

Valley View officials defend plant plan

By KIM THOGMARTIN
Staff Writer

An operations manager for Valley View Energy Corporation of Dallas said on Thursday that construction of a manure-fueled electrical generating plant near Hereford will be "almost an ideal marriage of city, state and private business interests."

Bobby Farris, along with company president Don Lieb and Bob Isaac, the firm's attorney, spoke to members of the business community during a noon luncheon at the Hereford Country Club. They later met with the Hereford City Commission and the Deaf Smith Chamber of Commerce board of directors.

The Texas Air Control Board has granted the company preliminary approval to construct and operate a 40-megawatt power plant five miles east of Hereford. It would rest on a 300-acre site purchased last fall from the city. Last week, Valley View gave public notice of a 30-day comment period, required by the ACB, which began on March 6.

"In addition to the obvious direct economic and environmental benefits to the area, the value to the feedyards through the purchase and collection of their manure will be significant," Farris claimed. "An economically healthier cattle feeding industry will further support the local farming and ranching interests."

The proposed plant, which company hopes to have operational in a little more than two years, will daily burn about 1,500 tons of manure, which will be purchased from area feedyards. Valley View has estimated the annual use of 500,000 tons of feedlot waste to be about 50 to 60 percent of what is produced each year by the cattle on feed in the county.

"Since the manure will be burned in a circulating fluid bed boiler at high temperature," Farris explained, "emissions from the plant will be well below environmentally acceptable standards."

Lieb, who described Valley View as "primarily an oil and gas exploration and production company, said he and Farris joined the company after working together in the alternative fuels division of Diamond Shamrock in Amarillo. He explained that Valley View has been working on the idea of a manure-fuelled generating plant for the past two years.

"This is the exciting part," he said. "We've made all the plans, and now things are moving. We hope to begin construction later this summer. We do believe the project will be a fine addition to the city."

Lieb said the company's research team also studied the feasibility of anaerobic digestion and gasification before settling on direct combustion as the best way to utilize manure as a fuel. "We don't believe it's ever been done on a commercial basis before," he added.

Addressing concerns expressed by residents who live near the site, Farris said, "The executive director of the Texas Air Control Board has determined that the proposed facility will operate within all state or federal air quality regulations and will not have any adverse impact on soil, vegetation or visibility."

He explained that because the boiler will have "an operating temperature 500 to 800 degrees lower than with a coal-fired plant," nitrogen oxide emissions will be reduced.

Farris said the plan is to haul the manure to the facility in covered dump trucks and unload it in a below-ground storage silo. The TACB has instructed Valley View to pave all roads at the project to cut down on dust that would be caused by trucks going in and out.

Nearby residents have objected mostly to the company's intention of maintaining an "inactive" stockpile of manure near the plant, to be used during times when removal from feedyards is not convenient.

Acknowledging that the 120-day supply would occupy 10 to 15 acres, "depending on how tall we build it," Lieb described the characteristics of a "pile of manure" that keep it from being a serious air pollutant.

Manure develops a crust on it after a few days, he said, which would keep it from blowing about. He also claimed the crust would keep it from absorbing more water during a rain, and several local businessmen agreed that dampness is what causes manure to develop a strong odor.

Lieb said the stockpile of feedlot waste at Randall

Farm worker captures case in court

By KIM THOGMARTIN
Staff Writer

A farm worker who claimed his employer violated the minimum wage law has won damages in Federal District Court, while his former boss has been prohibited from collecting breach of contract

Contract judged unmet damages awarded to him in 22nd District Court. U.S. District Judge Mary Lou Robinson of Amarillo ruled earlier this month in favor of Jose Martinez, a former Hereford resident who was last known to be living near Mexico City, Mexico. Martinez, represented by Texas Rural Legal Aid attorneys, filed suit in October, 1981 against Cliff Skiles Jr., owner of Deaf Smith County Grain Processors and Cottonwood Cattle Company.

In December of that year, Skiles filed a district court suit against Martinez, claiming Martinez violated their employment contract when he quit his job in August after agreeing to work until December. A 22nd District Court jury ruled in Skiles' favor on October 13, 1983, and he was awarded $15,000 in damages. The minimum wage claim brought by Martinez was heard by Robinson a few days later.

Since Skiles allegedly did not keep wage records, the major dispute arose over hours actually worked by Martinez. He testified that he "worked from sunrise to sunset, seven days per week, from March 21, 1981, through August 28, 1981."

Skiles and Jack Green, a business partner, argued "that the plaintiff was never up at the crack of dawn, that someone had to go get him every morning, and that he took one to one-and-a-half hour lunches."

Further, the testimony continued, Martinez "stopped work between 4:30 and 5:00 each afternoon, never worked more than 40 hours a week, and lay around the bunkhouse drinking beer on Sundays."

Martinez reportedly was paid $450 a month and provided with lodging and food. He was also promised a $150 per month bonus payable in December if he worked that long. Martinez quit in August and the money was not paid to him.

Robinson found that Martinez was entitled to $1,170.34 in actual damages for unpaid minimum wages and overtime compensation under terms of the Fair Labor Standards Act. She assessed the same amount in liquidated damages for a total award of $2,340.68.

The court further held that the filing of the district court suit was in retaliation for Martinez' minimum wage claims in federal court. Robinson said Skiles had no reasonable basis for his suit and it was an act of retaliation prohibited by the minimum wage law.

Loiterer shot near White House

By JAMES ROWLEY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A man whose loitering near the White House aroused Secret Service suspicions was hospitalized with a bullet wound today after being shot by guards who said he threatened them with a sawed-off shotgun.

David A. Mahonski, who an uncle said wanted to "see the president and straighten him out," was shot in the arm Thursday night on a sidewalk outside the White House grounds.

The shooting occurred several hours after presidential guards arrested another man who allegedly scaled the iron-spiked fence that surrounds the executive mansion.

U.S. Park Police planned today to charge Mahonski with assault with a deadly weapon and a federal firearms violation for possession of a sawed-off shotgun, said Lt. Jeffrey Davis, a police spokesman. Davis also said a bow and arrow were found in the man's car.

Guards cite shotgun threats

Mahonski, 25, of Williamsport, Pa., had been questioned several times by White House guards outside the executive mansion in the past several weeks, said Sgt. Tony Ferraro, a Park Police investigator.

"Apparently they had previous contacts with the subject," Ferraro said.

"We had a look-out on the guy just for hanging around the area," he said.

But Davis said there was no evidence that Mahonski was trying to enter the White House and he had not been listed by the Secret Service as a threat to President Reagan.

Howard Engel, Mahonski's uncle, told The Washington

Times that his nephew had repeatedly talked about going to "see the president and straighten him out." Engel said Mahonski had been treated for drug use, particularly cocaine.

"When he was high, he blamed the establishment for everything," Engel said.

Mahonski was spotted about 7:35 p.m. walking along a sidewalk outside the South Lawn by the two Secret Service officers who got out of their patrol car, Ferraro said.

"When he was approached he turned to the officers with a sawed-off shotgun," Ferraro said. The suspect was shot after he "wheeled around" and pointed the weapon at the officers, the detective said.

"They challenged him and he did not drop the shotgun and he was shot," said Ferraro, who did not identify the officer who fired a single round from his service revolver. The sawed-off shotgun contained one live round of ammunition, he said.

According to the Secret Service, Mahonski was struck in the right forearm.

Reagan was in the White House at the time of the shooting, according to Sheila Dixon, a White House spokeswoman.

The shooting occurred several hours after a 27-year-old man, Keith George Mitchell, was taken into custody after he allegedly climbed over the 8-foot iron fence on the north side of the White House grounds along Pennsylvania Avenue. It was three years ago this month that John Hinkley shot Reagan in an assassination attempt outside the Washington Hilton.

Dallas officials knock cable request

DALLAS (AP) — Former U.S. Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis, who now heads Warner Amex Cable Communications, has angrily fought back at accusations that his company sought city franchise concessions while at the same time trying to thwart local regulation.

Lewis defends credibility man, was told by several City Council members on Thursday that they could not accept the company's request for concessions in its franchise agreement.

Warner Amex officials were accused by Deputy Mayor Pro Tem Jim Hart of asking for local concessions while simultaneously asking Congress to pass legislation that would exempt the company from much local regulation.

Hart said he believes the city should seek bids from Warner Amex competitors if the council decides to change the franchise.

He accused Warner Amex of not playing fairly by seeking to change the "rules of the game" after winning the franchise bidding war. If the city agrees to change the franchise requirements, other cable companies should be allowed to bid, Hart said.

Mayor Pro Tem Annette Strauss said the Warner Amex proposal would require substantial modifications to have any chance of council approval.

"This is not acceptable," Mrs. Strauss said. "I don't think this is acceptable to any of us."

Lewis appeared before the panel to press Warner Amex' case for concessions that the company says are necessary to reduce the firm's losses in Dallas.

But the company will not raise rates 27 to 30 percent as planned on March 27, the end of a 60-day notification period required by city ordinance, city officials were told by Lewis.

He and Charles Gramlich, Warner Amex' general manager in Dallas, said that without concessions, the company expects to lose $465 million in Dallas during its 15-year franchise, including $24.2 million last year, $34.2 million in 1984 and $60 million in 1985 and 1986 combined.

The company has submitted the rates for city review, although company officials believe the firm has the right to implement the increases without city approval.

Lewis did not say how long the company would wait before increasing rates. He said the company wanted to keep pressure on city officials to act on the requests for concessions.

"We don't relish the position we're in," Lewis said. "We understand the complications that it causes for you who are serving the public in Dallas."

"We also have a formidable problem that we have to meet," he said. "There's no way that we can stay in business and lose $465 million over the next 15 years in Dallas. So we're here to try to work with you."

But Lewis, in response to questions by council members, said the company would agree to be bought out of its $150 million investment in Dallas and give up the franchise if that is what the City Council wants.

"If that were the decision that the city decided to take, we would comply with it," Lewis said. "We don't feel that's in your best interest."

Warner Amex has proposed cutting the number of programmed channels from the current 76 to 45, including reducing the 30 public-access channels to five full-time and three part-time channels. The company would cancel plans to build a studio and two access centers, have the city pay the $241,000 annual cost for operating access facilities.

Friena receives industry

Friena has been selected to have a $3 million public refrigerated storage plant which is to begin operations by September, it was announced Thursday.

The Millard Warehouse, to employ 100-120 people, is to be located a few miles east of Friena on Highway 60. The 70,000-square-foot facility will be placed near Hi-Pro Seeds.

According to Timothy Jackes, executive vice president of the Omaha, Neb., firm, the warehouse may expand to double its capacity and employees within five years.

The facility is to house red meats, frozen vegetables, some frozen prepared foods and poultry items.

Car stereo items stolen

An estimated $300 worth of car stereo equipment, including a power booster and equalizer, were stolen sometime Wednesday night from Moreno Motor Company, Hereford police reported this morning.

The theft, involving a 1973 Oldsmobile, occurred at the company's 1503 E. Park Ave. location.

Meanwhile, since Tuesday night police have handled four incidents of harassing telephone calls, two minor thefts and one act of domestic disturbance, simple assault and vandalism.

On Wednesday, three arrests were made: one for driving while intoxicated and the others for shoplifting. Hereford Volunteer Firemen responded to a vehicle fire.

Gunmen take American diplomat

By FAROUK NASSAR
Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Three gunmen kidnapped an American diplomat near his home in west Beirut today, a U.S. Embassy official said.

The abduction was reported as Christian and Moslem militiamen traded sustained barrages of mortars and rocket-propelled grenades in downtown Beirut, the most serious violation yet of Lebanon's three-day-old ceasefire. Police said at least two people were injured.

The U.S. Embassy's first secretary, Robert Pugh, said political officer William Buckley was abducted this morning as he left his residence in the Ras Beirut neighborhood of the capital's mostly Moslem western sector. The neighborhood is adjacent to the seafont boulevard where U.S. Embassy offices are located.

Pugh gave no further information about the kidnapping. Buckley became the third American missing in west Beirut since it was seized from the Lebanese army by Syrian-backed Druse and Shiite Moslem militiamen on Feb. 6.

Frank Regier, a professor of electrical engineering at the American University of Beirut, was kidnapped Feb. 10. Police said Regier, 50, who has a heart condition, was last seen being forced at gunpoint by two assailants into a black Mercedes near his house in Ras Beirut.

Jeremy Levin, 51, a native of Michigan and bureau chief for Cable News Network in Beirut, disappeared March 7. He was last seen by his wife at their Ras Beirut apartment, and CNN staffers believe he was kidnapped.

No one has claimed responsibility for the kidnappings. The sound of gunfire and crashing shells was heard in both Moslem and Christian sectors of the capital, and rival militias, accused each other of shooting first.

It was the first time that combatants engaged in prolonged mortar duels since the cease-fire was arranged Tuesday by nine key Lebanese leaders at reconciliation talks in Lausanne, Switzerland.

The talks in Lausanne were recessed today as a tribute to Kamal Jumblatt, the leftist Druse leader who was assassinated on March 16, 1977, and whose son, Walid, is a leader of the Syrian-backed opposition to President Amin Gemayel.

Activist group announces plan

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A Mexican-American activist group has mapped out an ambitious program aimed at convincing legal Hispanic aliens that they can become U.S. citizens — and vote — without forsaking their deeply ingrained heritage.

The pilot Citizenship Outreach Program, being implemented first in San Antonio, was organized by the Mexican-American Legal Defense Education Fund.

Mayor Henry Cisneros joined other city leaders Thursday in urging all Hispanic aliens legally living in this country to "open the door to all America has to offer" and become U.S. citizens.

Mexicans comprise the nation's largest immigrant group, but have one of the lowest naturalization rates, said MALDEF board member Frank Herrera.

"Many have lived here 20, 30, 40 years and have been good citizens as well as taxpayers, but they have not taken one of the most important steps — citizenship," Herrera said.

Probe continues into story

DALLAS (AP) — Speculation about whether a woman was already dead when her stepson called for an ambulance has no bearing on an investigation into a nurse's failure to immediately dispatch an emergency vehicle, according to fire department officials.

The conduct of nurse Billye Myrick was inexcusable, even if a pathologist proves to be correct in his conclusion that Lillian Boff, 60, had been dead for 30 minutes before medical personnel arrived, officials said Thursday.

"I don't think whether Mrs. Boff died before the call is the primary question," said fire department spokesman Bill Jernigan. "It is a question of the procedures that Ms. Myrick followed."

Mrs. Boff's stepson, Larry Boff, called for an ambulance Jan. 5, saying that his stepmother was having trouble breathing. He then spent eight minutes on the telephone with the nurse and with a fire department ambulance dispatcher who scolded him for foul language and demanded to speak with Mrs. Boff.

Glenn quits presidential race

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. John Glenn, a hero astronaut who tried to become president, "reluctantly" quit the race for the Democratic presidential nomination today after a long campaign that failed to win a single primary or caucus.

"Although my campaign for the presidency will end, my campaign for a better America will continue," Glenn said at a news conference attended by aides and supporters.

Glenn declared, "I'd like nothing better than to stay in this race ... and to win the nomination of my party."

But he said events of the last several weeks indicate that is "not likely to happen."

"I have therefore decided to withdraw from the race," Glenn made the withdrawal after a disappointing campaign in which he seemed to be a strong challenger for the nomination, but failed to excite the voters of the country.

His best showing in the early primaries and caucuses was a second place in the Alabama primary last Tuesday.

Up most in six years

WASHINGTON (AP) — Construction of new homes surged 11.2 percent in February to the highest level in almost six years, the Commerce Department reported today.

The department said that work on new houses in February was started at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 2.2 million units, the best showing since the same rate in April 1978.

It marked the second straight month that housing construction, one of the key elements in the economy, has shown unusual strength. The February increase surprised many analysts who had predicted that the strong January pace could not be sustained.

CIA predicts increase

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Central Intelligence Agency expects the number of U.S.-backed Nicaraguan rebels to climb soon to 18,000, drawing new support from disaffected government soldiers and peasants, intelligence sources say.

The sources, who spoke on condition they not be identified, said the rebel forces — based in Honduras and Costa Rica — now total about 15,000, but that recent military gains are likely to attract an influx of recruits in the next few months.

The CIA projection was presented to House and Senate intelligence committees in the past week, sources said. But some administration and congressional officials, questioning the CIA's figures, claim that only 5,000 rebels actually engage in combat, with others assigned support duties.

HEBER SPRINGS, Ark. (AP) — A series of tornadoes that "sucked up trees" and hurled "man-sized chunks" of debris through the air in northern Arkansas left at least four people dead, dozens of buildings in ruins and a quarter-mile bridge crumpled into a lake.

The deadly barrage came just as evening fell and many people were sitting down to dinner.

KOMATIPOORT, South Africa (AP) — South Africa's prime minister and Mozambique's Marxist president met at a rail crossing in the African bush today and signed the first non-aggression treaty between white-minority ruled South Africa and a black-governed neighbor.

The mutual security pact, signed in an elaborate ceremony by Prime Minister P.W. Botha and President Samora Machel, is intended to end years of guerrilla raids and set the stage for an era of economic cooperation between South Africa and Mozambique.

"We have signaled to the world our belief that states with different socio-economic and political systems can live together in peace and harmony and work together in the pursuit of common interests," Botha said in a speech prepared for the ceremony, held under a white pavilion erected at the rail crossing on the banks of the Komati River.

Plan rejection is blow

By R. GREGORY NOKES
AP Diplomatic Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — By turning his back on President Reagan's peace initiative, Jordan's King Hussein has dealt the Reagan administration its second major foreign policy blow in a month and also jeopardized proposed U.S. arms sales to Jordan.

Hussein said progress toward an Arab-Israeli peace, as envisioned by Reagan, is "hopeless" as long as the United States takes Israel's side.

"You obviously have made your choice and your choice is Israel and support of Israel," he said in an interview with The New York Times.

While Hussein's dissatisfaction with recent American policy in the Middle East was known to the administration, they were caught off-guard by his decision to go public.

A senior State Department official said Thursday that Hussein may have been partly motivated by fear of Syria and the failure of American policy in Lebanon, which Hussein said had contributed to a loss of U.S. credibility in the Middle East.

"Hussein wants some sense of protection," said the official, who insisted on anonymity. "Protection means some commitment from the United States. He can't help but be disturbed by what happened in Lebanon."

A half dozen Jordanian diplomats have been attacked in recent months and several have been killed.

But the senior official lamented that in denouncing the American relationship with Israel, Hussein has now "made it more difficult for himself" to ever enter peace negotiations with Israel, although until he does there can be no lasting peace in the region.

In response to Hussein's comments, administration spokesmen made clear they are neither giving up on the Reagan initiative, first proposed on Sept. 1, 1982, or on close American ties with Israel.

"The United States has had, does have and will always have a strong friendship with Israel," said John Hughes, the State Department spokesman. He said U.S.-Israeli ties are "fully compatible" with successful Arab-Israeli negotiations.

While he said the Hussein statement was "a disappointing setback, of course it is," he defended Reagan initiative as "the most realistic, workable and promising approach" to a lasting peace that would give justice to the Palestinians.

"Obviously the king is in a pessimistic phase," Hughes said.

In an obvious reference to Syria, Hughes said "the forces of extremism and terrorism are complicating the situation in the region, increasing the risks to moderates who contemplate joining the peace process."

The king's remarks constituted the second blow to the administration's Middle East diplomacy in the past month. The first was the breakdown in Lebanon that led to the withdrawal of Marine peacekeeping forces and the scrapping of the U.S.-brokered 1983 Lebanese-Israeli troop withdrawal agreement.

Reagan admits need for more taxes, less spending

By ROBERT FURLOW
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wholesale prices, pushed by the steepest fuel-oil price rise since 1979, rose 0.4 percent last month, the government reported today. If that rate held through the year, 1984 would show the steepest inflation in three years.

Energy prices in general rose 0.4 percent, today's Labor Department report said, though it added that because of reporting delays the figures mostly reflected increases in January, when unseasonably cold weather sent heating bills skyward in much of the nation.

The energy price rise was the first in five months and only the second since June.

So far this year, wholesale prices as measured by the Producer Price Index for finished goods are rising at an annual rate of 6.2 percent, compared with rates of 0.6 percent for last year, 3.7 percent for 1982 and 7.1 percent for 1981.

Government and private economists said cold weather caused heavy heater usage, cutting oil supplies and driving up prices in the February report. The 8.2 percent rise in fuel oil prices was the biggest since a similar gain in September 1979.

Analysts also said the severe weather had helped cause January's 0.6 percent surge by damaging crops in the South and Southwest and sending food prices soaring. Food costs rose 0.7 percent in February after rising 2.7 percent in the preceding month, the new report said.

Better overall inflation figures are expected now that warmer weather is arriving. But Michael K. Evans, president of Evans Economics in Washington, said in advance of the new report that "inflation is starting to heat up again." And James Pihera, a Georgia State University economist, said that if prices don't settle down soon "we've got some trouble."

Other details of today's report said:

—Gasoline costs fell 1.3 percent while natural gas prices edged down 0.1 percent. The general energy increase reversed a trend of six declines in the previous seven months.

—Among food prices, vegetable prices jumped 13.5 percent, almost twice as much as in January, but there was only a 1.5 percent increase for beef and veal prices and costs actually declined 4.2 percent for fresh fruits, 2.6 percent for eggs, 3.7 percent for pork, 2.7 percent for poultry and 4.9 percent for fish.

—New car prices rose 1.4 percent, while light truck prices were up 1.3 percent.

—Capital equipment costs for modernizing and expanding U.S. industry rose 0.5 percent.

If February's overall price increase of 0.4 percent were to hold steady for 12 months, the yearly advance would be 4.7 percent.

That annual rates, computed by department economists, is based on a more precise calculation of monthly prices than the figures made public.

In all, the Producer Price Index for finished goods stood at 290.6 in February, meaning that goods costing $10 in the base year from Florida to Texas.

And Donald Ratajczak, director of the Economic Forecasting Project at Georgia State University, said before release of today's report that more than half of the total February increase "can be accounted for by the temporary swing in energy prices" in answer to cold-weather heating needs.

"These price increases appear to be the result of weather-induced market pressures, and they are already beginning to tumble," he said. Energy prices should "decline sharply" in the report due next month, he said.

Many analysts are forecasting that wholesale price inflation will be in the moderate range of 2 percent to 4 percent this year, partly because of a pickup in industrial prices as the economy continues to gain strength in its recovery from the 1981-82 recession. But that would still be relatively low in comparison to rates over 10 percent as recently as 1979 and 1980.

The Producer Price Index for finished goods measures month-to-month changes in the prices paid to producers for food, energy products and other items. The prices American consumers actually pay — usually to retailers — are measured by the Consumer Price Index, but the PPI often gives a good idea where those consumer prices are heading.

In general, the Labor Department takes the word of producers for the price report, basing it for the most part on questionnaires, which companies fill out on a voluntary, confidential basis. Some prices also are obtained from trade publications and other government agencies.

After bargaining

Reagan in agreement

By CLIFF HAAS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, after face-to-face bargaining with Senate Republican leaders, has agreed that increased taxes and reduced military spending will be necessary to combat the flood of federal red ink.

Democratic leaders said the president "finally has awakened to reality," but they added that a three-year, $149.5 billion deficit-reduction package of increased revenues and spending curbs announced Thursday by Reagan and senior GOP senators is only a start.

"The next question is whether the president can bring himself to achieve the bipartisan compromise that is necessary to win approval of a budget," said House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass.

Flanked by Republican congressional leaders in the White House Rose Garden, Reagan outlined a plan that includes:

—$48 billion in increased revenues over three years that would come from closing a variety of tax loopholes that affect mainly upper-income investors and businesses. The Senate Finance Committee plans to wrap up work on such a measure next week. The House Ways and Means Committee already has drafted similar legislation.

—A reduction of about $40 billion in the defense spending of $931.1 billion the president has requested for the next three years.

—A reduction of $43.2 billion over the next three years in domestic spending.

Domestic spending cuts contemplated by Reagan include $14.7 billion in savings from tightening government benefit programs such as Medicare to be taxed.

The liquor tax increase, from the current maximum $10.50 per gallon, would not affect beer or wine. A House panel has voted an even-larger increase in the liquor tax, to $14.25 a gallon.

Also on Capitol Hill:

The president's school prayer amendment is finally headed for a Senate vote. After 10 days of debate, Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker on Thursday scheduled a vote on the constitutional amendment next Tuesday afternoon.

Reagan's version would allow organized spoken prayers in the nation's classrooms for the first time in more than 20 years. Another version, which was soundly defeated Thursday, would have permitted only silent prayer or reflection.

A White House effort to tie military aid for Central America with emergency aid to drought-stricken Africans has been partially broken. The Senate on Thursday lacked half of the $150 million African aid to another economic assistance measure.

County Feedyards is three times larger than the proposed stockpile here, and has not caused any problems in the area. Randall County Feedyards is owned by Valley View Cattle Company, a sister company to the energy corporation.

"There's a lot of concern, and I think it's understandable, but we just can't move the plant," Lieb said. "I think the facts will satisfy the concerns that have been expressed."

Lieb added that the company has agreed to plant a row of trees in front of the plant and to route trucks along the nearby county road instead of adding a new road which would have been closer to nearby homes.

"We have also agreed to move the plant and the stockpile farther back from the highway than we originally intended," he commented.

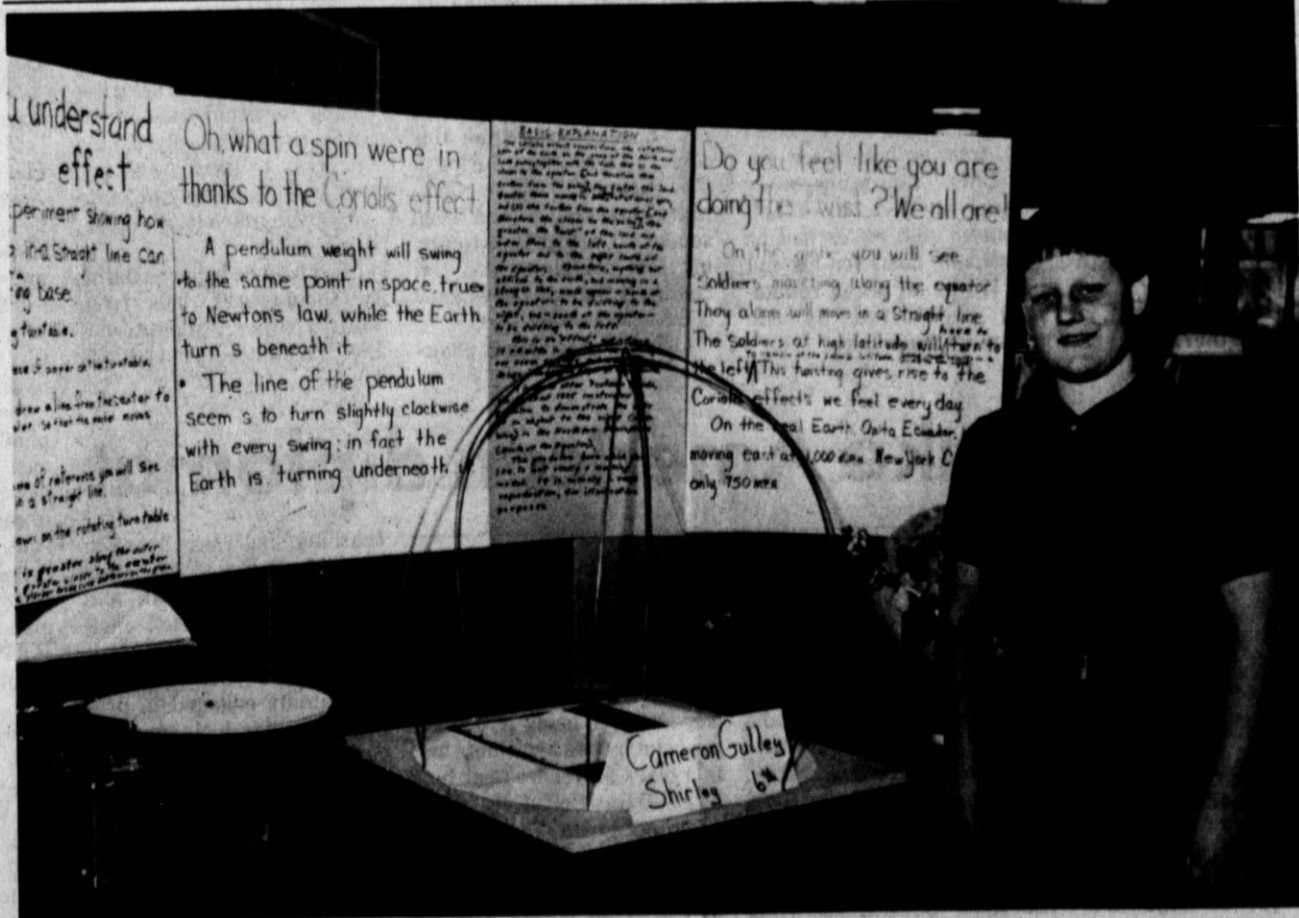

The company expects to employ a maximum of 300 people during construction, and plant operations will require about 80 full-time employees. Lieb said that represents a payroll of around $2,500,000 per year. Valley View official, estimate support services for the plant and its employees would provide jobs for another 300 persons locally.

Contract negotiations are still underway to provide a market for the electricity, which will probably be transported over Southwestern Public Service Company utility wires.

Ann Landers Repulsed by ritual

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am writing about a unique problem in the hope that you will tell us what to do.

We are a small commercial bank in Chicago. A gentleman in our office removes his shoes and socks and sprays his feet with something that asphyxiates nearby staff members. He does this EVERY DAY.

The fact that he is situated in a customer contact area does not seem to faze him. When he had his own office and performed this ritual, it was viewed with distaste, but tolerated. Now that he is right next to the receptionist we find it totally unacceptable.

No one has approached him, although many of us have verbalized our disgust loud enough for him to hear. Nothing changes.

Please tell us what should be done.—Freaked Out In Chicago told about this incredible lack of judgment. I can assure you the boss will put an end to these daily obscenities.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: For the last 20 years (maybe 30) my aunt has been saying, "I really ought to make a will." She never did. Last week she died, and before the body was cold my cousins were fighting over her possessions. It was an ugly spectacle.

Some months ago my mother gave me an antique silver service. Later I found out she had promised it to my sister. We are both distressed by mother's forgetfulness, and neither of us wants to hurt her feelings by mentioning her previous commitment. My sister is not greedy and neither am I. We can live with whatever the most recent will decrees.

I realize that making a will is an admission of the inevitability of death. While this understandably is difficult one of the most thoughtful gestures a parent can make is to draw up a will or simply a handwritten paper designating what he or she wishes done with material possessions. Please urge parents (everyone, for that matter) to ease the burden of their passing by making a will. And do it today—there may not be a tomorrow.—A Loving Child, Anywhere U.S.A.

DEAR ANYWHERE: I have beaten this subject to a pulp in the last several years, but I feel it is an extremely important one and am willing to hit it again.

Most people (about 99 percent) hate to make a will because they are certain they would cash in their chips the very next day. This, of course, is nonsense.

I pose a question to every person reading these words. If you died tomorrow, would your money, home, furnishings, clothing and jewelry go to those individuals you want to have them?

The best way to make sure your wishes are respected is to sit down with a pad and pencil and write down all the objects you want to give away—and to whom. Then think about your liquid assets. Do you want to leave specific gifts to special friends and the charities you support or admire? Call a lawyer and have it put in the form of a legal document.

If you die without a will in many states, the court will award one-half of your estate to a surviving spouse and one-half to the children.

Do you feel awkward, self-conscious—lonely? Welcome to the club. There's help for you in Ann Landers' booklet, "The Key to Popularity." Send 50 cents with your request and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611.

Thuett reviews spring, summer fashion trends

Esther Thuett presented "Focus on Spring and Summer Fashion Trends" when Wyché Extension Homemakers Club met Thursday in the home of Pet Ott.

She said that linen in every weight and blend will be the number one fabric for spring.

The strongest grey will be the key neutral color for the season, while peach and coral tones will be replacing the pinks of the past season, she noted.

The new color combination for sportswear is brown and white, while red, white and blue will be popular with the onset of the Olympic year and election year, concluded Ms. Thuett.

Clara Trowbridge was elected as the club's choice for nominee for the District I Texas Extension Homemakers Association spring meeting in Pampa April 24.

A poem on friendship was read by Ms. Ott.

Two guests, Vernia Elliott and Jamie May, were welcomed as guests. Other members present were Mildred LaFever, Gene Holden, Beverly Jesko, Carol Odom, Virgie Duncan, Ethel Logan and Argen Draper.

The next meeting will be April 5 in the home of Wynema Wheeler.

Student's artwork selected

Benjamin Morales' work, which received awards at the Scholastic Art Show in Amarillo recently, has been selected for exhibit in the Rotunda of the State Capitol.

Approximately 100 pieces of work were chosen from throughout the state. Final selection of the artwork exhibited was based on originality and creativity, as well as evidence of characteristics typical of the artists' age group.

The student's work will be on display March 24-31, which is reserved for Youth Art Month Exhibit to be held in the Rotunda of the State Capitol Building in Austin. This year's hostess is Mrs. Mark White.

Morales' work will go on to National Competition in New York.

Speaking of Sports

By STAN GODEK
Sports Editor

Sitting at the sports desk the other day, it was brought to my attention, "You know you have to cover the rodeo," a co-worker pointed out.

"But I've never been to a rodeo, let alone report on one," I quirked.

"Well, it's part of sports," I was informed, and that was the end of the discussion.

Really, the closest thing I've ever seen which could resemble a rodeo is reruns of the movie "Bronco Billy" starring Clint Eastwood.

I've witnessed bullfights in Spain, greyhound races in Tijuana and pit bulldogs battle to the death in the ghettos of East Detroit, but never a rodeo.

Rodeos just do not exist in the Motor City, nor many places in the Great Lakes region of the country. However, I'm looking forward to this weekend's high school rodeo here.

Terms such as steer wrestling, ribbon roping and team roping are some of the scheduled boys events. The girls will have barrels, poles and break-away roping, among others.

Frankly, all this befuddles me. The other day one of the members of Hereford's high school rodeo team tried to explain some of the events. She was quite an amiable young lady so I didn't want to appear like a moron.

"Oh yeah, I see," I said as she continued to explain the events. But when she left I began to scratch my head and try to decipher the meaning of the notes I had just taken.

Rather than have another person try a futile effort at explaining the goings-on of a rodeo I decided to just attend the event and learn from first-hand experience.

In the meantime, I have written a preview and some outlines for some photos I took of the HHS team preparing for the big weekend.

During pasteur all was going well until Tommy Weaver of the advertising department here at the Brand strolled nearby.

"You know that's spelled wrong," he said pointing to the outline which read "Opening The Shoot."

"What is?" I questioned.

"Shoot. It's supposed to be c-h-u-t-e. You know like a paraCHUTE."

"But she said it was a shoot. Are you sure it's CHUTE and not SHOOT, s-h-o-o-t?" I pleaded, hoping he was wrong and I would not have to make a time-consuming correction.

"Am I sure?" he grumbled defiantly.

Well I wasn't about to doubt the word of a devout rodeo aficionado like Tommy Weaver, so the correction was made.

While shooting photos this weekend, if I'm lucky I might get a good shot of a STEAR.

At The Arena

sophomore Jana Johnson, secretary. Schools from the Panhandle, Oklahoma and New Mexico will be competing in this weekend's rodeo.

NBA roundup

Dantley sparks Jazz

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

The Utah Jazz found a formula that would win on the road . . . give the ball to Adrian Dantley.

The National Basketball Association's leading scorer made 14 of 25 field goal attempts and nine of 10 free throws for 37 points Thursday night as the Jazz broke a seven-game road losing streak with a 115-111 victory at Golden State.

"We can play with anyone. We just have to improve on the road," said Dantley, who also had a team-high 11 rebounds. "We haven't been playing well on the road lately."

Despite the road woes, the latest Utah victory gave the Jazz a half-game lead over Dallas in the Midwest Division.

In other games, Kansas City edged Indiana 108-107. New York bombed Cleveland 105-82. Los Angeles outscored San Antonio 143-124 and Seattle beat Chicago 106-90.

John Drew, who scored eight of his 21 points in the final period, said the Jazz won the game by outacing the Warriors in a fast-paced game.

"We like to play at that pace," Drew said. "The Warriors, I think, are capable of playing like that but I don't think they want to."

"They just turned on the speed," Warriors Coach John Bach said. "If there's anything lacking in our guards, it's speed. We're not real fast."

The Warriors trailed 95-86 after three periods but pulled even at 101-101 midway through the fourth quarter with the help of two three-point field goals by Mike Bratz, who had four three-pointers in the game.

Thurl Bailey, who had 22 points, broke the tie by stuffing a follow-up shot and he scored again a few seconds later on a fast break. A jump shot by Drew made it 107-101 and the Jazz stayed at least three points up the rest of the way.

Golden State's top scorer was forward Purvis Short with 22 points, but he was scoreless in the last quarter. Bratz finished with 17 points.

Lakers 143, Spurs 124

At Inglewood, Calif., Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scored 20 of his 26 points in the first two periods to help Los Angeles sprint to a 20-point lead at halftime, and the Lakers held on in the second half to beat San Antonio.

Earvin "Magic" Johnson scored 22 points and Jamaal Wilkes 21 for Los Angeles, while Mike Mitchell led the Spurs with 31.

Sonics 106, Bulls 90

Seattle, after losing six straight games on the road, won at home against Chicago as Gus Williams scored 23 points and reserve guard Fred Brown sank six straight jumpers in the second half.

Brown hit two jumpers and Williams a three-point play to extend a six-point Super-Sonics lead to 80-67 in the fourth quarter and the Bulls, who got a game-high 30 points from Quintin Dailey.

Herd falls to Pampa, 9-4

When the Hereford High School boys varsity baseball team ventured up to Pampa Thursday, it knew the first game of the Pampa baseball tournament would be its toughest.

The Whitefaces were scheduled to play Pampa High in the first round. They did, and lost, 9-4. Three Harvester homeruns accounted for five of the nine Pampa runs.

Hereford's Mickey Stengel and Ronnie Collier also belted homers but "Pampa hit theirs with runners on base, that was the difference," HHS coach Don Long explained this morning.

Pampa has been on a hitting rampage lately. In its past four games it has outscored its opponents, 35-14, while maintaining a four-game winning streak.

With Thursday's loss, HHS now has a 2-4 season won-lost record. Three of those losses have come at the hands, or rather, the bats of Pampa.

The Harvesters will be shooting for their second tournament championship in a week, having won the Hereford tournament last Saturday, 10-3, over the Whitefaces.

Robert Martinez started on the mound for HHS Thursday before giving way to Stengel in the fifth who finished the contest.

The Herd will now play Dumas JV at 3:30 in the consolation round today. Pampa advances to the semifinals and will battle Borger High.

Hereford will open its District 3-4A season Tuesday when it travels to Lubbock to tangle with district rival Monterey High.

Floyd tries to capture Bay Hill Golf Classic

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Ray Floyd has played well in this tournament before. But he hasn't won.

"Three times before, I've figured out a way not to win," Floyd said.

And it seemed as if Tom Watson, Jack Nicklaus and George Burns were working on the same project Thursday in the first round of the $400,000 Bay Hill Classic.

Burns, for example, was two shots clear of the field with three holes to play and was working on a 6-under-par 65 late in the warm, sunny day. But he bogeyed two of the last three and dropped back into a four-way tie for the lead with Floyd, PGA champion Hal Sutton and Leonard Thompson at 67.

Watson, trying to fight his way out of the worst slump of his career, had things going well as he approached the 18th tee. He was 4-under-par, good enough — as it turned out — to share the lead.

But he drove into the rough, then hit a 5-iron second shot that blew it all. It hit high up in the stands.

Defending national champions, North Carolina, have no victory

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

There will be no victory celebrations to cap North Carolina State's season this year.

The defending national champion Wolfpack and Coach Jim Valvano were ignored by the NCAA after finishing seventh in the Atlantic Coast Conference with a 19-13 record. But they hoped to make it two postseason tournament victories in a row by winning the National Invitation Tournament.

That dream ended almost before it had a chance to grow when Florida State defeated the Wolfpack 74-71 in an opening-round game at Raleigh, N.C., Thursday night.

After Terry Gannon, a usually reliable free throw shooter, missed the first of a 1-and-1 with 1:06 remaining for N.C. State, Randy Allen's reverse layup with 41 seconds left in overtime gave the Seminoles a 72-71 lead. The Wolfpack had two shots miss in the final seconds before FSU's Maurice Myrick came up with a loose ball and scored on a dunk at the buzzer.

"I'm disappointed for our kids," Valvano said. "At one time I thought we had it won."

In other first-round games, it was Virginia Tech 77, Georgia Tech 74; Michigan 94, Wichita State 70; Xavier of Ohio 60, Ohio State 57 in overtime; Marquette 73, Iowa State 53 and Nebraska 56, Creighton 54 and Santa Clara 66, Oregon 53.

Florida State advanced into the second round of the NIT Sunday at Greensboro, N.C., against tonight's Pittsburgh-LaSalle winner in the second game of the doubleheader at Philadelphia's Palestra. The first game pairs Boston College and St. Joseph's, while Fordham is at Weber State in another first-rounder.

Fleming, who had 17 points, hit three straight free throws to break a 57-57 tie in overtime.

Xavier will be at home in the second round against Nebraska, which beat Creighton on Dave Hoppen's free throw with 10 seconds remaining after a technical foul was called on Bluejays center Benoit Benjamin.

NCAA playoffs

Big name collegiate teams faltering

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

It was a bad night for prestige conferences in the NCAA basketball playoffs.

Such teams as Auburn and Louisiana State from the Southeastern Conference, Oregon State from the Pac-10 and St. John's of the Big East went down to defeat as first-round action continued Thursday night.

Auburn was upset by Richmond 72-71 and St. John's lost to Temple 65-63 in the East Regional at Charlotte, N.C.; Oregon State was shocked by West Virginia 67-64 in the Midwest at Birmingham, Ala., and Louisiana State dropped a 74-66 decision to Dayton in the West at Salt Lake City.

In the other half of the Midwest, Brigham Young defeated Alabama-Birmingham 84-68. In the Midwest, Memphis State stopped Oral Roberts 92-83 and Louisiana Tech upset Fresno State 66-56, and in the other West first-round, Nevada-Las Vegas whipped Princeton 68-56.

The NCAA playoffs continue with first-round action tonight. In the East Regional at East Rutherford, N.J., it's Virginia Commonwealth vs. Northeastern and Virginia against Iona. In the Midwest at Milwaukee, Louisville plays Morehead State and Villanova takes on Marshall.

Illinois State faces Alabama and Kansas meets Alcorn State in the Midwest at Lincoln, Neb., and Nevada-Reno plays Washington and Miami of Ohio tackles Southern Methodist in the West at Pullman, Wash.

John Newman scored 26 points in Richmond's victory over Auburn. The Spiders built a 48-28 lead early in the second half and then held off a frantic rally by the Tigers led by Charles Barkley.

Auburn coach Sonny Smith said the Tigers were hampered by a sluggish first half from which they didn't quite recover. Temple defeated St. John's on Terence Stansbury's jumper from beyond the key. The Owls squandered a 53-44 lead.

Reserve J.J. Crawl stole a pass near midcourt and hit a driving layup with three seconds remaining as West Virginia upset 17th-ranked Oregon State.

Crawl, who had missed the front end of a 1-and-1 with 21 seconds left, stepped into the path of Alan Tait's pass intended for Charlie Sitton, and drove for the game-winning basket that eliminated the Beavers, who shared the Pac-10 championship with Washington.

West Virginia trailed 56-51 with eight minutes remaining, but fought back for a 60-59 lead with 5:57 left on Renardo Brown's basket.

Sitton converted a three-point play with 5:30 to play; the last shot the Beavers took in the game. Two turnovers by Oregon State gave the Mountaineers the opportunity to tie the game at 62 with 2:02 left on a layup by Dale Blaney.

Roosevelt Chapman scored 29 points and led a second-half surge as Dayton whipped LSU. Chapman, the only senior on the Dayton squad and the school's all-time leading scorer, scored 10 consecutive points for the Flyers to break open the game.

With Dayton leading 41-40 with about 14 minutes left, Chapman hit a long jumper, a three-point play, two foul shots and another three-point play to put the Flyers up 51-43 with 10:38 remaining. Dayton built its largest lead of the game at 14 points with 2:11 remaining and played keep-away until the end.

Devin Durrant scored 23 points as Brigham Young overpowered Alabama-Birmingham. The Cougars never trailed after Jim Usevitch hit a layup for a 7-6 lead with 16:42 left in the first half.

BYU, the Western Athletic Conference runner-up, surged to a 29-14 lead before UAB fought back, but the Blazers were never able to close the margin to less than four points.

Keith Lee scored 26 points and Memphis State hit clutch free throws in the closing minutes to beat Oral Roberts. Lee hit on 12 of 18 shots from the field and grabbed 11 rebounds.

Playing before a capacity home crowd of 11,200 at the Mid-South Coliseum, the Tigers had trouble putting away Oral Roberts because of the shooting of Mark and Jeff Acres, sons of the ORU coach, Dick Acres. But Memphis State made 13 of 17 free throws in the last 4:31 to sew up the game.

Karl Malone and Wayne Smith led Louisiana Tech, playing in its first NCAA tournament, over Fresno State. Malone scored 24 points, while Smith added 16 as Louisiana Tech extended its winning streak to eight and snapped the nine-game streak of Fresno State.

Bock's Score

Islanders lead tight puck race

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

The most exciting race in the National Hockey League's Patrick Division may not be at the top of the standings, where the New York Islanders lead a tight struggle for first place.

Down at the bottom of the division, New Jersey and Pittsburgh are engaged in every bit as exciting a battle and the prize may be even more precious.

First place in the standings is worth a little better payoff before the playoffs and the home ice advantage in the early rounds. Last place in the standings is worth Mario Lemieux.

Lemieux is an 18-year-old center who could be the next Wayne Gretzky. He finished his final junior season at Laval of the Quebec Major Junior Hockey League the other night with a flourish, scoring six goals and adding five assists for your basic 11-point game.

That gave him 133 goals for the season, breaking the record of 130 set by Guy Lafleur in 1970-71, and 282 points, breaking Pierre Larouche's record of 251 set in 1973-74. He also scored a point in 62 consecutive games, a distinctly Gretzkian statistic. And he has NHL scouts drooling.

All of that means this young man almost certainly will become the No. 1 draft choice in June. That pick goes to the team with the poorest regular season record and New Jersey and Pittsburgh are in a titanic struggle for that prize.

Going into the weekend, the Penguins held the edge with a season total of 34 points, five less than the Devils. New Jersey has nine games left, a potential of 18 points. Pittsburgh has eight games remaining, a possible 16 points.

The magic number for the Penguins is six losses. If Pittsburgh loses six more games, New Jersey can lose all nine of its games and still finish with more points than the Penguins and without the No. 1 pick.

It just goes to show you what a little losing can do.

Bob Butera, president of the Devils, shook things up a couple of weeks ago when he casually remarked, "We're trying to win every game and I hope Pittsburgh is, too."

The Penguin brass was justifiably furious at the suggestion they would do anything else and complained bitterly. Butera pleaded innocent, saying he wasn't suggesting anything fishy. It may have been innocent but it certainly was ill-advised.

The Devils, already in trouble in the Lemieux chase, further damaged their chances by tying Washington in the Capital Centre the other night, despite being outshot 46-16. It was an impressive accomplishment, considering it ended a six-game Washington winning streak and stole a point that could be vital for the Caps in their pursuit of the Islanders.

There was a time this season when there seemed no question who would be getting that precious No. 1 pick, and it wasn't Pittsburgh or New Jersey. The Caps seemed a cinch, losing their first seven games and all but disappearing from the division in the season's first 2½ weeks.

"I was perplexed," said General Manager David Poile. "We had gone 9-1-1 in the pre-season and maybe we weren't that good. But we weren't as bad as 9-7."

Poile swung a key trade with Los Angeles, acquiring defenseman Larry Murphy for defenseman Brian Engblom and forward Ken Houston and just as quickly, the Caps won five straight to trigger an impressive recovery. Later there was a 10-game winning streak and then the six-game streak which ended with the tie against the Devils.

They have not lost a game in the month of March and they steam into the Nassau Coliseum Saturday night for a crucial meeting with the Islanders, just three thin points behind New York.

It just goes to show you what a little winning can do.

The family of Thomas Aquinas, in an attempt to prevent his joining the Dominican Order in 1244, kidnapped him and held him captive until he was able to escape.

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Migraine headaches

DEAR DR. LAMB — I'm a healthy 32-year-old woman with no major illnesses. But since I was 12 I've had what I call "blind headaches." My father also has suffered from these since an early age.

First I get blind spots in my vision. I can see but there are fuzzy black spots. The weird part is they are triggered by a bright glare of sun or even headlights of a car.

This phase lasts about 15 minutes, then the pain starts. During my teens and 20s the pain was really bad. Now that I'm older it's not nearly as bad, but my head aches the day after. Sometimes I become nauseated during these headaches. My father's headaches have followed the same pattern.

I've associated these headaches with sinus trouble, but I'd really like to know their origin.

DEAR READER — Your headaches don't sound as if they were caused by sinus trouble. They sound like migraine headaches. The spots in your vision probably are related to contraction of small arteries in your brain.

A major cause for headaches is the dilation of arteries. As the arteries dilate they stretch nerve fibers in the walls of the arteries, which causes pain. The constricted arteries may cause the spots in your vision. During that time you would have no pain. Then when the arteries over-dilate, as they will after a period of constriction, the nerves are stimulated and the headache begins.

There are a number of things you can do to help avoid migraine headaches, including avoiding certain foods, particularly those that contain sodium nitrate and cured meats. You should avoid all foods and beverages high in tryptamine.

These points are discussed in more detail in the Health Letter 16-12, Headaches and What to do About Them, which I'm sending you. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I'm a 19-year-old man in good health. I'm going to get a tattoo. The only fear I have is the possibility of hepatitis. I see people every day with tattoos and I've never heard of any problems.

What are the chances of getting hepatitis? And what precautions should I take once I get my tattoo to prevent infection?

DEAR READER — I can't go along with your idea of a tattoo. There are quite a few cases of hepatitis reported from tattoos. One report in 1950 described 17 cases of hepatitis from one tattoo parlor alone.

Although other illnesses are not so common now, it's true tattoos have induced various infections, including reported cases of syphilis and leprosy.

In addition, the pigments used in tattooing may cause sensitivity. Dr. Normal Goldstein of Honolulu discovered that red tattoos developed itchy nodular reactions after exposure to sun because some cadmium sulfide was included in the red pigment. The yellow tattoo marks from cadmium also are sensitive to the sun. My advice is don't do it; you will be glad you didn't.

Vitamin supplements may not be necessary

COLLEGE STATION — The store shelves are overflowing with "stress formula" vitamin supplements. But are they necessary?

That depends on how you define stress, says Dr. Alice Hunt, a nutrition specialist with the Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service.

Stress resulting from injury, infection, fever, shock, bone fractures or surgery may increase nutrient requirements, she says. But the stresses of everyday life have not been scientifically shown to cause vitamin deficiencies.

The one exception, says Hunt, is if you eat improperly over a long period of time as a result of your stress.

"Sometimes good nutrition takes a back seat to increasing pressures, problems and responsibilities in our lives, and if this goes on for months or years, vitamin supplementation could be needed," says the specialist.

If you get less than the recommended allowance for a vitamin for a few days, however, that will not create a vitamin deficiency.

Even the water-soluble V vitamins and vitamin C are stored in the body to some extent, she says. For example, it takes 90 days without vitamin C before any clinical signs of a deficiency will appear.

Disturbance follows policeman's acquittal in shooting

MIAMI (AP) — Black youths hurled rocks, looted stores and set fires today while heavily armed police responded with tear gas after an all-white jury acquitted a Hispanic policeman of manslaughter in the shooting of a black man.

Up to 185 people were arrested and two policemen received facial injuries within hours of the acquittal of Officer Luis Alvarez on Thursday night. Mayor Maurice Ferre said police would do "whatever is necessary" to maintain order.

By 4:30 a.m. this morning the disturbance was "under control" with only sporadic rock- and bottle-throwing, said police spokesman Juan Santos.

Earlier, officers fired tear gas into a crowd of about 100 young blacks who poured out of a housing project in the predominantly black Liberty City section and threw stones at officers.

As officers formed a line and marched down the street to disperse the crowd, the youths fled back into apartments and shouted: "We want justice. We want justice."

Trash cans smoldered in the streets, and roving groups of young blacks taunted police.

Reports of sporadic rock- and bottle-throwing were received "all over" the city, said police spokesman Jack Sullivan.

It was the third outbreak of mass violence in black sections of Miami since 1980.

Alvarez, 24, was accused in the Dec. 28, 1982, slaying of Nevell Johnson Jr., a 20-year-old county messenger who was shot while the officer was searching for a concealed weapon at a video arcade in Overtown.

The shooting touched off three days of rioting that left one person dead and millions of dollars in damage. The acquittal of four white officers in the death of a black man in 1980 also ignited bloody rioting, in Liberty City, that claimed 18 lives.

This time, police prepared in advance for possible violence and were on the streets even before the eight-week trial had ended Thursday.

A Cuban-born house painter, John Ebanks, told reporters at a hospital that he was sitting in his car outside a restaurant near predominantly black Overtown when a group of youths beat him up. He displayed long, bloody gashes on his left arm and neck.

"I saw about 12 of them, young men, black," he said. "I had the idea they were going to do something to me and I tried to start the car, but they didn't give me a chance. They pulled me out of the car, and they hit me in the chest and head."

Up to 40 officers in riot gear and carrying shields moved into an Overtown housing project and led a handful of young black men to an orange police truck. Nearby, youths shouted, "Killer. Killer. Killer."

On Thursday night, when the verdict was read, Alvarez leaped from his chair, cried out in joy and hugged his attorney. He was quickly hustled out of the courtroom by plainclothes security men.

Members of the Johnson family sobbed uncontrollably, and the victim's mother, Marlyn Johnson, implored relatives to "hold it up. Don't worry about it. God will take care of it."

Alvarez claimed he fired in self-defense when Johnson turned to reach for a .22-caliber "Saturday night special" tucked in his waistband. Prosecutors argued the officer was never in danger.

Alvarez was the fourth officer in the past year to face trial here in slayings of blacks. Two were acquitted of manslaughter, and one, Metro-Dade Officer Robert Koenig, was convicted of manslaughter and sentenced to five years in prison.

In Midwest

Filed narrowing

Walter Mondale, battling for support in the industrial Midwest, is putting the heat on Gary Hart for his opposition to the federal bailout of Chrysler Corp., as the Democratic presidential field narrows to three.

Once considered Mondale's chief rival, Ohio Sen. John Glenn was poised to drop out of the race today after his red-ink campaign sputtered to also-ran finishes in key southern primaries earlier this week.

Glenn's withdrawal would leave the field with just Mondale, Hart and the Rev. Jesse Jackson, and they all were looking to Saturday's round of caucuses, including delegate-rich Michigan, and the Illinois primary on Tuesday.

Hart claimed another caucus win Thursday, capturing 43 percent of the vote in Alaska's precinct caucuses to 30 percent for Mondale, 10 percent for Jackson and 15 percent uncommitted. The caucuses determine how 11 of the state's 14 nominating delegates will be pledged.

In what has become a familiar story, Alaska Democratic chairwoman Dianne O'Connell said "nobody up here knew who Hart was" just a few weeks ago. She said Mondale's support was "widespread but soft" before Hart's campaign caught fire.

Mondale, big labor's candidate, campaigned in heavily unionized Michigan on Thursday and predicted he would win both there and in Illinois.

Again and again Mondale hit Hart's opposition to the federal loan guarantees that allowed ailing Chrysler to return to profitability.

Mondale's position drew support from Chrysler's chairman, Lee Iacocca, who issued a statement saying, "If it's not good industrial policy to get management, labor and government together to save 600,000 jobs, what is?"

In Illinois, Hart committed a campaign gaffe when he criticized Mondale for a television commercial questioning Hart's age, name and even his signature — and quickly apologized when he learned no such ad has aired and the Mondale campaign said none existed.

"It was a mistake and I apologize," Hart said.

Responded Mondale: "I accept that. I'm glad he did so. We get tired in the campaign. We say things we don't mean."

But Hart stuck by his statements that Mondale is running a "virtually negative campaign." He said Mondale has made a series of inaccurate charges over the last two weeks about Hart's record on arms control, energy taxes and medical costs for the elderly.

The Mondale campaign, which has never been hurting for cash, is facing serious restrictions because of federal spending limits of $20.2 million for the nomination campaign.

Mondale has already spent more than half the limit, while Hart is just getting started; Hart can spend another $17 million before he reaches the cap, while Mondale can spend just $8 million more.

"We are no longer the Cadillac operation," Mondale said in Chicago. "The salad days are over."

Judge orders tough probation

HOUSTON (AP) — A woman who received a probation sentence after pleading guilty to a felony manslaughter charge has been ordered to get a job and told not to drive a car without a judge's permission for the next 10 years.

Jo Ann Williams, 27, pleaded guilty to a charge of involuntary manslaughter in the death of Dale Moshay, 7, who died last August after being hit by a car on a sidewalk near his home.

Ms. Williams was arrested and a test showed her blood-alcohol content was more than twice the legal limit, authorities said.

State District Judge Joe Kegans agreed to place the woman on probation Thursday, but her orders included a set of strict conditions for the probation.

The conditions include: — Ms. Williams must perform 160 hours of community service, preferably in an emergency room of a hospital.

— She will spend 30 days in county jail, serving the time in 10, three-day terms on weekends.

— She must pay $16,500 to the Harris County Hospital District, which treated the Moshay boy at Ben Taub Hospital, and $2,500 to the boy's parents for funeral and other expenses.

— Get a job immediately. Ms. Williams, the mother of a 4-year-old boy, has not worked since 1978.

— Never drive an automobile without prior approval through her probation officer.

The probation terms must be closely observed for the next 10 years, Ms. Kegans said.

"I think the judge very strongly stated that if she violates any of the conditions, she'll be going to prison," said Assistant District Attorney Rusty Herman.

Ms. Williams' attorney, Walter Gill, said they will try to work out some system of repaying "that enormous hospital bill."

"My client is not a criminal," Gill said. "It was just a very unfortunate accident."

Dale Moshay, his 9-year-old brother and two friends were walking to a store last Aug. 17 when Ms. Williams' car jumped the curb, hit the brothers, crashed through a chain link fence and into a field. The older brother was released after a short hospital stay, but Dale died two days later.

Ms. Williams was arrested after the accident and tests showed blood-alcohol content was .25 percent. The legal limit in Texas is .10 percent.

From sunken ship

Bodies to arrive Friday

HOUSTON (AP) — The bodies of 30 crewmen recovered from a sunken American drilling ship arrived in Hong Kong, where officials would attempt to identify them, a Chinese news agency reported today.

A Chinese freighter carried the bodies recovered from the sunken Glomar Java Sea to Hong Kong, said the Hong Kong Health and Medical Department. American and Chinese authorities will try to identify them from autopsies and dental records.

Officials for Global Marine Inc., the Houston-based company that owns the ship, said 46 crewmen were still missing when divers ended their search Wednesday.

The vessel sank during a typhoon Oct. 25 and now lies upside down in 300 feet of murky water in the South China Sea, 200 miles east of Vietnam and 60 miles south of China's Hainan Island.

Officials still do not know if any of the ship's 81 crewmen, which included 35 Americans, survived.

Vietnamese officials have not permitted American or Chinese crews to search the country's territorial waters and say they have found no sign of survivors.

But the father of crewman John Pierce says an undisclosed Vietnamese official told him 21 crewmen are alive in Vietnam.

"I feel bad for the ones that didn't make it, but there obviously are survivors," said Douglas Pierce, an Austin lawyer.

"There may have been others washed overboard or others they didn't find, but that tells me there is still almost half the crew someplace else," he said.

A group of 22 U.S. congressmen has sponsored a resolution asking President Reagan to request permission through the United Nations to search the Vietnamese waters.

The Chinese news agency Xinhua said divers aboard the Norwegian ship Tender used deep-water equipment Wednesday to search the wreck. The agency said divers were attempting to make videotapes of cracks in the hull and interior of the sunken ship.

The divers also were searching for the logbook and charts in hopes of finding the cause of the accident, the worst ever for firms exploring for oil offshore China, Xinhua said.

Global Marine Vice President Dick Vermeer said divers had examined at least some portions of the "four or five decks where people are quartered." But they may never reach other areas, he said.

Company officials had said the ship's last radio message indicated crew members were donning life jackets.

Vermeer said "some" of the bodies found were wearing life jackets. "Eventually, the Coast Guard is going to have to make some determination about a presumption of death, whenever the facts seem to indicate that," he said.

The Norwegian search ship will remain at the scene, perhaps as long as a week, to complete a survey of the wreck in the hopes of finding additional information "as to what caused the rig to go down," Vermeer said.

Relatives of a few of the U.S. crew members have filed multimillion dollar lawsuits against Global Marine, claiming negligence by the company. The firm has denied any wrongdoing.

FOR BROWN

State awards grant
HARLINGEN, Texas (AP) — State District Judge Darrell Hester scheduled a hearing today to set a trial date for Eroy Broy, a former Texas Department of Corrections inmate accused of killing a prison farm manager. Hester was expected to order Brown to stand trial April 16.

On Thursday, a member of Gov. Mark White's staff announced the governor had awarded a $50,000 grant to pay for Brown's defense. Tom Bullington, deputy director of the governor's criminal justice division, said White signed the grant award Feb. 7.

The money to defend Brown, 33, comes from a $20 million criminal justice grant fund which is ordinarily used to fund law enforcement programs. In a December preliminary hearing, Hester gave the government until March 16 to come up with the money needed to defend Brown.

Hester said if the money were not found, the case would be dismissed. The $50,000 grant will pay for investigation, expert defense witnesses' fees and attorneys fees. A $45,000 state grant was awarded last September to Walker County District Attorney Frank Blazek to cover prosecution costs. A similar request made by court-appointed defense attorney Craig Washington was denied.

A Texas statute requires the state to pay the cost of defending indigent inmates accused of committing a crime while incarcerated. However, the legislature appropriated no money to the defense fund during the last legislative session, forcing the governor to find another source.

To create new school system

Panel completes blueprint of reforms

DALLAS (AP) — Texas school children will spend more time in the classroom with more competent, higher-paid teachers and will face more homework and tougher standards if the recommendations from a blue-ribbon panel are implemented.

The Select Committee on Public Education finished work Thursday on a slate of educational reforms that, if approved by a special session of the Legislature, would drastically alter how children are taught in Texas beginning in the 1985-86 school year.

But the chairman of the special commission, H. Ross Perot, admits the reforms — some of which could cost taxpayers more than $1 billion — represent a "Christmas wish list" that will be pared down when all the costs are added up.

"We're just making a list of everything we'd like to do and then we'll have to figure out what we can afford to do," said Perot.

"We're going to have to figure out all the costs and prioritize everything. No doubt we will have to cut some of this back. ... (But) we finished round one of a multi-round fight in pretty good shape. The next round is in the Legislature, and we'll not have until all of this is in place," he said.

The committee voted Thursday to lengthen the school year by 10 days, offer all students a two-hour optional "enrichment" program after the seven-hour school day, limit extracurricular activities, require licensed daycare centers to provide academic programs and require schools of education to adopt a public school and operate it.

House Speaker Gib Lewis predicted that lawmakers would make available $1.5 billion in new tax money and other revenues for the proposed school system.

"There's never any support for a tax increase. But I think for education there is support" in the public, Lewis said.

Before completing the voting on proposed recommendations in two days instead of the scheduled three, the committee favored making pre-kindergarten classes available to 4-year-olds, lowering the compulsory school attendance age from 7 to 5 and providing state funding for a full day of kindergarten instead of a half.

The committee studied the relationship between homework and extracurricular activities such as athletics, and came down squarely on the side of homework.

It recommended that a student gain credit for a course as long as he or she does not miss more than 10 days during the academic year for nonacademic activities and that extracurricular activities not be scheduled during the week of final exams.

The panel also recommended that competitive sports in the middle and junior high schools be limited and that no student should be allowed to participate in out-of-class activities without maintaining passing grades.

At Perot's personal recommendation, the committee urged that no extracurricular activities be scheduled on Monday through Thursday nights.

Under the panel's plan, the first seven hours of the school day will be limited to academics and lunch and rest periods, with two hours available at the end of the day for state-approved "life enrichment programs" and, in elementary schools, mandatory tutoring for children in need of extra instruction.

But the panel, by a 9-9 vote, failed to extend the mandatory tutoring to middle schools and high schools and opted instead to leave tutoring as an option.

The plan effectively eliminates any athletics or extracurricular activities, such as band practice or drill team, from the regular school day and "recaptures the day for learning," said Texas Wesleyan College President Jon Fleming, head of the panel's "Educating the Child" subcommittee.

"We're not talking about a longer school day for the vast majority of Texas school children," Fleming said. "We're just talking about separating the essential from the non-essential."

The panel also on Thursday recommended limiting pre-kindergarten through grade four classes to not more than 15 students per class, eliminating state funding for vocational education classes and commissioning a study on the effects of extending teacher contracts to 12 months instead of the usual 10.

Eliminating vocational education funding will save the state approximately $238 million, but reducing the number of students in elementary classes could cost an additional $1.1 billion, according to figures from Comptroller Bob Bullock.

The committee also recommended that the State Board of Education undertake a study of implementing a 220-day, year-round school calendar. The committee proposed increasing the number of school days from 175 to 185.

Perot said the requirement to have schools of education adopt a public school would be similar to a medical school's affiliation with a hospital.

"A medical school without a hospital is a joke. Yet we've got schools of education with no classroom laboratory," Perot said.

He said state certification of education schools would depend on how well they are able to operate their public school.

"If they can't do it, it would be like having a medical school where all the patients die in the hospital," Perot said. "I think they ought to sink or swim on how well they run the school."

Several panel members questioned whether the plan would take a public school out from under the authority of a local school board, but Perot said school boards will still "call the shots."

"You've hired a principal that happens to be a school of education," the Dallas businessman said.

Perot said the committee plans to publish its decisions made Wednesday and Thursday and distribute them for comment throughout the state before meeting in mid-April to assign priorities to items.

On Wednesday, the panel approved more than a dozen recommendations, including basic skills testing for teachers, replacing the elected State Board of Education with appointees, and instituting a career ladder for teachers with a starting salary 37 percent higher.

BUT DO IT ORDERLY!

Two or three may prophesy, one at a time, if they have the gift, while all the others listen. But if, while someone is prophesying, someone else receives a message or idea from the Lord, the one who is speaking should stop.

In this way all who have the gift of prophecy can speak, one after the other, and everyone will learn and be encouraged and helped.

Remember that a person who has a message from God has the power to stop himself or wait his turn. God is not one who likes things to be disorderly and upset. He likes harmony, and He finds it in all the other churches.

Women should be silent during the church meetings. They are not to take part in the discussion, for they are subordinate to men as the Scriptures also declare.

If they have any questions to ask, let them ask their husbands at home, for it is improper for women to express their opinions in church meetings.

You disagree? And do you think that the knowledge of God's will begins and ends with you Corinthians? Well, you are mistaken!

You who claim to have the gift of prophecy or any other special ability from the Holy Spirit should be the first to realize that what I am saying is a commandment from the Lord Himself.

But if anyone still disagrees—well, we will leave him in his ignorance.

So, my fellow believers, long to be prophets so that you can preach God's message plainly; and never say it is wrong to "speak in tongues."

However, be sure that everything is done properly in a good and orderly way.

I Corinthians 14:29-40
