37 tickets as part of a crackdown to prevent city accidents, according to Sgt. Ted Langgood.

A group of concerned Deaf Smith County citizens have organized to resist efforts to locate the nation's first radioactive waste dump in the Texas Panhandle, People Opposed to Wasted Energy repositories, or POWER, was formed in the past week in Hereford.

Kids Inc. meeting is scheduled here Tuesday

Officers of Kids, Incorporated have announced that a meeting to discuss the coming baseball-softball season will be held Tuesday night, March 27, at 7:30 at the high school cafeteria.

The organization is interested in hearing comments from parents and coaches as to the operation of the various leagues involved.

Registration cards have been distributed through the Hereford public schools, and team rosters will be published in mid-April, with practice to begin shortly thereafter. Games are expected to begin in late April or early May, scheduled over an 8-week span.

The program is offered to youngsters currently in the first grade and through age 18. A $15 registration fee is charged, payable once teams are announced and practice begins.

The Tuesday night meeting will also include discussions in regard to the KI annual fund-raising event and banquet, and general policies set forth by the Kids, Inc. board of directors.

The process of organizing leagues for the 1984 season will also be initiated. Those interested in coaching and umpiring are urged to attend the Tuesday night meeting.

Youngsters who failed to receive registration cards at school may complete the form published in the Brand and mail to Kids Inc., Box 1945, Hereford.

USA Today

Newspaper considering European editions

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A special task force at USA Today, which calls itself the nation's newspaper, is working on a proposed European version of the publication, a managing editor said Friday.

Taylor Buckley, managing editor of USA Today's Money section, said the European edition — which is only in the talking stages — would be "substantially the same, but scaled down."

"In large measure, it would be the section fronts that you see now, but maybe not as much weather," said Buckley, addressing a morning session at the 1984 convention of Texas Associated Press Managing Editors.

Buckley reeled off the pejorative nicknames assigned USA Today because of its penchant for short, easily digested stories — "snack food news," "comic book journalism," "the titan of tidbits," "the near beer of journalism," and, the most well known, "McPaper."

But, Buckley noted, many newspapers have followed the emphasis on weather and splashy color that marked USA Today's debut in September 1982.

Many papers added full-page, color weather sections after the nationwide publication debuted in their cities.

"We don't like to make judgments and we don't like to take credit for anything that happens in the newspaper industry," Buckley said.

"We're left with the title of 'McPaper,' but all over the United States, our McNuggets are being snapped up and duplicated," he said.

USA Today, which has an average daily paid circulation of more than 1.3 million, still has not made a profit, Buckley said.

The newspaper, started from scratch by the Gannett Co. Inc. chain, probably will reach both profitability and more than 2.3 million circulation in 1987, according to a company statement.

USA Today currently is available to only 70 percent of the country and does its biggest business at newsstands and newspaper racks.

Its headquarters are in Arlington, Va.

Mongolia is more than twice as large as the state of Texas. However, the city of Houston has more people than live in all of Mongolia.

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Curbing hyperacidity

DEAR DR. LAMB — I'm 88 and have a hyperacidity condition. I have tremendous burning in my stomach about every two hours, night and day, and have been bothered with an ulcerated stomach. For my ulcer pains I have been taking Digel and Tagamet, at mealtimes and bedtime. I've also tried Maalox and Amphogel.

I'm never hungry and always feel full when I eat. Lately I've been losing weight. I'm 5 feet 7 inches tall and weigh 140 pounds. I used to weigh 153. For most of my life I could eat almost anything, but not anymore. Fats, salts, pepper, lemon juice are all off my list.

Do you have any simple remedy to suggest? If so, please give it to me in plain English.

DEAR READER — I presume you're under a doctor's care since you are getting Tagamet, which is a prescription drug. Antacids and Tagamet are helpful in many cases in controlling such problems. You may feel full after eating because you have an ulcer at the outlet of your stomach.

People need to know that if they have ulcers and hyperacidity, their lifestyle can affect these problems. Not only is it important to take the medicines your doctor prescribed for you, but it's equally important not to smoke and to avoid coffee, both regular and decaffeinated. You also should avoid tea, colas and any sources of caffeine. Alcohol also is off-limits. In some instances you have to find out what things irritate you.

I have outlined some things you should do with your acidity and ulcer problems in the Health Letter 15-10, Understanding Ulcers and Acidity, which I am sending you. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Recently my 23-year-old son was hospitalized for viral meningitis. He was in the hospital one week, home from work one week and now seems to be OK.

Could you explain what the difference is between this and spinal meningitis? Is this contagious? How do you usually get the virus and can he get it again?

DEAR READER — The membranes that encase the brain and spinal cord are called the meninges. Inflammation of these membranes is meningitis. There are many different kinds of infectious organisms that can cause meningitis. One of the bacterial forms, called meningococcal meningitis, is a bacterial disease and is treated with antibiotics.

Many viruses can involve the membranes of the brain causing meningitis. That includes such common contagious viruses as the mumps virus. Some of these are of relatively short duration with few complications. Others can be relatively severe.

You can get any of these forms of meningitis as you do any other contagious disease. Some are caught the same way as the common cold. In fact, some of the viruses that cause respiratory infections also can cause meningitis.

DEAR DR. LAMB — For as long as I can remember, I've had fat on my chest. I've been jogging, doing push-ups and sit-ups for two years. I watch what I eat and I lose weight everywhere except my chest. Do you have any advice on an exercise that would make my chest as hard as a rock?

DEAR READER — It's relatively common for men to have some fat on the chest and most of them don't like it.

I'm sorry to say that there is no such thing as spot reducing. You can't just reduce the fat in one particular area of the body. That means you'd have to be on an overall program of a diet and exercise to lose excess body fat.

Day Care Center charged

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Seven relatives who ran a day care center stand charged with sexually abusing 18 preschoolers, keeping them silent by threatening to harm their parents — and authorities said Friday that "three times as many" children may have been victimized.

New charges could be filed against ex-teacher Raymond Buckey and six others as the probe of the Virginia McMartin Preschool in Manhattan Beach evolves, Deputy District Attorney Jean Matusinka said.

The defendants allegedly silenced the children by butchering small animals in front of them and threatening to do the same to their parents if they talked.

Indictments said five teachers, a former teacher, and Virginia McMartin, 76, the school's founder, raped, sodomized or otherwise abused their young charges over the last 10 years.

"Right now we have 115 counts involving 18 students," Ms. Matusinka said. "There could be three times as many (who were abused). We have talked to over 100 kids already but not all of them can make testimony — they're too young, they're frightened, they're traumatized emotionally."

Superior Court Judge Ronald George refused Friday to reduce bail for the defendants that ranged up to $1 million, and postponed arraignment until April 6 to give four of them — all members of the same family — time to find separate lawyers.

Ms. Matusinka, objecting to a request by lawyer Daniel Davis that Buckley's $1 million bail be cut, said it should not be cut "even a dime. The great community concern is that bail is substantially low and they feel particularly that Raymond Buckey is a threat to the community."

Buckey, indicted Thursday by the Los Angeles County Grand Jury on 75 counts, was arrested in September but no charges were filed then for lack of evidence. Ms. Matusinka said his alleged sexual abuses may have continued even after that arrest.

She said Buckey's behavior was "escalating ... even after his arrest. This occurred with the knowledge and participation of other members of the school."

She refused to say if any of the defendants had profited through child pornography, or if that was the motive for the alleged abuse.

44.6% ON YOUR IRA?

LAST YEAR THE REGENCY FUND WAS ONLY FOR THE RICH. THIS YEAR IT'S ALSO FOR THOSE WHO HOPE TO BE.

Before this year, the Oppenheimer Regency Fund was only open to those who had $100,000 to invest. But those who could invest and did on December 30, 1982, the Fund's first offering date, earned 44.6% on their investment.

What's more, the Fund's outstanding performance earned it the rank of Number 1 fund in 1983, according to Lipper Analytical Services' survey of more than 600 mutual funds.

This year the Regency Fund is available exclusively for IRAs and Keogh plans. So virtually everyone can invest up to $2,000 a year tax deferred (more for Keoghs) in a fund dedicated to maximizing the return on your investment over the long term.

Because the Regency Fund has this singular goal, it can endeavor to take full advantage of short-term gains whenever possible. Which makes it ideal for tax-deferred retirement funds where any gains can be consolidated and compounded over the years without being eroded by taxes. This is not to suggest that an investor may not incur a loss if he or she buys shares at one time and sells them at another, after equity prices have declined.

If you want your retirement funds invested ambitiously for your future and you're willing to assume the risks associated with potentially greater rewards, consider the Regency Fund.

If you hope to retire like a wealthy person, maybe you should consider investing like one.

District home opener

Whitefaces belt Westerners, 6-3

Burrrr, It's Cold

Several members of the HHS boys varsity baseball team sought refuge around the comfort of a propane heater. The wind-chill factor of Friday's game against Lubbock was reported as near zero degrees. Despite the weather the Herd won its district home opener, 6-3.

By STAN GODEK
Sports Editor

Amidst a chill factor near zero degrees and occasional snow flurries, the Hereford High School boys varsity baseball squad won its District 3-5A home opener, 6-3 over Lubbock High Thursday.

A three-run bottom of the sixth for the Herd broke a 3-3 deadlock and carried HHS starting pitcher Sammy Suarez to a complete game victory.

With the score tied at three, Whiteface second baseman Robert Martinez led off with a shot through the gap in right centerfield and scored on a sacrifice fly.

J.D. High and Mike Scott then reached base on a walk and an error. That set up a two-run double by Mickey Stengel, who drove a pitch over the leftfielder's head into a strong wind.

Provided with a three-run cushion, Suarez shut down the Westerners in the top of the seventh to end the game.

"We hit the ball. (Martinez) ripped a triple and then (Stengel) hit the one over the left fielder's head. That had a lot to do with (Suarez) staying in the ballgame," Whiteface coach Don Long said after the contest.

The coach had planned to throw Mike Scott Thursday against Lubbock. But Scott received facial injuries at Wednesday's practice when the Herd's pitching machine let fly an errant ball which hit Scott in the face.

After a visit to the hospital emergency room, "the doctor said he could play but not pitch," Long explained. Despite the weather, Long said he wanted to get the game in because there was a chance that Saturday's game at Palo Duro High may be canceled.

Friday's Palo Duro at Caprock High contest was canceled "due to wet grounds, not because of cold weather," said Long. If Hereford decided not to play Thursday's game because of the weather, the Herd would have to play four games in six days next week because make-up games "must be made up on the next available date."

"I wanted to get this (Friday's) game in because of the pitching," burden it could produce, the coach said.

The Hereford junior varsity baseball team won its opening District 3-5A contest at home Thursday.

The Whiteface JVers shut down Tascosa, 6-2, in a game called for rain after 4½ innings. Rusty Torres got credit for the HHS victory. Stephan Hocker went two for three with a triple; Jerry Brown had two hits including a home run; and Doug Evans was two for two at the plate.

The JVers are scheduled to play at Amarillo High Thursday.

USFL roundup

Fusina loads up arm for Stars

By The Associated Press

Chuck Fusina hopes to make as triumphant a return to Pittsburgh Saturday as Cliff Stoudt did a couple of weeks ago. Stoudt, once quarterback of the National Football League's Pittsburgh Steelers, led the Birmingham Stallions 38-18 over the Maulers.

Fusina, a native of nearby McKees Rocks, Pa., captains the Philadelphia Stars, 3-1, who share first place in the United States Football League's Atlantic Division with New Jersey heading into the game against 1-3 Pittsburgh.

In Saturday's other USFL games, it will be Oakland at San Antonio and Oklahoma at Arizona, the latter at night. On Sunday it will be Denver at Memphis, Chicago at New Orleans, Washington at New Jersey, and Jacksonville at Los Angeles. Monday night's games are Birmingham at Tampa Bay and Michigan at Houston.

"I guess you don't see a strong arm or a strong body when you see me," Fusina said. "But as long as I'm winning..." Since leaving St. Rox High School, his teams—Penn State, Tampa Bay of the NFL and the Stars—have won 47 of the 55 games they've played.

Maulers Coach Joe Pendry, the Stars' offensive coordinator last season, said, "Chuck Fusina is a capable quarterback. They have outstanding receivers. Fusina has a very quick release and if he sees one of the receivers open, he gets the ball to him quickly."

The game could become a rushing duel between Kelvin Bryant of Philadelphia, the leading USFL rusher with 404 yards, and the Maulers' Mike Rozier, tied for 13th with 182, including 77 in Pittsburgh's 16-7 win over Washington Sunday.

Barring a tie, one team is going to get its first victory of 1984 at San Antonio. Four games into the season, the Gunslingers and Oakland still are winless before their match-up at Alamo Stadium. The Invaders are at the bottom of the Pacific Division; the Gunslingers share the Central Division basement with the Chicago Blitz.

But the numbers, says San Antonio Coach Gil Steinke, aren't all: "... You just play football because you like to play. The satisfaction of doing a good job is what athletics is all about."

The Invaders, last in the league in both offense and defense, have scored only 14 points in four games, half of them in a 28-7 loss to Philadelphia last Sunday.

The Gunslingers are heartened by the return of No. 1 quarterback Rick Neuheisel, sidelined for two weeks with a broken left hand.

Before the season, Arizona Coach George Allen said his Wranglers wouldn't lose. Now he's got to worry about the team falling below .500. The Wranglers are 2-2 after a 31-26 loss to Michigan and, having been burned by the arm of Panthers' QB Bobby Hebert last week, are afraid of similar treatment by the Outlaws' Doug Williams.

"He has the strongest arm in football," Allen said. "He has a rifle arm. When he gets hot, he can beat you by himself."

Dear Wing,

Now is the time to start your Karate lessons so you will be able to take part in the big tournament in June. Loopy is working extra hard with all the Karate students to get them ready, and I'll bet they win the trophies. If you will enroll this week, your tuition will still be at the low rate, and you would have time to compete. No one will ever have a better opportunity to learn Karate than non-on account of this big tournament coming up in June. Several ladies have started their lesson this last week. It is a good way to get in shape and learn self-defense at the same time. The self discipline is so good especially for boys. Get your friends to take a trial lesson for FREE. I'll C U in Karate Class.

Aikens released from prison

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP)—Former Kansas City Royals first baseman Willie Aikens was released Friday from a federal prison where he had been serving time on a misdemeanor cocaine conviction, authorities said.

Aikens was freed after officials took nine days off his original three-month sentence on a conviction of attempting to purchase cocaine. A federal magistrate also fined Aikens $5,000 when he handed down the sentence on Dec. 19.

Aikens has been suspended for the 1984 season by Commissioner Bowie Kuhn, who says he may review the action by May 15.

Aikens was traded to Toronto before going to jail.

He is to report to the Blue Jays' training camp March 30. If Kuhn lifts the suspension, Aikens could be available for duty with the Blue Jays when they return home from a 10-game road trip that opens the American League season, team officials said.

Aikens batted .302 with 23 homers and 72 RBI last season for the Royals.

In NCAA Tournament

College field narrows to eight teams

By BARRY WILNER AP Sports Writer

When it was over, when 42 years of recruiting, game plans and coaching were behind him, Ray Meyer wasn't thinking of himself. He was thinking about his players, his replacement and his sport.

"Basketball is a part of me and will always be a part of me," Meyer said after his fourth-ranked DePaul Blue Demons were tied at the buzzer to end regulation time, then lost 73-71 to No. 19 Wake Forest on Danny Young's driving basket at the end of overtime in the NCAA Midwest Regional semifinals. "I'm sorry we didn't win. I'm not sorry for myself. I'm sorry for the players."

Meyer, 70, now hands over the Blue Demons' coaching duties to son Joey.

"I hope they don't expect too much of him," said the man they call simply "Coach," who compiled a 724-354 career record. "This ballclub has to improve and get better. I'll be in the stands pulling for them, just as I've been pulling for them on the bench."

Meyer will be in the stands without an NCAA title partly because his latest team could not protect a lead. Ahead by six points in the final two minutes, despite having four starters shackled with four fouls through the last seven minutes of regulation, the Blue Demons got sloppy.

They had the ball with less than 20 seconds to go, but freshman Dallas Comegys hurried a cross-court pass in the direction of Tyrone Corbin, who saved the ball from going out of bounds but knocked it to Wake Forest's Kenny Green. As the final seconds ticked off, Green passed to Delaney Rudd, whose 20-footer at the buzzer tied it 67-67.

With the game tied 71-71 and 19 seconds to go in overtime, Rudd fouled DePaul's Kenny Patterson, who missed the front end of the one-and-one. Wake Forest got the rebound, delayed and then Young drove in for the decisive basket.

"We panicked at the end. That's the story of the game," Meyer said. "We win with class and we lose with class. We'll walk out of here with our heads high. Maybe we didn't play our best, but we tried."

Wake Forest was at its best in the frantic final moments against No. 5 Houston, which dumped Memphis State 78-71. "It's starting to sink in right now," Meyer said. "It wasn't the way I planned to end my career."

This time they advance to Sunday's Midwest finals against No. 5 Houston, which dumped Memphis State 78-71. "It's starting to sink in right now," Meyer said. "It wasn't the way I planned to end my career."

In the West Regional at Los Angeles, No. 2 Georgetown beat No. 13 Nevada-Las Vegas and will face unheralded Dayton, a 64-58 victor over No. 15 Washington, on Sunday.

Today, it was Virginia, 20-11, against 22-8 Indiana for the East title at Atlanta, and No. 3 Kentucky hosting No. 6 Illinois for the Mideast crown.

The Final Four will be staged next weekend in Seattle.

Houston, 30-5, moved a step closer to making the national finals for the third straight year as Akeem Olajuwon scored 25 points, grabbed 13 rebounds and blocked four shots. The champions of the Southwest Conference also held All-American forward Keith Lee to four points in the second half.

Alvin Franklin added 24 points for Houston, while Memphis State was paced by freshman 7-footer William Bedford, who had 21 points before fouling out.

"It seemed like we'd get a lead and it would vanish," Houston Coach Guy Lewis said. "It was that way throughout until the end."

For Georgetown, center Patrick Ewing scored 16 points and grabbed 15 rebounds and Michael Jackson hit all 12 of his free throws. Georgetown, 31-3, broke the game open at the outset of the second half with a 10-2 run.

Dayton, 21-10 and on its own shocking rush for the Final Four, ended Washington's hopes of qualifying for the finals in its hometown.

Roosevelt Chapman had 22 points and the Flyers, with no starter taller than 6-7, broke the game open with an 11-1 surge in a 7:49 span of the second half.

The 6-4 Chapman, the only senior on the Dayton squad and the highest scorer in Dayton history, did a solid defensive job on Detlef Schrempf, the Huskies' leading scorer.

Schrempf, a 6-9½ junior from West Germany, was held to 18 points before fouling out with 41 seconds to play. Schrempf had scored 53 points in Washington's two tournament wins.

New York's Radio City Music Hall seats 6,000 and has a stage 144 feet wide and 67 feet deep.

In federal court

Sooner coach cleared of criminal charge

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — University of Oklahoma football coach Barry Switzer, fresh from a big victory in federal court, has passed only the first of several trials in 1984.

"Maybe now we can put all these other things to rest," Switzer told The Associated Press after he was cleared of allegations he used illegal "insider" information to make nearly $100,000 on a stock deal in 1981.

"I'm ready to think about football again," the coach said. "I feel as if a great burden has been lifted off my shoulders. I'm ready to get back to the things I know about."

What Switzer knows the most about is winning. In the 12 years since he took over the Oklahoma football program, he has compiled a record of 106-21-3, an 83 percent winning average that is tops among active coaches.

His record has lost its luster, though, in the 1980s, during which three straight four-loss seasons and several highly publicized personal crises have tarnished his image on and off the field.

In 1980, the coach came under scrutiny when he was accused of using school stationery to solicit business for a new company he had formed. Shortly thereafter, his top assistant coach, Larry Lacewell, resigned because of personal differences with Switzer.

Two years later, during an 84 campaign, the state's largest newspaper suggested in an editorial that "perhaps it is time for him to move on," and another paper followed with a call for the coach's resignation.

Last year, Switzer became the secondary focus of a national media blitz when highly-touted Marcus Dupree left school partway through his sophomore season. Dupree said he could not tolerate the pressure the coach put upon him.

And the Securities and Exchange Commission accused Switzer of receiving an illegal tip that an Oklahoma City oil firm was about to be liquidated. Switzer bought stock in the company two days after allegedly getting the tip and sold it days later for a profit of $97,900.

A federal district judge ruled last week that there was no evidence proving Switzer had operated outside the law, and dismissed the lawsuit against him and six other men. But the coach says the damage was done.

"I was embarrassed throughout the entire proceeding," he said. "We got all this attention, all this negative publicity, all the things I didn't want."

Since the time early in 1983 when the SEC announced its investigation of Switzer's stock deal, his relations with University of Oklahoma officials have worsened.

Earlier this year, the OU Board of Regents voted to renew the coach's contract for four years instead of the customary five. Switzer said the action "puts us on notice that we need to get things going."

"It was fairly common knowledge that Barry had certain business interests that perhaps may have detracted more than he realized," Dr. Ronald H. White, chairman of the regents, told the Daily Oklahoman.

Switzer's business interests still are a major concern. The coach told the AP he is trying to recover from a large loss of money his companies were holding in the Penn Square Bank when it folded in 1982.

He would not discuss specific money figures, but published reports have estimated his personal debts at $1 million or more.

And, in February of this year, OU's regents voted to freeze the salaries of Switzer and his staff for the second straight year. Other university employees also had their salaries frozen.

His prospects for increased profit on the football field are equally uncertain. The Sooners return many of the starters from the 1983 team that went 8-4 and was not invited to a post-season bowl game, but have lost most of the defensive front line that kept many of their contests close.

In addition, two of Switzer's top assistants — offensive coordinator Galen Hall and defensive line coach Rex Norris — left Oklahoma in February to take other college jobs.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Larry Farmer, whose third year as coach of UCLA was the Bruins' most dismal basketball season since 1965-66, said Friday he has agreed to a two-year extension of his contract.

UCLA Athletic Director Pete Dalis said the extension was offered "based on continuity and a good solid base." Dalis had given a vote of confidence to Farmer when the season ended two weeks ago, but Farmer reportedly asked for a guaranteed contract for three years.

Farmer said the extension through the 1986-87 season gives him "a measure of security" he sought. Details were worked out during a three-hour meeting Thursday with Dalis and UCLA Chancellor Charles Young. Although he agreed to terms, Farmer said Friday he had not formally signed, pending a review of contract language.

Farmer had one year remaining on his current contract with the school which won 10 NCAA basketball titles under Coach John Wooden, but none in the nine years since Wooden retired. Farmer served as an assistant under all three of his predecessors — Gene Bartow, Gary Cunningham and Larry Brown, each of whom left UCLA after two years.

UCLA dropped to a 17-11 record and a fourth-place finish in the Pac-10 conference this past season. The Bruins turned down a National Invitational Tournament bid, after they were not invited to the NCAA postseason tournament for the first time since 1966 — not counting a 1982 ban on UCLA postseason competition.

Farmer's previous teams had records of 21-6 in 1981-82, the probation year, and 23-6 in 1982-83.

Farmer was a UCLA forward in the 1971-73 NCAA championship years, when the team had an 89-1 overall record.

"There will be some changes in the program," Farmer said when asked about the future outlook for the Bruins, but he declined to go into specifics. It had been reported that he was asked to change his assistant coaches, and possibly hire former UCLA guard Walt Hazzard, now coaching at Chapman College.

"Any relationship between Larry and his assistant coaches is strictly his business," Dalis had said Thursday.

Farmer talked earlier this week with Hazzard, who played on the 1964 Bruin national championship team, but Hazzard said he had not been offered a job on Farmer's staff.

But Scott Hicks then worked free for a backdoor layup, starting the Irish on an eight-point run that included Howard's four free throws and built Notre Dame's lead to 68-56 with a minute remain-

ADJUSTING TO BIFOCALS

QUESTION: I recently started wearing bifocals and I can't seem to get used to them. Do you have any suggestions?

ANSWER: Many people have the same experience. It does take some adjustment to feel comfortable wearing bifocals and other multifocal lenses. You might try the following: 1) Don't look at your feet when walking; 2) Hold reading material closer to your body and lower your eyes so that you are reading out of the lowest part of the lens; 3) Remember to move your eyes, not your head; 4) Always make sure that eyeglass frames are properly positioned; 5) Wear your bifocals as much as possible during the breaking-in period, even though you may not need them for all tasks.

Some claim I'm the best there ever was. For 10 years, I was undefeated. That counts all distances — from 50 yards to half a mile. In all, I set 67 world records. When I retired, I became even more famous.

Parents teaching children at home growing fast

By SUSANA HAYWARD
Associated Press Writer
DALLAS (AP) — When twins Michael and David Schwalm were 7 years old, they asked their mother if they could stay home from school — forever.
It was a question Mary Schwalm had never given any thought. But after lengthy discussions with her husband, she agreed.
"They (the twins) were complaining that it was too noisy at school to do the things they wanted to do. They'd already done everything in the classroom and they wanted to stay home and work," Mrs. Schwalm said. "And so we decided to let them do it. It wasn't really my idea to start with."

Her twins, now 21, never went back to school, and Mrs. Schwalm has been their main educator. A former teacher, she said educating her children was a learning experience for her as well.
"Our values, our outlook and philosophy are pretty different from what you meet in public schools," she said. "It's not hard to be superior to the Dallas public schools."
At the time Michael and David asked to skip school, their main interest was history. They wanted to do research on the American Revolution, the Civil War and U.S. presidents, she said.

They claimed formal schooling in a crowded classroom wasn't quenching their thirst for knowledge or answering all their questions. And besides, their school's library was no match for the stacks of books lining the shelves in the family living room — or for Mrs. Schwalm's patient and genuine love of teaching.
"They'd rather be at home because they felt like they were wasting their time by having to spend five or six hours a day over there when they'd already done everything (at home)," she said.

Mrs. Schwalm, 44, said her twins were "unusual." By the time they were 3, they had taught themselves to read, she said.

Her younger children, Theodore, 15, and Hans, 13, also opted at an early age to follow in their brother's footsteps.

This was also not Mrs. Schwalm's idea.

From 1970 until 1975, Mrs. Schwalm, a math major at Southern Methodist University, and her husband Carl, an engineer for the LTV Corp., were administrators and teachers at the Montessori's Children House school in Dallas.

"I used to take Hans and Theodore over there (to the school) with me..." she said. "I thought maybe it would be good for them, that they would like going to school and I could just be a normal mother and take them to school and leave them there."

But it didn't work out that way, and in that respect, she never became a "normal mother."

With the exception of history, taught by an undergraduate student at the University of Dallas, Mrs. Schwalm has taught her children everything they know.

Her sons have never entered a classroom, except to study such extra-curricular subjects as fencing, judo, horse-back riding and swimming.

"The twins didn't have organized lessons until they were 12. We decided to have two hours every morning learning geometry, math, Latin, history and English grammar," she said.

She believes "teaching is easy," and that parents should have the right to educate their children at home.

"I don't think it's easy to be an interesting, exciting, stimulating teacher, but I think it's easy to teach people to learn skills and it's not much harder to help people understand concepts," she said.

Skills and concepts are Mrs. Schwalm's key words in her approach to educating.

"Subjects that require skills should be organized so that skills are made automatic before new ones are introduced," Mrs. Schwalm wrote, explaining her teaching methods in a letter to H. Ross Perot, the chairman of the Texas Committee on Education.

"The other academic problem in schools today is that of teaching concepts... For example having ridden in a car helps to understand the concept of inertia..." she continued. "The farther a concept is from everyday experience, the more necessary it becomes for the teacher to provide or suggest appropriate background experience for understanding it..."

Dr. William Richards, a psychiatrist and psychologist who is an education expert in Australia and lectures at U.S. universities, has no qualms with parents teaching their children at home, but believes that after a certain age, children should be exposed to other people.

"The best education is out in the world," Richards said. "If you don't break the maternal bond, it produces symbiotic psychosis. The only thing I'd argue with is the need to break the maternal bondage."

But Mrs. Schwalm doesn't believe her children have been socially deprived and she thinks her children have received a better education at home than they would have at a public school.

She is not alone. Ruth Canon, a certified teacher who has become a spokeswoman of sorts for home schools, estimates that about 1,000 other parents in Texas running classrooms at home.

School officials cannot confirm this. Figures are hard to come by because it is illegal for a child between the ages of 7 and 17 not to attend school unless there are medical reasons or they are enrolled in a parochial or private school.

Children educated at home are considered truant, but it is up to local school districts to take the parents to court.

Patrick Whelan, the Assistant General Counsel with the State Board of Education, said it is difficult to enforce the compulsory attendance law because it vaguely defines what constitutes a public school.

"There are peculiarities in the law," he said. "Private and parochial schools are not defined."

Advocates of home-schooling believe children not only get a better education at home, but they also develop closer ties with their family.

"I don't know of a child who is not doing phenomenally well in a home school," said Mrs. Canon, who has a teaching degree from Hardin-Simmons University in Abilene but became disillusioned with traditional education and strayed, becoming a staunch advocate of home schooling.

She says home was the "original school" and that now, "children get lost in the shuffle."

Mrs. Canon also teaches her four children at home and has recruited neighborhood children and parents to participate. Her home during the day is a modern-day rendition of the "little red school house," a community school where students of all ages learn together.

For example, one day Mrs. Canon might explain the concept of thermochemistry — the relationship of heat to chemical change — by tinkering in her kitchen with boiling water.

Mrs. Canon has nothing against teachers or public schools, she said, but against "people who control the philosophy of education."

Although parents like Mrs. Schwalm and Mrs. Canon are in no danger of becoming the norm because, as Mrs. Schwalm put it, "most parents would rather have their children at school," their numbers may grow.

The Texas Select Committee on Public Education recently voted to legalize home schooling, under close monitoring and meeting certain requirements.

The stipulations include that parents would have to pass the ninth grade test of the Texas Assessment of Basic Skills, register their children with their school district and have them take, and pass, the same standardized tests as other students in the district.

"The achievement test is the key," said Perot. "If they don't pass the achievement test, they would have to go to public schools."

One problem a child taught at home may encounter is getting into college, since many universities require graduation from an accredited high school. But that is entirely the school's option and in many cases, passing a high-school equivalency test (GED) is sufficient, school officials say.

Scott F. Healy, Director of Admissions at SMU, said his university would consider admitting students taught at home if they passed a GED exam.

"You have to ask how qualified a parent is to teach his or her child," Healy said, adding such a question would be addressed before an admissions committee.

"You never know in a case like this," Healy said. "You may miss an extremely bright student, so you look at each and everyone individually."

Women helping women

I like it when women take time to help other women. And it dismays me when women who should be role models for others are unwilling to be.

Luckily, there seems to be no shortage of superstars encouraging women to follow in their footsteps. They share advice and tell what they've learned on the path to the top.

Some, like Houston mayor Kathy Whitmire, even create jobs for women, "Because," as she has said, "there are a lot of women who can do good jobs."

Justice Florence Murray, first woman on Rhode Island's Supreme Court, urged women attorneys in a recent interview to go for judges' benches. She said, "The only limitations are the ones you put on yourselves."

Jane Evans, an executive vice president of General Mills Inc. is said to be one of only two U.S. female executives who handles a budget of more than $500 million. Yet she is known for her talks to women in middle management at General Mills. She tells them what corporations look for in female executives: "A sense of personal style, wit and warmth. Be tough-minded, but not hard-hearted." She thinks of herself as a role model.

The first woman to own a seat on the New York Stock Exchange, Muriel Siebert, is described as a financial wizard who likes salty language and bright colors. She owns her own brokerage firm and for five years (1977-1982) was New York state's superintendent of banks.

An outspoken women's advocate as well, she feels a responsibility to other women and lectures at business schools, repeating her message: "Be money-minded."

The style of these women differs sharply from Karen Horn, a woman with an equally impressive record in economics and banking — but who doesn't want to be a role model or talk about her breakthroughs as a woman in finance.

Ms. Horn is president of Cleveland's Federal Reserve Bank, first woman to head one of the system's 12 regional banking institutions. Her appointment was announced in March 1982, when she was treasurer of Bell Telephone of Pennsylvania. She was 38 at the time, and four months away from giving birth to her first child.

Before Bell, she had been vice president of First National Bank of Boston. And before that, she was an economist with the Federal Reserve System in Washington, while working on a Ph.D. at Johns Hopkins University.

She recently withdrew her name from consideration by President Reagan to replace Nancy Hays Teeters on the Federal Reserve Board.

'Patels' own more motels in Texas than anyone else

Motel business home for many India immigrants

By SCOTT McCARTNEY
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) — The Patels don't have a worldwide reservations system with a toll-free number. They don't have bright signs in front of their motels, and they don't advertise.

But were they related — they aren't — they would outnumber Holiday Inn by 3 to 1 in Texas, 429 to 133.

Most towns have at least one. In fact, more motels in Texas are owned by people named "Patel" — a very common surname in India — than anyone else.

Yet few American travelers have ever heard the name. And few have ever stayed in a Patel-owned establishment.

"It truly is a phenomenon," says Herb Wilson, president of the Texas Hotel-Motel Association.

Federal immigration officials say the phenomenon is not all coincidence. East Indians flocked to Texas, the deep South and parts of California when the law allowed immigrants to "buy" United States residency with only a $10,000 investment in a business, such as a motel.

According to state tax receipt records, nearly 14 percent of all non-chain motels and hotels in the state are owned by someone named Patel. Counting the chains, more than 11 percent of all motels and hotels have owners with the Patel name.

Records show Patels almost always own 15- to 50-room, aging motels or hotels away from highways, usually on the seamer side of town, that cater to the poor, the elderly or the transient. They usually have gross taxable receipts of less than $20,000 annually.

An Associated Press study of state hotel occupancy tax accounts for the period ending June 30, 1983 found that about one-third of the motels listed in Amarillo, Big Spring, Bryan, Killeen, Marshall, Odessa and Wichita Falls are owned by Patels.

Half of the motels in Denison, Mexia, Haltom City, Hamilton and Liberty are Patel-owned. In seven towns they own the only two local hotels, the only hotel in 25 towns and two of three in 11 towns.

Thirteen of the 61 hotels and motels in Fort Worth, five of 17 in Lufkin and 30 of 162 in Dallas are Patel-owned. In Abilene, it's six of 31; in Longview, it's five of 24.

In Houston, however, only three of the 287 hotels are Patel-owned, and in San Antonio, the figures are 12 of 143.

"It doesn't mean we are all related. It's (Patel) like Smith and Jones in this country," said Ray Patel, owner of the Last Frontier Motel, one of eight Patel-owned motels on a 21-block strip on Dallas' south side.

Patels say they immigrate to the United States and purchase small hotels to operate because it instantly gives them, and their families, both jobs and a home.

"We are a family growing up and we have the language problem very much," said Patel. "In this business, language is not very necessary. If you have a little bit, you can explain to customers."

Economics are in their favor because 40 percent of the cost of operating lodging is labor and most owners of run-down, out-of-the-way hotels are eager to sell, said Wilson.

But Ron Chandler, director of the Dallas office of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, says there is more to the Patel population.

Thousands of Indians, many of them with the Patel surname, entered the United States and established residence by making a $10,000 investment in a business — a motel or hotel.

"Ten thousand dollars entitled you to permanent residence status, and the Patels would buy and then sell to one of their relatives," said Chandler.

"Then the law was changed and the investment was upped to $40,000. But that didn't stop them. Then two years ago the investment statute was thrown out," he said.

Since then, Chandler said, "the Patel-motel syndrome or phenomenon has kind of died out as far as we're concerned. It peaked in the late '70s. We now have no open Patel cases in this office."

The law was changed, he said, because "it was being abused not only by Patels but in all types of businesses."

Ray Patel, who was a farmer in India, said his family and many of the Patel families in Texas came from the Gujarat state in India. He came at the urging of his brother, who operates a motel in San Francisco.

"When they (relatives) visit (in India), we ask them 'What did you do?' They say 'We are in hotel and motel business,' and they give us a little idea," he said.

Patel said he, like most Patels, spent most of his savings on the move and the motel, and struggles to make ends meet after about six years in Texas.

"Business is OK," he said, although his gross taxable revenues from the Last Frontier last year were listed at only $4,157.

"Most owners of these hotels want to get rid of them," said Wilson of the San Antonio-based Texas Hotel-Motel Association. "They are run-down and not making much money and the owners will take a down payment and carry the paper."

Most old, 50-room hotels would sell for $100,000, he said. A 10 percent down payment would meet the old INS requirements for investment.

"Most of these people have large families. I know of one case in Lubbock where the old owner had to have six employees and this Patel came in with a family of 10. He can operate it without much cost and make enough to make a payment."

Patels made news in San Francisco when a Patel-owned hotel was cited for substandard conditions in a highly publicized local case. Investigators found Patels owned more property in San Francisco than officials realized.

And in the East Texas town of Gilmer last fall, hotel owner G.M. Patel allegedly shot and killed his wife and three children, and then wounded himself as a Department of Public Safety trooper closed in.

Gilmer Police Chief Bill Wells found an address book in G.M. Patel's apartment in the Upshur House Hotel and began calling the Patels listed.

"We found a lot of Patels but we didn't find any kinfolk," Wells recalled. "We must have called 30 Patels all over the country before we quit. Most of them said they were just acquaintances or they knew him."

The cremated ashes of the wife and children were sent to relatives in India, Wells said. Patel is currently undergoing a court-ordered psychiatric evaluation in Rusk State Hospital.

SPS redoubling efforts to help customers prevent waste of energy

Southwestern Public Service Company (SPS) is redoubling efforts to help customers prevent waste of electrical energy.

The SPS program supports the "State of Texas Residential Energy-Cost-Control Program" announced by Texas Governor Mark White last week in Lubbock. Goal of the program is to help Texans control residential utility costs.

State of Texas and local government agencies, energy suppliers such as SPS, and community organizations are joining the statewide, voluntary, cooperative program. Staff members of the governor's office and of the Public Utility Commission of Texas (PUCT) are coordinating the effort. The PUCT regulates electric utilities in Texas.

"The most effective way to control costs of energy in a home," said Gary Gibson, SPS vice president, marketing and administration, "is to avoid waste of energy. We at Southwestern Public Service Company have always encouraged our customers to use all of the electricity they need—but not to waste it.

"We're hoping that the new Texas Residential Energy-Cost-Control Program will help us spotlight that message."

Gibson noted that the State of Texas will promote the program. White will be featured in the promotional effort.

As a complement to the state's advertising, Gibson said, "SPS is developing special public service announcements that will offer tips on using electrical energy wisely, and on avoiding waste of energy."

"We're also offering various programs on energy-cost control. The presentations will be available to civic groups, schools, senior citizens, church groups, etcetera. For instance, the SPS speakers' bureau has prepared a new program on conservation. Its theme,

"Wrapping Up Your Home," emphasizes proven methods of saving energy." SPS home economists and marketing representatives also will present informational programs on preventing waste of energy, Gibson said.

Customers who see the SPS presentations will be given energy-cost-control packets containing "draft stoppers" that fit behind electric outlet covers and prevent air infiltration. The conservation "starter kits" also will contain shower-water "flow restricters," Gibson said.

Southwestern Public Service also will offer "walk-through audits" of homes the company serves. The "walk-through audits," by either SPS personnel or volunteers from local community groups, will help residential customers identify energy-loss trouble spots in their homes.

The company already offers customers extensive home energy audits, called Residential Conservation Service (RCS) audits. RCS audits in Texas cost $15; the "walk-through audits" will be free of charge. SPS recommends RCS audits to anyone planning extensive home remodeling.

The "walk-through" energy auditor will point out ways the customer can control energy losses—and thereby, control the cost of heating or cooling a home, Gibson said. The auditor also would install the energy-saving outlet "draft stoppers," or perhaps weatherstrip a door for the customer, if asked to do so.

Civic groups, senior citizens groups such as RSVP, and church groups are being contacted for potential volunteers for the program, he said. SPS will train the "walk-through audit" volunteers.

The company also will participate in a statewide "telephone energy-talk" program. Customers interested in energy-cost savings can dial a toll-free number, request information on a particular "energy-savings" topic, then listen to a pre-recorded message.

Brochures on energy savings will continue to be available in local SPS business offices, Gibsons aid. "We have a lot of excellent brochures already available in our local offices. SPS has been encouraging wise use of energy for a long time."

The company is offering the "residential energy-cost-control program" information not only to SPS customers, but also to area customers of other energy suppliers, for instance, to customers of rural electric cooperatives, Gibson said. "We hope to help inform everyone in our service area about energy savings."

SPS primarily provides electrical service to a population of more than one million in a 70,000-square-mile area in the Panhandle and south plains of Texas, eastern and southeastern New Mexico, the Oklahoma Panhandle, and southwestern Kansas.

Texans interested in participating in the program—as customers or as volunteers—should contact a local SPS business office.

Reception is held at Wildorado

Concerns about the low visibility of law enforcement in the northeastern part of Deaf Smith County were expressed Wednesday night during a reception for sheriff candidate Dean Butcher at the Wildorado Community Center.

This according to a report by his campaign manager, Mary Parker.

Those in attendance told Butcher they would like to see their area patrolled more often, as there has been an increase in burglaries in recent years.

Butcher replied that if elected he intends to set up a crime watch program for outlying areas of the county, similar to the Neighborhood Watch already implemented in Hereford.

Butcher also answered questions about sheriff department travel expense, jail management and the work release program.

The reception was hosted by Mr. and Mrs. Roddy Allred and Mr. and Mrs. Warren Miller.

An ice cream social to honor the telephone committee of Butcher's campaign staff was held Friday night at the home of Gerald and Mary Parker, and another reception is set for Monday night at 7:30 at the Oldham County Country Club.

Bill would make it more costly to import pork from Canada

By DON KENDALL AP Farm Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — A bill introduced in Congress would make it more costly to import hogs and pork products from Canada; items that Corn Belt farmers say compete unfairly with U.S. producers.

The measure was introduced Wednesday by Reps. Tom Harkin and Berkley Bedell, Iowa Democrats and members of the House Agriculture Committee. Iowa is the leading pork state.

Imports of pork and live hogs have grown steadily for years, partly because Canadian farmers have been encouraged to boost production by government subsidies.

An aide to Harkin, Pam McKinney, said the bill would enable the United States to determine the extent of the Canadian subsidies to farmers and then impose offsetting U.S. import fees on hogs and pork products.

Ms. McKinney said a recent report by the Agriculture Department outlined the problem with Canadian imports and that "it was basically this report, plus complaints from Iowa hog producers" that led Harkin and Bedell to write their bill.

The report, Canadian-U.S. Pork Trade, was written by William J. Mills of the USDA's Foreign Agricultural Service.

"Canada is almost the sole supplier of imported fresh, chilled and frozen pork, as well as live hogs to the United States," the report said. "Canada and the United States have enjoyed a long history of relatively free trade in pork. This, along with similar production techniques and type of product produced ... have stimulated significant trade."

Since 1960, the balance of pork trade — including live animals — has shifted six times between the two countries, with the United States having an advantage in some years, Canada in others.

"However, it now appears that the trade will not shift again in favor of the United States in the near or medium term," the report said. "Since 1977, the Canadians have increased the value of their exports of pork and pork products to the United States and have been a net exporter since 1979."

The main reason that the trade will not shift back to the United States "is the substantial increase in pork production, particularly in Quebec province," the report said. Further, Canada also has a transportation advantage over shipments to the Pacific Northwest and Northeast from the Midwest and South.

Currently, live swine and fresh pork move across the border free of duties. Prepared or preserved products from Canada carry a U.S. import duty of 1 to 3 cents a pound, while Canadian duties on U.S. products between 1 cent per pound and 15 percent of their value.

However, Canada restricts the entry of live hogs from the United States because of a potential problem with pseudorabies, a swine disease. The United States does not have a comparable restriction on Canadian hogs.

The report said U.S. imports of live hogs from Canada increased from 43,000 head in 1977 to 295,000 in 1982. Shipments of fresh pork increased from 2,806 metric tons to 45,373 tons in the same five-year period. A metric ton is about 2,205 pounds.

"Canadian hog production appears to have peaked," the report said. "The Quebec government, which emphasized hog production as a social (stay-on-the-farm) endeavor, has recognized a water pollution problem."

But, overall, it said, the major reasons for the growth in Canadian hog output "can be accounted for by actions of the federal and provincial governments" to provide subsidies.

Canadian hog farmers in 1981 received an average payment of $1,793 under the subsidy program, the report said. A producer could collect on a maximum of 5,000 hogs, or an average of $8.96 per hog.

Although it appears Canadian hog production has leveled off, pork "will continue to be in surplus" for some time, the report said.

Russia buys more corn for this year

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department says the Soviet Union has bought an additional 400,000 metric tons of U.S. corn — about 15.8 million bushels — for delivery this year under a new long-term agreement that took effect last Oct. 1.

Under terms of the pact, the Soviets now have bought well above the minimum amount of grain required of them in 1983-84.

The sale was reported to the department by private exporters, as required by law. No prices or other details were disclosed. However, the department says the latest estimated farm price of corn is $3.38 per bushel.

A metric ton is about 2,205 pounds and is equal to 39.4 bushels of corn or 36.7 bushels of wheat or soybeans.

Thus, the latest sales would have an estimated U.S. farm value of about $53.4 million.

So far, counting the new sales announced Wednesday, the Soviets have bought nearly 9.55 million tons of wheat and corn under terms of the new agreement.

Texas farmers stake claims

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP)—Texas farmers are staking their claim on another crop season, with planting operations gaining momentum to usher in the spring season, says Dr. Zerle L. Carpenter, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

About 95 percent of the corn and grain sorghum acreage has been planted in South Texas, where cotton planting ranges from 50 to 75 percent complete, Carpenter said. Corn also is about 95 percent planted in the Coastal Bend while about 75 percent of grain sorghum and about 65 percent of cotton are planted.

Most irrigated corn and grain sorghum has been planted in Southwest Texas, but dryland farmers there are waiting for rain to plant.

Some early rice planting has started along the Upper Coast, and corn and grain sorghum planting is under way in that region where fields are not too wet, Carpenter said. Wet fields also have hindered corn and grain sorghum planting in parts of North Central and Northeast Texas.

Low soil temperatures also are slowing some planting operations. For good seed germination, soil temperatures at the 4-inch depth should average (for a week) 50 degrees F. for corn, 55 for grain sorghum and 65 for cotton, Carpenter said.

The past week's soil temperature averages as compiled by the Southwest Agricultural Weather Service Center at Texas A&M University were as follows: Austin, 62 degrees F.; Beaumont, 68; Beeville, 72; College Station, 74; Dilley, 80; Eagle Lake, 69; Haskell, 61; Lavon Dam (near Dallas), 58; Longview, 62; Lubbock, 58; Lufkin, 63; Pecos, 61; San Angelo, 66; Stephenville, 64; Uvalde, 71; Waco, 64; and Weslaco, 73.

Land preparation remains active in western areas and the plains, with potatoes and onions being planted in the Panhandle and South Plains and sugar beet planting starting.

Livestock conditions are improving slowly over the state, Carpenter noted, with some green grazing becoming available. However, supplemental feeding remains active in most parts, particularly in western areas where dry conditions are hampering the recovery of ranges and pastures from a severe winter.

Reports from district Extension directors showed these conditions.

PANHANDLE: Irrigated wheat is making good progress but the dryland crop needs rain. Most cattle have been moved off wheat to allow a grain crop. Farmers are continuing to get land in shape for spring planting. Some onions and potatoes are being planted in Deaf Smith County and sugar beet planting is about to start. Cattle feeding continues and marketings are heavy.

SOUTH PLAINS: Land preparation is in full swing as farmers get ready for another crop season. Planting of onions and potatoes continues, and sugar beet planting is about to start. Irrigated wheat is doing well but the dryland crop is suffering from lack of moisture. Some feeding of range cattle continues.

ROLLING PLAINS: Scattered rains have given a boost to wheat in some locations, but most of the crop could use additional moisture. Most cattle have been moved off wheat to allow a grain crop. Farmers are getting cotton land ready to plant. Livestock and range conditions are improving and lambing is under way. Stock ponds are still low in some counties.

NORTH CENTRAL: Wheat is making good growth with recent rains. Most corn has been planted, with early fields up. Farmers are starting to plant grain sorghum. Most livestock are in good shape, with supplemental feeding decreasing as grazing conditions improve.

NORTHEAST: Recent rains have boosted wheat growth but have delayed planting of corn, grain sorghum and vegetables. Cattle conditions are improving, with clovers and ryegrass providing good grazing. Stock ponds are full. Early peach trees are blooming.

FAR WEST: Farmers are continuing with land preparation for spring planting. Home gardening activities are increasing with the spring season. Range conditions remain poor due to lack of moisture and the severe winter, so livestock feeding continues. Some lambs are moving to market.

WEST CENTRAL: Dry conditions are hampering the wheat crop as well as the recovery of ranges. Stock water is low in most counties. Livestock are in fair to good shape, with supplemental feeding continuing. However, marketings likely will increase if rain doesn't come soon. Spring lambing is active. Farmers are continuing to prepare land for spring planting of row crops and hay.

More electronic marketing of ag products being studied

WASHINGTON (AP)—Although there are some disadvantages, greater use of computers and video electronics could result in a variety of benefits to both farmers and consumers, says a new General Accounting Office report.

But federal officials say it is too early to tell whether Congress or regulatory agencies should become more involved in electronic marketing of agricultural commodities.

"The benefits include improved market information, increased market efficiency, increased competition, and increased access to the market for both buyers and sellers," the GAO said.

A number of pilot projects, financed at least in part by the Agriculture Department, have been used to study "electronic marketing" of commodities in recent years. Instead of farmers having to sell livestock at a local auction, for example, bidders from over a much larger area can compete.

"Generally, these projects were designed to test the feasibility of using a network of computer terminals to market various commodities," the report said. "Projects involved the trading of wholesale meat products, feeder cattle, hogs, lambs and eggs. One study examined the possibility of selling corn, soybeans, peanuts, pecans, cattle and hogs on a single, computerized marketing system."

The GAO, an investigative agency of Congress, was asked to look into electronic marketing by Rep. Parren J. Mitchell, D-Md., chairman of the House Small Business Committee.

"Overall, the projects demonstrated that agricultural commodities can be traded electronically and that electronic marketing is a feasible alternative to current marketing systems," the report said.

"The studies also showed, however, that to be successful and economically viable, trading volume must be sufficient to cover the fixed and operating costs of an electronic market as well as attract and keep traders in the system."

One of the characteristics of electronic markets is their capability to generate information. Trading is by standardized description and operating procedures rather than by personal inspection and individual negotiations.

"Therefore, standardized information on product offerings and terms of trade is readily available to buyers and sellers, and can be closely related to prices received for the product," the report said. "Market information can be summarized and delivered almost instantly, and it can be done automatically for a large number of trades."

Moreover, the report said, transportation costs are typically less in an electronic market than in most conventional marketing systems such as terminal and auction markets where products and buyers assemble in one location.

But there are problems, including concerns that some products cannot be adequately described electronically. Also of concern is the loss of personal interchange between buyers and sellers.

"Another problem is that some potential users are unwilling to participate or see no advantage in participating," the report said.

Accent on Agriculture

By DENNIS W. NEWTON
County Extension Agent

The moisture received this past week was welcomed by everyone. The moisture varied in Deaf Smith county, with the northwest part receiving the most. Reports ranged from .80 inch to .20 inch. Any more would be taken.

Perhaps the rain allowed the dryland wheat a few more days reprieve. The wheat crop looks good considering the lack of winter moisture. If we can just get some more rain we can still have a good wheat crop in 1984.

Dryland farmers are invited to attend a Dryland Crop Symposium on Wednesday, March 28, at the Texas A&M University Research and Extension Center, located at 6500 Amarillo Boulevard West, in Amarillo. The program will begin at 9:30 a.m.

The program will start with a history of dryland research being given by Dr. B.A. Steuart, Director of the USDA Research Laboratory at Bushland. The Keynote speaker will be Arnold King from the Soil Conservation Service Technical Center in Fort Worth, who will discuss "Controlling Erosion of Dryland."

Dr. Pau Ungar, USDA soil scientist, will discuss research showing the value of stored water for crop yields. Reggie Jones, USDA researcher, will discuss his research on keeping water on the land with furrow dikes and mini-benches. Ron Allen, USDA agricultural engineer, will round out the morning program by discussing herbicides and machinery for minimum tillage.

The afternoon program will feature a presentation of fertilization by Dr. Harold Eck, USDA soil scientist. Dr. Kenneth Porter, a noted wheat breeder with the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station, will discuss wheat varieties for dryland. Dr. J.R. Quinby, the Texas A&M University scientist that developed hybrid sorghum, will discuss dryland grain sorghum production.

Dr. Frank Petr, agronomist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, will present ideas for production of alternative crops. Insect and weed control programs will be covered by Drs. Carl Patrick, TAEX entomologist and Allen Wiese, TAES Weed Scientist.

The program will be rounded out by Dr. John McNeill, TAES beef cattle specialist, who will discuss cattle management on dryland farms and Dr. Wyatt Harman, research agricultural economist, who will discuss the economics of dryland farming.

This dryland crop symposium is jointly sponsored by the Texas Agricultural Experiment Service, USDA Agricultural Research Service and the Soil Conservation Service.

Takes triple crown of Texas steer shows

Stanton girl earns $236,000

EDITOR'S NOTE — A few weeks ago, a special young lady made history. And hardly anybody noticed.

By MIKE COCHRAN
Associated Press Writer
STANTON, Texas (AP) — At 14, honey blonde Kody Newman is a typical small town eighth-grader, an honor student and cheerleader who also rodeos, runs track and plays basketball.

That's in her spare time. The youngest member of a prosperous West Texas ranching family, Kody also raises show steers for fun and profit and in 1984 there's been an abundance of both.

In what appears to be an historic first, Kody's animals won the Triple Crown of Texas steer shows this winter and also picked up a world class championship trophy in Colorado.

Along the way, she earned a record $236,000. "I'm saving that money," she smiled one recent evening after school. "When I get old enough, maybe I'll buy me a car."

A Rolls Royce perhaps? Regardless, she's more concerned now with a deaf cat named Taffy, a bulldog named Daisy, a cattle dog named Cowboy, a border collie named Tootie and a bird dog named Speck.

There's also an Australian hound named Bo, 15 unnamed goats and a tomcat called Pearl: "Pearl was supposed to be a girl," Kody explained.

When not showing steers or riding herd on that menagerie, she ropes and rides barrels in the American Junior Rodeo Association. She was a runner-up for the symbolic silver belt buckle as a 12-year-old and, in 1983, the national champion in optional roping for girls 13 through 15.

"She's remarkable," whispered her mother, Marilyn, in the only breach of parental restraint the entire evening. "You'd never know she won a thing."

Aside from all else, the showing of grand champion steers at Fort Worth, San Antonio and Houston in the same year compares favorably to horse racing's Triple Crown and the Grand Slams of golf and tennis popularized by the likes of Jack Nicklaus and John McEnroe.

By necessity, Kody won her triple with three different steers. Grand champions are sold at auction and ordinarily their last hurrah is as beefsteak in carcass competition.

And that's a bummer, con- tains Kody, who says its he: breaking to surrender her prize animals for slaughter.

"It's really hard," she said, "like taking your pet dog and just giving it away."

"Yeah, but a quarter-million dollars is fairly nice consolation," quipped a reporter, a little too cleverly. "I guess so..." she said coolly, her brownish-green eyes flashing him a look that would shatter glass and probably steel and seemed to suggest he was as callous as he was insensitive and by all means an old fool.

Whatever, Kody bought her three prize winners as calves at her father's annual sale a year ago in March, and spent months grooming and training them for the 1984 stock show competition.

"We thought the calves were good," she said, "but you never can tell if you're going to win or not."

In mid-January, her favorite steer, E.F., a 1,250-pound Chianina, won a so-called jackpot futurity and $5,000 at Denver in what is billed as the National Western Stock Show.

Later that month, E.T. was judged the grand champion of the Southwestern Exposition and Fat Stock Show in Fort Worth and sold at auction for $45,000.

In February, a 1,235-pound Maine-Anjou named Roller won the grand championship of the San Antonio Livestock Exposition and brought Kody $36,000.

Now on an incredible roll, Kody headed south to the Houston Livestock Show and Rodeo, the richest and most prestigious of all.

"Everybody's goal is to win at Houston," she said. "I thought I had a shot, but I didn't know."

Her parents learned it had been more than 20 years since anyone had even had a chance at a Triple Crown, and that time the bubble burst in a loss at Houston.

"Houston was nerve-racking," said Marilyn, whose family had shown steers for half a century.

Kody's entry was a 1,245-pound Limousin named Ringer and, as Tommy Newman, her father, recalled later, "We just happened to be at the right place at the right time with the right man."

The right man was the judge who gave Ringer the traditional slap on the rump signifying a grand champion. Suddenly Kody had made steer show history.

"I couldn't believe it," she said. "Nobody had ever done that before."

Ringer brought a world record $150,000 at auction and Kody, for all practical purposes, was a steer show has-been at 14. Grand champion winners can not compete again in the two biggies, Fort Worth and Houston.

"How does it feel to be washed up at 14," the reporter wondered.

"It's a good way to retire," Kody laughed.

Wind erosion has damaged more than million acres

COLLEGE STATION — Wind erosion has damaged more than a million acres of Texas cropland and rangeland the past few months, and it is still early in the "blow season." Conditions undoubtedly will become worse this spring.

"Current cropping systems in many areas just do not provide the needed protection to prevent soil erosion by wind," said Dr. B.L. Harris, soils specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System.

Wind erosion is a problem primarily in western, central and southwestern sections of Texas and does its worst damage to croplands, Harris said.

"The most serious lasting damage from erosion is the separation and removal of silt, clay and organic matter from the surface, leaving only infertile and blowing sand," Harris explained. "The blowing sand piles up in dunes, causing loss of productive land, covering fences, equipment and buildings, and damaging crops." To control wind erosion, a combination of practices is most effective, with conservation tillage systems offering good potential for many erosion-prone soils, said the specialist.

A rough surface—the ridges and depressions formed by tillage—goes a long way in battling wind erosion, Harris noted. Roughness, at an optimum height of 2 to 5 inches, reduces wind surface velocity and traps sand particles.

"Cloddiness," the relative abundance of firm and stable aggregates of soil material resistant to erosion, also serves as a barrier to wind erosion. More than half the soil surface should be protected by large clods.

"Both cloddiness and surface roughness can be affected by the type of tillage equipment used," Harris said. "Equipment which inverts the soil covers surface residue. Disk-type plows cover more residue and destroy soil clods more than sweep-type plows. Disks also create greater compaction pans than sweep plows.

"Vegetative cover is the best and most effective technique to control wind erosion," Harris claimed. "The protection afforded by cover, either living or dead, depends on the size and quantity of residue. For example, wheat stubble is more effective than sorghum or corn stubble."

Erosion increases as field length increases, so the length should be reduced along the prevailing wind direction with barriers or windbreaks, or by planting perpendicular to the prevailing wind. A windbreak will protect an area equal to 10 times the height of the barrier, the specialist pointed out.

Research is being conducted on the use of terbars to reduce wind erosion. Terbars are small terrace barriers planted with a perennial plant—such as lovegrass, cleingrass and Alamo switchgrass—on the top ridge. This technique has proven to be very effective in reducing erosion and maintaining yields, and its use is expected to expand.

Information is available from several agencies to assist farmers and ranchers in dealing with wind erosion problems. Among those agencies are the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas Agricultural Experiment Station, Soil and Water Conservation Board and Districts, Soil Conservation Service, Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, and Agricultural Research Service. SCS is the agency with primary responsibility for providing information and technical assistance for erosion control.

YOU MAY HAVE TO GIVE A LOOK AT NEW HYBRIDS for increasing your corn yield this year, according to two corn scientists at the University of Illinois. They even provide a couple of tips for selecting the right hybrid. First, they say, "forget 1983 results". Unless, that is, you had a normal to good growing season. New hybrids should be selected from 1981 and 1982 data. Last year's weather, they assert, was too extreme to be a good indicator of yield. Second, hybrid trials should be carefully studied from information obtained from public, private and commercial tests plots in the area. Look for the most consistent performers in two or more average to good seasons. Harvest dates and lodging cores should also be checked carefully. And, they advise, consult your dealer.

Lufkin woman describes battle with agoraphobia

By DIANA HILL Lufkin News

LUFKIN, Texas (AP) — "Mommy, I'm so scared; I'm so afraid. I feel all alone and totally out of control. I feel like I'm going to die. Please, Mommy help me."

A frightened 3-year-old? No, that is the cry of a middle-age, well-educated, successful woman.

Maxine Dudley, a former Lufkinite now living in Denton, has agoraphobia. Dictionaries define it as a morbid fear of open spaces or, literally from its Greek root, a fear of the marketplace. But that definition is incomplete, according to Mrs. Dudley.

"Agoraphobia is a fear of recurring fear," she said. "It is a severe and incapacitating anxiety occurring when the sufferer leaves the safety of home, or is alone, driving a car, flying, being in crowded places or anyplace where the sufferer may see himself or herself as being trapped and not in control of a situation."

At age 19 Mrs. Dudley had her first attack.

"I had been shopping downtown, and I was walking down First Street. All of a sudden my heart started beating very fast; I started trembling and perspiring. I felt nauseated," she recalled as if it was yesterday. "I walked into Cavanaugh-Peden Drug Store and asked someone to call my mother. I didn't know what was happening to me."

It was after many attacks, and many years later before Mrs. Dudley was to discover what was the matter with her.

"My mother took me to one medical doctor after another and one psychologist after another and one minister after another," Mrs. Dudley said. "No one could tell me what was the matter. I thought I was going crazy."

She did marry at the age of 23, but the marriage didn't last. One of the reasons, she explained, was the anxiety and fear became so overwhelming.

"I felt like I was dying inside, but I was too scared to die," she said. Once she spent three months at Woodland Heights Hospital. She felt safe there. She didn't want to leave her room.

"Without the support of nurses and several friends, like 'Mudder' Murray, Wanda Newsom and Marie Burns, I don't know what would have happened to me," Mrs.

Dudley said. "They stayed by my side even though they didn't know how to help me."

Finally, in 1980 Mrs. Dudley got her first glimpse at hope and understanding. "I was at home reading the newspaper and half listening to an interview program on television," she said. "The person being interviewed was talking about herself. Tears started streaming down my face. My God, I said, she is describing me. The woman said, 'what I have is agoraphobia.'"

"I had an answer. At least maybe I could try to get on the road to recovery. I don't know if agoraphobics will ever be totally cured, but there is help."

Not only is Mrs. Dudley receiving help, she has dedicated the rest of her life to giving it to other agoraphobics. She has given up her position as a journalist who has worked on several newspapers, write freelance articles for magazines and taught at North Texas State University in Denton.

Mrs. Dudley has started a research institute on agoraphobia. For more information about the disease call her at 817-565-9044 or write P.O. Box 22115, TWU Station, Denton, Texas 76204-2115.

A Lufkin counselor, Debra Taylor, says agoraphobia is probably more common than many people realize. It can be successfully treated once it is identified, she said.

"The agoraphobic is stuck in the position of responding to the fear as a child would. After we get to the bottom of it, we picture the situation from an adult point of view. We change their perspective," Mrs. Taylor said.

Agoraphobia also can be treated by systematic desensitization.

"We arrange in hierarchy the most fearful thing to the least fearful thing," Mrs.

Taylor said. "The client pictures themselves in the least fearful situation first learning to relax and conquer the fear. This can be done in two ways — by visual imagery or by assigning actual tasks to perform. Like first going to the front door and opening it then graduating to going outside."

Manning recognized by 'folks' across country

By LINDA CAUDLE
Lifestyles Editor

People (or "folks," the term this personable speaker, author and counselor is more apt to use) from all over the country appreciate the wit and humor as well as keen spiritual insight of Hereford resident Doug Manning.

Locally, outside of the First Baptist church, where Manning served as pastor for nine years (until 1982), he is possibly most often recognized as an emcee for the Chamber of Commerce fun breakfasts held several times a year, something he has done for about eight years.

He has also been involved in a number of community fund raisers and is currently directing the drive for the Hereford Senior Citizens building fund.

Manning has authored four books, the latest released in February by Prentice-Hall Inc. and available in bookstores across the United States.

"With God on Your Side" has already been selected Book of the Month by Word Book Club. It deals with discovering self-worth through total faith.

"That's the basic theology that I've preached for years, so when I was approached about writing another book, I felt like that's what I wanted in print," he remarked. "I had always intended to write that book."

"Basically, self-worth (as established in us by God) is the key that unlocks all the rest of what Christianity is about. I think the way the gospel works is it establishes a sense of value or worth — if seen in the right way — which then affects everything we do and are."

Manning's original title for the book was to be "Everything you Always Wanted to Know About Religion but Were too Bored to Ask." "I like that one better," he mused.

The three earlier books, published and marketed through his own local company, In-Sight Books Inc., grew out of his own experiences in ministering to those dealing with grief.

His first publication, "A Minister Speaks About Funerals," explains his practice of holding a private family time prior to funerals and how, if this is not done, some things are often left unsaid and undone.

This booklet led to another more general book on the subject of death and grief. "Don't Take my Grief Away From Me," an explanation of the grief process, provides practical steps for coping during these difficult times.

A third publication, "When Love Gets Tough," is concerned with the nursing home decision. "It is startling to people when they are put in a nursing home," he stated. "They go through a grief experience, having to deal with many of the same feelings as in other types of grief."

"There is usually about a two year adjustment period. The families are also involved in this process, often having to deal with a sense of guilt."

Manning recently took part in a seminar in the Northeast which was concerned with the spiritual needs of persons in rest homes. "A national meeting on this subject is being planned," he said.

Manning's first three books have all sold between 40,000 and 50,000 copies, and he is presently in the process of enlarging the funeral home and nursing home booklets to full-size books.

In addition to authoring these works, he writes a weekly column in The Hereford Brand entitled "The Penultimate Word" which is a press award winner.

During his 30 years pastoring churches in Texas and Oklahoma, Manning became involved in counseling, which he continues to do one or two days a week, between speaking engagements and writing.

He is head of the Family Growth Center in Hereford, which is also home base for In-Sight Books.

Manning travels out of town to address various groups and lead seminars and conferences about one-third of the time in winter, and he spends nearly half his time traveling to other parts of the country during the summer months.

He speaks to church groups, civic organizations, singles, college students, young married couples, funeral directors, senior citizens, and to societies like Compassionate Friends, for parents who've lost their children, and THEOS, an organization for people who've lost their mates.

The local office staff books these engagements, as well as counseling sessions, and fills and ships book orders, designs advertising campaigns for his first three books, and sends out direct mail campaigns.

Barbara Hardin is employed as office secretary and Manning's wife, Barbara, also works in the office. His youngest daughter, Sandra Roberts, who is children's coordinator at First Baptist Church, helps in the office part-time.

The Mannings are also the parents of three other daughters, Glenda Wells, who resides in Oklahoma City; Cindy Jones of Tulsa, Okla.; and Kathy Burns of Kansas City, Mo.

Airy is look of season

NEW YORK (NEA) — Trends in women's fashions have brought crisp, airy looks to little girls' spring clothes, whether classic or influenced by "flashdance" and Japanese touches. Fashion excitement has given girls fresh, new dresses and costumes to add to their sport separates.

With this year's late Easter, designers have created jacket ensembles with spare, clean detailing to go with summer wardrobes as well. One look is the classic nautical outfit. Dorissa's navy middy top has a red-trimmed sailor collar and tie, and two gold buttons at the cropped hemline. It goes over a red-trimmed, white-pleated skirt; both top and skirt are Kodol polyester.

At Florence Eiseman, the Easter costume begins with a raspberry rayon/flax sundress, banded in white at the square neck, bow-trimmed waist and hem, to match a puff-sleeved hipbone jacket. Miss Nannette uses off-center detailing on a side-buttoned, waist-length cream jacket in a linen-look blend with one double-layered lapel, its under layer matching the tobacco color in the block plaid of the dress's gathered skirt.

Another short jacket is the bolero in royal blue linen for Sylvia Whyte's ensemble. It goes over a white dress, whose blue neckline yoke is accented by overlapping diamond appliques in red, royal and white, with the waistline sashed in royal. Yves St. Laurent likes the soft, short look in a shoulder-yoked blouson jacket over a sleeveless

Book informs Texans of wildflowers

AUSTIN (AP) — A new book on wildflowers tells of a moth and plant who can't live without each other and bumblebees who perhaps stayed past a flower's closing time and got locked in for the night.

"Texas Wildflowers: A Field Guide" will introduce Texans and others to more than 300 of the state's native wildflowers.

It was written by naturalists Campbell and Lynn Loughmiller of Whitehouse, near Tyler, and is an offshoot of 30 years of their roaming the hills and fields of Texas, photographing wildflowers.

The University of Texas Press will publish the book in April to celebrate the arrival of this year's wildflowers.

Lady Bird Johnson, honorary co-chairman of the National Wildflower

Research Center, near Austin, said, "Just reading the text and seeing the beautiful color photographs make me want to reach for my sunhat, put on my walking shoes, take this knowledge-filled book and fare forth to seek and discover!"

Mrs. Johnson recalled in the foreword to the book that the authors told her selecting the 380 color photographs for the book was a "terrible task, like choosing among your grandchildren."

A portion of every book sale will go to the research center, which was established as a clearing house for information on seed collection, commercial sources and wildflower reproduction.

The Loughmillers say Texas has more than 5,000 species of wildflowers, which are found in elevations of 8,000 feet in the Guadalupe Mountains of West Texas to the subtropical Rio Grande Valley near sea level, and from the Chihuahuan Desert to Southeast Texas where the annual rainfall is 56 inches.

"The distribution of flowers over the state is constantly changing because their seeds are dispersed by wind, water, birds, animals, automobiles, and other agents," according to the Loughmillers. "We can describe the general areas where different species grow, but a flower is often found well beyond its generally accepted range."

"Simply put, a flower is where you find it."

The Loughmillers, in the book's introduction, tell of the pollinating process of the Yucca and Pronuba moth, "which have become so interdependent that neither can survive without the other."

"The moth does not visit the flowers of any other species but makes sure it pollinates this one well. It gathers a ball of pollen from one flower and deposits it on the pistil of another, even rubbing it in with its head after laying its eggs half an inch below. When the larvae develop they feed on the seed. Of the 30 or so species of Yucca, of which Texas has several, all except one depend on a species of the Pronuba moth for pollination, a different species for each species."

"The moth does not eat the pollen or the nectar, but the larvae live in the plant's ovary, thus perpetuating their own species and that of the Yucca. No moth, no Yucca, and vice versa."

One late afternoon, the Loughmillers recall, they stopped to photograph a "false cotton" flower whose blossoms had closed tightly. They pulled the petals of one apart and found a bumblebee. "We opened seven others and found bumblebees in five of them. We did not know whether they had chosen the flowers as a good place to spend the night or whether they had inadvertently stayed past closing time and were trapped."

Mrs. Johnson said, "My mail tells me there are thousands of people who share my enthusiasm for wildflowers and hunger to know more."

Area churches to sponsor Youth Quake April 1-4

Featuring youth minister, recording artist

Jon Byron

Youth Quake, an annual city-wide evangelistic event directed toward youth, is scheduled at La Plata Junior High School gymnasium April 1-4. The Sunday through Wednesday services are set to begin at 7 p.m.

Keynote speaker for Youth Quake '84 will be Jon Byron, youth minister at the Crystal Cathedral in Garden Grove, Calif.

Contemporary Christian music will be provided by recording artist Lynn Sutter on April 2-4. The Sunday evening service will feature Lazarus, a Christian rock group from Amarillo.

Youth Quake is sponsored by several area churches, including First Christian, Wesley United Methodist, Temple Baptist, Nazarene, and Community Church.

Byron, a graduate of Westmont College and Fuller Seminary, has been involved in Christian music since the early 1970s, touring the United States in his ministry to all ages and backgrounds.

He began writing music while in college, in styles ranging from rock to ballads. His newest album, "Portrait of Love," was recently released by Light Records.

"My songs are similar to the pages of a diary," noted Byron. "My songs are born out of experiences. I sing about life and the love and power of God that gives life meaning and direction."

Byron identifies himself as a teacher with a pastor's heart, and sees music as an effective tool for ministry. yet, he is aware that ministry must come from the heart and his desire is to live a life in which his own heart exemplifies Christ.

He is married and has two children.

Ms. Sutter, a versatile and gifted vocalist, is the daughter of a music minister and developed her musical talents under the nurture of the church.

She was signed to a recording contract with Word early in her career, and with the success of her album, "Everlasting Kind of Love" featuring the music of Chris Christian, opportunities were opened for ticketed concerts and large audiences.

The young performer still desires to serve in church settings, and stresses simplicity in her performance. Her warm, full voice and gentle guitar accompaniment combine to serve as an effective vehicle for probing messages in song.

She sings from her life experience and much of her current concert material is original. "Sweet Adoration," which was recorded by Debby Boone, was the first of her compositions to gain wide recognition. Her music is appealing to listeners of all ages.

Heffron, Sheffy united recently in Gainesville

The First Baptist Church of Gainesville was the setting for the March 17 wedding uniting Laura Michelle Heffron and Joe Ray Sheffy, both of Gainesville. Officiating at the ceremony as the Rev. Kenny Phelps, pastor of New Faith Baptist Church in Gainesville.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Robert N. Heffron of Gainesville and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Bob Sheffy of Dimmitt.

The bride's sister, Kelly Anne Heffron, served as maid of honor and Bill Bratcher was best man.

Bridesmaids included Christine Klement of Gainesville, Tammy Madalena of Toarrance, Calif., and Sandy Herr of Gainesville. Groomsmen were Jim Creech of Houston, Clay Kuykendall of Plainfield, Kan., and Eddie Davis of Lubbock.

Ushers were Franklin Higgins of Arlington, Michael Heffron of Gainesville, Douglas Heffron of Grand Prairie, David Sellers of Pasadena, and Randy Shearer and Dan Rechy, both of Houston.

Jennifer Vick, daughter of Janie and Johnny Vick of Amarillo and niece of the bridegroom, served as flower girl.

Mrs. Tawny Kingsley of Dallas, the bride's cousin, provided wedding music, singing "We've Only Just Begun," "Looking Through the Eyes of Love" and "The Lord's Prayer."

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of white satago with full, bishop sleeves and empire bodice featuring Queen Anne neckline. The bodice was encrusted with lace motifs and pearl clusters, and the A-line skirt swept gently to a chapel-length train.

The bride chose a picture brim hat, covered with Alencon lace and pearls, and highlighted with a back pouf of illusion that flowed to the back of her train. She wore a heart-shaped diamond cluster necklace and carried a cascade of white roses, stephanotis and English ivy.

The bride's attendants were attired in burgundy taffeta formals with spaghetti straps, featuring a narrow ruffle at the top of the bodice and tied with a wide sash at the left side. Each carried two long-stemmed red roses accented with baby's breath.

A reception was held in the River Valley Country Club in Gainesville following the ceremony. Jessica Winters of Gainesville registered guests.

Wedding cake was served by Mrs. Betty Rose Walterscheid of Muenster and beverages were served by April Holderman of Gainesville.

The serving table was covered with a white lace, floor-length tablecloth and held a three-tiered silver candelabrum.

The three-tiered wedding cake was separated with Grecian pillars and was decorated with white and dusty rose roses. White doves were set on the bottom layer and satin bells topped the cake.

Following a wedding trip to Jamaica, the couple will be at home in Gainesville.

Out of town guests attending the wedding included the groom's sisters, Cyd Sheffy and Robbie Sheffy of Ft. Worth, and Mr. and Mrs. Johnny Vick of Amarillo; and the groom's parents. Other guests represented Dimmitt, Floydada, Dallas, Whitesboro, Houston and Oklahoma City.

The bride is a 1980 graduate of Gainesville High School and is currently attending Cooke County College. She is employed as assistant manager of Zale's Jewelry in Gainesville.

The bridegroom graduated from Hereford High School in 1973 and Southwestern State University in San Marcos in 1977, where he was a member of Tau Epsilon Kappa Fraternity. He was a member of the coaching staff in Pearland from 1978 to 1982, and has been on the Gainesville High School coaching staff since 1982.

Style show to benefit Miss Hereford Pageant

Members of the Miss Hereford Pageant steering committee are currently making plans for a style show, proceeds of which are to be used for the annual pageant, set Aug. 4 this year. The style show is scheduled at 7 p.m. April 12 in the Hereford Community Center.

Tickets for the show are priced at $2 each and they may be purchased at the Chamber of Commerce office or from any steering committee member.

Eighteen local merchants are slated to participate in the style show and door prizes will be awarded. The featured prize will be a free night for two at the Royal Motor Hotel in Amarillo.

For further information about the style show, or the Miss Hereford Pageant (for which applications are available at the chamber office), contact Lanette Leasure, steering committee chairman, or Keith Ann Gearn, pageant director.

Members of Sugar Works Cake Decorating Club met recently in the home of Carol Odom with Paula Gamez calling the meeting to order. Ms. Gamez also read a poem entitled, "Sitting in the Bleachers."

Sherrie Davis was welcomed as a new member and a program on "Dough Roses" was presented by Ms. Odom.

Also, during the meeting, plans were finalized for the club's Easter project for the Satellite Center and Ms. Gamez made a cake for March.

The next meeting was scheduled April 12.

Couple wed Saturday at First Christian Church

Kelly Lane Lindsey and Mark Wade Berryman were wed Saturday afternoon in the First Christian Church with the Rev. Mack McCarter, pastor, officiating. The church was decorated with candelabra and altar flowers, including white gladiolus and pink, blue and yellow carnations. Pink, white and yellow bows marked the pews.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dale Lindsey and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Berryman, all of Hereford.

The bride's cousin, Tracy Shepard, served as maid of honor and Sam Finley was best man.

Michelle Geiger, as well as the bride's sisters, Tammy Northcutt and Amy Lindsey, served as bridesmaids. Groomsmen were Wayne, Allen and Randy Berryman, brothers of the groom.

Guests were escorted to the pews by Clifton McElhane, Mike Jackson, Fred Carriker and Raymond Martinez.

The bride's sister, Shawna Lindsey, and Teresa Berryman, sister of the groom, were flower girls. Ring bearer was Samuel Berryman, the groom's brother.

Wedding music was provided by Ray Owens, soloist, accompanied by Mrs. Evelyn Hacker.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal-length gown of chiffon over bridal satin featuring Queen Anne neckline edged with chantilly lace, and bishop sleeves capped in lace and gathered into deep lace cuffs. The skirt was draped in chantilly lace forming an apron effect and was encircled at the hemline with matching lace.

Her tea-length bridal veil of chantilly lace was attached to a beaded headpiece. She carried a nosegay of white carnations with touches of pink and baby's breath, accented with lace streamers.

As something borrowed she wore her mother's diamond and ruby necklace, and as something old she wore her great-grandmother's wedding band. Something blue was a blue garter and something new was her wedding dress.

The bride's attendants were attired in pink chiffon gowns with lace bodices. They carried pink and blue carnations trimmed with greenery, baby's breath and yellow bows.

Cynthia Hudson registered guests at the reception in the Knights of Columbus Hall. Cake was served by the bride's aunts, Mrs. Barbara Lindsey and Mrs. Pat Stevens. Mrs. Sherry McKibben, aunt of the bride, and Deby Mize served punch and coffee.

The bride's bouquet decorated the serving table, which featured a three-tiered white wedding cake trimmed with pink, yellow and blue flowers. A fountain was set beneath the cake, and two smaller side cakes were connected to the larger one with miniature stairways.

Wedding guests were in attendance from Healdton, Okla., Pampa, Wellington, Bryan, Lubbock, Shamrock and Odessa.

The couple will reside at 421 Paloma Lane in Hereford.

Between the Covers

By DIANNE PIERSON
Librarian

Non-fiction bestsellers head the list of new books available this week at the Deaf Smith County Library. Not since Joseph Wambaugh's first work of non-fiction, "The Onion Field," has there been a true police story as gripping as "Lines and Shadows."

It is a fascinating and deeply layered account of one of the most controversial police experiments in recent history.

The media hailed them as heroes while others denounced them as renegades who overstepped the shadowy boundary between law and justice. They were the Border Crime Task Force, a squad of San Diego police officers who nightly prowled the explosive international border.

Their mission was to stalk the ruthless bandits who preyed upon thousands of illegal aliens crossing from Mexico into the United States under cover of darkness. The police disguised themselves as aliens to lure the bandits into the open.

In this true story of lawmen and bandits, Wambaugh recreates the myth of the Western hero—the isolation and exhilaration of a handful of men attempting to tame a strange and dangerous frontier.

As the mission envelops their lives, their loves, and even their sanity, the true border proves to be within each man: that sinister line a few men dare to cross at utter peril.

Wambaugh is also the author of "The Glitter Dome," "The Black Marble" and "The Delta Star."

Also available this week is "Tough-Minded Faith for Tender-hearted People" by Robert Schuller. It contains 366 messages that will inspire you to live up to your best every day of every year.

What is "tough-minded faith?" It is sensing success in dark times...delegating good jobs to others...hearing what your critics say about you...reacting positively to a negative situation...and facing the future unafraid.

Each day's discussion is based on a key verse from scripture and includes a motivational commentary. These daily readings are designed to encourage readers to "develop mountain-moving faith in one year's time." Schuller is also the author of "Tough Times Never Last," "but Tough People Do!," and "Hope For Tough Times."

Also available this week is "Weight Watcher's Fast and Fabulous Cookbook," "Nerve Endings" by William Martin, and "Discipline is not a Dirty Word" by Dr. Janice T. Gibson.

Happy 30th Vicki

Several students participated in the symbolic ceremony of laying a wreath at the tomb of the Unknown Soldier at Arlington Cemetery. Those assisting included Casey Daniel, Monty Gilliam, Shyla Gerk, Kathy Neill, Suzy Lassiter and Stacy Wagner.

Nathan Flood, Steven Lafuente and Shyla Gerk were selected to take the offertory gifts, wine and bread to the altar at the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception which is the largest Catholic Church in the United States.

Students were most impressed with the precision of the soldiers at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier and they expressed pride in the work that this country's forefathers did in the early 18th century, especially George Washington, Abraham Lincoln, and Thomas Jefferson.

Students present program

Preparing For Rush

Senior girls will have a chance to learn about registering for rush at the college of their choice during a party from 3 to 5 p.m. Sunday sponsored by the Hereford Panhellenic Association. Discussing plans for entering a sorority are, from left, Michelle Connally and Paula Mason, who plan to enter West Texas State University, and Kristi Lytal, a prospective freshman at Lubbock Christian College.

Association to host rush registration party today

The Hereford Panhellenic Association will host its annual rush registration party from 3 to 5 p.m. Sunday in the home of Dolores Foster, 120 Centre. All senior girls who plan to attend college and their mothers are invited to attend.

At the party, senior girls will be told how they can register for rush at their prospective college and through the local Panhellenic Association.

College girls who are presently in sororities have been invited to attend and will answer questions and speak on sisterhood, scholarship, finances, and extracurricular activities of sororities.

It is essential that those girls who are interested in going through rush next fall register through Hereford Panhellenic so that recommendations may be sent to all the sororities represented at the college of their choice.

The earlier information can be received and recommendations sent, the better chance the girls will have in pledging the sorority of their choice.

Registration through Hereford Panhellenic and through the college does not obligate a girl but it can be invaluable in the event that she decides to go through rush.

The Hereford Panhellenic Association was organized in

Pioneer Day scheduled May 26

May 26 was the date set for the 1984 Mid-Plains Pioneer Day celebration when officers and steering committee members met Thursday at K-Bob's Steak House.

The annual event is to be held in the Hereford Bull Barn, with a catered meal and recognition of the oldest man and woman present, and the person traveling the farthest to attend. Pioneer of the Year will be named by KPAN Radio. Registration fee is $3 per person.

Current Pioneer Day officers include J.B. Noland, president, Stan Knox, vice-president; and Troyce Hanna, secretary. Others on the steering committee are Bartley Dowell, Donald Hicks, Bill Bradley, Argen Draper, Grace Covington and Leatrus Clark.

The next planning meeting is scheduled at 7 p.m. April 9 at K-Bob's. All suggestions concerning the event may be addressed to the committee.

Baltimore Colt rookie George Achica was born in American Samoa, an island in the South Pacific.

Chicago Bear rookie lineman Jimbo Covert majored in English Literature at the University of Pittsburgh.

Local DAR members attend state conference

The 85th state conference of the Texas Society, National Society Daughters of the American Revolution was held March 15-17 in the Marriott Riverwalk in San Antonio.

Members of Hereford Los Ciboleros Chapter attending were Mrs. Stanford Knox, chapter regent; Mrs. Jess L. Robinson, delegate; and Mrs. Ernest S. Brainard, honorary state regent.

During reports from state officers and state chairman, Los Ciboleros received certificates of merit for excellence on Constitution Week, DAR Magazine, printed press publicity, motion picture, radio and television, and transportation and safety.

One of the state regent's projects is the planting of living memorial trees with plaques in each of the eight TSDAR divisions of the state of Texas. Her theme is "Texas: One and Indivisible."

The Texas Society is now the largest in the nation with 16,080 members in 167 chapters. Mrs. Wayne D.

Tiner, state regent of Texas, was elected as nominee to vice-president general, NSDAR.

One of the 11 Resolutions adopted by the Texas Society was the recommendation concerning nuclear waste disposal sites: that the guidelines of the selection of the disposal site be based on scientific studies and recommendations rather than forming guidelines to fit the site, and most important, be further resolved that the sites be in uninhabited areas, with the selection being based strictly on scientific requirements uninfluenced by political factors.

The award for the DAR Outstanding American History Teacher of Texas for 1983 went to Jane May Doclar, teacher of fifth grade at Grapevine for making American history exciting for her students.

Brig. Gen. James Dozier, Deputy Commander of Fort Hood, delivered an informative national defense report that the U.S. Army is ready to meet any threat; that the United States has the best trained, peace-time army. Recruits are high school graduates who make good soldiers with no discipline problems; basic training is longer and harder. All weapons are designed with lasers and battlefield computers.

The Free World looks to the United States to preserve peace. Gen. Dozier warned that state sponsored terrorism may shape world affairs in the next 20 years. The United States will be singled out since our nation is a threat to their goals—as citizens try to maintain peace. Gen. Dozier was an ambassador in Italy who was kidnapped and held hostage for six weeks approximately 18 months ago. There were 644 DAR members from 126 chapters attending the state conference. The Continental Congress will be held Apr. 16-20 in Washington, D.C.

The first child born in the White House was James Madison Randolph, son of Thomas Mann Randolph and Martha Jefferson Randolph, who was the daughter of President Thomas Jefferson. The baby was born in January, 1806.

Vows exchanged

Wedding vows were exchanged by Tammy Rhodes and Raymond Johnson Friday afternoon at the E.B. Black House with the Rev. Buster Grigg, pastor of Avenue Baptist Church, officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Tex and Pat Rhodes of 1606 Blevins.

Serving as matron of honor was the bride's sister, Ramona Herbig. The groom's cousin, Michael Gonzales, was best man.

Amber La Comb, cousin of the groom, carried the bride's train. Ring bearer was Paul Rodriguez, son of Rebecca Rodriguez.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal-length gown of white taffeta and lace with sequined lace appliques. The dress was designed with an A-line skirt, Queen Anne neckline and lace sleeves.

Her fingertip-length veil was trimmed in lace and was attached to a lace, bead-covered cap. The bride wore a pearl necklace belonging to her maternal grandmother and carried a multi-colored bouquet of spring flowers.

The matron of honor wore an apricot polyester dress with empire waistline and lace sleeves.

Jennie Rodriguez, sister of the groom, registered guests at the reception which followed.

Trixie Abalos of San Diego,

Calif., the groom's sister, served cake and Dorothy Cordoba served beverages. A bouquet decorated the table which held the three-tiered wedding cake.

After a wedding trip to sites in New Mexico, the couple will be at home at 311 E. 4th St.

Out of town guests included Mr. and Mrs. Donnie Houle, Gary and Brent from Canyon.

The bride is a graduate of Hereford High School and Texas State Technical Institute. She is currently employed by Witherspoon, Aikin and Langley. The bridegroom attended Hereford High and is presently employed at Swift Independent Packing Co.

The notorious outlaw Jesse James once admitted he stalked private detective Allan Pinkerton for four months in Chicago, trying to assassinate him.

Ann Landers Prison visitation

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My neighbor married a man who was very likable, held a good job and always seemed to be helping people.

A few months ago this man got into trouble with the law. He was caught selling radios, TVs and automobile tires at a low price. He claimed he didn't know they were stolen. The judge sentenced him to 18 months in prison.

Last week my neighbor told me that she and the children were going to visit "Daddy" and the state had accommodations for her and the kids so they could "be a family for the weekend." I asked what she meant by that. She said, "My husband and I will be able to sleep together."

It seems the government is really going out of its way to make prison life attractive.

Do you approve of coddling prisoners in this manner? Please give me some information on this unusual practice.—M.C.D. In Tupelo, Miss.

choose between spaced weekends or a night during the week.

In California and Washington conjugal visits are permitted once a month. In Connecticut it's every 10 days. New York it depends on the availability of facilities. In Mississippi it's every other weekend, for South Carolina every weekend. The families are housed in mobile homes or special "apartments" on the premises. They enjoy complete privacy.

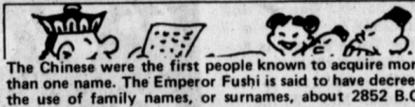

While some may complain that these privileges coddle the prisoner, I would argue it is an excellent incentive for hand-picked, well-behaved inmates.

For too long our prisons have turned out vengeful, bitter, hostile inmates who were not rehabilitated but became only more angry and more dangerous.

Conjugal visits cut down on rapes and violence and reduce immensely the dehumanization that so often takes place behind bars. Not only do the prisoners gain from conjugal visits, but society benefits as well. It would be wonderful if the "backward 43" joined the progressive seven.

There is a big difference between cold and cool. Ann Landers shows you how to play it cool without freezing people out in her booklet, "Teen-Age Sex—Ten Ways to Cool It." Send 50 cents and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611.

'Shortcuts to Sewing' topic of program

Members of Westway Extension Club met in regular session Tuesday evening with Grace Covington serving as hostess.

Ms. Covington read "Happy Anniversary to Barbee" by Art Buckwald as the opening exercise and Carolyn Evers conducted the door prize drawing with Elizabeth Dekoster announced as the winner.

Favorite cookie recipes were shared as roll call and it was announced that plans are being finalized for a 4-H exchange program to be held in July. Young people from California and Wisconsin will be visiting this area.

Cindy Norvell, county TEHA chairman, will be attending the district meeting in Pampa April 24.

Louise Walker, extension agent, presented a program entitled "Shortcuts to Sewing," showing all the new gadgets on the market for a seamstress.

Refreshments were served to Joyce Aycock, Gayle Carter, Dekoster, Ms. Evers, Leta Kaul, Billie Landrum, Jeanette Ramey, Martha Rickman, Marjorie Thomas and Ms. Norvell.

Received Honors

Several art students in Joan Kotrous' class at La Plata Junior High School recently were awarded regional honors during the 1984 Scholastic Art Awards Show (Northeast Texas Regional Exhibition). The event was sponsored by Western Plaza Merchants Association in Amarillo.

Divisions entered included pencil drawing, pottery and jewelry. In the pencil drawing division, Rosie Hund, seventh grader, was awarded a certificate of merit for her pencil drawing of grapes and Andres Acosta, also a seventh grade student, was given a certificate of merit for his color pencil drawing of a brown glass cup and an orange.

In the pottery division Julia Allison, an eighth grader, received two certificates of merit for her pottery which included a slab heart pot and a combination pinch and coil pot; Carlos Flores, a seventh grader, a certificate of merit for his combination pinch and coil pot; Cecilia Salinas, eighth grader, a certificate of merit for her combination of pinch and coil pot; Marco Trevizo, seventh grader, a certificate of merit for his ceramic donkey slab, pot and cart; Ana Aguilera, seventh grader, a certificate of merit for her combination ceramic pinch and coil pot; and Robin McMorries, seventh grade student, certificate of merit for her combination bisque slab and coil pot.

Tino Munoz, an eighth grader, received a certificate of merit for his ceramic pendant in the jewelry division. Approximately 1,000 entries were received for the show's 14th annual exhibit, with nearly 350 entries selected for exhibition in February.

The exhibition represents the highest quality of art produced by junior and senior high students in 32 counties in northwest Texas and seven counties in Oklahoma. Pieces were judged on originality and workmanship. Students who were honored will receive certificates at the school awards assembly this spring.

By LOUISE WALKER
County Extension Agent
"A Look At Spring"
by Ronald

It certainly seems things are so busy around the house. Mother says that means spring. After spending several weekends working on records for income tax purposes, Mother now says something about getting to spring cleaning. Cleaning looks useless to me with this wind blowing dirt every other day.

March was birthday month. Bryan, my brother, was 11 a couple of weeks ago. Grandmother Walker in Arkansas had her birthday March 11, the same day of Bryan's birthday. Then I celebrated a 6 months birthday. Birthdays must mean a cake, eating out, a gift, and lots of pictures. I can hardly wait for my first real birthday.

Brothers and sisters surely must get involved where they go to school. Earlier this month all three were in a science fair. Allison did an exhibit on magnetic fields and didn't even place. Bryan and his friend did a complicated one on ionic propulsion and received a third place ribbon in the school fair. They're improving it and taking it to the science fair at WTSU in Canyon on April 6-7. Mother says they're our weekend project for the next three weeks. Stuart had a nifty project on solar energy which placed fourth.

Then there's something about U.I.L. competition. Bryan went to Abernathy in the picture memory division last week. He's been telling us the painting and painter of numerous prints for weeks. We all wished him well. Bryan and Allison are always practicing the piano. Each played two songs in the Festival last week. Now they are both working on several pieces for Guild in May.

Then there's 4-H method demonstration. The two middle Walker children are talking about doing a demonstration on "Packing for Travel." That competition is also in May.

And about me - well, I sit alone. I can roll over and over and over and get just wherever I want to. I'm not really crawling but I can surely get my elbows in position and kinda push myself along.

Finally I'm getting a little something to eat besides milk - rice cereal. And I'm getting my 4-month-old shots at 6 months.

I can sure cut a rug when it comes picture taking time. Has Mother showed you my latest pictures? I'm surprised if she hasn't. She says I'm so cute and I really am!

CANCER ANSWER LINE American Cancer Society
M. D. Anderson Hospital and Tumor Institute

QUESTION: Is research close to finding the secret of how cancer begins?

ANSWERline: Recent findings from studies of the genetic factors in malignancy suggest that an understanding of the mechanics of cancer may be rapidly developing. The recent identification of certain genes - called "oncogenes" - in normal cells is one of the promising new discoveries. Oncogenes appear to be involved in the production of cancer by somehow eluding normal cell controls and triggering the uncontrolled growth which is characteristic of cancer.

QUESTION: What new treatments are under development for the control of cancer?

ANSWERline: Now in the experimental stage are "hybridomas," hybrid cells that can be programmed to produce antibodies that seek out foreign substances or cancer cells and destroy them. Researchers are also devising ways to put anticancer drugs into antibodies which then become "guided missiles" carrying anticancer drugs directly to cancer cells without affecting normal cells. Work also is progressing with "biological response modifiers" like interferon, which is still in the experimental stage. Interferons are natural body substances which can cause at least partial regression in some forms of malignant tumors. These natural products have a different mode of action than the anticancer drugs now in use, and are not as toxic.

QUESTION: Is there any connection between the smoking habits of parents and children?

ANSWERline: Yes. Studies show that two-thirds of the high school students who smoke cigarettes have parents who smoke.

QUESTION: Why does cigarette smoking cause coughing?

ANSWERline: The irritation of cigarette smoke destroys tiny hair-like structures in the throat called cilia. When the cilia can no longer function properly, coughing is the only way a person can get rid of debris and mucus which the cilia would normally carry away from the lungs.

QUESTION: Does everyone suffer from nausea and vomiting after radiation therapy?

ANSWERline: Although nausea and vomiting are typical side effects of radiation therapy, not all patients experience these discomforts during treatment. Such side effects usually depend on the level of radiation received, and sometimes there are ways to avoid or overcome them. Patients preparing for radiation therapy should consult their physician as to what to expect, and what instructions to follow.

QUESTION: Do women get bladder cancer?

ANSWERline: Bladder cancer is more prevalent among men by almost three to one. It occurs mostly in persons above 50 years of age. Men who work in industries using dyes and other chemicals are at higher risk.

QUESTION: Do young men get prostate cancer?

ANSWERline: Prostate cancer generally occurs in men over 50, although younger men have been known to get it.

The Newspaper BIBLE

IT'S TRUE: BUT DON'T PRESS THE PANIC BUTTON!

Some of Jesus' disciples began talking about the beautiful stonework of the Temple and the memorial decorations on the walls.

But Jesus said, "The time is coming when all these things you are admiring will be knocked down, and not one stone will be left on top of another; all will become one vast heap of rubble."

"Master!" they exclaimed. "When? And will there be any warning ahead of time?"

He replied, "Don't let anyone mislead you. For many will come announcing themselves as the Messiah, and saying, 'The time has come.' But don't believe them!"

"And when you hear of wars and insurrections beginning, don't panic. True, wars must come, but the end won't follow immediately--for nation shall rise against nation and kingdom against kingdom, and there will be great earthquakes, and famines in many lands, and epidemics, and terrifying things happening in the heavens."

"But before all this occurs, there will be a time of special persecution, and you will be dragged into synagogues and prisons and before kings and governors for My name's sake. But as a result, the Messiah will be widely known and honored."

Contest Winners

Winners were announced this week in the fire prevention poster contest sponsored by the Hereford Fire Department Auxiliary. The winning entries will be taken to district competition (Panhandle Firemen's and Fire Marshals' Association) and any that place there will be submitted to state competition (Texas FFMA). All other posters are on display at Sugarland Mall through March 31. Special education winners include, from left, Danny Berumen, first place; Olivia Guerra, second; and Hector Saucedo, third.

Winning Posters

The local Fire Department Auxiliary received a total of 245 entries in the recent fire prevention poster contest. First place winners received $15 cash prizes; second place, $10; and third place $5. Primary winners include (left to right) front row, Hayley Lockmiller, first place; Shawn Lance, second; and Jeremy Brock, third; and intermediate winners on the back row are Amy Faulkner, second place; Matthew Reiter, third; and Jerry Marry, first.

MEXICO CITY (AP) — President Miguel de la Madrid says he will maintain Mexico's firm opposition to any type of intervention in Latin America during his upcoming South American tour.

"We will maintain an energetic and firm opposition to any type of intervention. We will promote closer ties between Mexico and our brothers of Latin America," the president told reporters Wednesday.

The president is scheduled to leave Mexico on Monday for a two-week visit to Colombia, Venezuela, Brazil and Argentina. It is his first trip abroad since taking office in December 1982.

De la Madrid also said he feels the Contadora group "will be the solution to Central America's problems." Mexico is part of the group, along with Colombia, Venezuela and Panama, which is trying to find a peaceful way to end the strife in the region.

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Restaurants in Mexico are expected to receive about $570 million from foreign tourists this year, capturing almost one-third of the tourism industry's total earnings, a government report said.

According to Tourism Ministry spokesman, the restaurant industry will attract about 30 percent of all foreign tourism earnings, which are expected to total about $1.6 billion this year.

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A travel agency that failed to deliver on its promises in offering trips to the Super Bowl has been closed by the government, the Tourism Ministry announced.

Duk Corp. Turistica was closed by the Tourism Ministry on Wednesday because the San Luis Potosi-based agency flew scores of people to Florida for the Jan. 22 Super Bowl game, but when they got there they reportedly found no representative of the agency there to provide them tickets for the game.

The company was closed down indefinitely under the nation's new tourism law, which the tourism industry is opposing and trying to halt if a federal injunction can be obtained.

DeLinda Duncan, Sammy Brown

Wedding planned

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Duncan of Texico, N.M., announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, DeLinda, to Sammy Dale Brown, son of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Brown of Route 2, Friona.

Vows will be exchanged May 12 at 7:30 p.m. at the First Baptist Church of Texico. A reception will follow in the church fellowship hall. All friends and relatives are invited to attend.

The bride-elect is a 1981 graduate of Texico High School. She is presently employed by The Shoe Tree in Lubbock.

The prospective groom is a 1979 graduate of Hereford High School and a 1981 graduate of Amarillo College. He is presently engaged in farming and ranching west of Hereford.

Today in History

Today is Sunday, March 25, the 85th day of 1984. There are 281 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On March 25, 1965, the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. led 25,000 marchers to the steps of the state Capitol in Montgomery, Ala., to protest the denial of voting rights to blacks.

On this date: In 1634, Maryland was founded by colonists led by Lord Baltimore.

In 1947, a coal mine explosion in Centralia, Ill., claimed 111 lives.

In 1973, President Richard Nixon ordered the remaining U.S. forces in Vietnam to stay there until all American prisoners of war were released.

In 1975, King Faisal of Saudi Arabia was assassinated in Riyadh by a nephew who had a history of mental illness.

And in 1977, President Jimmy Carter lifted a ban and again allowed Americans to spend U.S. dollars in Cuba.

Ten years ago: Secretary of State Henry Kissinger began talks in Moscow with Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev on the prospects for an agreement limiting strategic nuclear weapons.

Five years ago: The anti-Castro terror group Omega 7 claimed responsibility for bombings at New York's Kennedy Airport and at two buildings in New Jersey in which four people were injured.

Today's Birthdays: Feminist leader Gloria Steinem is 50 years old. TV personality Anita Bryant is 44. Singer Aretha Franklin and actor Paul Michael Glaser are 42. Singer Elton John is 37. And actor Haywood Nelson is 24.

Thought for Today: "Marriage is an adventure, like going to war." — Gilbert Chesterton, English writer (1874-1936).

Policies announced

Weddings, engagements, anniversary and similar announcements are published free of charge by The Hereford Brand as a courtesy to our readers.

Those who submit such articles are asked to abide by the deadlines and policies established by The Brand Staff. Items must be submitted promptly in order to be newsworthy. The Brand reserves the right to edit all copy.

Wedding and engagement forms are available in the Brand office, 313 Lee St., as an aid in preparing articles for publication.

Information for weddings should be submitted the Monday before the wedding date. Weddings reported more than a week after the event will be published in condensed form. Please do not ask for articles on weddings more than a month old.

Engagement announcements should be submitted at least one month before publication, or Thursday noon for Sunday publication.

Photos for weddings and engagements should be black and white glossy pictures, which can be picked up after publication. Snapshots are not generally suitable for reproduction.

Articles for bridal showers should be reported for immediate publication. Photos of showers will be accepted only if they are timely and of adequate quality for reproduction in the newspaper.

Lite-A-Bike project scheduled March 31

Mayor Wes Fisher recently declared March 26-31 as Lite-A-Bike Week in Hereford. In conjunction with the proclamation, the Ladies Auxiliary to VFW Post 4818 is planning a Lite-A-Bike project from 2 to 5 p.m. March 31 on the parking lot of the Community Center.

Everyone with a bike or tricycle, regardless of age, is urged to attend and have free reflective tape put on clean bikes. The first 100 participants will receive special mementos.

An obstacle course will be set up and an officer will be present to assist. He will check for safety factors and will inform participants of any mistakes.

All Auxiliary and VFW members are encouraged to be present that afternoon.

I just thought of something. These new sculptured look hair styles with all the ear showing are really tough on people used to getting a hair cut every six weeks to two months. These cuts start to look fuzzy around the edges at 3 weeks & it's hard to figure what's wrong. Have hairdressers the world over conspired against us to take our money and make us look foolish? The answer to the first part is - well - yes, but for your extra money you get more hair care. In answer to the second part - NO - if you look foolish it will cost your hairdresser a lot and fast. There is one of the new looks just for you. Almost any of the new beauty cuts can be suited to your needs.

Remember at 9 to 9 we have revived the $2 cut. Call us & ask about it. There is, of course, a catch, but it is a genuine offer.

They didn't understand the term

NEW YORK (AP) — When you consider the evidence, it is shocking that the notion has taken so long to be understood by otherwise bright corporate executives.

The evidence is this: —Some of the brightest, innovative, motivated people in corporations are ignored, discouraged, suppressed and even stigmatized as boat-rockers. They are shelved rather than promoted. They are driven from the company.

—The large, bureaucratic company they left is then presented with a major problem that its high-priced, graduate-school-trained executives cannot seem to understand. The problem: The company has ceased growing internally.

—An outside consultant is called in. Growth, he reports, can be achieved by acquiring other companies. Acquisitions are made, but results are not. Soon after, the company divests itself of the acquisitions. The problems remain.

—Meanwhile, the bright, innovative people who were forced out have founded their own companies and are highly profitable, because they offer a service or product the public wants. They create jobs. They create wealth.

Almost everyone has witnessed the scenario. How could they not, since it is occurring at such a rapid rate. The pace of new-business formation is at least twice that of 15 years ago, while many older companies are stuck with slow growth or even shrinking size.

In summary, they didn't understand "intrapreneurship."

You'll be hearing the word so often in the next few months that you might get sick of it, but the idea behind it is likely to be around for a long time. Intrapreneurship is entrepreneurship within large companies.

It isn't a new idea at all, but it is better understood than it was just a couple of years ago. Moreover, it is being packaged and sold. The Washington-based Nesbitt Group, for example, has teamed up with Sweden's ForeSight Group to form Foresight Institute, which already has presented several seminars.

Long ago, however, some of America's best-managed large companies knew the benefits of nurturing their entrepreneurial talent. IBM and General Electric, for example. And AT&T's Bell Laboratories, where Nobel Prize winners worked.

Joseph Mancuso, an author, former professor and founder of the Center for Entrepreneurial Management, also recognized the wisdom of keeping innovators within the large company, and has conducted numerous seminars on the subject.

Caught up in the performance game, however, many companies felt they couldn't tolerate "nonproducers." More important, they reasoned, was next quarter's bottom line, which security analysts follow so closely.

A personal computer can record what happens to your money — unless you're married. Then, of course, you already have one.

Faith is what leads us to believe that the "turn" signal on the car ahead indicates where it will be going.

Reiner stars in off-beat film

by YARDENA ARAR
Associated Press Writer
"THIS IS SPINAL TAP" is double send-off on the world of heavy-metal rock and previous documentaries on rock bands. But you don't have to be a fan of either to appreciate this hilarious chronicle of a fictional British quintet's ill-fated U.S. comeback tour.

In a sort of film-within-a-film format, director Rob Reiner plays filmmaker Marty DiBergi, who leaps at the chance to make what he calls a "rockumentary" about a band whose loudness and punctuality he has admired for 17 years.

But DiBergi's ever-present cameras record one disaster after another, from a chauffeur who greets the band carrying a sign reading "Spinal Tap," to the record company official who says there's a problem with the cover of their new album, "Smell the Glove." It seems someone is calling it sexist because it features a nude woman on all fours with a dog collar and leash sniffing a glove being pushed in her face by a man's hand.

Gigs are canceled, stage props malfunction but the band's leather and chain-clad members — who aren't going to win any intelligence contests — press on gamely until the steely-eyed girlfriend of lead singer David St. Hubbins (Michael McKean) drives away first manager Ian Faith (Tony Hendra) and then lead guitarist Nigel Tufnel (Christopher Guest).

Reiner, with McKean, Guest and Harry Shearer (who plays bassist Derek Smalls), have done a great job in creating and portraying characters that are dim-witted, cliched and yet oddly endearing.

It's too bad the film's R rating, earned mainly because of sexual themes and language (both spoken and in the band's lyrics), will exclude much of its natural audience: the younger teens who have made heavy metal big business.

Motion Picture of America rating definitions:
G — General audiences. All ages admitted.

PG — Parental guidance suggested. Some material may not be suitable for children.

Talented photographer to display his photos

PARIS (AP) — A display of 250 photographs from the personal albums of Jacques Henri Lartigue mark a celebration in honor of the man many call the doyen of French photography.

In 1979, Lartigue donated 130 of his private photo albums and several hundred thousand negatives to France. The pictures from the 1919-1922 album had never been seen by the public.

The white-haired photographer greeted well-wishers including film-makers, actors, singers and government officials. He carried a camera and continually broke off sentences to snap pictures of the many photographers taking his picture.

He has long been recognized as one of France's leading photographers. Critics agree his work captures the restlessness and elegance of France's leisure classes in the 1920s.

Lartigue has been filling his personal albums, which he calls "a visual diary of my life," since he was 7 when he was given his first camera.

The show, which will run until Sept. 16, features photos of his honeymoon in Chamonix with Madeleine Messager, the daughter of French composer Andre Messager; France's Davis Cup matches on clay courts at Deauville; a glider competition; young couples dancing at an outdoor ball and his own paintings in progress.

The black and white photos on display are 50 percent larger than those in the original album, which is displayed at the Grand Palais in glass cases.

Lartigue, who goes by his initials J.L., was born in 1894 in Courbevoie, a Paris suburb. A banker's son, he studied with private tutors and later took courses at the Julian Academy in Paris. The young Lartigue photographed the world around, down to the mundane details of everyday life.

He began his professional career in 1916, but didn't have his first official show until 1962. By then, critics hailed his work as historical documents of fashion and lifestyle trends in 20th century France.

The current exhibition shows to what extent Lartigue was fascinated with technology, and man's relation to it. Many of the photos juxtapose the old and the new — a bicycle and a car, a bird and a glider plane.

His human subjects were his friends and family, and he snapped them in action — dancing, skating, boating and hiking.

Lartigue was an avid sportsman, and much of his best work involved the top sports figures of the day, including tennis champion Suzanne Lenglen, whose landmark short skirts and unabashed athleticism changed the face of women's tennis.

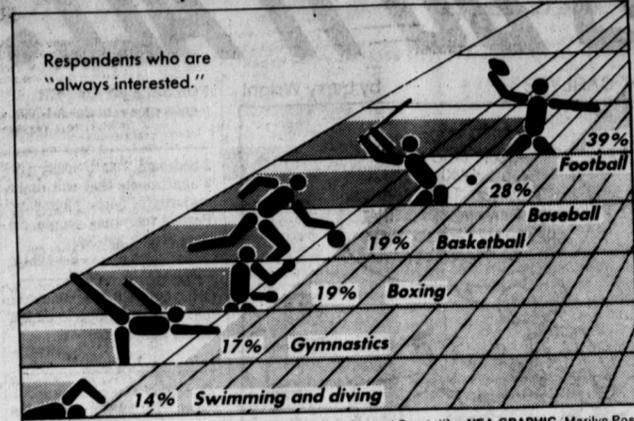

Lartigue was impressed with her agility and coordination, and he photographed her leaping for overheads and stretching for volleys. He played tennis well into his 80s, but was sidelined, he said, by tennis elbow.

MOST POPULAR SPORTS

Poll rates spectators' interest

Football remains the most popular spectator sport in America — good news for the fledgling United States Football League. Baseball and basketball are still favorites, but, surprisingly, boxing and gymnastics are also rated highly. In this Olympic year, gymnastics should continue to gain fans.

Through hard times

Lewis 'is who he is'

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — It seems appropriate that Jerry Lee Lewis' current record is "I Am What I Am."

"I am what I am, not what they want me to be," Lewis sings.

"Seems like everybody wants to pick on ol' Jerry Lee."

And he declares: "One thing's for sure, I'll never change."

Approaching 30 years as a piano-pounding rock 'n' roll dynamo, the 48-year-old Lewis is just what he is — in controversy, in the news, in demand.

Right now, he's free on $100,000 bond. In February, he was indicted in Memphis on charges of hiding his assets to avoid paying almost $1 million in back taxes, penalties and interest.

Last August, Lewis' fifth wife, 23 years his junior, died of what authorities said was a drug overdose. But news accounts since her death have said official reports omitted pertinent information, such as bruises on her body.

In 1981, Lewis himself nearly died. He spent 61 days in a Memphis hospital because of a perforated stomach. He underwent two operations totaling nearly 12 hours, and hospital statements at the time gave his chances of living as 50-50.

Former model to debut in movie

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Grace Jones, the former model who went from disco diva to punk queen, is making her major motion picture debut in a role that fits her androgynous, hard-as-leather image.

She plays Zula, mercenary warrior sidekick to bodybuilder Arnold Schwarzenegger in the sequel to "Conan The Barbarian."

"I wanted to do films from the very beginning, but I wanted to do it my way," the model-singer-actress said in an interview on the movie's set here. "I didn't think I should shock my fans with a total change."

Her costume is a revealing leather tunic, and she wears a spiked wristband on one arm.

She described her character as "very cat-like, very wild-like. I fight with a stick, not a sword... I'm a hired killer." And she laughed. "I stay more to the male side."

He studied briefly for the ministry before turning to music as a profession, leaving the preaching to his cousin, television evangelist Jimmy Swaggart. Another cousin is fellow singer-piano player Mickey Gilley.

During his February arraignment in Memphis on the tax charges, Lewis was fingerprinted and photographed. But he was undaunted.

"Honey, this is just a breeze," he said after pleading innocent.

"I feel good. I'm living and breathing... I got a good lawyer."

He often knocked his piano bench backward, tossed his head wildly, hurled off his jacket and belted out a song.

He said in a 1980 interview: "I think God blessed me with this great talent. Whether I've misused it, I don't know — maybe I have, some people say that I have... I'm the onliest man in the business that's made $15 million and spent $17 million. But the thing about it, I've had a... good time."

But he was not spared from

Acress taken seriously

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — "Nominated for best performance by an actress in a supporting role: Cher, 'Silkwood'..."

Cher and boyfriend Val Kilmer were watching the television screen in the bedroom of her opulent Benedict Canyon home as Mickey Rooney announced the nominees for the 1983 Academy awards. Her reaction?

"I just sort of accepted the news automatically and then went back to doing my morning exercises. It wasn't until two days later, after reading about the reactions of the other nominees, that the import of it hit me. Then I was really shook."

Her reaction was in character. During her 15 years as a show biz luminary, Cher has projected an image of total cool, bordering on ultimate boredom. Yet underneath all that is a woman of defiant independence and relentless ambition.

She takes great pleasure in her nomination as one of the five best supporting actresses of the year. It marks a milestone in the career of a star who has been the object of derision.

Cher seems perplexed that people will not take her seriously.

"I'm not really rebellious, but I refuse to live my life the way I'm supposed to. As a result, I've made my mistakes in public. But if I patterned my life for the benefit of public opinion, I'd still be with Sonny."

That's where it all started: Sonny and Cher. In 1965 she and Sonny Bono borrowed $168 and made a hit single, "Baby, Don't Go." With "I Got You, Babe," they became record stars. They had their own TV variety show, with Cher appearing in outrageous gowns and putting down her husband with smart cracks.

"I was miserable," she recalled in an interview at her home. "It wasn't good for me, and it wasn't good for Sonny. We had to break up for the good of both of us."

She became a hot ticket in Las Vegas on her own, endured a ruinous marriage to rock musician Gregg Allman and seemed forever in the headlines. Through it all she wanted desperately to be taken seriously as an actress. But filmmakers wouldn't consider her, among them famed director Mike Nichols.

Two years ago she moved to New York with her children, Chastity Bono and Elijah Allmann, and tried her luck with stage producers. Same result. But her mother was a friend of film director Robert Altman, who was staging a play, "Come Back to the Five and Dime, Jimmy Dean." Cher won a role and was cheered by the critics.

The best result was a visit backstage by Nichols, who told her, "I was wrong. You're real talented, and I'm sorry I didn't realize it."

He cast her as Dolly Pelliker, the sardonic lesbian who shares a house with Meryl Streep and Kurt Russell in "Silkwood."

"Silkwood" has changed her life. Although she has lived in her house only three years, she has it up for sale at $5.9 million, and plans to live in New York.

"But not for long," she added. "I'm just a gypsy at heart, and so are my kids."

On a recent radio talk show, a caller said she regretted that Cher no longer wore her startling dresses.

"Watch the Academy awards," Cher replied. "I'll try not to disappoint you."

Dutch-Japanese dancer Mata Hari, the most famous spy of World War I, was executed in a suit she had tailored for the occasion.
