Clements, Hobby sharply split over budget

AUSTIN (AP) — With the state budget deadlock unbroken, Gov. Bill Clements and Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby are voicing sharply disparate opinions about the problem.

"There's a lot of people around this town that don't realize the election's over. And they don't realize who won the election and why I won," Clements said Thursday, again urging lawmakers to understand that taxes won't go up.

"I think there's a mandate from the people to proivde a first-class education system in the state, to keep our prisons open, to keep our hospitals open," said Hobby, explaining why lawmakers voted for a larger budget than Clements wanted.

The Legislature has only four days left in its regular session, and if no budget passes, a special session will be needed.

Clements denies blame for the stalemate and again vowed to veto any tax increase greater than $2.9 billion, saying that's what voters wanted when they elected him.

"I don't feel any blame whatsoever ... I was elected to come down here and I'm going to do the things the people elected me to do," he said.

Hobby, leader of the Senate and the man Clements now blames for would have ended weeks ago if Clements had compromised.

"It wouldn't have been impossible to have it done some weeks ago," Hobby said. "The governor continues to make puzzling statements." Asked what it would take to break reality therapy, I suppose." Their charges in separate news conferences Thursday appeared to leave little room for negotiation the deadlock, Hobby replied, "Some before Monday's adjournment. Clements has proposed a $36.9 billion, two-year budget. The House approved a $39.4 billion spending plan and the Senate budget totaled $40 billion. Neither the House nor the Senate has approved enough new taxes to fund their budgets.

Clements said he sees no end to the deadlock until legislators realize that most Texans oppose higher taxes.

"We need to look a little bit deeper than these superficial statements that are made by some of these prima donnas here in Austin, Texas," Clements said.

"They need to get out of their cocoons and get out there and talk to the people of Texas and understand what grassroots Texas is talking about. The people of Texas don't want those kinds of increases in state government. Period."

The Republican governor blames the Democratic-controlled Senate, whose budget would require a $5.8 billion tax increase.

"They've been totally unreasonable and unrealistic when they start talking about a $5.8 billion tax increase for a wish list that the people of Texas don't want," Clements said.

When anybody starts personalizing arguments, they've lost the argument on the merits ... That's why people resort to tactics like that, Hobby responded.

Clements voiced strong opposition to taxes higher than $2.9 billion, either now or in a special session

"I'm not going to change. I'm not going to change," he declared. 'Whether it's in this regular session, which is very shortly to come to a conclusion, or whether it's in the next special session or the next special session or the next special session, I'm not going to change."

WDIC welcomes water rep, several plans approved

By DEBE GRAVES Staff Writer

High Plains Underground Water Conservation District 1 representative Troy Sublett was welcomed as a newly appointed voting member of the Waste Deposit Impact Committee during a Thursday evening meeting of the WDIC. Sublett is the water district's primary representative to WDIC and Bob Veigel is first alternate.

WDIC members approved the establishment of an Assistant Director for Geotechnical Analysis. Executive Director Phillip Niedzielski-Eichner will prepare a job description and advertise for the position.

Eichner also received permission to secure a preliminary proposal from Texas Tech University to subcontract assistance with the WDIC geotechnical oversight program for site characterization.

Approval of a plan to negotiate with the Department of Energy to establish a formal agreement which would provide for DOE to voluntarily give information to the WDIC and to allow for input from WDIC on site characterization issues.

The proposal provides for increments of input ranging from the right to be informed on certain issues to the right to negotiate on others.

The committee approved a plan to initiate discussions with Deaf Smith County Commissioner's Court on the distribution of future Payments-Equal-To-Tax (PETT). The funds would be paid to the county, then distributed to other tax entities according to a formula defined by current tax rates and property values.

Eichner will also look at securing the services of a personnel consultant to provide limited services in terms of needs assessment for businesses impacted by employees leaving for jobs with DOE or its subcontractors.

A status report on the establishment of the Site Characterization Issues Council revealed that the taxing entities will be naming their delegates to the two committees in upcoming meetings.

Twenty-eight applicants filed for the position of Socioeconomic Assistant Director with the WDIC. Eichner stated that 25 of the applicants are current residents of Deaf Smith County. Preliminary interviews for the position are being conducted. Eichner says the field will be narrowed to five applicants by today, and these candidates will be extensively interviewed. Final selection will be made by June 5. Eichner also reported on efforts, in conjuction with other areas undergoing repository site characterization studies, to establish legal standing as situs governments. The role of the association would be to seek greater leverage in the Nuclear Waste Program for local governments.

Eichner reported on a trip to Washington, D.C., during which he meet with the committee staff person, Mary Louise Wagner, for Sen. Bennett Johnson's Incentives Bill. Eichner and Wagner discussed the potential for allowing local government need to be addressed in the bill.

While there, Eichner also met with David Berrick of Sen. Brock Adams' staff, Paul Gilman of Sen. Pete Domenici's staff, Carla West of Rep. Larry Combest's staff and Robert Mallett of Sen. Lloyd Bentsen's staff. Following the monthly budget Picketing Continues asked the committee questions. The next WDIC meeting is schedulspeed with which DOE moves on issues and the association of situs governments will be addressed then.

Commencement exercises for the Hereford High School graduates of 1987 are set tonight. It is a night of mixed reactions for these young graduates-feelings of accomplishment, joy, relief and wonderment.

It is also a sobering event for many of those who have worked 12 years to gain a sheet of paper stating they have earned enough credits to finish formal schooling. They will realize, as those who walked across the stage before them, that the receipt of that diploma forever changes their world.

Many will go on to college; others begin the task of finding employ-ment; some will enter the armed forces, and still others will begin their own family lives. All will begin to think about leaving the security of

Can science create a tamperresistant package for foods and drugs? Battelle Memorial Institute is working on that problem, according to an article from the Columbus(Ohio) Dispatch. Battelle recently opened offices in Hereford for its program on storage and isolation of nuclear waste, just one of the many programs and research projects carried on by the company. Battelle has fine business operations in the U.S. and Europe and has a staff of 7,000 people.

A tamper-proof package does not exist, according to John R. Proffitt, a Battelle manager, but he believes science can do a lot better than the first wave of blister and bubble packs, seals, caps and capsules now approved by the Food and Drug Administration.

Battelle is researching more phisticated defenses for several client companies, according to Proffitt. One solution is to use package materials that change their appearance when punctured, cut or torn. The wrap surace, for example, might be stuffed with tiny colorcrammed beads that would bleed a quarter-inch to half-inch stain when the package is torn, alerting the buyer to tampering, Also, box adhesives might be made Also, box adnesives might be made to release detectable residues when disturbed or products might be wrap-ped in multi-colored layers so than any tempering with the top layer would reveal another color.

State

House OKs open meetings bill

AUSTIN (AP) - Legislation to strengthen the state's open meetings law has won preliminary approval from the House, and its sponsor said the bill should help guarantee that the public's business is done in public.

"This bill strengthens the Open Meetings Act, closes loopholes," Rep. Juan Hinojosa, D-McAllen, said Thursday. "There is public pressure to make sure public officials deliberate public business in the open."

The bill was approved on a voice vote. A final vote still is needed before it goes back to the Senate for action on an amendment that Hinojosa said senators would accept. That amendment permits "incidental" discussion of public business should officials meet at a social function, convention or professional workshop. But full discussion or deliberation outside formal meetings would be prohibited, Hinojosa said.

"The intent of the amendment is just to allow them by chance or by coincidence to mention something minor. It's not intended to allow them to debate or discuss public business. If they do discuss public matters and deliberate, they are in violation of the act," he

Efforts have been made since 1977 to tighten provisions of the act that guarantees the public's right to know what goes on at state and local governmental meetings.

Under certain conditions, such as discussions of personnel matters, officials can meet in closed-door "executive sessions."

The bill, which involved negotations by news media groups, city, county and school board officials and others, would allow proceedings of executive sessions to be kept in closed files as either a tape recording or a "certified agenda."

Hinojosa said that requirement "asks public officials to certify they are obeying the law. I don't think that's asking too much."

The bill also would revise the open meetings law so that action taken by a governmental body in violation of the act could be voided. Another change would allow open meetings of governmental groups to be covered by television. The original act only said open meetings could be covered by news reporters taking written notes or using still cameras or tape recorders. Some governmental bodies have refused to permit television coverage. A governmental body also would be required to keep minutes or tape recordings of open meetings and make them available to the public.

Hinojosa said legislative backers had discussed the bill with Hilary Doran, chief of staff for Gov. Bill Clements and were optimistic that Clements would approve it.

"He expressed to us that he didn't feel there were any problems in getting him to sign this piece of legislation. I expect that he will sign it into law," Hinojosa said.

State sets bank-failure record

HOUSTON (AP) - Texas has set the national record for bank failures for the third year in a row with the collapse of 1967's 27th bank, but officials say that at least the state appears to be nearing the bottom of its economic pit.

Federal regulators closed Texas National Bank-Westheimer of Houston Thursday, citing poor management and bad loans. With more than six months still to go, the closure smashed Texas' 1986 tal* ly of 26 bank failures in one year, a national record for one state. Texas also set the national pace in 1985 with 12 failures, compared to just three in 1984. So far this year, 82 banks have been shut down nationally, well over half the 140 closed last year. The banks closed so far in Texas this year h about $881 million, including $27.5 from the latest failure, Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. figures show. Gerald Fronterhouse, chairman and chief executive officer of RepublicBank Corp., said he felt the end of Texas' bank-bust cycle

"The state is beginnning to bottom out." he said. "The whole economy will begin to accelerate again and that will help the banks.' Harvey Rosenblum, vice president and director of research at the Federal Reserve Bank of Dallas, also gave an upbeat assessment of the outlook for banks and savings and loans, but said change may not come quickly. "Things probably will get better, but I think it's going to get worse first," said Rosenblum. With more than 2,000 banks, Texas has about 14 percent of the nation's financial institutions, state officials say.

Texas National Bank-Westhelmer was chartered in March 1965, and became of concern to the comptroller's office in 1986, according to Robert J. Herrmann, senior deputy comptroller of the currency.

The bank tried to grow quickly by generating a high volume of loans supported by high-cost deposits gathered from outside the bank's market area, he said.

Liberal lending practices and poor administration and supervision of the loan portfolio by former bank officers resulted in excessive problem loans.

Girls rule national spelling bee

WASHINGTON (AP) - Girls ruled the 60th National Spelling Bee with a 13-year-old junior wordsmith capturing the coveted title in a contest that in the end was all female.

The trend became obvious in the seventh round when girls out-numbered the boys nine to six. After that fray, in which "meerschaum" and "polysemous" did some of the boys in, only four female spellers remained.

The new national spelling champion is Stephanie Petit, a dark-haired, eighth-grader from Bethel Park, Pa., who successfully spelled "dyscalculia" and "staphylococci." The runner-up, Rachel E. Nussbaum, 14, of Ithaca, N.Y., credited the female success to a theory that girls are more adept than boys in

News Roundup Texas business mainstream

EDITOR'S NOTE — The number of Hispanic-owned businesses in Texas is steadily growing and, increasingly, they are white-collar enterprises. Hispanics are making their moves into the mainstream of Texas business. In the fifth installment of a six-part series, The Associated Press examines the impact.

HOUSTON (AP) - When Ninfa Rodriguez Laurenzo opened her taco stand in 1973, she was a 49-year-old widow with five children and $16 in her pocket.

On her first day of business in the small restaurant next to her Houston home, she sold 256 tacos. "We didn't have much," she said.

"I even brought our dishes from the house to use." Mrs. Laurenzo's eight Ninfa's restaurants, seven in Houston and one in Dallas, now bring her family more than $20 million a year. And more Hispanics in Texas are

"It's like a metamorphosis," said Lupe Garcia, president of the Dallas Hispanic Chamber of Commerce. "The Hispanic entrepreneurs are coming out of the cocoon and moving into the butterfly stage."

In Houston, an estimated 9,000 business are Hispanic-owned, up from 6,800 just three years ago, Colorado said. An estimated 6,375 businesses in San Antonio are Hispanic-owned, about 4,490 in Dallas, and 1,300 in Austin.

Recent years also have brought a growth in the number of white-collar businesses, such as personnel or advertising, Garcia said. Most of the current members of the Hispanic Chamber are doctors, lawyers and dentists, he said. "The attitude is completely different today than it was in 1980 when I first came here." said Garcia, a funeral home operator. "We've finally got enough guts to try to sink or swim and get away from having a

But the majority of Hispanicowned businesses are in service-type areas - restaurants, janitorial, grocery and lower-skilled jobs, Colorado said. "My impression is that they are getting into the mainstream even more so than the black community," said Dr. Kenneth Olm, professor of management at the University of Texas graduate school of business.

"Still, predominantly, they are in the services area," he said, blaming it on a lack of capital.

One significant trend is the increase in businesses catering to Spanish-speaking people.

In Houston, where Hispanics make up about 15 percent of the 2.7 million population, the Yellow Cab Co. has formed a taxi service with Spanishspeaking drivers.

Donald Bonham opened Fiesta Mart supermarkets, which bring in about $325 million annually in sales by carrying many Mexican products not found at most other grocery

"No one was catering to a Mexican-American market exclusively," said Bonham, who opened his first Houston store in 1972. "Most companies have a hard time catering to Hispanics and still have the respect of the Anglos."

A sign proclaiming "Bienvenidos" greets shoppers at the 12 giant supermarkets, which have a Mexican market atmosphere complete with vendors outside the store and hanging pinatas.

With the success stories comes a changing profile of the Hispanic entrepreneur, Colorado said.

"New entrepreneurs are more college-educated and have a better aspect of accounting, capital markets and better communication skills," he said.

received a high school diploma and attended a business college.

"You don't learn everything from textbooks," she preaches. "Life teaches you. You have to have common sense and be practical."

Not everyone is successful, of course.

Just a few blocks from Ninfa's original restaurant near downtown Houston stands the six-story El Mercado del Sol shopping center, which opened in May 1985 in an effort to revitalize the Hispanic neighborhood.

The limited partnership that developed the mall, which at one time was old warehouses, filed a bankruptcy petition last fall, dooming many of the tenants.

At its peak, about 100 shops and stores were in the mall. Now the occupancy rate for retail and office space is about 25 percent, said Dennis Ranzau, who heads a firm interested in buying the center.

Many Hispanics have a difficult time starting a business because they lack capital and because loans can't be obtained, Colorado said.

Mrs. Laurenzo said bank officers once laughed at her when she asked for an additional $5,000 loan.

"I had a lot of Xs - a woman, widow and Mexican-American going into a risky business," she said of beating the odds. "Now the banker laughs when he sees me. He says, 'Ninfa, if I hadn't been so rude to you, I'd have all the Ninfa accounts today."

But Mrs. Laurenzo, known as 'Mama Ninfa' to her employees and customers, said the challenge and success are worth the work.

"If I had to go do it again, I would," she said. "My kids and I redid this place by ourselves. You learn to do things by yourself, if you can't afford it otherwise."

I made my first visit to the Vietnam Memorial, looking for Robert Williamson's name. He was my buddy in a unit near Pleiku, where he died in January, 1968.

The polished marble with all those names and the variety of flowers got to me. I was fighting to keep my composure when I heard someone say,"Robert Williamson,"

In front of me stood a man and a woman with two children. The man was holding up one of the children to touch the name.

I wanted to speak to them and find out how they were related. It could been a meaningful and heartwarming experience but I was afraid to show my emotions. I knew I would break down and cry, so I walked away.

Free blood pressure clinic scheduled for Saturday

Area residents will have a chance to see if they are among millions of Americans who suffer from hypertension during a free blood pressure clinic set for Saturday from 10 a.m. til-6 p.m. in the foyer of Lo-

Sponsored by the local chapter of the Red Cross, the clinic requires no appointments and has no age restrictions. Mary Jane Burrus, R.N., will be in charge of the all-day clinic.

Cardiovascular disease, often resulting from high blood pressure, which is also known as hypertension, costs busienss and industry through absenteeism, decreased productivity, disability claims, higher insurance costs, training costs for replacement personnel, and death benefits.

Health care costs associated with high blood pressure total approximately $4 to $5 billion annually. Many life insurance companies now give reduced premium rates to those whose high blood pressure often termed "the silent killer," is controlled.

According to the National High

Blood Pressure Education Program, an estiamted 30 percent of America's work force-some 30 million workers--suffer from hypertension. More than 29 million workdays and $2 billion in earnings are lost each year as a result of the disease, and nearly 125,000 employed persons die each year because of cardiovascular disease related to high blood pressure. This number is more than 10 times greater than the number of deaths attributed to industrial accidents.

For more information concerning the "silent killer", contact the Deaf Smith County chapter of the Red Cross at 364-3761.

Field said to be strongest ever

College World Series begins tonight

By STEVEN WINE

Associated Press Writer OMAHA, Neb. (AP) - Jim Brock and Cliff Gustafson, who between them have brought 35 teams to the College World Series, say the event improves each year. "It's getting better and better all the time," said Gustafson, whose top-rated Texas Longhorns play st Conference rival Arkansas in a first-round game Saturday. "On paper this is the strongest field I've seen." Today's opening games pitted Brock's Arizona State team against Oklahoma State and Louisiana State against Florida State. Stanford plays Georgia Saturday in the other firstround game of the doubleelimination tournament.

Brock and Gustafson, who have each won two national championships, said expanded NCAA regional tournaments that determine the College World Series field have made it more balanced.

"The NCAA has worked really hard to get the eight best teams here this year," Brock said at a news conference Thursday. "When I first came here, there were oftentimes three teams that clearly were better than the other five. But there isn't anybody this year that you want to play against. They're all winning about 80 percent of their games."

Brock said if there's an underdog this year, it's his team. The Sun Devils, 40-25, had to overcome NCAA and Pacific 10 Conference sanctions that left them with only seven scholarship players.

"We are unbelievably surprised to be here," Brock, who is making his 10th appearance in the World Series, said. "We didn't think about much more than keeping our program together until early May."

Texas reached the College World Series for five straight years before falling short last season. That was a good lesson, according to Gustafson.

"I think you do tend to get spoiled when you have things quite easy," Gustafson said. "I. don't think millionaires appreciate a dollar as nruch as us poor people do."

Texas has won four out of five games this season against Arkansas. "I would hope we'll maintain the things we've done against them in some areas and do better in other," Razorbacks Coach Norm DeBriyn said. "We haven't scored very many runs against them, I know that."

Another regular entrant in the series field is Oklahoma State, making a record seventh straight appearance but still looking for its first

The Cowboys are led by sophomore third baseman Robin Ventura, who has a 56-game hitting streak. Coach Gary Ward said Ventura will face strong pitching in the series.

"I think in two or three weeks down the road you're going to see as much as a million dollars spent by professional baseball in procuring players on these ballclubs - for pitchers alone," Ward said.

Louisiana State will be without its best hitter, Joey Belle, who was suspended for the fourth time this season by Coach Skip Bertman before the NCAA South II regional tournament.

"He has one problem - he has a temper when he strikes out," Bertman said. "I hope this method of discipline will help him."

The Tigers' first-round opponent, Florida State, made the series with a more subdued attack than usual.

"I'm glad we don't have a temper striking out, or we wouldn't have any players left," Seminoles Coach Mike Martin said.

"We're still struggling, trying to find a way to steal first. We have good pitching, good defense and the best team speed we've had."

Stanford Coach Mark Marquess said balance has been the key to his team's success.

"If we had to pick a most valuable player, I don't think it could be done, because it's been a different player every game," Marquess said. "I've had better offensive teams at Stanford and I've had better defensive teams. Pitching depth is our strength."

The Stanford-Georgia game will mark the Bulldogs' first series appearance but not the first for Coach Steve Webber

"I was here one other time, as a player in 1969," Webber, who played at Southern Illinois, said. "Guess who played in the first game? Texas and Arizona State. I saw Burt Hooton pitch against Larry Gura.

Run-production average

The postponement or cancellation of baseball playoff games is not only frustrating for the players and coaches, but also for the Whiteface fans.

It is also frustrating for a sports journalist, who eagerly anticipates the playoff game, only to have it called off, as was the case Thursday for game one of the regional playoff series versus Fort Worth Brewer.

But here is an attempt to write something about Hereford Whiteface baseball without mentioning the weather.

A few years back, I remember a Sporting News article about run production in major league baseball. The writer referred to a statistic as run-production average.

The idea behind such a statistic is that the name of the game on offense is to score runs. The run-production average is figured by adding the number of runs scored and runs batted in, subtracting home runs, and dividing that total by the number of times at bat.

Home runs are subtracted since each one amounts to both a run scored and a run batted in for the player who hits one. Otherwise, the same run would be added in twice in figuring the run-production

The highest run-production average on the Hereford Whiteface team is .564 by Paul Maes. Maes has scored 23 runs and has batted in 12 runs in 62 at bats for his .564 run-production average.

Maes is the only Herd player with a run-production average above 500 for those with 25 or more at-bats for the season. One player with fewer than 25 at-bats, Bill Ruckman, has a run-production average of .579, with six runs scored and five RBIs in 19 official at-bats.

Here are the rest of the run-production averages for the Whiteface team members who have more than 25 at-bats for the year:

Kyle Streun, .478; Keith Herrera, .475; Bobby Medina, .463; Robby Collier, .458; James Hernandez, .410; Michael Phibbs, .375; and Rodney McCracken and Keith Anderson, both .368.

The run-production averages for Herd pitchers Keith Anderson and Bobby Medina are somewhat misleading, since a courtesy runner comes in for them when they get on base when they are pitching

Glenn Parker, who has scored 13 runs, is the usual courtesy runner for the pitchers. If we add up the runs scored by Anderson, Medina and Parker, plus the RBIs by Anderson and Medina, and subtract Anderson's home run, we come up with 73 runs accounted for in 146 at-bats - a run-production average of .500.

Thus, for every two times that Anderson and Medina have had an official at-bat, a run has scored as a result of their efforts.

The run-production average cannot be calculated as a team statistic, since you would come up with nearly twice as many runs as the team has scored, to be divided by the number of at-bats. The runproduction average is only an individual statistic in baseball.

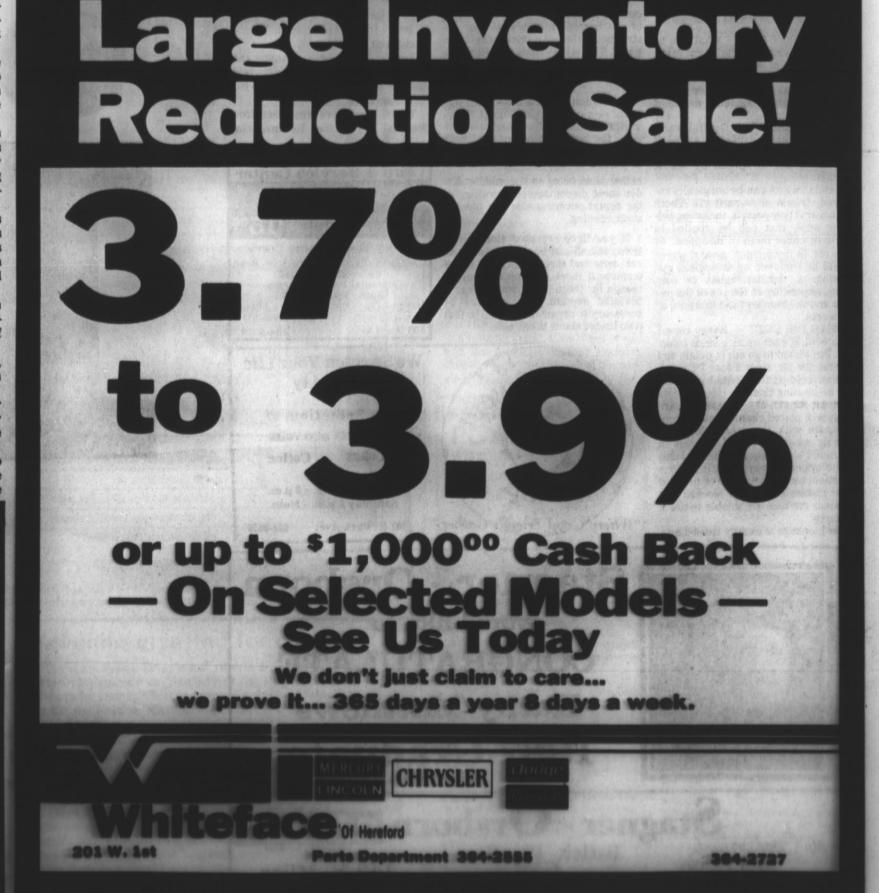

But if we did use the same method with the team statistics as we did the individual statistics, the team run-production average would be .442. Actually, though, the Whitefaces, who have a total of 705 atbats in 26 games, have scored 176 runs - a run scored in about every four official at-bats.

The Whitefaces are averaging 6.7 runs per game this season. Since the Whitefaces must now go against Fort Worth Brewer in a onegame playoff, Herd fans want to see such run production in Saturday's game, coupled with the low earned run average that Anderson and Medina have achieved this season.

Anderson's earned run average is 1.03, and Medina's earned run

Pistons defeat Celtics, 113-105

By HARRY ATKINS AP Sports Writer

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) - Boston forward Larry Bird feels like he's heading for the wrong coast. Bird and the Celtics wanted to travel to the West Coast, where the Los Angeles Lakers are awaiting an opponent for the NBA final.

Instead, the Detroit Pistons got 24 points each from Adrian Dantley and Vinnie Johnson and 21 from Isiah Thomas and beat the Celtics 113-105 Thursday night to send both teams back to Boston for Game 7 of the Eastern Conference final series.

The series, tied 3-3, will be decided Saturday afternoon in Boston Garden with the winner opening the final series in Los Angeles on Tues-

"I just wish we could have gotten out of here tonight," said Bird, who had a game-high 35 points for Boston. "I wanted to play the Lakers on Sunday, but we have to play Saturday. We're going back home.

"Game 7, that's it, for all the marbles. Saturday is a big game for us. We're ready for it."

Kevin McHale scored 23 points for Boston, despite a touch of flu, while Danny Ainge and Darren Daye scored 16 apiece.

The game was close through the first three quarters with the Pistons leading 84-83 as the final period began.

Then Johnson, who thrives in his reserve role, scored 10 of his 12 fourth-quarter points during a run in which Detroit rolled to a 104-91 lead that all but decided the outcome with 5:04 remaining.

The Pistons, who have lost 17 consecutive games in Boston, seemed confident they could break the spell Saturday. If they do, they'll make it to the NBA final for the first time in the team's history.

"One game left. It will be a shootout," said Detroit center Bill Laimbeer, who scored 12 points. "I'm looking forward to it. It's going Bird stole an inbounds pass from Thomas and fed it to Dennis Johnson for the winning basket with one second remaining, seemed tentative at first - as if haunted by the memory of that heartbreaking defeat.

"I knew we would bounce back, because I would bounce back and the team follows my lead," Thomas Dantley scored 14 of his 19 firsthalf points in the first quarter, bringing Detroit back from an early 14-4 deficit - the Celtics' largest lead.

Boston led 33-31 at the end of the first quarter, but Detroit led after each of the remaining periods. "All of a sudden, the Chinese water torture broke loose and we took off in the fourth quarter," Dantley said. "Anything can happen now." The Celtics expect to have both center Robert Parish and Coach K. Jones back for Game 7. Parish was suspended for one game for slugging Laimbeer in American League home run derby continues

By BEN WALKER AP Baseball Writer

Baltimore's Memorial Stadium may be the place to hit home runs this season, but Joe Carter seems more comfortable at Boston's Fen-

Carter became the first player to twice hit three homers in a game at Fenway, and drove in five runs Thursday night for the Cleveland Indians in a 12-8 loss to Boston. Dwight Evans homered and drove in six runs for the Red Soxon sand on the beart

In Baltimore, Mike Young, who had not homered this season, hit a game-tying solo homer in the 10th inning and added a two-run shot in the 12th that lifted the Orioles over the California Angels 8-7. Baltimore has won six games in a row and California has lost six straight.

Larry Sheets homered twice and Cal Ripken Jr. and Rick Burleson also homered for Baltimore, which set a major-league record for homers in a month with 56. That broke the previous record of 55 set by the New York Giants in July 1947 and tied by the Minnesota Twins in May 1964.

The Orioles lead the majors with 76 home runs, including 48 in their last 19 games. Baltimore set its singlegame home record for homers in a game and, combined with home runs by California's Wally Joyner and Ruppert Jones, established a mark of eight for two teams.

In other AL games, New York beat Seattle 5-2, Oakland defeated Toronto 4-3 and Minnesota routed Milwaukee 13-1. Orioles 8, Angels 7

There have been an average of nearly 31/2 homers per game this season at Memorial Stadium, the highest rate in the majors. "Baseball's getting ridiculous," Angels Manager Gene Mauch said. "I've never seen such semi-, semi-, semi-swings, and the ball going out, in my life."

Young began the season on the disabled list and has started only five times, all as a designated hitter.

"You can't take other guys out of the lineup when they're producing. I wouldn't want that, so I'm not complaining to anybody," Young said.

California had taken a 7-6 lead in the 12th against Mark Williamson, 2-3, when Darrell Miller raced home from third base when the Orioles misplayed a rundown. Red Sox 12, Indians 8

Evans matched his career-high for RBI in a game, hitting a home run and two singles.

Carter, who homered three times at Fenway last Aug. 29, hit a threerun homer in the first inning and connected for solo shots in the fifth in the ninth. Carter and Julio Franco each had four of the Indians' 15 hits and Pat Tabler hit a three-run homer.

Jim Rice had three of Boston's 15 hits, including a go-ahead single in a four-run sixth. Yankees 5, Mariners 2

Gary Ward hit a two-run homer and Rickey Henderson and Dave Winfield hit solo shots for New York.

Ward connected for his seventh home run of the season in the first inning off Mike Moore, 2-6. Henderson hit his 10th in the fifth inning and Winfield hit No. 11 in the eighth. Seattle pitchers have allowed 25 homers in 12 games.

The Yankees raised their home record to 15-3, the best in the major leagues.

Twins 13, Brewers 1

Tom Brunansky homered during a controversial six-run first inning and Juan Berengeuer pitched seven shutout innings as Minnesota beat visiting Milwaukee.

The loss was the fifth straight for the Brewers, who have dropped 17 of their last 19.

Athletics 4, Blue Jays 3

Slugger Jose Canseco squeezed home the go-ahead run in the seventh inning and for Oakland.

Dave Stewart, 6-4, struck out a career-high 10 and walked one in eight-plus innings. He retired 17 straight batters before Tony Fernandez doubled leading off the ninth, bringing in Jay Howell.

Howell gave up a two-out, RBI double to George Bell and a walk before Dave Leiper relieved and got the final out for his first save.

FIRST PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

Sunday, the "Backyard Gang", played by the children's choirs, will present the proclamation of God's word with a program entitled "Come On Over To My Own Backyard." It will begin at 10:30 a.m.

The scripture to study for Sunday is II Corinthians 5:16-21.

A treasure hunt is planned for the junior and senior high youth groups at 5 p.m. Sunday followed by a cookout. Prizes will be awarded.

Mission Yearbook-In our denomination it has been determined that the majority of our churches are in rural or small town settings. In an attempt to minister to some of the needs of these churches the Association of Town and Rural Churches, (ATARC), was formed. The aims of ATARC are to give a voice to small churches, to affirm their witness to Jesus Christ, and to suggest strategies for evangelism, education and the nurture of members that are time-tested and workable. Please pray for this special equipping ministry.

FIRST UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

Representatives from First United Methodist Church, and visitors from the Hereford congregation, will be in Lubbock next week for the Northwest Texas UMC Annual Conference. It will be held in First UMC of Lubbock June 2-4.

Rev. Steve McElroy, pastor here, and Rev. Daniel Reyna, associate pastor who serves San Pablo UMC as pastor, will be the clergy representatives. Lay delegates to the Conference and Labry and Jean Ballard; alternates are Shirley and Mildred Garrison.

Appointment of pastors to churches in Northwest Texas will be a part of the program.

Rev. Daniel Reyna, pastor of San Pablo UMC, reports that repairs are almost complete on the building adjoining that church sanctuary, formerly used as a parsonage. It will be used for Sunday School classes, to care for increased enrollment in the growing church.

Seven Hereford High graduates who are members of First UMC are being honored in the church this week, beginning with a breakfast last Sunday for them and their families. They are Hope Saul, Christy Burford, Wesley Rudd, Jason Bodner, Todd Weaver, Craig Waddell and David Saul.

Members of First UMC are congratulating Mark Mayer, director of music and Christian education, and his wife, Betty on the birth of a son, Aaron andrew, May 20 in a Canyon hospital.
