Arms sale to Saudis touches off new heated debate

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Reagan administration wants to sell a half-billion dollars worth of F-15 fighter planes to Saudi Arabia, a plan likely to touch off a heated debate with Congress.

Backers of Israel and critics of secret aid to Contra rebels in Nicaragua are expected to join forces in opposition.

The prospective deal, disclosed Friday by administration and congressional sources, involves about a dozen jets produced by the McDonnell Douglas aircraft company.

The Saudis asked for the planes to replace four or five lost in accidents and others that might be damaged over the three years it will take to produce the new jets.

The administration also will ask Congress to authorize the sale to the Saudis of Mayerick air-to-ground missiles, which would be installed on F-5 fighters already in the Saudi air force, and equipment to upgrade 100 American-made M60 tanks, said the sources, who insisted on anonymity.

Congress, which has the authority to veto the purchase, is likely to take a close look at the arms package in light of reports that the Saudis secretly provided financial help to the Contras fighting Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government.

Although the Saudis have denied it. some members of the congressional committees investigating the Iran-Contra affair have put Saudi contributions to the U.S.-backed rebels at $32.5 million in 1984 and 1985

Israel's supporters, meanwhile, are bound to challenge the deal as posing a potential military danger.

The sources said the planes would be kept in the United States and turned over to the Arab kingdom only to replace jets lost in accidents.

the United States wants to keep the level up to 60, an official said.

Congress was to have been notified this week, but the plan was "shortcircuited" by the congressional hearings on the Iran-Contra affair, the sources said.

Saudi aid to the Contras came at a critical period when Congress had prohibited U.S. military assistance to the rebels.

At the time, the administration shipped 400 Stinger antiaircraft missiles to Saudi Arabia and also said it was considering a proposal to sell $12 billion in additional arms to the oil-rich kingdom.

White Congress was unaware of the secret Contra aid, opponents threatened to reject the purchases with enough votes to override a veto by President Reagan.

The president scaled down the deal, but the Saudis withdrew the entire request rather than risk a probable and bitter defeat.

86th Year, No. 224, Deaf Smith County, Hereford, Tx.

Nunley's pay for custodial upkeep of the courthouse, jail, library and for supervising the upkeep of the Bull Barn is $24,270 a year. A separate contract was made with Nunley in November of 1982 to take care of the library during extracurricular activities at $3,996 per year. His combined salary is $28,266.

Aside from the amount of pay, a sore point with some courthouse employees, the real question-according to the county treasurer-is how it is paid.

The FLSA says, "State or local governments are obviously not free to set up sham independent contractor reletionships that violate the FSLA. They cannot, for example, designate a particular employee to be an independent contractor and then violate the FSLA with regard to the employee."

Vesta Mae Nunley, who makes out the paychecks, admits, "Jack is paid a separate salary on a contractual basis for his duties as custodian and extracurricular activities at the library."

The violation would be, ironically, that Nunley isn't being paid enough. According to the FLSA he should be compensated for overtime with time and a-half for his extra hours at the Judge Simons says, "The first I'm aware of the commissioners knowing about it was about a month ago.' However witnesses to last year's budget meetings say the commissioners, then under the guidance of County Judge Glen Nelson, knew about the apparent violation then.

The county treasurer, asked about the matter, said, "I have repeatedly brought the subject up in budget workshops and review has been neglected since we were all notified that the government does fall under the FSLA."

The county treasurer attended a seminar concerning FLSA in the fall of 1985 and notes that in budget hearings last year, the previous commission-including current commissioners Troy Don Moore, Bill Bradly and Austin Rose- were told with a .429 average, second basemen the contract with Jack Nunley needed to be reviewed.

"Efforts have been made to comply with FSLA," says the treasurer, We have made changes regarding overtime hours, etcetera, but this library contract matter has just not been a priority."

Jack Nunley speaks about a recent closed door session he had with the commissioners. "They told me they thought they were stepping out of bounds with this contract," he says. Nunley says the commissioners told him they had three options to deal with the problem. According to him, "Option number one was to relieve me of it, the library contract. Option number two was to reduce the salary by the amount it would cost them for retirement and social security benefits and pay me an hourly wage. I can't remember the third one."

Simons confirms the closed door session which was held in early April dealt with issues relating to the violation. "It is the law but it seems to me that it is strange," Simons said.

Simons states that no decisions were reached in the closed door session and attributes lack of a decision as the reason the matter has not been put on the agenda and addressed at either of the two regular sessions since.

"It will probably be addressed at the next open meeting," he states and suggests that commissioners will possibly combine the two jobs for Nunley and pay him on an hourly basis, which in his words, "will cost the county a whole lot more money." However Criminal District Attorney Roland Saul said the matter may be a question of interpretation of the Fair Labor Standards regulations." Saul said he was asked about the legal aspects of the question Friday afternoon.

"In taking a quick look at the matter, I would say it's not a black or white case. It's something that needs to be looked into and checked on," said Saul. "We may need to check with the Fair Labor Standards board. I'm not sure the commission is in violation," he added.

Nunley was originally employed as ". . . maintenance engineer for courthouse, jail and new library," at an annual salary of $11,400, as recorded in Commission Court order 2588 in

Retired telegraph operator recalls the good old days

ODESSA, Texas (AP) - The first telegram message sent between two cities by Samuel F.B. Morse on May 24, 1844, was "What hath God wrought?"

In a world of high-tech communication, the telegraph replaced the Pony Express and started the communications revolution.

Clarence A. Lucas of Odessa has spent his life as a "brass pounder" for Western Union, watching the evolution of communications. He still corresponds via Morse Code recorded on cassette tape, but the tapes are mailed to his fellow brass pounders.

Lucas' father interested him in the talking wire. The elder Lucas was a telegraph operator for the Santa Fe Railroad in Ardmore, Okla., when the state still was Indian Territory.

"In those days, a telegram was important," Lucas said. "It was the main way to communicate."

Lucas said Western Union used to compete with another telegraph company, Postal Telegraph and Cable Co. Most area merchants turned switches on both boxes - and whichever messenger boy arrived first would get the business.

"It was a cutthroat business," Lucas said.

Deciding to make a career with Western Union, Lucas took home a

Although satellites and computers have all but replaced the old telegraph operators, Lucas said he sees a strong bond remaining among the brass pounders.

"Most of us old codgers are a dying breed, but there are a few young people learning the code," he says.

A member of the Morse Telegraph Club Inc., Lucas and several area residents meet once a year in Odessa's old Western Union and communicate through Morse Code to other members throughout the United States and Canada.

Tips on 'hare care' given

By DEBE GRAVES Staff Writer

Parents of children who received bunny rabbits for Easter may be pulling their "hare" out over the care and feeding of the pets but Mysedia Smith says there is very little trouble to taking care of the family rabbit - they are potty training it.

Hereford residents are familiar with the Smith family, Craig is president of Hereford State Bank, Mysedia is active in many community events and sons Brad and Sean. But the family members who rule the roost while the humans are gone are King, a dog they adopted from the animal shelter; Kitty Kat, a stray who followed Mysedia home; and Sidney (Craig's middle name), a French lop eared rabbit who became a part of the family due to a shortlived 4-H project.

A true soft heart when it comes to animals, Mysedia says, "Sidney is a Tender loving care is the recipe she offers for taming and caring for a rabbit. "To break them from biting apply a gently thump on the nose each time," she advises.

She also cautions gentle handling of the rabbit. "Never pick them up by their ears," she says. "They are very sensitive and can be injured."

When picking up a rabbit, Mysedia says to lift it by the skin at the nape of the neck and support the rabbit's body by lifting the hind quarters with the other hand.

Feeding your pet rabbit green food is not advisable. She explains, "Wild rabbits eat greens but domestic rabbits have problems if fed these foods because they are so hard to digest."

If bunny deserves a special treat give it potato peels or pieces of apple. "But watch out," she says, "because tomato plants as well as radishes and carrots in the family garden may provide a real temptation for the rabbit who by nature goes for roots."

Domestic rabbits generally do not carry diseases transferable to humans and so do not require vac-

Couple has saved 15,000 newspapers

By MICHAEL SCANLON El Paso

Times EL PASO, Texas (AP) - Randolph and Becky McDorman carefully will stash a copy of today's newspaper in a safe place. They do that every day.

"I've got in excess of 15,000 newspapers dating from the 1600s to the present," Randolph McDorman brags.

He says he was fascinated by old newspapers he found when he was a child, so he started collecting them. When he retires from his job as an El Paso Police Department crimescene technician in about five years, he hopes his hobby will turn into a livelihood.

"I've done nothing but buy, buy, buy. It's been just the last few months that I've really started selling

The McDormans keep only a few examples of their collection at their East Side home. Others are stored at different locations in various vaults and warehouses around the city.

The collection includes thousands of editions of the El Paso Times since 1895. And there's a July 8, 1876, edition of the New York Tribune with a news account of Custer's massacre. The McDormans' Philadelphia Evening Bulletin from May 7, 1937, has a front-page account of the

The Hereford Bull jumps from the newspaper corral to the broadcast booth Monday. We "bought" the rights to be "Manager for a Day" at KPAN Radio, and Monday is our day.

How did this come about? For several years, Clint Formby has offered the manager's deal at a benefit auction for the Cowgirl Hall of Fame. We got carried away at the event last year and wound up with the prize. Last year, Mayor Wes Fisher claimed the manager-for-a-day prize, and you might recall that Duffy and Claudia McBrayer took over the station the previous year.

We're not sure what all will take place Monday, but we've got some different music lined up, some surprise guests and special interviews, a trivia game with prizes and, of course, the Hereford Bull will replace Clint's "Day by Day Philosopher". Another special feature will be the singing debut of Ross Nieman, our 2-year-old grandson. Clint did a lot of bragging about his grandchild recently, so we had to get equal time!

Formby has been helping promote the the day by calling attention to our initials, O.G., and asking if anyone knows what the letters stand for. He suggested something like Ogalalla George or Oglethorpe Gunthar. I may as well confess where those initials came from. When I was born, my mother looked at me and said, Oh, Gee, isn't he a beautiful baby!"

If you don't believe that, tune in KPAN Monday for some more surprises. It's not often that we'll encourage you to listen to KPAN!

Don't kick elderly

Will Texas come down to kicking the infirm elderly out of nursing homes? It sounds preposterous. But that would be the effect of budgets proposed by the House and Gov. Bill Clements.

Lowering the Medicaid eligibility cap by $150 a month by 1989, as the House proposes to do, would mean that 9,000 elderly would no longer be able to live in nursing homes. Many of these elderly people had to fritter away whatever savings or assets they had to qualify for Medicaid in the first place so they could stay in a nursing home...

We encourage the governor and the House to trim fat from state budget. But it is intolerable to consider cutting funds that would force the elderly from nursing homes.

Hart's mistake

The presidential field is minus a good candidate today, a talented man, a dedicated man, a man with his share of foibles.

Gary Hart's campaign exploded on liftoff a scant three weeks after the Democratic front-runner announced his candidacy.

It is unfortunate that Hart didn't get a chance to rise or fall on the basis of his ideas. But as the voters sort out their choices for leadership, it is natural that such things as personal standards and good judgment will come into play.

Hart's mistake is that while maintaining a marriage that was as much show as reality, he apparently maintained the life of a single man.

... In the end it may not have been a matter of immorality as much as one of dishonesty that hurt Hart the most. A bachelor should be able to see anyone he wants. A man who portrays himself as happily mar-ried, however, had better stick to that script.

The Penultimate Word

THE WHOLE TRUTH

Years ago I received a call telling me that a friend of mine was living in "open adultery." This friend was a student in seminary who had begun dating a lady the caller did not approve of.

I responded to the caller by saying, "You mean they are performing sexual acts on the lawn of the seminary?"

He said, "No, but-" I said, "Well, have you seen them so engaged?" He said, "No!"

I said, "Then it seems to me it is not open adultery, it may be closed adultery. How can we know?

I was being facetious, but I resent the ruining of people by innuendo.

Last week a presidential candidate was fuined because some reporters found enough innuendo to make a scandal. Enough words have already been written about the incident. I can't add much, but knowing me i will do so anyway. We have a problem with the press. The problem is there is no one to watch the press except the press. At the first sign of criticism they wrap themselves in the first admendment and cry "foul". Nothing is quite as pious as the press when they are talking about the press.

Last week a bunch of photographers almost trampled a four year old while trying to get a picture. If they had killed the child they would have explained how important it is to get the whole truth to the public. They are saving democracy with their valuable service. I could do with a little less

The whole truth, as they call it, is not the whole truth. Their version of the whole truth, is truth that sells. If they had staked out Gary Hart's apartment for thirteen weeks and never found a single thing out of character would that have been a story? Why not? That, too, is truth. That, too, is truth we need to know.

The Miami newspaper now is now admitting their surveillance was flawed. The story is not news. It is on the back page of the paper with no fanfare. No one is on their case. No headlines blare at their bungling. Why not? That, too, is part of the whole truth, isn't it?

Panhandle site among top four

By REP. JOHN SMITHEE Tuesday brought much-needed good news from Austin for the Panhandle-High Plains area. The Texas National Research Laboratory Commission tabbed a site west of Happy as one of two locations for Texas' bid to host the $5 billion superconducting supercollider.

In all probability, this decision makes the Panhandle site one of the top four in the United States. Our main advantage is the estimated cost of construction. The topography of the Panhandle site is very flat, thus, the tunnel part of the supercollider could be constructed using the "cut and fill" method. Most other sites would require the more expensive method of tunnelling.

A final decision is still months or years away, but it is clear that the location of the project in the Panhandle would create an unprecedented economic boom in the area.

Insiders said the Amarillo-group presentation at the supercollider hearing was "superior", and was one of the main reasons the Panhandle site was chosen over competitors such as Houston, Austin, Midland-Odessa, and Lubbock.

Bootleg Philosopher

Editor's note: The Bootleg Philosopher on his Johnsongrass farm on Tierra Blanca Creek looks over the top of his glasses at plans to raise postal rates.

Since I mail you a letter every eek and a stamp costs 22 cents or $2.64 a year, plus the cost of an envelope and one sheet of paper per week, naturally I'm interested when the Postal Service says it may need to raise the rate to 25 cents per

One postal official in Washington said the 25 cent rate should be welcomed because, when you buy a 22 cent stamp with a quarter you get 3 cents back in chage andpeople nowadays don't like to fool with pen-

I have examined that statement carefully, while some witness at the Iran-Contra hearings droned on and on, and through sheer mathematical analysis have found out you can avoid getting pennies back in change if the price of a stamp is reduced to 20 cents instad of being raised to 25

When the Potal Service Board of Governors voted to raise the rate sometime next year, the chairman of the board said "This is a very small increase, compared to other small necessities we commonly purchase from toothpaste to ground office."

I tried to figure out the relationship of postage stamps to toothpaste but gave it up. This is dangerous ground and I don't want to further the discussion. First thing you know some government official in a drive to raise revenue will want to charge you 25 cents for brushing your teeth after licking a stamp.

The Postal Service wants to raise rates despite the fact it cleared about $200 million last year and expects to show a profit again this year.

This reminds me of the owner of a general store years ago. He had a unique system for pricing his merchandise. If an item was selling fast he raised its price on the grounds it was in great demand and people would pay more for it. If it was selling sow he raised the price on the grounds it was staying on the shelf longer and should cost more.

Yours faithfully,

As an employee of the City with an office located in the City Hall, I helped out with the coloring of the maps showing the Precinct lines and I knew very well where I was to vote. Human error is possible in everything we do and perhaps errors were amde in directing others where to cast their ballots. The precinct line goes down the middle of Avenue I and people could easily be mistaken about what precinct they live in. However, I was not mistaken and voted in the correct box.

Our local news media could help solve a confusing situation and inform the voters. Facts should be verified before accusations are made and trouble stirred up.

Sunlight paralyzes skin's ability to fight cancer

worshippers will spend endless hours seeking the sunny rays of summer.

But a Dallas skin cancer authority cautions against trying to maintain a "healthy," deep tan by either natural sunlight or by artificial sunlight from tanning parlors.

"The effects of tanning are cumulative and the more sunlight you get, the more likey you are to develop skin cancer," warns Dr. Paul Bergstresser, professor and chairman of the Department of Dermatology at The University of Texas Health Science Center at Dallas.

How does skin cancer occur? There appear to be two keys to skin cancer's development, Bergstresser says. The first is the damaging effect that ultraviolet light has on the genetic material (DNA) of skin cells, causing mutations in the DNA that lead to cancerous growth. The se, develop.' cond is the capacity of ultraviolet, light to paralyze the skin's immune system so that it fails to recognize and kill off the mutant cancer cells.

"Our research and the work of others indicate that the target of this sunlight-induced paralysis is probably the Langerhans cell. This is the star-sheped cell responsible for initiating a protective immune response," says Bergstresser, director of the National Institutes of Health's Center of Immunodermatology at UTHSCD.

An important observation on the development of skin cancer emerged in 1984 as Bergstresser led a research project with Dr. Harold Helderman, professor of internal medicine and kidney transplant expert. The project dealt with the fact that persons who get kidney transplants and take immunosuppressant drugs to prevent rejection have a high frequency of skin cancer. Skin cancer in these transplant patients arises primarily in areas exposed to sunlight, such as the face, arms and hands.

The researchers compared skin cells from sun-exposed areas of these patients with skin cells from non-

Soon millions of American sun exposed areas. They made further comparisons with skinc ells from age-matched normal volunteers.

> 'Profound alterations were observed in the number and the appearance of skin cells from the sunexposed areas of the transplant patients," Bergstresser says.

"From these observations and subsequent studies, we believe that the ultraviolet radiation disables Langerhans cells. Furthermore, immunosuppressive treatment prevents new Langerhans cells from repopulating the exposed areas. These two processes conspire to permit the development of skin cancer in these patients.

"While normal persons have the capacity to repopulate damaged Langerhans cells, repeated sun exposure over years can create a likelihood that skin cancer will Bergstresser explains that when the defender role played by Langerhans cells fails to operate, cells with damaged DNA proliferate. Tumor cells are not recognized as foreign and are allowed to survive.

Recent studies at the health science center have concentrated on cells that surround the langerhans cells and affect their function. Currently, molecular genetic research aims at sorting through these various cells to pinpoint the precise target of UV radiation -- the Langerhans cells or others.

"In order to protect skin selectively against UV radiation, we must know for certain which cells is the

An AP Sports Analysis By DENNE H. FREEMAN AP Sports Writer

DALLAS (AP) — Spring ex-periments are over, and it looks like the Arkansas Razorbacks may make it back to the Cotton Bowl for the first time in 13 long seasons.

The 1975 team, coached by Frank Broyles, defeated Georgia 31-10 in the Cotton Bowl. The Hogs have been close but haven't spent New Year's Day in Dallas since.

The Razorbacks have experience and depth. If running back James Rouse - who was injured in 1986 returns to form, Coach Ken Hatfield's crew could be difficult to licit recruiting sins.

Here is a rundown of how the fall season shapes up:

ARKANSAS: 2-1 odds on Hatfield's rowdies who return 15 lettermen from a 9-3 team that was taken to the woodshed by Oklahoma in the Orange Bowl. If the Razorbacks learned their lessons and get an explosive performance from quarterback Greg Thomas, they'll be in Dallas on New Year's Day.

TEXAS A&M: 3-1 odds. Craig Stump should step right in and be productive at quarterback for the Aggies. Redshirt freshman Lance Pavlas is an awesome backup. With freshman running back Randy Simmons eligible after passing his second SAT exam, the Aggles could steamroll to a third consecutive Cotton Bowl if they catch the Hogs napphave a big season.

BAYLOR: 7-1 odds. Look out for Grant Teaff's teams in supposed down years. Sophomore quarterback Ed Lovell will have to handle the pressure but a scaled down nonconference schedule, which includes Louisiana Tech, Missouri, Nevada-Las Vegas and Southwest Texas, TEXAS: 8-1 odds. Don't count the Longhorns out. They'll be pumped up with old 'Horn David McWilliams as the new head coach and there is talent aplenty on the Forty Acres. Quarterback Bret Stafford needs to have a Bobby Layne-type year for Texas to sniff the Cotton. McWilliams says he plans on calling 35 passing attempts per game.

TEXAS TECH: 10-1 odds. New Coach Spike Dykes was impressed with quarterback Billy Joe Tolliver's spring and, as you recall, Tolliver owns some SWC passing records. Tech returns 51 lettermen from a 7-5 Independence Bowl team. The Raiders settled down quickly after McWilliams' departure to Texas and the quick hiring of defensive coordinator Dykes soothed hurt feelings.

Don't turn your back on these guys. RICE: 11-1 odds. Jerry Berndt's offense had some exciting moments last year, but the defense wilted from attrition in the second half of the season. Depth will always be a problem for the Owls but they'll beat some teams who take them lightly.

HOUSTON: 15-1 Odds. Before this season is over, Jack Pardee will wish he was back coaching in the USFL. ### Cardiorespiratory test is added at YMCA

YMCA Fitness Director Jack Johnson has enrolled over 160 people in individualized fitness plans since he implemented the plan in the Hereford facility and he is now adding a fitness evaluation service which is designed to test cardiorespiratory fitness, body composition in terms of percent of body fat, flexibility and muscular strength and endurance.

The Y's Way To Fitness Evaluation take one hour or less to complete and is available for members for the cost of materials, four dollars, and for non-members for a $24 fee of which $20 is applicable toward a YM-CA membership within 14 days after taking the test.

For more information contact Johnson at the YMCA. A mini-fitness check of body fat percent and blood pressure is available for members only, the cost is two dollars and appointments are required.

Mets are learning some lessons

By HAL BOCK

AP Sports Writer The New York Mets are learning

something of humility.

A year after swaggering through the 1986 season, winning 108 games and a World Series championship, the Mets are staggering. Instead of high fives, there are just depressing lows. Instead of curtain calls, the curtain could be falling on their selfacclaimed dynasty.

The Mets have drifted along below 500 for much of May, falling as low as fifth in the National League East while suffering drug rumors, fingerpointing in the clubhouse and a public split between the manager and front office.

They have drifted along below .500 for much of May, falling as low as fifth in the National League East while suffering drug rumors, fingerpointing in the clubhouse and a public split between the manager and front office.

While it may be too early to dismiss them, the Mets seem to epitomize the problems other championship teams have experienced one year later.

And consider the warning of Hall of Famer Frank Robinson: "It gets late early."

In the last decade, only the New York Yankees have been able to repeat as World Series champions, in 1977 and '78. Both times, they defeated the Los Angeles Dodgers, the only National League team to repeat over that stretch.

What did it take? "A killer instinct," said Reggie Jackson, one of the main men on those Yankee teams. "It takes never being satisfied, never wanting to quit. That's all."

The hazards of winning: overconfidence, too much money and glory, laziness and a desire by all others to beat a champion.

The only major league teams without at least one division title since 1978 are Minnesota, Seattle, Texas and Cleveland in the American League and San Francisco in the National. The American League East has had different division champions in each of the last six years. Over the same six years, five different teams have won NL East end of spring training, when, in the space of three days, they lost two key pitchers - Cy Young winner Dwight Gooden, who tested positive for cocaine and entered a rehabilitation program, and reliever Roger McDowell, who had hernia surgery.

Gooden's problems were accompanied by rumors that other Mets might be on drugs. When NBC broadcaster Mary Albert raised the question on national television, club management bristled.

Then came the elbow troubles of Bob Ojeda, who led New York with 18 victories last year. Suddenly, the Mets pitching staff, which led the league in earned run average last year, took on a very ordinary look.

Ojeda, who worked only one inning in his last start, got caught in the middle of a split between Manager Davey Johnson and the front office when he was placed on the disabled

Johnson wanted McDowell reactivated to bolster his struggling bullpen. Instead, the Mets recalled starter John Mitchell from the minors. When General Manager Frank Cashen, who had been traveling, rejoined the team, he met for an hour with Johnson to iron things out. Johnson was angry because he learned of the move after the fact. Trouble certainly is not unique to the Mets. Other champions have experienced the same thing. In 1983, the Baltimore Orioles won the World Series. A year later, the same Orioles finished fifth, 19 games back. It was one of the most dramatic reversals in baseball history.

Cal Ripken Sr., a coach on that team and now the Orioles' manager, couldn't explain what happened. "I really don't know," he said. "I guess No. 1 is that when you win, every club goes out to beat you." Pitcher Scott McGregor saw another factor. "The spoils are so great," he said. "There's a tendency to relax." Robinson, an Orioles coach, agreed. "You can't get the guys to concentrate as hard," he said. "They're not as hungry. Johnny Bench, who played for Cincinnati teams that won consecutive World Series in 1975 and '76, said repeating was one of the most difficult tasks in baseball. Certainly the Mets felt that way after losing three straight one-run games to Atlanta last weekend, the last one on a misplayed pop fly that had second baseman Tim Teufel and right fielder Darryl Strawberry each suggesting the other should have caught the ball.

First baseman Keith Hernandez, usually the most thoughtful man in the clubhouse and appointed captain of the club before last week's road trip, considered that lost weekend and called the Mets "a great impersonation of a major league team.'

Johnson was so infuriated by the hapless play that he called the team off the bus and back into the clubhouse for another of a myriad meetings the Mets have held in this bewildering season.

It hardly helped. The next night, New York was pounded by Cincinnati 12-2 for its fourth straight loss and seventh in eight games. Hernandez offered a new analysis. "I'm not going to elaborate," he said. "Two words pretty much capsulize everything. We stink."

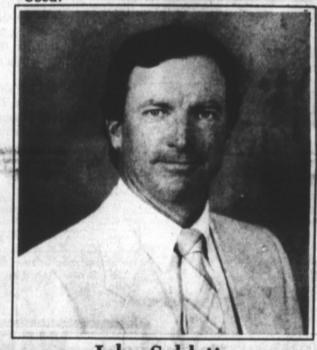

Hernandez remembers the drepression of a 90-loss season in St. Louis in 1977 and being traded to a Mets team that would lose 94 games in 1983. "A lot of guys don't know what it's like to play on a losing team," he said. "It's easy to give in and start feeling sorry for yourself. And if that happens, it's going to be a long, long summer.'

Teufel, acquired from the Twins before last year, put the Mets' hard times in his own, personal perspec-

"Now," he said, "you know what it was like to be in Minnesota."

SHOCK ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Though recent studies have shown tuition costs at private colleges and universities rising faster than the rate of inflation, many schools are beefing up financial aid packages to stay affordable and to compensate for losses in federal support.
This is particularly true in the case of minority students. The University of Rochester says more than 86 percent of its black, Hispanic and native American students received aid packages that covered all expenses.

"Some families look only at the tui-tion price and go into 'sticker shock,'
"said Kathy Kurz, the university's financial aid director. "If they just investigate financial aid packages, they may discover they can afford their first choice after all."

FmHA not recycling foreclosed farms

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Farmers Home Administration, which has built up its land inventory through foreclosures of financially strapped farmers, is not recycling the property as the agency should. says a farm group spokesman.

After taking over land from farmers who can't repay loans, the cumventing provisions of the 1985 FmHA is supposed to make that land available to small operators or young families just starting out, Eugene Severens of the Center for Rural Affairs, Walthill, Neb., said Thursday.

Severens accused the FmHA of cir-ment capabilities, he warned, and farm law governing the sale of land acquired by the agency through foreclosures.

A lawsuit was filed Thursday in federal court in Omaha challenging the agency's practices, he told the House Agriculture credit subcom-

In general, he said, the agency is supposed to hold land for three years and make it available to family farmers unable to obtain credit from other sources.

If unsold during that period, the land is then classified as "surplus" and is offered to the highest bidders. In some instances, buyers might be investors, absentee owners or large well-established farmers.

According to the latest figures available, FmHA is holding about 5,300 farms or 1.5 million acres of farmland.

Severens contended that FmHA was misconstruing its regulations, which resulted in "surplus" classifications of larger amounts of farmland and a shortening of the three-year holding period.

"The whole point of this law is to allow an ample period during which FmHA-eligible borrowers can buy the land," said Severens.

"However, FmHA is interpreting this ... not as a period during which there should be an opportunity to purchase but as a fixed period which ends automatically three years after the property entered the inventory even if the land was never available for sale as suitable property for even one day."

He urged the committee to take steps to clarify the law and ensure that the government's inventory of farmland is used to rebuild the family farm system by making property available to producers who could not otherwise afford it.

Severens delivered his criticism during a hearing on farm credit problems.

Rep. Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., asked the subcommittee for a broad farm credit assistance package to provide relief for producers as well as struggling lenders.

Gephardt said he supported legislation to aid the financially ailing Farm Credit System, the nation's largest agricultural lender, but he urged the subcommittee to develop a more comprehensive proposal that would also offer help to non-FCS bor-

"In addressing the problem I think we would agree that the main problem is not new credit, but the bad debt already out there," Gephardt said, asking the subcommittee to endorse farm credit proposals that he and Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, introduced earlier this year.

The central credit provisions of the Harkin-Gephardt plan, which also calls for strict government controls on production to raise commodity prices, is a debt restructuring program. It includes mediation to help borrowers and lenders work out more realistic payment schedules and longer write-off periods for banks for any losses suffered under restructuring agreements.

In addition, the Gephardt-Harkin proposal would provide no-interest loans of up to $30,000 to help farmers pay off their debts and try to restore the financial health of their operations. He estimated that the net cost of the program, after loan repayments, would reach nearly $3

"The bottom line is that we need debt relief to the farmer," said Gephardt. "A broader program will give farmers a chance to work out their problems with all of their lenders, thereby diluting any charge that Congress is helping just the Farm Credit System and not the farmer."

Texas swine business on rebound after hitting new record low

By NELSON ANTOSH Houston Chronicle

AUSTIN (AP) - The hog business in Texas is on the rebound after hitting a record low in production and experiencing a packing plant scare that alarmed farmers to the point that some considered building their own plants.

Pork production in the state is up, people are clamoring to learn more about getting into the business, and contingency plans have been laid to deal with any shortage of slaughtering capacity, according to Ken Horton of Austin, executive vice president of the Texas Pork Producers Association.

The Texas pork industry's low point occurred in 1985, when only 650,000 swine were sent to market. Production had been as high as 1.1 million as recently as 1981. The collapse produced fears that there wasn't enough left to support a slaughtering and marketing industry. Although swine are a $100 million industry in the state, surveys indicate that 82 percent of the pork consumed in Texas is from other states or other countries.

Early indications of a turnaround appeared last April, said Horton, and by summer it was under way. An estimated 718,000 hogs were brought to market in Texas in 1986 and by all indications slaughter will be up again this year, he said.

High prices and low grain costs were part of the reason for the re-

Nationally, the spread between hog prices and corn costs making hog raising more profitable. In at least two instances, fattened hogs sold for more than choice

Prices have slipped since then, but remain in the profitable range. Hogs are selling for something less than 50 cents a pound, or 10 to 12 cents a pound below the highs of 1986. Most Texans can raise the animals for 37 or 38 cents a pound.

The collapse in grain prices has prompted some produers to begin raising hogs as a way to market their

The greatest growth in hog raising will be south of San Antonio, in the vicinity of the large fields of milo, which are the No. 1 feed for porkers. The grain formerly went to foreign buyers through the ports of Corpus Christi, Galveston and Victoria, but international demand has dried up and isn't likely to return for a couple of years, said Horton. The largest swine marketer in Texas is the Post Oak Livestock Marketing Association, headquartered in Giddings with collection points at Flatonia and Milano. It gathers, sorts and ships hogs directly to packers for its membership of

The association is the key to an emergency plan, should there be a crisis with hog slaughtering capacity, said Horton. "They would be our first resource for coordinating large shipments out of state." The nearest large packing plant outside of Texas is in Mississippi.

The packing plant scare occurred in 1986 when Swift closed its big plant in San Antonio during July, followed by the Roegelein Meat Co.'s decision to file for reorganization in bankrupt-

Roegelein continues to slaughter at a good pace, although it occasionally has to supplement the local supply with hogs shipped out of Kansas to keep its lines full, said Horton. By and large, the company was able to absorb the 1,300 Texas hogs a day that Swift was slaughtering.

The plan of some producers to band together and build a plant has been shelved, although that doesn't mean the idea is dead, he added.

'The No. 1 thing is to keep Roegelein operating. It appears there are not enough hogs in the state to support another packing plant. Production levels would have to be nearly double."

After the Swift shutdown in San Antonio, a study by the Texas A&M Extension Service found that the remaining slaughter capacity in the state was 3,163 hogs per day.

5 million in area slaughter

In 1986 more than 5.2 million cattle moved through the feedlots, and 5 million were slaughtered in the packing plants located in Southwestern Public Service Company (SPS) service territory, reports the electric utility's most recent annual Fed Cattle Survey.

SPS serves a 52,000-square-mile area in parts of the Panhandle and South Plains of Texas, eastern and Southeastern New Mexico, the Panhandle of Oklahoma, and southwestern Kansas. The feedlots in the territory fed 5,253,976 head last year, a 3.5% increase over 1985, but slightly below the record 5,259,779 fed during 1984.

"This year is the third in a row that the number of cattle fed has exceeded five million," said Seth Thomason, SPS manager of agricultural and industrial power. "That's a good indication that the cattle-feeding business is here to stay."

Total one-time capacity of the feedlots surveyed in 1986 was 2,594,975 head, down from the total capacity of 2,619,775 head in 1985.

A reported 5,071,877 cattle were slaughtered at packing plantsin the SPS service area last year, 293,039 more than were slaughtered in 1985, Thomason said. There are 15 beef packing plants in the SPS service area, he said, with an annual slaughter capability of 5,509,953 head.

The area's feedlots and packing plants were extremely cooperative and helpful during this survey. We commend them for their help.'

The survey lists each feedlot in the SPS area, and the lot capacities and number of cattle fed, by counties. There are feedlots in thirty of the counties in the SPS service area.

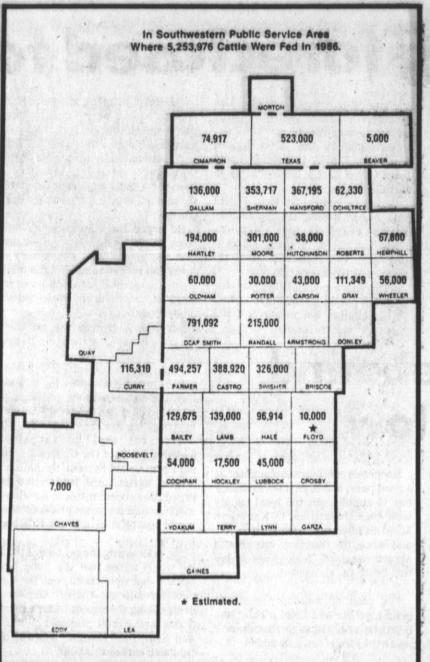

Charts of the number of feedlots surveyed, number of feedlots with 1,000-yead capacity or above, growth of the feedlot industry, and one-time feedlot capacity are included in the

Roundup slated in August

TEXAS RANCH ROUNDUP, Wichita Falls, Texas, August 14-15, 1987. Ranch hands, wagon bosses and family members from 12 of the largest Texas ranches vie in friendly competition to determine who gets "braggin' rights" as "The Best Ranch In Texas" in this seventh annual event. Team branding, wild cow milking and saddle bronc riding are some of the activities which test the skills of the working cowboys. A ranch foods cook-off, first lady contest and talent competition on Saturday also give spectators a taste of ranching heritage. Ranch arena events begin at 7:30 p.m. both days, with the Saturday events beginning at noon. Co-sponsored by Budweiser and the North Texsa Rehabilitation Center, the roundup benefits three state charities. For ticket information, call Lisa Bowdin at Falls Distributing Co., 817/692-9011.

Experts divided on possible farm recovery in Texas

DALLAS (AP) - Economists are divided over whether 1987 will bring a turnaround in the Texas farm economy

The state's agricultural receipts dropped an estimated 6.1 percent last year.

Some experts predict a slow recovery, citing promising signs in improved prices for livestock and some crops, cutbacks in plantings that are reducing surpluses and a slowing in the rate of land value decline.

"There's a glimmer of hope that agriculture is beginning to turn around and that there's better days ahead," said Dr. Carl Anderson, a Texas Agricultural Extension Service economist at College Station. "We look to a reasonable slow recovery - nothing overnight."

But Dr. James Richardson, another extension service economist, said livestock prices could become depressed because dairy price supports have reduced, other farm-price supports will be no greater than last year's, and huge crop surpluses re-

And many experts believe that Texas farmland values - upon which collateral is based for new farm loans - have yet to hit bottom.

"A lot of farmers aren't going to receive income, and a lot of agribusinesses aren't going to sell fertilizer and seed," Richardson

Producers who are unable to attend one of the 10 regional conferences, but who have access to a satellite dish, can view the televised program portions by tuning to the Westar 4 telecommunications satellite (Transponder 4 Direct). However, these producers will not receive the localized, regionallyspecific portions of the conference.

Producers desiring more information regarding the program should centact the local county Extension agent or Dr. Sam Cotner, Extension horticulturist and project supervisor, or Dr. Don Wilkerson, Extension horticulturist, at Texas A&M's Horticulture/Forestry Building, College Station, Texas 77843. They can be reached at telephone (409)845-7341.

The latest Dallas Federal Reserve Bank survey shows the largest percentage of farm-bank respondents expect "somewhat better" profitability for livestock operations this year over last, but "about the same" level for cotton, feed grains and wheat.

Anderson, in a just-completed study, estimated that overall gross farm receipts fell to $9.3 billion last year from $9.6 billion in 1985. Receipts from beef cattle production and cotton, which together account for more than half of annual farm receipts in Texas, dropped 6.8 percent and 22.3 percent, respectively.

Beef cattle receipts declined to $4.1 billion in 1986 from $4.4 billion in reported.

1985, and proceeds from sales of cotton lint and seed fell to $772 million from $993 million the year before, Anderson said.

"We lost so much of the cotton crop due to the weather, and livestock prices did not recover," he said. "We hope to get back up to the $10 billion mark (in annual gross receipts) this year."

Edwards, the 1986 NAR Educator of the Year, explained that the multiple advantages of investing in real estate-cash flow, equity build-up, and appreciation-still exist for smart investors. Immediate income is produced with positive cash flow, from collecting rent that is higher than the payments on the property. Long-term profits come from equity accumulation and appreciation, which are both enhanced by taking good care of property in a good location, he said.

NAR Regional Vice President Richard W. Brown aid buying reasonably-priced single-family rental properties can be a "comfortable" way for novice investors to enter the real estate investment market.

Rep. Steve Wolens, D-Dallas, an opponent of the bill, raised a point of "Single-family homes are a good vehicle for the small investor. They give him the opportunity to realize the value of sweat equity-the time and effort he puts into a house to increase its value," said Brown, a

> "With a single-family house, the investor can keep an eye on the place, keep control of his investment. A house is something that a person undertands. He knows what repairs it needs and can deal with the maintenance." Costs for repairs, which are considered repetitive expenses necessary to operate property, are fully deductible.

Within income limits mandated by tax reform, investors who actively participate in rental operations still can use property expenses to reduce their total taxable income. Consideration as an active investor requires a degree of participation, whether the owner actually repairs plumbing leaks on the property or approves repairs requested by the property manager. Although hiring management of handle upkeep does not disqualify an owner from being active, the investor's involvement must go beyond receiving an annual financial statement on the property.

The tax bill allows a deduction of upto $25,000 annually for active property investors with incomes of less than $100,000; the deduction is cut for those with incomes between $100,000 and $150,000; and it is eliminated for people with incomes greater than $150,000. The deductible limits apply to losses-expenses that exceed the (The techniques of using varnish, income generated by the property, and they apply to amounts claimed for property depreciation. The chances of a "small-scale" investor incurring deductible costs that exceed the $25,000 annual allowance are slim, Edwards noted. But, he added that unused deductible items can be added to the property's basis (the owner's purchase price.) Increasing the basis is beneficial tax-because it permits the seller to report a smaller profit from a sale, Edwards explained. Expenses for capital improvements, or work that causes a lasting increase in the property's value, can also be added to the basis.

One tax law change affected a former advantage stemming from property sales, considered as capital gains. Sellers of long-term capital assets (owned longer than six months), can no longer shelter as much of the income generated by such sales. Previously, only 40 percent of the net sales profit was taxable income; now all of it is taxable. "With the preferential treatment gone for capital gains, it's important to reduce your gain as much as possible," Edwards said.

Stuffed attics full of discovery, surprise

By MARY BARRINEAU Dallas Times Herald

DALLAS (AP) - It is just beginning to get hot in Mary Ray's large third-floor attic as she climbs the circular staircase into her past.

"My husband always says a plumber must have built these stairs, they're so narrow," she says as she slowly ascends the steps toward the roof.

On the way to her destination, she has passed through the elegance of the first-floor living and dining areas, and the cool, comfort of the second-floor bedrooms. But when she reaches the third floor, dust and filtered daylight help create a different kind of atmosphere.

Anyone who has ever played in grandmother's attic or plundered through dad's old steamer trunk knows about the magic of a crammed attic. It's partially the possibility of discovery and surprise. It's also the excitement of getting a glimpse of another person's life -like peering into his refrigerator or closet.

Attics are quiet, and away from the call of responsibility, which is probably why children have always loved spending time in them.

Mrs. Ray's attic serves as a kind of romantic bridge across the generations of her family.

"My daughter and her best friend used to play up here all the time," says Mrs. Ray. "They'd try on old clothes and put on shows. Then those two girls grew up and had daughters who were best friends and they loved to play up here, too."

Mrs. Ray is a saver, and savers have the best attics of all. She isn't a pack rat. She hasn't saved much plain, old junk. But she has saved everything that has sentimental value to her.

There's a child's toy grand piano. Doll beds keep company alongside her husband's great-grandmother's spinning wheel. Inside a big walk-in closet in the attic is her wedding dress, folded neatly in a box with a hand-sewn silk nightgown she made for her wedding night more than 60 years ago.

Other boxes hold her children's baby clothes. Her children's children are grown now, but she still has some of the tiny hats and suits and dresses her own babies wore.

Mrs. Ray stores memories in her attic. Other people buy castoffs at garage sales and fill their attics. Or keep old hat collections, broken appliances, income tax files or neglected golf clubs for that day when they will surely be needed.

Despite the pleasures of attics, they are endangered spaces. Whole generations of Americans may grow up without knowing the delights of a rainy afternoon under the rafters.

Most modern houses don't have large attics. In suburbia, the garage has replaced the attic as prime storage area.

Around World War II, as houses got smaller and roofs and ceilings got lower because of the price of materials and the awareness of heating (and later cooling) costs, attics also began to shrink, said D. Blake Alexander, professor of architectural history at the University of Texas at Austin.

"Today we have bigger closets so we don't need attics as much," said Alexander, who loved playing in the attic of his childhood home in Paris. His own family did what many others did. They made bedrooms out of the attic as the family expanded.

Now growing families living in bungalows in older neighborhoods are also expanding their living quarters up into the attic. "The space is just there for the taking," he

Many attics, like Mrs. Ray's, are filled with memorabilia. The contents of others aren't necessarily historical, but they still have a certain appeal.

Take Mike Brown's. He uses his spacious attic to store the 8,000 to 9,000 Christmas lights he uses to decorate the exterior of his Swiss Avenue home each year.

"Mortgage

He's also filled it with oldfashioned light fixtures he keeps so that every year or so he can exchange them for the ones hanging downstairs. "I like to switch them around. I'll go to flea markets and buy them and trade them around with ones in the house," he said.

The attic also provides ample space for his collection of old kitchen utensils. Visible in the top of a box in one corner are an old sifter, a grater, a chopper and a wooden mallet.

A huge chest he bought when a Dallas hotel went out of business serves as storage for an assortment of old clothes. There, order reigns in the chaos of the attic. Every drawer has a masking tape label: Socks for brown outfits. Socks for blue and black outfits. Miscellaneous socks. Single socks. Underwear and briefs. Jogging and sweat suits. Sweaters. Imprinted T-shirts.

'Over there are hooks for pegboards," said Brown. "I don't have any pegboards, but I might someday.

"Every time a part comes off something, I toss it up here in a box. Then when I need it again, I know I've got it. I just can't find it in all

"I've been thinking about cleaning the attic out for about two years. But in the summer it's too hot, and in the winter it's too cold and in the spring I'm out planting flowers. I never get to it," he said.

Jerry Clendening, Brown's next-

use for a lot of the items in his attic. His wife, Verla Mae, who died last year, had saved all the doll clothes she hand-made for her daughter, along with the solid wood doll house and doll furniture her husband made and she decorated. Now their granddaughter, Jessica Ragsdale, is playing with them.

The Clendenings moved all their daughter's old playthings into the attics of each of the four houses they lived in. "I kept asking if she didn't want to throw them away. She said no, they were for her granddaughter someday," said Clendening.

Allyn Robertson, who once enjoyed a reputation as a lover of big hats, kept some of her collection in her Oak Cliff attic long after hats went out of style. "That's the biggest one over there in that box. I'll have to get it out and wear it again along with these," she said, holding up a pair of black and white polka dot shoes in a clear plastic hat box.

She's also kept a bright red evening coat and pink wool coat, just waiting in plastic for styles to come back around. "The pink one wasn't quite long enough to wear this year," she said. "Maybe next year the hem lengths will be shorter.'

On a shelf near the pull-down ladder into the house are three electric coffee percolators. "You'll have to ask my husband why we have those. He bought them at garage sales. I guess he wants them in case the coffeepot breaks in the morning early when all the stores are closed," she door neighbor, has already found a League acquired the old F.A. Brown farm home, a pre-1885 structure off Lover's Lane, members had no idea what they'd find in the attic.

It turned out to be full of treasures, the kind history buffs love.

"The people who lived here had the values of the Depression and the thriftiness of the farm. They never threw anything away," said Al Cox, an architect who has been helping catalog the contents of the house.

"That makes it perfect for us." Much of the attic was converted to a large bedroom for the young sons in the family, but what is left is full of revealing relics of the past.

"Look at this old ledger from 1915," said Cox. "The family wrote down all their expenses. High school tuition, $5. School supplies, 40 cents. Hair cut, 10 cents. Ice, $1.05."

The entries tell the story of life on the farm. A progression of expenses in 1925 relates to an illness. There are payments to Baylor Hospital, to nurses and drug stores. That kind of record is more revealing than anything in a history book.

Back in a little cubbyhole is a small storage shelf full of old bottles. There's a tiny bottle of violet extract. Other bottles hold Wizard fly spray, Burmashave, typewriter oil.

"Here's an old china pitcher with a broken handle. They couldn't fix it but they didn't throw it away," said

Also gathering dust in the attic are post card collections, Victorian ceiling fans, lots of broken chairs and beds.

"It's been a lot of fun to look around," said Cox.

Barbecued gastronomy comes into its own when the weather invites us to spend more of our time in the backyard, patio or wherever we do our outdoor grilling.

Successful barbecuing is synonomous with safe barbecuing. And safe barbecuing means such things as never taking for granted the business of making a fire, watching it while the food is being cooked and being especially careful about extinguishing it properly. Remember, too, that charcoal, so popular outdoors, emits carbon monoxide and can be dangerous when

Speaking of charcoal, the taste that is so cherished by many barbecue lovers does not really come from the charcoal, but from the smoke that hits the food as grease drips on to the fuel. One other point while still on the subject of charcoal: Since it absorbs moisture, it should be stored so that moisture does not affect it, which means in an airtight container or in a very dry place.

Despite an almost endless number of experiences with outdoor grills, we felt that the matter of safety in this particular area called for advice from an authority on the subject, in this case John L. Paige, senior vice president of the Scripto-Tokai Co. of Rancho Cucamonga, Calif. His first comment was that safety can be attained simply by following common-sense rules that apply to the handling of fires of any

"A container of water should be close at all times because of the possibility of flare-ups and other emergencies, said Paige. "It is surprising how often barbecuing is done in an area securely and cannot tip easily. where the water is not instantly

All flammable objects should be kept away from the fire, a seemingly unnecessary bit of advice since it is so obvious, yet it is often ignored. Paige recommends this distance should be eight feet at the very least. If possible avoid a flash-flammable liquid. To start charcoal, self-starting briquets are readily available. Or, you can pile briquets inside a large coffee can with the top and bottom removed. Paige said you then light some crumpled newspaper underneath the can and, when the briquets settle to the bottom, carefully remove the can, using tongs or special gloves, and spread out the coals. Should you use lighter fluid, keep it far from the grill after use. Never squirt lighter fluid on hot coals. And be sure to keep the lighter fluid or a butane barbecue lighter out of the direct sunlight and other hot locations.

The fire should be "cold out," not just out, so that what is left is cold enough to touch. If possible, dump the coals into a pot of water, but the important thing is not to leave hot coals unattended until they go out by themselves.

Children present a hazard which must be controlled. They should be told which items will be hot and must never be touched. They must be supervised by an adult at all times. Be sure that any games they or the adults play are far away from the grill, especially if the games involve running or the throwing

Paige said other things to watch out for are chairs close to the grill so a child or anyone else cannot tip one over within range of the fire; not leaving snacks or glass plates on the grill's table attachment, if it has one; removing all sharp utensils, such as carving knives and serving forks, from reach, and making sure the grill stands

Conventional loans are not insured or guaranteed by the U.S. Government. They are, however, sometimes insured by private mortgage insurance companies when the loan-to-value ratios require a portion of the mortgage to be covered. This insurance is protection to the lender in the event of default. It should not be confused with credit life or disability insurance designed to pay off a mortgage in the event of physical disability or death of the borrower.

Private mortgage insurance (PMI) is required on fixed rate loans when the downpayment is less than 20%. On the other types of conventional loans, such as an adjustable rate mortgage, the requirement of PMI may be much stricter, as these programs require more portection for the lender. In the event of loan default, the private mortgage insurance company pays a portion of the loan balance should the lender not be able to recover its losses upon sale of the house. Therefore, not only does your loan application have to be approved by your lender, it must also be approved by the PMI company. At loan closing a borrower is required to pay the first year's PMI premium, as well as 2 months to deposit into escrow.

Self-prescribing vitamin supplements can be harmful

high-dose, specialized vitamin and mineral supplements to prevent disease run the risk of overdose, which could lead to the danger of toxicity, warned an expert at The University of Texas Health Science at San Antonio.

"Toxicity cases involving vitamin or mineral supplements occur primarily when people receive too much of one or more nutrients," said Eleanor Young, Ph.D., R.D., L.D., associate professor in the Department of Medicine at UTHSCSA.

High-dose, single nutrient vitamin and mineral supplements can interfere with the normal metabolism of other nutrients and with the therapeutic effects of certain drugs.

"The majority of health adults recieve 99.99 percent of their nutrients from food," Young said. "Taking extra amounts of these nutrients in pill form are going to do

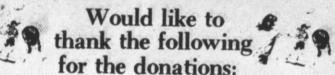

Most adults who self-prescribe no extra good and could, in fact, do a lot of harm."

Calcium supplements, for instance, can block the absorption of other bone-building minerals such as manganese and phosphorus, which ironically promote osteoporosis. More than 70 percent of the calcium in the American diet comes from milk and dairy foods, and doe snot have the same effect from this

"There are certain groups of people who may benefit from supplements, including those whose nutrient intakes are altered because of poor diets, who have an increased destruction of certain nutrients, such as alcoholics, and who have an increased need for certain nutrients as a result of illness," Young said.

Maintain cool with food tips

Whether your outing is a short jaunt or a long haul, preparing meals will be easier if you plan and pack well. It's especially important to take good care of perishable foods when you're on the road in hot weather. A little attention will prevent a lot of trouble in the form of spoilage or even illness.

Everyone has heard the admonishment: "Keep hot things hot and cold things cold." Well, it really is necessary and it really isn't hard. Here are a few tips from American Dairy Association for packing and caring for take-along foods so they stay fresh—and safe.

First, be aware of which foods cause problems. These are: foods that have already been cooked; uncooked meats, fish and poultry; and anything containing eggs and dairy products. Keep these foods at 40 degrees F. or below until it is time to serve or prepare them. Then, if they are to be eaten hot, make sure they are heated thoroughly.

The simplest guideline to follow is that if a food must be refrigerated at home, it must be kept cold outside the refrigerator.

Of all the things going on your trip, pack perishable foods last. Take them straight from the refrigerator or freezer to an insulated ice chest or cooler. Technically, an ice chest is a metal or heavy plastic cotnainer with a tight-fitting lid; a cooler is made of plastic foam. For long trips, an ice chest is preferable because a cooler doesn't provide as much insulation.

-You can pack foods in crushed ice or use "canned ice," a non-water liquid in plastic packages. Freeze the "canned ice" solid and place it in the ice chest, which it will keep cold several days. It gives off no moisture as it melts and can be refrozen.

-If you don't want to spend the money for this product, try making your own ice blocks. This works especially well for long camping trips. Fill clean, half gallon milk cartons with water; freeze and use to keep your foods cold. When the ice melts you have cold drinking water.

-Another dual-purpose method of keeping foods cool that also saves space on a long trip is to freeze meats or poultry solid and use them as ice blocks. If frozen solid, chicken parts will defrost in an ice chest in a day or two, ground beef, fish and steak in a day.

-To keep milk extra cold on a short trip, freeze milk as ice cubes, then add them to a wide-mouthed thermos filled with fluid milk. They willnot dilute the milk like cubes made from water.

-Butter will stay fresher during a long trip if first frozen in its original wrapper, then stored in an ice chest surrounded by other frozen foods. To use, remove just what you need ten to fifteen minutes beforehand.

-To make packing easier:
-Buy or pack the smallest portions/containers of food that will still be enough for the outing, such as condiments, sauces, perishables and

DEAR ANN LANDERS: You goofed in your answer to the woman who was afraid to have a hysterectomy because her sister told her that her sex life went to hell after she had the operation. You said, "There should be no diminution of desire or ability to function sexually." Wrong.

True, a woman can still perform, but I tell you from experience that the sex drive and "that old feeling" are gone.

I had a hysterectomy when I was 34 because of cancer. I had been married 10 years and, thank God, had my three children. From then on I was completely asexual. Naturally, I accommodated my husband, but if I never had sex again I wouldn't miss it.—Deader Than A Doornell in Beverly Hills

DEAR DOORNAIL: Thanks for the input. Here's another lette ron the same subject.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Bless you for telling your readers that a hysterectomy doesn't hurt a woman's sex drive, unless she has the crazy notion that the operation has made her less than what she is.

I had a hysterectomy when I was 35 (I'm 55 now), and it made my sex life much better. I had four kids and didn't wnat more. Being free of the fear of pregnancy allowed me to enjoy sex in a way I never had before. My husband was thrilled with the change in me. DEAR X: Welcome to the club and thanks for the testimony. Please read on.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: You are not "Dear" to me. I am furious with you for pushing hysterectomies. Don't you know that nearly 50 percent of those surgeries are unnecessary? It's a terrific operation for surgeons and anesthesiologists. It provides them with a second home, a

DEAR BOILING: Fifty years ago, every kid had his or her tonsils out because it was the thing to do. (Many of these tonsils were perfectly healthy.) Then it was the appendix that was targeted for removal. Today, hysterectomy is the "in" operation, and I'm sure many a uterus and ovary have been removed that could have been left alone. But, and this is important, some hysterectomies have saved lives.

This discussion provide me with yet another opportunity to remind my readers of the wisdom of getting a second opinion and maybe a third. No woman should part with these organs on the say-so of one doctor.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Our 24-year-old daughter owes us $2,400. This loan was made three years ago. She has repaid us $536.

"Vera" is now living with a wonderful man. They plan to be married within a year. The wedding will be paid for by the two of them.

My husband and I gave our older daughter $250 toward her wedding gown, which was, outrageously expensive and $250 as a wedding gift. We want to know if it would be in poor taste to give our engaged daughter a $500 credit toward her loan. Please reply in the paper. I'll bet a good many parents in your reading audience are faced with a similar dilemma. -- 'Twist and 'Tween in Abilene

DEAR TWIXT: If you want to give your daughter the same wedding gift that you gave her sister, do so. (recommend it.) A credit agains an old loan is not an appropriate gift. Later, perhaps after the honeymoon, if you are inclined to drop her a note about the balance of the loan, do so, but don't be surprised if nothing wonderful happens.

"There are 2,475 persons aged 60 and older in Deaf Smith County and so far we've only met with 1,200 of them," said Daniels. The Democratic People's Republic of Korea was founded on May 1, 1948, in the zone occupied by Russian troops after World War II. In 1950, its armies tried to conquer the South. ### Studies link breast cancer with moderate alcohol use

BOSTON (AP) - Two studies today link breast cancer with as little as three drinks a week, prompting one expert to recommend that overweight women and others at high risk of the disease consider reducing alcohol consumption.

The studies, published in the New England Journal of Medicine, found that women who drink modest amounts of liquor, beer or wine are more likely to get breast cancer later in life than those who don't drink.

The new research does not prove that alcohol causes the disease, the most common form of cancer among American women, striking one in 10 at some time in their lives.

However, Dr. Walter C. Willett, principal author of one of the studies. estimated alcohol could be responsible for 10 percent to 15 percent of the

In an editorial published with the studies, Dr. Saxon Graham of the State University of New York at Buffalo said whatever can be done to reduce the risk of the disease should be done.

"One might recommend, then," he wrote, "that women at especially high risk for breast cancer, such as those who are obese, who have had few children, who were first pregnant when they were older than 25 or whose mothers had breast cancer, should curtail their alcohol ingestion."

The principal authors of the two studies said the data are still too murky to be used to recommend changes in the drinking habits of American women. "I think decisions are going to have to be made on an individual level with the realization that there is some uncertainty still involved here," said Willett, who directed one of the studies at the Harvard School of Public Health.

It would be reasonable for a woman to wait until more information is available before deciding whether to change her drinking habits, Willett said. "But I also think it's a rational decision to say, 'Yes, there is some uncertainty, but I'm going to play it safe and reduce my drinking."

Alcohol's effects on the body are complex. Some studies suggest that moderate drinking may lower the risk of heart disease.

Dr. Arthur Schatzkin of the National Cancer Institute, director of the second study, agreed that "a fairly substantial proportion of breast cancer can be attributed to alcohol consumption, should this relationship turn out to be causal."

"It does have a lot of public health implications given how common drinking is and how important breast cancer is," he added.

The Harvard study found that women who consume at least one drink daily have a 50 percent higher risk of breast cancer than do those who never drink. Those who average half a drink daily have a 30 percent increased risk.

Below three drinks a week, there was no increased danger.

The National Cancer Institute study broke down women's drinking habits differently and reached slightly different conclusions.

In general, it found that those who drink are 50 percent more likely to get breast cancer than are those who never drink. For those who consume more than three drinks a week, it found a 60 percent to 100 percent increase in risk. Dr. Lynn Rosenberg of the Boston University Drug Eni noted that even though the studies overcame many shortcomings of earlier research in the area, they could not assess the effects of alcohol and diet early in life.

Organ donor card law changed, explained

changed the Texas organ donor card

Texas residents must now have an organ donor card signed by them and two witnesses. The Southwest Donor Bank in Dallas explains that each person is able to make a priceless and special gift to someone in need by becoming an organ and tissue

Yet, hundreds of organs and tissues that could be used to save lives or return individuals to full, productive lives are wasted each

Most families have difficulty making the decision to donate organs at the time of their loved one's death if they haven't talked about it before.

By discussing it now, one can let their family and friends know one's feelings. A person can sign a donor card and help someone fight terminal and debilitating illness with organ and tissue donation.

People on dialysis suffering from end stage renal disease can benefit from a kidney transplant. A recipient of a kidney transplant will be given the chance to lead a more productive, longer life.

Children and adults suffering from severe liver disease will die without a transplant. Donation gives them a second chance. Many types of fatal heart and lung diseases can be treated successfully through transplantation. Through pancreatic transplantation, insulin dependent diabetics can look forward to tomorrow without daily injections and the possible loss of limb, sight or life. The cornea, similar to a contact

A thin layer of skin, approximately 1/100th inch in thickness, may be donated and used as a temporary covering for burn wounds. Bone is the most frequently used tissue. Bone grafts play an important role in facial reconstruction, correction of birth defects, spinal surgery and oral surgery.

There are strict legal guidelines that must be followed before death can be certified and organs removed. These laws prohibit a physician from certifying a patient's death if he is in any way involved with the removal of that patient's organs or the transplantation surgery.

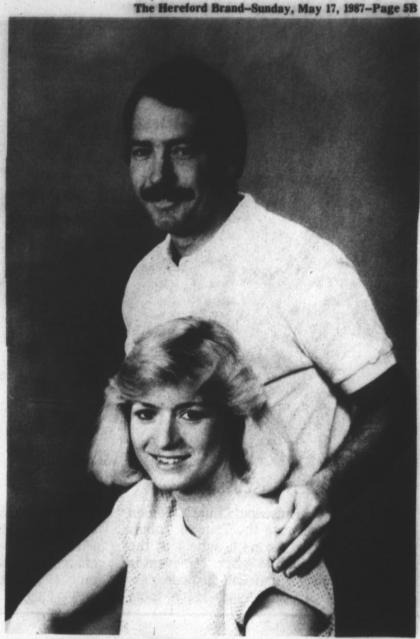

Organs are donated by individuals at the time of death. The circumstances of the death, medical criteria and age of the donor determine which organs can be used.

Recipients are determined by urgency of need, tissue and blood type and geographical location. First priority is always given to suitable matched recipients in Texas and the Southwest Donor Bank also participates in a national computerized organ sharing network.

Organ and tissue donation are gifts. There is no cost to the donor family or estate. Organ donation does not disfigure the body or prevent a normal funeral. Organ donation is a gift of life to others and is consistent with beliefs and attitudes of all the major religious traditions. A minister, priest, or rabbi is the best person to guide one in this consideration.

The Uniform Donor Card is a legal document under state law through which one can express the wish to donate organs for transplantation. The Uniform Donor Card allows one to donate any needed organs and tissues, specific organs and tissues, or the entire body for anatomical study. If a person changes their mind, they can simply tear up the donor card. One can always get a new one if they change their mind again.

Patients with dementia need supervision

Caring for a relative who is losing his or her memory and power of reasoning can be distressing.

The Texas Medical Association says if you feel responsible for the well-being of a person suffering from senile dementia, you should be aware of some of the risks that person faces, and some of the resources available to you as a caregiver.

Dementia is an incurable disorder of the brain in which there is a progressive loss of memory and other intellectual functions so that the mind gradually ceases to functin normally. The affected person slowly becomes increasingly confused, incapable of sensible conversation. unaware of surroundings, and generally incapacitated.

The Texas Medical Association says about one family in every ten includes at least one elderly member who has some form of senile dementia, including Alzheimer's Disease which accounts for nearly 80 percent of dementia cases.

There are risks whenever mentally impaired peopel live alone, especially after they have progressed beyond an early stage of senility. Because of forgetfulness and a decreased ability to concentrate, there is a denger of fires, falls and other accidents. Some form of daily attendance is important to guard against potential disasters, such as turning on the gas and forgetting to light it.

Friends and relatives can help by organizing memory aids, lists and routines, and by making sure that quate food and warmth are provided. Without some supervision, a senile person may eatpoorly, forget to take medications, and neglect per-onal hygiene. Do not hesitate to seek assistance from community services and from your physician. In many places, there are day-care centers where people are looked after for several hours and provided with lunch and some kind of occupational and activity therapy.

Your physician also may be able to arrange for yor relative to be admitted to a hospital or nursing home for brief periods so that you can have an occasional holiday.

Eventually, your relative may require the skilled and constant care that is available only in high-quality nursing homes. If the doctor strongy recommends this form of care, you may be doing the patient the best possible service by accepting the doctor's recommendation.

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT - What causes ileitis? Is there a cure, or will I have it for the rest of my life?

DEAR READER — Ileitis (regional ileitis or Crohn's disease) is an inflammation and swelling of a portion of the small intestine that connects to the large bowel. This inflammation causes diarrhea, abdominal pain, fever, chills, weakness and weight loss. It is a chronic disease of unknown

Antibiotics (to heal infection) and cortisone (to reduce inflammation) often are used to control symptoms of ileitis. Sometimes removal of the diseased portion of the bowel will give relief, but the disorder is likely to

Ordinarily, ileitis is a chronic condition that may wax and wane, depending on treatment and on several poorly understood factors. Patients with ileitis need close supervision by bowel specialists (gastroenterologists) and support by family and others, since the condition may lead to malnutrition and depression. DEAR DR. GOTT - Recently I had an abdominal exam. Instead of Xraying me, the doctor inserted a long tube with a light at the end of it, which made me want to choke. The results showed that my esophagus was swol-len. I told my doctor I have severe heartburn and a burning sensation on my left side below my rib cage. I have tried Zantac and antacids, which don't help. What could the problem be? DEAR READER - Judging from your description, I believe that you have peptic esophagitis, an uncomfortable ailment that is very common in people with hiatal hernia The stomach lining is protected from digesting itself by a mucous coating that prevents acid from burning the interior of the stomach. The acidic stomach contents are not usually flushed upstream into the esophagus, because of a ring of tissue that blocks stomach acid from irritating the delicate, unprotected esophageal lining. Hiatal hernia is a weakening of this muscular ring. Therefore, in peo-ple with the condition, the esophagus often becomes irritated and inflamed. Heartburn results.

Your doctor chose to diagnose your

lleitis is chronic disease

> problem by using an endoscope, a lighted tube passed down the esophagus, through which he could examine the lining of this organ. Apparently, he was able to document the swelling and irritation that characterizes inflammation of the esophagus caused by stomach acid (peptic esophagitis). Antacids and medicine to slow the production of gastric acid should, with time, relieve your symptoms. You may also be helped by avoiding certain foods, (such as spices, alcohol and coffee), eating smaller, more frequent meals, avoiding lying down after a meal and propping up the head of your bed with three-inch wooden

DEAR DR. GOTT - I am going crazy with all the scented products on the market. I suffer from sinus trouble and have a heavy nasal drip. Toilet soaps, facial tissues, shampoos, washing powders and fabric softeners (to name a few) are the biggest of fenders. I wonder how many people are itching, sneezing and scratching from these products. Whatever happened to unscented products?

DEAR READER - Beats me Americans seem to have an uncon trollable urge to smell good, and manufacturers have obliged by adding scents to a variety of products. Some people seem to be allergic to these unnecessary additives, so there is a tradeoff. Keep looking for unscented products; if enough consumers de-mand them, the market for the others will evaporate - just like the scents themselves

DEAR DR. GOTT - My doctor recently scheduled a mammogram for me. His nurse told me I should not have anything to eat after supper on the day before the test, and should not eat until the test was completed. Since this test doesn't have anything to do with my digestive tract, why can't I eat before it?

DEAR READER - I don't know why your doctor's nurse told you not to eat before your mammogram. These are very unusual instructions for X-ray tests that do not involve the intestinal tract. Perhaps she was following some antiquated instruction ritual. Call the lab, or your doctor, and ask if such an inconvenience is

Reception Planned

A reception for retiring Methodist minister Rev. Wallace H. Kirby and his wife, Evelyn, will be held in the Lamar Garden Room of King's Manor Methodist Home Sunday from 2 to 4 p.m. Rev. Kirby has served as chaplain for the past nine years at King's Manor as well as serving on other boards and committees. The Kirbys will move to Abilene following his June 2 retirement at the 78th session of the Northwest Texas Annual Conference of the United Methodist Church.

Kirbys to be honored at reception today

A reception honoring Rev. and Mrs. Wallace H. Kirby will be held from 2 to 4 p.m. today in the Lamar Garden Room of King's Manor Methodist Home. The public is cordially invited to attend Kirby's retirement party.

Rev. Kirby, chaplain at King's Manor Methodist Home, will be retiring June 2 at the 78th session of the Northwest Texas Annual Conference of the United Methodist Church, completing 39 years in the ministry.

He has served nine years at King's Manor upon moving to Hereford in 1978 from Perryton where he was pastor of the first United Methodist Church for three years. Prior to that time, some of the churches he had served included those at Stanton, Friona, Quanah, Littlefield, and Snyder.

Rev. Kirby served as assistant secretary and secretary of the Annual Conference, chairman of the Board of Ministry, chairman of the Council of Professional Ministires, and secretary of the Board of Pensions.

He is a member of the Lions Club, local chapter of the American Cancer Society, and works closely with the Founders Association of

The Founders Association is an organization of interested persons who raise money for people who cannot afford healthcare. Rev. Kirby initiated the annual July barbecue held for this purpose and estimates that $100,000 in free healthcare was provided last year.

"Many changes have come about in health care during the past nine years, particularly in caring for the elderly," said Rev. Kirby. "I am happy to have had the opportunity to work closely with the pioneers of yesterday."

Mrs. Kirby has been employed at George Warner Seed Co. for the past eight years and is active with the United Methodist Women on the conference and jurisdiction level. She has also been active with the local First United Methodist Church Sunday School, children's choirs, and United Methodist Women.

The Kirbys are the parents of three daughters: Mrs. CarolynHefner of Sweetwater, Mrs. Pat Preston of Abilene, and Mrs. Jan Hoover of Littlefield, and have four grand-children.

Rev. and Mrs. Kirby will be moving soon to their new home located at 3817 Westchester Dr., Abilene, Texas

Older people can control high blood pressure

As we grow older, it is only naturally that our heart and blood vessels age. Our bodies become more susceptible to heart attack, stroke, congestive heart failure and high blood pressure. Chances of having any of these health problems increase with age.

But older Americans can continue to reduce their chances of suffering from these cardiovascular diseases by having their blood pressure checked twice a year. If such checks reveal high blood pressure, the patient can still manage a normal, if not moderated, lifestyle.

High blood pressure, or hypertension, is common in persons over age 65, but it should not be considered normal. More than 54 million American adults today have high blood pressure - more than 40 percent in people 60 and over. Although most high blood pressure cannot be cured, it can usually be controlled and reduced.

"The first way to control high blood pressure is to be aware of it," says Addison A. Taylor, M.D., president of the American Heart Association, Texas Affiliate. "You may be in your older years and feel great, but you may still have high blood pressure if you haven't had it checked in the last year. The American Heart Association recommends that older Americans have their blood pressure checked at least a year through visits to the doctor, clinic, or community screening program," Taylor added.

If a community screening or your own blood pressure measuring equipment reveals a reading of equal or greater than 140 over 90, see your physician for a complete evaluation. "If the doctor tells you that you have high blood pressure, make sure that you understand the directions and follow them carefully," suggests Taylor. Proper treatment can usually bring high blood pressure down to normal levels, reducing the risk of heart disease.

Traditionally a doctor will try to treat high blood pressure through the following methods:

Diet: Reducing salt and sodium intake, eating a balanced diet and maintaining a good body weight can be important factors in reaching normal blood pressure. Exercise: Moderate exercise, such as walking, can be an important asset in controlling and maintaining normal weight, and therefore, blood pressure. For some people with high blood pressure, exercise can be dangerous, so it's important to follow your doctor's orders.

Medicine: Medicine may be prescribed for some cases of high blood pressure and when other treatment methods haven't succeeded. There are many different blood pressure treatment medicines available for doctors to prescribe.

"Lessening your chances of a stroke or heart attack makes blood pressure control worth it," states Taylor. "An added advantage is that some insurance companies will lower your insurance premium if you have reduced your blood pessure and have it under control," Taylor added.

For more information on high blood pressure, contact your local office of the American Heart Association weekdays during business hours.

It is a monumental task, as some reservations are made years in ad-

"TEXAS," set beneath the cliffs in beautiful Palo Duro Canyon, has played to over 1.8 million visitors since its beginning in 1966.

Often overlooked are these faithful, cheerful and organized staff members who last year took reservations and sold tickets to the 105,420 persons from all over the world on the average filling the Pioneer Amphitheatre to 94 percent of its capacity every night.

Walk-in customers, stacks of mail orders and that constant ring of the telephone don't allow a moments rest for the group.

Box Office Manager, Lee Stribling is a teacher who squeezes extra hours into her schedule during the year to make preparations for each season, culminating in June to 14 hour days once the production has started. She is assisted by Brenda Thomas, also a teacher.

Trained in May, the crew works either morning or afternoon shifts plus evenings every Monday through Saturday during the season.

Each has one special quality, a love of people. "I like saying goodnight to the buses," said Lisa. 'Everyone says how good it was (the show) and how it was their sixth...seventh or tenth time to see

Vanessa likes being out at the theatre best. "People are so easy to talk to outdoors," she said. 'although they never associate the person in the office with the one in the box office at the theatre."

One common frustration is convincting the callers that no lines are constantly busy. "They say, 'we have tried to get ahold of you for two days. Your phone must be out of order'... or 'we had to call the operator to get through," Vanessa

The girls recall funny stories like the time someone called to cancel reservations on the General Jackson Riverboat ... or they call to reserve for the "matinee" performance.

"When I told one man from New York that we were reserved out, he tried to bargin with me to get him a seat," Vanessa remembers.

"One thing that surprises people is how organized we are," she added.

The crew also said that people were pleased that they could reserve their tickets and pick them up on the day of the performance at the theatre as long as they did it before 7

Stribling recommends making reservations for weekend performances at least four to six weeks in advance and one week for a weekday performance....and cancelling those seats when you have a change of plans allows someone else an opportunity to see the show.

Even without reservations Stribling encourages visitors to come out. The waiting list begins at 6 p.m., and names are taken in order of arrival for the number of seats needed.

People are asked to return to the box office area at 7:45 p.m. The best of the unclaimed tickets plus 250 step seats not sold in advance are offered to each person.

"Its worth the trip just to see the canyon, and there is a very good chance of getting in to see the show," Stribling said.

"Texas" is a popular show, and people come from all over to see it," she added. "One lady told me it was her fourth time to see it this season and that they had come over 700 miles. She just didn't realize that over 50 percent of the audience travels that far."

Stribling believes that every night brings new fun. "One Saturday night it poured (rain), and people were not discouraged," she remembered. "They were going to get in and by the time the performance was to start, it (the rain) had stopped and they did get in."

"Texas" will play under the starts in 1967 nightly except Sunday from June 10 through Aug. 22 at 8:30 p.m. in Palo Duro Canyon State Park near

DISEASE

NEW YORK (AP) -There are several studies which suggest that drinking in moderation can reduce the risk of heart disease, says Dr. Bruce Hensel, a contributing editor to Family Circle magazine.

Moderate drinking he says, can raise levels of the protective kind of cholesterol - highly-density hipoprotein - in the blood. There are also indications, he says, that alcohol's relaxing effects can be beneficial to some people since stress, too, has been implicated in the development of heart disease

Hands Across America gives $25,000 grant

The High Plains Food Bank recently received a $25,000 grant from Hands Across America. The grant was part of $1 million allocated by Hands Across America to Texas nonprofit organizations. The grant application to Hands Across America was submitted by the food bank on behalf of a Panhandle-wide coalition. The funds are earmarked for the construction of a salvage reclamation

Registration for summer school set

Registration for summer school will be held May 28 from 7 to 8 p.m. in the Hereford High School cafeteria.

The classes, to begin June 5, will be offered by Amarillo College and the Hereford Independent School district and will count towards college credit.

Summer classes available at the AC Hereford Extension include: freshman composition I on Tuesday/Thursday evenings from 7 to 9:45; masterworks of English literature, same evenings and time; government of Texas and the U.S. same evenings and time; and history of the U.S. II, Monday and Wednesday evenings from 7 to 9:45.

area at the food bank.

'Retail salvage-damaged products from grocery stores-represents a potential year-round source of canned and packaged foods which the food bank has been unable to take advantage of up to now," said Melody Wattenbarger, executive director of the food bank. "Our warehouse lacks the kind of receiving and sorting area required for a large salvage operation.'

The addition to the food bank's building funded in part with the Hands grant will be approximately 3,300 square feet and will generate an additional 200,000 pounds of food per year for the food bank's 160 participating charitable organizations. The food bank currently distributes food to 160 charitable organizations in a 29-county service area. The food bank will distribute over a million pounds of donated food during 1987. "Demand for our food has increased dramatically and has doubled in the last 12 months," said Wattenbarger. We cannot hope to meet the growing demand-especially for canned and packaged foods-without accepting everything that is available and that includes salvage products."

The project will cost $100,000 so the food bank has additional funds to raise before construction can begin. "We are pleased that Hands Across America has given us this initial funding on a much-needed project," said Joe Horn, food bank board president. "This project will benefit 160 non-profit organizations for many years so the Hands funds will have a significant, long-term impact on the Panhandle of Texas.

Cantaloupe, melons perk up meals

Spring has arrived and with it comes the appearance of fresh, sweet, Texas cantaloupe and honeydew melons. The Rio Grande Valley of Texas, from the tip of the state north to Laredo, is not only the first domestic supplier of cantaloupe and honeydew in the nation, but also one of the nation's leading suppliers of the succulent spring delicacies.

The popularity of these two produce items continues to increase. A fresh produce study just revealed, that among those polled, melons were among the top choices for favorite fruits. It's really no surprise though. Years of research have perfected the varieties and the growing practices. Texas cantaloupe and honeydew are now firm, flavorful, and hardy. The deep orange color, small seed cavity, thick juicy flesh, and naturally high sugar content of cantaloupe make them a consumer favorite. And, you can't overlook the sparkling green flesh, unique flavor, and natural sweetness of honeydew. From the South Texas area will come melons from about 26,000 acres. Harvesting will gear up in mid-May and continue through June.

Cantaloupe and honeydew are so versatile that they can be enjoyed in many different ways. Breakfast and snacking are becoming popular choices. Mixed with other fruits.these melons also perk up salads for both lunch and dinner. For example, the Spring Beehive Salad suggested here features the flavor of spring melons with pink grapefruit, pineapple, avocado, strawberries, and a very special sauce. Or, become adventurous and try this deliciously light cantaloupe cake. Cantaloupe puree is added to angel food cake batter and the whipped topping for the most special of tastes. Then decorate it with cantaloupe balls for the best looking, best tasting dessert you can imagine.

While you're enjoying the flavor of spring canteloupe and honeydew, keep in mind that they are a healthy choice in eating. Six ounces of cantaloupe have only fifty calories. The same amount of honeydew represents only sixty. In other words, they are easy on the waistline. Important to note too is information released by the American Cancer Society. It stated that consumpton of foods high in betacarotene (which is converted into Vitamin A after consumption) and Vitamin C has been associated with lower rates of some cancers. Cantaloupe contain 100% of the U.S.

1 T. Honey 1 Bunch Leaf lettuce

PROCEDURE: SERVES FOUR Cut rings 4" thick across each type of fruit. Make a Devonshire Sauce by thoroughly mixing the sour cream, brown sugar, and honey. Remove the leaf lettuce leaves, wash, and line 4 small salad plates. Place the rings in descending order starting with the largest first. Fill the center cavity of each ring with to the stack. Top each with a strawberry in the center. NOTE: The essence of this salad is its beautiful appearance; therefore, it is necessary to make the slices as uniform and circular as possible. Cut the rings while the rind is still on. Lay each ring on a cutting board and remove the rind leaving the ring as round as possible.

Presbyopia, a common problem

Do you hold a printed page at have presbyopia, you will need arm's length in order to read it? If so, the Texas Medical Association says you should have your vision checked for presbyopia, a very common vision problem that can be easily corrected.

Most people first notice the condition when they are in their mid-40s. It gradually becomes increasingly pronounced. If it is not corrected, you can read printed matter only by holding it further and further away from your eyes.

Presbyopia is caused by the aging of the eye. At rest, a normal eye is focused for distance vision. To enable the eye to focus on closer objects, the ciliary muscles of the eye thicken and contract the lens, a process that is known as accomm

With age, the lens of the eye hardens and its ability to change shape to focus on close objects is reduced, resulting in presbyopia.

If you find that clsoe objects are beginning to appear slightly blurred unless you hold them away from you, you should consult an ophthalmologist (physicians who specialize in the treatment of eye disorders and in eye surgery). If you glasses or, rarely, contact lenses with convex (outwardly curved) lenses. These will reinforce the power of the lens of the eye and enable you to see close objects clear-

You will need slightly stronger glasses every few years, to compensate for the decreasing power of your own lenses. This will continue until you are about 65. At this time the power of accommodation by the eyes virtually ceases.

If you are also nearsighted (distant objects are blurred because the eyeis too long from front to back), farsighted (the eye is too short from front to back) or astigmatic (vision is distorted because of an unven curvature of the cornea), you may already be wearing glasses for distance vision. You can avoid the need for two pairs of glasses by getting bifocals. In this type of glasses, the upper part of each lens is for distance viewing and the lower part for close vision.

UNIFORMS ARE IMPORTANT

PHILADELPHIA (AP) - A medical survey illustrates the importance of uniforms to professional images, says John A. Shiffert, executive director of the Professional Apparel Association.

The survey was published in a recent edition of the Journal of the American Medical Association. It reports that substantial percentages of hospital pa-tients want their doctors, both male and female, to wear white coats and male doctors to wear neckties. They also prefer that doctors refrain from wearing blue jeans and sneakers.
