Rebels surrender

Marcos return thwarted

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The government said today it thwarted a plan by deposed President Ferdinand E. Marcos to return from exile, and more than 200 mutineers apparently loyal to Marcos quickly abandoned their 61-hour takeover of a suburban broadcast complex.

Government spokesman Teodoro Benigno said Marcos' unauthorized plan to return to his homeland aboard a special plane was blocked by the Philippine consul general in Honolulu.

Along with the surrender of the mutineers, the announcement appeared to bring a dramatic end to the most serious challenge to date from military forces to the government of President Corazon Aquino, who came to power in a civilian-military coup that ousted Marcos last February.

The rebellion began Tuesday when about 500 troops attempted to seize communications and military centers around Manila but were prevented by loyal government troops. The uprising was timed less than a week before Philippine citizens were to vote on a new constitution Monday.

In Honolulu, an angry Marcos met with reporters at his home Wednesday night and said U.S. government officials had ordered him not to leave Hawaii for the Philippines.

"I feel that now I am being treated like a prisoner," Marcos said. "I will be prevented from boarding any plane for the Philippines." He said he wanted to go back because, "My country is in a crisis."

However, pressed about whether he had planned to return, he said, "I am aware of no such plan."

Marcos, who has lived in Hawaii since being ousted, said Carl Taylor and Elwood J. MacGuire — both State Department representatives, visited him Wednesday and told him not to leave Hawaii.

The owner of a military clothing store in Honolulu said earlier Wednesday that Marcos' wife, Imelda, purchased $2,000 worth of jungle boots, camouflage outfits, belts and other items Monday for people of various sizes.

A Boeing 707 was parked at Honolulu airport, and radio reports in Manila said it was intended to carry Marcos to the Philippines. The Philippine consul general, Tomas Gomez, said he was tipped that such a plane was at the airport, and contacted the Philippine Embassy in Washington.

Vice President Salvador Laurel said that the U.S. State Department was closely monitoring Marcos' movements.

At the State Department in Washington, spokesman Pete Martinez today said the government had no immediate comment.

Marcos spokesman Jemmo Trinidad told KHVH radio in Honolulu that the State Department representatives told Marcos "they will stop him from going home. If it is necessary that they will do it physically, they will do it."

However, Col. Arturo Aruiza, a high-level Marcos aide, told the station, "The office of the president of the United States has given in writing to an acting director of the Philippines desk (of the State Department) and they have allowed or expressed their willingness or their permission to welcome back or allow President Marcos to leave the country and he could come back."

New administrator starting family program for nursing home

By DEBE GRAVES
Feature Writer

The hum of the battery powered wheelchair carrying Joeline Swanner is becoming familiar to residents of Golden Plains Care Center. As the new administrator of the 90-bed facility, Swanner has taken time from her duties to become acquainted with each of the 45 current residents.

Swanner tours through the color-coded halls stopping frequently to offer a hug, a smile and a friendly chat. It is soon evident that the affection she feels is returned by each person she stops to visit with.

Touching only briefly on the surgical procedure which left her paralyzed 22 years ago Swanner states, "This is a permanent fixture in my life, I accept it, and I do not allow it to limit me all that much. I finished raising my children from this chair, I went back to college in this chair and I have worked for years in this chair."

A Licensed Vocational Nurse, Swanner returned to college after raising her three children. She has attended Midland College, Stephen F. Austin State University and Eastern New Mexico University. Currently enrolled in local extension classes of Amarillo College, Swanner is striving for a business administration degree and a degree in art. She is a licensed administrator and brings experience from nursing homes in Tulla, Midland and Muleshoe to her position in Hereford.

"We have had a number of administrators since this facility opened but the staff has really been good about carrying on and providing continuous care in spite of the changes," observes Swanner. She expresses great enthusiasm for initiating some programs at the facility and for increasing the potential level of care provided.

"We are applying for skilled nursing home status which will enable us to care for medicare-medicare patients," she explains, "But one of the greatest advances in our program is our new family council."

The family council is a support group for new residents and their families. The primary objective of the group will be to provide education and counseling through problems of decision making in terms of entering a nursing care facility and in dealing with specific diseases and illnesses.

"Staffing policies and procedures will also be explained at the meeting but the best aspect of this group is that it will involve families and residents in the process of our nursing home," states Swanner.

She feels that this group will make necessary adjustments easier on new residents and their families.

"I have always loved nursing and I put 100 percent of myself into it because I always think if that were me or my family how would I want to be treated," she notes.

The current residents and their families will be given the details of the new council at family night festivities to be held today at 7 p.m.

Residents have been baking cookies and making other refreshments in preparation for a special evening of bluegrass music with their families as guests.

Swanner moved to Hereford from Muleshoe where her husband, Jim is administrator of a nursing home. The separation forced on the couple by job locations is just another challenge in the life of this busy woman. To keep their relationship strong and their love growing they take turns visiting one another on weekends but the secret of the success of this commuter's marriage may be found in the twinkle of Joeline Swanner's eyes when she makes a mid-week date to meet her husband in Friona for coffee.

Reagan's message renews effort to curb government

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, reporting on the state of the economy, today said the current recovery is on its way to becoming the longest peacetime expansion since World War II but warned of future threats to growth.

The president sounded some favorite themes in his annual economic message, contending his administration was engaged in a battle to curb government's desire to "overtax, overspend and overregulate."

While claiming successes in this effort, the president conceded there were major problems left to correct, singling out the government's burgeoning farm subsidy program, and the twin deficit demons which have plagued his administration, the huge federal budget deficit and the seemingly intractable trade deficit.

Reagan urged renewed efforts in Congress to attack these problems, but he repeated his opposition to reducing the deficit through tax increases and warned that erecting protectionist trade barriers would be the wrong way to reduce the trade imbalance.

"Protectionism is anti-growth. It would make us less competitive, not more," Reagan said. "It would hurt most Americans in the interest of helping a few."

The report made no changes in the administration's earlier economic forecast that the economy, as measured by the gross national product, would expand 3.2 percent this year, up from 2.5 percent growth in 1986, the slowest rate since the end of the 1981-82 recession.

Even this modest pickup in growth is contingent on a turnaround in the U.S. trade deficit, which has contributed to sluggish growth for the past two years.

Beryl Sprinkel, the president's chief economic adviser, said in a briefing on the new report, that the administration still expects the trade deficit to begin to improve in 1987. But he conceded, "I have not yet seen the string of numbers that have convinced me we are seeing that improvement."

Garcia appeal overruled

Benjamin Garcia Jr., convicted of murder and sentenced to 30 years in prison after a trial in 222nd District Court, has lost his appeal in the Seventh Supreme Judicial District, Amarillo, it was announced Wednesday.

The appeals court overruled Garcia's arguments that the trial court erred during the penalty stage of the trial when it gave the jury the parole law instruction mandated by the Code of Criminal Procedure. The appeals court affirmed the judgment, rendered last year in Dist. Judge Wesley Gulley's court.

Do you ever feel bored with life? Guess we all do at times, so the important thing to do is keep those times at a minimum. William Allen White, the noted Kansas journalist, once penned the following:

"I have never been bored an hour in my life. I get up every morning wondering what new strange glamorous thing is going to happen and it happens at fairly regular intervals. Lady Luck has been good to me and I fancy she has been good to every one. Only some people are dour, and when she gives them the come hither with her eyes, they look down or turn away and lift an eyebrow. But me, I give her a wink and away we go."

I think that bit of philosophy fits a host of people I know. I want to be sure that when Lady Luck gives me the come hither, (and she has for several decades) I have enough sense to continue winking and away we'll go.

James Roberts, in the Andrews County News, said that with all the hoopla ushering in the new year, the five cents a gallon state tax on gasoline almost slipped by unnoticed.

"The nickle increase brings the state tax on gasoline, diesel, and propane to 15 cents per gallon.

"But we bet you forgot that another increase on fuel goes into effect shortly to benefit lust.

"A new federal excise tax of one-tenth of one cent per gallon goes into effect shortly. The tax is supposed to go into the Leaking Underground Storage Tank Trust Fund which goes by the initials, L.U.S.T.

"When all of the new taxes are in place, total state and federal taxes on gasoline will amount to 24.1 cents per gallon."

Indoor marijuana jungle discovered

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Authorities said they found a jungle of marijuana growing inside a house they raided in northwest San Antonio.

Steven Allen Taylor, 29, was charged with possession of marijuana and placed in Bexar County Jail in lieu of $20,000 bond.

Capt. Jimmy Kopeck, commander of the Repeat Offenders Project, said the house had an elaborate system to grow hundreds of marijuana plants in the two bedrooms and part of the living room.

"It was like a jungle inside," Kopeck said of the 40 pounds of marijuana discovered in the home. The marijuana was said to be valued at $60,000.

Hope voiced against Justice's threat

AUSTIN (AP) — Attorney General Jim Mattox says he believes the state has a good chance of heading off the $800,000 in daily fines threatened by U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice over failure to carry out court-ordered prison reforms.

Mattox said a three-judge panel of the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals has agreed to hurry in hearing the state's case. He also voiced optimism that U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice's threatened fine won't be levied.

"We're very hopeful we will be able to avoid the penalties in this case," Mattox said Wednesday.

GMC accused of 'greenmail'

NEW YORK (AP) — Managers of some big pension funds say their pressure will force General Motors Corp. to think twice about its stockholders before taking any future action similar to GM's controversial buyout of H. Ross Perot.

Perot, the Texas billionaire and former GM director who had been increasingly critical of the automaker's recent performance, quit GM's board in early December after the company agreed to purchase his GM securities for about $700 million.

The managers — members of the Council of Institutional Investors and whose pension funds are major GM stockholders — were angered because they believed the deal resembled "greenmail," in which a company buys back one stockholder's shares at a premium without making the same offer to all holders.

Envoy Waite reported to be safe

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A previously unknown group said it abducted four teachers because they were carrying out "American intrigues," and the Anglican Church got assurances that envoy Terry Waite is safe and continuing his mission to win freedom for hostages.

In other developments Wednesday, the U.S. State Department in Washington announced restrictions on travel to Lebanon to force U.S. citizens to leave the country. The estimated 1,500 U.S. citizens in Lebanon will be given 30 days to leave before their passports become invalid.

Conditions in Lebanon have become so chaotic, with the abduction of 11 foreigners in the past two weeks, that no Americans can be considered safe in Lebanon, the U.S. government said.

Mexico asks for extension of loan

MEXICO CITY (AP) — In its struggle to win full backing of foreign banks for its new financial rescue plan, Mexico has asked for an extension of a $1.6 billion short-term loan due to expire this week, foreign bankers said.

The postponement request, sent last Friday to bankers, is a fresh sign of the difficulty Mexico has been having getting all its approximately 500 creditor banks to go along with the $7.7 billion loan package.

Meanwhile, the Bank of Boston, one of the major regional banks lending to Mexico that had been slow to accept the money package, said it has given its backing.

In Boston, bank spokesman Lloyd Wheeler said, "We did commit to be a participant in the package."

Holdovers from Berzhnev era ousted

MOSCOW (AP) — The Communist Party ousted two holdovers from the Brezhnev era from its highest ranks and cemented Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev's control over the powerful secretariat.

But a final resolution adopted Wednesday at the close of the two-day plenum of more than 300 Central Committee members did not include in detail Gorbachev's call for multiple-candidate and secret-ballot elections in regional party committees.

It only spoke in general terms of "the need to broaden inner-party democracy," suggesting continued division over what would represent a significant change in party procedure.

In an unusual move, the government press agency Novosti offered foreign correspondents interviews today to explain the results of the plenum and a senior editor confirmed there had been debate over the party elections issue.

Ag department explaining new law

AUSTIN (AP) — George Mitchell knows the new immigration law will affect some of his workers on his Beaumont land, but he said he's learning more about the law to be sure he won't violate it.

"I'm making sure I'm doing everything legal," Mitchell said Wednesday at a seminar explaining the law Congress passed last year.

Under the immigration law, employers can be penalized for knowingly hiring undocumented workers. The law also grants amnesty to illegal aliens living in the country continuously since before 1982.

Mitchell said he farms his land with documented and undocumented workers.

"I've got some that are going to be eligible under the amnesty (provision) and some that won't," Mitchell said.

Because the law will affect hundreds of Texas employers when it takes affect in early May, the Texas Department of Agriculture has organized statewide seminars to explain the law, said Olga Moya, spokeswoman for the seminars.

Moya said farmers, employers, producers and church and community leaders were invited to the seminars "so we can get the ball rolling on education."

A similar seminar was scheduled in Lubbock today and others are scheduled for El Paso on Friday; in Harlingen Saturday and Corpus Christi on Feb. 2.

Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower opened the seminar here telling the group his department will be monitoring the impact the new law has in Texas.

"We have a chance through these forums to get your concerns," Hightower said. "The purpose is to inject some Texas reality and take this rather cold body of regulations and impose some humanity on that."

Rep. Al Luna, D-Houston, who participated in the conference said there is a shortage of information on the law.

"Massive education is still required to prepare the people of Texas," Luna said.

One problem already surfacing is the lack of sufficient funds to cover the paperwork costs for illegal aliens eligible for U.S. citizenship, Luna said.

Although Congress authorized $420 million a year for carrying out the immigration reform legislation, the Immigration and Naturalization Service has only asked Congress for $138 million for fiscal year 1987, he said.

The budget request are only enough to cover costs of enforcement, he said.

"The INS proposed instead to pass off the cost of legalization to the undocumented themselves" by charging them a citizen application fee of $150 or $200, Luna said.

"The high fee added to the other legal fees that are going to be involved will limit legalization to only those eligible who can afford to purchase legalization status," he said.

No official request for Farm Aid III

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Two months after singer Willie Nelson announced his intention to hold a Farm Aid III concert in Lincoln this fall, Nebraska officials said they have yet to receive an official request.

Nelson said Nov. 21 in Austin, Texas, that he wanted the concert to be in Lincoln. He received immediate support from then-Gov. Bob Kerrey.

Tom Krepel, assistant to University of Nebraska-Lincoln Chancellor Martin Massengale, told the Omaha World-Herald that before officials could even consider allowing the fund-raising concert to be staged in Memorial Stadium, Nelson would have to submit a written proposal for the concert.

That proposal must list details, including potential concert dates and plans for liability insurance, security and food and drink, Krepel said.

Most elderly want more independence

Simple adjustments which prolong independence can mean a world of difference to the elderly.

Ted K. James, an occupational therapy professor in the Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center School of Allied Health, has seen it happen hundreds of times.

An example is Fred, an 80-year-old confined to a wheelchair. Fred was doing pretty well on his own except for difficulties in getting on and off the toilet.

"He had gone to all kinds of effort to take care of the problem," James said. "For awhile he tied a rope to the wall and pulled himself up, but he had to quit because he was pulling his arm out of socket."

After visiting briefly with Fred, James suggested installing a plastic extender on the toilet seat so Fred could slide from his wheelchair to the toilet and back without getting up.

"He immediately had a whole different outlook on life," James said. "Even the things he had just been complaining about were being seen in a different light."

Like most elderly people who spend most of their time alone at home, Fred was motivated to be independent, but he couldn't solve the problem on his own, James said. Increased life expectancy, divorce and a mobile society are resulting in more elderly people who are isolated in their homes, he said.

"It's necessary to reach these people who are alone," James said. "They are hard to find because they are already somewhat immobilized and isolated. They aren't the ones going to senior citizens' meetings and other activities."

"Most people have no desire to be dependent on others. They make lots of efforts not to be, but often they lack knowledge and the objectivity of an outside view."

"The solutions are often relatively simple," James said, "but, the person and the family often do not come up with them. When the children come over for a visit they usually don't focus on specific problems of the parents' daily activities, but on money or just visiting."

James said occupational therapists help people of all ages to overcome physical and mental problems which reduce their independence. Common areas include occupational and social functioning, hygiene and eating.

"When people are alone, they are really at risk," James said. "We hear stories about elderly people having emergencies in their homes and not being found for several days. No one was concerned enough to check on them."

But occupational therapy and other forms of health care are not the total solution for the isolated elderly, he said.

"The health system is just not that encompassing. Contact can't be made with every individual," James said. "Each of us needs to think in terms of responsibility. In a way we really are our brother's keeper and we should make an effort to be in contact with these people, to be their emergency number."

In fifth year with Dallas Mavericks

Aguirre has 10,000 points

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS (AP) — Mark Aguirre's 10,000th NBA point came on a hustling play which the temperamental small forward might not have made in the past.

Washington's Charles Jones stuffed a shot back in the Dallas Mavericks' face in the first quarter of Tuesday night's 118-113 victory for the Bulls.

Aguirre fought for the ball again then put it in the basket over the bewildered Jones.

In just five short years, Aguirre, a former All-American at DePaul, had become the first player on the expansion Mavericks to reach the 10,000 point plateau.

Referee Earl Strom stopped the game as the 17,007 fans in Reunion Arena applauded Aguirre and gave the ball to Dallas Coach Dick Motta for safekeeping.

The loss took out most of the joy for Aguirre, who was named this week to the Western Conference NBA All-Star team for the second time.

Aguirre said "getting 10,000 points doesn't mean an awful lot at the moment. I wish we'd gotten all that garbage — the 10,000 points and All-Star team — over sooner. To me, it's a distraction and I'm glad it's over with."

Aguirre has taken on a more business-like demeanor this season.

His celebrated feuds with Dallas Coach Dick Motta have been put on the back burner.

As a result, the Mavericks are leading the Midwest Division and were 11 games over .500 at mid-season.

"I'm very relaxed and dedicating myself to concentrating on my main goal — winning games and getting into the NBA championship series," Aguirre said.

Aguirre averaged 24.4 points per game over 406 games to quickly reach the 10,000 point goal.

He has been Dallas' scoring machine since his rookie year when he averaged 18.7 points per game as he broke into Motta's system which keys around scoring by the small forward.

Aguirre scored 13 points in 13 minutes in the 1984 All-Star game in Denver.

There was talk Aguirre might be traded in the offseason but owner Don Carter interceded and has proven to be a settling influence.

There has yet to be a public clash this season between Motta and Aguirre, who was benched two games last year for what Motta decided was a lack of hustle.

This season Aguirre is more active rebounding and playing defense.

"I have my priorities straight now," Aguirre said. "I'm just trying to concentrate on the business at hand. My goals are strictly team oriented."

"He's the best player on our team," said guard Rolando Blackman. "He deserves to be an All-Star and to get 10,000 points."

"He's also a better all-around player than he's ever been."

Seattle scores 125-101 victory over L.A. Lakers

By BILL BARNARD
AP Basketball Writer

The Seattle SuperSonics, expected to be one of the worst teams in the NBA this season, have convinced the Los Angeles Lakers that they aren't.

Tom Chambers, Xavier McDaniel and Dale Ellis — each averaging between 22 and 24 points per game — scored 37, 28 and 25 points, respectively, and the Sonics outscored the Lakers 65-46 Wednesday night en route to a 125-101 victory over the team with the best record in the NBA.

"They are a vastly improved team than earlier in the year, and they're going to make a lot of noise before it's all over," Lakers Coach Pat Riley said. "They certainly opened our eyes."

In other NBA game, it was Boston 132, Chicago 103; Philadelphia 109, Cleveland 107; Phoenix 131, Golden State 104; and Los Angeles Clippers

98, New Jersey 91.

Seattle used two 9-0 streaks in the second half to rout the Lakers after the Sonics' grabbed a 63-55 halftime lead.

Magic Johnson had 24 points and 11 rebounds for the Lakers and James Worthy added 20 points. Kareem Abdul-Jabbar had 18 points and 11 rebounds, but he was scoreless in the first half.

Clippers 98, Nets 91

The Clippers beat New Jersey for only their third victory in 36 games.

Los Angeles, 6-36 for the season, forced a season-high 32 turnovers by the Nets, whose 11-31 mark is the second-worst in the NBA.

The Clippers took control of the game in the fourth quarter with an 8-1 spurt that gave them an 88-77 lead with 5:25 remaining.

Darnell Valentine had 20 points and Kenny Fields 18 for the Clippers, who snapped a five-game losing streak. Buck Williams had 17 points and 16 rebounds for New Jersey. Celtics 132, Bulls 103

Boston hit 29 of 43 field-goal attempts en route to a 71-46 halftime lead, then coasted over Chicago.

Larry Bird and Dennis Johnson scored 26 points each and Kevin McHale added 22 for the Celtics, all in the first three quarters.

Michael Jordan, who also sat out the fourth period, led the Bulls with 27 points.

76ers 109, Cavaliers 107

Philadelphia survived a 13-point third quarter and Andrew Toney scored 14 of his 21 points in the final period against Cleveland.

Cliff Robinson scored 23 for Philadelphia and Charles Barkley added 14 points and 14 rebounds despite being ejected from the game with two technical fouls in the third period. Rookie Johnny Newman scored 22 points for Cleveland.

Suns 131, Warriors 104

Phoenix beat Golden State for the fourth straight time this season as Larry Nance scored 29 points.

Nance had 19 while the Suns grabbed a 65-49 halftime advantage and went on to lead by as many as 29 points in the fourth quarter. The Warriors, who have lost five straight, scored only 17 points in the second quarter.

Ed Pinckney finished with 19 points. Chris Mullin paced the Warriors with 21 points.

Expected to be a struggle

NFL TV negotiations to start

By RICK WARNER
AP Sports Writer

The Super Bowl is over, but the NFL's biggest battle of the year is just beginning.

The National Football League is about to start serious negotiations on new television contracts that will have long-range implications for the sport and the three major networks.

The league's five-year, $2.1-billion deal with the networks expires after Sunday's Pro Bowl. A new agreement is expected to be reached by March 1, but not without a struggle.

The networks, which have lost an estimated $150 million on NFL telecasts over the past two years, want the league to reduce its television fees.

"We can't continue to lose millions of dollars a year on the NFL," said Neal Pilson, president of CBS Sports.

But the networks aren't the only ones pleading poverty. The NFL says it can't afford to cut its television fees because several teams are already losing money, and the network would increase if valuable TV revenue is lost.

"There's no question that the networks lost money on the NFL this season," said Cleveland Browns President Art Modell, who will negotiate for the league along with Commissioner Pete Rozelle.

"We don't want the networks to lose money, but we don't want to lose money, either. I can't go back to the owners and ask them to take a cut-back."

Bears' safety said watching Super Bowl was too painful

By KEN PETERS
AP Sports Writer

HONOLULU (AP) — Dave Duerson could hardly watch the Super Bowl. It was, he says, just too painful.

"I watched a little of the second half," the Chicago Bears' safety said. "I felt a lot of emotion. I wanted to be there."

"It wasn't jealousy, but a void. I guess it really hit me when I saw Pete Rozelle handing the Super Bowl trophy to the Giants. Up until that time, we were still the champions."

A year ago, the Bears were handed the Super Bowl trophy after they manhandled the New England Patriots in the same fashion the New York Giants dominated the Denver Broncos last Sunday.

"We had the people to be back there again this year," said Duerson, a starter on the NFC all-star team for Sunday's Pro Bowl matchup with the AFC.

"But this year, the Giants had that hunger all year long. They also had fun, like we did last year."

"Fun's important for a football team; the team that's having fun is going to end up a winner."

Duerson, being a defensive player, admitted that he liked what he saw of the third quarter of the Giants-Broncos game.

"I was watching when the Giants' defense started to take control," he said. "They were doing a very good job."

Another Chicago Pro Bowl player, linebacker Mike Singletary, said he also watched the Super Bowl with mixed emotions.

"It hurt a little to turn it on," he said. "But I was proud of the way the game was played."

"I was happy for (Giants linebackers) Harry Carson and Lawrence Taylor. I know they worked and sacrificed, which you have to do if you win the Super Bowl."

Asked about the Giants' chances of repeating, Singletary said: "I don't think the Super Bowl champion has to be deposed, if the team is smart enough to keep it together."

"I'm sorry we couldn't prove that you can come back and win it again. We had so many things happen to us this season."

"And you can't let the distractions, the media, all the distractions that come after a Super Bowl season, separate the team, the coaches, the management."

Duerson said he believes the NFC, whose teams have won five of the last six Super Bowls and outscored the AFC representative by a combined score of 123-46 in the most recent three title games, plays more hard-nosed football than the AFC.

He said one difference is that the NFC is run-oriented while the AFC prefers to pass.

"That means the NFC is more physical on offense. I think that probably carries over to defense," Duerson said. "The top NFC teams are a little more aggressive, a little tougher on defense than the AFC."

In the 1970s and early 1980s, as the NFL soared in popularity, the networks made millions on their pro football telecasts. But in the past two years, lower ratings and a soft advertising market have turned the profits into losses.

Despite the losses, none of the networks are ready to abandon the NFL. Pro football still outdraws most other sports telecasts, and the largely male audience remains attractive to many advertisers.

"The NFL is a hallmark franchise, and we'll do everything we can to retain it," said Dennis Swanson, president of ABC Sports. "We just can't continue to lose money on it."

If the major networks refuse to budge, the NFL could try to increase its revenue by awarding a package of games to a cable network or syndication company. The league already has discussed the option with Home Box Office, Turner Broadcasting System, ESPN, Fox Broadcasting Co. and the USA network.

"We would like to preserve the three-network relationship," Modell said. "But because of our revenue situation, we may have to consider an alternative."

NBC Sports President Arthur Watson said adding a fourth network would be a mistake.

"That's further dilution and oversaturation of the product," he said. "It may be good for the short term, but I doubt its effectiveness over the long term. The basis of the NFL is fan support. If you go to cable, a lot of people won't be able to see those games. And that could lead to a backlash."

Still, Fox Broadcasting and others are openly courting the NFL. The fledgling network, owned by international media baron Rupert Murdoch, would gain needed exposure by acquiring some of the league's games.

The final year of ABC's contract included Monday Night Football and a total of five games on Thursday, Friday and Sunday nights. Those non-Monday night games are the focus of the fourth-network package.

Fox President Jamie Kellner said his affiliated stations could showcase NFL games better than ABC, which has limited flexibility in prime time. He said the telecasts could include pregame and postgame shows.

Pay cable systems such as HBO emphasize their lack of commercials.

"Without commercials, you have a shorter game," said Bob Greenway, vice president of sports programming at HBO. "That's important because many people feel the games are too long."

NFL owners and television executives have a major stake in the new contracts, but they aren't alone. NFL players are also anxiously awaiting the outcome, which could have a direct impact on their salaries.

Information about your changing telephone service from Gary Stevens, Manager-Community Relations

SWBT plans for emergencies to ensure public safety

No one likes to think about the unthinkable. However, to protect public safety, Southwestern Bell Telephone employees not only think about disasters, they plan for them.

Under the direction of the company's National Security Emergency Preparedness (NSEP) group, employees of Southwestern Bell Telephone stand ready to provide telecommunications services in the event of natural or man-made disasters, national emergencies or critical government requests.

The NSEP group was created in 1984 as a result of divestiture and works closely with other Regional Bell Operating Companies to provide comprehensive emergency services formerly directed by AT&T.

In Texas — a state known for its unpredictable and violent weather — Southwestern Bell Telephone employees make every possible effort to maintain telephone services during floods, tornadoes, hurricanes or ice storms. Likewise, they do all in their power to restore service after man-made calamities such as large-scale accidents.

Because thousands of lives may depend on Southwestern Bell Telephone's quick response in an emergency, employees participate in annual full-scale exercises designed to test the company's ability to recover from disaster.

Drill tests employees, emergency procedures

The most recent drill, held last month, challenged Texas employees to restore telephone service after fictional tornadoes and floods knocked out telephone service in several communities across the state.

For eight hours, employees charted strategies that quickly re-established service to the affected locations. As the day-long exercise progressed, the situation changed — just as it would in a real disaster — requiring employees to adapt their plans and methods of operation in response.

As a result of the exercise, the company now has a better idea of how its employees and procedures might fare in a real crisis and is adapting its plans accordingly.

When not preparing for disaster, Southwestern Bell Telephone employees may also be involved in filling special requests from the federal government. In the past, this has included providing telecommunications services for the president, NASA and visiting dignitaries.

For its outstanding service to the government, the company has earned five official commendations, including one from the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA).

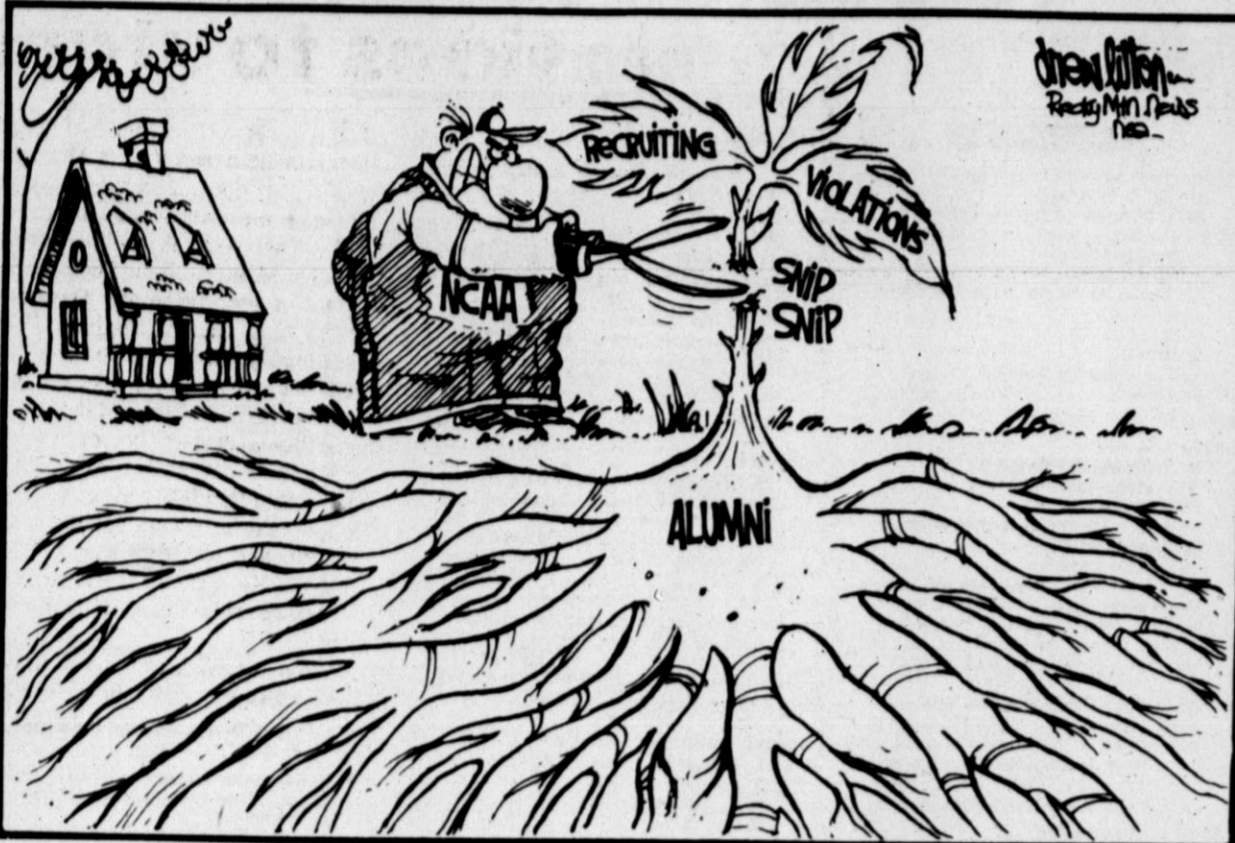

Although accolades are welcome, the company will never become complacent about emergency procedures and will continue to look for ways to improve crisis response time. The men and women of Southwestern Bell Telephone believe that when it comes to public safety, nothing should be left to chance.

Some Dallas Cowboys find time for hunting, fishing

By ED HOLDER
Port Arthur News
PORT ARTHUR, Texas (AP) — Hunting seasons always seem far too short, especially for the working guy who has to squeeze in his hunts on weekends and holidays.

But next time one of them feels like complaining about the few days he gets to hunt, he should think about football players and coaches.

Many of them love to hunt but rarely get the chance because the majority of hunting seasons fall in the middle of their busiest time of the year.

Alan Lowry, special teams coach for the Dallas Cowboys, was in the Port Arthur area this past season to make one of the few duck hunts he has been able to go on during the past several years.

He had more time for hunting this year, but it was chance, not choice, because the Cowboys didn't make the playoffs.

Lowry, who lives in Dallas, and friend Sidney Allison of Woodville, were guests at the Los Patos hunting lodge west of Sabine Pass. The lodge is owned by Roland Angelle and Walter Umphrey of Port Arthur.

It was a double treat for Lowry because he has had to restrict his activities even during the period since the season ended for the Cowboys.

He has been recovering from phlebitis, an inflammation of the veins in one of his legs. He got that while making the long flight to London late last summer when the Cowboys played the Chicago Bears in a pre-season game.

Lowry likes both hunting and fishing, but he gets to fish far more than he hunts.

"Quite a few of our guys are sportsmen, but most are fishermen because they get their time off when they can fish instead of hunt," he said.

The team and coaches still don't get as much time off, even during the summer, as most people think.

"We have an off-season program which the players do on their own. It isn't mandatory, but nearly all of them participate. They aren't on a schedule, and can do their daily workouts whenever they like, but it still takes a lot of time," he said.

No NFL dynasties are happening during 1980s

By JOHN NADEL
AP Sports Writer
PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — History says the New York Giants and Denver Broncos will be watching next year's Super Bowl on television. To that, Giants Coach Bill Parcells says hogwash.

"I don't think history means one thing in football," Parcells said Monday, a day after his team's 39-20 victory over the Broncos in the Super Bowl. "Next year, it's a new game. If we had a game today, yesterday wouldn't mean a thing."

Parcells might find out differently next year. If Sunday means anything, in terms of past Super Bowls, look for, say, Seattle, Cleveland or Cincinnati to face maybe the Los Angeles Rams, Minnesota or New Orleans in next year's big game at San Diego.

Eight different teams have played in the last four Super Bowls. General Manager George Young of the Giants sees such a development as no coincidence.

"After the Super Bowl, there'll be the dynastic stories," he said. "It ain't so. It's hard for a dynasty. Competition is keener. The system is set up to have parity, if possible. I think it enhances the reputation of the Steelers, who repeated twice."

The Steelers are the last team to repeat as Super Bowl champions, winning in 1979 and 1980.

MALONES SCORE BIG
WASHINGTON (AP) — It wasn't billed as such but it turned to be Malone Day in an NBA game Dec. 16.

The Utah Jazz came to town to play the Bullets. The Jazz had Karl Malone in their lineup and he pumped in 24 points. The Bullets countered with a pair of Malones, Moses and Jeff. Moses accounted for 38 points and Jeff had 29. All told the Washington Malones had 67 points to only 24 for Utah's Malone.

However, Utah still managed to win the game, 109-106.

sion, but it hasn't been in the National Football League.

Three years ago, everyone was talking dynasty after the Los Angeles Raiders crushed the Washington Redskins 38-9 in the Super Bowl.

Two years ago, it was the San Francisco 49ers, who clobbered Miami 38-16. And last year, it was the Chicago Bears, after a 46-10 thrashing of New England.

And now, the Giants.
Young doesn't figure he has much time to enjoy his team's Super Bowl victory.

"The minute the game ends, the struggle begins for next year," he said. "You're only as smart as your last win."

Why has it been so tough for Super Bowl teams to get back to the big game? There are many reasons, according to several football people.

"You have more communication than ever," Young said. "People know more about beating the teams on top. The late draft (of college talent) has contributed. The winners choose late, the losers early. There are fewer blunders."

"Also, you have to be a little lucky. Things have to fall your way."

John Madden, who coached the then-Oakland Raiders to the Super Bowl championship 10 years ago and was the CBS-TV color commentator for this year's Super Bowl, said he didn't think it couldn't be reduced to one factor.

"It's very popular to say the winners aren't as hungry, maybe celebrate too much," he said. "That's probably true. But there are other things."

"The team that wins the Super Bowl plays more games than anyone else. They get beaten down, they play with injuries. They have a shorter off-season, they're not ready."

"That happened to us. It happened to the Bears. A lot of people think the winners get fat-headed. I think that's wrong."

The Bears, Madden pointed out, were a different team this year.

"They lose two guys (wide receiver Dennis McKinnon and cornerback Leslie Frazier) from the get-go because of injuries. Then they lose their defensive coordinator (Buddy Ryan, who became head coach of the Philadelphia Eagles).

"Then they lose their quarterback (Jim McMahon).

"They didn't have the same guys. They didn't have the same team."

Modest upturn expected in Texas economy

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas' economy will start to recover from an oil-related recession in the first quarter of 1987, although Houston will still experience difficulties, a Baylor University economics professor is predicting.

Overall growth of the state is expected at 1.6 percent per annum over the first two years of this cyclical upswing, says Ray Perryman in a forecast released Tuesday.

Texas' oil-related recession ended late last year, he says.

"The recovery is led primarily by service-oriented industries, with manufacturing, construction, and mineral extraction remaining very sluggish," according to Perryman's report.

The professor presented a report on his Texas Economic Forecast at an annual meeting of the Texas Bankers Association.

The report says the Houston area is likely to experience difficulty in the next two years although other major Texas cities will fare better.

"Economic development efforts give ample cause for optimism over a more extended time horizon, but such measures cannot hope to bring 'overnight success' for the (Houston) region," he says.

Of the Dallas-Fort Worth area, the report says, "Because of its concentration of defense, electronics, information, and service industries, th Metroplex offers a diversified complex of business activity which should perform quite well during the transitional phase of the state economy."

The report also offers some forecasts for the Austin-San Antonio area.

"While neither area can expect to duplicate the performance patterns of early 1980s, both should enjoy a modest period of prosperity. Both of these cities already enjoy substantial diversification in their industrial base and, hence, should consistently grow at levels above those observed for overall state business activity during the next several years."

Perryman also said the floor in the number of oil rigs currently operating in the state occurred in the third quarter of 1986, as modest increases in drilling activity are presently being observed.

"Nevertheless, oil exploration is projected to be quite limited, with the peak level of 1988 being only approximately two-thirds of the already sluggish pace that was prevalent at the end of 1985," Perryman's report says.

The forecast for the price of oil calls for the contract price of West Texas Intermediate Crude fluctuating in a range of $13 to $16 per barrel over the next several quarters with gradual upward movements beyond that point.

Presenting Program

morning. Maldonado gave a slide presentation and explained how the satellite program operates.

Horticulture offers enterprise diversity

Horticultural crops have made inroads in Texas agriculture over the past five years due to declining revenues from traditional agricultural enterprises.

Because of economic conditions, many producers have had to diversify their operations to maintain profitability, points out Dr. Calvin Lyons, horticulturist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. During this time horticultural crops such as blueberries, grapes and vegetables have played a significant role in the diversification process. As a result, Texas horticultural industries have experienced rapid growth.

"Horticulture consists of many factors which make it unique to other types of agricultural production," says Lyons. "Perhaps the most obvious of these is the diversity of horticultural products, including vegetables, ornamental plants, and fruits and nuts."

All of these commodities are produced under intensive cropping systems that usually require high capital investments and labor inputs. Intensive management is another key element associated with producing horticultural crops, says the horticulturist.

"Marketing is perhaps the most critical element in the profitable production of horticultural crops," emphasizes Lyons. "Unlike traditional agricultural enterprises, horticulture does not have established buyers or accumulators, such as livestock auctions, gins and elevators. Successful horticultural production relies heavily on the producers' ability to identify appropriate market outlets."

Most markets will not absorb an increased volume of a product without a corresponding price reduction. Often small crop acreages will be quite profitable in an area, but if over-planting occurs, no one makes money. Lyons advises potential producers to study markets carefully and to select those crops or marketing seasons that are not in oversupply.

In selecting a crop to grow, potential producers must consider a number of things, including crops adapted to the area, market outlets, labor availability, soil and water suitability; and capital outlay.

"When producing horticultural crops, it is wise to remember both size and diversity," says Lyons. "Often it is the small-to-medium-sized producer who is making a profit by doing much of the labor and marketing himself. When the size of the operation reaches the point that additional labor and management have to be hired, profitability often goes down."

"On the same note, it is probably best not to put all your eggs in one horticultural 'basket,'" adds Lyons. "Producing more than one crop gives you a better opportunity to weather the times when a particular crop does not do well."

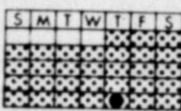

County Extension agents can assist growers in selecting the best crop for a particular area, notes the horticulturist.

POLLY'S POINTERS Helping cats swallow pills

By Polly Fisher

DEAR POLLY — Do you have any Pointers for giving pills to cats? We have an old cat who must now receive a daily pill and we're having a terrible time getting her to take it. — JANIE

DEAR JANIE — Different cats will succumb to different techniques, so here are a few ideas.

First, the most direct way is often the best. If you can handle your cat fairly easily, you should have few problems with this method after practicing it a few times.

Pull the cat's head back gently, open her mouth by pressing gently on the back corners of her jaw and place the pill back in the mouth. When the cat closes her mouth, she should swallow the pill readily. Swallowing can be encouraged by massaging the cat's throat gently or by blowing a brief puff of air into the cat's face (most cats respond to this by swallowing). Many people coat the pill with butter so it slides down more easily.

Another solution is to crush the pill and mix it with the cat's food.

Or, bury the pill inside a morsel of raw ground beef. If your cat really loves this treat, she may be so delighted with it that she will gulp down beef and pill in one swallow. However, more than one cat has been known to carefully eat the beef from around the pill, then daintily spit the pill itself on the floor.

Many cats are fond of peanut butter. Coat the pill with peanut butter before offering it to her.

DEAR POLLY — Is honey high in sodium? Can it be eaten on a salt-free diet? — ANDREW

DEAR ANDREW — According to USDA figures, 1 tablespoon of honey has approximately 1 milligram of sodium. This is a very insignificant amount and should be safe for anyone on a controlled sodium diet. Sugar and molasses are also insignificant sources of sodium, as are artificial sweeteners. Of course, honey and sugar products have their own dietary pitfalls, but that is the answer to a different question! — POLLY

DR. GOTT Hormone unlikely to cause changes

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Two years ago I received an injection of the male hormone testosterone to help control fibrocystic breast disease. Soon after, I noticed an increase in body and facial hair. My periods also last longer and my premenstrual symptoms are more severe. Could one shot have produced all these changes? I'm 35 and otherwise healthy.

DEAR READER — Testosterone by injection usually is given in a long-acting form whose effect lasts for several weeks. Depending on the amount of male hormone you were given, you certainly may have developed increased facial hair and other changes. However, any continuing changes probably don't result from the injection you received two years ago. Ask your doctor about this.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Why do my fingers get numb and turn white when they get cold?

DEAR READER — When exposed to cold, blood vessels in the extremities tend to constrict in order to shunt circulation to the body's interior, thereby conserving heat. This constriction causes blanching and numbness in proportion to the degree of cold.

Some people's vessels overrespond to modest changes in the outside air; these people usually are cold sensitive. Still others have Raynaud's phenomenon — severe vasoconstriction that is unrelated to cold. Raynaud's phenomenon often accompanies circulatory disorders and diseases of the blood vessels. It is usually followed by a rebound reaction, which consists of tingling and flushing of the extremities.

DEAR DR. GOTT — My son is 43, can only walk with a walker and often falls. His doctor has given him many tests, but can't find anything wrong. Is it possible that he has M.S.?

DEAR READER: Yes, it is. Multiple sclerosis is a neurological disease of unknown cause that produces weakness as well as abnormal sensations. Other nerve disorders also can cause difficulty walking, however, so your son should ask his doctor for a referral to a neurologist in order to establish a precise diagnosis.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I recently had an operation for "trigger thumb." I've had carpal-tunnel syndrome for years. Could this could have led to the thumb problem?

DEAR READER — Trigger thumb is a malfunction of the thumb joint due to joint disease or weak tendons. It causes a temporary partial dislocation of the thumb. Carpal tunnel syndrome is nerve compression caused by a constricting band of fibrous tissue at the wrist. Both conditions are treated by surgery to correct the abnormality, but there is no evidence that the two ailments are related.

If you're having an operation, you should know all you can about it. Dr. Gott's new Health Report, AN INFORMED APPROACH TO SURGERY, covers everything from second opinions to outpatient surgery. For your copy, send $1 and your name and address to P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to mention the title.

Woman's Health PELVIC INFLAMMATORY DISEASE

By Harry S. Jonas, M.D., President, The American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists

It may seem like the 1980s is the decade for learning about new, strange sexually transmitted diseases—chlamydia, pelvic inflammatory disease (PID), and AIDS, PID, however, is not a new disease but the unfortunate result of other diseases.

PID can be caused by a number of culprits. Perhaps the most common are cases of sexually transmitted diseases such as chlamydia or gonorrhea that are not treated early enough.

There are ways to prevent PID. Condoms are an excellent way to prevent some sexually transmitted diseases, and some studies have shown that the birth control pill lowers the chance of developing PID.

Once these organisms reach the upper part of the pelvic area, they can cause infections in the uterus, fallopian tubes, and ovaries, which can have disastrous results. Pelvic inflammation can cause blocked tubes and scarring, a major cause of infertility and ectopic pregnancy.

Because this disease is caused by different things, its symptoms also may vary and can appear suddenly or develop gradually. The most common symptoms are lower back pain, abdominal pain or cramping, fever, abnormal vaginal discharge, and tenderness of the pelvic organs.

Single, free copies of "Sexually Transmitted Diseases" (p-009) are available by sending a stamped, self-addressed, business size envelope along with the name of the booklet to: The American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists, Resource Center, 600 Maryland Ave., SW, Washington, DC 20024.

dominal pain or cramping, fever, abnormal vaginal discharge, and tenderness of the pelvic organs. All of these symptoms can be caused by other problems, so diagnosis of PID can be tricky, and may require a variety of tests, including diagnostic surgery.

PID can be treated with antibiotics most of the time. If the damage has gone too far, surgery may be necessary. Any partner of a woman with PID also should be tested for possible sexually transmitted diseases and receive antibiotics to prevent reinfection.

Home fires a growing danger

WASHINGTON (AP) — Fires traced to home heating equipment are killing a growing number of Americans each year, a trend which is causing concern at the federal Consumer Product Safety Commission.

While the total number of deaths in home fires declined between 1980 and 1985, fatalities in blazes related to heating equipment rose, the agency reports.

"Apparently, the increased popularity of area heating has contributed to the increase of specific safety problems related to this type of heating," said Commission Chairman Terrence M. Scanlon.

Portable heaters, especially the electric and kerosene varieties, are playing a major role in this increase in fatalities, the agency reported.

Solid fuel heating systems — woodstoves and fireplaces — also played a large role, with only a small number of fatalities in fires related to central heating systems.

According to statistics collected by his agency, 5,025 Americans died in house fires in 1985, a decline from the 5,450 fatalities recorded in 1980. But during that same period, deaths in fires associated with heating equipment rose from 830 to 1,030.

Improper installation is the most common source of fires from wood-burning equipment, reported Commissioner Carol Dawson, noting that careless chimney connections are a big source of trouble.

Never use gasoline in a kerosene heater, Scanlon warned, for that can cause an explosion. And, buy only from a dealer who can certify that his product is 1-K kerosene. Scanlon also urges buying a blue kerosene can for storage of the fuel. Don't store kerosene in a gasoline can. That can lead to confusion.

Don't use kerosene heaters in a closed room, always leave a door open or window ajar for ventilation.

Dawson says operate electric heaters at least three feet away from combustible materials. Most of them should be used only on the floor, never placed on cabinets or other furniture.

Avoid using extension cords with electric heaters, but if they must be used, buy cords marked No. 12 or No. 14 AWG. These are heavy cords, often marked for use with air conditioners. Do not use cords marked No. 16 or No. 18, as they are too light, the safety commission warns.

The Consumer Product Safety Commission has a variety of consumer information materials on fire and heater safety, available by writing to the CPSC, Washington, D.C., 20207. Among those available are:

- "What You Should Know About Smoke Detectors."
- "Furnaces: Product Safety Fact Sheet No. 79."
- "Space Heaters, Product Safety Fact Sheet No. 34."
- "Coal and Wood Burning Stoves: Product Safety Fact Sheet No. 92."
- "Kerosene Heaters: Product Safety Fact Sheet No. 79."
- "Caution: Choosing and Using Your Gas Space Heater."
- "Safety Alert: Safety Rules for Using Kerosene heaters."
- "Safety Alert: Chimneys."

CHILD SAFETY HAZARDS

- Open windows
- Shallow wading pools
- Non flame-retardent clothing
- Appliances plugged in within child's reach
- Old fashioned "safety gates"
- Lead paint chips
- Goodies stored over a stove
- Crib toys stretched across cribs
- Electrical toys for older children
- Pacifiers that are too small
- Failure to check wind-up swing weight capacities

Even the most common household items can threaten the safety — or the life — of a small child. If children are often in your home, make sure that none of these hazards exist.

PREVENTING JET LAG

NEW YORK (AP) — Airline "jet lag" is like the weather, notes Travel Agent magazine. "Everybody complains, but nobody does anything about it."

However, the international travel industry journal offers some tips for the prevention of jet lag, which can also be caused by crossing of time zones by ship or train.

Travelers should decide whether they want to adjust to the new time zone, it says, advising that on trips of less than a week it is better to stay on "home time." Other suggestions include:

- Prepare for a westbound trip by going to bed and getting up one hour later the day before departure, or vice versa before heading east.
- Use a short-term, mild sedative before retiring the first night to combat insomnia.
- Don't rely on the use of alcohol or pharmacological agents to induce sleep while in flight.

Ann Landers

Second opinion too late

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Please publish the enclosed. Now I wish we had seen a letter like it a few years ago.

The time we lost because we didn't know made life much more difficult for our little girl. Thank you.—K.M., M.D. in Maryland

A LETTER TO OUR FORMER PEDIATRICIAN

As an infant with a bright smile she would gleefully shriek. But the shrieking went on four hours, too loud and too shrill.

As first-time parents we were concerned, but you reassured us, "She's going to be a singer."

When a little older, she didn't babble or coo like other babies. She communicated with us through warm and engaging eye contact, staring at our faces as if searching for meaning. You complimented her by saying, "She's going to be a thinker."

Later, she loved to roll over, crawl, and play with her toys. We reported to you how we had to clap our hands loudly to get her attention. You insisted, "How wonderful that she concentrates so intently on what she is doing."

Although she communicated with us in charming, non-verbal ways, her spoken language did not develop as soon as we had expected. The few words that did emerge were distorted and blurred. You told us,

"Give her time."

Your kindness while sharing our daughter's first 18 months will never be forgotten. But you did not take seriously our concerns about her unusually loud voice, the absence of normal babbling, her inattention and delayed and distorted speech.

On another physician's advice we took our daughter to be tested. The diagnosis: A serious bilateral hearing loss. We hope you will learn something from our sad experience. We did.—The Family in X-Ville

DEAR DR. M.: Here's your letter — one of many I have received from readers who, unfortunately, didn't get a second opinion as soon as they should have.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I was shocked to read in your reply to the Buffalo reader that you called a receptacle in a restroom a sink.

I was taught that the one in the bathroom is a lavatory and the one in the kitchen is a sink. Occasionally I hear the word sink used improperly but I did not expect it of you.

I have been reading your column since 1955 and enjoy it immensely. I am 92 years of age, but not OLD — A Cactus in Texas

DEAR CAC.: I grew up in Sioux City, Iowa, where a lavatory is a washroom and a sink is a basin that has running water, no matter what room it's in.

If anyone wants to look up "sink" in Webster's Third New International Dictionary, don't bother. I did and it was of no help. I found precious little about sinks but a half page on "sink" as in ships. Frankly, I was sunk.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: A few days ago I bought a hot dog in a well-known fast food restaurant. Just as I was about to take my second bite I noticed a bug that had been baked into the bun. I complained and was given a second hot dog free.

That experience made me extra cautious. Since then I have been "looking" and have found a bug in a loaf of bread and two bugs in a soda cracker.

I understand that bugs do get into grain and they are probably in all or most of the flour purchased for bakery use, but they should be sifted out. Please pass the word so the complaints are noted and acted upon. —M.M.C. in Torrance, Calif.

DEAR CA.: The only thing worse than finding a bug in a bun is finding half a bug. Thanks for the tip. I hope we didn't spoil too many breakfasts out there.

Ways with Wine by David Hutchins

THE BIG CHILL

Nearly everyone has experienced the following situation: Family or friends have been invited over for a small celebration. When the doorbell rings, the realization hits that the champagne has not been chilled. What to do? Many people put the bottle in the freezer for a quick chill. This route demands the use of a timer, however, since champagne can freeze and explode the bottle in as little as fifteen minutes.

Instead, put the champagne into an ice-filled bucket with water. It should be ready in a mere twenty minutes. If the guests cannot wait, offer a martini. Remember, champagne should always be chilled in the warmest part of the refrigerator. In fact, the best place for it is in the vegetable bin.

The next time you stop by THE STORE to buy some champagne or when you feel free to ask us any questions you may have. What to serve with special foods...how to serve them or what glasses to use?
