School in session Monday

Hereford school students are required to attend class on Monday, Memorial Day. Administrative officials said that next year's calendar will not have school on that holiday. Banks, other financial institutions, and government offices will be closed.

District Court cases heard

District Judge David Wesley Gulley heard four cases in 222nd District Court on Thursday. Joe Medina pled guilty to charges of burglary of a motor vehicle, unauthorized use of a motor vehicle and assault with a deadly weapon. He was assessed a penalty of 10 years probation and one year in the Institution Center at Odessa. Cornelius Corruthers pled guilty on a burglary charge and was assigned five years of probation and a $500 fine. Jose Pete Velasquez received modifications to his probation as the result of unauthorized use of a motor vehicle. James Edward Stubbs will face sentencing on June 22 on four counts of criminal mischief and on four counts related to drugs.

Two arrested for drugs

Detective Mike Ahrens and officer Bruce Lee of the Hereford Police Department arrested two men on Thursday for felony possession of marijuana with intent to deliver. Arrested were Ruben Rameriz, 21, and Cudberto Medrano, 20. Ramirez was also charged with unlawful carrying of a weapon. An incident of assault and false imprisonment is under investigation. A party reported being bound and forced to endure a haircut. The incident occurred in the area of New York Ave. and Veterans Park Road.

A vehicle stolen from Amarillo was recovered and a 17-year-old male was arrested in the 700 block of Union for unauthorized use of a motor vehicle and false identification to a peace officer. Other offenses reported included a dispute over a bicycle in the 500 block of Mable, theft of a jam box valued at $120, criminal trespass in the 700 block of South Main, a prowler in the 100 block of Ave. G, a barking dog in the 600 block of Stanton and a report of someone smoking marijuana in the alley between the 200 blocks of Elm and Fir revealed the person was smoking regular cigarettes. Six citations were issued and no accidents were reported.

Pioneer Day is Saturday

Residents who have lived in the Hereford area for at least 30 years are invited to the Mid-Plains Pioneer Day at the Bull Barn on Saturday. The highlight of the event will be the Pioneer of the Year Award, sponsored by KPAN Radio. Acknowledgements also will be given to the oldest woman, oldest man, and the pioneer who traveled the farthest. Registration begins at 9:30 a.m. with a fee of $3 and the business session begins at 11:30 a.m. Those attending are asked to bring a covered dish. Meat, drinks, and bread will be furnished.

Traffic court held Thursday

Justice of the Peace Johnnie Turentine held juried traffic court on Thursday. Two of three cases received guilty verdicts, one defendant was found innocent, all were in relation to speeding violations.

Potato Art

Molding mashed potatoes into a sculpture of a sports car netted the Junior Class a first place and more points in the Hereford High Student Council Olympiad. Adrian Castillo, Chad Clements, Jim Bob Parker and Tim Long claim title to the artwork done Thursday afternoon. The Olympiad continues Saturday at Whiteface Stadium with athletic events and tests in other skills - such as a facial dive into gelatin to bite a radish.

Budget woes may demand summer special session

AUSTIN (AP) — With the budget stalemate continuing and time running out on the Legislature's regular session, Gov. Bill Clements says a summer special session may be inevitable. "I don't think anything is going to happen in this session," Clements said Thursday. The 140-day regular session ends June 1, and so far the House and Senate have failed to agree on either a 1988-89 spending plan or a tax increase to pay for it. "I'm not resigned, I'm realistic. I certainly don't see any alternative at this point to a special session because I don't believe that we can do what we need to in the remaining days of this session," Clements said.

In some of his toughest talk yet, the Republican governor placed the blame for the impasse on Democratic Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, who presides over the Senate. "I don't think the problem is in the House. The problem is in the Senate. And the problem is Mr. Hobby. He is immovable," Clements said. Senators have approved a $40 billion state budget. The House has passed a $39.4 billion plan. Clements said his bottom line is $36.9 billion. Asked if he had a reaction to Clements' comments, Hobby told reporters, "No. No, I don't. I'd like to think I'm moving right along, not always in the same direction." The governor said the Senate-passed $40 billion budget actually totals $41 million, because Hobby didn't count some higher-education funds that traditionally are included in the budget total. "He has expanded significantly several of the programs. This is not the time to do that. He is set in concrete, so to speak," Clements said.

Hobby said Clements needs to study the Senate budget more closely, adding that he believes the governor's own budget counted that money in the same fashion. "More attention to detail might be in order," Hobby said. Clements has threatened to veto any tax increase larger than $2.9 billion, which he says will adequately fund the government for the next two years. The House already has approved a $2.9 billion bill that would extend for two years the "temporary" sales and motor fuel tax hikes passed last fall. The House Ways and Means Committee was scheduled to begin hearings today on a plan to broaden the sales tax base and raise more than $2.9 billion, but Clements said he doubted such a plan would pass. "I don't think it (a bigger tax increase) is going to go anywhere," the governor said. House Speaker Gib Lewis, D-Fort Worth, said lawmakers in his chamber would continue working on a budget up until the final hours. "Every day that we work on it, I think that's a day we can knock off the special session if we do go into a special session," Lewis said.

Economic growth fastest quarter spurt in three years

By The Associated Press
The U.S. economy grew at a 4.4 percent annual rate from January through March, the fastest pace in almost three years, the government said today.

The advance in the gross national product, which followed a lackluster 1.1 percent rise in the final quarter of 1986, left many economists unimpressed, however, because the strength came almost entirely from an unwanted buildup in business inventories. The Commerce Department estimate of overall economic strength represented only a slight revision from a month ago, when the government said the economy grew at a 4.3 percent rate in the first quarter.

A companion report on inflation showed that prices shot up at an annual rate of 4.2 percent in the first quarter, the fastest price spurt since the first quarter of 1984. The increase in the GNP deflator was blamed on sharply higher energy costs. In other reports, the government said that:

—Consumer prices, nudged upward by higher costs for food, energy and imported goods, rose 0.4 percent in April. The increase matched the 0.4 percent gains of February and March and amounted, analysts said, to a further indication of the effect of the declining dollar. —Orders for "big ticket" durable goods edged up a slight 0.1 percent in April. It was the weakest showing in three months and would have been even worse except for strength in defense orders.

Analysts said the poor showing for factory orders in April supported their belief that economic growth during the current April-June quarter will slump considerably from the 4.4 percent first quarter pace. Some economists are even forecasting a negative GNP performance in the current quarter as businesses slash production in order to work off the huge increase in inventories. Analysts are not now forecasting a recession, generally defined as two consecutive quarters of declining GNP. They believe that growth will strengthen in the second half of the year.

But economists admit there is a good deal of uncertainty in their forecasts, noting increasing worries about rising inflation and a plunging dollar.

The Reagan administration is forecasting the economy will grow at a 3.2 percent rate this year, up from a 2.5 percent increase in GNP during 1986, the weakest showing since the last recession ended in 1982.

The 4.4 percent increase in the GNP from January through March was the fastest rise since a 5.0 percent advance in the second quarter of 1984.

The strength last quarter came from a $63.5 billion rise in business inventories in the first quarter.

However, emphasizing the weak demand, final business sales dropped by $23.7 billion in the first quarter, a 2.5 percent decline that was the first quarterly decrease in sales since the third quarter of 1982, the low point of the last recession. It included a drop in consumer spending of 1.1 percent, a fall in business investment of 9.7 percent and a decline in housing construction of 4.3 percent.

The Branding Iron Rice has served cones to generations

By DEBE GRAVES
Staff Writer
Mary Rice, of the Candy Cane in Sugarland Mall, has watched a generation of customers grow up and return with their own children for treats. The ice cream and candy she serves with a smile have been a Hereford favorite for 23 years and many children, even those over 60, top off a trip to the mall with a visit to the Candy Cane. Rice and her husband, L.A., are owners of the store, which is now for sale. "We need to retire," she explains, "but, in a way, I don't want to. I'll miss the people we see everyday and especially the little kids who come in." From 9:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. weekdays and Saturdays the couple keeps their small store open. "Mornings and through the day we have coffee drinkers and afterwards we get the kids," Rice says. She says business is always good but June, July and August are the busiest months. Born in Clovis, N.M., her father, Dr. Westerfield, was the second general practitioner to open office there. After her marriage to L.A. in 1939, she moved with him to Muleshoe and then to Hereford.

"We moved to Hereford in the 1940s," she recalls. "My husband was a mechanic and went to work for Dudley Green at the old Ford place." She was previously employed by Perry's and Cowan's Jewelers. The couple attend First Baptist Church and when asked about hobbies she laughed, "Well, I used to cook quite a bit but now eating out is my hobby."

Though Rice says the candy she sells tempts her more than the ice cream, observers note that it is the temptation to stop and visit, share a smile and a kind word which she most often gives in to.

Governor would like to give pay raise

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements says he would like to give state employees a 2 percent salary increase, but he's not sure how much money it would take to fund the proposal.

Responding to a call-in question, Clements said Thursday he believes state employees "do deserve consideration for a small increase."

"If an increase can be managed through these difficult times ... I would be inclined to give it to them," Clements said on "The Governor Reports," a locally televised question-and-answer show.

On the program, the governor responds to call-in questions and those from a panel of Capitol journalists.

When asked how much money would be needed to fund the proposed increase, the governor said he didn't remember the figure. He said he would try to give the pay increase through agency incentives.

"If they let the employee numbers fall off by attrition, they reduce the work force, or if they have innovative ideas that have to do with productivity of the agency or the department, then they should share in that by participating in the savings," Clements said.

One of the reporters noted that the $36.9 billion budget Clements has proposed did not include allowances for the pay increase.

"Those things are changing right along. We have not laid out in detail exactly where we are because (the budget's) moving all the time and it's subject to negotiation," Clements said.

Clements also said the bottom line on his budget is "up some," saying that about $37.3 million "could well be" the new budget figure.

A caller told the governor she had heard reports that state employee paychecks would be delayed this summer if lawmakers don't balance the state's budget.

"You've been subjected to some disinformation, misinformation if you want to call it that, or I'll even say irresponsible information from (state treasurer) Ann Richards," Clements said.

"She has consistently talked about hot checks, and not paying her bills and going broke, those are all her words not mine," he said. "I can assure you that your leadership in state government is not going to allow that to happen."

Medical fund established

A medical fund has been established at Hereford State Bank for former residents Albert and Marie Maxwell, who now live in Farmersville in East Texas.

Mr. Maxwell has had surgery for a brain tumor and will need full time care. Mrs. Maxwell fell and was hospitalized for a head injury.

Mr. Maxwell was associated with Debrun Produce and Mrs. Maxwell was a former officer of HSB.

Tort reform passes quickly

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas House easily approved its own version of civil justice reform with a tort reform package designed to end the so-called crisis in the availability and price of liability insurance.

A final vote on several measures in the package was expected today. The principal measure tentatively approved on voice vote Thursday night was an omnibus tort reform bill revising civil justice laws covering personal injury and damage suits.

Also tentatively approved on a non-record vote was a measure that would make numerous changes in state liability insurance laws, including the creation of a consumer protection division at the State Board of Insurance.

More issues have been approved previously by the Senate, but House changes likely will send them to a 10-member conference committee to iron out the Senate-House differences.

Only two proposed amendments were debated in the 1½ hour consideration of the omnibus bill that included changes in law concerning comparative responsibility, punitive damages, governmental liability and frivolous lawsuits. Both proposals were defeated.

Gov. Bill Clements, who has threatened to call a special session on tort reform, praised the House for its support of tort and insurance reform. He did not say if he favored the House or Senate version.

"It will take an effort such as this to not only reform the state's tort laws, but also help bolster the state economy," Clements said.

The most crucial vote on an amendment by Rep. David Cain, D-Dallas, to make the House measure conform to the Senate bill was tabled 88-60.

"This reform is vitally needed to return predictability to our civil justice system which has contributed to the liability insurance crisis," said Rep. Mike Toomey, R-Houston, author of the House version of the Senate approved bill.

Cain argued the Senate bill had been a true compromise negotiated by legislators, trial lawyers and the insurance industry.

Rep. Debra Danburg, D-Houston, supported Cain saying adoption of the Senate version "means we would have a tort reform bill this session."

But "I predict if Cain's amendment is adopted we would have a bill that would not be signed by the governor," said Rep. Bruce Gipson, D-Cleburne.

"The House of Representatives is out of touch with the people of Texas," said Bill Rogers, director of the Texans for Civil Justice.

Rogers claimed in a statement the House bill would destroy the rights of injured people and protect drunken drivers because it tightened court procedures concerning damage recoveries.

"The people of Texas do not want to see our laws changed to protect those who are guilty of the most gross forms of negligence," Rogers said.

An amendment offered by Rep. Sam Russell, D-Mount Pleasant, that would have removed cities from a provision limiting the liability of local governments was tabled 81-45.

The House version would say a defendant in a damage suit could not be forced to pay for all of the damages unless he was held at least 26 percent responsible. The Senate bill called for a threshold of 19 percent.

The House bill provides that no one could recover damages in a suit if he was more than 50 percent responsible.

In products liability cases, the plaintiff could not recover damages if 56 percent or more responsible for the injury or damages. The Senate version had a threshold of 61 percent for products liability cases.

The House bill has a cap on punitive damages that could range from $200,000 to four times the actual economic damages. There would be a $500,000 cap on non-economic damages.

The insurance omnibus measure also provides for a public counsel to serve at the State Board of Insurance to represent consumers, similar to the public counsel at the Public Utility Commission.

House members voted 92-52 to remove from the insurance package a provision that it would be void if courts should find the tort reform measure unconstitutional.

By a vote of 100-39, the House approved a proposed constitutional amendment that would give the Legislature top authority in regulation of court action to recover damages.

Toomey said the constitution change was needed in case the Texas Supreme Court attempted to void the tort reform package.

"The courts have been a part of our trouble all the time," he said.

Ex-mayor sells frozen pickles

KNOX CITY, Texas (AP) — It will be a while before Scooter Thompson becomes an active partner in the business that bears his name, but that doesn't mean he can't enjoy the products.

"Clay's and Scooter's Snowcones" was an idea put together by former Knox City mayor Buddy Angle three years ago as a kind of summer project for his older grandson, Clay Hewitt. When Scooter came along, he became a "partner," too, with his older cousin.

Clay, 13, the senior partner who attends Hutchinson Honors School in Amarillo during the school year, comes home to Knox City to work with his granddad when school is out.

"I bought this building from a fellow in Seymour," Angle said as he opened the store front. "I just thought it would be something fun for us to do together."

At age 2, Scooter's main contribution as a junior partner is to sit on the counter and keep Angle company. Business, however, is nothing to sneer at.

Last year, Angle introduced a new item to the stand, which someday could be its claim to fame. He opened the freezer and produced something green at the end of a stick.

"Frozen pickle on a stick," Angle said and grinned. "One of the high school age teachers was by one day and suggested I try freezing these big dills on a stick. We sell lots of 'em. It's just not the kind of thing you see at the Dairy Queen."

The stand isn't just a small business, it's a meeting place. Located next door to the Angles' house, the family often sets up lawn chairs in the side yard and visits with neighbors and customers. When the city swimming pool is open, folks often drop by on their way home.

Bill compromises on bilingual education, expands programs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Months of negotiations over bilingual education and other potentially explosive topics culminated in near-unanimous House passage of a wide-ranging education bill.

The School Improvement Act, passed 401-1 on Thursday, consolidates 14 programs that touch nearly every elementary and secondary school child in the nation, expanding in some areas and renewing all programs until 1993.

"We've expanded our commitment to the nation's children and closed the gap between the haves and the have-nots in education," said Rep. Augustus Hawkins, D-Calif., chairman of the House Education and Labor Committee.

The sweeping bill contains programs for low-income and low-achieving children, preschoolers and high-school dropouts, gifted and talented students, math, science and foreign language teachers, students with limited English skills and many other groups.

The overall budgets approved by the Senate and House contain enough money to pay for the higher spending authorized in the omnibus House bill. Actual fiscal 1988 outlays for the House-approved programs will not be determined until an education appropriations bill is passed.

The education authorization bill calls for $779 million in education spending above current levels — the first time the House has backed a real increase in domestic spending in several sessions of Congress, according to Hawkins.

Rep. Phil Crane, R-Ill., was the only lawmaker voting against the bill.

"We tried to work out the controversies behind the scenes," Hawkins said. He said the overwhelming bipartisan vote makes it likely the Senate will act quickly on a companion measure and unlikely any significant opposition will arise.

One of the only floor debates Wednesday concerned an unsuccessful attempt by Rep. Bill Grant, D-Fla., to bar federal funds for youth suicide prevention courses until the Education Department studies such activities further. School districts are allowed to use education block grants to develop the courses if they wish.

Grant said many experts fear "death education" courses could spark suicide epidemics among teens. "It's not that we don't want to deal with the problem, we don't want to aggravate the problem," he said.

Rep. Charles Bennett, D-Fla., said his son committed suicide the day he was released from a hospital and his teenage granddaughter is hospitalized now after trying to kill herself. He said it would be "a very great mistake" to delay federal aid for voluntary grass roots education efforts.

The amendment was rejected by voice vote.

A floor battle over bilingual education was averted by a delicate compromise between the demands of the Reagan administration and members of the Hispanic caucus. It authorizes more money in the future for teaching methods that use English, as the administration had sought. But the native-language programs now required of almost all grant recipients will continue to receive at least as much money as they get now.

The largest single item in the bill is the government's Chapter 1 program for low-income and educationally disadvantaged children. The bill authorizes $4.1 billion for basic grants for Chapter 1 services, $200 million higher than current spending.

Senator says White House teamed up against wealthy

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration maintained a "fiction" that it was not soliciting money for Nicaragua's Contra rebels when in fact officials had teamed up with a fund-raiser for a "one-two punch" on wealthy sympathizers, a senator said at Congress' Iran-Contra hearings.

Three private donors to the Contra cause testified Thursday that they had given money because they were convinced President Reagan wanted them to do so. In two cases, Lt. Col. Oliver L. North briefed the donors before conservative fund-raiser Carl R. "Spitz" Channell asked them for contributions. Channell has pleaded guilty to a tax fraud conspiracy charge stemming from the Contra fund raising.

"Where I come from, we call that the old one-two punch," said Sen. Warren Rudman, R-N.H., a member of the Senate investigating committee. "To me it's a fiction for anyone to assume that's not a solicitation."

The three donors — Ellen Garwood, a wealthy widow from Austin, Texas; Joseph Coors, a Colorado brewery owner; and William O'Boyle, an oil and gas investor from New York — gave a total of $2.4 million for weapons and aircraft for the Contras during a time when Congress had prohibited U.S. military aid, "directly or indirectly."

In other Iran-Contra developments:

—Investigators said they had discovered in the safe at North's former office in the White House complex a private proposal outlining a plan for transferring U.S. high-technology goods to Israel, which in turn would transfer military equipment to a third country. The third country, apparently China, then would deliver arms through a trading company to the Contras and other "freedom fighters" in Afghanistan, Angola and Cambodia. The plan, although never specifically carried out, could have been a model for the Iran-Contra scheme, investigators said.

—Testimony seemed to cast growing doubt on the sworn statements of retired Air Force Maj. Gen. Richard V. Secord, who had been the hearings' opening witness. Witnesses told of markups on weapons sold to the Contras by Secord, who has insisted he made no profit on the deals. Investigators noted Secord had decided to dig in his heels on release of Swiss bank records rather than cooperate, as he had told the committees he would. Secord's business partner, Albert Hakim, was scheduled to testify when hearings resume Wednesday.

—Lawrence E. Walsh, the independent counsel investigating the Iran-Contra affair, has subpoenaed David Kimche, the former director of Israel's foreign ministry, to testify about his role in the affair, an Israeli official said Thursday. Asher Naim, Israeli embassy information director, accused Walsh of "going off on his own and violating agreements reached between Israel and the United States." Kimche is visiting New York and would not have risked a visit to the United States if he had not felt safe from subpoena, said an Israeli official who asked not to be identified. Israeli officials are negotiating with Walsh over the summons, said an embassy official.

The three Contra donors testified that they would not have made their contributions without assurances that the Reagan administration wanted them to give. Coors said he approached then-CIA Director William J. Casey, who told him, "Ollie North's the guy to see." Garwood and O'Boyle were introduced to North by Channell.

"Colonel North's involvement seemed to me a guarantee that this was the executive branch of the government asking for help," said Mrs. Garwood, who gave more than $3 million through Channell's organizations.

Mrs. Garwood said she attended a

White House session in January 1986 at which North and Assistant Secretary of State Elliott Abrams made presentations, and Reagan thanked the contributors present for their support of the Contras.

No money solicitations were made then, she added.

O'Boyle said North even told him during a private meeting of a "secret" U.S. plan to use the Navy to blockade Nicaraguan ports and overthrow the leftist Sandinista government. Rudman later said the story was merely a gimmick to raise money.

O'Boyle also testified that Channell told him Reagan would meet with him for a 15-minute, "off-the-record" session if he raised $300,000 for the cause.

Coors and O'Boyle said they were surprised to hear Secord was claiming ownership of the light aircraft they thought they had donated to the rebels.

Another witness annoyed by Secord's activities was retired Army Maj. Gen. John K. Singlaub, who said he was trying strenuously to raise money for the Contras when Secord apparently was sitting on $8 million in profits and donations intended for the rebels.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: "Loony Bin's" letter let me know I am not alone.

My husband retired at 59. I was 47. I had never worked outside the home; I raised our three children, who turned out beautifully.

After "Dick" retired, all of a sudden I couldn't cook right, clean the house properly or run the sweeper to suit him. He told me how to talk on the phone and how to drive the car. He was jealous of my friends, resented my playing bridge and became upset when I paid attention to the cat. He expected me to wait on him hand and foot and get him a beer whenever he was thirsty.

After two years of sheer hell I took a cue from your column and went for counseling. The therapist advised me to find a part-time job. "Anything", she said, "just get out of the house three days a week."

Those three days a week away from Dick have saved my sanity. I now let the picky-picky-picky stuff roll off me like water off a duck's back.

I hope you will print this letter so that other women who are being driven round the bend will know that there is a solution to the retired husband problem.—Found It in Kentucky

DEAR KENTUCKY: Thanks for sitting in my seat today. You were right on target. Since jobs are scarce in certain areas, I recommend volunteer work. It can be extremely rewarding. My sis and I piled up a few thousand hours as Gray Ladies in Eau Claire, Wis., and we enjoyed it immensely.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Regarding the letter from D.R.J. in Pa. who wrote, "I don't understand why parents seem duty-bound to leave an equal amount of their estate to their children":

I want to emphasize the wisdom of this practice. Parents who bequeath different amounts to their children, or who bypass children in favor of grandchildren, often sow seeds of hostility among their offspring after their death. Exceptions are: children whose physical or mental health needs are unusual (such as chronic illness, mental retardation, institutionalization) and children (like D.R.J.'s sister) who have assumed the financial burden of caring for elderly parents.

However, even in these cases, parents need to explain and discuss wills with their children to avoid surprises and promote acceptance of the terms.

I think you will find my position is the one taken by most therapists trained to deal with family problems.—Nancy H., Family Therapist, West Hartford, Conn.

DEAR NANCY H.: I agree, all things being equal, that parents should leave the same amount to all children. The special instances you referred to are all valid reasons for leaving more to one child than another.

The best part of your letter was suggesting that parents discuss what is in the will if the division is not going to be equal so there will be no surprises.

While we are on the subject I would like to reiterate one of the Landers Laws for Sensible Living: It is almost always a bad idea to leave large amounts to children or grandchildren who are under 35. Nothing kills initiative like knowing you don't have to exert yourself because Dad or Grandma is going to leave you a bundle.

Inherited money has ruined a great many people who would have amounted to something they had they known they were going to have to work for what they wanted in life.

Hereford residents on list

Six Hereford residents were among the 242 students on the Amarillo College spring semester scholastic honors list.

Those included were Roy Herrera, an electrical instrumentation major; Mary Suzy Wall, a commercial art major; Amy C. Scott, a mid-management major;

Joe M. Rohbach, an automotive mechanics major; Mary E. Riley, a home economics interior decorator major; and Joe B. Hamby, a paramedicine technology major.

To be eligible for the honors list, students must be enrolled in a minimum of 12 hours of academic subjects as well as maintaining a 3.4 grade point average or higher. Amarillo College salutes those students who have brought recognition to themselves and the college.

Jacobsen hosts supper

El Llano Study Club met recently in the home of club president Ursalee Jacobsen for their annual salad supper.

Zula Arney served as co-hostess. Minutes were read and approved and Avis White reported that a thank-you note from Girls Town had been received acknowledging the gifts that had been sent.

It was voted to buy two student season tickets for the Community Concert.

An invitation to the Tour of Tables, sponsored by the Episcopal Church, was read. It was voted to give $50 as a Friendship Sponsor a Big Brothers/Big Sisters.

A letter from the Womens Forum in Amarillo was read asking that the club support or nominate an outstanding woman from this area.

Members present were Jean Ballard, White, Mozelle Childers, Alice Eades, Roberta Caviness, Jeane Dowell, Helen Eades, Elizabeth Cesar, Dolores Foster, and Sue Armstrong.

Informal gathering Saturday

Friends of members of the Hereford High School graduating class of 1937 are invited to an informal gathering from 2:30-5 p.m. Saturday at the Hereford Community Center.

For additional information call Gladys Willoughby at 364-3769 or Dorothy Mercer at 364-0418.

U.S. bombers based on Saipan attacked Tokyo Nov. 24, 1944, during World War II. This was the first raid against the Japanese capital by land-based planes.

Class of '52 to gather Saturday

Members of the Hereford High School graduating class of 1952 will have an informal gathering from 1 to 6 p.m. Saturday in the Hereford Community Center.

The class cordially invites any and all friends to attend the gathering.

In game 3 against Lakers

Ellis wants 'more minutes'

SEATTLE (AP) — "More minutes" is what the Seattle SuperSonics' Dale Ellis says he needs if his team is going to come from two games behind on Saturday to defeat the Los Angeles Lakers in the NBA Western Conference final.

The Sonics host Los Angeles in the third game of the best-of-seven series on Saturday, and in Game 4 on Monday.

Ellis is caught in something of a Catch-22. In the playoff games where he has had more than 22 shots and totaled more than 22 points, the Sonics are 6-0. They are 1-5 in the other six games.

For Ellis, the conclusion is obvious: more minutes mean more shots.

"I would like more shots. If my teammates are missing, I'd rather be taking those shots," he said. "I would rather it be on me than on them."

In the first game of the series, Ellis shot just 13 times to accumulate 11 points, and the Sonics went down 92-87. He had only 16 shots and 22 points in the second game, when the Sonics were defeated 112-104.

Ellis had previously been a centerpiece in the Sonics' surprising success in the playoffs, but he's tried to avoid discussing the issue of Seattle's over-reliance on him. Until now.

"I don't think there's any pressure on me to have good games, but I am disappointed in my performance during this series," he said. "I have to play better for us to have a chance."

But his opponents don't want to give him that chance. It seems the Lakers, like the Dallas Mavericks and Houston Rockets before them, have figured that curtailing Ellis' time cuts down on his chances.

So it's not surprising that Ellis has met with foul problems early in the first half, cutting down on his playing time.

While the Sonics can look forward to playing on their home court at the Seattle Center Coliseum, the Lakers are counting on their 2-0 series lead to help carry them through the Sonics' home stand.

"Having the two games means they have to beat us four out of five (remaining games) and they've got to win the two games up there," Lakers Coach Pat Riley said. "So, I think it takes a little pressure off us." Riley also is counting on the Lakers' playoff experience to give them the edge.

"We've been at this a long time," he said. "Experience is definitely a factor in the last four or five minutes. Our guys at that time are pretty patient and make the plays they have to make."

But Los Angeles' Magic Johnson gives the Sonics some credit for making the Lakers' two victories hard-won.

Fighting Mavericks

Libby Kosub and Stacy White tied for the girls' Fighting Maverick Award, and Russell Backus was the boys' Fighting

Maverick. The three were honored Thursday for their fight and sportsmanship in athletics at La Plata Junior High.

Speed versus safety

How fast is too fast at Indianapolis 500?

By George Robinson

NEW YORK (NEA) — Bobby Rahal bristles when asked about the relationship between speed and safety at the Indianapolis 500.

"Speed is one thing, danger is another," Rahal snaps. "Most people think it's extremely dangerous. In reality, it isn't."

Rahal, who won the race in 1986, will be defending his crown in the 71st Indianapolis 500 on Sunday, May 24 (on ABC-TV). The drivers cover 200 laps of the 2.5-mile banked oval at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway.

Danny Sullivan, the 1985 Indy winner, points out that accidents "are a subject that race car drivers don't like to talk about much."

Sullivan admits the rise to peaks above 200 mph in the Indy 500 leaves the drivers less time to react. "Any time you start adding speed and you go as fast as we do there," he says, "you increase the severity of the accidents."

But the Indy 500's safety record in recent years would seem to bear out Rahal's contention that rising speeds don't make the race much less safe. The last driver fatality in the running of the Indy 500 was Swede Savage in 1973.

While the cars "look sort of flimsy," Rahal claims, they are, in fact, "very strong." An Indy car engine can develop between 700 and 800 horsepower. In the straightaways on the famed track — in Speedway, Ind., a suburb of Indianapolis — the cars are routinely clocked at 230 mph.

The track record for a single qualifying lap is 217.518 mph; for a four-lap qualifying run, it's 216.828. Both records were set last year.

The driver who set both of those speed records, two-time Indy champ Rick Mears, says the race itself could easily be run faster. "The only thing that determines the threshold is the rules," he says. "There is no limit as far as the speed. You drive what the cars allow you to drive."

Tom Sneva, winner of the Indy 500 in 1983 (and a four-time runner-up), agrees. "Right now we're running engines that are capable of almost twice the horsepower that we're restricted to," he says. "There's a lot more horsepower that's available if we wanted to go faster."

But none of the drivers feels that the potential for extra speed would add to the quality of the competition.

"It's exciting to go out and go 217 mph," says Rahal. "But I don't know that it makes the racing any better."

Explains Sneva: "One car running at 300 mph gets pretty boring in a hurry. Ten cars running at 180 can be pretty exciting." He adds, "I'd like to see more restrictions. That would bring driving ability into play more."

Even Rahal is dismayed by the prospect of unregulated speed.

"The way it would be without the rules," he says, "God only knows."

The irony is that all four drivers — Rahal, Sullivan, Mears and Sneva — agree that speed is only one of the factors needed to win the Indy 500.

"Speed is important," Rahal says. "If you're quicker than everybody else, you have an advantage. Even if you don't lead the whole race, you have the ability to pass people."

That is, after all, how Rahal pulled out his victory on lap 198 (of 200) last year — by slingshot passing of Kevin Cogan, the leader at that point.

However, Rahal pinpoints another winning factor:

"You have to have a car that's very consistent, that doesn't change in handling between when you go out with a full fuel tank and when you come in with an empty one. There's about a 25-pound difference. So, the person who has the best balance is in better shape than everybody else."

Mears says it takes a fast, reliable car and a good driver to win the Indy 500: "It doesn't matter if you're running 35 miles an hour or 235, I want mine to run 36 or 236. You have to be faster than the next guy."

"Today's cars are a little more sophisticated. It's no longer the guy who stands on the gas the longest who wins. It's the guy who uses his head, who works with the chassis, the set-up, and makes the car work."

The average speed figures for the Indy 500 — last year's winning time of 170.722 was a record — are affected by the number of caution periods, which are usually caused by accidents or breakdowns.

"The speed during the course of the race is dictated a lot by conditions and traffic," Sullivan says. "People just can't run quite as hard as they like."

As fast as it is, Sullivan thinks the Indianapolis 500 is "as safe as any of the other oval races — perhaps a bit safer."

But he admits drivers sometimes can tend to throw caution to the wind.

"All of us want it to be safe," Sullivan says. "But when they roll out there on the line, everybody's going to try to go as fast as they can."

Hereford youth place in tae kwon do tourney

Eleven youth from Hereford achieved 16 placings in the top 10 in competition at the Texas State Junior Tae Kwon Do Championships in Abilene last weekend.

The tournament was a qualifier tourney for both the United States Tae Kwon Do Junior Nationals, which are scheduled June 19-20 in Tulsa, Okla., and the USA-AAU Junior Olympics.

Those who placed first in the tournament were Jamie Simpson, first in sparring; Justin Henderson, first in sparring; Ralph Claudio, first in sparring; and Wade McPherson, first in forms.

Simpson also placed fifth in forms, Claudio was fourth in forms, and McPherson placed fifth in sparring.

Placing second were Danny Eberly, second in sparring, and Cloudy Meason, second in sparring.

The other top 10 placings were these: Marie Crox, third in sparring and sixth in forms; Michael Riley, fourth in forms; Brian Torres, sixth in sparring; Jody Hodges, sixth in forms and eighth in sparring; and Salvador Orosco, sixth in sparring.

Their instructor-coach is Loopy Crox, and their coaches are Carl Simpson and George Zepeda.

Legal designer drugs pose problem in Dallas area

Anyone who has passed an elementary chemistry course could make a lot of money. As long as he had no moral objections, he could design drugs for profit. Unfortunately, too many "fly-by-night" pharmacists and illicit chemists are following the get-rich-quick scheme. And people are dying.

Dr. Robert Bost, chief toxicologist of the Southwestern Institute of Forensic Sciences at The University of Texas Health Science Center at Dallas, believes they represent a serious and continuing problem for the Dallas area.

Compared to national figures, the abuse in Dallas seems unexpectedly high. These drugs originated in California a few years before arriving in Dallas, yet Dallas has produced five deaths while California has reported only one.

Bost speculates that Dallas could be a test market for designer drugs. "Dallas may be a central area where Eve and Ecstasy are being tested. There are a number of illicit amphetamine synthesis operations in the Dallas area that easily could have switched from producing amphetamines to Ecstasy and Eve. "Of course, I can only speculate that Dallas may have been chosen as a trial area."

Apparently there are people, whether from one large operation or many individual entrepreneurs, who are ready and willing to play with the drug recipes in the Dallas area. Bost says, "We know that Ecstasy and Eve were widely used in Dallas from 1985 to 1986 because we saw the drugs come through our laboratories. Five people between the ages of 18 and 32 have been victims of designer-drug-related deaths." Bost and two other investigators reported on the five deaths in the Mar. 27, 1987, issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association.

"Furthermore, we have had four patients admitted to Parkland Memorial Hospital for reasons not related to the drug and have found the drug in their systems. We have also found the drug in seven D.W.I. cases. It is being abused in Dallas," Bost says.

Lieutenant David M. Davis Jr. of the Drug Abuse Section of the Dallas Police Department agrees that Dallas has an unusually high number of designer drug users. "Dallas, Houston, San Francisco and Los Angeles are major Ecstasy and Eve consumer areas. We don't know why these cities have large populations of designer drug users, but there seems to be one common thread: all of these cities have a large population of designer drug users, but there seems to be one common thread: all of these cities have a large gay population concentrated in one central area. Most Ecstasy and Eve is found, sold and consumed in a part of the city popular to the gay community. This doesn't mean that all homosexuals take designer drugs, but there is a preference among gay drug users for those drugs."

"In Dallas the primary place we find designer drugs is the Oak Lawn area. When Ecstasy was legal, there were several shops in the area openly advertising that designer drugs were available. Basically anyone could walk in and buy a dose," Davis says. "There is not a 'typical' user. They can be in high school or out of college, from North Dallas or Oak Cliff, heterosexual or homosexual."

Designer drugs like Ecstasy and Eve are easy to make, easy to sell and, because of loopholes in the law, legal for unpredictable periods of time.

Ecstasy (MDMA) and Eve (MDEA) are the products of minor substitutions or rearrangements in the chemical structure of the currently prescribed drugs amphetamine and methamphetamine, commonly called speed. Although these slight molecular changes do not necessarily alter the action of the parent drug, technically and legally they create new drugs.

While it is illegal to possess amphetamines or methamphetamines without a physician's prescription, designer drugs are legal to possess in Texas until they are expressly listed as controlled substances in the Texas Controlled Substances Act. It sometimes takes less than a week to create a new drug and years to produce enough evidence to ban its use.

Dr. Elizabeth Todd, chief of regulated substances at the Southwestern Institute of Forensic Sciences says, "A serious danger may exist in the new chemical composition of the drug. No one can predict what biological responses will result from even a slight change in chemical structure."

The effects can, in some cases, be deadly. In 1982 underground chemists attempted to synthesize a drug similar to Demerol (meperidine). They created MPTP, a toxin causing brain destruction similar to that found in Parkinson's disease. Unfortunately their research animals were not little white mice; they were humans—street drug users. Todd says, "These unlawful drug manufacturers do not subject new drugs to safety tests. The first test is the first user."

In the early '80s illicit chemists designed a legal drug, Ecstasy (3,4-methylenedioxymethamphetamine) by altering the molecular composition of methamphetamine, a controlled substance. The number of users soared, because of a marketing effort not unlike that employed to sell designer clothes. Eventually drug officials recognized the abuse potential of Ecstasy and classified it as a controlled substance. Within months the illicit market had formulated a chemical cousin, Eve (3,4-methylenedioxyethamphetamine), which today remains a non-controlled yet nearly identical substitute.

Bost says that it is not difficult to design a drug. "Any chemist can take a basic molecular structure, make minor chemical changes and come up with a different compound," he says. "In the case of Ecstasy, someone experimented with the chemical composition of methamphetamine and found that, by rearranging one side group, he could produce a drug that had similar effects yet was legal. It is not difficult to switch from amphetamines or methamphetamines to Ecstasy or Eve; it is just a simple change."

If a fly-by-night pharmacist with simple tools and a limited background in chemistry can reverse the legality of dangerous street drugs, why haven't illicit chemists created synthetic equivalents of all illegal drugs? Bost says designer drugs may be limited to amphetamines and methamphetamines for the time being simply because it is relatively easy to alter the chemical composition of stimulants without changing the desired psychoactive effects.

In theory, however, any drug can be manipulated. "It is possible to change the chemical composition of almost any drug. The effects of the new substance may be either similar to or completely different from the parent drug. The designed drug may be toxic, like MPTP. We have no way of predicting what biological consequences will result from small molecular changes," Todd says.

CLASSIFIED ADS
Classified advertising rates are based on... cents a word for first insertion ($2.00 minimum), and 10 cents for second publication and thereafter. Rates below are based on consecutive issues, no copy change, straight word ads.

TIMES	RATE	MIN.
1 day per word	.14	2.00
2 days per word	.34	4.00
3 days per word	.34	6.00
4 days per word	.44	8.00
5th day FREE

Ten days (2 free) is $15.00 minimum; 15 days (3 free) is $23.00 minimum; one month is $31.00 minimum.

CLASSIFIED DISPLAY
Classified display rates apply to all other ads not set in solid-word lines—those with captions, bold or larger type, special paragraphing, all capital letters. Rates are $3.95 per column inch; $3.25 an inch for additional insertions.

LEGAL
Ad rates for legal notices are 14 cents per word first insertion, 10 cents per word for additional insertions.

ERRORS
Every effort is made to avoid errors in word ads and legal notices. Advertisers should call attention to any errors immediately after the first insertion. We will not be responsible for more than one incorrect insertion. In case of errors by the publishers, an additional insertion will be published.

Gene may cause 7.5 percent of breast cancer cases

BOSTON (AP) — Women who carry a single gene for a rare nerve disorder have a high risk of getting breast cancer, a finding that may help explain why the killer disease appears to run in families, researchers report today.

"Breast cancer shows a great degree of running in families," said Dr. John Mulvihill of the National Cancer Institute. "We would like to have a greater understanding of why. This could be a partial explanation."

The apparent connection between the gene and breast cancer was made by Dr. Michael Swift and colleagues at the University of North Carolina.

People who inherit two copies of the gene — one from each parent — get the disease ataxia-telangiectasia, or AT, which afflicts a few hundred Americans. Many people carry one copy of the gene and suffer no obvious ill effects.

Swift's study of 110 families of AT victims found that women relatives were seven times more likely to get breast cancer than the general female population.

Swift, whose findings were published in today's New England Journal of Medicine, said the research suggests that 7.5 percent of all breast cancer — or about 10,000 cases a year — could be attributable to the AT gene.

This estimate is based on an assumption arrived at by other researchers that 1.4 percent of all Americans carry the gene. However, no one knows the precise figure, so the share of breast cancer caused by the gene "could easily be anywhere from 5 to 20 percent," Swift said in an interview.

Many men and women are thought to have the gene, but there is no way to know who they are unless two of them marry and produce a child with AT. Then doctors can assume both parents have the gene.

Even though women who carry the gene appear to be predisposed to breast cancer, not all carriers get this disease. Swift said this suggests that some other factor may trigger breast cancer in these people.

One trigger could be radiation. AT victims suffer extreme tissue damage if they receive radiation therapy for leukemia. The researchers discovered several AT gene carriers got breast cancer after myelography, diagnostic spinal X-rays.

"What we are suggesting, but not proving, is that women who carry the

AT gene and get diagnostic X-rays may have an excess risk of breast cancer," Swift said. "I emphasize the word 'may.'"

AT is a progressive disease that affects the cerebellum, the part of the brain that regulates coordination. Victims have trouble controlling the movement of their arms and legs, and have an increased cancer risk.

Swift said researchers are trying to locate the AT gene so that they can identify people who carry it.

Heat, massage treat neck spasms

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I am a 73-year-old woman and was diagnosed three years ago as having torticollis. Will you please explain the symptoms, as well as treatment and medications that might be available?

DEAR READER — Torticollis (wry neck) is caused by spasms of the muscles that support the head. It can result from tension, arthritis of the neck (cervical) bones, inflammation of the neck muscles, or — in rare cases — a pinched nerve in the upper spine.

Treatment depends on the cause. In most instances, the muscle spasm can be relieved by hot packs, massage and anti-spasmodics, such as Robaxin or Flexeril, which reduce the sharp pains or neck-aching associated with torticollis. If the muscle spasm is severe, a person may have difficulty turning or moving the head. In such cases, pain medication or physical therapy will be useful.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I have an eye inflammation that my doctor calls a pterygium. I have worn hard contact lenses for more than 10 years with no difficulty. Now I occasionally feel some irritation with the left lens. Exactly what is a pterygium?

DEAR READER — A pterygium is a winglike film of scar tissue that extends from a corner of the eye, across the white portion (sclera) to the clear front of the eye (cornea). Although it is harmless and usually does not affect vision, a pterygium can cause irritation. In people who wear contact lenses, the abnormal tissue can be especially bothersome because it prevents satisfactory contact between the lens and the cornea. A pterygium can easily be removed by most qualified ophthalmologists.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Should mineral oil be used for constipation and colon problems? I have read that it can be harmful, yet some doctors still prescribe it for elderly patients. Could you suggest something better?

DEAR READER — Mineral oil, although an effective laxative, is not appropriate for long-term use. It can cause changes in the bowel wall, poor absorption of vitamins and — in some elderly patients who inadvertently inhale it — a type of pneumonia.

As a first step toward regulating sluggish bowels, I recommend the use of natural laxatives, such as fruit (particularly prunes and apricots), fruit juices and vegetable fiber, like bran. The next step is to try bulking agents, such as Metamucil, and increased dietary water. If these don't bring results, try a laxative like milk of magnesia, which is safer than mineral oil. (However, remember that long-term use of chemical laxatives can make the bowel unable to work on its own.) I'd use mineral oil compounds only as a last resort and for short times — a day or two at most.

To give you more information, I'm sending you a free copy of my Health Report on IRRITABLE BOWEL SYNDROME, which explains the symptoms and management of this common problem. Other readers who want a copy can send $1 and their name and address to P.O. Box 91488, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to mention the title.
