Nuke groups open office in Hereford

By DEBE GRAVES
Staff Writer

Opponents of the Department of Energy's proposed nuclear waste repository project opened an information office on South Kingwood on Friday. The office will be staffed by volunteers from POWER (People Opposing Wasted Energy Repositories), and the umbrella group, Nuclear Waste Task Force, which represents numerous opposition groups.

A ribbon cutting ceremony, attended by city, county and state dignitaries and representatives of the Hereford Hustlers of the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce, formally opened the information center which is a small portable building perched on the edge of a field near Oglesby Equipment.

Use of the building and land have been donated by Cecil Oglesby. Office hours the first week will be 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. and for following weeks the office will be open on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday mornings.

From their 12 X 18 foot building the volunteers plan to fight the DOE with its multi-billion dollar resources and highly trained professionals.

Playing David to the government's Goliath is nothing new to these rural residents. Members of the original POWER group have been working at stopping the repository program for several years.

Tonya Kleuskens of POWER-Vega and Georgia Auckerman of POWER-Hereford were members of the original group of nine couples who began living-room strategy sessions when DOE first started looking at Deaf Smith County as a potential site.

Kleuskens says, "We knew from the beginning that DOE was a large agency to take on, but our growth and the support we are beginning to see in state and federal government is an indication of our success." Kleuskens and Auckerman estimate a current POWER membership of 800.

The latest ammunition these volunteers plan to shoot at DOE is a four-point program, similar to a proposal Gov. Bill Clements has made, which, they say, has a good chance of being passed in Congress.

The plan calls for a halt to the "flawed" energy repository program including removal of funding for site characterization activities such as those currently being performed in Deaf Smith County. The plan also proposes an independent commission be established to reassess DOE's repository and monitored retrievable storage programs.

Kleuskens and NWF president Delbert Devin returned from Washington, D.C., on Thursday after a five-day trek which is the latest in a series of trips county residents have made to lobby legislators concerning the DOE project. "We were very well received," said Devin.

He and Kleuskens testified before the Nuclear Regulation Subcommittee of the Environmental Public Works Committee and met with lawmakers and their staffers. As a result of these talks, Devin says he expects Senators Jim Sasser, R-Tennessee, and Texas' Phil Gramm and Lloyd Bentsen to co-sponsor the four-point proposal. "I have never seen such momentum for such a proposal," Devin commented.

According to Rep. John Smithee (R-Amarillo) who was on hand for the ribbon cutting ceremony, "The proposal would have some merit as a bill because there is a clear, basic problem with DOE's approach to the program."

Citing the proposed plans for transportation of nuclear waste to the repository site as "frightening", Smithee said, "If we don't raise

Senators told Iranian conduct at sea unchanged

WASHINGTON (AP) — Iran has not yet acted in a threatening manner toward U.S. Navy ships in the Persian Gulf despite Iranian rhetoric about attacking the Americans, says the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

"Since the Stark attack, we have not as yet seen any change in Iranian conduct at sea," Adm. William Crowe Jr. told the Senate Armed Services Committee on Friday.

Crowe said he agreed with Iraq that the attack last month by one of its planes on the frigate USS Stark, killing 37 sailors aboard, was unintentional.

Iran and Iraq have been at war nearly seven years, and the Stark attack has heightened fears about U.S. involvement, particularly since President Reagan's decision to protect Kuwaiti tankers by putting them under U.S. flags. Kuwait is an ally of Iraq.

Since the Stark attack, and following U.S. warnings that American ships would be aggressively defended, the Iranians have been "even more cautious than previously," Crowe told the panel.

"While this situation could change quickly, I would suggest that we base our judgments and actions on tangible evidence rather than conjecture," he said.

Crowe said the Navy can back up Reagan's promise to keep Persian Gulf oil lanes open, but he warned that there could be more American military casualties.

If Iran attacks the reflagged Kuwaiti ships, the Pentagon would have to make "difficult choices," Crowe said. He declined to say publicly what those options might include.

Meanwhile, Pentagon sources said one of many "contingency options" being studied is a pre-emptive strike against Silkworm anti-ship missiles Iran bought from China.

But the sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said officials "don't support it (a pre-emptive strike) and don't think it's viable."

Crowe noted Reagan's promise to protect the Kuwaiti tankers and said the Joint Chiefs "believe that we can carry out this mission."

"Of course," he added, "there are no absolute guarantees that such an operation will be casualty-free, or that Iran will not escalate the sea war, which will present us with further difficult choices."

"On the other hand, we have the capability to keep the oil line to Kuwait open, to assure our Arab friends of our commitment, and to keep the risks low."

Crowe did not publicly mention the Silkworms, which could threaten ships moving through the Strait of Hormuz at the mouth of the gulf.

Boll weevil experiment in 1903 began Texas Extension service

By DEBE GRAVES
Staff Writer

In 1903, farmers in Texas were searching for a way to stop the cotton boll weevil which was spreading rapidly and ruining the farm economy. A group of enterprising farmers and businessmen in Terrel County called on Dr. Seaman A. Knapp, who had successfully aided a group of Louisiana farmers with the rice growing problems.

Knapp visited the county and presented the men with a plan to choose some land for a demonstration plot to try out his ideas for a solution to the boll weevil problem. The idea caught on and the Walter C. Porter farm in the Poetry community was chosen as a demonstration farm for the county.

When the experiment was over, Porter found the experimental methods recommended by Knapp yielded him more cotton per acre than he had seen previously. Since the boll weevil was becoming a problem of national interest, the Department of Agriculture authorized Knapp to establish other demonstration farms in Texas.

In 1911 the Texas Legislature passed the first law authorizing county commissioner's courts to appropriate money for salaries to hire county extension agents and in 1914 Congress passed the Smith-Lever Act which provided for extension ofices in other states.

Today the Cooperative Extension Service is an entity of the Department of Agriculture and the land-grant system created by provisions of the Smith-Lever Act which directed attention to improving marketing systems and helping economic or socially disadvantaged persons to acquire skills and knowledge to improve their quality of life.

The act provided broad goals for the extension service but specified the programs should be targeted to agriculture and home economics and related subjects. States match federal dollars to support the program and, though not originally required by law, counties also contribute financial support.

Each state has the authority to name a land-grant educational institution with which to tie in their extension program. The extension program in Texas is tied in with Texas A & M University and is mandated to present programs which provide informal, non-credit education.

The original extension organizations have added home economics and youth programs to agriculture concerns but demonstration plots are still a major concern of the service and continue to provide farmers with updated information on farming techniques and supplies.

Dennis Newton, the Deaf Smith County Extension Service Administrator and Agriculture Agent, says there are now extension service programs in all 254 counties of Texas. "We are a vehicle to pass information from the university to people in rural areas who do not have access to new technical information," Newton says.

FRIDAY HIGH: 81 SATURDAY A.M. LOW: 53
MOISTURE: None reported at EFAN.
OUTLOOK: Fair Sunday with highs in mid 80s. Wind southwest 10 to 20 mph.

Hospital board calls meeting

A special called meeting of the Deaf Smith County Hospital District board will be at 6:30 a.m. in the conference room. Breakfast will be available.

The agenda items are: medical staff report, refinancing proposal, physician office building, and an executive session to discuss personnel.

County sets budget hearing

Deaf Smith County's proposed budget for 1987-88 is on the agenda for the commissioners' regular meeting Monday at 10 a.m. in the courthouse.

Other agenda items include discussion of funds for restoring La Plata Cemetery, county maps, a computer system, transfer of money from the Road and Bridge Fund to the General Fund, a bond fee proposal, and a central purchasing agent.

Also, action may be taken on an appointment to the Issue Council of the Waste Dept. Board of Commissioners, remodeling of offices in the courthouse, purchase of library equipment and a right of way for a water line.

Police say shooting was possible suicide

Police responded to a call at 4:18 a.m. Saturday to find Augustine Castillo, 21, dead from a self-inflicted gunshot wound to the head. Police said Castillo left no suicide note but shot himself in front of family witnesses in a residence at 189 South Douglas. Further information regarding the incident is pending completion of the investigation.

family disturbance on North Lee; domestic disturbance on Blevins; burglaries on the 300 block of Western and at two residences on the 400 block of Ave. J with over $5,000 dollars worth of items stolen from neighboring homes. Criminal mischief was reported at the Bull Barn and damage to trees and small shrubs was reported on Plains.

Five citations were issued and one minor accident was investigated.

Wichita Falls turns on namesake waterfall

WICHITA FALLS, Texas (AP) — Water began flowing over a $400,000, man-made waterfall, restoring part of Wichita Falls' heritage after a century-long absence.

The original falls were washed away more than 100 years ago. The mayor of Niagara Falls, Michael O'Laughlin, was on hand Friday to help commemorate the beginning of the new, three-tiered falls.

Water flowed over the bank of the Wichita River at 2:45 p.m. But the pump that will recirculate water from the river through the waterfall is not working properly because of heavy flooding last week.

Workers instead dragged fire hoses to the top of the falls and water was pumped through them.

Several thousand spectators, including people dressed as cartoon characters, attended the ceremony. Also present were hot dogs imported from Australia, balloons and music. Four T-38 jets from the 80th Flying Training Wing at Sheppard Air Force Base flew in formation overhead.

"Today the people are showing the nation what the community of Wichita Falls is doing," James D. Loneragan, master of ceremonies and publisher of the Wichita Falls Times and Record News, said.

"Creating a falls or the rebirth of the falls in Wichita Falls is something new and different from any other place in the world," O'Laughlin said.

The visiting mayor poured water from Niagara Falls onto a rock that was transported from the larger falls as a gift to Wichita Falls. A plaque was placed on the 2,500-pound rock.

A couple had traveled from Alexandria, Va., to visit a relative and see the waterfall.

money allocations, Newton says the extension service is now considered separately by legislators and the separation has resulted in budget cuts for the agency. "It is possible in the future we may even see further cuts which will involve combining counties into districts," he says.

The loss of an extension service office in Deaf Smith County would have serious repercussions on the local agriculture industry, Newton says. He noted that his office delivers information to every farmer in the county through an extensive mailing list.

The local extension service also meets face-to-face with residents on topical issues related to the ag industry and home economics. Over 800 people were recently informed about new techniques in water conservation through the local extension service, according to Newton.

Assistant Agriculture Agent Davy

Vestal and Home Economics Agent Beverly Harder assist Newton with local extension programs such as 4-H, Health Fair, Home Demonstration Clubs and agricultural programs such as crop tours and demonstration plots.

Clinics offered recently included instruction on how to estimate freeze damage, farm management, marketing and conferences on sugarbeets, beef, vegetables, cow-calf clinics and stocker cattle meetings.

The demonstration plot continues to play an important role in the valuable information the local extension service provides area farmers. 1986 demonstration plots in Deaf Smith County provided farmers with vital information on varieties of wheat, Russian wheat aphid control, yellow and white corn varieties, corn plant population, pheromone traps to monitor corn borers, corn irrigation, tailwater runoff, dryland and irrigated sorghum varieties, cotton, sugar beet varieties, sugar beet irrigations and fertilization, herbicide control of cholla, snakeweed control, onion pink root control and onion varieties.

Information derived from an extension plot in 1986 resulted in area farmers trying out a new variety for their 1987 crop. "We planted what was then numbers ARCO 1607," says Newton, "It was an intermediate onion which yielded 1121 sacks of onions an acre."

The onion is now named "Mid-Star" and, according to Newton, many area farmers are planting the new variety this year.

"I think this onion will be of economic benefit to our farmers because it will open a marketing window," Newton says.

He explains that onions bulb according to the length of daylight hours. "Short" onions, such as the Spanish and most other yellows, require less daylight to bulb. "Long" onions are generally the white onions and require longer periods of light during the day to form bulbs. A short onion crop is ready early in the spring while a long onion crop is not ready for harvest until late summer or early fall.

Newton says that an "intermediate" onion variety would be ready for harvest in early August when other farmers have already harvested early onions and before the late onion crop is developed.

The 1986 onion plot consisted of 33 varieties and was planted on land belonging to Roger Williams. The 1987 plot will demonstrate 51 varieties and is planted on land belonging to Pat Gallagher.

In addition to testing onion varieties Newton is conducting research on nitrogen use by onion plants. "This is part of an area wide study," he explains, "Each week we collect soil and onion samples for analysis in a Lubbock lab." The object of the study is to provide farmers with a better understanding of nitrogen use so that they can plan more efficient schedules for applying fertilizers.

With the many programs the Texas Agriculture Extension Service conducts and its continued interest in providing updated agricultural technology, the farmers of Deaf Smith County can count on being made aware of advancements in the agricultural industry.

HHS student musicians win high competition ratings

Several Hereford High musicians won superior and outstanding ratings on Monday in the Texas State Solo and Ensemble Contest in Austin. The 27 students in the group netted 10 medals in individual and group performances.

Earning superior ratings in solo events were 1987 seniors Christy Burford, for twirling, and Craig Rogers, for baritone.

Outstanding ratings were given to graduates Shyla Gerk, on bassoon solo, and Shannon Hacker, flute solo.

Also receiving a superior rating was a percussion ensemble performed by seniors Robbie Beene, Jerry Rodriguez, Ricky Ruiz, and Edna Soliz, with juniors Brian Stanaland and Jimmy Gowdy.

Nine others participated in solo events. They were: Diana Duncan, La Plata freshman, trombone; Michele Hamilton, sophomore, women's high voice; Teresa Jackson, senior, bassoon; Libby Kosub, La Plata freshman, oboe; Steven LaFuente, senior, trumpet; Cindy Latham, senior, french horn; Manda Lytal, senior, trumpet; Ulf Schoppa, trumpet; and Jill West, La Plata freshman, flute. Piano accompanist for soloist was Mrs. Jan Waiser, director of choral activities for Hereford Schools.

The following entered ensemble events: Kathy Banner, Lori Luper and Sophie Suarez, twirling trio; Bridget Baker, Shyla Gerk, Teresa Jackson and Trina Morgan, bassoon quartet; Steven LaFuente, Manda Lytal, Ulf Schoppa and Mark Scott, trumpet quartet; Allen Baum, Christy Burford, Andrew Gee and Cindy Latham, trumpet quartet.

Medals at the state contest are awarded to ensembles who win a superior rating and to soloists who earn a superior or outstanding rating.

The group visited the Texas State Capitol for the opening of the special session of the legislature on Tuesday before returning home.

these questions locally I don't know who will."

Dan Smith attended the ceremonies as a representative of Gov. Clement's Nuclear Waste Programs Office. He read a prepared statement praising the efforts of the volunteers and said, "We heartily endorse their commitment."

Questioned about a possible trade-off between the state and the DOE in relation to the site selection of the $6 billion dollar supercollider project, Smith categorically denied any link.

"We know of no deal being offered to trade the placement of the repository in Texas for the selection of the supercollider site," he said, "Both of these projects are expensive, and I think economics will play the most important role in their selection, with the repository the most critical factor will be the safety of the site selected."

Stating each citizen has a responsibility to get all the information on the repository program and the effects the site characterization process will have on the agriculturally based community, Auckerman said the goal of the new information center is to provide accurate, up-to-date information about the repository program.

Labor Department says

Engineering, computers top job list

WASHINGTON (AP) — Engineering, computers, business services and health professions continue to provide the nation's top job prospects, according to the U.S. Labor Department.

Those areas have the best long-term career outlook for young people planning ahead, reports Neil Rosenthal, chief of the department's Occupational Outlook Division.

"The service industries are the ones that are growing, especially the business services such as accounting firms and legal services," Rosenthal said in a telephone interview.

Indeed, overall service businesses have grown faster than goods-producing operations in recent years as rising incomes and living standards have helped produce demand for service workers.

And at the same time, while imported goods have captured a share of the market for American-made products, the same has not occurred in the service business field to any great extent.

A Labor Department analysis of expected trends, in fact, calls for as many as nine out of 10 new jobs between now and 1995 to be in the service sector of the economy, rather than in manufacturing or other goods producing activities.

Service occupations cover a wide range of employment, of course, ranging from the lawyers and accountants mentioned by Rosenthal to cleaning people, security guards, fire, police and corrections officers, bartenders and waiters and waitresses.

Health workers were also selected for special mention by Rosenthal, a category that covers not just doctors and dentists but also nurses, health technicians, dietitians, pharmacists and therapists.

"Employment in most of the health occupations is expected to grow faster than the average as the population growth — especially in the number of older people — increases the demand for health care," reported the Labor Department analysis.

Registered nurses, nursing aides and orderlies are expected to be among the leading new job categories. Strong growth is also expected for physician's assistants, medical record technicians and medical assistants.

Automation, however, may reduce some of the growth among laboratory technologists.

Computer systems analysts and engineers are also expected to see strong job growth, Rosenthal noted.

These groups will benefit from increased military spending and from growing automation in many areas of the economy, the department said. And general research is expected to offer more jobs for scientists.

Technicians who assist engineers and others should also see good job growth, although changing technology can affect the prospects in some specific areas.

"Employment of travel agents, security, sales workers and real estate agents is expected to grow faster or much faster than average," the department says.

Many full- and part-time jobs are also expected to open for cashiers and other retail workers as well for bookkeepers, accounting clerks, secretaries and shipping and receiving clerks. Again, however, improved office machines could limit some of this growth.

As offices add new machines to their inventories, prospects for repair technicians could improve, but the department warns that machines with better reliability could reverse that.

Other repair workers, such as auto mechanics, should see their job prospects improve at about the same rate as population growth, the Department says.

But the job outlook looks better than average for construction workers, with household and business growth and modernization expected to create new opportunities.

Construction employment is very sensitive to changes in the national economy, however, the department warns.

Another field where job growth is expected to be strong is social services, the department said, but it cautioned that "due to the number of people interested in these fields, competition for jobs is expected in many occupations — especially for academic positions ... social and recreation workers in public and voluntary agencies as well as for salaried positions for lawyers."

Declining enrollment and an abundance of qualified job-seekers is expected to create problems in finding college teaching jobs, and employment growth for high-school teachers is expected to be slow. Rising enrollment should improve prospects for grade-school teachers, however.

Ribbon Cutting Held

FFA orders tighter inspection of baggage

WASHINGTON (AP) — Airline passenger are lugging such things as Christmas trees and truck tires aboard jetliners, posing a safety hazard and prompting a Federal Aviation Order that airlines restrict carry-on luggage.

The agency said Friday airlines would have to adopt by the end of the year a program to limit the amount and size of baggage being taken into airliner cabins and to better screen passengers before they board.

The airlines have become "lax in their compliance" with existing baggage requirements, the agency complained. "Some passengers have evidently come to expect that they will be able to carry on almost anything."

For years, flight attendants have complained about unusual items taken aboard planes with some things such as personal computers becoming a problem during turbulence or if a plane needs to be evacuated.

"We've seen truck tires, Christmas trees, even a drive shaft from a BMW, and often passengers just bringing four or five bags on board which is not only unsafe but inconveniences the other passengers," said Matthew Finucane, safety director of the Association of Flight Attendants.

While the new requirements do not establish specific limits on size and number of items, the FAA told the airlines they must establish government-approved limits on the items that will be allowed into the cabin.

Airlines also must examine each passenger's bags before boarding to assure they do not exceed the limit. No plane will be allowed to close all its cabin doors until all items are properly stowed.

The rulemaking for carry-on baggage, which began three years ago, prompted thousands of letters to the FAA from airlines, passengers, unions and other interested parties. Travelers in recent years have pressured airlines to allow them to carry more bags with them on the plane because of concerns that their belongings will be lost as flights go through busy hub airports.

Tighter controls on baggage were favored by pilot and flight attendant groups as well as many passengers, the FAA said. Airlines expressed concern that strict limits would anger some passengers and cause delays in boarding.

Jewelers and musicians also complained that the limitations would hamper their business because they might not be able to carry sample cases or instruments. Officials in certain tourist areas also were worried it might discourage the purchase of duty-free items at airports.

"This rule will make it much less likely that passengers will be hit in the head by sewing machines or computer terminals during turbulence or crashes," said Finucane, the flight attendants union official. "It also makes it less likely that the aisles will be blocked by loose bags during an evacuation."

Palo Duro Mission begins seasonal church services

SUNDAY, JUNE 14th, the Palo Duro Mission will begin its 16th season in the big Cottonwood Grove just beyond Water Crossing No. 5. Services will continue through the last Sunday in August.

The meeting time will be changed this year from 11 a.m. to 9 a.m. to meet the needs of the campers who must leave early to travel to their next destination.

Many workers have contributed time and effort to the mission, but only three of the original staff members continue to serve; J.C. Newton, Canyon's cowboy preacher is still the pastor, and Glenda Wilkerson and Ann Brown still do publicity. Bobby and Kay Ellis and their children will transport the equipment again.

After 15 years of faithful service, Kenneth and Louise Baker have resigned as directors of the music. They will, however, lead the music on June 14th, and will make guest appearances occasionally.

Dr. and Mrs. W.J. Wooten donated a new organ to replace the little pump that breathed its last. They join a host of people who have served the mission's material needs.

The mission is sponsored by the First Baptist Church of Canyon, but laymen of all faiths are invited to speak. The speaker for the opening service will be Gary Pool, the Loan Review Officer at The Tulia National Bank.

Worshipping under the cottonwood trees is a unique experience not soon forgotten. The mission provides a place for campers to worship without leaving the canyon, and a spiritual retreat for everyone. Come as you are—and bring your guitar.

Declaring Special Observance

Ruth Newsom, left, looks on as Mayor Wes Fisher signs a proclamation stating that September 17, 1987 will be celebrated as U.S. Constitution Day. Newsom was appointed chairman of the Hereford Bicentennial Community Committee, which will oversee various local events in the next few months commemorating the 200th anniversary of the signing of the historical document.

Local ministers to return

Two local Methodist ministers were reappointed to their Hereford churches and two retiring ministers were honored during the recent 1987 Northwest Texas Annual Conference of the United Methodist Church.

Rev. Steve McElroy, pastor of First United Methodist Church in Hereford and Rev. Daniel Reyna, associate pastor of that church and pastor of San Pablo United Methodist Church of Hereford, will return for their second year of ministry here.

Rev. Wallace Kirby and Rev. Walter White of Hereford were among the retiring ministers recognized for years of service. Others included Dr. Darris Egger of Sweetwater, C.B. Melton of Pampa, Lyman Wood of Brownfield, and R.

Claude Nixon of Hermleigh. Retiring diaconal minister honored was Frances Richards of Paducah.

The conference, with Bishop Louis W. Schowengerdt presiding, met in the First United Methodist Church of Lubbock June 1-4.

In addition, United Methodist ministers who died during the past year were memorialized during the conference. They included:

The Rev. Robert W. Brown of Lubbock, Sept. 22, 1986; the Rev. Wayland A. Dowden of Snyder, Nov. 8, 1986; the Rev. R.H. Knight of Childress, Dec. 20, 1986; the Rev. Thomas Jenkins of Ropesville, Jan. 6, 1987; and the Rev. Cecil Tune of Lubbock, April 23, 1987.

200th anniversary of Constitution to be commemorated

The city of Hereford has been invited to become a Bicentennial Community by the Texas Commission for the Bicentennial of the United States Constitution.

The four-month period leading up to the September 17, 1787, signing of the constitution is the focus of this year's celebration. The Federal Convention, which met to form the constitution, began in late May of 1787 with efforts culminating in the September signing. The September date in 1987 will be commemorated as Constitution Day.

The purpose of observing the 200th anniversary of the signing of the United States Constitution is to allow the "American people to rededicate themselves to the great principles that have formed the basis for our national strength and prosperity," according to the proclamation signed by Mayor Fisher.

As a designated Bicentennial Community, Hereford is required to establish a Bicentennial committee, educate residents about the meaning and significance of the Constitution, and receive an official designation from the federal Commission.

Ruth Newsom has been appointed by Mayor Wesley Fisher to chair the Hereford Bicentennial Community Committee. Other members of the committee are Miles Caudle, Eula Lee Cave, Joe D. Rogers, Elvira Soto, and Mary Williamson. "The goal of the committee is to educate the public about the Constitution as well as to honor it," said Newsom.

The Hereford Bicentennial Community Committee plans include encouraging all organizations in the county to designate a program on the Constitution this year. A bibliography of books for reference will be available from the committee. Also, all individuals and businesses will be urged to display the flag of the United States of America on Constitution Day, September 17, to commemorate the signing of this historical document.

According to national chairman Warren E. Burger, Chief Justice (1969-86), "The creation and development of our representative government from Revolution through Independence and to the present is a remarkable story that is best commemorated through local observance."

Health insurance

Senator Edward Kennedy has come up with a dandy idea. He would have a federal law requiring every business in the United States to provide health insurance for all employees and pay at least 80 percent of the premiums.

Sen. Kennedy says this law has a lot of appeal because it will not cost the taxpayer. Business will pay it all. Obviously Sen. Kennedy has never run a business or he would know that most small businesses are already taxed to the hilt and are having a hard time staying alive.

A majority of American businesses already have some form of health insurance for employees. Some firms pay all the premium; others require employees to pay a portion, but health insurance is voluntary, as it probably should be. But to lock some business firms into an expense over which they have no control is unfair.

The cost of medical care has been far and away the fastest rising expense paid by business and individuals. The Wall Street Journal reported recently that after two years of fairly modest increases, health insurance costs are starting to skyrocket again. Average prices for employee medical benefits can jump as much as 20 percent this year.

Sen. Kennedy's plan, requiring the complete cost control of all medical people, is a form of socialized medicine and has been fought bitterly. In England, where socialized medicine has been in effect for a number of years, the costs are contained because the government sets them. Whether or not this has resulted in better medical care is a subject for debate. Most Americans, and certainly most medical people, argue that the American system of free enterprise medicine is far superior.

We have no argument against assuring that all Americans have medical care. The difficult part comes in determining how that is to be accomplished. As individuals, most of us are frustrated when we pay premiums for hospitalization and our neighbors use their money for booze and partying. Later, we pay for their medical care through benefit suppers or tax money assessed for indigent care.

Uncle Sam (another term for taxpayers) shouldn't have to take care of people from cradle to grave. Too many do-gooders, such as Sen. Kennedy, are trying to do just that and we need to stop that march toward socialism! Too many folks make no plans for medical care. They use the alibi that they don't believe in insurance, so they can use those premiums for their own satisfaction. They also believe that Uncle Sam is going to take care of them if anything goes wrong. That's a perception under a socialized government, not one of free enterprise.

Reform of tort laws needed

By RICHARD L. LESHER
President
Chamber of Commerce
of the United States

WASHINGTON — They say there are always two sides to every issue, but for the life of me I cannot make any sense at all of the arguments against reform of our liability and tort laws.

To be sure, there are many outspoken opponents of reform, including trail lawyers and consumer activists like Ralph Nader. But while they rant and rave loudly against reform, their words are long on volume and short on logic.

The general thrust of their argument is that the insurance industry, not the legal system, is primarily responsible for the liability insurance crisis. Insurance companies are making money hand over fist, they contend, and could easily afford to write liability policies if only they weren't so greedy.

But there is a fundamental flaw in that line of reasoning. Insurance companies are businesses, not charities, and as such are engaged in the process of making money, not giving it away. It isn't a matter of greed. Rather, it is a matter of ethical, moral and legal responsibility to stockholders.

There is nothing mysterious about the insurance business. As in any business, it basically boils down to making certain the income exceeds the outgo.

An insurance company has two main sources of income—money paid to it in premiums for policies and money made through investments of those premium dollars.

An insurance company has one main expense other than personnel and administrative costs—paying insurance claims. Thus, it is imperative that every insurance company make certain its income from premiums and investments will exceed its payout for claims.

To accomplish this, they make projections based upon experience. They are able to surmise, for example, that a driver with a clean record is less likely to have an accident than one with three drunken driving convictions. The cost of an insurance policy, whether it be for cars, houses or life, is based upon proven experience used to project the payout on claims.

Today, we see the cost of liability insurance going through the roof, in some cases unavailable at any price, and the reason is simple. The law has become so open-ended and unpredictable that insurance companies can no longer make rational projections of what the payout on claims will be. Liability insurance has become a form of Russian roulette that insurance firms are reluctant to get involved in, and wisely so.

There is one, and only one, viable solution to this crisis. We must bring reason and restraint back to liability law. We need product liability reform on the federal level and tort law reform on the state level. Until such reforms are achieved, liability will remain totally unpredictable and the cost of liability insurance, when it is available at all, will remain out of sight.

WHAT'S THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN AN UNRULY MOB AND A GROUP OF DEMOCRATIC CANDIDATES?

Doug Manning

The Penultimate Word

EVERYONE KNOWS CLINT

Friends, Romans, countrymen, and you all (I come from southern Rome). I come to praise Clint Formby, not to bury him. I am convinced that everyone in the whole world knows Clint. I run around the country telling folks I am from Hereford, Texas. As soon as the word is out of my mouth somebody says, "Do you know Clint Formby?" I never know whether to admit it or not, but since everyone else knows Clint I am afraid I will appear to be stupid if I say I do not.

I went to Rome to see the Pope. I was standing in the huge crowd waiting for the Holy Father to speak from his balcony. When he came out there was a group of folks with him. I was not sure which one of the group was the Pope, so I asked a native standing near me in the crowd. He said he did not know who the guy in the funny hat was, but the one in the yellow tie was Clint Formby from Hereford, Texas. It seems Clint drops in every once in awhile to fuss at them about their Christmas lights.

I went to the Grand Canyon. When they found out I was from Hereford they almost threw me into the gorge. Clint had been there raising Cain about the weeds. It seems Clint thinks they should clean out the weeds all the way to the bottom.

I got a shoe shine in the airport in St. Louis. They know Clint there. He doesn't tip.

The bellhops in San Francisco remember him well. He told them how to dress.

Have you ever noticed those ads for a group of hotels in New York with a picture of a pretty lady who owns the hotels? Hemsley Palace, I think, is the name. Clint spends a great deal of time there telling her about some dust in his room. She knows him well.

I know it will never happen, but I can dream, can't I. One day, somewhere in the world, someone is going to say, "Clint who?" When, and if, that happy day comes I plan to move there and be at peace with my weeds, my Christmas light, and my world that doesn't run just right. 'Til then—love ya Clint.

Warm Fuzzles,

Valedictorian challenges HHS grads

Valedictory Address
By Dale West

I'd like to get my thank-you's done first, because I did not get to this platform tonight by myself. First of all, I would like to thank God. I want to thank my parents and Jill for many years of love and support. I would like to thank my grandparents and all my other relatives for their encouragement and games of "I Can Count". I would like to thank a special group of people by name: Mrs. Sparks, Mrs. Wood, Mrs. McCarley, Mrs. Hammock, Mrs. Andrews, Mrs. Sims, Mrs. Garcia, Mrs. Paschel, Mrs. Brown, Mrs. Conway, Mrs. Southward, Mrs. Priest, Mr. McGilvary, Mrs. Huffaker, Mrs. Kerr, Mrs. Jackson, Mrs. Saul, Miss Jackson, Mr. Jenkins, Coach Nino, Mrs. Anthony, Mr. McGee, Mrs. Easley, Mrs. Barber, Mrs. Walker, Mrs. Kosub, Mrs. Reiter, Mr. Igal, Mr. Farr, Mr. Nall, Mr. and Mrs. Rogers, Miss Syd, Mr. Phillips, Coach Bixler, Mrs. Clements, Coach Fields, Coach Turner, Coach Young, Mrs. Zinck, Mrs. Brooks, Mrs. Johnson, Mr. Perkins, Mr. and Mrs. Kelso, Mrs. Powell, Mrs. Billingsley, Mr. Kelley and Mrs. Abney, and all the other administrators and teachers in the HHS.

No one here can honestly say they failed to find quality teaching when they made the slightest effort to do so. And, finally, I would like to thank the Class of 1987 for allowing me to represent you as your president for the past two years.

And what years they have been! It seems like three weeks since that first day when we walked in and began hating senior guys for dating sophomore girls. It seems like two weeks ago we were juniors and we really didn't care what you thought about it. It seems like a week ago when we were serving up tacos, planning for the senior banquet and prom that were so far away. Well, all those things are done now and if there is one thing I can impress upon you tonight, it is this: we've had a great past but now we've got a future to live.

We are 250 individuals tonight. I don't know all your names. I don't think anybody knows everybody. But we share a common bond, the graduates of 1987. We have been experimented on from day one—we've been through everything from bilingual education to the pairing plan to the new jam dress code. But it didn't stop us.

It didn't stop us from taking our football team as far as an HHS football team has ever been, from having the best quarterback and the most exciting game ever. It didn't stop us from having 79 honor students. Isn't that crazy? One quarter of this class is made up of honor students. We just have an amazing class. We're really hard to stop. Some trick of population takes away our best school rival, so we just make ourselves a new one. And then we best 'em! I am proud to say that in just one year, we have Canyon hating us just as bad as Plainview ever did. Now that's an accomplishment!

But guys, we can't stop here. This year the Key Club received first place in two states in achievement for the first time ever. But do you think Casey Daniel isn't going to go on to bigger and better things? Of course he will. This year the Future Farmers of America sold $50,000 worth of fruit, took a ski trip, and won third place in state in parliamentary procedure. Do you think Chris Urbanczyk is going to sit around and watch TV for the rest of his life? I doubt it. Our

Bootleg Philosopher

Editor's note: The Bootleg Philosopher on his Johnsongrass Farm on Tierra Blanca Creek looks at the garbage problem this week.

Dear editor:

The mistake made by the captain of the tug boat towing that barge loaded with 31 tons of garbage nobody wanted was that he set sail with it in the wrong time of the year. He should have waited for the hurricane season.

You see, it's against the law to dump garbage in the ocean. Highways, parks and beaches are the places for that. And with the Environmental Protection Agency watching him, that captain's only choice was to head for a barge-sinking hurricane. But it's the wrong time of the year for that. His weather charts were out of date.

Now garbage is no laughing matter. I read that Americans generate about 220 million tons of garbage each year. Up to now the only solution city officials have figured out is to bury the stuff in a landfill located in an area containing the fewest registered voters.

But many, maybe most, cities are running out of low voter-registered places. As a result they have a hand-wringing crisis nobody has the answer to.

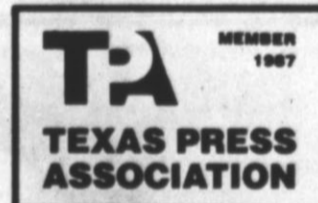

I have given this problem considerable thought. Where's a fair, acceptable place to dump the nation's garbage? Certainly not anywhere around this farm out here. Or anybody else's farm or golf course or country club or court house or city hall or the Atlantic or the Pacific.

But there is one place, a place where nobody lives, where there are no flies and dumped garbage would, in 15 or 20 minutes, become quick-frozen and odor-free.

The place of course is the forever-frozen millions of uninhabited acres around the North Pole.

How we'd get the garbage there is somebody else's problem. I don't handle details.

Yours faithfully,
J.A.

1986-87 student council was the best it has ever been. But do you think after tonight Christy Burford is going to go downhill? No way.

Seniors—enjoy that title because in about an hour we'll all be that discarded life form known as the "ex". Just because we did a lot doesn't give us an excuse to stop doing.

Each of us can expect to live for about 75 years. Now that means that we're just a little less than one quarter through our lives. We still have three quarters to go. And you can't live 75 percent of our life on memories of Texas Stadium, folks. You have to go out there and have new experiences and make new accomplishments. Our class song is called "Never Say Goodbye" but I challenge you to say goodbye, if that's what you want. I challenge you to stay here if you see the opportunity. I challenge you to have good marriages and raise good kids. That's what this world needs. I won't get up here and tell you that you have to go out and join the Peace Corps or that you need to end apartheid all by yourself. But what you do, do well. And live each day like it is the best day of your life.

A lot of older people will tell you that right now is the best time of your life. They're lying, or forgetful, or maybe it's true for them, but that is their own fault. They don't remember two-a-days, or dateless Friday nights, or zits. Yes, this year or this month or this night might be a pretty high peak for you. It is for me. But I beg you, don't let it be THE peak. I promise you I have not reached my summit yet.

When I come back for the 10-year reunion in 1997, I don't want to say: "Carol, remember that math contest in Portales when we won in the last minute of the last game of the last match?" I want to say: "Four kids and a PhD? How did you do it, Carol?" And I don't want to say, "Laura, remember when you fell on your butt in Palo Duro Canyon and we had to help you get the cactus needles out?" I want to say, "Dr. Osburn, did you meet any Swedish guys when you accepted the Nobel prize?" And I don't want to say, "Katie, remember when we ran up and down the escalator in the Smithsonian Museum?" I want to say, "Hey, Katie, that Grammy acceptance speech was a little long!"

Graduation is a fun time. People give you banquets; old men slap you on the back and say, "Proud of ya, boy!" But when you leave tonight, I challenge you to remember this graduation is like a Town & Country on the interstate of life—you can stop and stretch, gas up, get a snack and use the clean restrooms. But then you should get back in the car. And if that's what you choose to do, I know the Hereford High School class of 1987 can go a long way down that road.

Every day, more than 167,000,000 Americans — seven out of 10 adults read a daily newspaper.

Rankings in state over the past 20 years

The Freeman File's top 10 Texas coaches

An AP Sports Analysis
By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

There's Tom Landry, Darrell Royal, Jody Conradt, Jim Killingsworth, Gerald Myers, Grant Teaff and Shelby Metcalf.

But the best coach or manager may be that bantam-sized batter down in Austin—Cliff Gustafson.

How does an 83 percent winning record over the last 20 years sound?

His Texas Longhorn baseball teams have not only won nine straight Southwest Conference titles but have appeared in the NCAA playoffs 18 times. On 14 occasions, Gustafson's clubs have advanced to the College World Series in Omaha.

Before Texas' most recent visit to Nebraska this week, the Longhorns had won two national titles, finished second twice, third on five occasions and fourth three times.

He has coached 25 first-team All-Americans and almost 100 of his players have gone into professional baseball. He's also turned out doctors, lawyers and business executives.

Roger Clemens, the 1986 American League Cy Young award winner, was in a club that included former teammates Calvin Schiraldi and Spike Owen.

Gustafson might never have had a chance for success if Darrell Royal, Texas athletic director at the time, hadn't taken a chance and hired Gustafson away from his South San Antonio High School job.

"I had a lot of names for the job but I kept hearing about Gustafson," Royal said. "It was an easy decision." Gustafson said he had never "daydreamed" that he would coach at Texas.

"I was not presumptuous enough to believe they would offer a job to a high school coach," he said.

His success formula is simple. Fundamentals, fundamentals, and more fundamentals. He keeps statistics on every player at every practice to make sure their intensity level is high.

Infielders take a minimum of 100 ground balls at every practice. Video tapes are used for hitters and pitchers.

Gustafson has an old formula: "I believe you should have fun when you play but I never saw anybody have fun when they lose."

And Gustafson has a quiet way of celebrating when Texas wins. He fixes a peanut butter and honey sandwich and drinks iced tea from a fruit jar.

Here, then, is The Freeman File's top 10 coach or manager rankings in Texas over the past 20 years:

1, Gustafson. The best combination of a teacher and strategist in Texas sports.

2, Royal. His Texas football teams were always well-prepared and his SWC titles, national titles, and 75 percent winning record speak for themselves.

3, Landry. The Dallas Cowboys have been in five Super Bowls and won two of them. He perseveres through thick and thin.

4, Myers. The Texas Tech basketball coach does more with less than anybody you can name.

5, Killingsworth. The retired Texas Christian basketball coach called "Killer" was brilliant and the ultimate competitor.

6, Dave Williams, Houston golf coach. He's retiring but leaves behind a trophy case crammed with national and individual NCAA titles.

7, Conradt. The Texas women's basketball coach has no bench peers. A great recruiter.

8, Teaff. A superb recruiter and motivator. His teams annually overachieve.

9, Metcalf. The sleepy-eyed Texas A&M basketball coach showed once again in the SWC Post-Season Classic that he can outfox folks.

10, Tom Kimbrough. The Plano

High School football coach consistently turns out well-drilled championship teams.

Game three is Sunday afternoon

Will Lakers beat Celtics in four straight?

By HOWARD ULMAN
AP Sports Writer

BOSTON (AP) — The Forum fans who yelled "sweep" weren't alone in voicing the possibility of a four-game final for the NBA championship. The question now being asked isn't who will win the title but how many games the Los Angeles Lakers will need to do it.

"We know everybody's talking that they can beat us in four or five games," Boston's Larry Bird said after hearing the Laker partisans' chant in the fourth quarter Thursday night. "But we've played very, very hard to get here. So far, things haven't worked to our advantage."

"They haven't been in it," Los Angeles center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar said of the Celtics. "But that doesn't mean they are going to let down. Will we sweep? It's only possible for us to do it. Ask me after Game 3."

The question may be posed at about 4 p.m. EDT Sunday at Boston Garden after the third game of the best-of-seven championship series. Game 4 will be at the Garden Tuesday night. The Celtics also will be home for a fifth game, if necessary, Thursday night.

It won't be necessary, however, if the Lakers continue to dominate as they did in winning the first two games, 126-113 and 141-122, at Los Angeles. The Celtics couldn't stop the Lakers' running game or Michael Cooper's 3-point gunning.

Since Bird joined the team in 1979, the Celtics have been involved in four 4-0 sweeps, winning three. But they are in danger of joining the 1983 Lakers as the only defending champions to be swept in the finals. Boston's hope of becoming the first repeat champions since the 1969 Celtics also is in jeopardy.

After the losses to the Lakers Tuesday night and Thursday night, the Celtics fell to 4-16 in their last 20 road games. They figure to play better at the Garden, where they have won 84 of 86 games.

But, Boston center Robert Parish said, "If you're not playing well, it doesn't matter where you are. And right now, we're not playing very well."

On top of that, the Celtics haven't been nearly as successful at home against Los Angeles as against other teams.

Starting with the 1985 playoffs, Boston is 102-5 at the Garden, but only 2-3 against the Lakers. Los Angeles is the only team to beat the Celtics at the Garden during the regular season.

"They beat us there once this year and we played pretty well" in a 117-110 loss on Dec. 12, Bird said. "You've got to look at it realistically. They've got three chances to win one game."

In that loss last December, Parish and forward Kevin McHale were healthy. Now they are playing with foot and ankle injuries, respectively, that have limited their contributions and ability to run with the relentlessly fast-breaking Lakers.

Los Angeles is 13-1 in the playoffs and healthy. Boston is 11-8 and hurting. The Lakers hit 61.5 percent of their field goal attempts in Game 2, but Boston Coach K.C. Jones said his own offense is the problem.

"I can't remember a team that fast breaks as well" as Los Angeles, he said. "But that's all because our offense self-destructed. When you do that against L.A., the party is over."

New Mavs coach wants team to peak in playoffs

DALLAS (AP) — New Dallas Mavericks head coach John MacLeod says he wants to field the kind of team that would peak when it got into the NBA playoffs.

"Everybody keeps asking me if I can win 55 games like this year's team did," said MacLeod, 49, who was hired Thursday night to replace Dick Motta. "If we win 50 games or 49 games, fine, but the most important thing is that we be ready to play in the playoffs."

Dallas was eliminated in the first round of the NBA playoffs this year by Seattle after winning the Midwest Division.

The toughest thing MacLeod has to do is improve the Mavs' mental concentration, he said.

"I want to build on the tradition here and this team looks like it could use a little more mental toughness," he said. "It's most important that we be ready to get to a higher level of the NBA playoffs. I want a team attitude where if you get knocked down, you bounce back up."

Mrs. Valentine, Mrs. Landry, Mrs. Wacker tell about it

What is the life of coaches' wives like?

By MIKE TOWLE
Fort Worth Star-Telegram
FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — If Texas Rangers manager Bobby Valentine needs an extra baseball brain to pinch hit, he knows where to look.

Behind the screen in back of home plate at Arlington Stadium is a box seat usually occupied by baseball superfan Mary Valentine, wife of the manager. Mary has a panoramic view from which to anticipate her husband's managerial moves and contemplate solutions to the knotty problems of baseball.

Is it time to change pitchers? Will a squeeze bunt work here? Can a hit-and-run work in this situation? Is there a God?

"I'm more right than wrong when I think of what he's going to do," Mary Valentine said. "I really understand the game and like it a lot. It never gets old and every game is different."

Few managers' or coaches' wives carry the professional clout of a Nancy Reagan. They don't have final say in the hiring and firing of coaching staffs nor do they write out starting lineups.

In most cases, a coach's wife has her hands full helping to raise a family, smiling through the loneliness of her husband's frequent absences, providing an understanding ear and a shoulder to lean on.

Some wives, however, have a strong influence on decisions ultimately made in the dugout, on the bench, or along the sidelines.

When Texas Christian football coach Jim Wacker was head coach at Texas Lutheran College, he once faced a dilemma that needed domestic assistance. A rash of injuries had sidelined all of the team's running backs. Wacker was stymied. He finally told his wife, Lil, about the problem.

Lil Wacker reminded her husband that tight end Steve Bohnert had been a running back in high school. The next day, Wacker huddled with his assistant coaches and moved Bohnert to running back.

"He rushed for over 100 yards in each of our next two games," Wacker said. "This is a people business, and it's nice to be able to go home and have a sounding board. It varies from coach to coach and wife to wife. I know I've gotten a lot of valuable insight."

One of Valentine's hardest decisions last year was releasing veteran pitcher Burt Hooton. Valentine and Hooton are longtime friends and former teammates. Although Hooton's release seemed inevitable as part of Valentine's youth movement, it was painful. That's where Mary helped out.

"Bobby hashed that over with me for a week or two and didn't feel good about doing it," Mary said. "He brings a lot home with him. Each game, he really discusses it with me to air it out."

"When he has to cut young players, he sometimes asks me, 'Would you like to do my job today while I take care of little Bobby and ride the horses?'"

Mary Valentine has been along for the ride long enough to know that her box seat is the next best thing to being there.

"She understands the strategy of the game — the hit-and-run, the bunt, the missed-tag play, the appeal play," Valentine said. "This is no foreign language to her. We can use part of our social life to talk baseball, and it always is a good conversation."

"She could probably do everything that had to be done (to manage the team), except some of the teaching aspects," he said.

"I'll leave the managing in the dugout to my husband," she said. "I would get too nervous because there's high pressure in that dugout to make the right moves. But I guess I could do the easy games, like when we get staked to a nine-run lead."

Dallas Cowboys coach Tom Landry says of his wife, Alicia, "We discuss things I wouldn't discuss with anyone else ... personal things. It's not something you go out of your way to seek, but it does come up a lot in conversation."

Alicia said she is content being a football fan.

"What he (Landry) knows about football is so much greater than what I know. I don't give any tips," she said. "I don't know most of the positions players play and don't want to know who's competing against who for a position."

"I do know that the officials are sometimes wrong. I wouldn't say I'm a strategist, but sometimes at games I hear comments I know are utterly ridiculous."

Wacker said he talks frequently with his wife about football.

"I don't ever ask her if we should run or pass on third-and-short, but yeah, we do a lot of sharing on the human aspect of the game. She's my No. 1 confidante in this respect."

After having been married to a football coach for 25 years, Lil Wacker said, "People tease me about being an assistant coach, but I'm not. I was a little bit when we started out, as Jim did a lot of his thinking through me. If I have a suggestion now, it's just a reminder of what he has done before."

"I'm not always sweet and supportive, because I get so involved in it myself. I just try to use good judgment, which I try to do in any human relationship."

Mary Valentine said people see her husband as effervescent and bubbly, "but when he gets quiet and serious, I know something is happening. That's what it was like one night (during spring training) before he had to cut some kids.

"Spring training is fun for most people, but he says, 'I hate spring training.' There are so many decisions to make. There are so many people to be cut. It's going to hurt, even when the players are expecting it."

This is not a career choice that Mary Valentine has been stuck with involuntarily. She helped push her husband into accepting a managerial position.

"She understood when I was coaching (third base for the New York Mets) that there was a lot of frustration in not running the club," Valentine said. "When the (Rangers) job offer was made, she gave me a push, saying I needed another challenge."

"So I took a bite of the apple, and she has helped me digest it. She's everything to me. She allows me to give such an effort to my profession and doesn't demand much of my time."

Rettman feted with bridal shower

Bride-Elect Honored

A bridal shower was held Thursday evening at the E.B. Black House for Duann Rettman, June 20 bride-elect of Doug Warren. Welcoming guests with the honoree were (from left) her grandmother, Mrs. Fred Waggoner of Dimmitt; her mother, Mrs. David Rettman; and the prospective groom's mother, Mrs. Walt Warren.

Duann Rettman, bride-elect of Doug Warren, was honored Thursday evening with a shower in the E.B. Black House, 508 W. 3rd.

Receiving guests with Rettman were her mother, Mrs. David Rettman, and the prospective bridegroom's mother, Mrs. Walt Warren. They were presented corsages of royal blue and peach silk flowers, the honoree's chosen colors.

Special out-of-town guests included the honoree's grandmother, Mrs. Fred Waggoner of Dimmitt, and the prospective groom's sisters, Mrs. Billie Watson, and Mrs. Jim Pemberton, both of Amarillo, and his aunts, Mrs. Thelma Wethington, Sister Josella, and Mrs. Paul Venhaus, all of Nazareth.

La Gay Carlson was seated at the guest registry.

Dina Warren and Wendy Roe served refreshments of assorted fresh fruit, cookies, nuts and punch from a table covered with white lace tablecloth over peach colored cloth, centered with a floral arrangement of royal blue and peach silk flowers. Also, accenting the table were the silver punch bowl, two crystal candlesticks holding peach candles, and peach napkins.

Sharing hostess duties were Anna Conklin, Marlene Roe, Roberta Last, Annette Albracht, Margie Ford,

Dolores Foster, Judy Detten, Vonnie Elliott, Pat Whitson and Kee Ruland. Also Nan Gauthreaux, Vi Moore, Ellen Collins, Edna Reinart, Pat Scott, Teresa Paetzold, Mary Kay

McQuigg, Oleta Hoffman, Nancy Paetzold and Nita Lea.

The couple will be united in marriage on June 20 at St. Anthony's Catholic Church in Hereford.

Extension News

Add a big bonus to your food dollar by shopping for ground beef. Special sales on ground beef are important money savers. Before buying, review how to get the most for your money.

Consider which lean to fat category of ground beef will be the best buy. The three categories of leanness are seated on the label:

-Not less than 70 percent lean-lower price.

-Not less than 75 percent lean-medium price.

-Not less than 85 percent lean-higher price.

One recent USDA study compared 75 percent lean to 85 percent lean ground beef. Both lost about the same amount of weight, but the 75 percent lean lost more fat and the 85 percent lean lost more water. The 75 percent lean patty, or least costly one, was judged the more juicy and flavorful.

Also anticipate how you will be preparing the ground beef. If you are using the meat in a recipe without browning first, or in a low calorie recipe, then you'll prefer the 85 percent lean ground beef. Leaner meat creates a firm produce which cooks slower than the one with higher fat content.

The 75 percent lean ground beef is also recommended for recipes in which the meat does not have to be browned before adding other ingredients. It reduces the cost of preparing meat loaf, meat balls, or ground beef casseroles. You get a firm produce (at a lesser cost) with this type of ground beef.

Make note of the amount of ground beef to be purchased. One pound contains about four (3 ounce) servings after it is cooked. Buying in large economy packages usually provides more meat for less money. To repackage a large amount of beef into smaller servings, re-wrap in moisture proof freezer paper and freeze immediately. If you will be preparing the ground beef in patties, shape the patties prior to freezing them.

Think of the nutritional value of ground beef when you buy. You want the most nutrition you can buy for your money. Ground beef provides complete protein which helps maintain growth and repair of body tissues. Beef is a good source of the B-complex vitamin which helps change food to energy and aids in digestion. It provides iron needed for healthy red blood cells and the transfer of oxygen to cells. Beef also adds zinc which is needed for chemical changes that occur in protein, carbohydrate and fats after digestion and absorption.

Let ground beef be a real bonus for you. Remember it when considering cost, versatility, nutrition and just plain good flavor.

What next for the band of the '80s?

NEW YORK (AP) — The new Kool & the Gang album is a hit. They have another single, "Stone Love," topping the charts — their second from this record. And they're starting a sold-out national tour.

So what else is new? Success has become the rule rather than the exception for the band, which has recorded more hit singles (16) during the 1980s than Michael Jackson, Prince, The Police or any other act. But the band feels a change coming on — a change their next record should reflect.

"We just feel a yearning to do something exciting," said bassist Robert "Kool" Bell. "Maybe a little funkier — it's hard to say right now. But it will definitely be a change."

Don't expect a radical change from the Gang, though. They learned the hard way in the late 1970s that change won't pay the bills.

"We had a period in the mid-'70s when we had hits like 'Hollywood Swingin' and 'Jungle Boogie,' and all that was fine," Bell recalled. "And then our next album took a different direction, and people said, 'Wow, they sure did make a radical change.'"

That led into a decline of several years when the band, which formed in 1964 as the Jazzacs of Jersey City, N.J., suffered some hard times — a stretch which ended in 1979 when lead singer James "JT" Taylor joined the band.

"It was like he'd been there all the time," said guitarist Charles Smith. "It was part of our destiny at the time that another element would come into play. It wasn't the time until then," Bell said.

If it was fate which brought Taylor into the band, it was Taylor who brought the band back to the charts.

Their first album featuring JT and his smooth vocals — now the focus of the band's sound — produced the hits "Too Hot" and "Ladies' Night."

The comeback was capped the next year by "Celebration," the mega-hit single and album, and followed in succession by a string of hits: "Get Down on It," "Steppin' Out," "Let's Go Dancin'," "Big Fun," "Fresh," "Cherish" and "Joanna," among others.

If flood damage is not severe

Saturation should help most Texas crops

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Thunderstorms roamed over much of Texas the past week, dumping heavy rains in many sections that caused extensive flooding and some loss of crops and livestock, says Dr. Zerle L. Carpenter, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

While the rains were beneficial for farmers and ranchers in some locations, livestock and young crops were victims of heavy deluges in parts of South and South Central Texas. Some crop losses also resulted in western areas and in the plains. Flooding caused heavy damage to rural roads and bridges in some locations.

Much of the state is now saturated with moisture, which should help crops, pastures and ranges make good progress, Carpenter said in his weekly report on the state's agriculture. In low areas with poor drainage, some fields are under water and crop losses are likely, he said. On the other hand, a few dry spots remain in some southern and western counties.

Wet conditions have hampered field operations, such as crop cultivation, hay making and wheat harvesting. The heavy rains and some high winds have caused some lodging in mature wheat in central areas, Carpenter noted.

Where field conditions permit, farmers in the plains and western areas are still planting cotton and sorghum. Improved moisture conditions in many western sections should take some pressure off early crop irrigation.

Plenty of stock water is now available for livestock over most of the state, and grasses on pastures and ranges should make rapid growth in the coming weeks, Carpenter said.

Vegetables in the Winter Garden and Rio Grande Valley were damaged by the heavy rains, particularly the onion crop in the Winter Garden that has been ready to harvest for the past two to three weeks. Watermelons and cantaloupes suffered heavy damage in many locations. Reports from district Extension directors showed these conditions.

PANHANDLE: Recent rains have slowed cotton and sorghum planting but have given a boost to pastures and ranges. Wheat is turning color while sugar beets, peanuts, onions and potatoes are making good progress. Cattle on graze-out wheat have made excellent gains.

SOUTH PLAINS: Rains of 2 to 10 inches in southern counties caused heavy damage to the cotton crop that was about 50 percent planted. The excessive moisture as well as some hail has been detrimental to crop conditions. A lot of cotton will have to be replanted, and cotton seed is already in short supply. Corn and sorghum as well as ranges are making good progress.

ROLLING PLAINS: Up to 10 and 12 inches of rain fell in some locations the past week although a few locations are still dry. The heavy rains halted wheat harvesting and cotton planting; hail and high winds caused some damage to mature wheat. The heavy rains also washed out terraces in some counties. Vegetables, watermelons and cantaloupes were damaged by heavy rains in King and Knox counties.

Secondary mortgage market may harm Farm Credit

WASHINGTON (AP) — A secondary market for farm mortgage loans would merely accelerate the loss of quality borrowers that already has put the Farm Credit System on the financial ropes, a key Treasury official says.

"We are in danger of raping the system of its best borrowers for the benefit of private interests, using the federal credit to do it," Charles D. Sethness told a House panel Wednesday.

Private lenders who now lack much interest in farm mortgage loans and often leave them to the Farm Credit System will move into the field in force if federal guarantees become available, said Sethness, assistant treasury secretary for domestic finance.

That, in turn, would drain choice borrowers from the Farm Credit System, Sethness told the House Agriculture Committee's subcommittee on conservation, credit and rural development.

Lenders bunch loans and sell them with federal guarantees to investors in secondary markets, three of which already exist for home mortgages. One, for example, is the Federal National Mortgage Association, popularly known as Fannie Mae.

Sethness' remarks brought a sharp retort from Rep. Steve Gunderson, R-Wis., who said they ran counter to the free-market principles the Reagan administration supports.

A secondary market is under consideration as a possible component of legislation due later this year to rescue the Farm Credit System from financial woes that if unattended could result in insolvency for some of its 37 constituent Federal Land Banks.

A variety of plans, mainly involving an infusion of federal cash, have been proposed to aid the nation's largest farm lender. The network of borrow-owned cooperatives has been losing money as a result of high credit costs and a resulting drain of its most creditworthy borrowers.

Rep. Ed Jones, D-Tenn., said the aim of the hearing was to hear from those with "a more cautious approach" to the secondary market concept.

Combest blasts interim ag rules

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The interim final regulations for the H-2A temporary agricultural workers program released this week by the Department of Labor and the Department of Agriculture's final definition of perishable commodities remain "inadequate, unworkable and a severe threat for farmers and ranchers," said Congressman Larry Combest (R-Texas).

The interim final regulations for the H-2A program still preclude the livestock, poultry and dairy industries from participating in the program. "If the Labor Department refuses to revise these rules, farmers and ranchers will not have a sufficient workforce," said Combest.

Combest also reaffirmed his objections to the Department of Labor's definition of "temporary or seasonal" workers, the adverse effect wage rate, fee schedules, and continued lack of clarity and simplification under the proposed rules. "It is obvious that the Labor Department does not fully understand the potential impact of these regulations. If the Department fails to rework the proposals, I see no other alternative but to introduce corrective legislation," said the Lubbock Congressman.

Last month Combest met with Labor officials and presented Labor Secretary William Brock with a letter signed by 38 members of Congress opposing the proposed H-2A program regulations. The letter included over five pages of comments and specific objections to the proposed rules.

Combest also blasted the U.S.

Department of Agriculture (USDA) for its failure to include cotton as a "perishable commodity." Due to USDA's perishable definition, agricultural employers in the cotton industry cannot legalize seasonal workers and are forced to rely on domestic laborers or H-2A workers.

"Why USDA determined that a Christmas tree is more perishable than a cotton crop remains an absolute mystery to me and much of the agriculture industry. The industry may be in for some rough times due to USDA's decision," said Combest.

Accent on Agriculture

Rain may boost weeds

By DENNIS W. NEWTON
Extension Agent

The recent heavy rains have been beneficial despite the loss of some crops to hail, high winds, and flooding. However the increase in moisture can cause some problems for area farmers.

The increase in water availability can cause accelerated growth of unwanted weeds and grasses. Because producers are unable to get into wet fields to plow or spray, these plant species can become very difficult to control. Ideally, weeds are best controlled when they are very small. Because of the increased size of weeds, producers may have to adapt their regular herbicide program to control bigger and tougher weeds.

Insects can also increase rapidly following a wet period. The increase in foliage growth and the increase in host plant species allows insects a broader variety of plants on which to feed and also allows for transmission of diseases from weeds to growing crops.

An increase in moisture also provides an avenue for increased diseases in plants. Almost all fungal diseases thrive on warm humid conditions.

Before I am murdered for listing all the bad things that can happen after a rain, let me assure all producers that I have nothing against rain. I just wanted producers to be aware of the things that could happen so that they could be prepared. I have just received several new guidelines for weed and insect control in corn, sorghum and small grains. These guides give the chemicals that are registered for the particular crop and list the rates of application. Anyone wanting a copy of these publications may contact me at the county Extension office or come by and pick up a copy.

Wheat producers are reminded that June 8 is the deadline for voting in the Texas Wheat Producers Board election. Ballots were mailed to all wheat producers. Persons that did not receive a ballot can get one from the county Extension office. Any farmer producing wheat in Texas is eligible to vote for a board member for their particular district. Deaf Smith County is in District II along with Carson, Potter, Oldham, Randall, Armstrong, Briscoe, Swisher, Castro, Parmer, Hale and Floyd counties. C.L. Edwards of Panhandle currently represents the district.

Farm market tradition for buyer, seller

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — Only the early birds get the tomatoes at the Farmers Market.

The market, which started last week, begins at pre-dawn and ends when everything is sold.

By 8:30 a.m. on Saturday, while many people were just thinking about getting out of bed, almost everything was gone.

"Oh, I had snap beans, tomatoes, peppers, I had just about everything this morning," said Myrtle Daniels, who had sold out of everything except squash and zucchini.

"Shoot, one or two people will pick up everything you've got that's ripe."

The farmers get there the earliest of all. Some of them come from as far away as Lake Sam Rayburn every Monday through Saturday, and they start out in the middle of the night to get to market before dawn.

Even Mrs. Daniels and her husband, Frankie, who come from relatively nearby Nome, got up at 3 a.m. to drive to the market.

Mrs. Daniels said the market is the fun part of farming. "I love this part," she said. "But that picking (produce) and stuff is something else."

She and other farmers will sell turnip greens, peaches, beans, tomatoes, squash, peppers, peas, corn and white and brown eggs. Later in the summer, they'll have cantaloupe and melons.

Farmers go to the market not just to sell their produce, but to see old friends and to gossip. And in good weather, the cool, breezy mornings and the birds chirping in the rafters of the market pavillion are a relaxing change from the hot fields.

Manager Tessie Alvarez said the trip to the market is a tradition for many of the farmers. Their families, there were 49 last year, have come to the market for years, sometimes even generations as children take over their parents' work.

The customers who come out regard the market as a tradition, too.

Ms. Alvarez said most customers are at the market by 6 a.m. "You couldn't get in the lot by 5:30," she said. The customers who get there late, though, will have plenty of chances to try again; the market will be open until late summer, and it will reopen some time in early fall.

The people who didn't show up early found out what they missed. One customer who got there late, about 8:30 a.m., told Mrs. Daniels with regret, "I wanted some new potatoes, but...I slept a little late this morning."

May 5th, 1987 calls for proper documentation. This is the date employers must ask for and receive proper documentation for all employees hired since November 6, 1986. This is now the law under the Immigration Control and Legalization Amendments Act of 1986. When a producer is hiring agricultural employees, it is important to keep these aspects in mind. It is illegal to knowingly hire, recruit or refer, for a fee, any person not authorized to work in this country. Employers must inspect documents and attest to the legal right to work of every person hired. There are penalties for employers who do not comply with this paperwork requirement, even if no illegal aliens are employed. Officials say most agricultural workers will be able to obtain legal status by obtaining temporary resident status and, after two years, applying for permanent residency. During the time from 1989 to 1993, a limited number of aliens will be admitted to perform field work, if they are indeed needed. Those admitted, after satisfying work quotas for three consecutive years, can apply for permanency.

Special Olympic Competitors

Three Hereford residents brought home medals which they won during the Texas Special Olympic competition held May 27-29 in Austin. The athletes were sponsored by the Hereford Chapter of TSO. Winning medals were (from left) Mary Brinkman, who received a silver medal for the standing long jump; Royce Legates, silver medal for soft ball throw; and Trudy Brown, gold medal for shot put. Each TSO competitor received a medal for entering the event.

PRECAUTIONS NEEDED AGAINST SKIN CANCER

It is ironic that people who attach so much importance to their appearance should at the same time intentionally and permanently damage their skins, according to Dr. Cliff Price, Associate Commissioner for Personal Health Services. A deep tan on a fair-skinned person may be glamorous, but it is evidence of radiation damage from ultraviolet light.

"At best, repeated overexposures to the sun cause wrinkles and dry skin. And at worst, they cause skin cancer, the most common form of cancer in the U.S.," Dr. Price said. American Cancer Society studies show that about 400,000 people develop skin cancers of various types each year. Some 22,000 develop malignant melanoma, which can be fatal.

"It would be sad enough that some people defeat their own purpose—that of looking healthy—by overexposing themselves to the sun. But perhaps more of a tragedy is that they encourage their children to do likewise," Dr. Price added. Children are more susceptible to permanent skin damage from the sun, and the ill effects of the damage are cumulative. Skin cancer that occurs in adults can have its beginnings decades earlier.

Dr. Price said children and fair-skinned people are "high risk" and should avoid long exposure to sunlight between 10 a.m. and 3 p.m. when the sun is the hottest and most intense. They also should wear a waterproof sunscreen for added protection outdoors. A sunscreen with a protective rating of 15 or more is recommended for young children who may be unable to judge the amount of exposure they are getting.

Persons who have to work outside should wear long sleeves, hats, gloves, and sunglasses to protect their eyes.

The American Cancer Society recommends that all persons, especially those who are repeatedly exposed to sunlight for long periods, should start a routine of self-examination for skin cancer. Briefly, a self-examination includes inspecting the entire skin for moles, flaky patches, or discolorations. An ideal time is after a bath.

You should use a hand mirror and full-length mirror to study the scalp, back, buttocks and genital area, and should sit down to examine between toes and the soles of the feet. If any changes occur in moles or freckles, or if any area of the skin looks unusual from one examination to the next, report it to a doctor immediately.

Most skin cancer found early through self-examination can be completely cured. Even malignant melanoma, the most serious form, can usually be treated and cured if discovered in time, according to Dr. Price. "But we in the health professions hope that more people will take care to avoid skin cancer altogether—by taking simple precautions to prevent over exposures to the sun," he said.

Many women make wedding finery themselves

By BARBARA MAYER AP Newsfeatures

After work, recent bride-to-be Sue Forrest of San Francisco made time in a busy schedule to drive to a crafts store for a weekly class in calligraphy. Her goal: to personally address her wedding invitations in script.

Meanwhile, across the country in New York, Carol Frank was taking a class in decorating with ribbons so she would be able to make the pew bows that adorned the church when she got married.

The two women are among many who make some part of their wedding finery themselves, according to Frank Strauss, president of Hobby Industries of America. Strauss says that manufacturer surveys reveal that more brides are doing part of the wedding themselves than in the past.

Among popular do-it-yourself projects are wedding gowns, attendants' gowns, invitations, bridal bouquets and floral decorations, veils, headpieces and cakes.

According to a spokesman from Vogue-Butterick Patterns, close to 40 percent of brides now make their own gowns or have them made by dressmakers. Part of the reason is financial. The pattern company says that a dress that costs $500 to buy could be made at home for $200 by a good seamstress. But achieving a personal style and perfect fit are also motivations.

Other authorities agree that cutting costs and personalizing the wedding are motivations for do-it-yourselfers. Today's brides want to take as active a role as possible in their own weddings, according to Millie Martini, associate editor of Bride's magazine. Consequently, saving money is only one aspect to the do-it-yourself impulse, she says.

Having fun is also an important part of the appeal of projects, says Mary Holman, a co-owner of the crafts shop Pleasantries in Spring Lake, Minn. The shop offers in-store classes on how to make a bridal bouquet or a headpiece.

At Sherry's Beads and Crafts in Los Angeles, owner Sherry Galper has courses in how to make the wedding bouquet, corsages, boutonnières, jewelry and tops for cakes.

Crafts retailers and manufacturers are helping the market along by simplifying some projects so that those without special crafts skills can succeed. "If you can thread a needle, you can learn how to bead a wedding gown with pearls, sequins and crystals," says Ms. Galper.

One of the hottest areas is flower arrangements, according to Anne Reed, assistant editor of the magazine Crafts. Those who are most accomplished can buy supplies and make their own silk flowers; the less skilled can use preformed silk flowers in bouquets and table and altar decorations, she says.

Debbie Craig, vice president and general merchandise manager of Lee Wards, a crafts retailing chain, says that sales of bridal accessories and crafts supplies have been on the increase for the past five years, especially in floral supplies.

A number of manufacturers have been increasing their product lines and she finds that there is a larger assortment of items such as silk organdy flowers, bridal caps in white and pastels and brimmed garden hats that can be decorated with a variety of ribbons and other trim.

The Lee Wards chain is offering guidance to brides from floral designers in individual stores. "They will help the customer who wants to make it herself or they will make up the bouquets for her," says Ms. Craig.

What is now Miami had only three houses in 1895. The community was called Fort Dallas. The city of Miami was incorporated in 1896, when Henry Flagler — at the urging of Julia Tuttle — extended his railroad south from West Palm Beach, Fla.

Bottom line important after tax reform

WASHINGTON — Tax reform has left side effects that magnify the role of property management.

According to industry professionals with the National Association of Realtors, investors and owners seeking greater profits are relying more on good management to ensure that their properties continue to appreciate and command higher rents.

The overhaul of federal tax laws curtailed the tax shelter derived from purchasing commercial real estate, implementing provisions that force investors to set investment goals around properties that generate income. "Investors and managers are going to have to take a closer look at profits," said Frank H. Livingston, president of the Institute of Real Estate Management, an NAR-affiliate.

"The bottom line is more important now. You have to know how to spend your dollars properly when buying and maintaining. You spend for preventive maintenance, you do everything so your property will command a higher rent.

"Overall, the whole commercial market is pretty distressed right now. And everything comes into play in a distressed market," Livingston said. Former tax laws contained income sheltering incentives that spurred investments to fund office space and apartment buildings. The resulting flood of development saturated markets in many areas of the nation, he said.

"We saw too much money chasing too little real estate product," Livingston said. "Old tax laws encouraged investing as a tax break. In many cases, people were paying too much for properties because all they were after were tax shelter benefits. They weren't worried about making a profit. Investors were encouraged to create value and then sell to take advantage of it."

Given the current volume of unfillable properties, Livingston said keen competition in the commercial real estate industry will continue to justify frugal, prudent management operations. According to the latest statistics available from IREM, operating costs for apartment buildings rose by 4 to 8 percent in 1985, while the median rent increased by 5 to 6 percent for the year. The 1985 national median rent for garden-unit projects was $429; for multi-story projects, it was $489. IREM also reported that the income generated from suburban office buildings rose by a median rate of 7.7 percent in 1985, to $11.23 per square foot of net rentable office space; while income from downtown office buildings rose by 4.7 percent, to $12.62 per square foot during that year.

"The new tax laws favor money-making properties. Without the tax benefits, there's a far greater emphasis on cash flow and profits, on what is a good buy. "Unprofitability is no longer OK. Property management is going to take on a greater importance. People will be looking to managers to get the most out of their properties, and for help with purchase decisions," Livingston said.

The tax reform act retained more tax savings for investors who are actively involved in property operations; and the law allows active status for investors who hire property managers. However, to be considered active, an investor must oversee management decisions.

Although active investors qualify for more tax benefits, passive investors—those seeking financial involvement without management responsibilities—should not be discouraged from purchasing interests in properties, said Philip S. Cottone, 1987 president-elect of the Real Estate Securities and Syndication Institute, an NAR-affiliate.

"We encourage people who want to invest to join in with others, including a real estate professional experienced in managing property," Cottone said. "Using a professional keeps them from having to answer the phone everytime something breaks, or from having to find someone to fix this or that. Plus, it gives them limited liability for the property."

Martin Edwards, a Certified Commercial Investment Member (CCIM) of the NAR and the association's 1986 Educator of the Year, pointed out that a tax law change making property sales less advantageous taxwise also places greater significance on property management. Now, all capital gains (net proceeds) from real estate sales are taxable as ordinary income. Previously, only 40 percent was taxable.

"Changes in capital gains treatment has made the sale of properties less preferred. Now, more investors are looking to refinance properties rather than sell them," said Edwards, who has taught commercial real estate courses for the Realtors National Marketing Institute.

"In cases where it is more advantageous to hang on to properties, owners need to look at better management, both physically and financially, so they aren't losing income."

The Institute of Real Estate Management, the Real Estate Securities and Syndication Institute and the Realtors National Marketing Institute are three of the nine affiliate organizations of the National Association of Realtors. IREM, with about 7,600 members, provides training to enhance property management professionalism among property and asset managers. RESSI, with about 3,100 members, offers syndication courses, tax and legislative updates and industry information to participants. The Realtors National Marketing Institute, with about 24,400 members, offers comprehensive courses in commercial investment real estate and real estate brokerage management, in addition to residential brokerage and sales.

The National Association of Realtors is the nation's largest trade association, representing more than 750,000 members involved in all aspects of the real estate industry.

Remodeling hints

If you do much spraying with paint, varnish or other finishing materials, use a turntable. The objects to be sprayed then can be placed on the table and turned to any desired position. Keep the turntable on a bench or other fairly high location so that dust from the floor is less likely to get on the sprayed work.

The proper solvent for shellac is denatured alcohol. It also can be used to clean the dirt and grime from varnished or lacquered surfaces.

The terms patio tiles and quarry tiles in the ceramic family are often used interchangeably, but the tiles are slightly different. Patio tiles have irregular shapes and textures and usually are red or earthy in appearance. Quarry tiles are more likely to be regular in shape and come in different colors.

Here's the Answer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — Our old refrigerator seems to run almost all the time. We have been thinking about getting a new one, but the other day I noticed when I pressed the door switch, the light bulb on the inside did not go off. Since this is the switch the door goes against each time the door is closed, this means the bulb never goes out. I have since tested the bulb and it seems to be OK. I assume this means the switch itself is bad. I read two questions. Could the fact the bulb stayed lit have caused the refrigerator to keep running? And, can the switch be replaced or do we need a new refrigerator?

A. — Yes, the lit bulb probably caused enough heat so the refrigerator had to keep going to maintain a cold temperature. As for the second question, the switch can be replaced. It should be able to be taken out of the unit and tested with a volt-ohm meter, but you have to have it done professionally depending on your knowledge of electricity. As for whether the refrigerator needs replacing, it depends on how old it is and whether it continues to operate efficiently if and when the switch is replaced.

Q. — I want to put up paneling in a room at the back part of our house. I read somewhere the panels can be installed directly on the wall if the wall is perfectly straight, but that furring strips are needed if not and that the paneling then must be attached to the strips. What I am not sure about is whether there is any accurate way of telling whether the wall is straight enough for dispensing with the furring strips.

A. — You will need a long strip of wood or a 2-by-4 which you are sure is not bent or warped. Take it and hold it along the wall in many different positions. If the wall is straight, the board will be flat against it. If not, there will be one or more spaces between it and the wall. Most of the time, even with a wall that appears perfectly smooth and straight, you will find you need furring strips. If and when you have to install the furring strips — either 1-by-2s or 1-by-3s — align them to accept the size of the paneling you plan to use.

Q. — I will be painting a brick wall we want to be white to match the surrounding decor. Can the paint be applied with a roller?

A. — Yes. Your main problem with a brick wall is to be sure you use a masonry paint and the surface is prepared properly. You must be certain moisture is not exuding from the brick or its joints or you will have problems later with the paint. If the bricks are in sound condition and have good color in them, they will harmonize with almost any decor.

Former Hereford residents wed in evening ceremony

Dallas Phillips of Canyon became the bride of Stanley Carl Paetzold, also of Canyon, in an evening ceremony Friday at St. Anthony's Catholic Church in Hereford. Monsignor Joseph Tash, of St. Thomas Catholic Church of Amarillo, officiated.

The bride is the daughter of Juanita Phillips of Rt. 4, Hereford, and the late Dallas Phillips. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Paetzold, Sr., of Rt. 3, Hereford.

Large white floral arrangements flanked the back altar as minicandelabra entwined with greenery sat on the side alters. Alternating pews were marked with peach and turquoise mini-carnations, baby's breath, and greenery. White tapers in brass holders adorned with peach bows were placed on either side.

Mrs. Mike Albiar of Dawn, sister of the bride, served as matron of honor. Mrs. Jim Larson of Wichita Falls, also a sister of the bride, was a bridesmaid.

Walter Paetzold, Jr., brother of the groom, served as best man. Groomsman was Doug Marnell of Lubbock, the groom's cousin.

Ushering in guests were Andy Juett of Amarillo, the groom's brother-in-law, and Greg Winters of Amarillo.

Flower girl was the bride's niece, Aja Albiar, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mike Albiar. The groom's nephew, Brandon Coleman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gary Coleman of Friona, served as ringbearer.

Ralph Detten sang "Only a Shadow of Your Love" and "The Lord's Prayer" and Mrs. Rex Lee vocalized "The Wedding Song" and "All In His Own Sweet Time." They were accompanied by Denise Detten.

The wedding gown, designed by the bride, was fashioned of white crystal organza featuring a sweetheart neckline. The entire bodice was overlaid with lace and handsewn seed pearls and flowed into a flattering natural waistline. Satin-covered buttons adorned the sheer lace back of the bodice. The elbow-length sleeves were gathered around in inlaid piece of lace. Seed pearls enhanced the design of the lace in the sleeves. Lace appliques formed an ornate design on the front of the skirt. The back of the waist was marked by a large bow and matching crystal organza-ruffles flowed from the bow down the sides to outline the overlay of lace forming the cathedral-length train.

To complete her ensemble, the bride wore a two-tier fingertip bridal illusion veil attached to a floral headpiece adorned with pearl sprays and shiny organza leaves and formed a pouf at the back.

She carried a coordinated off-center cascade of white roses, stephanotis, bell of Ireland, and grape ivy in a bed of white summer picot and lace ribbon and streamers.

Her jewelry included, as something old, the wedding band belonging to her paternal grandmother, Mrs. Roy Phillips, while her wedding dress served as something new. Her mother's bracelet, bearing a photo of the bride's late father, served as something borrowed and a garter served as something blue.

Bridal attendants were attired in tea-length turquoise crystal organza dresses featuring sweetheart necklines enhanced by a peach cumberbund. A bow accented the waist of the brackless dresses. Each carried nosegays of peach and turquoise spider mums, roses, minicarnations, greenery, and baby's breath tied off with peach ribbon.

The flower girl's dress, fashioned after the dresses worn by the bridal attendants, was in alternating colors. She carried a white basket with a nosegay bouquet of peach and turquoise mini-carnations with baby's breath and greenery.

A reception followed in the gym of the church with Stephanie Foster of Austin registering guests.

The bride's cake was served by Mrs. Walter Paetzold, Jr. of Hereford with Julie Reeve of Friona serving punch and Mrs. Todd Taylor of Hereford pouring coffee.

A hand crocheted tablecloth made by the bride's paternal grandmother covered the bride's table. Sitting atop the table was a three-tiered cake arranged over a fountain surrounded by six heart-shaped cakes decorated with turquoise and peach flowers.

The groom's table was covered with a peach cloth and punch, mints, nuts, and cake were served. The groom's cake was a strawberry cake decorated with a stand-up ambulance featuring Oreo cookies as wheels and gum drops for lights. Serving the groom's cake was Mrs. Andy Juett of Amarillo.

Following a wedding trip to San Francisco, Calif., the couple will be at home after June 10 in Canyon.

A 1984 graduate of Hereford High School, the bride is a senior at West Texas State University majoring in secondary math education and physical education. She is a former Miss Hereford.

The bridegroom, also a 1984 HHS graduate, graduated from Amarillo College with honors. He is currently employed as a paramedic for Amarillo Medical Service.

Out-of-town guests included those from Little Rock, Ark., Wichita Falls, Friona, Port Orchard, Wash., Evanston, Wyo., Houston, Adrian, Canyon, Dumas, Canadian, and Lubbock.

For Ouchless Checking. Think Security.

Security Checking. Consider your normal bank checking fee. Not a pleasant thought, eh? At Security Federal, checking costs only $4.00 a month. And it's free with a minimum balance of only $200 or more. We'll even pay you 5 1/4% interest. And senior citizens, age 65 or more have no service charges, regardless of balance. Why do all this? Because checking shouldn't be a pain.

Aguirre, Chavira marry Saturday

Leticia Aguirre of Hereford became the bride of David Chavira Jr. of Amarillo during a noon wedding Saturday at St. Anthony's Catholic Church of Hereford.

Father Joe Bixenman of the church officiated.

The bride's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Jose C. Aguirre of 419 Barrett St. and the groom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. David Chavira of Dimmitt.

Baskets of red and white roses decorated the church altar and two doves on a cloud accented the unity candle.

Carmen Aguirre served her sister as maid of honor and Daniel Chavira was his brother's best man.

Bridesmaids included the bride's cousin, Mickie Rodriguez of Bryan, Texas, Hilda Tijerina and Josie Cerda of Del City, Okla. Groomsmen were the bride's brother, Jose C. Aguirre Jr.; the groom's brother, Dennis Chavira of Amarillo; and George Cortez, also of Amarillo.

The bride's niece and nephew, Sara and Eric Martinez, served as flower girl and ring bearer, respectively. Altar boys were Steven Ray Aguirre and Michael Dean Aguirre.

Principal musical selections included "The Wedding March" and "Anillos De Compromiso." Raul Guerrero was the featured vocalist.

Given in marriage by her parents, the bride wore a white formal-length designer's gown featuring a satin Queen Anne stand-up collar with scalloped lace etched on the trim. Stand-up ruffled satin formed the top of the sleeves which also featured French netting enhanced by pearl studded appliques.

The gown's bodice was encrusted with jewels and pearls on satin and adorned with re-embroidered emblems of French lace underneath. The cathedral-length train of white sparkle organza was entirely encircled with ruffles and was fashioned with a cascade of dozens of yards of ruffles that fell from the center of the gown's back.

The headpiece the bride selected was designed to match her wedding gown. The ornate designs were shaped into a queen's crown image with pearl sprays and medallions of crystal and iridescent sequins. Her veil consisted of four tiers of bridal illusion spray and edged with pencil border.

She carried an elaborate cascade of pearl sprays and crystal with accents of greenery and white satin ribbon.

For jewelry, the bride wore her mother's beaded webbed necklace.

Attendants were attired in teal tafeta tea-length dresses overlaid with red veils in a Spanish cut-design. They carried three long-stemmed roses.

The bride's cousin, Amanda Aguirre of Belton, Texas, invited guests to register at the reception and dance held in the Bull Barn.

Rosa Maria Medrano served the five-tiered cake which was trimmed with red roses. It also featured two bridges with miniature bridesmaids and a fountain. Each tier was separated by tubes of silk red roses.

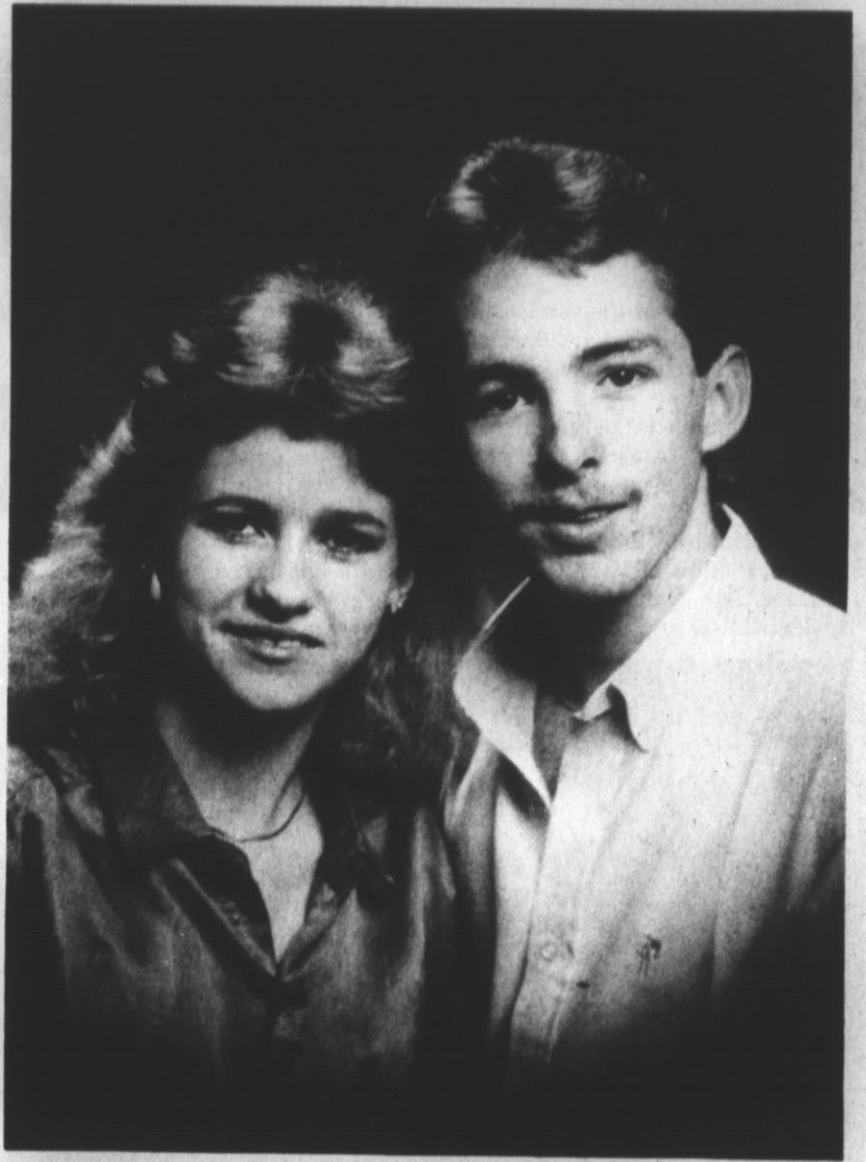

Others assisting included primeros padrinos, Mr. and Mrs. Humberto Medrano; cojines, Mr. and Mrs. Belen Ramirez of Vega; lasso, Mr. and Mrs. Armando Aguirre of Belton; arias, Mr. and Mrs. Juan Aguirre of Odessa; Mr. and Mrs. Pablo Villarreal, libro y rosario; bouquet, Mr. and Mrs. Martin Lopez of Canyon; ushers, Jesse Martinez and Thomas Hernandez; and readings, Carmen Aguirre.

The couple left for a wedding trip to DisneyWorld in Orlando, Fla. They will make their home in Amarillo.

The bride, a 1983 graduate of Hereford High School, attended West Texas State University for two years and is currently employed at Palo Duro Hospital.

The groom, a 1982 graduate of Dimmitt High School, is presently employed by IBP.

Out-of-town guests included Mrs. Odolon Cerda of Del City, Okla.; Ester Meza and Mrs. Antonia Meza, both of San Benito, Texas; Mrs. Nelda Fernandez of Dallas, Ray Diaz of Tyler; Mrs. Eva Longoria of La Mesa; Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Byrum of San Antonio; Mr. and Mrs. Matias Rodriguez of Bryan; and Mr. and Mrs. George Villarreal of Pecos, N.M.

RACHEL COLEMAN, BRAD WALSER

Nuptials planned

Wedding vows will be recited by Rachel Dianne Coleman and Bradlee Guy Walsler, July 9 in Avenue Baptist Church of Hereford.

The bride-elect is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C.E. Coleman of 144 W. Fourth St. and the prospective bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Don Walsler of 204 Star.

MRS. KENNETH SCHLABS
...nee Andra Dorman

Dorman, Schlabs exchange wedding vows Saturday

Andra Dorman of Vega became the bride of Kenneth Schlabs of Hereford Saturday in an afternoon wedding held in St. Anthony's Catholic Church of Hereford. Officiant was Father Joe Egan, pastor of the church.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Don Dorman of Vega and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Schlabs of Rt. 4, Hereford.

Sherri Schuder of Canyon was matron of honor and Steve Gallagher was best man.

Bridesmaids included Janet Paschel of Canyon; Lorrie Dorman of Amarillo, sister-in-law of the bride; and Donna Weaver, the groom's sister.

Serving as junior bridesmaid was Cheryl Schlabs, the groom's sister.

Groomsmen were Tom Schlabs and Ray Schlabs, both brothers of the groom and of Hereford; and Jeff Mercer of Hereford.

Ushering in guests were Gary Dorman of Amarillo, brother of the bride; Chris Carter of Hereford; Steve Knoll of Dumas; and Randy Paetzold of Hereford.

The groom's niece and nephew, Shyla Martin and Truett Schlabs, served as flower girl and ring bearer, respectively. Shyla is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lance Martin and Truett is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Schlabs.

Mrs. Susan Stubbs, accompanied by Cheryl Betzen, vocalized "There is Love," "I Have Loved You", "On Eagles Wings," One Bread, One Body," and "Where Ever You Go."

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a formal length gown of organza trimmed with re-embroidered Chantilly lace. The gown, featuring a Queen Ann neckline, was fashioned with a semi-gathered skirt highlighted with rows of organza ruffles topped with scalloped lace which peaked in the front and then multiplied in the back to form a semi-cathedral train.

To complete her ensemble, the bride chose a shallow crowned hat covered with Chantilly lace accented with a silk flower cluster and floating pearls.

She carried a cascading bouquet of bridal white roses accented by Lilly of the valley.

Her jewelry included a white gold watch belonging to her grandmother.

Bridal attendants and the flower girl wore tea-length dresses of pale aqua crepe-backed satin. The dresses were designed with a sweetheart neckline which came to a deep V in the back, a fitted bodice, and oversized puffed short sleeves. Each dress was accented by a peacock blue lame sash which tied in a large bow in the back. Pale aqua hosiery and pumps completed their outfits, as did pale aqua flowers worn in their hair. They carried bouquets of cascading mixed spring flowers.

A reception followed at the Knights of Columbus Hall. Serving cake and refreshments were; Terri Axe of Vega, Teresa Carter of Canyon, Melody Miller of Amarillo, and Tanya Morris of Canadian.

The bride attended Vega High School and received an associates degree of applied science in radiologic technology from Amarillo College.

The bridegroom attended Hereford High School and received his bachelors degree in agriculture from West Texas State University. He is presently engaged in farming north of Hereford.

Recipe by Cattlewomen promotes use of beef

MRS. KEVIN HAMBY
...nee Stacy Schroeder

Schroeder, Hamby vows exchanged

Wedding vows were recited by Stacy Schroeder of Lubbock and Kevin Hamby of Big Spring during an evening ceremony Saturday in First Baptist Church of Hereford. Officiating for the couple was the Rev. J.L. Bozeman.

The bride's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Schroeder of 723 Baltimore and the groom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Hamby of Country Club Drive.

The church altar was decorated by three 15-branch candelabra flanked by two 15-branch spiral candelabra entwined with greenery and miniature lights. Green plants were placed at the base of each candelabrum. The white unity candle was nestled in a nosegay of burgundy and pink miniature carnations, baby's breath and greenery.

Each pew was marked by a one-branch candelabrum with arm bouquets of pink and burgundy carnations, baby's breath, and greenery and tied with burgundy and pink satin bows.

Stacy Vela of Clovis, N.M. served as matron of honor and the groom's brother, Scott Hamby of Amarillo, was best man.

Bridesmaids were Sandra Puckett of Plainview and Tarina Whaley of Lubbock. Groomsmen were Joe Hamby and Kyle Schuder.

Guests were escorted by the brides brothers, Todd and Chad Schroeder, and Ken Whaley of Lubbock and the groom's cousin, Wesley Yautsey of Dallas. Todd and Chad Schroeder also lit candles during the ceremony.

Marsha Frantz of Azua, Calif. vocalized "Sunrise, Sunset", "We've Only Just Begun" and "The Wedding Song". She was accompanied by organist, Jan Walser, and pianist, Evelyn Hacker.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal length gown of white taffeta accented with Alencon lace and styled with a fitted basque bodice which dipped to points in the front and back. It also featured a high neckline of Alencon lace enhanced with bridal pearls, a sheer illusion yoke, and leg-of-mutton sleeves which came to points at the bride's ring fingers.

The full skirt, scattered with beaded appliques on the front, was edged with a wide band of scalloped Alencon lace. It swept into a cathedral-length scalloped train adorned with applied cutouts.

The bride also wore a finger-tip length triple tiered bridal veil which was styled with a blusher studded with bridal pearls. It was attached to a headpiece encrusted with strands of pearls and white silk flowers.

She carried a cascading arrangement of white roses, stephanotis, bells of Ireland, baby's breath, English ivy and white pecot ribbon and lace.

Her jewelry included a diamond necklace with matching earrings and her grandmother's gold wedding band worn on her right hand.

Bridal attendants were attired in formal-length burgundy taffeta gowns fashioned with off-the-shoulder ruffles. They carried brass and crystal votive holders with burgundy candles encircled with cascading flowers of burgundy and pink roses, miniature carnations, bells of Ireland and English ivy tied off with burgundy and pink pecot ribbon.

Guests were invited to register at the reception held in the church fellowship hall from a table decorated by a brass hurricane and crystal lamp holding a burgundy candle. Also, accenting the table were pink and burgundy roses, miniature carnations, bells of Ireland and English ivy.

Keri Johnson and Tami Williams of Lubbock served the four layered white bride's cake which was accented with burgundy roses and a fountain with a ring of fresh flowers around the base. It was made by Troy and Troyce Schuder and placed on a table covered by a white lace cloth and centered with the bride's bouquet.

Punch was served by Lisa Rackley, the bride's cousin.

The groom's table, which was covered with a burgundy cloth, was adorned by a three-branch silver candelabrum with a bride and groom Teddy bears placed at the base. The bears were given to the couple by the groom's brother and sister.

The groom's cake was served by the bride's cousin, Heather Schroeder, and Missy Wilcox. Coffee was poured by the groom's cousin, Troyce Kreighsauer.

The gift table displayed the bride's wedding portraits and a white wicker basket of burgundy and rose satin rice bags.

Leaving for a wedding trip, the bride wore a chambray dress with a gold and silver lace applied collar and matching accessories. The couple will make their home in Big Spring.

The bride is a graduate of Hereford High School and is a student at Texas Tech University.

The bridegroom, also a graduate of HHS, is manager of Sherwin Williams in Big Spring.

Out-of-town wedding guests included the bride's grandmother, Vida Lyler of Hooker, Okla., and relatives and friends representing Colorado, Texas, Oklahoma, Kansas and California.

The rehearsal dinner was hosted by Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Hamby in their home.

Though popular for many years, "The Star Spangled Banner" did not become the national anthem until 1931.

Red Cross Update

Special thanks to Mary Jane Burrus, nursing chairman, for her work with the blood pressure clinic held May 30 at Lo-Mart.

PRE-NEED FUNERAL COUNSELING

Many Americans Already Know About The Option of Pre-Planning Their Funerals.

You Should Too! Have reassurance of knowing that financial arrangements for their funerals have been completed.

4-H Firsthand

The Deaf Smith County 4-H program is proudly sending five county youth to the State 4-H Round-Up at Texas A&M University, Sunday, June 7.

The group includes: Rickie Vogel, Christie Powell, Chris Urbanczyk, Chris Grotegut, and Jeff Hicks. Over 5,000 state 4-Hers will attend.

Powell, Urbanczyk, and Vogel are attending for interviews from the Texas 4-H Scholarship Foundation Committee. These scholarships are awarded to youth with outstanding 4-H careers, as well as scholastic ability. The value of the scholarship ranges upwards to $8,000. From a group of 1,200 these five applicants advanced to the state level and will compete with 110 others for the 95 scholarships to be awarded.

Hicks and Grotegut will join Vogel and Urbanczyk in the State 4-H Livestock Judging Contest. The team placed sixth in state, overall, last year and hope to better their placing this year.

This trip is partially funded by the Deaf Smith county 4-H Parent-Leader Association.

Educational programs conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service serve people of all ages regardless of socioeconomic, level, race, color, sex, religion, handicap or national origin.

Deaf Smith County 4-Hers participated in a Personal Grooming and Clothing Project Workshop on June 2 at the Community Center.

Twenty-eight 4-Hers took part in sessions on fiber, fabric care, clothing organization and storage; personal grooming on skin and fingernail care; manners modeling and appropriate attire for different occasions and making bandana collars and bows.

The workshop was led by teen leader, Kristi Powell; junior leader, Jennifer Hicks; adult leaders, Susan Hicks, Dean Bradley, Sue Powell, Denise Teel; special speaker, Vicky Higgins; Extension summer assistant, Jennifer King, Extension agent, Beverly Harder.

4-Hers will begin constructing garments for modeling in the June 25th style show. Other youth interested but who did not sign up at the seminar may do so by calling the County Extension office at 364-3573.

Those participating in the workshop sessions were senior 4-Hers, Kristi Powell; intermediate 4-Hers, Cheryl Schlabs, Holly Edwards, Pam Price, Trisha Teel, Jill Dutton, Breck Binder, Jennifer Hicks, Lori Urbanczyk and Jennifer Scott. Junior 4-H participants included: Linda Carter, Deidra Whipple, Melissa Hubbard, Tawanna Drager, Nikki Messer, Marsha Jarecki, Sheila Teel, Amanda Hagar; Susan Rickman, Gina Brisendine, Adelita Banda, Lee Harder, Carrie Patterson, Sarah Perrin, Maria Juarez, Jami Parker, Karon Harder and Stephanie Wilson.

TENDERLOIN OF BEEF By Martha Pior San Antonio, Tx.

1 4-5 lbs. beef tenderloin
black pepper
fresh parsley and cherry tomatoes, optional
Sprinkle generous amounts of pepper on beef tenderloin. Allow meat to come to room temperature.

Preheat oven to 500 degrees. Place the meat in an open roasting pan in preheated oven for 15 minutes. Turn off the heat, but do not open the door. Allow tenderloin to remain in oven another 15 minutes. Remove from oven and slice thinly.

This medium-rare entree may be served with the following wine sauce:

½ cup dry vermouth
3 green onions, finely chopped and using some of the tops
¾ cup lightly salted butter
2½ tablespoons spicy mustard
¾ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
¼ teaspoon garlic powder
3 tablespoons fresh parsley, chopped
Combine vermouth with onions in small sauce pan and bring to a boil. Boil down about half the original amount (1½ to 2 minutes), then reduce heat. Add butter, stirring until melted. Add mustard, stirring until smooth, then add Worcestershire sauce, garlic powder, and parsley. Simmer about one minute, then pour into small serving dish.

Approximate preparation time: 45 minutes Serves: 8

The volcano Krakatoa erupted in 1883. Tidal waves triggered by the blast killed 36,000. The explosion sent dust over the entire globe.

"My husband didn't want to think about it."

That's the statement of many women who have thought things through about pre-arranged funeral planning. But sometimes, although men have agreed that pre-arrangement makes good sense, they put off making a decision because it seems there's no reason to hurry.

In my case, I decided that I would go ahead and pre-arrange my funeral service. Actually, it was very simple after the folks at Rix explained how it works. I felt relieved that I had made a decision to alleviate some of the emotional and financial burdens which are sure to arise. I think that probably my peace of mind encouraged my husband, Bill, to arrange his pre-need plan. He's convinced now that it was better to make a choice now rather than wait for the inevitable.

For more information on pre-need funeral plans call us or fill in the coupon printed below and we'll be glad to answer any questions you may have.

Vows spoken by Dondlinger, Reinauer

Spring flowers draped over two candelabra and a unity candle accented with fresh spring flowers set the background for the marriage of Kimberly Carol Dondlinger of Amarillo and Arthur Raymond Reinauer of 228 Ironwood, Hereford. The couple spoke their vows Saturday afternoon in St. Mary's Church of Amarillo with Father Kenneth Keller and Monsignor Joseph Tash, both of Amarillo, officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Rick and Jane Miller of Amarillo and the bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Joe Reinauer Sr. of Route 4, Hereford. Lisa Eady of Abilene served as matron of honor and the groom's brother, Bob Reinauer of Hereford was best man.

Bridesmaids included the bride's cousin, Angie Wagner, and Kelli Weaver and Elodia Escamilla, all of Amarillo.

Standing up for the bridegroom were the bride's brother, Mike Dondlinger; the groom's brother, Joe Reinauer of Pensicola, Fla.; and Jim Reinauer of Albuquerque, N.M.

Guests were escorted by Harold Schmucker and Donald McDermitt, both of Dallas, and Price Avent of Amarillo and C.T. Guseman II of Hereford.

Train bearer was Rob Reinauer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bob Reinauer, and altar boys and candle lighters were Alvin Reinauer and Richard Reinauer, both of Albuquerque.

Dr. D.E. McBrayer and Bill Devers, both of Hereford, vocalized "Ave Maria" and "The Lord's Prayer" accompanied by Linda Gilbert of Hereford.

Given in marriage by Rick Miller, the bride was attired in an elegant oriental white silk gown adorned by Irish lace. The fitted bodice and gown's scalloped neckline were decorated with matching lace and the low back of the gown was fastened with delicate covered buttons. The bouffant sleeves began tapering at the elbows and extended over the bride's wrists. They were also embellished with Irish lace.

The circular skirt, falling into soft folds, was fashioned with deep flounces of Oriental silk, and was attached to a fitted waistline which was marked at the gown's back by a large bow. The skirt was ornamented with thousands of hand-sewn beads as was the 20-foot-long train which was 10 feet wide.

The seven-foot veil of bridal illusion formed a pouf at the back of the white hat which featured a blusher and was decorated with miniature pearls.

She carried all white bouquet of orchids, spring flowers and grape leaves enhanced by long white satin ribbon streamers. Her jewelry consisted of pearl earrings.

Bridal attendants wore iridescent blue-black dresses styled bows, with sweet heart bodices and large pouf sleeves and bows. They carried grapevine baskets filled with bright colored spring flowers.

The bride's cousin, Nikki Wagner, invited guests to register at the reception held in Rolling Hills Riding Club. A barbeque and barn dance followed.

Laura Reinauer of Albuquerque and Brenna Reinauer of Hereford served the bride's cake and Amy Brice of Lubbock served the groom's cake. Nikki Wagner poured coffee and Kayla Baker ladled punch.

The main refreshment table at the reception was appointed with arrangements of fresh spring flowers and held the bride's white cake which featured cream cheese icing and a Precious Moments figurine. The groom's chocolate cake was decorated with grapes.

The couple left for a wedding trip to Florida and will make their home after June 23 at 228 Ironwood.

The bride, a graduate of Tascosa High School in 1983, is an art major at Amarillo High College. She was reared in Amarillo, is a member of Sigma Phi Chi and had previously worked for Dr. J. W. Barnett for three years.

The bridegroom, a 1971 graduate of Hereford High School, graduated from Texas Tech University in Lubbock in 1975. He is past president of Walcott School Board and is operator of La Escarbarda XIT Winery. He is employed at RMR Commodities in Hereford.

Bridal shower fetes Cheryl Walterscheid

Cheryl Walterscheid, bride-elect of Kevin James Rickwartz, was honored with a bridal shower May 31 in the Friendship Room at the Hereford State Bank.

Greeting guests in the receiving line with the honoree was the bride's grandmother, Mrs. Elizabeth Walterscheid and the prospective groom's mother, Mrs. Georgette Rickwartz.

The bride-elect's chosen colors of rainbow hues were carried out in a spring bouquet at the registry table. Inviting guests to register was Lynette Blades.

The lace-covered refreshment table featured peach-colored punch and assorted cookies in rainbow colors. Presiding over the punch bowl was Kaylene Harris.

Out-of-town guests attended from Amarillo, Canyon, and Channing.

POLLY'S POINTERS

Activity box keeps kids away from TV

By Polly Fisher

DEAR POLLY — I have three boys who like to make things, so I keep a large box with throw-away items such as string, cardboard tubes, small boxes, old calendars and cards, magazines, spools, yarn, scrap material, twist ties, rubber bands, an egg carton or two, pipe cleaners, foam meat trays and water paint, paint brushes, glue, markers and safety scissors. We add anything that looks like it would be fun to use.

We also keep an old shower curtain in the box that we spread out for a work area. This keeps the mess easy to clean up.

Another thing we keep by this box is a large roll of paper we got from the print room of our newspaper office. We use it for crafts and art work, as well as for packing material when mailing boxes. We can even use it to wrap gifts and let the boys decorate the package. This wrapping paper is as fun to receive as it is to decorate.

My boys really like this box and feel a sense of accomplishment and pride over what they've made. I'm pleased they're using their minds to work and not just sitting like zombies in front of the TV. — LORIE

DEAR POLLY — When baking a child's birthday cake on a budget, white, homemade frostings are cheapest. But you can spruce them up! Choose your child's favorite powdered, unsweetened soft-drink mix and add up to half of the package to your white frosting, mixing it in well. The result will be a beautifully colored and flavored frosting! — T.L.S.

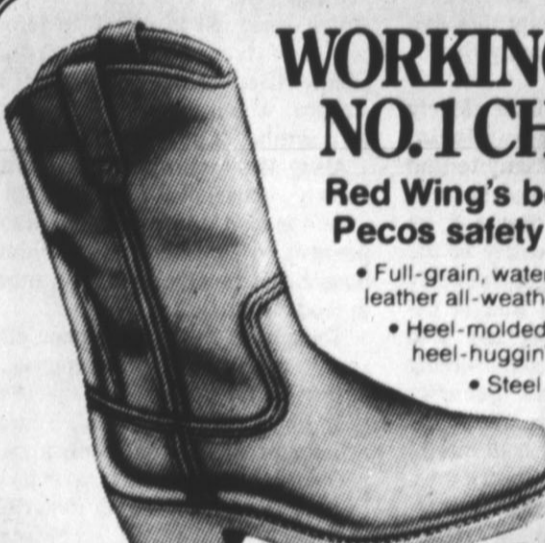

Vitamins

According to "The Twentieth Century: An Almanac," in 1901 Gerrit Grijns, a Dutch physiologist, came up with the concept that a deficiency of a "protective substance" was caused the disease beriberi. It was the concept that became the basis of the modern theory on vitamins.

We'd like to express our appreciation to everyone who donated, supported, or helped in raising funds for Ricky Madrigal's heart operation. We'd also appreciate your prayers while we go to surgery in Dallas this week.

"With God All Things Are Possible." (Matthew 19:26)

God Bless You,
The Madrigal Family

Elderly America Myth-vs-Fact

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This column is the fourth of five to be presented addressing the economics of old age. Information is provided by the Villers Foundation's "On the Other Side of Easy Street" or furnished by Hereford Senior Citizens Center executive director, Margie Daniels. The column is being produced in conjunction with May being designated as Older Texan Month and will end with the local Jump on the Wagon Jubilee set for June 13 at the Senior Citizens Center.

It is a common myth that federal "safety net" programs adequately protect the poverty-stricken elderly, along with limited budget cuts in such programs. Yet the facts show that the "safety net" has gaping holes.

It is true that such federal programs such as Social Security, Medicare, Supplemental Security Income, and Medicaid do help millions of the most vulnerable of the elderly. However, the programs themselves have never been as comprehensive as is widely believed, partly due to recent budget cuts.

Approximately 30 million elderly Americans will receive Social Security benefits in 1987 only to find that the purchasing power of such benefits continues to diminish as small alterations push many of the elderly Americans below the poverty line. The Congressional Budget Office has estimated that the 1983 postponement of the cost-of-living adjustment cost Social Security beneficiaries, as a group, about $4.3 billion in 1986, and will continue to shortchange them in the future.

Other Social Security setbacks include the elimination of death benefits in some cases, and delay of initial payment of benefits.

Another federal program, Medicare, covers 31 million people, 90 percent of whom are elderly. This federal health insurance program for the elderly and disabled provides insurance coverage for basic hospital and doctor expenses for almost everyone over 65—yet the program covers less than half of the health bills that the elderly must pay. Also, recent changes in the Medicare program have significantly increased out-of-pocket payments by the elderly for premiums, coinsurance charges, and deductibles.

Supplemental Security Income, created in 1972 to fill some of the gaps in Social Security coverage, currently pays benefits to four million people, half of whom are elderly. Low-income elderly, blind, and disabled people are recipients of such benefits, yet three major deficiencies prevent many from collecting such monies.

First, the federal SSI benefit levels fall substantially below the poverty line, as the maximum level is $510 per month ($6,120 per year) or 90 percent of the projected poverty line in 1987 ($6,830).

Second, countable assets of an elderly person must not be more than $1,800 for an individual or $2,700 for a couple in 1987. As a result, many of the elderly do not qualify for the benefits because they have too many resources.

Third, a lack of knowledge about the program keeps approximately half of the potentially eligible population from participating in the program. Only 32 percent (about 896,000 households) participate in the SSI program.

A joint federal-state program, Medicaid pays for medical care costs incurred by low-income people. Designed to complement Medicare in providing health care for the elderly, only 36 percent of the non-institutionalized elderly poor have Medicaid protection. The major reason for Medicaid's spotty coverage is that, generally, eligibility is based on participation in the SSI program, where only one in three people currently receive such benefits.

In addition, 22 states fail to provide Medicaid coverage to elderly people whose gross income is modestly above SSI limits but who incur major out-of-pocket medical expenses that reduce their remaining income to within SSI limits. While federal law recognizes the special circumstances of the "medically needy," and allows states to provide such Medicaid coverage to them, several have not complied.

Medicaid funds may also be used by states to pay Medicare's Part B (Supplemental Medical Insurance) premium for their elderly Medicaid recipients, but 38 states currently do not participate in this program, for some or all of these recipients.

When the Medicaid program was cut back in 1981, many states had to reduce coverage for some medical services, with different states choosing different categories to cut. Yet services affected in various states included prescription drugs, dental care, eyeglasses, private duty nursing care, preventive care, and rehabilitation, all of which are important to the elderly but not covered by Medicare.

Other programs designed to aid the elderly poor include food stamps and housing subsidies. Only 29 percent of the elderly poor households received food stamps in 1984 due to several reasons; average benefits are low; the sponsoring USDA and states make little effort to inform people of their eligibility, and many people hate being seen using the stamps, which are viewed by some as a symbol of poverty.

Also, the average participating elderly household received $58 a month in food stamps in 1983 while 20 percent of participating elderly households receive just $10 a month in food stamps.

Housing of the elderly poor often represents their biggest expense, as a third or more of total income of the poor goes toward housing. Federal housing programs reach only a small percentage of the elderly poor as only 16.5 percent lived in federally-assisted housing in 1984, according to the Census Bureau.

About 40 percent of all households living in public or subsidized housing in 1980 were headed by an elderly person. Also the most important change in housing policy for the elderly poor allows tenants to be charged rents equal to 30 percent of the family's monthly adjusted gross income.

All in all, the so-called "safety net" programs geared to aid the elderly poor are helpful, but many of America's elderly fall through the gaps in the net and remain unprotected.

JERRY CASAREZ, ISABEL VALLEJO

August wedding set

Isabel Vallejo of Hereford will become the bride of Gerardo (Jerry) Casarez, also of Hereford, on August 29 in St. Anthony's Catholic Church in Hereford.

The bride-elect is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Francisco Vallejo, Sr., of 433 Star and the prospective bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Asencion Casarez, Sr., of 811 South Schley.

Miss Vallejo graduated from Hereford High School this year. Casarez, a 1985 graduate of Carrizo Springs High School, is employed by Holly Sugar during campaign season.

St. Anthony's Women's Organization makes plans

A luncheon meeting marked the final meeting of the season for St. Anthony's Women's Organization on Tuesday in the Antonian Room.

The business meeting was conducted by the president, Francie Farr Janie Banner gave the church unit report for Annette Albracht.

The family affairs unit reported that the annual vacation Bible school will be held during the third week in July under the direction of Beckie Fry.

Janie Banner, community affairs unit chairperson, announced that a garage sale to benefit the Problem Pregnancy Center will be held on Saturday, June 27 at the Center. She asked for donations and help for the event. Items for the sale may be left at the Center.

Ann Lueb stated that there are approximately 10 Boy Scouts of America who will be receiving Religious Emblem Awards in the near future.

Martha Paetzold, chairperson of the ways and means unit, told of plans for the upcoming year. They include two breakfasts, the New Year's Eve Dance, and a quilt giveaway among other events.

A Basket Dinner will be held on Sunday, June 14, at noon in St. Anthony's cafeteria as a farewell for Father Joe Egan, who will be going to a new pastorate at Stratford and Sunray, and in celebration of St. Anthony's Day. All parishioners and friends of Father Joe are invited to the celebration.

The special events announced for the summer will be a social in July for the college students of St. Anthony's and an ice cream social and parish dance to be held on August 1.

The ladies present at the meeting enjoyed games of crazy bridge. Wilhelmine Vinton was high score winner and Bea Knabe won low. The door prize was awarded to Karla Vasek.

Luncheon was served to approximately 40 ladies by hostesses Jenny Kuper, Grace Paschel, Carolyn Evers, Nina Chand, and Jenifer Newton.

The next meeting will be on September 1 to begin the new season.

MR. AND MRS. JIMMY RAMIREZ

Nuptials recited

Kelly Sue Cherry of Hereford became the bride of Jimmy Ramirez, also of Hereford, in an afternoon wedding ceremony held May 29 on her mother's patio. Johnnie Turrentine, justice of the peace, officiated.

The bride is the daughter of Jim Cherry of Hereford and Sue Cherry, also of Hereford and the bridegroom is the son of Isabel and Cruz Ramirez.

As a setting for the spring wedding, the covered patio was decorated with geraniums and silk arrangements.

Jill Gregory of Hereford served as maid of honor. Best man was Dan Odell, also of Hereford. Special attendant was Tyson Paul Cherry, son of the bride.

The bride was attired in a peach linen dress fashioned with pleats in the front. The dress featured an ivory baby doll collar tied into a large sash bow.

She carried a bouquet of peach and white cascading roses.

A reception followed in the home, where the reception area was decorated with various silk floral arrangements of peach, white, and navy. A two-tiered wedding cake, decorated with white frosting, was served by the newlyweds.

Following a wedding trip to Ruidosa, N.M., the couple is at home at 210 Beach.

The bride, a 1980 graduate of Hereford High School, attended Amarillo College and West Texas State University. She is employed by Witherspoon, Aikin, and Langley Attorneys at Law of Hereford.

The bridegroom, a 1979 graduate of Hereford High School, attended WTSU and is employed by Hereford State Bank. He is also a member of the Hereford Shockers, a softball team.

Although 65,000 commercial compounds — some of them proven carcinogens — enter the environment each year, only eight chemicals are listed as hazardous and regulated at their source by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, according to National Geographic.

MARMADUKE by Brad Anderson

DEBBIE MORAN, CHRIS SCHUMACHER

Engagement announced

Deborah Dawn Moran of Denton and Christopher Charles Schumacher of Carrollton plan to marry Aug. 1 in the Immaculate Conception Catholic Church in Denton.

The bride-elect is the daughter of Kendall and Janell Moran of Denton and the prospective bridegroom is the son of Joe and Ida Schumacher of Route 2, Hereford.

Miss Moran graduated from Denton High School in 1983. She graduated from North Texas State University this spring with a B.S.

FRED WEIBLING, CHERYL BULLARD

Wedding date set

Cheryl Innes Bullard of Perryton, formerly of Hereford, will become the bride of Fred L. Weibling of Balco, Okla., during a July wedding ceremony.

The bride-elect is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Innes of Perryton and the prospective bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl C. Perrin of Iowa Park, Texas.

Ms. Bullard is an account representative for Security Insurance and Realty of Perryton. Weibling is employed by Balco Public Schools as the high school principal.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a 31-year-old happily married man who is writing to you not for advice, but for reassurance.

I have been wearing a long-leg panty girdle for quite some time. No one knows this but my wife, and she says it's OK with her. (She wore my boxer shorts when she was pregnant.)

Please understand, Ann, I'm not gay and I'm not a transvestite. I get no kick out of wearing women's undergarments. The truth is, I wear this thing for the same reason my wife does. It holds my stomach in, smooths my backside and makes me look better. I see nothing wrong or perverted about a man wanting to look neat and trim.

Since no one makes a decent girdle for men (only bulky corsets for back problems), I am forced to wear an extra-large woman's size. My wife buys them for me, which saves some embarrassment.

I'd like your approval. How about it?—Holyoke, Mass.

DEAR HO: You've got it, but don't expect everyone to be so non-judgmental.

Remember the old joke about the fellow who was undressing in the locker room of his golf club? A member spotted him wearing a girdle and asked, "For Lord's sake, Jack, how long have you been wearing that thing?" Jack replied, "Ever since my wife found it in the glove compartment."

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am trapped in a dilemma that involves two people I love dearly—my mother and my father.

For years I believed my parents had a perfect marriage. I never heard an argument or a cross word pass between them. There was always affection and respect.

Seven years ago I heard rumors that my father was involved with a woman who was my age. I didn't believe it. My mother told me that she had heard the rumors, too, and called them "vicious lies."

A few weeks ago the rumors were confirmed by an unimpeachable source. (Apparently this affair has been going on for 10 years.)

My husband tells me to stay out of it. He claims that if it's lasted for 10 years, the tie must be very strong and my father can't let go.

I am torn up over this and am angry at my mother for letting my father do this to her. I'm sure she knew all along. Why did she hide her head in the sand and pretend that everything was lovely? Where is her pride? I am also angry with my father for behaving so shabbily.

Should I try to talk some sense into his head? Should I tell mother I think she ought to get a divorce? Please advise. I am—Tortured in California

DEAR T: Perhaps your mother asked herself that famous Ann Landers question, "Would I be better off with him or without him?" and decided that half a loaf was better than none.

Your father may have a side of the story that would throw an entirely different light on the subject. Whatever the facts may be, it's their life and you have no right to demand that they behave in a way that suits you. So, take your husband's advice and MYOB. Everyone will be a lot better off.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am fed up with medical professionals less than half my age addressing me by my first name while they present themselves as "Doctor This" and "Doctor That". The next time one of those young whippersnappers pulls this on me I plan to call him

"Sonny." Think it will work?—Mrs. A.J.M., The Napa Register

DEAR MRS. A.J.M.: It's worth a try. Go ahead. And let me know what happens.

What's the story on pot, cocaine, LSD, PCP, downers, speed? Can you handle them if you're careful? Send for Ann Landers' all-new booklet, "The Lowdown on Dope." For each booklet ordered, send $2, plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope (39 cents postage) to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562.

The Newspaper BIBLE

SEEK THIS: AND NEVER BE SORRY!

Listen to my pleading, Lord! Be merciful and send the help I need. My heart has heard you say, "Come and talk with me, O my people." And my heart responds, "Lord, I am coming." Oh, do not hide yourself when I am trying to find you. Do not angrily reject your servant. You have been my help in all my trials before; don't leave me now. Don't forsake me, O God of my salvation. For if my father and mother should abandon me, you would welcome and comfort me. (Psalm 27:7-10)

Seek the Lord while you can find him. Call upon him now while he is near. Let men cast off their wicked deeds; let them banish from their minds the very thought of doing wrong! Let them turn to the Lord that he may have mercy upon them, and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon! This plan of mine is not what you would work out, neither are my thoughts the same as yours! For just as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are my ways higher than yours, and my thoughts than yours. (Isaiah 55:6-9)

Listen to me, Asa!... The Lord will stay with you as long as you stay with him! Whenever you look for him, you will find him. But if you forsake him, he will forsake you." (2 Chron. 15:2)

"Solomon, my son, get to know the God of your fathers. Worship and serve him with a clean heart and willing mind, for the Lord sees every heart and understands and knows every thought. If you seek him, you will find him; but if you forsake him, he will permanently throw you aside... Be strong and do as he commands." (1 Chron. 28:9-10)
