A Bunch for Lunch

The Hereford Senior Citizens Center was packed Monday with a record breaking number of members and guests for its first lunch served at the new Ranger Street location, above. Close to 300 came for lunch, which usually averages 250 on good days, says director Marjorie Daniel. About 100 more meals were home delivered. First session of talks held after 15 months

Leaders meet over two hours

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — The United States and the Soviet Union made a fresh start Tuesday on nuclear weapons control, with Soviet negotiators operating from instructions approved by their new leader, Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

Signaling conciliation, Victor P. Karpov, head of the Soviet delegation, said if both sides wanted an accord, "You can do that on the kitchen floor, here or somewhere else."

The opening session, which lasted about two hours and 40 minutes, was held up for 12 minutes while the three American negotiators signed a book of condolences to mark the death of Soviet President Konstantin U.

Chernenko on Sunday. Today's session at the Soviet mission marked the resumption of superpower arms talks following a 15-month lapse.

On the eve of the talks, Gorbachev, who became Communist Party general secretary on Monday following the death of Chernenko, urged Washington to join Moscow in reducing nuclear weapons stocks and preventing space from becoming an atomic battleground.

Vice President George Bush, departing Geneva for Chernenko's funeral, told reporters: "All mankind desires peace. Today, at this hour, those hopes focus on the commencement of arms control talks here in Geneva." Bush was in the Swiss city for a conference on Africa.

While waiting for the Americans, Karpov told reporters that Gorbachev had presided over the meeting of the Politburo that approved his instructions last Thursday.

"I will adhere to them, you can be sure of that," Karpov told reporters in an unusually lengthy interview.

He said there was no need to return home after Chernenko's funeral on Wednesday because there would be "no change" in the instructions on space and nuclear arms.

"We should start now and negotiate as long as we are here to understand each other's positions," he said.

It was the first meeting between the veteran Soviet arms negotiator and Max M. Kampelman, who heads the U.S. delegation and is new to nuclear weapons talks.

Greeting the American warmly, Karpov said "I hope that our meeting will not be the last one, but one of the first in a series, that we will negotiate, and reach an agreement."

Kampelman, with a broad smile, said, "Our objective is to reach an agreement too. I hope this is a good omen."

When arms talks broke down in late 1983, the two sides were far apart on ways to cut back their intercontinental and intermediate-range nuclear missiles.

At Soviet insistence, President Reagan's program to develop space-based missile defenses — dubbed "Star Wars" — was also added to the agenda in January, along with Russian defense systems.

The opening session, designed mostly to set up a schedule, was held

County discusses grants, guidelines

By KIM THOGMARTIN
Staff Writer

Deaf Smith County Commissioners were enlightened about grants available from the Department of Energy and the county's need to comply with Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC) hiring guidelines, during Monday's regular meeting in the county courtroom.

Reporting on meetings held last week between DOE officials and representatives of local taxing districts, Commissioner Troy Don Moore described ways the county will be able to obtain federal grants if a site north of Hereford is recommended for further testing as a possible nuclear waste repository.

Grant money awarded by DOE can be used for city and county governments to study the impacts of site characterization and the eventual location of a repository, and Moore recommended that the county pursue such a route.

The Vega City Commission and the Oldham County Commissioners are already in the midsts of such studies, according to Steve Frishman of the Governor's Nuclear Waste Programs Office.

"We've never walked this way before," Moore told the court. "We need to know about the impact of this thing before it happens."

If DOE adheres to its schedule, word on whether to proceed with site characterization should come in September or October. Testing, to include the mining of two deep shafts, is expected to go on for about five years.

Commissioners also discussed naming a committee that would take steps to obtain the needed grants and perhaps name a fulltime person

Sierra Club praises task force

AUSTIN (AP) — A Sierra Club spokesman says it helps to have Gov. Mark White behind a "big push" for legislation to clamp strong controls on the disposal of hazardous waste.

"Quite frankly, we probably wouldn't be sitting here talking about hazardous waste legislation in a comprehensive fashion if the governor had not set up that task force last year and sort of created the opportunity to deal with the issue, and we're appreciative of that," said Ken Kramer.

The governor's task force produced 70 recommendations, and Kramer told a news conference Monday the Sierra Club believes this legislative session presents the "best opportunity" in 15 years to enact a law on hazardous waste management.

The League of Women Voters said it also is supporting "safe, cradle-to-grave management of the hazardous waste we all generate."

Kramer, representative of the Lone Star Chapter of the Sierra Club, said, "While a balance must be struck among conflicting interests, the interests of public health and environmental protection must take priority over the economic interests of industry, even though those economic interests may well be legitimate."

Sen. Hugh Parmer, sponsor of the proposal supported by the Sierra Club, said, "I think we all want to pass on to our children and grandchildren a clean, safe and healthy environment, and I believe Senate bill 752 is a major step toward achieving that goal."

Parmer said the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency had estimated there are 2,500 sites around the country that are in "serious need of cleanup, that is to say unless they are cleaned up they will be a definite health hazard to the citizens," but a congressional inquiry places that figure at closer to 10,000.

"What this bill attempts to do is to see that in the future the selection of sites in Texas for hazardous waste disposal is carefully controlled

Gorbachev represents new group of Soviets

MOSCOW (AP) — Mikhail S. Gorbachev, the youngest man to head the Communist Party in six decades, stands on the verge of a career that could continue into the next century, if he masters the intrigues of Kremlin politics.

Gorbachev, at 54 the youngest member of the Politburo and a member of the ruling body less than five years, represents a new generation of Soviet leaders — a group unmarked by party service under Stalin's iron rule, well-educated and reared in the postwar years that saw major advances in Soviet living standards.

"Gorbachev seems to be a dynamic and strong person and so ... I hope we will have a chance to engage with him and to work constructively with him," Secretary of State George P. Shultz said Monday.

"He's a vigorous young man and we expect to be dealing with him as the future unfolds."

Watchers of the secretive Kremlin don't expect the man who succeeded deceased party chairman Konstantin U. Chernenko, 73, on Monday to make any drastic changes soon.

But his Monday acceptance speech offered some hints about the directions he will pursue.

—Gorbachev pledged to strive for an arms control agreement.

—While stressing Soviet defense would be maintained at a level sufficient to deal a "crushing retaliatory strike" against aggressors, he also said he wanted to transfer the Soviet economy "to the tracks of intensive development."

—The new leader also said the party's "first precept" would be strengthening ties with other Soviet bloc nations, and called for "a cardinal improvement of relations" with China.

Western diplomats in Moscow, who spoke only on condition they not be identified, noted that Gorbachev has been part of a collective Kremlin

Bennett, Ferraro address educators

DALLAS (AP) — Secretary of Education William J. Bennett urged a return to the basics and told school administrators to take control of their curricula because the government won't do it for them.

In his first speech to an education group, Bennett on Monday criticized curricula in the nation's schools as having "no coherent design" and as being the product of economic trends, social concerns and college entrance exams.

"The American people can either continue to drift along with a curriculum they did not design — or they can give it some serious thought," he told the annual meeting of the American Association of School Administrators.

"The federal government is not going to do it," he said.

Former Democratic vice presidential candidate Geraldine Ferraro also addressed the educators. She said the Reagan administration's proposed cuts in college loan programs are short-sighted and jeopardize the nation's future.

"Nowhere are budget cuts more short-sighted ... than in the field of education," Ms. Ferraro said.

Ms. Ferraro, who taught in the New York City public schools for five years, said a cutback in student loans would create a "two-tiered" educational system in which the very poor will still get assistance and the rich will still be able to pay for their college educations.

The middle-class, she said will suffer the most from the proposed cuts.

"The average American family will be left out in the cold," she said.

Bennett urged a return to the basics: English, history, mathematics and science.

"Teach good time-tested things," he said, "and good, time-tested things will be remembered."

The education secretary told administrators to "bring the public together to start deliberating what we want our children to learn."

"If you don't do it, someone else will," he warned.

Bennett did not discuss some of the more controversial budget cuts proposed by the Reagan administration, which has suggested ending guaranteed college loans to students

State

Tuition increase probable

By RUTH RENDON Associated Press Writer
AUSTIN (AP) — The doubling of tuition for state colleges and universities drew closer to reality after a House committee approved the bill that could increase the fees as early as this autumn.

The House Higher Education Committee on Monday approved a bill introduced by Rep. Wilhelmina Delco which calls for a tuition hike from $4 to $8 per semester hour in 1985-86, to $12 in 1986-87. The bill would provide for $2 annual increases for four years thereafter.

Mrs. Delco's proposal also would increase tuition for out-of-state, foreign, medical and dental students enrolled in state-supported institutions.

"This sets a policy for tuition beyond financial constraints," said Mrs. Delco, D-Austin, chairman of the committee. If made into law, the bill would add $155 million to state revenues.

Student groups from the University of Texas at Austin, Texas A&M University, University of Houston and Texas Southern endorsed Mrs. Delco's bill over one introduced by Rep. Gary Thompson, D-Abilene.

Thompson's bill proposes to raise tuition so it would equal 15 percent of the total cost of education. His bill also would set aside 15 percent of the revenues raised through the increase for scholarships.

Extended penalty okayed

By KEN HERMAN Associated Press Writer
AUSTIN (AP) — Texas House members planned a final vote today on widening the capital punishment law to allow the death penalty for mass and serial murders.

The bill, tentatively approved 92-14 on Monday, also would allow execution of defendants previously convicted of murder.

"If one murder is heinous, than more than one is more heinous," said co-sponsor Patricia Hill, R-Dallas.

Currently, the death penalty is allowed in Texas only for murders committed during the commission of specified crimes and for the murder of law enforcement officers and firefighters.

Co-sponsor Tony Polumbo, D-Houston, said the current law does not allow the death penalty for someone who "travels across the state of Texas killing people to find out how it feels to kill people." It also bars execution of someone who kills several people at one time, but does not commit one of the crimes specified in the capital punishment law, he said.

Rep. Ernestine Glossbrenner, D-Alice and a death penalty foe, spoke against the bill.

"I cannot in good conscience allow this vote to be taken without speaking against it," she said, adding that she believes someone who has committed a murder should be "shot down like a bad dog."

"But who is to take this life. I could not do it and I cannot ask a state employee to do it," she said. "Once someone is behind bars that person is no longer a danger to me. I cannot in good conscience take that life."

National

World champion killed

ARDMORE, Okla. (AP) — An accident during a practice run for an upcoming race took the life of a five-time world champion drag racer in Ardmore, authorities said.

Officials said Lee Shepherd was killed at the Ardmore Speedway Monday afternoon while practicing for the Gator Nationals.

Capt. Robert Musgrove of the Ardmore Police Department said the crash occurred at about 4:15 p.m. Shepherd, who was thrown 163 feet from his pro stock Camaro, was dead at the scene due to massive head injuries, Musgrove said.

Steve Earwood, media relations director for the National Hot Rod Association in Gainesville, Fla., said Shepherd was in Ardmore testing his car in preparation for the Gator Nationals, scheduled this weekend in Gainesville.

According to track manager Johnny Laird, Shepherd's car had just passed the finish line when the parachute opened and the right front of the car became airborne.

The car flipped several times, throwing Shepherd from the vehicle, Laird said. Shepherd, 40, had finished the quarter-mile run in 7.87 seconds, the track manager said.

Buddy Morrison and David Reher, partners with the driver in Reher-Morrison Racing Engines and Shepherd Racing Heads, also attended the session.

Morrison told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram Monday he did not know why the crash occurred.

"We were making short passes, testing the thing," said Morrison. "The car was making perfectly straight passes, so we decided to make a full pass. All of a sudden the chute came out, the car went to the right, it veered over to the right on two wheels and rolled. It happened all of a sudden."

"It was a perfectly good track. But there had been some wind changes during the day and it could have been something like that," he said.

Morrison said that had Shepherd not been thrown from the car, "he might have walked away from it. The (roll) cage from the firewall back was intact."

Shepherd won the pro stock world championship four consecutive years, from 1980 to 1984, Earwood said. Shepherd also won the modified eliminator division one time.

In 1983, he held the national record in the pro stock division with a time of 7.71 seconds.

His 29 NHRA national event victories placed him third on the all-time list, behind Bob Glidden, who has 41, and Don Purdumme, who has 34.

Shepherd had reached the finals in 44 of the last 56 NHRA national events, Earwood said.

Two men occupy embassy

OTTAWA (AP) — At least two men occupied the Turkish Embassy today, police reported. A caller to the Canadian Press said the men were members of the Armenian Revolutionary Army and were holding hostages.

"We have hostages, we have demands and we plan to stay," the caller said.

"We want Turkey to pay for the Armenian genocide and we want our lands back," the caller told the news agency.

He refused to say how many people were occupying the embassy, which is in the Sandy Hill district of Ottawa, less than a mile from Parliament Hill.

A spokesman for Ottawa Police said at least two unidentified men were in the building. Police did not know whether they were armed.

Police cordoned off an area of about 10 square blocks.

Reports from the scene indicated an explosion was heard early today, but there appeared to be no visible damage.

Armenian nationalists accuse the Turks of slaughtering 1.5 million of their ancestors during World War I. Historians say as many as 600,000 Armenians may have died in what never has been officially recognized as a massacre.

By PETE YOST AP Labor Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The overvalued dollar has cost the United States nearly 2 million jobs because of a resulting flood of foreign imports, a new study shows.

The study, scheduled for release today at a hearing of the congressional Joint Economic Subcommittee on Economic Goals, concludes the United States must reduce the federal budget deficit in order to make the nation more competitive in world markets.

An overvalued dollar makes foreign goods less expensive in this country and makes U.S. goods more expensive overseas.

"Our export sales are approximately 15 percent lower and our imports 15 percent higher than would have been the case with a normal dollar value," the report said.

"The sharp appreciation of the dollar since 1980 has cost 2 million jobs — 1.5 million in manufacturing alone — and cut national output by 4 percent," said the study prepared for the subcommittee by Data Resources Inc., an economic research firm based in Lexington, Mass.

The report was released by the subcommittee's vice chairman, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, who said, "Our trade policy is off the track, and the dollar's devastation is widespread."

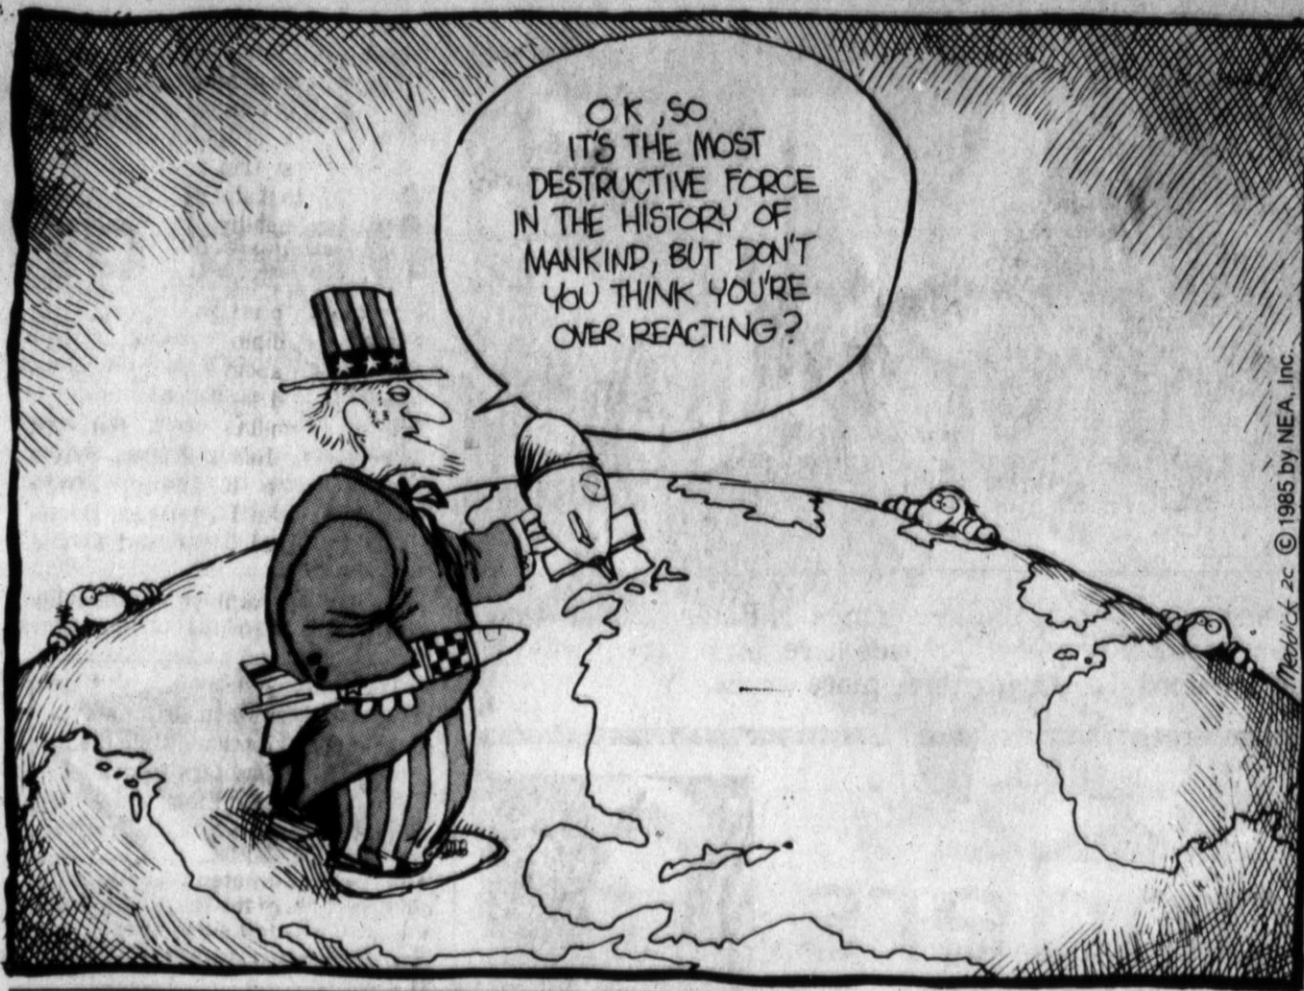

The U.S. trade deficit last year was more than $120 billion, including $79 billion in the manufacturing sector.

The report says the overvalued dollar has cost 144,000 jobs in California; 104,000 in New York; 97,000 in North Carolina; 92,000 in Pennsylvania; 75,000 in Michigan; 73,000 in Ohio; 69,000 in Texas and 57,000 in Illinois.

The dollar has risen in value because of high interest rates, which stem from ballooning budget deficits, the report says.

The study proposes reducing the deficit by limiting growth in entitlement programs such as Social Security. The report also suggests reducing indexing of the personal income tax and limiting defense spending in areas such as retirement benefits. Other suggestions include raising personal income taxes.

The study advises against an increase in business taxes, saying that would tend to reduce formation of capital.

Affecting Deaf Smith County

State Rep. files House Bill

State Rep. John Smith last week filed House Bill 1418, which would permit the Deaf Smith County Criminal District Attorney to be included in the Texas Professional Prosecutors Act.

The new legislator filed the bill at the unanimous request of the Deaf Smith County Commissioners Court, after the court was approached last fall by Deaf Smith County Criminal District Attorney Roland Saul.

The bill would amend Section 2 of the prosecutors act, to add the county to the list of 47 judicial districts and 44 counties whose district attorneys, criminal district attorneys or county prosecutors are already in the act.

The Professional Prosecutors Act provides the district attorney with additional benefits in terms of more state funds for salary and office expense. It also prohibits him from private practice while he holds office.

Saul, who no longer practices law outside the district attorney's office, has been accused of conflict of interest by the State Bar of Texas. A lawsuit against him claims his law office defended persons who were under criminal investigation or indictment by the district attorney's office.

Criminal District Attorney Roland Saul revealed that the expected final settlement of a discrimination lawsuit against the county will bring the county under more stringent EEOC hiring guidelines.

Attorneys for the county and Texas

Rural Legal Aid have reached a settlement of the Garza versus Deaf Smith County case, and U.S. District Judge Mary Lou Robinson expected to rule on that settlement March 18 in Amarillo.

Saul said the county's attorney in toward the environment and the public health," said Parmer, D-Fort Worth.

"None of the ideas in the Parmer and Hudson-Danburg bills are unreasonable or impractical, despite their strong approach," said Kramer.

Reps. David Hudson, D-Tyler, and Debra Danburg, D-Houston, are House sponsors of the bill, which would:

- Prohibit the location of hazardous waste facilities in areas that are determined to be unsuitable.

- Prohibit permits for landfill or injection well disposal of hazardous wastes if feasible alternatives exist.
- Provide partial funding for some witnesses in permit proceedings.
- Establish a citizen complaint and lawsuit process so Texans could pursue legal action in state court if state agencies do not act against hazardous waste violators.
- Set more stringent standards for injection well permits.

Parmer said he was particularly pleased with a provision that requires agencies involved in the disposal of hazardous wastes to "look at the performance record of the person seeking the application for a site location."

the case, Bill SoRelle of Amarillo, has suggested the county "hire an expert to help us set up procedures that meet the guidelines."

The primary changes in hiring procedures, Saul explained, will involve testing required of applicants in the four county departments that according to Judge Robinson were guilty of hiring discrimination against Hispanics.

A closed session to discuss a personnel matter followed the one-hour regular meeting. No action was taken following the 20-minute executive session.

leadership whose views he most likely will continue to represent.

In addition, they said, it takes years before a Soviet leader can amass enough personal power to effect major changes.

But they noted one major difference — whereas Chernenko was, at 72, the oldest man to become party chief, Gorbachev is the youngest since Josef Stalin took power in 1924 at age 45.

"Gorbachev has a lot of time to consolidate his position," said one diplomat.

It was not known whether Gorbachev would also be made Soviet president, as Chernenko and his two predecessors were. That designation is made by the Supreme Soviet, the national parliament.

Amos A. Jordan Jr., president of the Georgetown Center for Strategic and International Studies, said in Washington that in the immediate future, Soviet policy in arms control talks with the United States should remain unchanged.

"Prof. Walter Laqueur of both Georgetown and London's Weiner Library, said: "There's not the slightest doubt that Gorbachev's priorities are in the domestic field, specifically economic."

Thane Gustafson, also of Georgetown University, said Gorbachev is above all a successful administrator, a pragmatist who tries to make the over-centralized Soviet economic system function by acting as a "broker, trouble-shooter and head-knocker."

Asked if it lifts his spirits to use the SALT II room, Karpov said, "For me, any place is good if both sides are cooperating to reach an agreement... here or somewhere else."

When real bargaining begins, probably on Thursday at the U.S. mission, the Soviets are expected to launch a drive to stop Reagan's Strategic Defense Initiative.

The $26 billion program is aimed at devising a leak-proof, space-based shield against Soviet missiles. The Soviets claim it would lead to the militarization of outer space.

Reagan and his top advisers have ruled out any bargaining over the controversial American program, which they say is only in the research stage and deals strictly with defense.

But Karpov said "If there is a real interest in negotiating a ban on space arms, it can be done. He repeated for emphasis: "It can be done. And the more we do now to prevent the arms race in space the better it is."

In his Monday speech accepting the top Soviet post of Communist Party leader, a day after the death of Chernenko, Gorbachev called for a freeze on nuclear arsenals, a "major reduction of the arms stockpiles and not the development of ever new weapons, be it in space or on Earth."

The new Soviet party leader said he hoped the talks would yield an agreement.

By DAVY VESTAL
4-H HORSE PROGRAM
BUILDS CHARACTER,
LEADERSHIP

The care and training of a horse can build character, leadership and responsibility, and that's what the 4-H horse program is all about.

Owning a horse is a big investment in time and money, and training it is a big undertaking that requires a lot of hard work. However, the effort can help a 4-H member grow and develop into a responsible citizen.

Specific objectives of the 4-H horse program are these:

1. To acquire skills in horse management by owning a horse or pony and being responsible for it.
2. To appreciate riding as recreation.
3. To learn horsemanship skills and understand breeding, training and raising horses as a business.
4. To acquire safety skills to prevent injury to persons and animals.
5. To promote love for an humane treatment of animals.
6. To develop sportsmanship, cooperation, decision-making ability and public speaking skills through participation in demonstrations, tours, judging and exhibits.

4-H'ers with horse projects can compete at various horse shows held annually and can qualify for district and state competition. Those who excel in the project can qualify for awards provided by the American Quarter Horse Association, including six expense-paid trips to the National 4-H Congress in Chicago each fall and six $1,000 scholarships at the national level.

Further details about the 4-H horse program as well as other 4-H projects and activities are available at the county extension office.

The county extension office is presently working with 4-H leaders in the county to coordinate the 4-H judging teams for 1985. These teams include Horse, Livestock, Grasses and Soils. Our District contests will be upon us soon as we need to be prepared for them. If you are interested in participating on a judging team and are between the ages of 8-19 please contact Davy Vestal at the County Extension Office for more details.

Son needs psychiatric help

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Our 21-year-old son hasn't left the house in three years. He hasn't cut his hair and mostly stays in the attic reading and listening to the stereo. Although he has shown no signs of violence I am afraid of him because I know this is not normal behavior.

I am heartsick because the boy appeared to have such a promising future. He won a four-year scholarship to one of the finest engineering schools in the country, stayed only one month and came home. Since then, he will not see or talk to anyone. He has four sisters who have tried to communicate with him, but he just doesn't respond.

There is a history of mental illness in our family (manic-depressive) and I'm afraid our son has it. I have been to Family Service and they said the boy has to call and want help for himself. My husband thinks by some miracle he will get up one day and find himself a job. I don't believe this.

Please, Ann, could you help me? I feel such despair.—ANOTHER "ANN"

DEAR ANN: I consulted with Dr. Frederick Goodwin, a distinguished psychiatrist and psychopharmacologist with the National Institutes of Health in Bethesda, Md. Dr. Goodwin said something CAN be done and he hopes you will do it. First, your husband must abandon the idea that one day your son may decide to help himself. Three years is a long time to sit in an attic listening to music.

Make an appointment and tell your son he is going to the psychiatric department of the nearest university-based hospital. If he is a manic-depressive, he has an 85 percent chance of living a normal life once the proper dosage of medication is established and he stays on it. He may need therapy along with the chemical treatment. The doctor who sees him will advise you.

Please write again in six months. The most gratifying part of writing the column is to know that I have turned somebody's life around.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Our next-door neighbors are middle-class people like us. We know very little about them except that they drink a lot and argue often. They also travel a good bit, which is nice, because it is much quieter when they are gone.

Last night they started to get noisy about 9 p.m. By 10 o'clock we could hear glass breaking, loud thuds and it sounded as if they were hitting each other. When the woman started to scream, "Help! Help!" My husband and I feared he might kill her if someone didn't stop him.

We banged on the door. The man answered and innocently asked what we wanted. My husband said it sounded like there was a serious fight going on.

The woman rushed toward my husband with a frying pan. Her nose was bleeding and one eye was swollen shut. She tried to hit him and yelled, "This is a family matter. Butt out."

I dragged my husband into our apartment and slammed the door. Were we wrong to try to help? If the woman had been killed, we would never forgive ourselves. Please comment.—BROTHER'S KEEPER OR NOT IN NEWARK

DEAR N: Domestic fights should be handled by the police. Well-meaning neighbors who try to help are often clobbered and rarely appreciated. Sorry to sound so cold, but that's the way it is.

Don't get burned by a "line" that's too hot to handle. Play it cool with Ann Landers' guide to "Necking and Petting—What Are the Limits?" Send your request to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611, enclosing 50 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

It has been estimated that about 2.5 billion copies of the Bible have been sold in the world since 1816.

Keep out cold.

DEAR POLLY — We don't have storm windows on our home and can't afford to install them. How can we insulate our windows most effectively at low cost? — MRS. J.B.

DEAR MRS. J.B. — There are several ways to reduce heat loss through the windows in your home. Of course, good, tight-fitting storm windows or double-glazed windows are an excellent measure, but they are expensive. Here are some other ideas.

Install a sheet of heavy plastic over each window. This can be applied with strong tape and works in two ways: The layer of plastic creates an insulating layer of air trapped in between the window and the plastic; and stretching the plastic across the entire window opening seals off drafts that seep in through cracks around the windows.

Fasten inexpensive window weatherstripping around the window opening, creating a tighter fit and reducing air leakage around the window.

Keep shades pulled down. If those shades have a reflective coating, they will reduce energy loss by 40 percent.

A conventional drapery kept closed will reduce heat loss by 3 percent to 10 percent. A lined drapery or a special insulated drapery will cut loss still further. By using a separately lined, tightly woven drapery sealed at all four edges around the window, heat loss can be cut by 25 percent.

Shutters help, too. A specially made shutter with an insulating core and vapor barrier can cut heat loss by as much as 75 percent to 90 percent.

Covering the window with half-inch clip-on insulation board with glass fiber batt insulation between the board and the window can also cut heat loss by 75 percent to 90 percent.

DEAR POLLY — Some time ago, you published the attached recipe for Herman sourdough starter. I made this starter, as did several of my friends. To our surprise, it didn't do anything. I am writing to ask you to check your recipe and see if it calls for too much water or some other ingredient. We left our Herman out for three days at room temperature, but it was just like milk or water, just very thin. I even tried to make rolls with it, but they were like rocks. I replenished it after trying to make the rolls, but the next batch didn't do anything either. — R.M.

DEAR R.M. — I have double-checked the recipe and it's correct. I confess I'm mystified as to why you didn't get good results. Any mixture of flour, yeast, sugar and water will bubble and ferment.

Here's the recipe, for those who missed it:

Mix two cups flour, three tablespoons sugar, one teaspoon salt, one package active dry yeast and two cups warm water (105 to 115 degrees) gently with a whisk until well combined. Cover loosely with plastic wrap or waxed paper and let stand at room temperature for three days, stirring daily. At the end of the three days, the starter should be bubbly when you stir it and have a clean, sour, somewhat alcoholic aroma. The starter is now ready to use or store in the refrigerator for up to 14 days.

After using some of the starter, it may be replenished by adding one cup flour, one cup milk and one-half cup sugar.

Some people used to think hedgehogs carry fruit on their spines.

Before the need arises, We want you to know.

Artists invited to submit work for drama

In celebration of the twentieth year of the musical drama "Texas," the Souvenir Program will feature artists living within a hundred miles of Amarillo. These artists are invited to submit works of western subjects for consideration.

Since the opening of "Texas" in 1966, each program has featured a western artist or a group of artists. The programs have been enthusiastically received and treasured.

Panhandle artists are invited to submit western subjects in oils, acrylics, pastels, pencil drawings, watercolors, and bronzes for consideration. Each person may enter as many as five works and should submit them to the jury in colored slides or photographs. These may be mailed to "Texas" Box 268, Canyon, Texas, 79015 or delivered to the "Texas" office, 2010 4th Avenue in Canyon, Texas. The package should include a brief biography and a photo of the artist.

All slides and photographs must be submitted before April 12, when 39 works will be selected for inclusion in the program. Participants will be notified of the jury's selection. The entries must be labeled so that they can be returned.

Of the 39 pictures used, three will be printed in full color. The other 36 will be in black and white.

Winners of the competition will be asked to deliver their entries to the Panhandle Plains Historical Museum in Canyon before the April 30th deadline for the taking of reproduction quality photographs. The originals will be handled with all possible care, but neither the Museum nor the "Texas" staff can assume any responsibility for damage or insurance.

Much of the art selected for the program will be displayed at the First National Bank in Canyon during the weeks of June 10-14, and June 17-23, and the winning painters and sculptors will be honored guests on the opening night of "Texas," June 12, 1985.

The "Texas" season will run from June 12 through August 24 and reservations are available at the "Texas" office. Reservations may also be made by calling 806-655-2181, or writing "Texas" Box 268, Canyon, Texas 79015.

Relief of headaches provided by exercise

Relief of tension headaches can be added to the list of benefits provided by regular exercise.

Sixty percent of head pains are caused by tension headaches and daily aerobic activity can relieve the stress that causes a tension headache, said H. Martin Blacker, M.D., director of the Pain Control and Biofeedback Clinic at Baylor College of Medicine.

Tension headaches may last a few hours or for many days. They are more common after the age of 30 and are often associated with depression.

During a period of stress, the muscles of the scalp may contract; as a consequence, part of the muscles' chemistry changes so that pain receptors are excited and a person feels pain, Blacker said.

Prevention of the situation that causes stress is the best way to avoid a tension headache, but not everyone can avoid stress. He said a 20-20 minute workout will reduce stress and the pain it causes.

Blacker said studies have shown that activity relieves stress.

"When you exert yourself over a prolonged period of time, you get a feeling of wonderful relaxation," Blacker said. "One of the reasons that occurs is that you've been able to dissipate whatever factors of stress have been accumulated."

If you are unable to take time to exercise the headache away, Blacker suggests a change of environment: a short walk, perhaps to the water fountain, or a cool towel placed on the head may lessen the pain.

The least effective way to treat a tension headache is through the chronic use of analgesics such as aspirin and aspirin substitutes, Blacker said.

"A person may develop a tolerance to the pain relievers," he said.

"Aspirin will not always work and may have undesirable side effects such as stomach pain, loss of hearing, nausea or headache."

While the vast majority of headaches are no reason for concern, Blacker warns that some head pains should not be disregarded.

"An acute, sudden, extremely severe head pain may signal a hemorrhage from an aneurysm, the swelling of an artery because of a weakness in its wall," he said. "The condition can be remedied if treated in time."

Any new head pain that has not been experienced before is something to be concerned about and should be discussed with a physician.

Stress, cancer link investigated

The mind has long been a powerful factor in influencing health, and researchers now say stress may play a role in a person's susceptibility to cancer.

Abundant information indicates that stress, especially emotional stress, depresses the immune system and increases tumor growth.

An article on the topic appears in the February issue of Texas Medicine, the journal of the Texas Medical Association.

Animal studies show a relationship between stress and accelerated tumor growth. The Texas Medicine article notes that animals and humans develop cancer in similar ways, so stress has a similar effect on each in terms of cancer.

The animal tests demonstrate that mice receiving electric shocks had a dramatic increase in tumor growth because of a weakened immune system. Similar results occurred with flashing bright lights, caging, sound, and shipping.

Studies on humans show that grief and depriving someone of sleep increase tumor growth and other physical illnesses. In addition, high anxiety suppresses the immune system and increases susceptibility to cancer. Starvation and obesity also lower immunity.

Dr. Harry K. Davis, who wrote the Texas Medicine article, encourages those dealing with cancer patients always to convey hope. Notes the former Beaumont psychiatrist who now practices in Honolulu: "Above all, the patient must know he has allies who will stay with him through good and bad periods and who will not abandon him."

Are You Ready For Retirement?

Our early settlers had one common denominator -- they all worked, and they worked hard! Everyone from grandma-right down to the kids worked -- and worked -- and worked.

For all it's worth, the word "retirement" couldn't have been in the vocabulary of many of our forefathers.

Today, that word, "retirement", holds a very special and deep meaning to a lot of folks.

At our bank, we offer the new Individual Retirement Account. It's a plan that helps make your retirement years all you've worked for and more. You can deposit $2,000 a year as an individual to this program, without paying any federal income taxes on the principal or the interest, until you retire. Married couples who are both working may deposit $4,000, and one-paycheck couples may deposit $2,250.

The I.R.A. program -- from the Bank that's pioneering new ways of service and security for you, your family and your retirement.

Health

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.
Menopause

DEAR DR. LAMB — Two years ago I was seeing a psychiatrist for depression. She gave me Elavil, which I took for 18 months. I complained to her that I was gaining a lot of weight, but she insisted that Elavil cannot produce weight gain.

Now I have read that other people have the same problem with Elavil. I no longer take Elavil, but am unable to lose the weight I gained. Otherwise, I am in good health, and walk more than two miles a day. Nothing seems to bring off one pound.

What can I do to help bring my weight down without going on a crash diet? Is this weight gain still due to the effects of the Elavil. I'm 47 and had a hysterectomy eight years ago.

DEAR READER — Elavil will increase a person's appetite, particularly for carbohydrates, and in that way cause weight gain. Elavil is not affecting your weight now. But your stage of life may be. Many women experience difficulty in controlling their weight after the menopause. I do not know if you had your ovaries removed when you had your hysterectomy, or whether you are taking hormones, but those are important factors.

More and more information shows that while calories don't change, the way your body eliminates or uses calories does. I suspect it has something to do with setting your thermostat in the brain. Less energy may be converted to heat and lost as heat, while more food calories are converted to fat.

Considering the lack of information available on how to influence the body to eliminate calories, the best you can do is to follow a sensible, balanced diet and a good, regular exercise program. I'm sending you The Health Letter, Special Report 17, Flexible Weight Control Plan. That diet, with exercise and patience, should help. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

You are wise to avoid a crash diet. Follow the balanced-diet plan and use it to keep your weight off, as well as to get the excess fat off. If possible, try to increase your walking to four miles a day. The more you can exercise, the better results you will have. Exercise helps to increase your metabolism and stimulates the loss of calories as heat.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have had a corn on my left little toe for 20 years. Every time the foot doctor removes it, it comes right back. It is very hard. What can I do to get rid of it?

DEAR READER — You will probably have a corn there until you get shoes that fit. That is a common location for a corn, since the shoe is often too tight over that area and constantly irritates the skin. If you cut your shoe where the top joins the sole — along the side, where the little toe is — this will relieve the pressure and you will stop having trouble with the corn.

A half-moon-shaped piece of moleskin tape can be cut and put around the corn. This helps to remove pressure from directly over the corn. The idea is to build up enough area around the corn to lift the shoe off the area.

I don't think much of corn plasters, since they often cause a chemical burn.

Do-it-yourself surgery can also lead to complications, including an infection. To have a corn removed immediately, see a doctor. However, to make it disappear on its own, get a shoe that does not put any pressure over the area and the corn will go away in time.

I'm sending you The Health Letter 11-10, Common Foot Problems: What to Do About Them, which discusses corns and callouses. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — What causes glaucoma and what are the symptoms? Does diet have anything to do with eye pressure? Should one be on a salt-free diet? What does it mean if, when looking at a street light, one sees a little rainbow, or sees a ring around the bottom of a table lamp? Can glaucoma be caused by a deformed bone in the eye?

DEAR READER — Unfortunately, glaucoma may not cause any symptoms in its early stages. It can progress and lead to blindness, and a person will never know it until severe damage has occurred. This is one reason that middle-aged or older persons should have a regular eye examination, whether they note any eyesight changes or not.

Glaucoma is caused by increased pressure within the eye. The pressure on the optic nerve at the back of the eye may damage the specialized structures that transmit vision signals to the brain. The amount of pressure required to damage the eye varies, since other factors are also important. It is generally said that pressures below 20 are normal.

The eyeball pressure is maintained by a constant secretion of fluid into the interior of the eye. To avoid overdistention, fluid also drains from the eye through specialized structures. The pressure can increase either from too much fluid input or, more commonly, from a defect in drainage.

There may be no symptoms, or there may be deteriorating eyesight, blurring and the rainbow effect you describe.

Treatment attempts to reduce the pressure through medications, drops and even surgery, depending on the cause of the increased pressure. Glaucoma can be secondary to other eye diseases, but there is no bone inside the eye.

Animal research plays major role in medicine

Laboratory research using live animals plays a primary role in medical progress.

The public and the scientific community, however, have expressed increasing concern about animal welfare.

The Texas Medical Association notes that the elimination of diseases such as smallpox is a direct result of animal research. So are advances in treating cancer, diabetes, birth defects, and heart disease.

Animal research has also benefited animals themselves through the development of vaccines to prevent rabies in dogs and cats, anthrax and brucellosis in livestock, encephalitis in horses, and most recently, leukemia in cats.

TMA warns that undue restriction on the use of live animals in medical research will result in unnecessary human and animal suffering. This research provides answers to the cause of the disease, its effect on the body, the action of drugs, and appropriate treatments and procedures.

Nonetheless, the 24,000-member association of physicians and medical students shares those concerns about animal welfare. TMA recently took a formal stand that:

—Affirms the ethical and humane use of live animals in biomedical and veterinary research.

—Supports standards developed by the National Institutes of Health and encourages alternatives to live animals when scientifically acceptable.

Young homemakers plan for year

Young Homemakers of Texas met recently at La Plata Junior High.

After the meeting was called to order and the minutes read, members discussed the programs and plans for the coming year. It was announced that the Young Homemakers of Texas emblem would go into space on the next space shuttle and then be given to the Young Homemakers at the state meeting in November.

Linda Ward read the devotional before refreshments were served to Brenda Meiwes, Melinda Henson, Gail Blain, Kelly McCabe, Ward, Shelly Schilling and Mrs. Beryl Burelsmith, Rosie Davis and Elaine Brown, area officers from Earth, were guests.

The next meeting will be April 2 at 7 p.m. at La Plata Junior High. Willa Albert will speak on "Respite," home health care.

Cheer up. They'll cease talking about your behavior at the Christmas party once you outperform yourself during the New Year's brouhaha.

Texas Most Wanted Fugitive

TYLER — Almost nine years have passed since Thomas Martin Eliason dropped out of sight.

Yet detectives from the Tyler Police Department, who have warrants charging Eliason with the April 4, 1976, slaying of a local businessman, say they get occasional reports of the elusive fugitive's wanderings.

"We've heard he's been in Houston, Dallas, Colorado, and even paid a visit to Tyler a few years back," said Sergeant Nelson Downing of the Tyler Police Department. "But the information has always been just a little bit late to catch him."

This week Eliason has been added to the Texas Most Wanted list. A 1,000 reward is being offered for information leading to the capture of the 41-year-old fugitive.

Until that fateful April night in 1976, Eliason had only minor brushes with the law. He had been arrested for burglary and some misdemeanor assaults.

But on April 4, investigators say the ex-soldier tried to force his way into his former girlfriend's second-story apartment. When that failed, investigators noted in their report, the suspect climbed up a gutter pipe and entered the apartment through a window.

Eliason's ex-girlfriend was inside the apartment with a male visitor she had recently met. The woman and her visitor tried to flee the apartment. The visitor was shot twice in the side as he ran down the stairs.

The victim managed to make it to his car, but was shot six more times with a .45-caliber automatic as he tried to start his car. Eliason's ex-girlfriend saved herself by hiding in some nearby bushes.

He is described as a white male, 5-9, 165 pounds, with blue eyes and brown hair. Detectives say that until the late 1970's, Eliason's hair was very long and he wore a beard. But recent sightings indicate he has cut his hair and has gained about 20 to 30 pounds.

The fugitive has worked in the oil fields, for a tree service.

In Saturday's double-header

Whitefaces split with Eagles

Looks Like An Error

Hereford third baseman Curtis Cotten bobbles a grounder during first-inning action of the first game between the Whitefaces and Canyon Eagles at the HHS diamond Saturday. Canyon's Kevin McAlpin wound up at third base but couldn't advance to home. The teams split the double-header, Hereford winning the first game 13-8, and Canyon taking the nightcap 6-0.

For more than one hour Saturday, the Hereford Whitefaces and Canyon Eagles battled each other at the HHS diamond.

But that one hour plus was just the first inning of the first game.

Canyon batted nine players in the top half of the first inning, jumping ahead of Hereford 4-0. However, the Whitefaces sent 10 batters to the plate during their turn at bat, scoring seven runs. The Herd went on to whip the Eagles 13-8.

"That's what we needed," said Hereford coach Don Long. "We needed some confidence going into the first district game."

Canyon reversed the outcome in the nightcap, however, winning 6-0.

The Whitefaces, now 3-2 after the double-header, next will host Lubbock at 4 p.m. March 22 in the District 3-5A opener. Canyon is now 7-3 with the split.

In the first game, Terry Nix led things off for the Eagles with a double. Lynn Vandlingham drew a walk, and Tate Eldridge brought Nix home on a double of his own.

Clint Olson hit for a triple to score Vandlingham and Eldridge, and later scored himself on a ground-out to third by Barry Nuzz. Canyon picked up one more hit in the inning by Kevin McAlpin.

But then it was Hereford's turn. Rodney Torres led off with a triple to right-center field, and Stefan Hacker drove him home with a single. Mike Scott also singled to put runners on first and second.

Curtis Cotten, who led the Whitefaces in the first game with three runs on one hit and only one official at-bat, walked to load the bases. Chet Bunch singled to score Hacker and Scott, and two outs later Kurt Simon picked up two RBIs for himself on a single.

Sammy Suarez, the game's winning pitcher, helped his own cause with a two-run homer to score Simon.

And so some 70 minutes and 19 batters later, Hereford had a 7-4 lead. And the second inning was yet to begin.

"We had a good first inning," Long said between games. "They hit the ball well, but we did, too. Neither pitcher had his curve going in the first, and once they started, it became a little harder to hit the ball."

Nix and Eldridge scored again for Canyon in the second inning, as did Cotten and Paul Maes for Hereford. Cotten walked to be Hereford's first runner, and Maes — substituting for Bunch — reached base on an error. Cotten took third on Maes' at-bat, a throwing error by the shortstop, and was driven in by Chad Stephan's infield single.

Maes scored from third on an errant pick-off attempt at first base to

Georgetown ends up right where it started

By JIM O'CONNELL AP Sports Writer

Georgetown, which was the No. 1 team in The Associated Press' preseason college basketball poll 17 weeks ago, finished as the No. 1 team in the final rankings.

The Hoyas, the top seed in the East region in this week's NCAA tournament, were the No. 1 team for all but five of those weeks as they fashioned a 30-2 record and captured the Big East postseason tournament.

Following the Hoyas, who received all 63 first-place votes from the nationwide panel of sportswriters and broadcasters in Monday's poll, were the other three teams that received top seeding in the other regions.

The defending NCAA champions entered last year's tournament with a No. 2 ranking, behind North Carolina, which was eliminated in the regional semifinals by Indiana.

Michigan, the top seed in the Southeast Region, moved from third to second in the final poll, while St. John's, the No. 1 seed in the West, exchanged places with the Wolverines. Oklahoma, the top seed in the Midwest Region, held fourth from last week's poll.

Memphis State, Georgia Tech, North Carolina, Louisiana Tech, Nevada-Las Vegas and Duke rounded out the final Top Ten.

The final Second Ten was Virginia Commonwealth, Illinois, Kansas, Loyola, Ill., Syracuse, North Carolina State, Texas Tech, Tulsa, Georgia and Louisiana State.

In addition to the Hoyas, who never fell below second during the season, eight other teams held a ranked position from the preseason poll through the final rankings.

St. John's, Oklahoma, Memphis State, Georgia Tech, Duke, Illinois, Kansas and Syracuse were the other teams to remain in the Top Twenty for the entire season.

North Carolina wasn't in the preseason poll, but the Tar Heels jumped into the rankings the next week and stayed there, reaching fifth.

Thirty-six teams made their way into the Top Twenty during the year with Arizona, Kentucky and Texas Tech making the briefest appearances — one week each.

Kentucky and Texas Tech took vastly different tacks though, as Kentucky was ranked 18th in the preseason poll and never returned, while the Red Raiders waited until the final week of the season before being voted into the No. 17 slot.

Of the teams voted into the preseason poll, 12 were in the final poll. The Nos. 3, 4, 9 and 10 teams were among the eight that didn't finish as ranked teams.

DePaul, which was third before the season, remained ranked for 11 weeks before falling out and not returning. Indiana, one spot behind the Blue Demons in the first poll, dropped out two weeks earlier than DePaul. Washington was ninth in the first voting, followed by Southern Methodist.

The Huskies were ranked for six weeks before falling and the Mustangs reached as high as second and were ranked for every poll except the final voting.

The team that had it toughest throughout the voting, though, had to be Temple.

mount a 9-6 lead.

Hereford got its next run in the fifth inning when Simon crossed the plate for the second time. He doubled to left field and took third on a passed ball. Hacker drove home Simon on a single to left.

The Whitefaces closed out the game in the sixth with three runs. Cotten led off with a triple to right-center and came home on a fly ball to left by Maes. Stephan singled and raced to third on an error by Nuzs, Canyon's left fielder. Stephan scored on yet another error that put Keith Herrera on base.

Herrera, a courtesy runner for Evans, picked up the Herd's last run.

"They made some mistakes," said Long, pointing to Canyon's eight-error total, "but we forced them into some of them."

The game threatened to get out of control on at least two occasions. First, the Eagles' Nix barreled over Hereford catcher Evans in the third inning without a close play at the plate. The contact sent Evans tumbling backward.

Long protested to the home-plate umpire, but to no avail. Later, Canyon coach Tom McPherson was ejected from the game after complaining about the officiating in the sixth inning.

In the nightcap, Hereford was held without a hit until the fifth and final inning. Finally, Bobby Steward picked up an infield single and Kyle Streun also got a one-bagger on a grounder to right.

Vanlandingham got the win for Canyon, and Torres suffered the loss for Hereford.

The Hereford pitcher worked out of some trouble in the early going, closing out each of the first two innings with runners on second and third base.

Canyon scored four runs in the fourth, two off of infield singles, one on a walk and one on a single to left. Jim Bagley led the Eagles with two runs.

Attorney General denies any threats

AUSTIN (AP) — Denying that he ever threatened a Houston law practice, Attorney General Jim Mattox says he assured the firm again and again that he had no intention of hurting its lucrative bond business.

"I ... told them repeatedly that there was no embargo on their bonds and their bonds would be approved," Mattox said during a full day on the witness stand Monday.

Mattox, who is charged with commercial bribery, said he never threatened Wiley Caldwell, chief of the bond division of the Fulbright & Jaworski firm.

"I never did that, so help me God," Mattox said.

Mattox is accused of telling Caldwell that he would withhold his needed approval of the firm's public bonds unless another of its lawyers stopped trying to question Mattox's sister in an oil rights case.

But recalling his series of conversations with Caldwell, Mattox said no threat was made.

"I never told them I was not going to approve their bonds," Mattox said. "I never told them I was going to put them out of the bond business in any way."

Under state law, the attorney general must approve most municipal bonds before they can be sold.

Testifying a month to the day after his trial began, Mattox recounted events leading up to the June 17, 1983, phone call in which Caldwell alleges the threat was made.

Questioned by his defense attorney, Mattox addressed key points raised by prosecution witnesses during nearly four weeks of testimony.

Mattox said he was upset by the actions of Fulbright & Jaworski lawyer Thomas McDade in the oil rights case. McDade represented Mobil Oil Corp., which was being sued by wealthy South Texas rancher Clinton Manges and the state.

McDade, who wanted Judge Ruben Garcia of Laredo disqualified from the case, had written sarcastic letters about Mattox. He also had taken a deposition from the attorney general in his bid to remove the judge, then withdrawn the motion only hours after questioning Mattox.

Mattox said McDade's behavior was "unethical and unprofessional," so he telephoned Caldwell, who had raised some $25,000 for his 1982 election campaign.

"I said, 'Wiley, I just want to know why Fulbright & Jaworski has declared war on the attorney general's office,'" Mattox recalled, denying he was angry during the discussion.

"He talked to me like a friend," Mattox said. "I heard the testimony that I was in a rage. I was not. I talked to him like a fellow that had raised $25,000 for me."

Mattox also gave his version of two phone calls made six weeks before the trial started in which he asked Caldwell for help in heading off the courtroom proceeding.

Mattox said he had been talking with Fulbright & Jaworski officials for 18 months because the firm didn't want the publicity of a trial. Those officials urged him to plea bargain, but he refused, Mattox said.

"They attempted to try to persuade me that I should enter a (guilty) plea on a misdemeanor charge ... and just walk away from it. I told them I had done nothing wrong," Mattox said.

Commercial bribery is a felony, punishable by up to 10 years in prison and a $5,000 fine.

KICKING THE HABIT

Fewer Americans smoke

Bet on it! Just when the magazine story draws to a climax, you'll turn the page from which someone has clipped a coupon backing on the denouement.

The air has cleared a bit since 1965 — the year after the U.S. Surgeon General called smoking a health hazard. According to the latest available data (1980), only 38 percent of men and 30 percent of women smoke — compared with 52 percent of men and 34 percent of women in 1965.

In mental health care

Texas confronts crisis

DALLAS (AP) — When Sherman got out of the state mental hospital, he moved into an abandoned dumpster. When Steve got out, he slept under bushes or in parks.

Their stories are not unique. They are among the thousands of former mental patients who wander the streets of Texas, a state suffering from a critical shortage of community programs for the mentally ill.

A recent study found that Texas needs about 11,000 more beds in community facilities than it now has. The state spends a half-billion dollars a year on its mental health system, but ranks 48th in the nation in spending.

Under-funded and under pressure from a federal court, experts say Texas faces a mental health care crisis. The state lacks a comprehensive system of mental health care, according to a legislative oversight committee.

And observers say that despite court orders to build up community facility programs, the state has continued to pour money into its mental hospitals.

"It is not a well-coordinated system with all the parts working," said David Pharis, who heads the team monitoring the state's compliance with the terms of the agreements and orders settling a federal suit.

Overcrowded conditions in hospitals, coupled with the lack of adequate community facilities, has resulted in patients sometimes being released to the streets with little money and no shelter, experts say.

"The Number One priority for mental health services in Texas is the need for residential community programs," said mental health consultant Linda Donelson of Dallas, who did the study for the Legislative Oversight Committee on Mental Health.

Dr. Jim Clemons, deputy commissioner for mental health services for the Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation, agreed that a shortage of community facilities is MHMR's greatest shortcoming.

"We need more resources to do continuous care," he said. "That's an area we've been working on. Our progress there is not as fast as it could be."

Even though there often is nowhere for them to go, mental patients are discharged from the state's eight hospitals in huge numbers — about 20,000 a year, according to Clemons.

The transition from the enclosed world of a state hospital can be abrupt — and controversial.

For more than a year, patients from Harris County being released from Austin State Hospital were dropped off at a bus station in a seedy part of downtown Houston and left to fend for themselves.

Clemons defended the practice, maintaining that many of the former patients were homeless before they went to the hospital. MHMR, he said, is a treatment agency, not a "welfare" agency.

"We returned the homeless of Harris County back to Harris County in a homeless condition," he said. "Should the state be faulted for returning them in the same condition?"

But MHMR ended the practice in December after a storm of publicity and allegations that overcrowded state hospitals were "dumping" patients in an effort to meet court-ordered staff-patient ratios.

"It's my belief that there are people who are being dumped on the streets," said L. Gray Beck, a member of the Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation board since 1979. "I don't think we are alone in this. It's a nationwide problem."

Some mental health activists and family support groups also say hospitals are not only discharging patients without regard for their fates outside the protected confines of hospitals, but that patients are being discharged before they are ready.

"They end up on the street, in what we sarcastically call 'independent living' — or they end up in prisons," said Genevieve Hearon, the mother of a mentally ill daughter and a board member of the Texas Alliance for Mental Health.

Clemons, however, denies that MHMR is guilty of "patient dumping."

"There hasn't been some big massive discharging," he said.

The allegations have sharpened, however, with increasing federal court pressure on MHMR to relieve overcrowding and understaffing at mental hospitals.

The possibility that his orders might have led to patient dumping disturbed U.S. District Judge Barefoot Sanders of Dallas, who presides over an 11-year-old lawsuit over Texas mental health care.

Sanders ordered a three-person panel monitoring MHMR's compliance with the terms of the settlement in the suit to find out what has happened to patients released since mid-summer.

"When my son left the hospital in Wichita Falls, they put him on a bus, gave him 30 days worth of medication, and an appointment slip," said Jean Harris of Fort Worth. "He had nowhere to go. We haven't seen him since."

Despite the glaring problems, Texas also has its success stories. "Tremendous progress has been made," Ms. Donelson said, citing vocational, residential and rehabilitation programs now available through community mental centers statewide.

"We have Fairweather Lodges that house about 200 people who work and live independently," she said. "They earned, combined, about $800,000. If they had been in hospitals, they would have cost the state about $6.5 million."

In the 18 months since Jean Harris last saw her schizophrenic son, the focus of the mental health debate in Texas has shifted.

A preoccupation with conditions in state hospitals has given way to concern over community care, said Pharis.

"From the very beginning, the development of community services was an important part of the settlement. We all thought it would be done," he said.

But it wasn't, he and other observers said. Instead, MHMR has continued to pour money into hospitals.

In addition to the lack of community programs, the oversight committee found that the state is suffering from a shortage of screening and emergency services. The committee also said better organization and management is needed, and criticized MHMR for lacking a long-range plan to meet the terms of its settlement in the lawsuit over mental health care.

"We have not had as good a management as we need," said MHMR board member Beck. "We have 25,000 employees and an annual budget of half a billion dollars and I believe we need to improve the management."

Part of the problem is money. Texas spends relatively little on mental health care when compared to other states.

The National Association of State Mental Health Programs Directors ranks Texas 48th in overall spending per capita on mental health services.

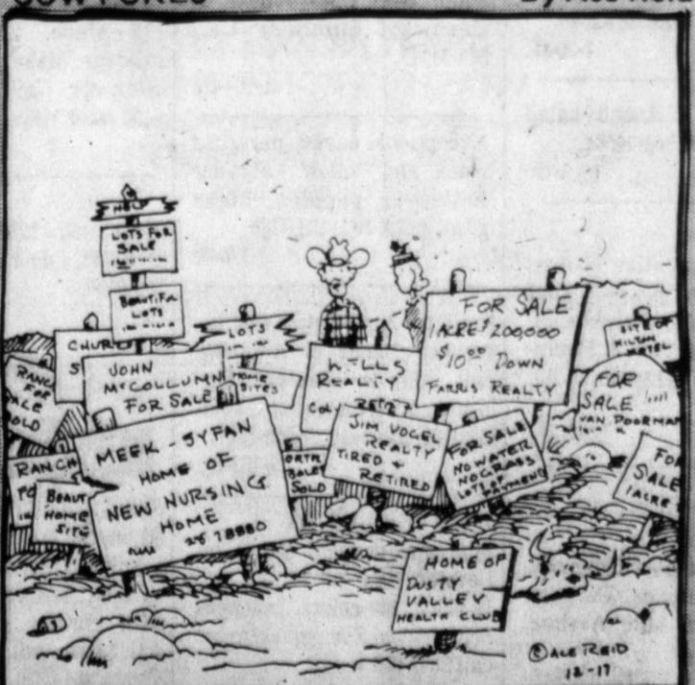

Another part of the problem is how that money is distributed. About 15 percent of the current MHMR budget is earmarked for community care, and 85 percent for hospitals. Yet the agency serves six times as many people — about 160,000 people a year — in community programs as it does in state hospitals.

Anglers get first hook

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Some 300 anglers tried their luck at a lake so popular that a half million people telephoned in one day in hopes of reserving a fishing spot.

About 120 vehicles carrying fishermen lined up before dawn Monday, the first day the public was allowed to sink its hooks into Creek Reservoir. The Texas Municipal Power Agency in Navasota operates the power-plant cooling lake, located about 18 miles east of College Station.

The reservoir attracted wide publicity and became the object of many fishermen's dreams last month, when the agency announced it would allow a small group of anglers to fish at the lake.

On Feb. 27, more than a half million people telephoned a single number at the agency hoping to cinch a reservation for opening day. Officials with AT&T said the caller overload jammed phone company lines.
