3 to 4 inches blanket area

More snow predicted here

Staff and AP Report
Wet, heavy snow fell over Hereford and the Texas Panhandle Thursday and continued today and the powerful storm threatened to dump more snow through tonight.

Hereford had recorded 3 to 4 inches of snowfall by 7 a.m. today and heavy snowflakes started falling at mid-morning. The weather bureau called for a 50 percent chance of snow through the day with accumulations of 2 to 4 inches in the Panhandle area.

Hereford had an overnight low of 27 degrees and a high of 30 Thursday. Temperatures are predicted in the mid 20s tonight with a 30 percent chance of snow Saturday and a high expected near 30. Driving was hazardous on Hereford streets this morning. Schools did not have to worry about the weather conditions for their students today as classes were closed for a teacher in-service day.

A winter storm warning was in effect today for all of Texas west of a line from Montague to Jacksboro to Stephenville to Brady. Forecasters warned that many areas would get 3 to 5 inches of snow during the day.

The snow was expected to let up from the west by late afternoon, the National Weather Service said.

A travelers advisory was also issued for a vast area of North Texas. That advisory covered North Texas west of a line from Sherman to Fort Worth to Granbury.

Forecasters said the snow was expected to miss Dallas, but warned that heavy thunderstorms might affect the area during the day.

Amarillo got more than 3 inches, Lubbock 2 and up to 5 inches fell on communities such as Post south of Lubbock and Abilene had 3 inches of snow on the ground, the National Weather Service said.

Heavy sleet was falling in the Brownwood area early today.

Snowfall in the Permian Basin had tapered off by dawn today, but forecasters said another 1 to 3 inches of snow was possible in that area.

As much as 5 more inches may fall before the storm moves out by Saturday, but the forecasters warn that another snow-carrying storm may be in the works for later this weekend.

Overnight temperatures dipped into the low 20s in portions of West Texas and into the mid to lower 30s over most of North Texas, and today's highs aren't expected to rise much over the middle 30s, the weather service said. The cold, combined with chilly winds, will keep roads glazed and dangerous.

One person died about 8:30 a.m. in a one-vehicle accident on U.S. 385 six miles north of Brownfield, the Department of Public Safety said. Lubbock police, meanwhile, reported two dozen minor accidents, none with serious injuries.

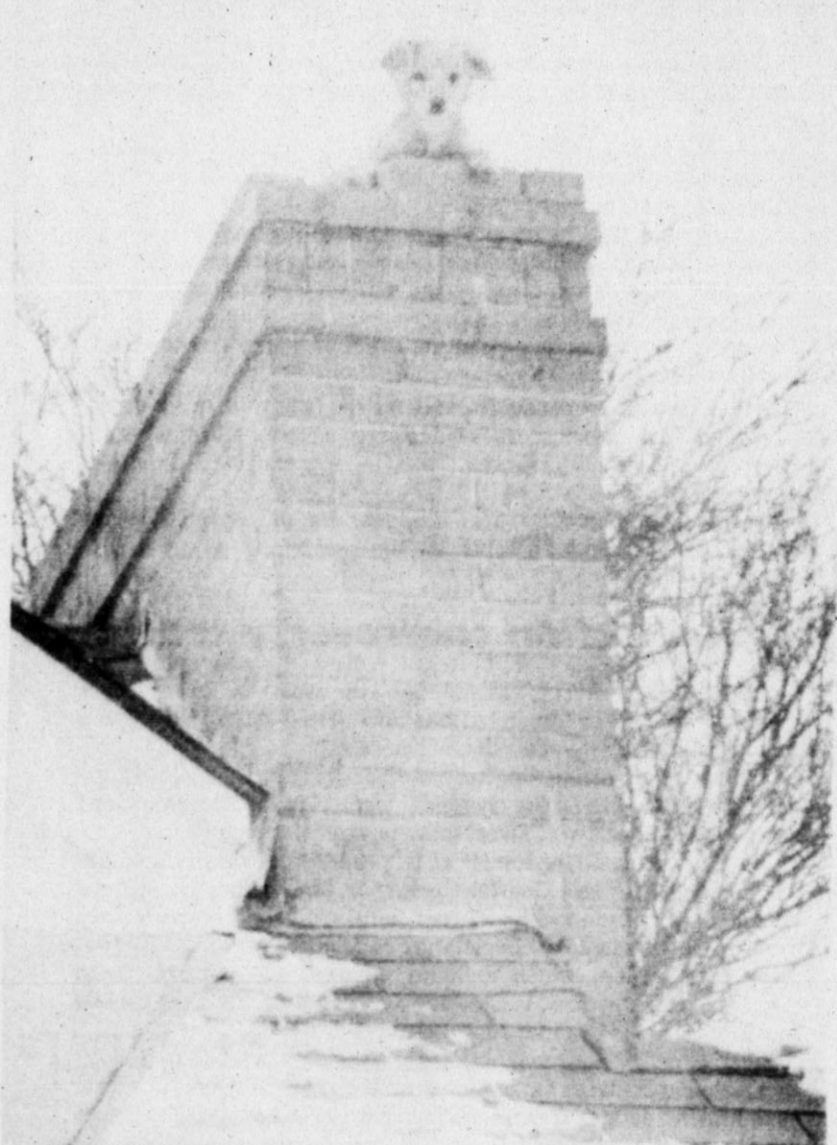

Weather service specialist Robert Robledo in Amarillo said the snow ranged from southern Oklahoma, across the entire Texas Panhandle and into the South Plains and eastern New Mexico.

Fog was reported in Lubbock at 2 p.m. Thursday and continued throughout the evening, with visibility dropping to one-eighth of a mile by 7 p.m. Fog was also reported in Ralls, Tulia and Wolfforth.

The low visibility prompted Southwest Airlines to cancel two of its early-morning flights out of Lubbock Thursday, although it was back on schedule later in the day.

Traffic bogged down on Interstate 40 in Amarillo because of a collision involving as many as 20 cars, and police had to close the route for a while to clear the vehicles involved. No major injuries were reported.

An upper-level low pressure system moved into the area from northeastern New Mexico early Thursday and snow began falling around 2 a.m. as temperatures dipped below freezing. The mercury hovered in the 30s all afternoon.

How long has it been since an incumbent vice president was elected president?

If George Bush makes it in 1988, he'll be the first incumbent VP to do so in 152 years.

When I first saw the question, I started calling off the possibilities—Gerald Ford, Richard Nixon, Lyndon Johnson, Harry Truman, Calvin Coolidge, or even Teddy Roosevelt. No, in each case, and serious historians seem to have researched the question well.

Keep in mind that the key words are "elected" and "incumbent VP." The article I read points out that Ford, to begin with, was the only president never elected to any national office. He was appointed to replace Agnew as VP, then succeeded to the presidency when Nixon resigned.

Nixon was an incumbent VP under Ike when he ran for the presidency and lost. He was not an incumbent when he won the presidency eight years later. Johnson, Truman, Coolidge and Teddy Roosevelt were all incumbent VP's who succeeded to the presidency when the chief executive was killed or died in office.

It's an interesting bit of history, but Bush supporters argue that this has nothing to do with their man.

Oh, the answer to the question? Martin Van Buren, Andy Jackson's VP, was the last incumbent VP elected to the presidency. There were only two exceptions before Van Buren—John Adams and Thomas Jefferson.

Combest says benefits protected

WASHINGTON, D.C. -- Congressman Larry Combest (R-Texas) has announced that the Social Security Administration has revised its interpretation of recipient's benefits under the Conservation Reserve Program (CRP). Congressman Combest had alerted the national Social Security office about the problems West Texas retired land owners were experiencing with the conservation program and its effect on their social security income.

"Previously, it was feared that if retired land owners signed up for the Conservation Reserve Program and their income was greater than $8,160, the Social Security Administration would deduct one out of every two additional dollars he earned.

Social Security began classifying these retired farmers as 'active participants in an income-producing business' and their social security benefits would have been penalized," said Combest.

"Fortunately, after I informed social security officials of this discrepancy, they quickly resolved the problem. Retired land owner's social security benefits will not be affected by their CRP payments," the Lubbock congressman stated.

Senate okays private prisons, new hazardous waste center

AUSTIN (AP) — The Senate has approved bills to authorize the use of private prisons and to establish a hazardous waste research center touted as a moneymaker for the state.

A proposal by Sen. Ray Farabee would authorize the Texas Department of Corrections to contract with private companies, or counties, to build and operate prisons for up to 500 "minimum" or "medium-risk" inmates.

Farabee, D-Wichita Falls, said Tennessee, Kentucky and Minnesota now have laws that provide for private prisons.

A prison contract in Texas could not be signed unless the state would save at least 10 percent on what it would cost to operate a similar state facility, Farabee said.

The bill allows for a three-year contract, with an option to renew for two years. Any private facility would have to meet court standards, as well as standards of the American Correctional Association.

Sens. Carlos Truan and Craig Washington said they had concerns about the measure, which was sent to the House on a 23-2 vote.

But Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby said, "I think it ought to be tried." Hobby said facilities for 500 could be available "in 60 to 90 days from the day the contract is signed."

Truan, D-Corpus Christi, said he was "hesitant about placing prisoners in the hands of a private contractor. ... We are doing away with the tradition that ... we as citizens, as taxpayers, provide the necessary money for the prisons and jails. "Where are you going to stop? Are the schools going to be next?" Truan asked. "We don't even have enough money for our public prisons much less to contract for private prisons."

Farabee said the bill "spells out where we're going to stop, and that is unless you can save at least 10 percent, you're not going to use this method."

He suggested that the savings could be used for other state services such as better distribution of food stamps and nursing homes.

Washington, D-Houston, said some duties of the state should not be delegated and one is its police power. "This is closely akin to police power," he said.

In these "difficult economic times, we look for ways to ameliorate our problem, and perhaps we grab at straws we wouldn't have looked at 10 years ago," Washington said.

Parker's bill to create a hazardous waste center at Lamar University in Beaumont was sent to the House on a 25-0 vote.

The center would organize a consortium of universities to develop new and better ways to handle hazardous wastes. Lamar, the University of Texas, University of Houston and Texas Engineering Experiment Station, which is part of the Texas A&M University System, would be partners in the research consortium.

Congress already has appropriated $5 million for the center, and the universities are asking the Legislature for $600,000 start-up money.

Churches helping aliens register

WASHINGTON (AP) — Churches across the country are setting up operations to guide thousands of undocumented aliens through the complicated process of seeking to become legal residents under new federal immigration law.

Monsignor Nicholas DiMarzio, director of the U. S. Catholic Conference's Migration and Refugee Service, says most of the nation's Roman Catholic dioceses have appointed "legalization directors."

He estimates that up to 3 million people will apply for legal status under the law, which allows it for those who can prove that they have lived in this country since before Jan. 1, 1982.

City commission election draws 12 candidates for five races

Twelve candidates will be vying for five places on Hereford City Commission in the April 4 election. Deadline for filing was Wednesday.

The commission will be expanding from five to seven members under the city's new single-member district voting system. Three of the places will be determined by a citywide vote—the mayor's post and Places 5 and 6, while only voters residing in Places 1 and 3 will elect those representatives to the commission.

The mayor's race drew three candidates. Incumbent Wes Fisher is challenged by Jim Steiert and Sylvia Z. Flores. Places 5 and 6 are new seats and five candidates are seeking those two seats. They include Paul Abalos, Paul Hamilton, Raul Valdez, Jerry Walsh and Ed Wuerflein. The top vote-getter from the five will win Place 5, and the next largest vote will put that candidate in Place 6.

In Place 1, incumbent Loran Nixon will be opposed by Sylvana Juarez. Nixon was appointed to fill out an unexpired term. Place 1 is situated in the north central part of town. A map showing the districts were published in the Feb. 15 Hereford rand maps can be seen at city hall.

Incumbent Tom LeGate will be opposed by Boyd Foster for the Place 3 seat. Place 3 is situated in the northwest part of town, generally from West Park Avenue to Moorman and with a strip north of Park Avenue to Union. Voters will need to check registration cards or view a map to see the exact boundaries. Place 2 is generally south of Park Avenue, and Place 4 stretches across the top of the city limits on the north.

Mrs. Flores, one of the last to file as a mayoral candidates, said Thursday afternoon that economic growth is her number one concern and that she "would work hard to bring in new industries to provide jobs for all our citizens."

A 32-year-old housewife, Mrs.

Flores was formerly employed as a clerk in the tax appraisal district office. She works with the Red Cross chapter and is a volunteer for the Problem Pregnancy Clinic here. She attended Hereford public schools and has a GED. Her husband, Ruben Flores, is pastor of Primera Iglesia Bautista. They have three children.

"I have lived in Hereford all my life and I have always been committed to the progress of our city," said Mrs. Flores. "If election, I pledge to represent all the citizens and to provide equal opportunities and services for all."

Counties struggle with jail crowding

By The Associated Press

Counties all over Texas are struggling to cope with the strain of bulging state prisons, some by making inmates sleep on floors, others by not jailing public drunks or by putting convicts only on "intensive probation."

In Dallas County, two inmates have filed a federal civil rights suit, claiming a dearth of beds forced them to sleep on the floor for nine days.

Meanwhile in San Antonio, Bexar County Sheriff Harlon Copeland announced Wednesday that no one charged with public intoxication will be taken in at the county jail.

Copeland said his 739-inmate capacity jail has been repeatedly packed — it had 994 inmates Wednesday — and that barring people arrested for intoxication from the jail will reduce the population by about 50 inmates a month.

"Anything we can write a ticket for is better than trying to crowd the jail, especially now," Copeland said.

The TDC, which reopened Tuesday for the first time in six days, closed Wednesday when sheriffs transferred a record 475 inmates into the state system, officials said. The TDC was expected to remain closed today.

The shutdown was the fourth this year for the prison system, which is operating under a 95 percent limit set by the Legislature to ease crowding.

Judge selection controversy continues

AUSTIN (AP) — The controversy over whether Texas judges should be elected or appointed has now gotten sidetracked into a dispute over whether voters should have a say.

"Why are they conducting such a vigorous campaign against letting the people vote on the change?" former Texas Supreme Court Chief Justice Robert W. Calvert told a news conference Thursday.

"We'd be voting all the time if we let people vote on every proposal that came along," said Charles Herring Jr., spokesman for Citizens to Protect Our Right to Elect Texas Judges, in a back-to-back news conference. "It's up to the Legislature to decide."

Herring's group, which includes eight of the current Texas Supreme Court Justices, is opposing a constitutional change backed by a group headed by Chief Justice John Hill.

Hill's plan, if approved by voters, would have commissions nominate candidates for judges, with the governor making a final appointment. Judges appointed would have to be approved by voters later in retention elections. District judges could be named the same way, or in non-partisan elections, according to local option elections.

Calvert said Thursday that 12 of the 15 living former supreme court justices favor the appointive or "merit selection" plan. Two support the present partisan elective system and one wants a non-partisan election.

"It all comes down to whether we believe in democracy or not," said Herring.

Bill would abolish teacher testing

AUSTIN (AP) — A Senate committee has approved a bill removing the requirement that teachers be tested on how much they know about the subjects they teach.

June Karp, assistant to the president of the Texas Federation of Teachers, said the bill "removes the specter of TECAT II, and we appreciate it."

TECAT, or Texas Examination of Current Administrators and Teachers, was a literacy exam administered to teachers last year over the objection of most teacher organizations.

The bill abolishing the "subject-matter" test was sent to the full Senate on an 8-0 vote Thursday, after representatives of teacher organizations testified that getting rid of the test would boost teacher morale.

Sen. Carl Parker, Education Committee chairman and bill sponsor, offered two reasons for abolishing the test — it is costly and fails to insure quality education.

Administering the test would cost the state nearly $14.4 million in 1988-89, according to an estimate by the Legislative Budget Board.

Parker, D-Port Arthur, estimated the cost at $10 million to $20 million, and said, "We will not, in our time, have enough money to afford it."

Also, he said, "I'm satisfied ... that it is not a practical way to insure quality in the classroom. We'd do better to stick with evaluators."

Cuomo will not seek presidency

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Gov. Mario Cuomo, one of the Democratic Party's most eloquent spokesmen, has bowed out of the race for his party's 1988 presidential nomination with a simple statement that has left people wondering why.

"I will not be a candidate," the governor announced Thursday night on New York City's WCBS radio during a call-in show carried statewide by 10 other stations.

"In my opinion, the Democratic Party offers a number of candidates who can prove themselves capable of leading this nation toward a more sane, a more progressive and a more humane future. I will not add my name to that number."

Cuomo, 54, said his decision was best for his family, state and party. He refused to elaborate on the program. He was whisked by helicopter back to Albany, where he also dodged reporters.

Cuomo, who rose to national prominence with a rousing keynote address at the 1984 Democratic National Convention, had agonized so long and so publicly about running that he was accused of turning the decision into political theater.

Israel opposes Soviet role in talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir says he would oppose a Soviet role in Mideast peace talks, even if Moscow resumed diplomatic relations with Israel after a 20-year break.

"Their aim is not to bring peace there," Shamir said Thursday. He said the Soviets would put Israel in an "untenable position" of having to face extreme Arab demands.

Shamir gave his views in an interview with The Associated Press and in a speech to the National Press Club.

Despite Shamir's views, President Reagan and key aides told the Israeli leader an international peace conference that included the Soviets may be one way to get peace talks started.

"We are opposed, I am opposed," Shamir said. "In my opinion, it will be harmful to peace, to prospects of peace in our area, and to Israeli interests."

Asked if Soviet recognition of Israel would cause him to change his mind about a peace conference, the prime minister replied quickly: "In my opinion, no."

In fact, Shamir said, the Reagan administration was not enthusiastic about a peace conference, but had to explore it in deference to others. He referred apparently to Jordan, which proposed such a conference last year.

Some U.S. officials believe the Soviets could be confined to a nominal role, but Shamir said that was "an illusion."

Organizing Protest Group

Delbert Devin, left, of the Nuclear Waste Task Force in Dimmitt told about 100 opponents of the repository site characterization that the drilling cannot begin until a number of court cases are settle concerning the Department of Energy's actions in Deaf Smith County and in other states. The group met Thursday night in the Hereford Community Center to organize an effort to fight site characterization. A committee has been appointed to nominate officers and to consider affiliation with one of the groups opposing the actual siting of a repository.

AIDS crisis spurs unusual religious teamwork in Texas

NEW YORK (AP) — A rare thing has happened in a southwestern city in the face of a strange menace. AIDS has drawn together religious forces of Houston, Texas, assertedly as never before.

They've joined hands to comfort the afflicted in what leaders consider their fullest ecumenical effort yet, a concerted approach which they believe is unmatched anywhere in the country.

"We think it is unprecedented," says the Rev. Earl E. Shelp, co-coordinator of the city's Clergy Consultation for AIDS, which has developed an extensive, interfaith operation of education and of care for victims.

Its objective, he said in a telephone interview, is to "comfort and care for people who are hurting, to educate our people about the expanding AIDS epidemic and to gear up to meet the ever larger crisis on the horizon."

Highlighting that purpose, more than 150 Houston congregations, Protestant, Roman Catholic, Eastern Orthodox and Jewish, last weekend observed a special "AIDS Awareness and Intercessory Prayer Sabbath."

At a Jewish temple, Roman Catholic parish and Episcopal church, combined ecumenical services — of healing, memorializing the deceased and of hope — dramatized the common undertaking.

But the basic work goes on in a wide and growing network of congregations, home-care teams, legal services and therapy sessions mobilized to advise, console and care for sufferers from the dread disease.

"It's a hands-on, parish-based form of ministry," said Shelp, 39, a Southern Baptist. He said it provides meals, practical nursing, bedclothes changing, cleanup tasks, transportation, friendship and encouragement.

At least 95 congregations are directly involved, a dozen of them intensively, dispatching 15 home "respite teams" totalling about 200 members. Other congregations do such chores as visiting and food provision.

"It's the largest interfaith organization of its kind on a citywide basis," says the Rev. Ronald H. Sunderland, a co-coordinator who with Shelp sparked its initiation in late 1985 among the city's clergy.

Both men are research fellows of the Institute of Religion at the Texas Medical Center, Shelp in medical ethics and Sunderland in pastoral counselling. Sunderland also is chaplain at the Institute of Immunological Disorders.

It is the only institution in the country devoted solely to AIDS research and care for the disease's sufferers. It works closely with the interfaith project in patient care and public education.

Houston has had about 1,000 AIDS cases, Sunderland said, nearly 600 of whom have died of the fatal ailment crippling the body's immune system, with another 450 possible cases currently under review.

Shelp said the project shuns any moralizing or politicking about homosexuality, a condition of most victims, considering controversy about that separate from the present crisis.

"We neither talk gay rights, nor gay condemnation," he said.

U.S. policy toward Iran shifted after TWA hijacking

WASHINGTON (AP) — Iran's influence in freeing passengers held hostage aboard hijacked TWA flight 847 in 1985 led to a shift in U.S. policy for dealing with the Tehran government and to a proposed invasion of Libya, according to a report published today.

The National Security Council drew up a plan in the summer of 1985 for Egypt to attack Libya, capture half its territory with U.S. air support and then use this position to force Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi from power. The Washington Post said.

Former National Security Adviser Robert C. McFarlane, along with his former deputy, Vice Adm. John M. Poindexter, and another NSC aide, Donald Fortier, devised the plan, the newspaper said.

The drive "was to embrace the Ayatollah (Khomeini) and demolish Gadhafi," the Post said, quoting "an administration official who was involved in the policy-making."

It was thought that Iran, because of its assistance in the June 1985 TWA hijacking, could be of further help in gaining the release of other Americans held hostage by pro-Iranian groups, the Post said.

Robert M. Gates, then head of intelligence analysis for the CIA and now President Reagan's nominee for director, wrote a paper in mid-July 1985 saying a U.S.-Egyptian attack on Libya would present an opportunity to "redraw the map of North Africa," the newspaper said, quoting sources who have read the document.

The White House was considering the action against Libya even though there was no evidence linking Gadhafi to the hijacking, the newspaper said. The purpose was to get tough with what the Reagan administration believed to be the most vulnerable of the governments supporting terrorism.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz considered the plan "crazy" and summoned Nicholas A. Veliotis, then ambassador to Egypt, home on a secret weekend mission to help thwart the proposal, the newspaper said.

Although the State Department failed to stop a mission to Cairo by Poindexter, it did succeed in limiting his authorized discussions to contingency planning rather than preparations for military action, the newspaper said.

White House spokesman Dan Howard said Thursday night the administration would have no comment on the report.

Raise increases male sex drive

NEW YORK (AP) — A pay raise or a promotion whets a man's appetite for sex, and a demotion or dismissal curbs it, a seven-year study of 1,632 couples indicates.

Sex increased from 2.6 to 3.6 times a week when the man's career status improved, but decreased to 1.2 times a week when there was a setback, according to a survey conducted by Srully Blotnick for a book, "Ambitious Men: Their Drives and Delusions."

In a quarter of the cases where there was a setback, the couple refrained from sex for a week.

The survey, conducted from 1980 to 1986, interviewed couples with median household incomes of $41,000 and median ages of 34 for men and 32 for women. In most cases, husband and wife worked.

"Men who got a raise or a promotion said they felt like hot stuff for the next few weeks," Blotnick said Wednesday. "They wanted to share it, and it comes out in an erotic form."

Blotnick found that although almost any merit raise is good for the sex life, "the Mason-Dixon line seems to be 10 percent. The curve slides off gradually below that."

Little or no sexual euphoria, however, accompanies raises that are given impersonally or universally, such as year-end cost of living pay increase.

The good feeling occasioned by the raise "doesn't go on forever, usually 10 days to two weeks," Blotnick said. "These men don't turn into sex maniacs."

But some make the most of the feeling while it lasts. "About 20 percent of the couples spent the entire weekend on a second honeymoon," Blotnick said.

The survey found that when women got good job news, they usually wanted to celebrate more socially, "by having a few friends over, or going out to an expensive restaurant," Blotnick said. "Her idea of celebrating wasn't to go home and ravish her husband."

Gas prices may jump in future

AUSTIN — In recent months, Texans pulling into their local service stations for gasoline have been confronted with rising pump prices, partially due to the recent nickel hike in the state's motor fuels tax.

And there's more bad news—increased federal excise taxes on gasoline could loom in the future. Motor fuel is one of the most heavily taxed commodities in the nation, according to Lynton Allred, president of the Texas Oil Marketers Association, an Austin-based trade group.

Effective Jan. 1, 1987, the state gasoline tax jumped from 10 cents to 15 cents, in a move designed to aid Texas' crippled budget. That means that the state motor fuels tax has tripled in less than five years.

Today, Texans pumping gasoline into their vehicles, pay the 15-cents state tax and 9.1 cents in federal excise tax for a total of 24.1 cents in combined taxes.

TOMA officials predict that federal excise taxes will also rise this year. Allred said the federal taxes could increase to 10 cents per gallon in the spring, making the federal tax on a gallon of gasoline 19.1 cents. If this tax is enacted, consumers in Texas would be faced with 34 cents per gallon of state and federal taxes. In other words, more than 33 percent of the price for a $1 per gallon purchase would be paid in taxes.

"What motorists should realize," said Allred, "is that when the cost of petroleum products eventually rises, those increased taxes will still be with us. For instance, earlier in the year, over a one-month period of time, some major suppliers raised their wholesale prices 8 cents. That move, in addition to the nickel jump in the state gasoline tax, increased pump prices significantly."

The Texas Oil Marketers Association is the largest state petroleum marketing and convenience store organization in the country, representing more than 700 businesses that own, supply or operate more than 10,000 branded and unbranded service stations and convenience stores in Texas and the Southwest. These firms supply petroleum products to two-thirds of the state's retail motor-fuel outlets, as well as the vast majority of agricultural, commercial and industrial users.

Showmanship Award

Darlene Fields of CattleWomen congratulates 8-year-old Brittney Binder for her First Year Showmanship trophy presented at the recent Hereford Young Farmer's Livestock Show. This is the 25th year the Hereford CattleWomen have sponsored the award which is based on interview and showmanship scores. Brittney is the daughter of Bill and Gayle Binder and was a special guest at the CattleWomen's luncheon on Tuesday.

CattleWomen recognize guests at luncheon

Members of Hereford CattleWomen met Tuesday at the Hereford Community Center for a program on aerobics given by Cathy Bunch.

Following the program, the group met at Cason House Restaurant for their monthly luncheon and business session. President Dee Ann Trotter called the meeting to order and gave the invocation.

The treasurer's report was submitted by Lori Hall.

Darlene Fields introduced guests, Gayle Binder, and her daughter, Brittney, who recently won the trophy for showmanship at the Hereford Young Farmers Livestock Show.

Members decided to change the appearance of the beef certificates to eliminate confusion. Plans were also

Video tape shown to La Plata Study Club

A video tape promoting Hereford, developed by the Deaf Smith Chamber of Commerce, was shown to members of LaPlata Study Club Tuesday evening in the home of Peggie Fox.

The film showed all facets of the Hereford community, agricultural, industrial, manufacturing and business. Scenes showed schools, churches, senior citizen facilities as well as homes and recreational activities. The hospital and clinics were also shown. Area points of interest and West Texas State University and Amarillo College were included in the film. LaPlata members were very complimentary of the film and thought it did an excellent job of showing Hereford.

Rose Mary Shook, president, conducted the business meeting. The budget was presented by Lola Smalts and was approved.

Audine Dettman and Lola Smalts served refreshments to the following members: Mozelle Neill, Margaret Schroeter, Virginia Woodford, Dorothy Mercer, Avis White, Sunny Brush, Mildred Fuhrmann, Betty Taylor, Lucy Rogers, Yvonne Simpson, Rose Mary Shook, Betty Williams, and Peggie Fox.

The next meeting is scheduled March 17 in the home of Sunny Brush.

Montana was first explored by the French in 1742 and was acquired by the United States through the Louisiana Purchase in 1803. Fur traders and missionaries first went to the area, but it owed its population growth to the coming of the Northern Pacific Railway in 1883.

POLLY'S POINTERS Making delicious pickled eggs

DEAR POLLY — I have eaten eggs pickled in vinegar at various taverns, and they were all delicious. Two attempts to make them were both failures. The eggs were very tough and rubbery. Please give me a recipe. — LEONARD

DEAR LEONARD — First of all, you must make sure your hard-cooked eggs are tender. My favorite method is to cover cold eggs with cold water, then bring the water to a boil, turn off the heat, and let the eggs stand about 25 minutes. Then rinse them in cold water and peel.

The following recipe for spiced eggs is from "All About Pickling" (1975; Ortho Books). Pack peeled hard-cooked eggs in sterilized wide-mouthed canning jars. Combine pickling ingredients: 3 cups white vinegar, 1 tablespoon minced ginger root, 1 tablespoon minced horseradish root, 1 teaspoon whole cloves, 1 teaspoon whole allspice, 1 teaspoon white peppercorns and 1 teaspoon salt. Bring this liquid to a boil and simmer for 10 minutes. Pour the boiling liquid gently over the eggs in the jars, filling the jar completely. Cover with standard canning jar lids and rings and process in a boiling-water bath 10 minutes.

Check the library for books on canning which will explain the boiling-water bath canning process if you're not familiar with it.

Hope this fills the bill! — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — My mother asked if I would trim the back of her hair. Although I covered her neck and shoulders with a cloth, the hair slid under the cloth onto her neck. I thought I would try a piece of clear plastic sandwich wrap as protection. Success! Because it clings to the skin, I was able to finish the trim without getting hair all over her. — BOBBIE

For complete directions for boiling-water bath canning, including processing times for the most popular fruits, order Polly's newsletter "Canning Fruit, Tomatoes and Pickles." Send $1 for each copy to POLLY'S POINTERS, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to include the title.

Polly will send you a Polly Dollar ($1) if she uses your favorite Pointer, Peeve or Problem in her column. Write POLLY'S POINTERS in care of this newspaper.

Hill country ranch a garden of hope

DRIPPING SPRINGS, Texas (AP) — At first glance, the Darden Hill Ranch School for troubled boys appears to be more ranch than school.

Mud-splattered trucks are parked before a row of rustic, stuccoed bunkhouses. A trio of rambunctious mutts shadow visitors to a red bar adorned with a sun-bleached cow skull. The air vibrates with donkeys braying, turkeys gobbling and rollicking boys chattering.

With pride, Michael (caseworkers asked that their last names not be used), gave a rubberboot tour of the school barnyard. In a corner, an indignant sow defended eight piglets from all comers. On the other side of the corral, Michael, 15, lovingly knotted his fingers in the mane of an excitedly quivering quarterhorse.

"Little Red is my horse," he said. "I used to hate animals. I've learned a lot from them. If you treat them right, they'll treat you right."

It may seem like unusual therapy, but animal husbandry has helped change Michael's life. For 2½ years, before coming to Darden Hill, the teen-ager lived on the streets of Amarillo. He supported himself with odd jobs in an environment he described as nonviolent but drug-oriented.

"I couldn't get along with my parents," he said. "We had different opinions about things. When I came here I was a dopehead. Now I'm a cowpoke."

Darden Hill Ranch School is one of three residential treatment centers run by the Burke Foundation in the Dripping Springs area about 25 miles southwest of Austin. Licensed in 1973 by the Texas Department of Human Services, the foundation serves neglected and abused boys from around the state.

Bucolic Dripping Springs is the last stop in a miserable, downhill voyage for many youngsters. Some formerly resided in up to two dozen homes or institutions. Scars and bruises attest to the chips they carry on their shoulders. Having been dealt a raw deal by the system, they mistrust adults.

The Darden Hill staff doesn't give the boys a chance to think about their bad luck. All are enrolled in Cub Scouts or Boy Scouts, the 4-H Club or Future Farmers of America. Survival classes, a running club and farm chores keep them occupied morning to night.

"We permit boisterousness, unlike some institutions," said Charles Campise, executive director of Darden Hill. "Many of the boys are hyperactive. We give them plenty of outdoor activities to drain their energy."

Campise and his wife Rosemary started the ranch school in 1974 because they saw a growing number of disadvantaged boys who didn't fit comfortably into existing homes and institutions. Suffering repeated rejections, the youths seemed destined to lead unproductive, wayward or criminal lives.

"If we weren't here, a lot of the boys would end up in prison," Campise said. "About 15 percent of the boys we do try to help spend some time behind bars. At least, we show

Foust to speak Saturday

Charles Foust of Bedford, Texas will be the guest speaker at the Hereford Full Gospel Business Men's Fellowship dinner at 7 p.m. Saturday in Hereford Community Center.

Foust has been in the oil field engineering business for 11 years, has several U.S. and foreign patents, travels domestically and abroad, and is owner of a successful property and casualty insurance agency.

He is the vice president of one of the top growth FGBM chapters in the state and a member of the board of the Mid-Cities Chapter. He is the lay leader in a large Methodist church and member of the board of the First United Methodist Church of Bedford. He is also a teacher and home group leader.

them they have a choice."

He cited the case of a former resident named David, who currently serves in the U.S. Army in Japan. His twin brother is serving a much longer term in the Huntsville state prison.

"The state invested in David," Campise said. "It didn't invest in his brother."

Some residents, who typically stay six months to two years, attend school in neighboring communities. Those not ready to return to the public school system take life skills classes at the facilities. There they learn rudiments such as department, neatness and study habits.

The Burke Foundation method incorporates discipline and trust. Though some boys have records as runaways, there are no locks on the doors and no guards at night.

Infractions of the rules, however, are not tolerated. "Our method is based on confrontation," Campise said. "Inappropriate behavior is dealt with immediately and consistently. Healing comes from within, as they say. Well, they heal themselves or we drive them crazy."

"If they refuse to walk the line, we invite them to do so. If they won't follow, we hold their hand. We might even throw them over our shoulders and carry them along the line if we have to."

The residents work their way up a five-tier system that mirrors society in microcosm. Each level attained confers new privileges and responsibilities.

The children learn how their merit system relates to the real world when they visit nearby communities. In society, the lowest level is occupied by the habitual criminal. Civic leaders, people who personally invest in the system, inhabit the top level.

Billy Joe, 12, has pulled himself from the bottom to the top rung. The climb wasn't easy, but he exhibits the confidence and control of a much older boy.

"When I came here from Kingsville, I had problems stealing and lying," he said. "My uncles were bad, and I imitated them. I understand if I do those things any more, I'll go to jail."

"I plan to have children one day," Billy Joe said. "When I do, I'll raise them like I was treated here, not like my parents treated me."

The boys haven't been the only beneficiaries of the Burke Foundation method. A group of disillusioned Vietnam veterans helped the Campises get the school off the ground in the 1970s, when there were only eight boys in residence.

"The vets were down on the system," Campise said. "The school helped them find themselves again."

The school initially had trouble getting outside help. About 90 percent of its support comes from state government. The Burke Foundation depends on private donations for the rest.

The first Christmas morning on the ranch was a bare-bones affair. Rum-maging through a box of dilapidated toys, one boy described the general feeling: "We've got secondhand goods for secondhand kids."

The Burke Foundation has come a long way since then. Fifteen boys, ages 12-16, live at the 20-acre Darden Hill Ranch School. The Burke Home provides a family-style house for seven responsible boys approaching a stage when they might rejoin society. The Allen House, which opened last August, treats eight children, ages 6-12.

Joey, 8, explained in plain, unemotional terms how he came to the Allen House from San Antonio. "My mom and dad hit me on the legs and face," he said. "I don't know why. But I've been happy since I came here. There are lots of places to run, play and climb trees."

David and Robin Reger, live-in houseparents at Allen House, have taught Joey the difference between right and wrong. He believes he has accomplished something under their tutelage, and he shyly displayed a Bobcat badge he won in the Cub Scouts to prove it.

"A good boy works, follows rules and does what he's supposed to," Joey said. "Robin and David are like my own parents, though I haven't forgotten my real ones. There's lots of love here."

Many children at the Allen House were victims of physical or sexual abuse and neglect. David Reger consigns their records to history. "Each kid has a sad tale to tell," he said. "I don't delve into the past. It has no bearing here."

The treatment program at Allen House, a childlike model of Darden Hill merit system, has an Indian theme. By good behavior, residents earn the ranks of warrior, brave, chief and medicine man.

DR. GOTT — Stool tests are highly accurate

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT — How useful and accurate are tests that detect blood in the stool? What does blood in the stool look like?

DEAR READER — Modern tests for blood in the stool are highly sensitive. They can detect small quantities of blood. In fact, they are so sensitive that they can show a positive reaction in some people who have eaten red meat the day before the stool analysis was obtained.

Blood from the upper intestine, including the stomach, often will color the stool black. Doctors refer to this as "tarry stool," and the description is accurate. The blood turns black because it is digested before it is expelled.

Bleeding from the lower intestine is often red. Bright-red bleeding can be seen in diseases of the colon and rectum, including hemorrhoids.

Sometimes the blood is a mid-range color. Doctors call this the "port-wine stool" and it may reflect bleeding from the small intestine or upper colon.

Small amounts of blood may be invisible to the naked eye. Tiny quantities of bloody leakage from polyps or small cancers may become diluted by and mixed with the stool so that no discoloration is noticeable. In such cases, the chemical stool-blood analyses become extremely useful. For this reason, many doctors are now urging patients over 50 to have regular screening tests for blood in the stool. The tests are cheap, reliable, safe and easy.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Does cigar smoking do as much damage as cigarette smoking?

DEAR READER — Tobacco is tobacco, it's dangerous whether it is smoked, sniffed or chewed. Cigar and pipe smokers generally don't inhale, so they are statistically at less risk than are cigarette smokers. However, cigar and pipe smoke, when inhaled, can do as much harm as the cigarette variety. Non-cigarette tobacco users have an additional problem: an increased incidence of lip, mouth and throat cancer.

DEAR DR. GOTT — My daughter gets migraine headaches that her doctors say are the worst they've seen. Do you have any suggestions? No drugs seem to ease the pain.

DEAR READER — Some forms of migraine seem to be triggered by stress, temperature change and certain foods. Your daughter might have to experiment a bit to determine if these factors are contributing to her headaches. In addition, many patients can reduce the severity and frequency of attacks by taking the prescription medicine propanalol. Finally, your daughter might be helped by a referral to the headache clinic at a teaching hospital. Ask her doctor about this.

DEAR DR. GOTT — What is alopecia areata and what causes it?

DEAR READER — Alopecia areata is a disease of unknown cause that is characterized by round patches of baldness on the head and other body areas. Although the condition can clear up within a year, it tends to recur.

DEAR DR. GOTT — When I was 15 I broke my femur and was given 25 to 30 X-rays, with no shielding of my reproductive organs. I'm now 28 and my wife and I would like to have children. I'm worried about my body's ability to produce normal, healthy sperm after all that radiation. What do you think? Can my sperm be tested for abnormalities?

DEAR READER — The number of X-ray films taken of your legs seems inordinarily high, even for examinations done 13 years ago. Perhaps you are mistaken about the amount of radiation you received. If you are concerned about the state of your reproductive organs, you can obtain a sperm count. This test involves the microscopic investigation of the quantity, motility and quality of your sperm. I believe that any genetic damage is unlikely this long after your radiation exposure, so what you really want to know is whether your testicles are producing sufficient quantities of normal sperm. A sperm count should give you that information.

Somehow when someone says the cake was made from scratch, the thought occurs that the cook might have used tastier ingredients.

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Mavericks haven't reached elite NBA status yet.

Although they still lead the Midwest Division by two games, the Mavs discovered in a 113-96 loss to the Boston Celtics Wednesday night that they are not on a level with the NBA champions.

"We really don't worry about the Dallas Mavericks," said Larry Bird, who had 16 points, 12 rebounds and 11 assists for his second triple-double of the year. "We just go out and play against them. We've had good success against them throughout my career (13-1)."

"Dallas just caught us on a bad night," said Kevin McHale who led Boston with 28 points. "After losing two in a row and playing as poorly as we did, (Coach) K.C. Jones really got on us. He doesn't yell too often, so when he did we got our tails in gear."

The world champions were riding a two-game losing streak after a 20-point loss to Utah and blowing a 17-point lead to the Los Angeles Lakers.

"I think we saw what it takes to win a world's championship," said

Dallas Coach Dick Motta. "They played like they were possessed. They just kicked us all around."

It was the first time in 68 NBA games that Dallas had been held to under 100 points.

Boston outshot Dallas 50 percent to 40 percent and rebounded the Mavs 59-43.

Bird said "We had played two bad games in a row and we wanted to get back on the winning road. We knew we would have a tough game Thursday night against Houston. We didn't want to go there with three losses in a row."

Danny Ainge scored 25 points, and Robert Parish had 14 for the defending world champions.

Ainge said, "We had a lot of rest and really got into our transition game tonight. It may have looked easy but it wasn't. We had to work for every point we got."

Dallas was led by Mark Aguirre who had 29 points and Sam Perkins who added 22.

Dallas starting guard Derek Harper missed his first game of the season because of an infected left foot. "Dallas is a different team without Derek in there," said Ainge. "We did miss Derek," Motta said.

"This is very disappointing," said Aguirre. "I learned a couple of things guarding Bird I may be able to use down the road. Boston has the two best forwards in the NBA in Bird and McHale. We need to get to their level."

Perkins added "We were playing an elite team. We played well at times but you have to play a full game to beat Boston."

Game described as 'dirty basketball'

Celtics beat Rockets 99-92

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

The Boston Celtics battled the Houston Rockets on the court for a 99-92 NBA victory and then Celtics Coach K.C. Jones went on the warpath after the game.

"It was more than physical, it was dirty basketball," Jones said following Thursday night's bruising victory in The Summit.

Jones' ire was directed at Houston forward Jim Petersen and center Akeem Olajuwon for their aggressive play in the game between the 1986 NBA finalists.

It wasn't playoff basketball, but it was close.

"Those elbows were no accident," Jones said. "It's unfortunate that players like Petersen and Olajuwon have to throw elbows. That doesn't say much for those players."

"I'm surprised to see players of their quality stoop so low."

Petersen dished out an elbow to Kevin McHale in the third quarter, inspiring a 10-2 Celtics spurt that put them into the lead for good. McHale scored six straight points after a brief altercation with Petersen.

"It's better to just let us play than to get us aroused," said forward Larry Bird, who was the recipient of an elbow from Olajuwon. "We have so much strength on offense and defense."

Olajuwon drew four fouls and a technical foul over a 1:37 span of the fourth quarter and caught Bird with an elbow that required stitches under his right eye.

"When you throw elbows like that it can end somebody's career," Jones said. "But it just got Kevin going with his game."

"There's no need to throw elbows like that. We're one of the least physical teams in the league."

Houston held a 63-62 lead midway in the third period but a basket by

Bird, the Petersen-McHale scuffle, and three straight buckets by McHale put the Celtics ahead for good.

While Jones criticized the rough play, Bird took it in stride.

"I play the game and I've given some and I've taken some," Bird said. "That's basketball. We were bumping a little and we got bumped. They threw a few elbows."

Olajuwon finished with 15 points and 11 rebounds but he had to sit down through much of the crucial fourth quarter when the Rockets were scratching to get back in the game.

"The key was we lost our composure," Petersen said. "The ball kicked out a couple of times and they got the fast break. We had some possibilities to win the game."

While Olajuwon was forced to the sidelines with the flurry of fouls, Boston center Robert Parish saved the day with 30 points and 12 rebounds.

"He was the best player on the court tonight," Bird said of Parish. "Things were happening out there tonight without me making them happen."

Second year guard Steve Harris led the Rockets with 22 points, followed by Petersen with 20 points and Robert Reid also had 15 points.

McHale hit 21 points and Bird finished with 16 for the Celtics.

Houston Coach Bill Fitch grimaced as he pulled Olajuwon in the fourth quarter.

"Akeem had some silly fouls," Fitch said.

"We made mistakes we normally don't make," Olajuwon said. "They are a very good team and they take advantage of your mistakes."

"I know we can beat them," Olajuwon said of the defending NBA champions. "We just didn't do the job tonight."

In other NBA games, it was Detroit 117, Seattle 105; New York 120,

Cleveland 105; Golden State 110, New Jersey 106, and Portland 124, Phoenix 108.

Pistons 117, Sonics 105

Adrian Dantley and Isiah Thomas scored 28 points apiece to lead Detroit over Seattle, handing the visiting SuperSonics their eighth consecutive loss.

The victory, Detroit's fourth in its last five games, gave the Pistons, 33-17, a one-game lead over idle Atlanta in the Central Division.

Dale Ellis led Seattle with 31 points.

Knicks 120, Cavaliers 105

Gerald Wilkins scored 29 points and rookie Kenny Walker added 20 to help New York snap a four-game losing streak. The Knicks, playing without regulars Gerald Henderson and Bill Cartwright, dealt Cleveland its 13th straight road loss.

New York's defense held Cleveland to 30 per cent field goal shooting and forced the Cavaliers into committing 20 turnovers.

Warriors 110, Nets 106

Joe Barry Carroll scored 22 points and Chris Mullin added 20 as Golden State defeated New Jersey to snap an eight-game road losing streak.

The victory was only the fourth in 14 games for Golden State, while the Nets lost for the 17th time in 19 games.

Trail Blazers 124, Suns 108

Kiki Vandeweghe had 35 points and Clyde Drexler added 30 to lead Portland over Phoenix.

The victory was the Trail Blazers' third straight over their Pacific Division rivals this season, but just their second in the last 10 trips to the Arizona Veterans Memorial Coliseum.

LSU coach Brown to wear TV microphone Saturday

By RICK WARNER
AP Sports Writer

New York Rangers goalie Bob Froese wore his regular mask, jersey and pads against the Pittsburgh Penguins Sunday night. He also wore a piece of equipment not usually associated with hockey players — a wireless microphone.

Froese's chatter was heard by viewers watching the game on the Madison Square Garden Network, a cable system that telecasts Rangers' games in the New York area.

Viewers heard the goalie admonish his teammates, chide an opponent in German, and complain to a referee about interference.

"I'm going to start hacking people if you don't call it," Froese told referee Bob Myers.

"I can't watch everything," Myers replied. "I'm trying."

Conversations like that used to be private. Now, thanks to modern technology, millions of TV viewers know what players, coaches and officials talk about during the game.

Earlier this month, NBC showed Digger Phelps delivering an emotional speech in the Notre Dame locker room after his basketball team upset top-ranked North Carolina. On Saturday, LSU Coach Dale Brown will wear a microphone on the bench during the network's telecast of the LSU-Kentucky game.

"We're always trying to bring the viewer closer to the game," said Mike Weisman, executive producer of NBC Sports. "Viewers have become very sophisticated. They want more than scores and batting averages."

Sometimes, viewers get more than they bargain for.

NBC once put a microphone on Tommy Lasorda when he was coaching third base for the Los Angeles Dodgers. Lasorda, who is known for his salty language, promised to keep it clean during the telecast and he kept his word. But apparently nobody told catcher Joe Ferguson about the audio experiment.

"I remember Ferguson hit a line drive to left field that dropped in for a triple," Weisman said. "So he comes chugging in to third base, and Lasorda is there waiting for him. And Joe walks over to Lasorda and says, 'Did you see that (expletive) ball sink?'"

Dick Button, a two-time Olympic gold medal winner in figure skating for the United States, received his first pair of ice skates at the age of 12 from his mother. They were an inducement to practice the piano.

Phillies give Carlton another chance

Mets' Darling wins in arbitration

By The Associated Press
Ron Darling figured that if Dwight Gooden was worth $1.5 million to pitch for the New York Mets this season, then he was worth at least $1.05 million.

An arbitrator agreed Thursday, giving Darling a hefty raise over the $440,000 he made last season for the world champions.

Darling was the only player who won in arbitration Thursday as baseball's spring training camps officially opened. Most of the news was off the field, with Cleveland outfielder Brett Butler and Philadelphia pitcher Kevin Gross losing arbitration cases and Toronto outfielders Jesse Barfield and George Bell avoiding arbitration by signing with the Blue Jays.

Meanwhile, two big-name pitchers made news when Oakland's Vida Blue announced his retirement and four-time Cy Young winner Steve Carlton was given another chance to make the Philadelphia Phillies.

The Mets had offered Darling $800,000 after he posted a 15-6 record in 1986. But arbitrator Jack Sands in New York ruled in Darling's favor.

Earlier this week, the Mets had avoided arbitration with Gooden, settling on a $1.5 million contract with the ace of their pitching staff who had a 17-6 record. The world champions also beat outfielder Kevin McReynolds in another case, with an arbitrator awarding him $625,000 instead of the $825,000 he had been seeking.

Butler actually took an $85,000 pay cut. After batting .278 with 32 stolen bases and 92 runs scored, Butler had asked $875,000, but arbitrator Arvid Anderson ruled in favor of the club's $765,000 offer.

Gross, 12-12 with a 4.02 ERA in 1986, asked for $530,000 and was awarded the Phillies' offer of $420,000.

Results of Thursday's arbitration cases left owners with 16 victories and eight losses in cases decided so far.

Meanwhile, Barfield and Bell decided to skip arbitration and do business instead directly with the Blue Jays.

Barfield, 27, the major leagues' home run leader last season with 40, had sought a contract of $1.350 million, while the Jays had offered $1.125 million. Bell, also 27, who tied with Barfield for the club runs batted in title with 108, had asked for $1.325 million, while the Jays offered $1 million.

Both of the outfielders signed one-year contracts at figures between the submitted numbers.

The New York Yankees and Pittsburgh Pirates also avoided hearings with a pair of outfielders. The Yankees signed Ron Kittle, who had sought $450,000 and been offered $400,000. The Pirates reached agreement with Mike Brown, who will take a cut from last season's $225,000 to $212,500. He had asked for $260,000 in arbitration and been offered $200,000.

In other business, Floyd Youmans, the Montreal Expos' top pitcher last season, signed a one-year contract. Terms were not disclosed regarding Youmans, who struck out 202 and had a 13-12 record in 1986.

Blue announced his retirement from baseball, less than a month after signing as a free agent with the Oakland A's and one day before A's pitchers were due to report for spring training. The 37-year-old left-hander gave little indication why he is retiring.

Phillies president Bill Giles announced that Carlton would rejoin the team in training camp. The 42-year-old left-hander who pitched for the San Francisco Giants and Chicago White Sox after leaving the Phillies, is being given the chance to show his stuff as an unsigned, non-roster player.

The Phillies, meanwhile, broke off negotiations with Lance Parrish over the possibility of a law suit by the free-agent catcher against the Phillies and major league baseball.

With the exception of Danny Darwin, all pitchers and catchers listed among the Houston Astros' roster players and non-roster invitees reported to camp in Kissimmee, Fla. Darwin got permission to report Feb. 24 because of the birth of his third daughter.

In the Minnesota Twins' camp in Orlando, Fla., Manager Tom Kelly welcomed the group of pitchers and catchers to his first training camp. At 36, Kelly is the youngest manager in the major leagues.

Reliever Jeff Reardon, whom the Twins acquired from Montreal, is not expected to report until Monday or Tuesday, Kelly said. Also not reporting immediately will be starting pitcher Bert Blyleven and relievers George Frazier and Ramon Romero. Reardon, Blyleven and Frazier all are attending to family matters and Romero forgot to renew his passport from the Dominican Republic.

Baseball owners agreed to arbitration 14 years ago

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

One day Pogo looked around the Okfenokee Swamp, thought for a moment about conditions in the mud, and sagely observed: "We have met the enemy and they is us."

Give that little fellow a major league baseball franchise.

Fourteen years ago, while fighting a holding action against free agency — a battle they eventually would lose — baseball's bosses agreed to salary arbitration for the hired hands.

Bingo, there went the war.

Perhaps because they are slow learners, it took a while for the owners to figure out that free agency was less of a headache for them than arbitration.

For a free agent to reap a king's ransom contract, some club has to offer it. So if Mr. Owner keeps his checkbook zipped tight, free agency need not break his bank. For evidence of that, consider the current unemployed status of Tim Lincecum, Lance Parrish et al.

Even the most penurious owner, however, can't do a thing about an arbitration award. Lose in that forum and it's back up the Brinks truck, boys.

Last Friday, Detroit pitcher Jack Morris (winningest pitcher of this decade with 123 victories) set an arbitration record with a tidy $1.85 million award. The mark lasted only until first baseman Don Mattingly of the New York Yankees (.352 batting average, 31 home runs, 113 runs batted in) presented his case and was rewarded with $1.975 million. Both results were predictable.

That left management with 13 victories and seven defeats in the current arbitration box score. However,

TIP FROM PAYTON

SEATTLE (AP) — A tip from a friendly enemy helped improve Curt Warner as a running back in 1986. The tip came from superstar Walter Payton of the Chicago Bears.

Warner, already rated a good running back, met Payton at a sports banquet in April of '86 and heard some words of wisdom which added to his power and drive in the fall of the year.

"Football is an explosion game," Payton told Warner. "You explode into your blocks. You explode into your runs. You must have the endurance to do it over and over."

Warner embarked on a program of intensive training after talking to Payton, running distances from 50 to 600 meters. The result: An explosive Warner during the 1986 season.

that log includes some pyrrhic victories. They include, for example, a $210,000 award to Daryl Motley, who batted .203 in 77 games last year and spent part of the season in the minors.

All of this was greeted with great interest by Calvin Griffith, former proprietor of the Minnesota Twins, and the first member of his fraternity to get burned by the arbitration fire in 1974. Three Twins — pitcher Dick Woodson, outfielder Larry Hise and infielder Steve Braun — filed that year and all won, costing Calvin a cumulative $18,000.

"I was disappointed because those players didn't bring people into the park," Griffith said. "I told those fellows if they were going to get it, they were going to get it only through arbitration, not from me. I didn't think they had earned it."

The first case was Woodson, who successfully argued that his 10-8 record was worth $28,500, not the $22,500 Griffith wanted to pay. "A mediocre pitcher," Griffith said. "We had five or six like him."

Next was Hise, who hit .272 and was awarded $29,000 instead of the $23,000 Griffith wanted to pay. "A good hitter," the ex-owner decided somewhat grudgingly and long after the fact.

Then there was Braun, who had batted .283 the previous season and was offered $25,000. "He couldn't run or field," Griffith said. "We should have paid him one-third of a major league salary." The final price was $31,000, which happens to be one-half of today's minimum major league salary.

"What made me mad is that the arbitrators who decided the cases didn't know anything about baseball," Griffith said. "They didn't know what an RBI was or what an ERA was. That irritated me. The arbitrators were used to labor cases. They were 5-and-10-cent, $1-an-hour guys and suddenly they were deciding $30,000, $40,000, $50,000, $100,000 cases."

They also had their hands on Calvin's wallet, a most uncomfortable situation for the owner.

Griffith, however, was not the biggest management loser that winter. Five Oakland A's beat Charley Finley in arbitration with the largest award going to Reggie Jackson, who came away with $135,000.

That's $75,000 less than Daryl Motley will get this year. And remember, Motley lost.

Salary arbitration in baseball explained

By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Salary arbitration has been called everything from baseball's "biggest enemy" to a "lawyer's dream." In fact, it has become a highly specialized business no longer dominated by the angry tirades and name-calling of the past.

In essence, the lawyers say, it has evolved into a full-blown court trial for damages, heard in as little as three hours instead of a week, involving months of preparation with hundreds of thousands of dollars at stake.

From its first case in 1974, settled at $30,000 in favor of the Minnesota Twins' pitcher Dick Woodson, it has come full circle to Don Mattingly's record award against the New York Yankees this week of $1.975 million.

"Arbitration has become a much more professional procedure than it used to be, on both sides," says player-agent Tom Reich, whose team is acknowledged by opponents to be one of the best.

The format is straightforward. Players and owners have until Jan. 15 to file their dollar figures. Cases are heard in February by arbitrators selected jointly by owners and players. Today is the last day of hearings this year.

After hearing evidence from both sides, the arbitrator must pick one of the two dollar bids. Two full years of major league service are required for a player to be eligible.

Both sides admit that much of their success depends on the dollar figures they choose.

Barry Rona, executive director of the owners' Player Relations Committee, says all major league teams now use outside help and the resources of his office to prepare for arbitration. Tal Smith Enterprises of Houston handles more than 50 percent of the owners' cases.

"First of all, it's very time consuming, putting together these cases," Rona said. "Today, the demands on general managers are such that very few would have the time. In addition, you need the research tools and equipment — computers, access to data ... It requires some professionalism and expertise."

"It's important to have a good person present the case, but it's more important to have the right number and good data," Rona said. "I'd say the dollar figure is probably 80 percent of it."

Reich says that 80 to 90 percent of the cases filed are settled before hearings, "and that's the best test that the system is working. Arbitration creates an atmosphere for negotiations."

But just in case the dispute can't be settled, "we begin preparing cases in August or September for every one of our players eligible," Reich said. "Preparing these cases takes hundreds of hours."

Sam Reich, a trial lawyer and Tom's brother, usually presents the evidence.

"It's a lawyer's dream," Sam Reich said. "You compress a week-long trial that might have several thousand dollars at stake into three hours during which there are hundreds of thousands of dollars on the table. It's very exciting."

Some owners have a less enthusiastic view.

"I said from Day One, the biggest enemy of baseball is not free agency. It's arbitration," Yankees owner George Steinbrenner said after the Mattingly decision.

Vida Blue decides to retire in good health

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Left-thunder Vida Blue, who helped the Oakland A's to three world championships in the early 1970s, has decided to retire while he's still in good health.

Blue, 37, announced his retirement from baseball Thursday, less than a month after signing as a free agent with the A's and one day before he and the team's other pitchers were due to report for spring training.

Team spokesman Jay Alves said the announcement came as a surprise and the A's did not know anything beyond Blue's formal comments.

"Over the past few years I have been contemplating retirement," Blue said in the statement. "So with mixed emotions and slight remorse,

Frank "Home Run" Baker, a member of the Hall of Fame, went to the plate 23 times as a pinch-hitter during his career and made only one hit.

Christy Mathewson, a righthander, and Warren Spahn, a southpaw, tied for the lead in 20-game seasons. Each had 13.

the day has finally come when I will no longer be playing major league baseball.

"My physical condition is good, so while I am still in good health I have decided to retire."

Blue, a resident of Oakland, helped the A's to world championships in 1972, 1973 and 1974, recording three 20-victory seasons in seven full years with the team.

He pitched for the San Francisco Giants the past two seasons, going 10-10 with a 3.27 earned-run average in 1986 and running his career record to 209-161 with 2,175 strikeouts.

After leaving Oakland following the 1977 season, Blue spent four years with the Giants and two with the Kansas City Royals. He was suspended from baseball for the 1984 season after being convicted for cocaine possession, then rebounded with a pair of 100-strikeout seasons for the Giants.

At a Jan. 21 press conference to announce his signing with the A's, Blue had said he was "elated to be coming home."
