

T&C Jubilee's big day on tap Saturday

The rodeo's begun, and the Chamber Singers have sung. But, as they say, you ain't seen nuthin' yet, 'cause the Jubilee's still young. The biggest day of activities for Hereford's Town & Country Jubilee will dawn tomorrow with a checklist crammed full of activities sure to entertain everyone as area citizens celebrate "Our Proud Heritage," this year's Jubilee theme.

A fun run or a 10K race. The Hereford & Vicinity YMCA is sponsoring the event, which is set to begin at 6 a.m. Registration and check-in for the races lasts from 7:30 a.m., and all entrants receive official T-shirts as well as competing for a number of individual awards in several age categories. A more sedate time is in store for those who line Park Ave. and Main St. to watch the Jubilee parade, which will begin at 10:30. Some 60 entries will display the Jubilee theme in the parade, which is sponsored by the Whiteface Kiwanis Club. Following the parade, Jubilee Junction gets underway at Dameron Park. Food and fun for the entire family will be featured in over 60 booths sponsored by local organizations. Some of the games and entertainment available at Jubilee Junction include puppet shows, a fish pond, two dunking boards, a toy walk, dart throw, battered car smash, pony cart rides, frisbee toss, hair and face painting, and children's games and races. A featured event during the day is the performing arts stage located in the middle of Jubilee Junction. Acts to appear include dancers from the Larrymore Dance School, the Rhythm Racketeers, senior citizens group from Tulsa, dancers from the Academy of Dance, a karate demonstration, Spanish gospel singing, and other singers. The performing arts begin at noon, and continue until 5 p.m. In addition to those events beginning Saturday, some others continue after beginning earlier. The all-girl rodeo sponsored by the Hall of Fame Rodeo Association completes a three-night run with a final performance beginning at 7:30 p.m. Saturday, while the Senior Citizens quilt show and Jubilee of Arts continue from 10 a.m. - 6 p.m. in the community center. The YMCA gets the honor of closing the Jubilee out this year with a Gospel Jubilee show on Sunday. The show features two gospel groups from Amarillo and another from Friona, and begins at 8 p.m. Sunday at Whiteface Stadium.

The Trinity River Boys and Calvary Cross Singers from Amarillo will join with the "Goodnews Band" from Friona to entertain the crowd. Through it all newly-crowned Miss Hereford Gina Griffin will reign over the activities of the T&C Jubilee. Sally Strain and Charles Lyles have served as co-chairmen of this year's celebration. Members of the Jubilee Steering Committee include Olivia Denning, Travis Shields, Bill Johnson, Jerry and Cheryl Hodges,

Jim Ward, Hawk Kreig, Mike Carr, Homer Garrison, and Margie Daniels. Also, Jolene Hledsoe, Garth Thomas, Rosie Griffin, Penny Reinart, Bob Sims, Margaret Formby, Raul Guerrero, Maria Garcia, Sharon Hodges, Sylvia Wallace, and David Emerick

Energy prices moderate, too

Food costs continue decline

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wholesale prices rose a minuscule 0.1 percent in July as the cost of food fell for the third straight month and the summer's energy price gains moderated, the government reported today. For the first seven months of the year, wholesale prices fell 0.7 percent, fueling economists' predictions that, for the full year, inflation at the wholesale level could be the smallest in two decades. Last month's tiny gains were largely the product of a 0.6 percent drop in food prices and a 0.2 percent gain in energy costs.

That is expected to be good news for consumers in the short run as farmers liquidate their herds rather than pay skyrocketing feed bills. Experts expect, however, that as the liquidation ends, meat prices may rise significantly next year.

But, in today's report, the Labor Department said beef and veal prices fell 4.8 percent in July and pork prices tumbled 5.7 percent. Poultry prices were down 2 percent. The report said prices fell 11.9 percent for vegetables and 1.4 percent for eggs. The cost of fresh fruit rose 3.4 percent.

As for energy prices, gasoline costs rose 0.9 percent, off from the 5.1 percent gain of the previous month. Natural gas prices, up just 0.2 percent in the previous month, fell 1.2 percent in the new report. Heating oil prices were down 0.7 percent, a sharp reversal of the 5.3 percent rise of the preceding month. The energy price calculations reported today were actually for June. That component of the Producer Price Index for finished goods, as the wholesale price calculation is called, lags a month because energy companies report their prices too late for inclusion in the most recent measure. The report gave these other details: —Passenger car prices were unchanged. Light truck prices fell 0.3 percent. —Capital equipment costs were up 0.1 percent. Those costs are for machinery and transportation equipment used by business.

seasonal adjustment, compared with advances of 0.5 percent advance in June and 0.3 percent in May. If prices rose for 12 months straight at the July rate, the yearly rise would be 1.3 percent. In reporting its inflation figures, the department bases its compounded, seasonally adjusted annual rate on a more precise calculation of monthly changes than the figure the department makes public. In all, the unadjusted Producer Price Index stood at 285.7 last month, meaning that goods costing $10 at wholesale in 1967 would have cost $28.57 last month.

25 injured as trains collide in Mexico

CIUDAD JUAREZ, Mexico (AP) — Two trains carrying about 600 passengers collided head-on in the northern Mexican city of Villa Ahumada, injuring at least 25 people, Mexican federal police said. No deaths were reported. The trains, one en route from Juarez to Mexico City, and the other, a two-car train from Chihuahua City to Juarez, crumpled like an accordion, one injured passenger said from his hospital bed today. "Nobody heard anything," said Chihuahua City newspaper reporter Victor Bartoli Herrera, who suffered a punctured left eyelid. "The engines just hit into one another, one on top of the other." Bartoli Herrera and 24 other victims were picked up from the accident site late Thursday by passenger cars, buses and 13 ambulances sent from Juarez, 90 miles to the north, and transported to this border city of 900,000 across from El Paso, Texas. Among the injured was American Louise E. Hernandez, who suffered minor arm and rib injuries. Thirty-one students from Los Angeles who were traveling in the Mexico City-bound train escaped injury, Bartoli Herrera said. The injured were transported to three Juarez area hospitals, but none was seriously injured, Mexican federal police said. Most were treated for bruises and lacerations and released, hospital doctors said.

Ferocious storms cut power, injure dozens

By CYNTHIA GREEN Associated Press Writer
Torrential rains, tornadoes and winds up to 92 mph whipped through the nation's heartland and into the Northeast, flipping tethered airplanes, ripping off roofs, cutting power and injuring at least 38 people, with more storms gathering today. Hardest hit was eastern Pennsylvania, where thousands of homes remained without electricity after a tornado and an angry line of thunderstorms marched across the Lehigh Valley Thursday. In New York City, a fierce rush-hour storm dumped 2 inches of rain in four hours Thursday afternoon, stranding thousands of commuters in the drenched subway system and temporarily interrupting an opera performance when water came through the theater ceiling. In West Chester, Pa., a state of emergency remained in effect today after high winds peeled roofs off buildings, littered the streets with debris and damaged a dozen homes. Nineteen people were injured, one seriously, when winds shattered the windows of a supermarket. Four people were hurt when the windows blew out of a Bethlehem grocery and a teen-ager was in critical condition today after a power line fell on the tree in which he was sitting. Another man was injured when winds toppled his trailer home, trapping him inside. In Allentown, Pa., where a tornado hit Thursday afternoon, winds up to 92 mph were reported before recording instruments were blown away, a National Weather Service spokesman said.

High winds at the Allentown-Bethlehem-Easton Airport tossed planes, and damaged or destroyed 15 hangars and 26 aircraft. Damage estimates ranged up to $4 million. (See WINDS, Page 2)

Chad soldiers feared trapped near oasis

N'DJAMENA, Chad (AP) — Several thousand Chad government soldiers were feared trapped today near Faya-Largeau after being overrun by Libyan troops and rebels who recaptured the crossroads oasis town and cut off major escape routes. A U.S. official in Washington said rebels had cut off retreat routes to N'Djamena, leaving the loyalist troops in a "hammer and anvil situation. Basically, they are going to have to fight their way out." Information Minister Soumaila Mahamat confirmed Thursday the loss of the strategic northern city and claimed government forces set up defensive positions 4.5 miles west and 11 miles east of the city, which controls all routes from Libya to N'Djamena. Soumaila said evacuation was ordered "to spare the 7,000 civilian inhabitants further casualties and suffering." He also said, "In view of the extreme gravity of the situation, it cannot be ruled out that our forces may carry out a tactical withdrawal" from the surrounding area. ## Truce holding around Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Snipers shot at a police commander but otherwise a truce held around Beirut and the central mountains today after two days of clashes between the army and Druse rebels that killed 27 people and wounded 66. In southern Lebanon, the Israeli army today detonated "stacks of arms and ammunition left in underground tunnels by Palestinian guerrillas" a year ago along a six-mile stretch of the coastal highway, the state radio reported. The highway between the southern beachside towns of Khalde and Damour were closed to traffic for three hours while the tunnel caches were blown up. Israeli soldiers warned villagers to stay indoors, the radio said. Beirut's international airport remained closed to traffic for a third day as President Amin Gemayel's government sought a reconciliation with Lebanon's Druse community. A cease-fire was proclaimed Thursday night, though Druse leaders said they would resume shelling the airport and Lebanese army positions unless the Cabinet resigns and the army promises to stay out of Druse zones. Police updated the death toll from 14 to 27 after compiling casualty reports involving victims from the army, Druse militiamen, their Christian militia foes and civilians caught in crossfires Wednesday and Thursday. The only recorded violation of the cease fire today was a burst of sniper fire from Druse positions in the hills south of Beirut at a local police commander driving on the coastal highway, police said. The Druse, a secretive sect in the Israeli-occupied central mountains, have been warring with Christian militiamen for dominance of the region. They claim Gemayel's Cabinet is unfit to govern.

Spoonful of Sugar

Mary Poppins (Murlee McWethy) gives Jan and Michael Banks (played by Heather Rogers and Michael Power) a spoonful of sugar to help the medicine go down in a scene from the Mary Poppins medley at last night's Chamber Singers presentation, held in the Hereford High School auditorium. Others in the group dressed as chimney sweeps. They included Ann Meyer, Linda Caudle, Nelda Rogers, Bera Boyd, and Rose Goheen.

Up For Grabs

A drawing will be held Saturday at 4 p.m. in Dameron Park for this house on wheels, donated by the Hereford Board of Realtors. Part of the revenue generated by the event will go toward board educational functions, a public seminar and the YMCA Activity Center.

Boys learn lesson after break-in

HOUSTON (AP) — Five adolescent boys who were brought before a judge for breaking into a house and stealing ice cream and toys were told by handcuffed prisoners they would end up picking cotton at the Texas Department of Corrections if they did not change their ways. The boys, whose parents asked they be brought before state District Judge Ted Poe to teach them a lesson, stood with eyes downcast and fingers twitching Thursday to confess they broke into a neighbor's house in northeast Harris County in early July to eat ice cream and steal toys. People in the neighborhood said it was obvious the break-in was done by children. "It sounded like kids," one man said. "They made milkshakes. So we investigated it and found out it was our kids." The boys, aged from 12 to 14 years, confessed their guilt when confronted, the parents said. The boys also had taken back the toys they stole before they were caught. The parents, working together after they learned their children had broken into the house, had the boys taken to the constable's office where they were fingerprinted and read their rights before signing written confessions. The boys spent the summer working part-time three days a week doing maintenance work in their neighborhood after their parents asked their subdivision services association to put them to work for the summer. "The intent was not to let them get away with it," a father said. Poe lectured the boys after they sat through a morning in his court, watching him sentence adult defendants. "Do you think people ought to be able to live in their homes without worrying about somebody coming into their homes?" Poe asked. "Yes sir," the boys whispered. Poe told the boys they were lucky to have parents who care about them. The judge ordered lunch for the boys from the county jail. They ate bologna sandwiches with cheese while they talked to handcuffed defendants.

Official's son hates his country

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department wants to talk to a Soviet diplomat's son who has asked President Reagan for help in staying in the United States. The boy told a newspaper, "I hate my country and its rules and I love your country."

Robert Williams, State Department press officer, said the Soviet Embassy has been asked to keep the teenager here so he can be interviewed by U.S. officials who will "ascertain his intentions."

The State Department announced Thursday night that Reagan had received a letter from the boy, but officials would not identify him by name or provide the name or position of his father.

The diplomatic officer on duty at the Soviet Embassy said he was unaware of the letter and the State Department's announcement and could make no immediate comment. He declined to give his name.

However, today's editions of The New York Times identified the boy as Andrei V. Berezkhov, 16, son of Valentin M. Berezkhov, an embassy first secretary.

The newspaper said the youth took his parents' car and left the family's Bethesda, Md., home Wednesday because, according to a letter he wrote the newspaper's Washington bureau, "I hate my country and its rules and I love your country."

The youth returned home on his own at 2 a.m. Thursday, the Times said.

The newspaper said the young man's letter, in English with a few spelling mistakes, said he also had written the president asking for help. The letter was dated Tuesday.

The letter to the Times also said in part: "I want to stay here. So I'm running away. I'll drive up to the US mission in New York. If the letter doesn't get to President it time I hope you help me. I love your people and country."

Oleg M. Sokolov, second-in-command at the embassy, was quoted by the newspaper as saying: "The situation is perfectly clear. The boy is back home with his parents. As far as the authenticity of this letter, we certainly think it is a forgery, and it looks like a very clear provocation to us."

The elder Berezkhov, 67, served in the Soviet Embassy in Berlin in 1940-41, before Germany attacked the Soviets in World War II, and as interpreter for Foreign Minister Vyacheslav M. Molotov at important wartime conferences.

His current job was said to be serving as liaison with the Soviet Union's Institute for the United States and Canada.

The State Department lists 137 diplomatic personnel in the Soviet Embassy. All are carefully screened before leaving the Soviet Union. Diplomats' younger children attend school in the embassy compound on upper Wisconsin Avenue about three miles from downtown Washington; teenagers return to their homeland to continue their education.

Jubilee Parade Participants

The Allan Brockman family, named "Family of the Year" earlier this year, will ride on the Mormon Church float in Saturday's Jubilee Parade. The Mormon Church sponsored the "Family of the Year" program. Shown at a work party on the float Thursday night are, left to right, Donna, Allan, Walter, Carmen and Paul Brockman. Lee, another son, will also be on the float.

Cranston's memory was better than transcript

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Alan Cranston didn't call President Reagan a tyrant after all, and an ABC News transcript of Cranston's remarks was erroneous.

ABC reported Thursday that a careful review of the tape of the June 26 broadcast shows that Cranston called Reagan "the target" (of Cranston's presidential campaign) — not "a tyrant."

The Associated Press, relying on the transcript, reported the "tyrant" phrase.

During an interview on ABC's "This Week with David Brinkley," Cranston was asked to evaluate weaknesses of some of his fellow Democrats who also are seeking the presidential nomination. Rather than criticizing them, the California senator shifted the focus to Reagan.

His response was interrupted by an interviewer and some of his words were difficult to make out, but a transcriber understood Cranston to reply, "Ronald Reagan is a tyrant. We have to get rid of that man."

Cranston actually said Reagan was "the target," ABC now says.

At a news conference Aug. 3, Cranston was asked about the remark. At first he denied calling the president a tyrant. After a reporter for the Riverside, Calif., Press-Enterprise insisted the words were on tape, Cranston said it must have been "a slip of the tongue" and added: "I can't believe I said that. ... I disavow that statement."

State files suit in fire ant eradication

AUSTIN (AP) — The state has filed an antitrust suit against four crop-dusting companies and three individuals in connection with a contract to eradicate fire ants in Kerr and Kendall counties.

The suit, filed in federal district court in Austin by Attorney General Jim Mattox for the Texas Agriculture Department, charged the defendants "cheated the people of Texas out of $100,000 by fixing the bidding process and not doing all the work agreed to in the contract."

The state is asking triple damages, in addition to an injunction against those named.

Named in the suit are Champion Sprayers Inc., Friona; Lone Star Spraying Inc., Muleshoe; Agri-Sprayers Inc., Bovina; Longhorn Spraying Inc., Muleshoe; Richard Glen Herring and James Haskell Corbell of Friona and Charles Casper, whose address is not known.

The suit claims the defendants submitted collusive, non-competitive bids and collusively withdrew bids for the contract. The suit also charges that the company that finally received the bid, Lone Star Spraying, did not have the proper equipment to adequately treat the fire ant infested farms. As a result, the Texas Agriculture Department had to find another contractor to complete the job and redo work that had not been properly worked.

that could lead either to blue-collar or white-collar careers.

According to the proposal, which was developed by the Texas Education Agency, students would choose from vocational, academic or general course offerings before they enter the seventh grade.

Career "tracking" is not a new concept, but Butler's proposal would have students making career choices at an unusually early age.

"It's going to ruffle a lot of feathers," said state school board member H. Reginald McDaniel, a Dallas physician. "There are a number of people who don't even want it discussed."

McDaniel said the proposal addresses reality.

Butler explained the proposal Wednesday to a meeting of the Select Committee on Public Education in Tomball. He said the proposal would keep vocation-minded students from being frustrated by academic courses.

Students could change "tracks," Butler said. He said the plan would allow elementary schools to place more emphasis on basic skills.

Frank Clark, associate superintendent in charge of instruction for the San Antonio Independent School District said Butler's proposal caught educators by surprise Wednesday.

"The question comes up, 'How does a student know what's the best track, and who will make the decision?'" Clark said.

Fungus causing slow deterioration

Oak decline, a fungus disease, is causing the slow deterioration of live oaks across Texas. The native tree, when under stress from environmental conditions such as drought, is quite susceptible to the disease.

"Oak decline is costing Texans several million dollars each year in lost real estate values, aesthetic losses and tree removal costs," states Jerral D. Johnson, plant pathologist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, College Station.

Though oak decline can kill an infected live oak in one to six years, it is possible to control the disease in its early stages through a tree management program.

The key to oak decline control is early identification of the disease, to be followed by careful tree management and the injection of a fungicide.

There are several signs to look for in checking your trees for oak decline, Johnson explains. A healthy live oak's branches will grow 8-10 inches a year while an infected tree may have only 3-4 inches or less. The leaf size is reduced in infected trees, and the leaves won't grow to normal size. The canopy of infected live oaks will be thin, allowing you to see light through the tree. When the infection is heavy, small "sucker" branches will grow on the trunk and main branches.

If you are unsure about the condition of your live oaks, a laboratory test can confirm the presence of oak decline. For a $7 fee, the Texas Plant Disease Diagnostic Laboratory will check a sample from your live oak.

Once you have confirmed oak decline, you should consider starting a program to control the disease. A good tree management program includes these six steps, outlines Johnson.

1. Identify all infected trees; determine which can be saved. Salvageable trees should be isolated from healthy ones by trenching, which prevents the spread of the disease through root grafts. Treat only trees showing no more than 15 percent loss of canopy; remove and destroy all other diseased trees.
2. Remove dead or weakened limbs from all diseased trees scheduled for treatment.
3. Control ball moss with the proper chemical treatment.

4. Fertilize the trees in early spring to promote maximum growth.
5. Avoid additional stress on the trees by deep watering as necessary, especially during July, August, September and December.
6. Diseased trees should be injected with a fungicide during the months of high nutrient uptake, usually between June and mid-October.

For more information on live oaks and oak decline, contact your county agent, local nurseryman, or Extension horticulturist. For information on testing, contact: Texas Plant Disease Diagnostic Laboratory, Plant Sciences Building, Room 101, Texas A&M University, College Station, Tx, 77483.

to 5.24 billion bushels because of this summer's drought and the department's action last winter to reduce production.

Sharp reductions in this year's grain crops have meant higher costs for livestock feed and that, in turn, is expected to force many beef, pork, dairy and poultry producers to cut back on expansion plans.

As a result, analysts predict that higher meat prices are in store for consumers in the longer run.

But for now, analysts don't see much to worry about.

Price changes that show up in the producer price measure are a good barometer of how food, energy and other commodity prices will move at the retail level. The Consumer Price Index, though, checks for a broader range of items, including housing and medical care, than does the wholesale inflation index.

Consumer prices were up 0.2 percent in June. For the first half of the year, those prices overall rose at an annual rate of only 2.9 percent.

Other economic developments:

—Consumer confidence slipped in July after six months of increase, according to the Conference Board, a research group financed by business interests. The board's consumer confidence index, figured from a base of 100 for 1969-70, stood at 84.2 in July compared with 84.9 in June.

—The Commerce Department said business inventories fell $670 million, or 6.1

percent, in June. Stocks of unsold goods had risen $362 million, or 0.2 percent, in May. The department also said overall business sales rose 2.1 percent in June.

—The average interest rate earned in money market mutual funds in the week ended Wednesday topped the average rate offered by banks on similar investments for the first time since the bank accounts were introduced last December. The rate on bank money market deposits rose to 8.54 percent from the previous week's 8.49 percent, while the money fund yield climbed to 8.97 percent from 8.47 percent, according to the newsletters Bank Rate Monitor and Donoghue's Money Fund Report.

Ancient elephant excavated

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Archeologists from Texas A&M University have unearthed a 10,000-year-old, 10-foot-tall mammoth that died on the banks of the Brazos River.

David Carlson and Gentry Steele, the archeologists directing the excavation on privately owned land near the A&M campus, said they have unearthed the ancient elephant's tusks, jawbones, shoulder blades, several vertebrae and ribs, and bones from the massive animal's legs.

They said though the excavation site now lies in the shadow of sheer cliffs, it once was a sandy point where mammoths could drink and forage.

Steele said mammoths were likely a common sight in Texas 10,000 to 12,000 years ago. This mammoth is a member of the species Mammuthus jeffersoni, named for Thomas Jefferson who excavated mammoth bones. Its cousin, the woolly mammoth, migrated from the Old World, but never ventured further south than the Great Lakes, Steele said.

Canoists spotted the mammoth's jawbone jutting from the riverbank late last year and contacted the university, but bad weather delayed the excavation until this year.

Carlson said many giant North American mammals — saber-toothed tigers, sloths, giant armadillos, camels,

American lions, horses and cave bears — might have met early extinction at the hands of hunting humans who crossed the Bering Strait.

"Mammals in North America didn't know they should run from human hunters," Carlson said. "Some of the species that developed alongside mankind in the Old World learned that lesson."

He said researchers so far have found no evidence of humans at the excavation site.

Steele said more than 30 A&M students have been able to participate in various stages of the excavation because of the site's proximity to the campus.

The excavation is being funded by A&M and the Witte Museum in San Antonio, where the bones might be taken after they are treated for conservation and studied at A&M.

Most of the larger pieces of the ancient elephant have been removed from the site and taken to the university's anthropology facilities, the archeologists said.

Cranston's memory was better than transcript

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Alan Cranston didn't call President Reagan a tyrant after all, and an ABC News transcript of Cranston's remarks was erroneous.

ABC reported Thursday that a careful review of the tape of the June 26 broadcast shows that Cranston called Reagan "the target" (of Cranston's presidential campaign) — not "a tyrant."

The Associated Press, relying on the transcript, reported the "tyrant" phrase.

During an interview on ABC's "This Week with David Brinkley," Cranston was asked to evaluate weaknesses of some of his fellow Democrats who also are seeking the presidential nomination. Rather than criticizing them, the California senator shifted the focus to Reagan.

His response was interrupted by an interviewer and some of his words were difficult to make out, but a transcriber understood Cranston to reply, "Ronald Reagan is a tyrant. We have to get rid of that man."

Cranston actually said Reagan was "the target," ABC now says.

At a news conference Aug. 3, Cranston was asked about the remark. At first he denied calling the president a tyrant. After a reporter for the Riverside, Calif., Press-Enterprise insisted the words were on tape, Cranston said it must have been "a slip of the tongue" and added: "I can't believe I said that. ... I disavow that statement."

State files suit in fire ant eradication

AUSTIN (AP) — The state has filed an antitrust suit against four crop-dusting companies and three individuals in connection with a contract to eradicate fire ants in Kerr and Kendall counties.

The suit, filed in federal district court in Austin by Attorney General Jim Mattox for the Texas Agriculture Department, charged the defendants "cheated the people of Texas out of $100,000 by fixing the bidding process and not doing all the work agreed to in the contract."

The state is asking triple damages, in addition to an injunction against those named.

Named in the suit are Champion Sprayers Inc., Friona; Lone Star Spraying Inc., Muleshoe; Agri-Sprayers Inc., Bovina, Longhorn Spraying Inc., Muleshoe; Richard Glen Herring and James Haskell Corbell of Friona and Charles Casper, whose address is not known.

The suit claims the defendants submitted collusive, non-competitive bids and collusively withdrew bids for the contract. The suit also charges that the company that finally received the bid, Lone Star Spraying, did not have the proper equipment to adequately treat the fire ant infested farms. As a result, the Texas Agriculture Department had to find another contractor to complete the job and redo work that had not been properly performed.

Dallas plan would put sixth graders in jobs

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas school board president Joe Kelly Butler says he will submit to the State Board of Education next month a plan to have sixth-graders choose school courses that could lead either to blue-collar or white-collar careers.

According to the proposal, which was developed by the Texas Education Agency, students would choose from vocational, academic or general course offerings before they enter the seventh grade.

Career "tracking" is not a new concept, but Butler's proposal would have students making career choices at an unusually early age.

"It's going to ruffle a lot of feathers," said state school board member H. Reginald McDaniel, a Dallas physician. "There are a number of people who don't even want it discussed."

McDaniel said the proposal addresses reality.

Butler explained the proposal Wednesday to a meeting of the Select Committee on Public Education in Tomball. He said the proposal would keep vocation-minded students from being frustrated by academic courses.

Students could change "tracks," Butler said. He said the plan would allow elementary schools to place more emphasis on basic skills.

Frank Clark, associate superintendent in charge of instruction for the San Antonio Independent School District said Butler's proposal caught educators by surprise Wednesday.

"The question comes up, 'How does a student know what's the best track, and who will make the decision?'" Clark said.

Official's son hates his country

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department wants to talk to a Soviet diplomat's son who has asked President Reagan for help in staying in the United States. The boy told a newspaper, "I hate my country and its rules and I love your country."

Robert Williams, State Department press officer,

said the Soviet Embassy has been asked to keep the teenager here so he can be interviewed by U.S. officials who will "ascertain his intentions."

The State Department announced Thursday night that Reagan had received a letter from the boy, but officials would not identify him by name or provide the name or position of his father.

The diplomatic officer on duty at the Soviet Embassy said he was unaware of the letter and the State Department's announcement and could make no immediate comment. He declined to give his name.

However, today's editions of The New York Times identified the boy as Andrei V. Berezkhov, 16, son of Valentin M. Berezkhov, an embassy first secretary.

The newspaper said the youth took his parents' car and left the family's Bethesda, Md., home Wednesday because, according to a letter he wrote the newspaper's Washington bureau, "I hate my country and its rules and I love your country."

The youth returned home on his own at 2 a.m. Thursday, the Times said.

The newspaper said the young man's letter, in English with a few spelling mistakes, said he also had written the president asking for help. The letter was dated Tuesday.

The letter to the Times also said in part: "I want to stay here. So I'm running away. I'll drive up to the US mission in New York. If the letter doesn't get to President it time I hope you help me. I love your people and country."

Oleg M. Sokolov, second-in-command at the embassy, was quoted by the newspaper as saying: "The situation is perfectly clear. The boy is back home with his parents. As far as the authenticity of this letter, we certainly think it is a forgery, and it looks like a very clear provocation to us."

The elder Berezkhov, 67, served in the Soviet Embassy in Berlin in 1940-41, before Germany attacked the Soviets in World War II, and as interpreter for Foreign Minister Vyacheslav M. Molotov at important wartime conferences.

His current job was said to be serving as liaison with the Soviet Union's Institute for the United States and Canada.

The State Department lists 137 diplomatic personnel in the Soviet Embassy. All are carefully screened before leaving the Soviet Union. Diplomats' younger children attend school in the embassy compound on upper Wisconsin Avenue about three miles from downtown Washington; teen-agers return to their homeland to continue their education.

Fungus causing slow deterioration

Oak decline, a fungus disease, is causing the slow deterioration of live oaks across Texas. The native tree, when under stress from environmental conditions such as drought, is quite susceptible to the disease.

"Oak decline is costing Texans several million dollars each year in lost real estate values, aesthetic losses and tree removal costs," states Jerral D. Johnson, plant pathologist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, College Station.

Though oak decline can kill an infected live oak in one to six years, it is possible to control the disease in its early stages through a tree management program.

The key to oak decline control is early identification of the disease, to be followed by careful tree management and the injection of a fungicide.

There are several signs to look for in checking your trees for oak decline, Johnson explains. A healthy live oak's branches will grow 8-10 inches a year while an infected tree may have only 3-4 inches or less. The leaf size is reduced in infected trees, and the leaves won't grow to normal size. The canopy of infected live oaks will be thin, allowing you to see light through the tree. When the infection is heavy, small "sucker" branches will grow on the trunk and main branches.

If you are unsure about the condition of your live oaks, a laboratory test can confirm the presence of oak decline. For a $7 fee, the Texas Plant Disease Diagnostic Laboratory will check a sample from your live oak.

Once you have confirmed oak decline, you should consider starting a program to control the disease. A good tree management program includes these six steps, outlines Johnson.

1. Identify all infected trees; determine which can be saved. Salvageable trees should be isolated from healthy ones by trenching, which prevents the spread of the disease through root grafts. Treat only trees showing no more than 15 percent loss of canopy; remove and destroy all other disease trees.

2. Remove dead or weakened limbs from all diseased trees scheduled for treatment.

3. Control ball moss with the proper chemical treatment.

4. Fertilize the trees in early spring to promote maximum growth.

5. Avoid additional stress on the trees by deep watering as necessary, especially during July, August, September and December.

6. Diseased trees should be injected with a fungicide during the months of high nutrient uptake, usually between June and mid-October.

For more information on live oaks and oak decline, contact your county agent, local nurseryman, or Extension horticulturist. For information on testing, contact: Texas Plant Disease Diagnostic Laboratory, Plant Sciences Building, Room 101, Texas A&M University, College Station, Tx, 77843.

Ancient elephant excavated

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Archeologists from Texas A&M University have unearthed a 10,000-year-old, 10-foot-tall mammoth that died on the banks of the Brazos River.

David Carlson and Gentry Steele, the archeologists directing the excavation on privately owned land near the A&M campus, said they have unearthed the ancient elephant's tusks, jawbones, shoulder blades, several vertebrae and ribs, and bones from the massive animal's legs.

They said though the excavation site now lies in the shadow of sheer cliffs, it once was a sandy point where mammoths could drink and graze.

Steele said mammoths were likely a common sight in Texas 10,000 to 12,000 years ago. This mammoth is a member of the species Mammuthus jeffersoni, named for Thomas Jefferson who excavated mammoth bones. Its cousin, the woolly mammoth, migrated from the Old World, but never ventured further south than the Great Lakes, Steele said.

Canoists spotted the mammoth's jawbone jutting from the riverbank late last year and contacted the university, but bad weather delayed the excavation until this year.

Carlson said many giant North American mammals — saber-toothed tigers, sloths, giant armadillos, camels,

American lions, horses and cave bears — might have met early extinction at the hands of hunting humans who crossed the Bering Strait.

"Mammals in North America didn't know they should run from human hunters," Carlson said. "Some of the species that developed alongside mankind in the Old World learned that lesson."

He said researchers so far have found no evidence of humans at the excavation site.

Steele said more than 30 A&M students have been able to participate in various stages of the excavation because of the site's proximity to the campus.

The excavation is being funded by A&M and the Witte Museum in San Antonio, where the bones might be taken after they are treated for conservation and studied at A&M.

Most of the larger pieces of the ancient elephant have been removed from the site and taken to the university's anthropology facilities, the archeologists said.

to 5.24 billion bushels because of this summer's drought and the department's action last winter to reduce production.

Sharp reductions in this year's grain crops have meant higher costs for livestock feed and that, in turn, is expected to force many beef, pork, dairy and poultry producers to cut back on expansion plans.

As a result, analysts predict that higher meat prices are in store for consumers in the longer run.

But for now, analysts don't see much to worry about.

Price changes that show up in the producer price measure are a good barometer of how food, energy and other commodity prices will move at the retail level. The Consumer Price Index, though, checks for a broader range of items, including housing and medical care, than does the wholesale inflation index.

Consumer prices were up 0.2 percent in June. For the first half of the year, those prices overall rose at an annual rate of only 2.9 percent.

Other economic developments:

—Consumer confidence slipped in July after six months of increase, according to the Conference Board, a research group financed by business interests. The board's consumer confidence index, figured from a base of 100 for 1969-70, stood at 84.2 in July compared with 84.9 in June.

—The Commerce Department said business inventories fell $670 million, or 0.1

percent, in June. Stocks of unsold goods had risen $862 million, or 0.2 percent, in May. The department also said overall business sales rose 2.1 percent in June.

—The average interest rate earned in money market mutual funds in the week ended Wednesday topped the average rate offered by banks on similar investments for the first time since the bank accounts were introduced last December. The rate on bank money market deposits rose to 8.54 percent from the previous week's 8.49 percent, while the money fund yield climbed to 8.57 percent from 8.47 percent, according to the newsletters Bank Rate Monitor and Donoghue's Money Fund Report.

Floyd Bannister of Chisox

Hurler overcoming 'dud' start

By BARRY WILNER AP Sports Writer

When the Chicago White Sox made Floyd Bannister a millionaire last winter, they expected to get a super pitcher. For half a season, they got a super dud.

Then came the All-Star break and Bannister used the time off to work overtime. Now, the White Sox have their super pitcher — and a stranglehold on the American League West Division.

Bannister earned his seventh straight victory, striking out 11 in 6 1-3 innings Thursday night as Chicago belted Baltimore 9-3. The victory extended the Sox' lead in the West to six games over Kansas City, which was rained out in Boston. The Orioles, losers of six in a row, fell to third place in the East, one game behind Milwaukee.

"The first half is not something I like to look back on," said Bannister, 3-9 at the All-Star break. "During the break, I felt I needed to work a little extra. I threw batting practice, studied films, and worked with (pitching coach Dave) Duncan. I had to try to figure out what I was most comfortable with."

He did and his revival has coincided with the Sox' rush to the top of the West, where they are the only team with a winning record.

Tom Paciorek had four hits for Chicago.

"(Manager Tony) LaRussa told me I'd be playing more," said Paciorek. "That's all I can ask. I'm not saying I'll lead us to the Promised Land but I do think I can contribute to us winning the division and getting into the World Series."

"I think playing fairly regularly lately (at first base or in the outfield) has done me a lot of good. When I sit down for a long time, I really lose my timing. Now I've got my timing, my good rhythm back and when I'm swinging good, I feel I can hit anyone."

"We're going to have to get our act together and turn it around," Baltimore Manager Joe Altobelli said. "We only have 52 games left, so we're going to have to turn it around soon. And we're facing a pretty hot team."

Brewers 6, Blue Jays 4

Cecil Cooper, Robin Yount and Jim Gantner knocked in two runs apiece, Cooper hitting a solo home run as well as the Milwaukee moved atop the East for the first time since April 28. Milwaukee is 9-4 this month to surge into the lead, while Toronto has dropped seven of its last eight games.

Cooper has gone 53-for-150 (.353 average) with 44 RBI since the All-Star break.

Rookie Chuck Porter, who six-hit the Blue Jays 3-0 in his last start, was the winner.

"I'm not satisfied," said Cooper. "You've always got to do more and try to do more. If you get three hits you should try for four. If you have four, you should try for five. I wasn't able to do it, but I'll take the three."

"He's having an outstanding two months," said Brewers Manager Harvey Kuenn. "He was hitting .270-something at the All-Star break and now he's well up over .300. He's driven in 96 runs. He's really come back."

Yankees 6, Tigers 5

After taking a vicious cut, missing Howard Bailey's pitch, Dave Winfield fell to the ground in pain. His foot was treated, then Winfield swung just as hard and belted a game-winning home run, his 23rd homer of the season. The Yankees have won seven of their last 10 games.

Rich Gossage, worked 3 1-3 innings of one-hit relief to improve his record to 10-3.

The Yankees grabbed a 5-0 lead, helped greatly by three Tiger errors in the second innings. But Detroit came back with a five-run fifth on six singles, an error and a bases-loaded walk Lance Parrish.

"Wasn't that a great game," said Gossage. "We got a big lead, they came back and tied us and then we came back and won."

A's 6, Twins 6

Chris Codiroli scattered five hits for Oakland's first complete-game shutout this year and Dwayne Murphy hit his 12th homer as the A's moved into third place in the West with their sixth victory in the past seven games and 13th of their last 18, despite a slew of injuries to the pitching staff.

"I'm the only original starter left in the rotation, and I'd like to keep it that way," said Codiroli.

"I'm really not out to prove anything except that I belong here," said Codiroli. I had to go out and prove myself this year. I've still got eight more starts, and generally I've been stronger near the end of the season."

Braves prevail 6-4

Murphy hits ninth homer off Giant pitching

By KEN RAPPOPORT AP Sports Writer

Dale Murphy just won't give the San Francisco Giants' pitching staff a rest.

Thursday night, the Atlanta slugger hit two more home runs to give him nine for the season off San Francisco pitchers.

"It's tough when a guy has a night like that," said San Francisco's Darrell Evans after watching Murphy drive in five runs in the Braves' 6-4 victory. "They got two big hits from Murphy, but even with the first one we still could have come back, and then he hits another one."

Murphy crunched a 2-1 pitch from Bill Laskey, 12-9, deep into the left-field seats at Atlanta Stadium in the first inning following a two-out single by Claudell Washington and a walk to Bob Horner.

His second homer of the game, and 25th of the season, carried over the right-field fence following a Horner single in the fifth and it was his fourth this year off Andy McGaffigan.

"I don't think about home runs, but I'd like to have a bunch of them," Murphy said. "Home runs are not my goal. If it happens, it happens. I just want to get a hit." Ken Dayley, 3-3, held the Giants to one hit until the fifth when John Rabb singled with two out. Brad Wellman walked and Tom O'Malley contributed a run-scoring single.

Dayley was chased in the sixth after Jack Clark smacked his 16th homer and Jeff Leonard singled. Rick Camp and Gene Garber finished up, with the latter gaining his seventh save despite a two-run ninth capped by Duane Kuiper's RBI single.

Dodgers 4, Reds 3

In Cincinnati, Ken Landreaux's sacrifice fly in the seventh inning lifted Los Angeles over Cincinnati, snapping the Dodgers' three-game losing streak.

Landreaux's sacrifice fly scored Dave Anderson to break a 3-3 tie and give the victory to reliever Tom Niedenfuer, 6-1, who pitched four shutout innings and struck out a career-high seven.

Greg Brock had hit a three-run homer for the Dodgers, but the Reds came back to tie in the third with the help of Dodger errors.

"Niedenfuer was outstanding, just tremendous," said Dodger Manager Tom Lasorda. "I guess that's what it took for us to win."

Astros 5, Padres 1

In Houston, Jose Cruz knocked in four runs and Mike Scott overcame a rocky start and combined with Dave Smith for a seven-hitter to lead the Astros over San Diego.

Scott, 6-4, recorded his first win since July 16, going seven innings and striking out two and walking four. Reliever Dave Smith earned his fifth save.

Slugger wants patience

By WILL GRIMSLEY AP Special Correspondent

If you can't love me when I'm bad, don't love me when I'm good, chides the New York Yankees' $21 million man, Dave Winfield, still struggling for a super star identity in baseball.

He had to accidentally slay a Canadian seagull a week ago in Toronto to get people to notice that his has turned into one of the hottest bats in the game in the current pennant stretch.

"I'm not turned on by all those 'We Love You' signs I see in the stands lately," said the towering slugger before departing for the week-end series against the Tigers in Detroit. "It's not easy to forget all those 'boos' that were stinging my ears before the All-Star break.

"People know I always deliver — I'm going to put numbers on the board. Why can't they be a little patient?"

Life hasn't been all strawberry shortcake for the 6-foot-6, 220-pound capitalist since the Yankees signed him prior to the 1981 season to one of the longest and richest contracts in the business.

He joined the club in the shadow of Reggie Jackson, the "stick that stirs the drink," and, after Reggie shuffled off to the California Angels, he had problems convincing both the fans and Yankee brass that he was capable of carrying the Yankee tradition in the style of Babe Ruth, Joe DiMaggio, Mickey Mantle and Reggie Jax.

He batted .294 in 1981 but slumped badly in the World Series against Los Angeles, getting one hit in 22 at bats. The fans rode him unmercifully. He received death threats. The impatient and impetuous owner of the Yankees, George Steinbrenner, lamented publicly that "Winfield can't carry the club the way Reggie did."

Winfield admits this "chewed at my guts" but determined to keep his silence and show his detractors. He climbed walls and turned somersaults to make sensational catches. He got his quota of hits. He hung tough.

In 1982, with a disorganized club, he batted .280, hammered out 37 home runs and accounted for 106 runs batted in.

Since the All-Star break he has raised his average to .272 with 22 home runs and 86 RBIs.

Calvin Peete nearly millionaire

GRAND BLANC, Mich. (AP) — Years ago, Calvin Peete thought golf was just a millionaire's game.

Now, less than eight years after joining the PGA Tour, the 39-year-old Peete stands on the brink of becoming the first black man to win $1 million at the game he once thought unobtainable.

Peete, who was born in Detroit and grew up on a Florida farm, fired a 6-under-par 66 over the 7,001-yard Warwick Hills Golf & Country Club Thursday to share the lead with D.A. Weibring after one round of the $350,000 Buick Open.

Peete, who never touched a golf club until he was 23, has earned $968,605 since joining the Tour in 1975.

The winner of the Buick Open will receive $63,000 and the runnerup will earn $37,900, which means that either a first or second place finish would put Peete over the million mark.

"Ten years, or so, ago I didn't even know there was a Buick Open," said Peete, one of 19 children by his father's two marriages. "I always thought golf was only for the rich, but I know now that I was wrong."

Peete, who won the Atlanta Classic and the Anheuser-Busch tournaments earlier this year, said a victory at the Buick Open, with friends and family looking on, would be special.

"This is like my hometown," said Peete, who hit every green in regulation while carding three birdies on each side for 33-33. "Winning in Atlanta was special, but to win here would be the highlight of my career."

Weibring, a former assistant pro at Red Run Golf Club in the Detroit suburb of Royal Oak, carded nines of 32-34. Weibring had a chance to grab the first-round lead all alone after chipping in from 25 feet for an eagle 3 at the 491-yard 13th hole, but fell back to 6-under with a bogey on the par-3 17th.

Canadian Open winner John Cook and Kemper Open champion Fred Couples were one shot behind the leaders at 5-under 67, tied with John Renner and venerable Chi Chi Rodriguez.

Hawaiian Open winner Isao Aoki fired a first-round 68, as did Lou Graham, Don Pooley, Tom Kite, Jim Simons and Jeff Sluman.

In general, the field of 150 golfers tore up the rain-soaked course. Because they could afford to fly their shots right at the flags, without fear of running off the backside of the soft greens, 71 players were at par or better heading into the second round of the 72-hole tournament today.

"The rain was a big disadvantage to me," said Aoki, one of Japan's finest players. "It makes the course play much longer for me because the ball doesn't roll on the wet fairways."

The National Weather Service predicted clear skies for today and the remainder of the tournament which concludes Sunday.

From Dolphin camp

'Woodstock' gone

By MIKE EMBRY AP Sports Writer

When Miami Coach Don Shula is faced with playing the time for his quarterbacks nowadays, he's not confronted with trying to decide between Dave Woodley and Don Strock.

Woodley and Strock, the Dolphins' successful "Woodstock" combo of the past few seasons, haven't been contesting for the position in preseason. Strock is having a contract dispute and has not reported to camp.

Shula said he would start Woodley against the New Orleans Saints in a National Football League exhibition game Saturday night in Miami. He'll also look at Dan Marino, the team's No. 1 draft choice from Pitt, and third-year veteran Jim Jensen.

Marino will get "plenty of playing time" while "I'm also going to give Jim Jensen a shot," Shula said.

Although several NFL and United States Football League teams are interested in Strock, Shula said he was hopeful the Dolphins would sign the disappointed player.

New Orleans running back George Rogers, who sustained a sore neck in last week's game against Tampa Bay, will probably play against the Dolphins.

Quarterback Matt Cavanaugh shouldn't find the surroundings too different when the Patriots play the 49ers — except for the uniform he's wearing.

Cavanaugh was traded Thursday by New England to the 49ers.

"I think I've been having the best camp I've had in a long time throwing the ball, so I'm just looking forward to getting out there and spending some time in meetings and getting attuned to what they're doing and then getting on the field and executing," he said Thursday before leaving the Patriots' camp in Smithfield, R.I.

Cavanaugh, a second-round draft choice from Pitt in 1978, completed 53.5 percent of his passes for 3,018 yards and 19 touchdowns during his years with the Patriots.

He was third on the depth chart behind Steve Grogan and Tony Eason, a No. 1 pick this year from Illinois, on the Patriots' depth chart. He'll be the second-string quarterback behind Joe Montana with the 49ers.

Tampa Bay Coach John McKay said Jack Thompson will start at quarterback against the Oilers in the Astrodome. Jerry Golsteyn and rookie Bob Hewko will see action in the second half.

About Helsinki meet

U.S. track athletes enthusiastic

HELSINKI, Finland (AP) — The United States team, leading the World Track and Field Championships in gold medals and total medals, was very enthusiastic going into the final three days of competition.

After a day off Thursday, the Americans were anxious to return to the Olympic Stadium track, where they have produced some astonishing and unexpected performances since the inaugural World Championships began last Sunday.

The Americans still were riding high after Wednesday night, when Carl Lewis anchored the 400-meter relay team to a world record 37.86 seconds and led a 1-2-3 U.S. sweep in the long jump, Mary Decker won the women's 3,000 with a gritty finishing kick, and Michael Franks and Sunder Nix finished 2-3 in the men's 400-meter dash.

That gave the United States a total of five golds and 15 total medals, including a 1-2-3 sweep in Monday night's men's 100-meter final, won by Lewis.

"That really fired me up," American pole vaulter Billy Olson said about Wednesday's magnificent efforts.

"I wouldn't mind being out there today (Thursday)," he said during the break in the schedule.

"I think the (American) athletes feel really good because everyone (the fans) are very much behind them," said American Edwin Moses, winner of the 400-meter intermediate hurdles Tuesday night.

Willie Gault, a member of the relay team, along with Emmitt King, Calvin Smith and Lewis, thinks the world record will provide a big boost for track and field in the United States.

"Track and field (in the U.S.) ... doesn't get as much respect as it should," said Gault.

The fans here have been very supportive of the Americans. They stood and yelled and cheered loudly when the American team broke the relay record. They also leaned over the railings to present the four runners with flags — both American and Finnish — and handed them various size versions of "Lasse," the rabbit that is the meet mascot and is named after Lasse Viren, the four-time Olympic gold medalist from Finland.

The Americans' success also has buoyed their hopes for the 1984 Olympic Games at Los Angeles. There, the United States track and field teams hope to make amends for its absence in the 1980 Moscow Games, which they boycotted and for its relatively poor showings in the 1972 and 1976 Olympics, when they won only six gold medals each.

"I was so proud to see the American flag up on top tonight, and I want to see our flag up on top next year too in the Los Angeles Olympics," the emotional Decker said after her dramatic victory.

"We have proved we can come abroad and compete at our level," said Lewis, the star of the American team — and of the meet.

"Now, Los Angeles is less than a year away. When people come to our turf, we want to show them we can compete well, too."

Welfare Board risks federal penalties

AUSTIN (AP) — The state welfare board has decided for the time being not to bow to a federal rule on nursing home payments, and has voted to penalize certain child care facilities that violate the law without taking away their licenses.

The board also heard Thursday that as of now only 83 of Texas' 254 counties would receive commodities such as butter and cheese under the federal emergency food assistance program.

Associate welfare commissioner Janice Caldwell said the Department of Human Resources had been notified three times by the Health Care Financing Administration regional office at Dallas that one particular state nursing home policy does not comply with federal regulations.

At issue is whether Medicaid benefits can be extended to certain low-income patients if they remain in a nursing home less than 30 days. The federal government says no, but the state maintains they are eligible for Medicaid.

The DHR staff recommended changing the state policy, saying it would save $510,900 in the next fiscal year, but the welfare board postponed a decision.

"I don't want to take anything away from these people," said board member Thomas Dunning of Dallas, who suggested that the staff see how other states in a similar situation had handled it.

Board chairman J. Livingston Kosberg of Houston said he had trouble with the federal regulation, because it would allow payment of benefits if a patient died within 30 days of entering a nursing home but not if the patient got well or simply chose to leave in less than 30 days.

Ms. Caldwell said if the state refused to comply with the federal regulation, the federal government could go so far as to demand the return of its matching Medicaid funds for the past five years.

The board authorized its staff, effective Aug. 29, to place child care facilities that violate the law or DHR rules on probation.

The department has had only two options — suspend or revoke the facility's license — but the 1983 Legislature authorized probation under certain circumstances.

"Closure of a facility may cause major problems for families of children in care, the children themselves, and financially it is very difficult on the facility," according to a report by welfare commissioner Marlin Johnston.

"Probation will serve as a type of public due notice, such that parents of children in care and anyone else who enters the facility will notice that the facility is on probation," Johnston said.

Prenatal diagnosis to be revolutionized

BAR HARBOR, Maine (AP) — A new method for detecting birth defects and determining sex as early as the seventh week of pregnancy will "revolutionize" prenatal testing, says the first American doctor to use the technique.

The procedure, called chorion biopsy, will someday be as routine as amniocentesis, the current prenatal testing method, said Dr. Eugene Pergament of Michael Reese Hospital and Medical Center in Chicago.

Like amniocentesis, chorion biopsy can be used to detect such disorders as Down's syndrome and sickle-cell anemia and to determine the sex of the fetus. However, while the results of amniocentesis are not available until about the 20th week of pregnancy, chorion biopsy yields results by the seventh to 10th week.

If defects are found, the mother can elect to have an abortion, which is much simpler and safer during the first three months of pregnancy than it is later.

Pergament told The Associated Press on Thursday that he has used the new technique on six women. One elected to have an abortion when the test showed that her child had one too many copies of chromosome 16. Pergament said the child would not have survived.

In another, the procedure was unsuccessful, but it did not affect her pregnancy, Pergament said. The other four women are having normal pregnancies and should give birth in four to five months, he said.

The new technique was described Thursday during a seminar on genetics at Jackson Laboratory in Bar Harbor.

Chorion biopsy is done by inserting a tube through the mouth of the womb and snipping a tiny sample of tissue from the chorion, the precursor of the placenta. Because the chorion has the same genes as the fetus, it can be examined for genetic information.

Amniocentesis — sampling of the fluid around the fetus — cannot be done until at least the 10th week, because there is not enough fluid present before then.

Also, amniocentesis captures so few cells that it takes four weeks to grow the cells and test them for defects.

Chorion biopsy allows the testing to be completed in a day or less.

Two other research groups, at Thomas Jefferson University in Philadelphia and at Yale University, are also experimenting with the technique, but they have not yet used it to make a diagnosis.

Dr. Laird Jackson, leader of the group at Thomas Jefferson, said it is of "overwhelming" importance to diagnose birth defects in the seventh to 10th week rather than the 20th week.

"This is a distinctly different time than a five-month pregnancy, where you've seen something that looks like a baby when you've done the ultrasound," he said. A seven-week fetus is just 4 inches long.

The procedure may also eventually allow certain birth defects to be corrected, said Dr. John Hobbins, head of the Yale group.

"It may herald a whole new era of fetal treatment," he said. "In some cases we're going to be able to do something by being aware of it (a birth defect) early."

David McKendree Key (1824-1900) of Tennessee, postmaster general in President Hayes' cabinet from 1877 to 1880, was the first former Confederate officer to serve in the federal cabinet. Key was a lieutenant colonel in the Confederate army.

Ann Landers Let husband have duties

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I certainly identified with the woman whose retired husband is driving her cuckoo. Everyone asks the man how he is enjoying his retirement. Nobody ever asks his wife.

My husband never developed any interests of his own, just decided to butt in on mine. He corrects me from morning 'til night and drives me crazy. He thinks he can cook better, clean better and has monopolized all the marketing. I'm ready to blow my top. Any ideas?—Another Wall-Climber In Dallas

DEAR D: Let him have the dad-gum duties. Find yourself some hobbies. Call it YOUR retirement and enjoy, Lady. Here's more on the same subject:

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'm a retired businessman who was going downhill fast. Life was boring. I was drying up. My wife became alarmed at my mental

"deterioration." At her insistence I went to a counselor who questioned me about my interests. I confessed I had always wanted to go back to my first love — teaching. He suggested I be a volunteer tutor at a local community college.

I took his advice and have been happier these last few years than at any time in my entire life.

Those students give my brain a real workout. My wife marvels at how sharp I've become. Knowing I'm doing something constructive is the best lift in the world.—Having A Ball In Portland

DEAR PORT: Bravo! Here's another letter — with a different twist.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: This is for the woman is Erie, Pa. Her husband retired 10 months ago and now she can't stand to have him around the house.

My dear lady, how would you like to have him bedridden and be responsible for his total care? Some women have this burden and they are trapped night and day. Or would you rather have him dead? If you think it might be a relief, you don't know what loneliness is.

Do church work, baby-sit the neighbor's kids — anything to get out. And be thankful the old buzzard is there when you come home. I wish mine was.—Lonely As Hell

DEAR LONELY: Can you stand one more? Here it is:

ANN, DEAR: When men retire and want to hang around the house, say, "Hooray! Here's a mop, a broom, the sweeper, an apron, a recipe book and a rake.

Does he want to learn how to can and freeze vegetables? Wonderful! If he's a putterer and good with his hands buy him some "how-to" books. Would you believe some men like to knit, and crochet, and embroider — even needlepoint? If he's artistic get him an easel and paints or clay and let him sculpt. As Browning said, the last of life can be the part for which the first was made. I believe it. It worked in our house and now we get along better than ever.—Coosome Twosome Since He Turned 65

DEAR COOSOME: Beautiful. You've offered several good suggestions. Not everything works for everybody, but it's worth a try.

Fear of snakes need not keep one indoors

The dry, hot dog days of August are just the right time of year to bring out campers and outdoor enthusiasts trying to get in last minute outings before school and other activities begin in the fall.

It just so happens that this is also the type of weather which brings out snakes. But this shouldn't keep people from enjoying the outdoors, says Clint Vardeman, a paramedic with Amarillo Medical Services.

There are only 1,500 snake bites annually in Texas, and most of these occur in Central and East Texas, he notes. In the Panhandle there are only three species of poisonous snakes.

Most snakes are very shy and will avoid any human contact. "If you wander off into the country and don't reach under rock ledges, you may never see a poisonous snake," he adds.

If the worst happens, though, and someone is bitten, the main thing to do is stay calm. According to Vardeman physical activity will only spread the poison more quickly, if there is any. Thirty percent of all snake bite victims have no poison injected into the wound.

Try to get a good description of the snake, he advises. Ninety percent of snakes in this area are not poisonous and do not cause serious injury.

Vardeman says, "If you are bitten on a leg or an arm, as most people are, there are a few simple steps to remember. Keep the limb from moving, if possible. If you have a snakebite kit, you might place a light elastic band about six inches above and below the bite, but do not tie it too tightly.

"Cleanse the area with water, apply suction only if you have the proper equipment and can do so within 30 minutes of the bite. Do not cut the wound. Take the victim to the hospital, remembering to remain calm and traveling at a normal rate of speed."

"If possible, call your local ambulance service so the victim can travel more comfortably," advises Vardeman.

Mysterious man nearly silent since coming here

HOUSTON (AP) — Hang Ton, a Cambodian whose refusal to speak for 110 days after he was jailed for stealing a wrench led officials to test his sanity, has been virtually silent since leaving his homeland, a shrimper who cares for him says.

Hang was sentenced to six months' probation and ordered to seek psychiatric care Thursday after pleading guilty to petty theft. Harris County psychiatrists had pronounced him sane and competent to stand trial.

"He just never says anything. He just sits there," said Ly Dan, a shrimper from Dickinson who said he has known Hang since they were boys in Phnom Penh.

Dan said Hang rode away from his house on a bicycle April 23 and never returned. Dan said he was "very relieved" when his wife spotted Hang on a television newscast Wednesday.

"I have been looking for him for months and months," Dan said. "I thought he was dead."

Dan said Hang is "very intelligent" but has "changed totally since he came here." He said most of Hang's family was killed in the Vietnamese invasion of Cambodia in 1979.

Hang's silence led Harris County Court-at-Law Judge Shelly Hancock to order a mental examination May 10, but the evaluation was put off several times.

Defense attorney Ynhi Nguyen said some of the delays occurred because county officials tried to use Vietnamese interpreters whom Hang did not understand. She said a psychological profile can usually be obtained in about a month. Hang was arrested April 23 at a Sears, Roebuck and Co. store.

"I ask him why he take the wrench," Dan said. "He say he saw behind the plastic. He say he like."

Dan said Hang had money with him and would not explain why he had not paid for the wrench.

Ms. Nguyen said she let Hang stay in jail for more than three months because she hoped an insanity finding would lead to dismissal of the charge. She said she felt it was important to clear his name.

Hang was held in lieu of $800 bond.

She said she was satisfied with the finding that her client was sane, even though Dan said he has been disturbed since coming to the United States from Vietnam and had made up many of the things he told the examining doctors.

She said she asked Hang through Dan whether he knew his being in trouble was linked to his taking the wrench.

"He said 'Yes,'" she said. "If I wanted to challenge the report, it would take another month."

Dan said he has taken care of Hang for the two years he has been in the Houston area. He said Hang was very bright when they were in school and loved to draw.

Veteran recalls atomic blast

By BETSY BRAZY Laredo News

LAREDO, Texas (AP) — In 1955, Ruben O. Garcia knelt inside a U.S. Army tank at Yucca Flats, Nev., two miles from ground zero as an atomic bomb exploded.

"We were in armored company, in tanks. They had us about two miles away from the tower to where the bomb was. They were testing to see the effect of the blast on equipment and personnel," the Laredoan recalled.

When the Task Force Razor device atop its 500-foot control tower exploded, Garcia and the 723rd Tank Battalion from Camp Irvine, Calif. were formed into a V-shaped armored formation facing the blast. Each man wore protective clothing and a radiation badge. The periscopes of the tanks were taped with olive drab material to shut out the intense light from the blast.

Garcia remembers the blast as "a big boom. It was the loudest thing you ever heard." He said the ground shook, too. "I've never been in an earthquake but I guess that's what it would feel like," he said.

Following the blast, the battalion's armored vehicles drove forward toward ground zero, where the bomb was detonated, drove around it and returned to their original position.

"We had protective clothing and everything but still when you'd get off they'd sweep you with a broom. You had to take off all your clothing and take a field shower in the middle of the desert," Garcia said.

On the protective clothing the soldiers wore film badges to measure the gamma radiation received by each person

You'll never feel unwanted again, once some book club gets your name on its mailing list.

Nothing makes a parent feel more loved than when one of the kids lets him have the keys to the car for the evening.

as a result of the blast.

Garcia said that before the blasts the soldiers were told not to take cameras and not to write home about the blast until after it happened. The soldiers waited three days for the weather to be right before they could participate in the blast. Garcia said he was not told about any hazards of radiation.

"They told us it was a test and not to worry about it; we were well protected," he said.

Did he believe the Army was telling him the truth? "Well, I guess I do," he replied. "So far I don't have any ill effects."

"I guess we were luckier than the guys on the ground, infantry people, because it was even worse on them," he added.

Garcia was one of many people in the armed forces who attended the atomic blasts. Still in apparent good health, Garcia joined the Texas chapter of the National Association of Atomic Veterans, based in Fort Worth. The association estimates 35,000 soldiers participated in atomic tests between 1945 and 1963.

"They sent me a brochure. They told me if I needed any help they would provide it," he said.

"I know that there were thousands of people who participated in that thing," Garcia said.

Garcia said he isn't sure that the soldiers participating in the blast increased their risk of getting cancer. "But the VA (Veterans Administration) doesn't want to do anything about it," he said.

Veterans and their families cannot sue the government for injuries received while employed by the armed forces, according to a U.S. Supreme Court decision. Their only recourse is to appeal to the Veterans Administration, said Louis Levin, chairman of the Texas chapter.

"We're having problems with the Veterans Administration. They're not giving us pensions. They do not give us anything because we have to prove our sicknesses are from the detonations," Levin said. "They won't release information; that's why we're having problems."

There was some recognition last month when Atomic Veterans Day was celebrated.

Levin, who participated in the Manhattan Project in 1945 in which the bombs dropped on Hiroshima and Nagasaki, Japan were developed, said he received a medical discharge from the Army.

The Army retracted his certificate of disability and he has been appealing ever since. "They don't have to give you a reason. They just give you a letter," Levin said.

Levin said many veterans have trouble getting their files because of the 1976 fire in the St. Louis records center. He said veterans asking or their files often are told they were burned in the fire.

Levin also was told his records were burned in the fire. Yet he has his files now. "I kept bugging them and all of a sudden they found them," he said.

Levin said his organization is gathering funds to help victims of radiation sickness received from the blasts.

"We're trying to raise funds for the widows and children. We have a lot of deformity in the second generations," he said.

Levin said an average of one atomic veteran is dying about every six weeks from cancer. He doubts the Veterans Administration will recognize that the atomic veterans' deaths may be caused by radiation received during the blasts. "They're probably waiting or us all to pass on and then they'll recognize us," he said.

Presidential 'Beef on the Hoof' scorned

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Walter Mondale, who goes to a lot of them, says they're like a "traveling gong show" and Fritz Hollings describes them as maybe "the silliest thing in the world."

Senate Republican Leader Howard Baker, who went for awhile four years ago, describes them as "cruel and unusual punishment."

And Rep. Morris Udall, who also used to go and then stopped, says, "I'd be just as happy if they'd go away."

The object of such healthy bipartisan scorn is the political "cattle show."

The presidential hopefuls parade before an audience, each speaking 10 or 15 minutes, answering questions and making himself available to be inspected by those in attendance. Presidential beef on the hoof.

Scorned or not, the cattle shows won't go away, and it's because of people like Mondale and Hollings — and John Glenn and Reubin Askew and Alan Cranston and Gary Hart, and Udall and Baker before them — that they won't.

The candidates keep showing up.

Democratic hopefuls were in Detroit earlier this month, appearing before the Democratic National Committee, before that in San Antonio with the National Women's Political Caucus. The next stop is Saturday in Des Moines — across town from a real live cattle show, the Iowa State Fair.

For those in the audience, it's comparison shopping. They get a firsthand look at several presidential prospects, and may even be able to squeeze in a five-minute conversation with a few they find especially interesting.

This weekend's forum in Des Moines will draw five hopefuls for a discussion on arms control sponsored by a Democratic group.

Mondale, the former vice president seeking the 1984 Democratic presidential nomination, plans to attend, as do Sens. Alan Cranston of California; John Glenn of Ohio; Gary Hart of Colorado and Ernest Hollings of South Carolina.

Alone among the Democratic presidential hopefuls, former Florida Gov. Reubin Askew will pass up the event. He'll be in Hanover, N.H., serving as grand marshal of a parade.

The rest of the contenders will go, at least in part, because everyone else is.

The Iowa forum is devoted to a specific campaign issue — arms control — but the real draw is the fact that Iowa is the state where the first delegates will be picked, by caucus, for next year's Democratic National Convention.

No one seems to know who first compared one of these events to a cattle show, but the events are certainly unpopular with politicians.

Udall, who ran for the Democratic nomination in 1976, typed with the idea of running again next year.

Witnesses said some police hurled rocks and fired tear-gas grenades through windows of homes where people obeying the curfew banged on empty pots and pans to protest Pinochet's authoritarian rule and the poor state of the economy.

By nightfall, machine-gun bursts and the clanging pots combined in a thunderous din heard throughout this city of 4 million, where hundreds of youths from slum districts defied the curfew. They lobbed rocks and garbage at police and erected barricades of flaming car tires soaked in gasoline.

Most of the 500 arrested were street rioters.

The killings and arrests marked the bloodiest violence in the series of monthly one-day protests begun in May.

Hundreds of troops patrolled the capital, the heaviest deployment since the aftermath of the 1973 coup that brought Pinochet to power.

Terrorists forced passengers out of a taxi in a Santiago slum district and set the vehicle afire. Two buses were burned in Concepcion.

Pinochet is an army general who overthrew the late President Salvador Allende's elected Marxist government. The armed forces are loyal to Pinochet but he has lost support among civilians because of a two-year-old recession and his resistance to the political liberalization promised in 1980, when the voters approved a constitution extending his term to 1989.

About 1,000 tons of meteorites annually fall on the moon's surface. They compose 2 percent of the lunar soil.

10 dead, 500 arrested in Chile

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — Police and soldiers machine-gunned and tear-gassed people in their homes and clubbed marchers on the streets to smash an anti-government protest that reportedly left at least 10 people dead, 100 wounded and 500 arrested.

It was the bloodiest repression of opponents since the military regime came to power 10 years ago.

Riot squads roamed streets of Santiago and the port city of Valparaiso this morning, enforcing a dusk-to-dawn curfew decreed by President Gen. Augusto Pinochet to quell the fourth monthly "day of national protest" organized by opposition political parties, labor leaders and students.

"He's going to fall!" hundreds of university students shouted, running through Santiago streets after the curfew was announced at midday Thursday. Police routed them with dogs and tear gas.

Two Hereford children will have their bookmarks they designed on exhibit at the Commercial Exhibits Building in Amarillo during the Tri-State Fair Sept. 3-10.

The local bookmarks, drawn around the theme of "Lasso a Good Book," were drawn by 12-year-old Linda Gutierrez and nine-year-old Desinee Aylesworth. They were winners of the contest sponsored locally by Deaf Smith County Library.

St. Anthony's registration this weekend

St. Anthony's School registration is scheduled from 6:30 to 8 p.m. on Saturday and from 10 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. on Sunday in the Antonio Room.

A teachers' retreat will be held Aug. 18 and teachers' in-service is Aug. 19. Classes will start on Aug. 24 for first through sixth graders and on Sept. 6 for kindergartners.

HEALTH Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Is he too thin?

DEAR DR. LAMB — My mother-in-law seems to think her son is too skinny and needs to eat more meat. He is 6 feet tall and weighs 160 pounds. He is not skinny at all but she is overweight. She says you need to eat meat at least twice a day along with bread.

I don't think meat is all that important so we sometimes include it only once a day. I do use beans, cheese and fresh vegetables. If I'm supposed to be unhealthy and starving myself because I don't eat a lot of meat, why do I only get sick one day of the year?

It bothers me that she doesn't think I feed him well and brings meat over every time they visit us. I plan to show her your answer.

DEAR READER — There are a lot of people who eat no meat at all and many of them are much healthier by statistics than the general public. However, lean meat is a good food and a good source of protein. The fat in meat is not beneficial unless you want or need excess calories.

Your husband needs 56 grams of protein a day. An eight-ounce portion, raw weight of the edible portion only, of red meat, chicken or fish will provide about 50 grams of this. A quart of fortified skim milk contains over 40 grams of protein. Cheese is also a good source of protein.

Both of you have missed a fundamental point — lean meat isn't fattening. A whole pound of lean round steak with all the visible fat removed contains only 600 calories. It is how you cook many foods that affects the calories. I mean whether you trim the fat off before cooking and what, if any, butter or other fats you add.

The key to staying lean and healthy is often in what you do in the kitchen. I am sending you The Health Letter 9-12, Kitchen Power for Weight Control, which will help you. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

It is normal for mothers to want their children to be plump but it is not always wise from a health standpoint. Keep your husband lean, not fat. And I am glad I won't be around when you show this column to your mother-in-law and the fight begins.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My daughter flew to London. On the morning she left she woke up with a sore throat and stuffy head. When she arrived in London she had very bad earaches. She went to the doctor and he gave her some antibiotics. The ears ached so bad she spent all her time in the hotel.

When she got back her doctor said she should never have flown with a cold and sore throat.

DEAR READER — It is called aero-otitis media or barotitis media and it is caused by the changes in barometric pressure during flight.

With a cold, the opening of the tube in the throat that connects to the middle ear may be obstructed. So you can't change the pressure in the middle ear chamber during take-off and landing. Not being able to equalize the air pressure on both sides of the eardrum can cause mechanical injury.

Then, you can literally suck infectious material into the middle ear from air pressure changes. That is why doctors recommend that you avoid air travel when you have a cold, or problems with allergic rhinitis (hay fever).

POLLY'S POINTERS Polly Fisher

Mildew may be culprit

DEAR POLLY — I have a Formica dining room hutch. During the summer and other times of high humidity, it has a very foul smell. I have put dryer fabric softener sheets on the shelves, but that has not solved the problem. — DELORES

DEAR DELORES — Sounds as if mildew might be the culprit. Try washing the hutch with a mild chlorine bleach solution (one cup of bleach in a quart of water) to destroy any mold spores and help deodorize it. If possible, you might also want to let it air outside on a sunny, windy day. If any odor lingers, try placing small open containers of activated charcoal on the shelves. (Pet shops that carry aquarium supplies sell activated charcoal.) If parts of the hutch are wood, you can still wash it with a mild bleach solution (test in a hidden place to make sure the finish won't be damaged), but you'll probably want to finish off with a coat of furniture polish. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — When taking popcorn to the drive-in movie, the best containers are empty cereal boxes with the waxed paper liner intact. Save several boxes so each child can have his own. The waxed paper keeps melted butter from soaking through.

On a hot summer day, empty your ice cube trays into an ice bucket in the morning. Then you can easily reach for ice cubes without continually opening the freezer. Refill the ice trays as the cubes form to keep a constant supply of cubes. Happy homemaking!

Mothers and grandmothers who are accustomed to opening dishwashers to allow dishes to air-dry must be extra careful when youngsters are in the house. Little ones can snatch a fork or knife and toddle off with it before you know it! — Sissy

DEAR POLLY — Your cheerful contribution of not only two excellent Pointers but a good safety warning as well earns you our Pointer of the Week award, an autographed copy of my book Polly's Pointers: 1081 Helpful Household Hints for Making Everything Last Longer. Keep sending those Pointers! — POLLY

Save money on cleaning products by making your own window cleaner, furniture polish, even liquid pump soap. "Polly's Homemade Soaps and Cleaners" tells you how. Send $1 for each copy to POLLY'S POINTERS, P.O. Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10101. Be sure to include the title.

Bookmarks to be exhibited during fair

FAITH REVEALS THE UNLIMITED FACETS OF LOVE

To many of us, the word "love" usually signifies romantic adventure, happy marriage or the care and anxiety of a parent; but while all of these are good examples of it, they by no means tell the whole story. Love is an act of kindness for one's neighbor; an anonymous donation to a worthy cause; food and supplies sent to starving native children or the victims of a disaster; a regular visit to the sick, the elderly or the lonely of any age; and so on indefinitely. Whatever form it takes, the main ingredients of love are thoughtfulness and unselfishness, and you will find the recipe for it at the Church of your choice. It will be served with a generous portion of happiness for you as well as for the recipients of it.

"A new commandment give unto you, That ye love one another; as I have loved you."
—John 13:34

Respect is what we owe; love, what we give.
—Phillip James Bailey
