Rural school chosen for seige because of parents

COKEVILLE, Wyo. (AP) — A heavily armed former marshal and his wife, who held 150 elementary school pupils for $300 million ransom until an accidental explosion killed the woman and burned scores of hostages, apparently chose this rural town because its "people take care of their children."

Doris Young was killed when the bomb she held exploded, and her husband David then shot himself to death, said Lincoln County Sheriff Deb Wolfley. At least 74 people, most of them children, sustained second-degree burns in the three-hour siege Friday, and a teacher was shot in the shoulder.

Most of the victims were treated at Wyoming and Idaho hospitals and released. Three children and one teacher were in stable condition at Logan Regional Hospital in Logan, Utah, said nursing supervisor Terri Chase-Dunn.

The most seriously injured child, a girl suffering from second-degree burns and smoke inhalation, was flown to a Salt Lake City hospital, officials said.

"We wonder how it could possibly happen to us," said Cokeville Elementary School Principal Max Excell. "We're in a safe little community in Wyoming."

Excell, who was among the hostages herded into one classroom, said at one point Young told him that he had picked the town of about 500 people "because it was a rural community and people take care of their children."

Young apparently also harbored some complaint against the community — in southwestern Wyoming about five miles from Idaho — which he served briefly as town marshal six or seven years ago before being dismissed by the mayor.

Mrs. Young died after her husband gave her the gasoline bomb he carried and told her to hold it while he went to the bathroom, Wolfley said. She accidentally detonated it, he said.

"I thought we were all dead," said secretary Christine Cook, who was in the classroom when the device exploded about 4 p.m. "I heard this awful noise. It was smoke and flames. Just pandemonium."

"They (the children) were all in the classroom when it went off," Excell said. "The classroom was demolished. I don't know how they got out alive."

Children and adults with burns on their faces and arms streamed from the school after the explosion "completely hysterical," said Corrine Fredrickson, wife of the town's police chief. Many children lay on the ground screaming.

"We heard an explosion, two gunshots (and saw) kids running in every direction," said Donna

Morfeld, a parent.

About a dozen ambulances converged on the scene and two school buses helped transport the injured.

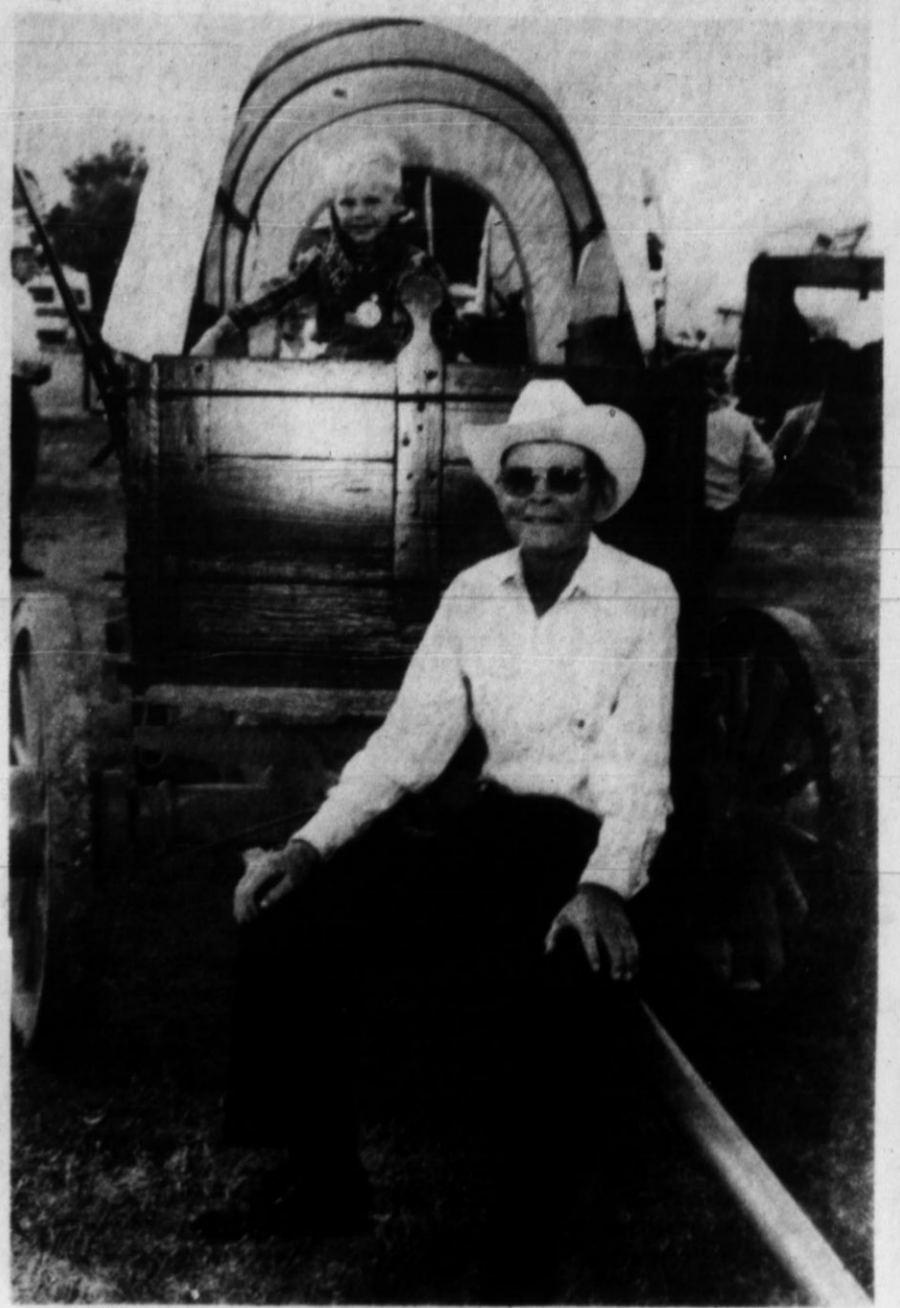

Music teacher John Miller, 30, was shot in the shoulder as he tried to run down a hallway, Excell said. Miller ran about 200 yards before collapsing. He was in stable and satisfactory condition today at Bannock Regional Medical Center in Pocatello, Idaho, said spokesman Don Rogers.

Young and his wife walked into the school about 1 p.m. Friday and herded the kindergarten through sixth-grade children together by either promising them treats or telling them there was an emergency.

"We were told we were supposed to go to this room for a surprise," said 7-year-old Ryan Dhornack.

Witnesses said that during the incident Young passed out leaflets, demanded to talk to President Reagan and announced, "This is the revolution."

Excell said Young told him he expected the standoff to last 10 days because he figured Congress would have to meet to approve the ransom.

LAWRENCE CARLSON...
...made a clean run from Dimmitt.

Carlson thrilled about makin' wagon history

By CINDY SMITH
Staff Writer

Local residents, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Carlson, joined the Texas Wagon Train at Springlake. Preparing to ride the full length of the trail, the Carlson family had to drop out when arriving at Hereford due to illness.

"When we heard about it (the Texas Wagon Train) I had a red wagon but it wasn't an original. But I got a hold of another one, an original, and the wheels needed fixing," said Carlson.

Starting in February of last year, Carlson took off the wheels but had to wait for parts out of Pennsylvania. A man called right after Christmas saying he got the parts in.

"So I took the wheels down to Crossroads, N.M., and John Wolf fixed them (only the metal rims.) I made me a vat, put a burner under it, and got the temperature up to 180-185 degrees. I filled it with linseed oil and every hour or two, I'd rotate that wheel so it'd be sure and soak in," explained Carlson.

The wheels take 12 hours each and Carlson said it took four days for his four wheels.

"When we got the wagon, we brought it back and the original color was burnt orange. Then I had some boys out there and we painted the rest of the the running gears with the linseed oil," he said.

The next step in preparing his wagon was to let the oil dry for two weeks, "to be sure and get soaked in," said Carlson.

"We steamed it off, you have to be sure it's clean, and let it dry, another day," he noted. "We filled all the cracks then sanded and painted the wagon orange to match the original color."

Carlson chuckled as he said it only took one gallon and a quart of pint of paint. "The paint nowadays is enamel," he commented, "it doesn't have linseed oil in it and when wagons are just painted they get old and dry and come apart."

"I took the bed out of the old wagon and put it in the new one, and she was ready to go," grinned Carlson.

The Carlsons hauled the wagon on trailer to Springlake and then joined the train. He laughed because he had to rebuild the trailer to haul the wagon — it was about four inches wider.

Both of the Carlsons seemed amazed at how generous everyone was. "We broke a ham strap before we even got started," said Carlson. "And one of the wagon riders gave us a ham strap to borrow. If anybody had trouble along the way, they were there with whatever you needed, a piece of wire, a piece of strap..."

"The first 13 miles of the Dimmitt ride was scary because the horses were raring up, they got kind of wild," said his wife, Betty Jo. She noted that it took three men to hold the horses back at the first part of their journey. "But after the lunch break they were pretty gentle," she added.

Three grandchildren — Jeffrey, Michael, and Brent — journeyed with the grandfolds on their wagon ride. Jeffrey rode horseback along side the wagon as scout.

"The young 'un, Brent, he wasn't old to be anxious or scared when the horses reared up," said Carlson. "He was the one who enjoyed it the most, we couldn't get him off it."

The Carlson's said that their participating in the wagon train was a family event. "If wasn't for everybody helping, we wouldn't have made it," said Carlson.

Moving to Hereford in 1936, Carlson said farmers here were still using teams.

Raised in Nebraska, Carlson recalls plowing with horses. "We had machinery and tractors, too. But, they were too greasy and dirty and I'd always catch a horse instead," grinned Carlson.

Carlson remembers as a boy he had to get up at 6 a.m. to go harness up the horses. "I was about 13 when I started... We had six head and we had two or three that were too big for me to handle, and I had to wait for help," he said.

"Oh, I'd break 'em to work in them days and we'd use them in the fields to plow, to cultivate, just about to do anything..." he grinned.

Carlson recalled a big snow in Nebraska one year. "Snow fell 84 inches in two months and we had to use sleighs pulled by horses and a few mules to get town which was 11 miles away," he said.

"Didn't have as good of horses as we did back then," he added. "I don't feel like our children are taught enough about their heritage and the wagon train was a concrete experience," said Carlson.

"It helped them to be more appreciative of their country... It sure makes us appreciate our good highways that we have now," said Betty Jo. "Our modern conveniences, our nice cars... and it reminds us of what our ancestors went through to make these modern day conveniences possible, and as a result we are more grateful."

The Carlson's also added that they wanted to make this short trip for their children, "our grandchildren, our community and ourselves," said Carlson.

Warning: Wipe out weeds!

By JERI CURTIS
Managing Editor

The City of Hereford has a game plan for the perennial summer problem of unsightly and flammable weeds which proliferate many vacant lots — and some yards.

Darwin McGill, city manager, said the town will be sectioned into three parts to be examined for brushy acreage by a college student, starting Monday. Primary emphasis will be on vacant lots.

Weedy spots will be marked on a map and at the end of that section's survey a notice will be mailed to landowners asking them to mow. Meanwhile, he will start surveying another section of town. Ten days after each section is surveyed, it will be scouted again to see who has complied to the request.

That's when the city will take matters into its own hands — but sends the landowner the bill.

Aside from the traditional problem of neighbors frowning on ragged yards, McGill said there is the fire hazard to consider. Above average temperatures have encouraged some weeds to grow extremely fast, adding volume to the already dry blaze fuel.

Radio Moscow says no sickness found

MOSCOW (AP) — Radio Moscow Saturday said all evacuees from the Chernobyl nuclear disaster zone had been checked for radiation sickness but that no symptoms were found. A U.S. doctor said the medical crisis is past, but that some victims now hospitalized may die.

"Medical workers have examined the 92,000 people evacuated from the areas adjoining the nuclear power plant," Radio Moscow said Saturday in a report on the aftermath of the April 26 accident.

The medical personnel, Radio Moscow said, reported that "none of their patients have any signs of ailments connected with the increase of radiation at the time of the accident." It did not elaborate further.

Soviet authorities have said they moved people from within an 18-mile radius of Chernobyl once the magnitude of the accident at the nuclear power plant 80 miles north of Kiev became known.

Nevertheless, hundreds of people absorbed doses of radiation following an explosion and fire in one of the plant's atomic reactors, and 35 were "highly exposed individuals," said Dr. Robert P. Gale.

Gale, a U.S. bone marrow expert who treated the victims, returned late Friday to Los Angeles, where he told reporters that 11 of the 35 severe exposure cases had died to date. Two other plant workers were killed the day of the accident, he said.

Gale also said that doctors believe they have isolated the most seriously injured victims, and do not expect many more cases of radiation sickness beyond about 300 people who already have required hospitalization.

Before leaving Moscow, he told

U.S. television correspondents that "the acute medical emergency is over."

Of the 35 severe cases, he said "we may have additional casualties, but I think we will be able to rescue at least half."

U.S. industrialist Armand Hammer, who has a long commercial relationship with the Soviet Union, arranged the visit by Gale's medical team and returned to Los Angeles with the doctor.

Gale said he planned to return to Moscow next week. His speciality, the transplanting of bone marrow, can save radiation victims whose own marrow has been destroyed by high doses of radioactivity.

The Chernobyl accident poured out a huge invisible cloud of radioactivity that spread over Europe and gradually has worked its way around the world.

Western governments, including the United States, reacted with shock and anger the Soviets' initial tight-lipped policy.

That feller on Tierra Blanca Creek says we're all striving for a state of happiness in heaven, but it is important to feel happy from time to time in the here and now.

Each of us lives in our own little world, so it is a wonder we can understand each other at all. This is why people talk about the weather.

Sandy Pankey, lifestyle editor of The Brand, recently wrote a first-person story about her successful battle against cancer. The story drew much favorable comment from our readers and, now, it has drawn statewide attention. The Associated Press used the article on its Texas wire and many newspapers across the state will be printing the article as a weekend feature.

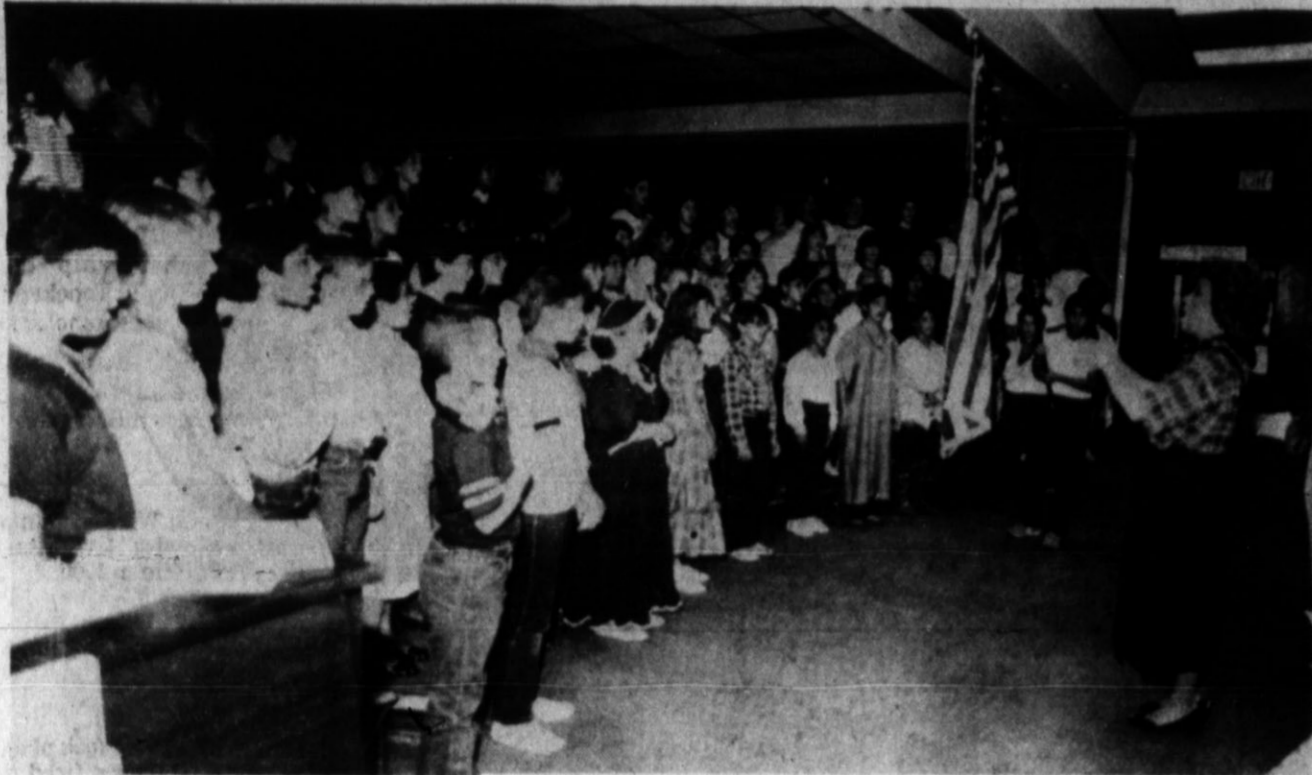

The Texas Wagon Train has come and gone, but the memories linger on for those who viewed the historic event or participated in activities during the train's visit to Hereford. Today's edition of The Brand includes some sights and impressions of the wagon train.

We mentioned in our last column that the Sesquicentennial committee put in many hours of work and planning to host the wagon train. We were promised a list of all the workers, but it was not submitted in time for this column. At the risk of omitting some names, we're going to list some of the folks who helped make the project a success.

Argen Draper and Garth Thomas are co-chairmen of the this year's Sesquicentennial celebration. Jim Ward served as chairman of the wagon train committee and those working on this project included:

Farmers who feed the world turn to food stamps to feed themselves

By SHARON COHEN Associated Press Writer

For about a year, shame rode with Denise O'Brien every time she went to the market. They traveled together under cover of night hiding a secret — her farm family was on food stamps.

"It was just humiliating," Ms. O'Brien recalled. "I'd look around in the store and if I saw anyone I knew, I'd write a check."

Today, she has dismissed her fears of discovery; she shops by day and greets neighbors without shame. Ms. O'Brien realizes that $300 a month in food stamps is helping her family of five dig out from debt on their rented Atlantic, Iowa, farm.

Their plight has become common these days in the Midwest, where thousands who feed the world now feel the bitter irony of needing help to feed themselves.

"We raise the crops, but we can't feed our family," Ms. O'Brien said. "It's a sad commentary."

In Iowa, which accounts for about a fourth of America's hog production and more than 12 percent of its red meat, state officials say the number of farm families on food stamps jumped from about 400 in the summer of 1984 to 2,000 this spring.

The U.S. Agriculture Department doesn't keep records of food stamp recipients by occupation, but Iowa and several other struggling Farm Belt states have compiled their own numbers, showing sharp increases:

— South Dakota never had more than 350 farm families on food stamps before 1984, when times started getting tough. Last fall, 630 families were receiving stamps; that number jumped 58 percent to 1,000 families this spring.

— In North Dakota, 656 farmers got food stamps in March, up 46 percent from 447 in October 1985.

— In Minnesota's 10 most heavily agricultural counties, the number of households on food stamps rose about 25 percent from April 1980 to April 1985 — to a total of 1,817.

— And in Nebraska, the number of food stamp recipients hit record levels three straight months — in December, January and February — with a greater increase in rural communities.

Although the number of farmers on food stamps is small, farm groups say many more in need don't apply because they want to avoid the stigma of welfare.

"I know of several farm families right now that should be getting them (but) they just think it's wrong to apply for government programs," said Bob Simon, a Winterset, Iowa, farmer.

"We look out for our own," added Simon, who was on food stamps for a few months. "We take care of our own. Our parents taught us that."

Pride and fear of small town gossip keep some farmers away; others feel an application for food stamps is an admission of failure, "a public declaration they're not a good manager ... or a hard worker," said Delores Swoboda, a leader of Groundswell, a Minnesota farm-help group.

Some farmers who get food stamps hide the fact by traveling to towns 30 miles away to do their grocery shopping, said Peter Brent of the Iowa-based rural advocacy group, Prairiefire.

What many urban people don't understand, he added, is while a farmer may have cows and hogs, he can't use them for his own food if creditors have a lien on them.

For vendors

Sesquicentennial boom or bust

DALLAS (AP) — Gilbert Huth Jr. envisioned success, both personal and financial, selling his 1986 Sesquicentennial commemorative product — a solid wood Texas flag holder.

But after his employer in Houston recently moved, putting him out of a

"The vast majority of people assume a farmer eats well," he said. "That's just not the case."

EDITOR'S NOTE — Sharon Cohen is in the AP Midwest regional writer, based in Chicago.

full-time job, Huth said, "I'm not ahead of the game."

"I had been relying on my income from that job and counting on sales from the project to finance future manufacturing and advertising costs," said Huth, 43, who had worked as an assistant land agent for the Santa Fe Pacific Realty Co. before it moved to Dallas.

"Because I lost my job and sales have been slow, I can not afford to advertise," he said. "Eventually, I hope to make money out of it. Right now I'm in the red."

Huth is an investor in the hit-or-miss proposition of selling more than 800 promotional products for the state's sesquicentennial. For 189 official vendors licensed by the Sesquicentennial Commission, it has been either prosperity or a bust.

Sales and promotional experience in their favor, Ron and Susan Horowitz said they still had no "fancy" projections selling their official commemorative product — two decks of historical playing cards.

But the cards — each including a drawing and information about Texas people, places and events — are selling so well they're having difficulty keeping the items in stock.

"We're really doing well," said Mrs. Horowitz, who has worked "everything" from sales representative to retailer for Alief Products Company. "We honestly had no idea. We just came up with an idea we thought was neat."

"There are two ends of the spectrum," said Rebecca Richards of the commission's Products Marketing Department. "You'll have the belt buckle and boots because they're Texan. Then, the unusual or unique items — artsy things — will sell to Texans and tourists."

"Some of the big corporations are doing well and some of the smaller vendors are doing well, too," she said.

Based on the 1983 economy, officials estimated $10 million in royalties would be generated from the sale of the 800 products that carry the official Sesquicentennial emblem. The royalties support Sesquicentennial activities, tourism and Others who would like a copy of this issue should send $1 for each copy to POLLY'S POINTERS, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1216, Cincinnati, OH 45201. Be sure to include the title.

DEAR POLLY — This morning my Ace bandage was soiled, so I washed it. Since I needed it again, I wrapped it around a quart can filled with hot water. In no time the bandage was dry and ready to use again. — M.M.

DEAR POLLY — I have attached to my ironing board a plastic pouch containing scissors, iron-on patches, a blotter for grease and candle-wax spots, safety pins to mark torn seams and missing buttons for easy location at mending time, lint brush, and comb for straightening out fringe. Now all these items are accessible for such tasks, which are easily done as I iron.

I let the water collect in the tub as I shower, thus soaking my feet at the same time. After the shower I'm ready for a quick pedicure.

DEAR POLLY — I find a bar of soap will last longer when I line my soap dish with a wash cloth. This absorbs any dripping, the wash cloth adds a decorative touch, and best of all I cut down on the cost of soap. Then I can use the wash cloth with the soap it absorbed at bath time. — BLANCHE

DEAR POLLY — Wear cotton gloves while bathing a baby. The baby will be less slippery and the gloves double as a wash cloth.

Dancers perform

Members of Merry Mixers Square Dance Club helped celebrate the arrival of the sesquicentennial wagon train Thursday night at the Bull Barn.

The club was among several organizations that performed during the evening. Following the dance, they met for their regular dance in the Methodist fellowship hall. There were six squares present.

Guests were Joe and Sissy Sexton from XYL & M Club in Amarillo with Freddie and Gail McKee calling.

The next dance was planned for May 29 at the Hereford Community Center.

Microwave tips given

Many people don't use their microwave ovens to cook beef because they think it will be tough or overcooked.

According to Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service nutritionist Dr. Alice Hunt, one key to tender microwaved beef is to select the right cut to cook.

She suggests the following guidelines for buying the meat:

-Choose beef with even marbling or fat cover for more even cooking.

-Choose roasts that are even in shape and thickness.

-Avoid cuts with bone on just one side of the meat.

-Buy lean ground beef rather than regular ground beef. Lean ground chuck will shrink less and accumulate less fat on the surface than regular ground beef.

-For stews, buy a boneless chuck roast and cut it into one-inch cubes for more even cooking and more tender pieces of meat. Most "stew meat" is more lean than chuck and will tend to be tough.

In addition, Hunt recommends following the oven manufacturer's suggestions for cooking various cuts or shapes of meat. For example, it may be necessary to rotate meatballs during cooking, or to rearrange the pieces for more even cooking.

A ring shape for meatloaves and other meat mixtures will also cook more quickly and evenly than loaves, says the nutritionist.

Texas Wagon Train memories

Gateway to Hereford

Deaf Smith County Judge, Glen Nelson, right, presents Margaret Renz, an outrider for station WBAP of Ft. Worth, a gateway to Hereford. The gateway, hand-crafted by County Commissioner Bill Bradley, was attached to an open fence built on a piece of Mesquite wood. Renz is from Indian Creek and smiled as she accepted the unusual "key" to the city.

Picnic Under the Wagon

These little fellows found them some shade under their wagon. Eating a picnic lunch the boys look around at the animals while the adults talk. Children seemed to enjoy the wagon train most of all.

Getting the Bull Pin

Hereford Hustler, Troy Waddell, right, attaches the Hereford bull pin on Hazel Bowen's collar, left. Bowen is a 78-year-old rider on the wagon train who won the seven-mile up hill race at the Great Guadalupe Pass. Bowen drives the second wagon and has been with the train all the way. She lives south of Wichita and also rode on the Bicentennial wagon train in 1976.

Welcome

Souvenirs

At any big event, vendors provide people with a little something to remember the occasion by. A steady stream of people could be seen around this the stand picking up everything from flags to caps at the camp of the Texas Wagon Train near the Bull Barn Thursday night.

Long wagon ride attracts spunky personalities

By CINDY SMITH
Staff Writer

Colorful people make a colorful wagon train. Rudy Nelson, Bill Tooley's traveling buddy, was the stage coach driver one might have seen passing by. "It's the smoothest riding vehicle out here," toots Nelson. Nelson is an Arizonian from Flagstaff and said he has a job waiting for him when he gets back. He took a six-month leave of absence from his superintendent position with a construction company. "What's he doing here? 'Seeing Texas and helping you all celebrate Texas' Sesquicentennial," he grinned. Meeting new people has been his best interest so far on the wagon train and he added "Texans' been the most friendliest people I've ever known." He explained that himself and others were paid riders on trip and then commented, "Got to...got a $1,200 house payment back home." Nelson is sponsored by Glyn Courson, who also sponsors Tooley on the Winchester wagon, and is presenting a commemorative Winchester rifle to citizens of Amarillo. The rifle will be displayed in the Amarillo Civic Center, he said. Mike Anderson, unusually far away from home, says he lives "way up in da maoutains." Anderson traveled from Sweden to join the train in December. "Hooly-o- yesus, Wagon Ho!" says Anderson, mimicking the wagon call in his own accent. Anderson is a wrangler who takes care of the horses. It's his job to water, feed, harness, take care of sores, bad feet, or look after sprains. When the horses fall out of line due to an injury, Anderson sees to it that they get a rest for a few days. He asked to tell the history of the Swedes and said "the dust from the weeds made the stuff for the Swedes and they call it Copenhagen." Anderson laughed at his own joke, then said that kids are his favorite part of the train. "I love kids and they love me," he smiled as one small child squirted a watergun at him. When the train reaches its destination, Anderson said he'll go back to ranching in Colorado. Scott Williamson, another young rider, works for Cody Marketing, the official vending company for the Texas Wagon Train. A native of Texas, Williamson, 23, said he's "used to our kinda country here," meaning "no trees." "But these are the finest folks I've ever met," added Williamson. "They're really the core of Texas. We're having a good time and we enjoy it, but it's a lot harder than they think." The Abilene native says he's real proud of his state. "I'm glad God put me here to help these people on the train. We're out here to help the people in the state to see what our heritage was built on," said Williamson. "The kids on the train probably won't have another opportunity to see what the heritage behind our state really is," he said. "It's real neat to see the pride in an old man's eyes as you go down the road. Seeing someone that worked stock all their life, for them back then it was their only way of life..." said Williamson, getting sentimental. "You see that gleam... I've cried before on this train, there was this old man we passed and he was holding a flag. "When we passed by he took his hat off and put it over his heart and you could see tears running down his face..." "School kids today, they can't see how it really was. All they see is people riding in an arena or in a parade, now they can see what the stock was really for. They can see the stock going down the road with the heritage that stock was designed for - working," he stressed. "Believe me, I've learned a lot on this trip, learned about working animals, harnessing, caring for stock and the way to treat people," said the young man. "The old men on this trip aren't just here, they're proud of their heritage and they really want to show us how it's done. "They want to show us the heritage that Texas is celebrating. The older ones are the finest folks in the bunch, it makes 'em feel good to teach us what we can't learn from anybody else," he said proudly. Opposite Williams is a man that looks like a prospector. An old-timer that has a solid white beard and long hair to match blowing in the wind. His name is I.W. Jines who celebrates his 78th birthday on the 25th of this month. Jines stood there with his long moustache flapping when he talked. He held some wire cutters and snapped them shut, saying "these are outlawed." Then he said he was proud to be a part of the wagon train. "Well I own a little chunk of Texas and I wanted to see more of it," the old-timer said. He said he'd been traveling since Jan. 4. "When Jan France first called me three years ago and asked me what I thought about it, I said it'd be alright by me," said Jines. And then he went to working on pulling some wood out to make more comfortable bed for his wife. "I think the best thing about this wagon train is meeting all the good people and seeing the experience on the old-timers faces. You can almost see memories and seeing the kids faces," reminisced Jines. "After all that's what this is all about is bringing back memories and establishing new hope and a new future," he finally admitted. "Not only Texas, but the whole nation needs a boost," said this man, the beard now adding wisdom to his look. "You would be surprised at the people from different countries that I've met up with. Germany, Switzerland, France, England, Israel... the eyes of the world is on Texas." Jines stated that it was wonderful to be making history. "I rode on the '76 wagon train (the Bicentennial) for five months over 2,000 miles and I wasn't going to let this one get by 10 years later," he grinned. "I was born on Wolf Creek (near Perryton) where my daddy bought that piece of Texas, that Texas ground in 1896," said Jines. "And paid the last 97 cents we owed on it in the '40s." Jines believed in the soil of the land he was traveling on. And he believes in it's people too. "It's the people and the pleasure that we give and they give us," described Jines. "It'd be just another group of wagons going down the road without the people." Riding the wagon trains is Jine's pastime. He and his wife make nine trips a year "and this is what we wanna do." He walked away mumbling about cattledrives and gun fights in his day.

Train founder has cried she was so happy

By CINDY SMITH
Staff Writer

What was conceived three years ago will be history six weeks from now. "I sit up here in the lead wagon and sometimes I look back and think there were a lot of people who said it couldn't be done, it would never happen, where you gonna find all the people and all wagons to go for six months," said Jan France, founder of the Texas Wagon Train. "We've got a waiting list," she giggled, "a waiting list of idiots, I guess." She laughed and giggled just at the talk of it. "But you know people just... they thought it was a good idea but at first they never thought it would happen, and I guess part of it was, you know it was headed up by a woman at that time," admitted France. "And like I said, look at this, we've got a waiting list." She laughed and laughed again. "I was sitting in the wagon and tears were just pouring down my face one day and we were going up this hill," said France. "She (Donna Stepp, another rider) kept asking me what was wrong and I was just telling her that, 'look- all those wagons back there... it was like 80 wagons... tears were just pouring down my face and I said 'they said that it would never happen, and look.' "We were at the top of real a long hill going into Johnson City that day and Woody was driving, my co-driver, and I was just a hanging out that window, just a bawling like a baby... they said it couldn't be done..." France cut out the serious stuff and giggled as she said "We'd already gone over a 1,000 miles and there I was just a-bawling."

lot of good people. People have taken us in their home to bathe or for a meal, for a shower or tub bath, or just to sit down and watch television. "Many, many times somebody's come by and says 'let me take your laundry and I'll bring it back to you tomorrow' and I'll say 'well gosh, we're going to be in whatever town it is tomorrow' and they say 'that's OK, I'll wash it, dry it, fold it, hang it up, or whatever, just bring it to me that the least I can do, it's only 25 miles down the road' and many times that's been done," said France. "It's just the outpouring of what this wagon train has meant to so many people," she said, "It's just like it was in the old days, except we're going in to larger towns. In the old days when an old covered came by, they'd see you coming, they stopped and throw someone on the firing for you and offer you refreshments or a place to stay overnight. It really hadn't changed- Texas hasn't changed all that much in the last 150 years. It's really the same, people still do the same things it just seems different." France sat up in her wagon as the dark set in. Hereford people were stopping by and would ask if she was one of the riders. "One of the riders? This lady started the whole thing. France would always answer any questions anyone had. She didn't put herself above the others because she knew, it took all of them and more to make this thing work.

work," she said more seriously. "Whether you're living off a wagon or out of an RV." France explained that if some of the towns wouldn't have fed them, they would have lost an awful lot of weight because they didn't have time to cook. "The support from our families has been phenomenal," said France. "My sister's driven in from Florida, my mother's flew in from California, and at least somebody from Gary's (her husband's) family has been with us all the way. Two of his aunts and uncles are making the whole trip with us. "That's just the family, the whole state of Texas has been like this," she grinned from ear to ear. Another thing France recalled was a coincidence which made her appreciate her ride that much more. "For the 2,000 miles miles we've been traveling, I've been looking for a 1915 car and yesterday a man was sitting on the side of the road in his 1915 Ford," she said, getting excited. France and the Ford man took pictures in front of the car and the man offered to let her drive it. She contributed this to another example of Texas hospitality and said she had also been given the bonnet- she had on by a woman in Dimmitt. France explained that once they were rolling, everyone seemed to want to help out as much as they could, they wanted to be a part of it. France said the ranchers have let them use their land because some of the stops do not have regular facilities. "We have some of the best talent shows..." she laughed. Covered dish meals are also a blessing on the train. "Well, each family only has to prepare one dish, the kids can eat some of everything, and you only have one dish and utensils to wash. You don't have to spend a lot of time preparing a whole meal," said France of the advantages of the covered dish meals. "But better than that, the meals are over by 6-6:30 p.m. and you still have time to rest and can turn in early for the night." France mentioned that traveling from one town to another there's always something to do. "And an early night is greatly appreciated at times," she added. When they're out on someone's land, they have to rely on themselves just like the pioneers did, for entertainment. She said that she's been here so long that nothing's really new anymore. France's giggle turned into a laugh as she recalled one such night out on the range. "One gentleman, who took and cut part of his horses tail off, borrowed some clothes and a hat. He went up to the train wagons and kept his head turned down so no one could see his blue eyes. "He wouldn't speak to any of the employees and the man had a moustache that went way over his ears with a the ends blowing in the wind. "All the employees tried to get him to go to the back of the wagon and finally called the wagon master and it turned out to be his best friend. "Well, they staged this fight see, in front of Leo Miller, and the 76-year-old man jumped out of the wagon to help the train master, I thought he was going to punch him. He was just unbelievable..." roared France. The Texas Wagon Train also has a schoolhouse on wheels. France said they contacted the Texas Education Board several years ago. "They said they'd help us but that was before Bill 72 passed," she explained. "So Cooke County College called and said 'what can we do to help?' and we turned it over to them from there."

generation Texan. "I've always loved Texas because it has more pride than any other state in the United States," sighed France.

The wagon train has been one emotional experience her and others, including the townspeople who saw them through, that no one will forget. "If it'd just been me, I'd still met a

Couple had honeymoon on wagons in '76

FRED SHIVERS...Married on Bicentennial Wagon Train in '76 and celebrated their 10th anniversary on the Texas Wagon Train.

By CINDY SMITH
Staff Writer

Fred and Deborah Shivers got married on a Sunday afternoon, Feb. 29, by his father in front of their Oklahoma wagon on the Bicentennial Wagon Train.

"The next morning I put her in this wagon, but I still have the running gears, axles, wheels, and the bed we remodeled," said the husband.

That was 10 years ago. The couple now has three girls that also live on the wagon with them.

"We headed for Valley Forge, Pa., with $250 in my pocket," Shivers said, stepping back in his own chapters of life. "I had a new wife, two new mules, and a new saddle horse."

"My mules didn't last, but the wife and saddlehorse did," he chuckled. He said they had "very quickly run out of money."

"We had been going to a saddle and tack school before the wagon train came through Oklahoma and she decided to go," he recalled.

"She started talking about it for a few days and anything that happened on that trip was her fault," he joked.

The couple did saddle and harness repairs, fixed horse collars, and made leather belts and purses to make a living. "We did our trade as we had learned it," he said.

"We never did have over two days worth of money for feed and food, so we just lived hand-to-mouth as we earned it," said Shivers.

"When we got home to Stratford, Okla., we tried to figure out where we had got all the money to make it. We don't know how we did it or where it came from," said Shivers amazed.

"We were more broke then than the day we left," he chuckled. "But we knew when it when was over we didn't regret it."

He recalled staying up a lot of nights until midnight working on harnesses " 'cause someone needed it the next day to go down the road and we needed the money to get down the road, too."

The family lives, sleeps and cooks out of their wagons. The wagons they are driving are owned by Morrison Milling Company out of Denton. "The company is a 100 years old this year and the Morrison's are celebrating 50 years of the family owning it," he commented.

"That's one reason the mill sponsored this train to help give back to Texas what Texas had given to them over the last 100 years," he grinned.

According to Shivers, the sponsorships cost $20,000 to get the wagon train celebrates what every human in the world wants and dreams of and what many people from many states fought and died for at Goliad and in the Alamo.

"That freedom and the justice of pursuit of happiness is what our ancestors fought for," he said. "And it's made everybody or this train more aware of his personal family heritage, of where they came from and what their ancestors were pursuing."

Shivers mentioned one man, Rex Wooten of Dimmitt, who donated his own metal, torch, and equipment and help to build a wheel soaker to swell the wheels with.

He said there was only one in camp, the one he owned, and that members of the train were running into a lot of wheel problems. The dry weather West Texas weather and no rain or water to run through causes the wood in the wheels to shrink.

"So this man donated all his time and equipment to help build another soaker," Shivers noted. "People have been like that all along the way—they'll do anything just to help and be a part of the Texas Wagon Train."

"Now we have two of 'em in camp to be shared by anybody that needs it ... and that could be the difference in someone making it to Ft. Worth," he said.

"My mules didn't last but my wife did."

train plans off the drawing board and onto the road.

"They gambled it was would happen and their sponsorship turned out to be the very thing needed to help get this train off the ground," he explained.

"Without that seed money none of this would have happened," he said. "All of the money went for hiring secretaries, putting in phones, getting the toilets, making water tanks, all the basic things you need to make this wagon train roll."

Starting out, Shivers said, was hard but the train is proving itself. "This thing is bigger than Texas, this wagon train is bigger than just a celebration of Texas' birthday. This

Wagon train like one big family

Donna Stepp says she's just a participant, but others know her as the woman behind the force. "I help anybody that needs help," said Stepp, a native of Ft. Worth.

Daily duties for this gal included leaving Sulphur Springs on a horse and intending to ride all the way on the horse until she got hurt in an accident—a horse accident.

"Well, I got to San Antonio and my horse and I fell over backwards," said Stepp, and Jan France, giggled, "doing horse tricks." But she was only kidding. Stepp really did get injured and it wasn't by doing tricks. "I was injured seriously, ordered to go home by the doctor and refused," she said simply. "I told the doc I had a wagon train to catch."

Stepp then had to ride the next seven and a half weeks in a wagon. "When we got to El Paso, I saddled up and rode out and will ride 'til I get to Ft. Worth," she said.

Wagon Train poem

If you want to know your freedoms,
Feel the breeze upon your back.
Come travel with the pioneers,
Your thoughts can wander back,
To a century ago,
With teams a pulling on.
Children laughing, playing, crying,
Watched over by their moms.
No pavement did they follow,
Or welcomes did they get,
Just miles and miles of Texas
And the sun as it did set.
By those that gave their blood for freedoms,
And by those that worked hard for this land,
The Lone Star state was built,
Through a woman and a man.
Their graves have long been covered,
From snow, and sleet, and rain,
Brought back to be remembered
By the Texas Wagon Train.

The first American naval hero, John Paul Jones, died in Paris, July 18, 1792. He was born July 6, 1747, at Arbigland, Scotland.

Sailors and Marines from the sloop-of-war Cyane captured San Diego, Calif., from Mexican forces July 29, 1846.

Stepp was anxious to see her family and her friends, and especially her husband, since they've only been married for two years, she said.

Stepp has three grown children and smiled when she said she'll be a grandmother soon.

"Ninety-eight percent of the people wouldn't work this hard if we were home but we don't think about it," said Stepp.

"How often do you get to honor your forefathers?" she asked. "For one bright shining moment we have lit the light that has shimmered the front rooms of America where our rights and freedoms came from, and why they should keep right on fighting for them," she quipped.

"For two centuries Ellis Island has had the Statue of Liberty and Texas has the wagon train," she grinned. "Wouldn't she look silly in a cowboy hat and boots?"

Stepp believes this trip was made for the young and the old. "The young because they can have something to look towards and the old because they know right where we came from," Stepp said zestfully.

"You know it really is easy to look back and see the battles that were lost..." Stepp was saying. She's a poet and a writer.

Writing about life on the range, Stepp isn't sure she'll return back to work, she has a book in mind. "I was a secretary at Ft. Worth Auto Auction but my number one priority right now is to get this book done...to get it out on the market by Christmas," said Stepp.

"I don't know," she said kicking the idea around, "Maybe I'll catch

Five-fish-per-bag law goes into effect September 1

Anglers angry over daily limit rule

Just Before He Scored A Run

On the next pitch, a teammate recorded a hit to drive home Villarreal. Running from third base to home plate on the minor league field in the early evening means running straight into the sun. #### Cowboys' Septian nearly healed from 1985 season

IRVING, Texas (AP) - Rafael Septien is almost 100 per cent healed from the 1985 NFL season but isn't rushing out to practice 50 field goals a day because the Dallas Cowboys' drafted prolific Max Zendejas of Arizona.

"I never start kicking until mid-June," said Septien. "I would be burned out quickly if I kicked during the off-season."

Zendejas was drafted in the fourth round and was seen as a message to Septien, who had an injury-plagued 1985 season.

"Septien hurt his back in the off-season and never really got over it," said Dallas Coach Tom Landry. "It kept plaguing him all the way to the playoff game where he pulled a leg muscle."

Septien has received some criticism for being too active in such sports as racquet ball and kick boxing.

"The problem with Septien is he thinks he can do everything," said Landry. "He thinks he can kick box with Randy White. That's how he hurt his back. He needs to lay off those things."

Septien said he is "motivated" by the drafting of Zendejas.

"If you have another kicker around it helps motivate you and helps the team to win," said Septien. "I performed pretty well with pain last year but could have been better. But this season should be a breeze. I've been working hard."

He said there were never any guarantees for a professional athlete.

"It's a year-by-year thing in which you have to earn your job every season," Septien said.

LONGVIEW, Texas (AP) — Anglers are jumping over an official interpretation of a state daily limit rule they say will eliminate fishing tournaments and the money they bring in to host communities.

"We don't want to do it, but we will have to cancel all our tournaments in Texas and refund all entry fees," said Harold Sharp, tournament director of the Bass Anglers Sportsmen Society.

"It puts us in a position where we cannot break the laws of a state but we cannot operate under those regulations," he added.

Ladies Golf Association sets meeting

The Ladies Golf Association will hold its monthly meeting Tuesday night after the "Ladies Day" competition.

The meeting will start at 8 p.m. at Hereford Country Club. Prizes for last week's "Ladies Day" competition will be presented, and yearbooks will be given out.

A five-fish-per-bag daily limit for bass goes into effect Sept. 1. As interpreted in a Texas Parks and Wildlife Commission release this week, it is illegal to cull fish in meeting the limit.

Culling is the practice of taking a fish out of a livewell and replacing it with a larger fish.

"Strictly speaking, once you've retained a fish — put it in the livewell or on the stringer — you can't release that fish," David Palmer, a commission official, said in the press release. "Culling down in order to retain the largest fish is illegal..."

In outdoors columns on the subject, Steve Lightfoot of the Longview News-Journal and Ray Sasser of the Dallas Times Herald convey the concern of officials of the bass anglers group and the Sportsmen's Clubs of Texas about the rule.

Both groups wrote to commissioners asking for an official ruling permitting culling of bass where livewells are used to keep fish in good condition.

"It's a very bad rule as they interpret it and will be the death of bass tournaments in Texas," said Sharp.

He said a weeklong B.A.S.S. tournament in Texas could bring $250,000 into an area's economy.

"That's conservatively speaking considering we'll be bringing about 400 people into a community for seven days averaging $45 per day for motel and $45 for gasoline for boats and cars and $15 a day for food," he said.

Sharp said that B.A.S.S. doesn't argue with the fish-fish-per-day limit.

"But our rules say a contestant must abide by the laws of the state and they say you cannot release a fish once you put it in a livewell. We've always been allowed to cull in the past even though they say the law has been on the books. It's never been enforced but now that it has been brought out, it forces us to change our tournaments," he said.

"It's a shame because we have 30,000 members in Texas, it's our largest state and there's probably more tournaments there than in any other state."

The Olympic 800-meter run, known as the "Metro Half Mile," requires the speed of a quarter miler and the stamina of a miler.

U.S. BASS president Don Doty said he sees it as "a Texas problem with the Texas people. It's the people that live there that are going to be economically hurt. They're the ones who need to get together and show the Commission what will happen."

"It's no problem for us, we will steer clear of Texas for our tournaments," he said. "We'll go to the Louisiana side of Toledo Bend and give them the economic benefits."

An angler convicted of a charge of culling could be fined $25 to $200.

Palmer said his interpretation of the culling law resulted from one club that put out incorrect information that upset some people.

"It would be a tough law to enforce because you'd almost have to be sitting in the boat with someone to catch him culling," he conceded.

Chester Burdett, head of law enforcement for the commission, said, "I compare it to deer hunting. If you shoot a deer, you don't go up and say it's too small and leave it on the ground in order to find a bigger one." "Once a fish has been retained in a container or stringer that fish becomes part of that person's daily bag limit and cannot be replaced," Burdett said.

Hereford Ladies Partnership is Tuesday morning

The Hereford Ladies Partnership has been scheduled for Tuesday at Pitman Municipal Golf Course.

The partnership event will start at 9 a.m. Cost is $38 per golfer.

The entry fee includes the use of a golf cart, and a dinner at the country club. To sign up for the partnership, call the golf shot at 364-2782.

There will be no "Ladies Day" competition Tuesday morning because of the Ladies Partnership.

The old record-holder at Josten's was a size 22—but that was for Perry, too, while he was in college at Clemson, Dahms said. "I don't know if he's still growing or what."

History professors hit homer

By DORALISA PILARTE
Associated Press Writer
LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Jocks looking for an easy three credits shy away from the baseball history course taught by two Texas Tech University professors who say the game's development mirrors that of American society.

Even the lure of free game tickets for the best students fails to draw athletes fearful of the tough requirements of History 3330, say professors Joseph King and Jim Harper. The two baseball enthusiasts started the class in the spring of 1979 after lunchroom banter sprouted into a bright idea. They wanted to unite their love for their work with their love for the sport in a valid academic course.

Surprisingly, the two met with few naysayers when they presented the idea to a university committee.

"We had to point out that we weren't going to ask who slid into third in the 1931 series," said King, 43, adding that the course is offered only in the spring — "for religious reasons."

Baseball, they say, is an excellent vehicle to analyze such issues as the development of the United States from a rural-agricultural society to an industrial one and to its current post-industrial and service-oriented economy.

Other large issues reflected in the history of baseball are racial discrimination and integration in America, the nation's growth as a world power and its economic and diplomatic relationships with other countries, the two say.

"Baseball is different in different cultures," said Harper, 42. "In Japan you don't fire a manager. The manager just takes ... a vacation. The reason is that his dignity would be involved."

"There have been cases in Japan where the entire team has walked to the foul line and apologized to the fans for a play."

Clearly not the American style, the professors point out.

"In the late 1800s, Japan focused on American baseball as a way of proving to itself, as a nation, that it could compete with the Western world," said Harper, a diplomatic historian.

Soon after the two began discussing this comparison, the American Historical Review published an article on a series of baseball games played in the 1890s between Japanese amateur teams and U.S. Navy ship crews.

"And the Japanese accounts of this was, 'Now we're equal to these Americans because we've beaten them at their own game,'" said Harper.

Any worries about teaching what could be viewed as a frivolous course vanished with that article. They knew they were on the right track.

As the United States developed from an agricultural society, baseball developed right along with it in several ways, Harper and King say.

"The literature about baseball kind of grows up the way the literature in other areas of American expression did," said Harper.

In the 1800s, the popular literature about baseball reflected what Americans wanted to hear about themselves — the Horatio Alger, rags-to-riches images and tales, said Harper.

"Babe Ruth was the great superstar of the 1920s," said King. "He was boisterous, hard-living, with a gargantuan appetite for food and for women and everything else."

"But sportswriters were careful about what they released to the public. Probably, the audience wouldn't have reacted favorably to it," had they read about the Bambino's peccadilloes, added Harper.

Decades later, American society had matured. The public wanted to know more about its public figures and celebrities and the media complied with that hunger for intimate details of their more human heroes.

"By the 1950s, things like 'The Natural' were being written, which is a more complex, a more sophisticated view," he said.

The professors say baseball and business became big at about the same time and that national pastime or not, baseball always has been big business.

Racial discrimination and integration in American society is clearly seen in the game, too, they say.

"The most celebrated and most studied integration was of blacks, but also, at the same time with much less publicity, came an integration of Latin Americans," said Harper.

The fact that some Latin Americans players couldn't speak English meant they were not on equal footing with other players even when they had more talent.

Harper and King have brought in officials of the Texas Rangers and Houston Astros to address the class from the executive point of view.

Both teams have provided the game tickets awarded to the top students in the class. The first three sets of tickets went to female students; the better students are not physical education majors, but come from history or engineering backgrounds.

"We tell them that the ability to hunt is not as important as the ability to read and think clearly," Harper said.

"Jocks take a look at our syllabus and leave," said King.

First Colonial NIT was held 40 years ago

Colonial Country Club is 50 years old

An AP Sports Analysis
By DENNE H. FREEMAN AP Sports Writer
FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Fifty two years ago department store tycoon Marvin Leonard thought how nice it would be to putt on bent grass greens.
He had played golf back East where the slick surface was prevalent and longed to have such fast putting available for him and his golfing pals in the Southwest.
Indulging on his passion, Leonard built Colonial Country Club on 157 acres of bottom land. It was to become one of the finest courses in the country with the best greens west of the Mississippi.
It opened in January 1936, with Texas celebrating its 100th birthday. Colonial reached its golden anniversary this week.

Colonial, set along the winding banks of the Trinity River, has survived a major flood and two fires that razed the clubhouse to put on the showcase tournament of the Southwest, the Colonial National Invitational.

Men's class B softball tourney planned at Dumas

The second annual Benton Ray Memorial Softball Tournament, a double elimination class "B" tournament, is scheduled June 20-22 in Dumas.
The tournament will be played under U.S.S.A. rules and is a sanctioned event.

Fastpitch softball camps set at Sam Houston State

Two fastpitch softball camps have been scheduled at Sam Houston State University in Huntsville.
Dates for the camps are July 20-24 for ages 13 to 17, and July 27-31 for ages nine to 12.
Cost for each five-day camp is $195 for dormitory campers and $150 for day campers. The sign-up deadline is 10 days before each camp starts.
The camps are open to anyone in the age groups listed, since softball is not a UIL sport. For more information, write to or call Brenda Marshall, Box 2268-SHSU, Huntsville, TX, 77341; phone (409) 294-1742 or 294-1737.

They played for a $600,000 purse and a first place prize of $106,000 this week.

In 1941, when the U.S. Open was played at Colonial, Craig Wood pocketed $1,000 by winning the first Open ever held south of the Mason-Dixon line.
Colonial started out as a millionaire's whim and has developed a solid reputation that makes it the envy of most stops along the PGA Tour.

Colonial all but picks and chooses its field and the only turndowns come from players who feel they can't handle the demanding tree-lined course with the devilish greens.

WTSU Cager Club Golf Classic is June 16

The West Texas State University Cager Golf Classic has been scheduled for 1 p.m. Monday, June 16 at Tascosa Country Club.
An awards dinner and program will be held at 7:30 p.m. after the "Florida Scramble" golf event.
Awards will be presented for longest drive, straightest drive, and closest to the pin. An automobile will be awarded for a hole in one on hole No. 11.
To register for the WTSU Cager Golf Classic, the entry fee is $150 for lawn two days later while they made plans to rebuild. Food was trucked in from the cafeteria at the Leonard brothers department store.

Three years later the first Colonial NIT was held.
Ben Hogan, who often caddied at nearby Glen Gardens, won the inaugural. He was to win four more times in his illustrious career and Colonial was to become known as "Hogan's Alley."

Hogan is honored at Colonial with a display of his golf equipment and championship trophies and medals. (At the age of 74, he made one of his rare public appearances this week by attending the champion's dinner. He still plays daily at Shady Oaks in Fort Worth, most of the time by himself.)

In May 1949, it rained so hard and so long that the fourth NIT was cancelled because the Trinity River overflowed. Water lapped at the clubhouse door.

Four years later, another fire destroyed the clubhouse. It was quickly rebuilt.
Significant changes on the course were mandated in 1967 and 1968 by alterations in the Trinity River by the Army Corps of Engineers. Some say the course lost some of its character because of some hole changes.

10-kilometer run set in Littlefield

A 10-kilometer run has been scheduled in Littlefield on Saturday, June 7, to be held in conjunction with the Denim Arts Festival.
Registration for the race, organized by the Littlefield Chamber of Commerce, begins at 9 a.m. on the race day. Site for the race is Littlefield Crescent Park.
Entry fee is $10 per runner, and each runner will receive a T-shirt. The three age divisions in the run are 13 to 18, 19 to 29, and 30 and over. The top three finishers in each division will receive a trophy.
Early registration fees should be sent to 10-K Run, P.O. Box 72, Littlefield, TX, 79339, in care of Julian Saenz.
Saenz is the race chairman. For more information on the race, call Saenz at 385-4481 or 385-4589.

WTSU girls' basketball camp scheduled in June

June 22-27. Cost per camper is $175.
Bob Schneider, head women's basketball coach at WTSU, said the purpose of the camp is to help each girl improve herself in basketball fundamentals, with emphasis on shooting and defense. The development of self-confidence, positive mental attitude and motivation is also a purpose of the camp.
Girls' between the ages of four through high school age are eligible to participate, expect those who have played in varsity athletic programs, according to UIL rules.
Daily camp schedules will include instruction in ball handling, pivots, rebounding, blocking out, offensive moves, fakes, layup shooting, set shots, jump shots, passing drills, dribble drills, defensive drills. Basketball instructional films will also be shown.

There was no Colonial in 1974 but it wasn't because of fire or flood.

The PGA asked the Colonial to host the Tournament Players Championship. Instead of a May NIT, the TPC was held in August with Al Geiberger the winner.

The former champions list at Colonial includes such greats as Hogan, Trevino, Geiberger, Fuzzy Zoeller, Ben Crenshaw, Jack Nicklaus, and many, many others.

It takes a great player to win at Colonial because of the tightly trapped, small, narrow and, yes, fast greens.

The bent grass greens are still there despite the Texas heat.

And that's the way Marvin Leonard planned it 50 years ago.

TORI SELF, MICHAEL NILSEN

Nuptials planned

Tori D. Self and Michael G. Nilsen, both of Lubbock, plan to exchange nuptials June 7 in Frio Baptist Church.

The bride-elect is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles J. Self of Route 5 Hereford and the prospective bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry G. Nilsen of Alamogordo, N.M.

Miss Self, a 1983 Hereford High School graduate, received an associates degree in 1985 from Amarillo College. She is presently serving in the United States Air Force and is stationed at Reese Air Force Base in Lubbock as a medical supplies clerk.

Nilsen graduated from Alamogordo Senior High School in 1978. He is also stationed at Reese Air Force Base as an x-ray technician.

West, Castillo are named to Boys State

Two high school boys will represent Hereford at the 1986 session of Texas American Legion Boys State, Commander Mary Williamson of Hereford Post No. 192 of the American Legion here, announced today.

Named to participate in this annual American Legion workshop in the organization and operation of state and local governments are Dale West and Jesse Castillo. Alternate candidates are Monty Gilliam and Jason Bodner.

The 1985 Texas American Legion Boys State will be session from June 8-14 at the University of Texas in Austin, Commander Williamson said.

Departments of The American Legion will sponsor 51 of these Boys States this summer. Two outstanding youths from each of The American Legion Boys States will go to American Legion Boys Nation during July in Washington, D.C., where they will study federal government organization and operation in much the same manner as the Boys State delegates participate in training in state government.

During their Boys State sessions, the Hereford youths will participate in the organization of political parties, campaigns, elections, and the enactment and enforcement of their own laws within a mythical state. Elected State Officials will function

"for a day" at the Capitol on June 14 and conclude with a Joint Session at the Boys State Legislature.

"As one of the Legion's outstanding youth-training programs, Boys State affords these youngsters an opportunity to learn the functions of Local and State Government," Commander Williamson said. "Also, they will see the importance of the role a good citizen has in discharging his citizenship responsibilities. They soon discover how good government depends upon the active interest of every citizen."

On behalf of the Post No. 192, Commander Williamson expressed appreciation to all the young men who applied for 1986 Boys State, any of whom would represent this community and high school in an appropriate style.

In 1771, James Otis coined the phrase "a man's home is his castle" as he protested the English system of search and seizure.

Louis Philippe of France abdicated in 1848 and the Second Republic was proclaimed.

Juan Peron was elected president of Argentina in 1946.

The last big battle of the Boer War was fought at Paardeberg, South Africa, on Feb. 27, 1900.

Two former residents found by jobs agency

Two former Texas residents recently discovered that relocating to another state would not protect them from the Texas Employment Commission's fraud detection system.

Former Texas resident James P. McNeil II, was located by the jobs agency in Lewistown, Pennsylvania. McNeil had failed to report employment or earnings for 15 weeks while drawing unemployment benefits. Sentenced to two years in prison, his sentence was later suspended, and McNeil was placed on three years probation in Pennsylvania and ordered to repay the Texas agency the $2,520.00 he had drawn in benefits.

In a similar case, Alaska resident Valerie Hespeth was indicted by a Federal Grand Jury in her former home of El Paso on five counts of mail fraud. Hespeth drew unemployment benefits for thirteen weeks while failing to report employment or earnings. She pled guilty and was placed on five years probation in Alaska. The court ordered her to return to TEC the fraudulent benefits totalling $1,644.00.

These and other cases under indictment are part of an ongoing effort between the TEC and the U.S. Department of Labor, Office of Inspector General, to identify, locate and prosecute individuals who are employed and fail to report earnings while drawing unemployment insurance benefits.

In 43 seminars held statewide by TEC, designed to teach businesspersons how to cut the cost of doing business in Texas, over 12,000 Texas employers have been encouraged to cooperate fully with TEC in the investigation of potentially fraudulent claims. It is clearly to the advantage of both workers and employers to aid the agency in fraud detection. According to agency Administrator Bill Grossenbacher, "Our goal is to preserve the integrity of a very good system which provides short term assistance to persons unemployed through no fault of their own. This assistance is no quick fix for an ailing economy, but it does serve to maintain some economic stability in areas adversely affected by work shortages."

POLLY'S POINTERS What is the way to freeze berries?

By Polly Fisher

DEAR POLLY — We'll be picking strawberries soon and I'd like to freeze some. Can you tell me how to freeze the whole unsweetened berries, like the bags of frozen strawberries I buy at the supermarket? — CAROL

DEAR CAROL — Strawberries may be dry-packed using the following method. Spread the clean, dry berries out on a cookie sheet and place in the freezer for an hour or more until the berries are solidly frozen. Then pack the berries in freezer bags or containers and return to the freezer immediately.

For strawberries that are halved or sliced, a sugar or syrup pack is best, since it helps to preserve the color and texture of the berries. For a sugar pack, simply toss the sliced berries with sugar, then pack in freezer bags or containers. For a syrup pack, prepare a medium syrup (3 cups sugar to 4 cups water, boiled until sugar is fully dissolved), pack the berries in freezer containers, then pour syrup over to cover.

Unsweetened berries may also be frozen by packing them in freezer containers, then covering them with a solution of 1 teaspoon ascorbic acid dissolved in a quart of water. This helps to preserve good color and texture.

I'm sending you a copy of my newsletter "Freezing Fruits and Vegetables," which gives complete instructions for freezing most fruits and vegetables, including recipes for various syrups, blanching times for vegetables and other specifics. Others who would like this issue should send $1 for each copy to POLLY'S POINTERS, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1216, Cincinnati, OH 45201. Be sure to include the title. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — Do you have a pretty slip with a lovely lacy top that does not fit in the hip area? Make lace inserts, using lace similar to that already on the slip, in the side seams. Presto! A lovely slip that can be enjoyed again. — BETTY

DEAR POLLY — How can I remove lime buildup on bathtubs, sinks and toilets? I am afraid of commercial cleaners, because a lady I know ruined her fixtures with one. — HARRIETT

DEAR HARRIETT — Vinegar does a pretty good job of dissolving these mineral buildups. Soak the deposits with the vinegar, either by filling the sink with water to which you've added a cup or two of vinegar, or by applying vinegar soaked cloths or paper towels to the deposit-covered areas. Soak for at least 15 to 20 minutes, then wash the mineral buildup away. Be sure to rinse thoroughly since prolonged contact with any acid could damage some finishes — although the vinegar is fairly gentle in this respect. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — To hang clothing for garage sales I purchased lengths of used plumbing pipe, sanded and painted it, and had holes drilled through the pipe near the ends. I put large screw type hooks in the garage rafters. Double lengths of strong plastic rope were cut, threaded through the holes and secured to the pipes at a "clothes rack" height. After the sales, I wind the rope up to the ceiling, ready to lower for future sales. I also have pipes in the basement for out-of-season clothes that I cover with plastic drop cloths. — ELLA

DEAR POLLY — When baking individual meat pies, instead of using a long strip of aluminum foil to wrap around the edge of the crust, I use a six- or seven-inch square of foil. I cut a four-inch circle out of the center to leave the center of the pie uncovered, place the square over the pie and crimp the foil to fit. — MRS. G.R.

Polly will send you a Polly Dollar ($1) if she uses your favorite Pointer, Peavee or Problem in her column. Write POLLY'S POINTERS in care of this newspaper.

Local crew regarded as one of the best

By SHAWN COCKRUM
Staff Writer

A Sunday morning, the day before Memorial Day. Spring is in the air with the soft sounds of a church choir, your friends laughing, ladies gossiping.

Then there is silence. Your chest feels like it may explode. Your mind is racing, you are not sure what is happening. You rush to the door gasping for air. Then you collapse. You see people running to you, screaming, crying, confused. A doctor looks at you and, for the others, it is easy to tell he is looking at a dead man.

For most people, looking back on an experience like that is a nightmare. But not for Virgil Slentz. The 53-year-old Hereford businessman looks back on last Memorial Day weekend as a time when six dedicated emergency medical personnel gave him a second chance on life.

"I was at the Nazarene Church when I started feeling really funny inside, I knew I was going to pass out. I got up and went outside and the next thing I knew I was on the ground," Slentz recalled.

"There just so happened to be a doctor in church that day and he came outside to look at me. When I looked up at him, I could tell he was looking at a dead man."

"When the ambulance boys got there I had zero pulse and no blood pressure. They just fell in on me and brought me back from the dead. They were so efficient and so cool about everything. You would have thought they were working on spare tire or something. They were so cool that I never really worried," said Slentz.

"The doctors in Amarillo said it was unbelievable. They were on me so fast there was not even a need for surgery. I know I am in good hands in Hereford."

The Deaf Smith County Emergency Medical Crew is a branch of the county hospital. Some say the crew is the best in the state. The members are Gerry Hollinger, Jap Dickerson, J.O. Walls, Joe Hamby, Steve Cortez, Donnie Lauderback, Paul Hamilton, Kenneth Cook, Raymond Schroeder, Gary Phipps and Rex Lee.

These men each have different kinds of life-saving experience and training. According to ambulance crew supervisor Gerry Hollinger, there is a different team on call every night. A team will consist of a paramedic, an emergency medical technician and an emergency care attendant. The paramedic is the team leader.

Hollinger said that the people of Hereford have a distinct advantage over any other size of community.

"We can mobilize more people and more equipment faster than anybody else in the state," Hollinger said. "Our ambulances are equipped with everything you would find in the emergency room, except the doctor."

Hollinger said that the ambulance crew has been hospital supervised since December 1979. Before that it was run by the funeral homes in town.

"While the funeral homes were running the ambulances, they started to become financially drained. This is no business to get into if you want to become rich. We at the hospital thought we could take it over, and we did."

Hollinger commented that the main reason the crew is so good today is because of the hard work put out by the city and county commissioners, the hospital board and the funeral homes.

"We are also very proud of our working relationship with the other agencies in town," said Hollinger. "The police, sheriff and fire departments really deserve a pat on the back, they sure make our job easier."

Hereford Fire Marshall Jay Spain also commented on the working relationship between the ambulance crew and fire department.

"I'll match our crew with anybody in the state," Spain said. "We went on a call where a man was pinned under a car. If it would have not been for this crew's work, that man would be dead today instead of alive."

Paramedic Donnie Lauderback, 25, says ambulance work does become stressful, but the feeling usually does not last too long.

"It is the hardest on the wives. There have been a lot of times when I have had to leave my wife alone in a restaurant or a grocery store. Sometimes she does not understand when I have to leave in the middle of dinner or at 4 a.m. for a transfer," Lauderback said.

"When that alarm comes in we don't know how severe the call is. We treat every call as if it were life or death. Our wives don't know what we are getting into, or when we will be back. All they can do is sit at home and worry."

Ambulance crew supervisor Gerry Hollinger

"For us, it is a different situation. We have our minds on the job of trying to save somebody. Our wives don't know what kind of situation we are going into, or when we will be home, or if we are all right. Then when we do finally get home, they feel isolated because they can't fully understand the situation or what we had to do."

"After a major call, we all get together and talk about what we have done," said Lauderback. "I really feel good when I can walk away from a patient and feel that I have done everything possible to help."

Being able to administer assistance on the scene is one of the best virtues of the ambulance. Here Marwon Khoury holds the IV for an injured child while paramedics work to revive him.

"So far, after four years of paramedic work, I have only cried twice, once when a man had a roof cave in on him, and when three children died in a house fire. Kids are the worst. We feel so empty inside if we lose them."

"If we have people who are dead on arrival at the hospital, I always try to be in the room when they tell the family. That way they see me there and know that I stayed with the patient the whole time. We always try to help the families as much as possible."

Recently, the ambulance crew was dispatched to the home of Chick Holbert. Holbert was at home one evening talking with a friend, Dr. Hap Caviness. Holbert's son Scott recalls what happened:

"Dad and Hap were sitting at the table when Dad just fell out his chair, Hap said that he must have died instantly. Hap got on the phone and called the ambulance, they were there in about two minutes," Holbert said.

"The crew did their normal great job, but it was just too late. I feel very confident that everything that could have been done for him was. They always took a genuine interest in him."

when we have kids that are hurt. They have not even had a chance to start their lives yet. All you can do is think about your own children."

Ask any EMT or paramedic, and they will tell you that Joe Hamby is probably the most enthusiastic. Hamby, 26, got talked into being an

"The greatest feeling you can ever have is resuscitating somebody. There are times when we get to the scene and the person is gone. We go directly to work on them and bring them back to life. When we leave, they have a genuine chance for survival."

"If anything should ever happen to me, I hope it happens in Hereford, Texas."

Joe Hamby

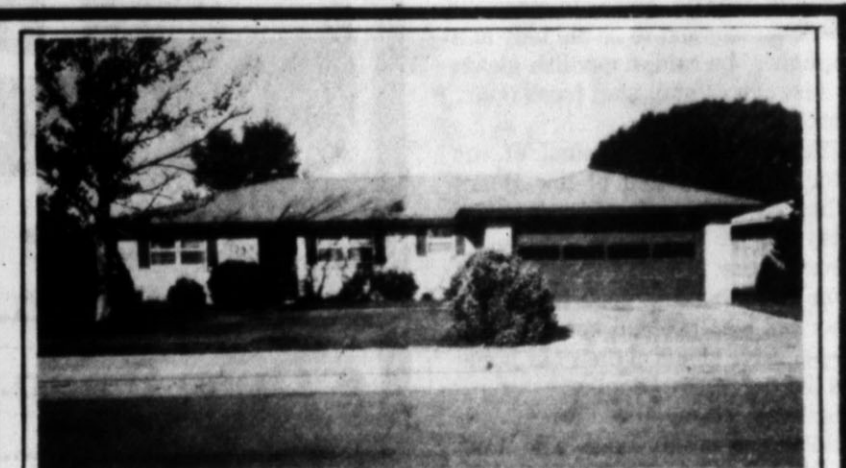

EMT by friends on the crew. He thought it might be fun to learn about saving lives.

Hamby is an EMT with special skills, which enables him to perform more advanced methods of lifesaving.

"The first weekend I was on the ambulance crew, we got 17 calls in one day. The calls were everything from a car wreck to a stabbing," said Hamby.

"Sometimes people get mad when they see us driving around town with our light and sirens going. But they have to realize that we have only four to six minutes to save a life. If we are later than that - it's over," said Hamby. "It takes a lot of dedication to do this. If you are on call, you have to go and go fast."

"The only thing I can say is if any thing should happen to me or someone in my family, I hope it happens in Hereford, Texas."

Hobby mellows into family lifestyle

AUSTIN (AP) — Skimming pavement at the approximate height of an armadillo belly, the pearl, metal flake and candy apple convoy cruised slower than a bridegroom approaching the altar.

The elemental rock strains of Chuck Berry, Billy Haley and Buddy Holly — mixed with an equally driving conjunto beat — haunted their course along East Sixth Street.

Junior and Rosita Medina drove the flagship carrucha of the Get Acquainted Low Riders Club, a cherry-colored 1965 Chevy Bel Air "juiced all around" with hydraulic pumps. When Junior flicked the switch, the car hopped like a barefoot boy on a summer sidewalk.

They were the lowest and slowest, the meanest and cleanest on the road.

Other drivers did whiplash double takes, gaping with astonishment, disgust or admiration. Neighborhood observers reviewed the convoy with aplomb, watching for changes in paint jobs and significant others.

It was a good thing they didn't honk. In the back of the Chevy, sweet baby James Medina slumbered peacefully in his infant seat.

Junior denied that he hopped the car to rock little James to sleep. "I start hopping next to an old lady at a stoplight," he said, a devilish gleam in his eye, "and she freaks out, man."

The Medinas are typical of the older die-hard breed of low riders rolling on the streets of East Austin today.

Sure there are still many young vatos locos hunting good times and senioritas who pretend not to notice the plaintive bleats of their car horns and the suggestive hopping.

Just as often, the drivers are middle-aged family types who were reared in a decades-old tradition. They still make the rounds on Saturday night — a version of Mexican American Graffiti — but their children and grandchildren are often seated on the velvet of quilted velour seats in the back.

For all their flash, the clubs are about as radical as the Kiwanis. Many low riders sponsor community benefits and scholarships, as well as family picnics and events.

"My father was a low rider a long time a long time ago in Austin," Junior Medina said. "He customized a '32 Chevy coupe. He gave me my first car to fix up when I was 10. I'll never forget that '51 Ford."

Rosita Medina is working on her own car, a 1950 Chevy. When it's ready to roll, however, she plans to keep low riding a family affair. "We always go to the dances and parties together," she said.

"A lot of people think we're all vandals or teen-agers," said Mary Rodriguez, secretary of the Get Acquainted Club. "We grew up with these cars. Like Elvis, they never died. Like the King, the low riders live."

She proudly indicated her son Albert's bicycle, customized low rider style.

"We always think in terms of the children," she said. "We try to get them involved in the club as much as possible."

John Zavala, a post office clerk, is one of many reborn low riders in East Austin. His sons, Joe and Richard, convinced him that the clubs are not just for youngsters. Indeed, they proved such capable proselytizers that their father started the Azteca Low Rider Club. The membership is predominantly Zavala.

"My son is the president," John Zavala said. "I back him up when necessary. This makes me feel like I'm growing up with my boys, even though I'm still their dad."

"I grew up in the barrio," he said. "Sometimes it got rough over here. But even though I got all my cars low as a kid, I always stayed out of trouble."

His bajito mobile, The Crystal Rose, is a splendid example of the art. The burgundy 1979 Grand Prix can hop sideways and front to back. A mural on the trunk, a dream version of the Rose, shows how the Zavalas feel about the car.

"It symbolizes luxury for us," John said. "We haven't had much of that in our lives."

Susie Jimenez, member of Los Amigos Bajitos de Austin, probably has the most opulent 1977 Monte Carlo in town. A crystal chandelier sheds dappled light on the love seat in the back. A swivel captain's chair on the driver's side faces a chrome-plated chain steering wheel and a dangling pair of fuzzy dice.

"It wasn't easy finding dice that match the gold velour interior," said

Ms. Jimenez, a school custodian and part-time waitress. "I call her La Unica, because I'm usually the only woman low rider at the car shows. My grandson usually rides with me."

She used to drive La Unica to work, but after sinking thousands of dollars into the dream machine, she decided to keep it only for show. "On Sundays, I treat myself and take it for a cruise," Ms. Jimenez, 45, said. "Other days, it's the Toyota Corolla. That's boring. My kids tell me I don't look too excited when I drive it."

She got involved in low riding after meeting her boyfriend, Joe Rodriguez. President of Los Amigos Bajitos and vice president of the citywide Austin Low Riders Association, he is about as involved in the subculture as it's possible to be.

His own low rider, a '48 Chevy pickup that would have trouble clearing a manhole cover, won Best Custom Truck at a recent show in Houston. "It was a piece of junk when I bought it seven years ago," Rodriguez said. "I've kept adding to it. You never finish a low rider."

When Juan Robles cruises in his '76 Monte Carlo, it's difficult to see more than his snap-brim hat and sunglasses.

Outside the gold-glitter land rocket that looks as if it were designed by the team of Liberace and Buck Rogers, however, the imperturbable Robles cuts quite a dashing character. The pants are modified zoot suit complete with yardlong watch fob. The shoes are immaculate patent leather. And a brilliant kerchief around the neck sets it all off.

"My son Frank as his Grand Prix fixed the same way," Robles said. "Juan Jr. will inherit the Monte Carlo one day."

"For my family," he said, "low riding is culture, art, clothing, manner. It is everything."

The full Moon is nine times as bright as a half-moon, since the surface of the visible half-moon is extremely rough and mountainous, which makes for more shadows and less reflected sunlight.

Disaster Committee

The American Red Cross Hereford Chapter has a disaster committee that's prepared. Bert Brown, left, Delbert Bainum, and Margaret Gamez, are some of the people who volunteer their time in case of disaster. Members of the committee assist people in crisis from one-family fires to weather-related disasters.

Museum Day planned in Canyon

Today, from 2 to 5 p.m., the Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum will celebrate International Museum Day and the Texas Sesquicentennial with its third annual Museum Family Day. It will be an old-fashioned celebration of the pioneer spirit in honor of Texas 150th birthday, according to Suzanne Hewitt-Knorpp, staff coordinator.

A family-oriented afternoon of dances, role players, antique equipment displays, wagon rides, and crafts demonstrations will offer entertainment for all ages, she explained. Education volunteers and community volunteers are organizing and participating in the events, which will take place outside the Museum on the grounds.

"A new activity this year is our Cowboy Area, where you can see crafts makers and entertainers. There will be saddlemakers and bootmakers exhibiting their skills, and pioneer ladies will be giving butter-making demonstrations," said Hewitt-Knorpp.

A special attraction in the Cowboy Area will be performances by the "Texas Shootists" at 2:30, 3:30, and 4:30 p.m. These are costumed roleplayers who'll "shoot it out" with each other. Their costumes and weapons are authentic, she noted.

Other outdoor activities will include displays of antique automobiles, a baby animal zoo, wagon rides, activities in and around T-Anchor Ranch House, and a puppet theater featuring "Tumbleweed the Horse & Friends."

On another part of the grounds, artist Sue Blackburn will be signing Museum Day posters. These were designed specially for this event and are unique mementoes of the event, she said.

Refreshments will include lemonade, from various lemonade stands, and the traditional 5 cents popcorn and peanuts served from the Museum's antique popcorn wagon.

Music and dancers are also on the slate, she added. On stage at 2 p.m. will be the Canyon Show Choir. Then The Otwells take the stage at 2:30 p.m. They'll perform until 3:30 p.m. Roger and David Otwell, who are from Tulsa, have been seen by millions while appearing on "Nashville Now" and "The Lawrence Welk Show." Their repertoire includes country-and-western, contemporary Christian music, and old standards.

Then at 3:30 p.m., the High Plains Pipers will play, followed by the Kwahadi Indian Dancers at 4 p.m. and the Top of Texas Cloggers at 4:30 p.m. All entertainment will take place in front of the W.T. Education Building, on the north side of the Museum complex.

Abundant Life

CONGENIAL PEOPLE

By Bob Wear

CONGENIAL PEOPLE are kindly and courteous, cordial and affable, and possess other qualities which make for good cheer. These are the people we like to be with, the kind of fellow-workers we enjoy, the people with whom we prefer to trade, the kind of professionals whose services we buy, and we prefer and favor these persons every way we can.

WE CAN BE congenial people. If we desire the maximum satisfaction in the living experience, we must be congenial. This means that we are going to be pleased with ourselves and that most of our interactions with others will be pleasant. The general response from others will be helpful and pleasant. All of this will be for our physical, mental and spiritual well-being. We will be free of regrets and self-reproach, and we will be able to maintain a well-organized life pattern; with many attendant blessings.

IF WE ARE surly, ill-natured, rude and generally ill-humoredly unsocial; we are constantly creating problems for ourselves, and we attract the opposition, even the dislike of other people. This is the kind of loss we cannot afford. People are less inclined to assist us, or accommodate us; and many will do neither. Of course, we may get by; but the road will be rough, and we will often be lonely.

WE CAN LEARN to be congenial. This does not mean that we will please everybody, but we can be pleasant with everybody and this will always be to our advantage, because we are going to feel better about ourselves and our behavior.

BEING CONGENIAL does not mean that we will agree with the views and ways of all people, or that all people will agree with our views and our ways. It does mean, however, that we can, when necessary, disagree without the painful experience of being disagreeable.

CONGENIALITY helps create the climate in which abundant living becomes reality.

Evening clinic opens for women at Tech

Working women who have trouble fitting medical appointments into their schedules will be aided by an evening obstetrics/gynecology clinic at Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center (TTUHSC).

The clinic is staffed by faculty members in the Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology and is open from 4-7 p.m. every Tuesday and Thursday. Routine examinations in obstetrics, gynecology, infertility and endocrinology are available, along with pre- and post-surgical exams.

Faculty members staffing the clinic are M. Wayne Heine, M.D., department chairperson; Frank D. DeLeon, M.D.; Harlan R. Giles, M.D.; Larry E. Word, M.D.; and M. Mark Dorsett, M.D.

Christopher L. Baca, department administrator, said the aim of the clinic is to make its services more convenient to patients.

"Working people and students do not always have time to go to the doctor," he said. "For instance, some of our patients have been teachers who were having to find their own substitute teachers when they had to schedule doctor appointments."

Appointments may be made by calling 743-2354. Pre-registration is necessary for first-time patients by giving required information over the telephone when the appointment is made. Treatment authorization forms can be signed at the time of the visit.

New patients will receive a letter and map with details about the clinic's services and location. The clinic is on the third floor of the east wing of the TTUHSC building. The medical school faces Fourth Street and the parking lot north of the building is available for patients.

Laboratory and x-ray services also are available at TTUHSC if needed in conjunction with clinic exams.

Rush registration party set Wednesday

The Hereford Panhellenic Association will host its annual rush registration party at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday in the home of Judy McCarter, 333 Douglas.

All senior girls who plan to attend college and their mothers are invited to attend.

At the party, senior girls will be told how they can register for rush at their prospective college and through the local Panhellenic Association.

College girls who are presently in sororities have been invited to attend. They will answer questions and speak on sisterhood, scholarship, finance and extracurricular activities of sororities.

It is essential that those girls who are interested in going through rush next fall register through Hereford Panhellenic so that recommendations may be sent to all the sororities represented at the college of their choice.

The earlier information can be received and recommendations sent, the better chance the girls will have in pledging a sorority.

Registration through the local association and through the college does not obligate a girl, but it can be invaluable in the event that she decides to go through rush.

The Hereford Panhellenic Association was organized in 1977 to help educate Hereford's college-bound girls about sororities and to help them join the sorority of their choice through the recommendation of local women.

Any woman holding membership in a Greek letter sorority is invited to join. Susan Perrin is the 1968 president of the association.

ELECTRONIC GATEWAYS

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Transistors act like electronic gates, and they can open quickly or slowly.

Scientists at the University of Rochester have measured a transistor that switches faster than any other in the world. Developed at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, the transistor responds in only 5-trillionths of a second. It achieves its phenomenal speed in part because it is made of gallium-arsenide instead of the more traditional silicon.

The device is so fast it can't be measured by conventional techniques. A new device invented at the University of Rochester that relies on ultrashort pulses of laser light was used for the measurement.

DR. GOTT Hair should return with time

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Last summer my 15-year-old daughter shaved her pubic hair so she could wear her swimsuit. It's been more than a year, but it still hasn't grown back. Is there anything that will help? She's very embarrassed about this problem.

DEAR READER — Adolescents often don't grow hair as quickly as do adults. Be patient. As your daughter's hormones reach adult levels, she probably will grow back what she shaved off. If a waiting game is not acceptable, take her to a dermatologist.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I had three by-passes four months ago, am 67, walk nine holes of golf five days a week and am on anti-platelet pills. The problem is that my left leg (which has an incision from groin to knee) swells daily to almost twice the size of my right leg. I wear support hose during the day but remove them before dinner. Can you give me any suggestions that might help decrease or eliminate the swelling?

DEAR READER — Your leg is swollen because you had a major vein removed and the blood has not yet found collateral channels (alternate blood vessels) in order to drain from the leg. The swelling you describe may last for many months. However, you are doing what you can and the situation should improve with time.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I was diagnosed as having polymyalgia rheumatica. I'm taking 12 1/2 milligrams of prednisone daily, but have side effects. Is this disease curable? What can I expect?

DEAR READER — Polymyalgia rheumatica is a type of arterial and muscle inflammation. The problem usually will go away on its own, but you will need to take prednisone until it does, because the active disease is associated with serious complications, such as stroke, blindness and heart attack. Taking the medicine on alternate days may reduce the incidence and severity of side effects. Ask your doctor about this.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I am 11 years old, 5 feet 2 and weigh 110. I want to lose 20 pounds, since all the girls in my class weigh 90 or less. How do I go about losing weight safely?

DEAR READER — As a general rule, you can lose weight safely by cutting down on fat and eliminating sugar from your diet. This approach is both practical and effective.

Because of your age, you'd best check with your pediatrician before losing weight, especially as much as 20 pounds. That's almost 20 percent of your body weight. A loss of that magnitude may be unhealthy for an 11-year old. Judging from your present weight, I think you would be unwise to lose more.

Your doctor may be able to reassure you that you needn't match your classmates. As all of you grow, you will tend to grow in different directions — up, out and around. I suggest you pay less attention to your weight of 110, make sure that you are eating a well-balanced diet and wait to see how your body develops in your teens.

DEAR DR. GOTT — My daughter's doctor told her that the black-and-blue spots on her legs are due to arthritis. My doctor told me that mine are from broken blood vessels. What's your opinion?

DEAR READER — Some types of joint inflammation, such as lupus arthritis and rheumatoid arthritis, can affect the body's clotting mechanism. Spontaneous bruising — that is, black-and-blue spots from no obvious cause — can occur. Also, easy bruising can be caused by certain medicines, like cortisone, that are used to treat arthritis.

However, aging itself can cause bruises. As your doctor pointed out, breaks in tiny blood vessels that are near the skin can result in leakage of blood and occasional bruising. In addition, bruises can be caused by weakened varicose veins that may leak.

By itself, arthritis does not cause bruising; certain blood compounds that are related to the arthritis are the culprits. I am sure that your daughter's doctor will want to explain to her, in more detail, the reasons for her bruising. I also think it would be prudent for you to have blood tests to make sure that your bruising is a common and benign condition caused by aging.

DEAR DR. GOTT — What is a spastic colon, and does what I eat affect it?

DEAR READER — Spastic colon, or irritable bowel, is a common condition that produces various types of intestinal malfunction, particularly diarrhea, gas and the need for frequent evacuations.

PASTA TRENDS

NEW YORK (AP) — Americans are eating pasta hot, cold and often, according to a Better Homes and Gardens survey.

In the year prior to the survey, 91.7 percent of those who responded said they had served hot pasta while 57 percent had served cold pasta salad.

Nearly half of the pasta-eaters surveyed were satisfied with their current brand of dry pasta. About 20 percent found their pasta broken in the package when they bought it, while fewer than 20 percent said their brand was too starchy or sticky.

Fewer than 10 percent said they considered pasta made in Italy better than that made in the United States.

Lack of communication about money can cause problems

One of the major causes of family problems is failure to communicate about family finances.

"Couples who didn't bother to discuss family finances when times were good find themselves at odds when the situation changes," says family economics expert Nancy Granovsky.

For example, a person may tolerate a free-spending spouse until one of them becomes unemployed. Then it's easy to blame the spouse for spending instead of saving and emotions can't build until the problem affects their basic relationship, explains the Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service specialist.

Granovsky says another type of problem occurs when one spouse—usually the husband—assumes all the financial responsibility in an effort to protect the other. This may work fine until something happens, such as the death of the husband or a major change in their financial situation.

In a financial crisis, the wife usually knows something is wrong because she sees overdue notices in the mail or is asked to sign legal documents. Yet, her husband may still refuse to discuss the situation so she won't have to worry.

"Unfortunately, not knowing can be more worrisome than the facts," notes Granovsky. "How a family handles its finances on a daily basis may be a private matter for one of the partners, but in a community property state like Texas, half of the assets acquired during marriage belong to each spouse."

The specialist advises couples to at least discuss their basic finances so that both spouses have a good idea of their current situation. Both partners should be capable of performing most any financial function necessary to survive if the other partners dies.

How people react to a financial emergency can also add to family problems, says Granovsky.

Some people react as though they are completely destitute even though they may have unemployment benefits or savings to tide them over, she maintains. Others may actually spend money on things for "show" so that no one really knows how difficult their financial situation may be. Either reaction can add strains to a marriage.

"Unemployment and other financial problems are tough for any couple," Granovsky remarks, "but developing good communication habits before problems arise can help ease the strain when circumstances change."

His territory covers more than 370,000 square miles, but he says his farthest customer is only 3½ hours away.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I have a suggestion for the woman who confessed her exhibitionist tendencies. It will help her stay out of trouble and at the same time satisfy her urge for exposure and complete freedom. She should do her housework in the nude.—ANONYMOUS IN BOSTON

DEAR BOSTON: Several years ago a reader who signed herself "Lady Godiva" wrote to say she loved to do her housework in the nude and asked if it was sick or immoral. I told her so long as she was home alone with the draperies drawn, she could do her housework in a raccoon coat or naked as a jaybird and it was nobody's business.

I received the following responses. (Incidentally, these letters appeared more than 20 years ago and the last one remains a classic.)

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Tell "Lady Godiva" she's not crazy. I've been doing my housework in my birthday suit for 20 years. I consider myself normal and intelligent. As a bride I was forever sewing torn seams and restitching pockets taht caught on the door knobs. One day a frying pan plopped into the dishwasher and soaked me to the skin. I removed my house dress and continued with nothing on. I so enjoyed the feeling of freedom that I've been cleaning house in the nude ever since.

I can report only one minor mishap. While ironing a bedsheet I stood too close to the board and burned my stomach.—EXPERIENCED IN THE FLESH

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I used to do my housework in the nude but a recent experience cured me. Our minister expressed the wish to see our new baby. The time set for his visit was 2 p.m.

I was fresh out of coffee cream and phoned my neighbor to ask if she'd bring over half a cup. She said, "I'll be there in a few minutes."

I was rushing around (in the nude) trying to get the house tidied up when the doorbell rang. I grabbed a face towel to wrap around my middle so I could reach out for the coffee cream. I opened the door quickly and shouted, "Boy, am I glad to see you, Honey!"

To my everlasting shame it was the minister. He was so startled his glasses fell off. He mumbled, "I'll be back next week when I can bring my wife."

I slammed the door shut and sat there and shook for 20 minutes. To this day I'm unable to look him in the face.—STILL BLUSHING

DEAR BLUSHING: The next letter from Kansas City may be a comfort.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I wonder if "Lady Godiva" saw the news item in the paper about an Ohio housewife. She was doing her laundry in the basement and impulsively decided to take off the soiled housedress she was wearing and throw it into the machine.

Her hair had just been set in rollers and the pipes overhead were leaking. She spotted her son's football helmet in the corner and put it on her head. There she was, stark naked (except for the football helmet) when she heard a cough. The woman turned around and found herself staring into the face of the meter reader from the gas and electric company.

As he headed for the door his only comment was, "I hope your team wins, lady."

It's not always easy to recognize love, especially the first time around. Acquaint yourself with the guidelines. Read Ann Landers' booklet, "Love or Sex and How to Tell the Difference." For a copy, mail 50 cents and a long, self-addressed envelope with your request to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611.

Less physicians say professors

The number of new physicians in Texas is increasing more slowly compared to the decade of the 70s, according to two University of Texas professors.

Writing in the May issue of Texas Medicine, the authors add they do not know if this is good or bad because Texas does not have a clear enough conception of health priorities to establish requirements for medical manpower.

Texas currently determines if there are enough physicians by calculating how many people there are for each doctor in Texas counties against a federal standard, according to Stephen H. Linder, Ph.D., research associate professor and Virginia C. Kennedy, associate professor and associate director, Center for Health and Manpower Studies, The University of Texas School of Public Health, Houston. They add that this is not a reliable method because access and cost of health care, among other factors, affect what might be considered enough physicians for any given area of the state.

In 1984, there was one doctor for every 646 Texans. However, the authors predict that future distribution of physicians is expected to be uneven regionally, growing more in metropolitan than in nonmetropolitan areas. They add that projections for the year 2000 show the greatest concentration of doctors will be in the state's metropolitan areas. The lowest will be in South and West Texas and the Louisiana border areas.

Their study in the official journal of the Texas Medical Association explains that after two decades of support for medical education, the federal government is relinquishing its policy leadership to the states. While "Texas has traditionally played a significant role in some aspects of medical manpower... patterns of physician specialization and distribution have been influenced more by the free market and the flow of federal funds than by any initiative originating in the state."

The authors stress that "Texas state government is not organized to make the critical balancing decisions that should not be left to the free market." Instead, they suggest Texas needs an independent policy-making authority, whose form might best be chosen by a statewide task force of public officials and prominent citizens.

Drs. Linder and Kennedy state that questions about the adequate supply of physicians "cannot be separated from other health policy issues that will undergo substantial changes as more federal responsibilities are transferred to the states." They add that "the crucial decisions on manpower in the state have yet to be faced." Questions regarding access to care, its cost, and effectiveness of health care need to be addressed to have a clear understanding of how many physicians is enough for Texas.

A Flair for Design

In residential design, the function of a space is just as important as it is in commercial. Your first step, after your budget is set, is to list how a space will be used and by whom. Then the task begins to take shape. If we are dealing with a family-room, for example, we may need an area for conversation, T.V. watching, enjoying a roaring fire, games, crafts, and hobbies, such as music and reading. So we see immediately, that storage, possibly in the form of built-ins is a necessity. How much storage, as well as how much seating is an individual matter, but we do have a starting point, and the functionality of the space is on the way to being assured.

Adventure novels are featured this week at the Deaf Smith County Library. "Eclipse" by William Stevenson and "Deep Lie" by Stuart Woods are the two novels featured this week. William Stevenson's classic World War II spy story "A Man Called Intrepid" firmly established him as a major force in nonfiction espionage adventure. Now, in his latest work, Stevenson turns his talents to fiction to create a thrilling page turner of gripping suspense and fascinating historical speculation.

"Eclipse", the term currently used for political assassination, draws on the author's superbly solid grasp of the inner workings of U.S. and foreign intelligence systems. It is a mesmerizing what "if" tale that could have changed the very course of history had it been true.

The time: the present or near future. the place: Spandau Prison, where American television journalist Scott Talbott is conducting the exclusive interview with the notorious Rudolf Hess. For Talbott, it is the story of a lifetime. But even he does not realize just how explosive a story it will be when Hess, with a simple nod of his head, discloses a startling revelation. "Eclipse" is a very exciting and adventurous novel.

Those who have read his novels "Chiefs" and "Run Before The Wind" or saw the six-hour adaptation of "Chiefs" on CBS-TV will have an inkling of what is in store for them in "Deep Lie" by Stuart Woods. It is the story of a dual between an operations genius of the KGB and a desk-bound analyst of the CIA, with the fate of eight and a half million people in the balance.

It is a fact that in the autumn of 1982, a Soviet submarine ran aground near a secret naval base in the South of Sweden. After a week of intense diplomatic activity, and after an inspection by Swedish authorities, the submarine was released, but soon there was an explosion of periscope sightings in Swedish waters. Swedish militiamen fired on frogmen being put ashore from a minisubmarine. Sightings of Soviet submarines in Swedish waters are to this day occurring at the rate of two hundred a year.

Stuart Woods talked with people in high places, traveled to Sweden, Finland, and the Soviet Union, and listened to all the theories of why these frightening incursions were taking place. In the end, he decided, only one theory made sense, and on that he based "Deep Lie."

Kids' trading post is special museum event

An old-fashioned trading post will be a special attraction for children aged 12 and under who come to the Panhandle-Plains Museum's Family Day today, according to Suzanne Hewitt-Knorpp, staff coordinator.

The trading post is being offered again this year because it was the most popular event of 1985's Museum Day, she explained.

Trading posts were important in Plains history in the 1800s and 1870s. One of the most famous was Adobe Walls, located north of Amarillo. Buffalo hunters brought their hides to Adobe Walls to trade for guns, ammunition, and supplies. Indians also visited the trading posts.

The Museum's T-Anchor Trading Post will be in the same pioneer tradition, said Hewitt-Knorpp. It will be set up in a log building behind the T-Anchor Ranch House, on the east side of the Museum, she said. Volunteers will play roles of traders from around the turn of the century. "Kids should bring small items of their own from home to trade for various 'historical' articles. We'll take almost anything as long as it doesn't eat," she noted. "Our traders are sharp, and the kids will really have to barter to get what they want at the right price."

Some of the articles serving as trade goods this year are minerals (copper, sulphur, and mercury), coal, crude oil, animal pelts, and horseshoe-nail rings.

The T-Anchor Trading Post will be open for business from 2 to 5 this afternoon.

President Sowell presided over a short business meeting. It was decided members would help with the Pioneer Day Celebration.

The author, Sam Walter Foad, received inspiration for the poem from a man who did live by the side of the road and was a friend of man. This poem is one of the most read and cherished and is found in almost every collection of American poetry.

Other members present for the dinner program were Opal Bookout, Oneita Davidson, Bertha Dettmann, Jessie Mae Dodson, Margaret Ann Durham, Bibby Morgan, Grace Tinnin, Zoe Williams, Ruth Womble, Alice Thompson and Hilda Havens.

ICE CUBES GIVE CLUES
WATERLOO, Ontario (AP) — You can tell if your water is hard or soft by looking at your ice cubes.
"Hard water cubes have a white spot in the center where minerals congregate, while soft water cubes are uniformly cloudy," says Lou J. Smith, executive director of the Canadian Water Quality Association.
Smith says most people will see white spots in their cubes as some 85 percent of the water in the United States and Canada is at least moderately hard.

Chickens may lay the last word. University of Missouri-Columbia nutritionist, Margaret Flynn, says people have an "unwarranted fear of food" because the news media puts out new stories in "too much of a hurry". Ms. Flynn says she is particularly upset with unwarranted concerns about cholesterol. She stresses "studies show that eggs, beef, chicken and pork don't affect serum cholesterol in those people who have a history of normal cholesterol levels in their blood". More than 85% of the U.S. population have genes to control cholesterol. "For us, it's silly to avoid such foods as dairy products, eggs or beef". For the majority, "the best bet is to maintain our weight, eat in moderation and consumer a variety of foods".

Military glider pilots finally getting recognition

By JOAN GOESSL
Associated Press Writer
ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP)—The year was 1944, the month September, and World War II was a year away from sending its soldiers home.
George F. Brennan was a gung-ho glider pilot, flying the huge but flimsy aircraft at tree-top level behind enemy lines, delivering ammunition, gasoline, jeeps, even infantrymen and army field hospitals, to the front lines.
Brennan had entered the service with dreams of flying a P-38 fighter plane, but imperfect vision in his right eye kept that from becoming a reality.
"They threw me out and broke my heart," he said. But Brennan did not remain disheartened. He went into another program as an aviation student in 1942, earned his wings the following year and volunteered for the hazardous duty of a glider pilot. A year later, he was fly-

Singing to Guests

Norton Day Care sent a group of singers to entertain at the party Thursday evening for the Texas Wagon Train.

ing missions in Europe, including one that left him with seven wounds and hiding, disguised as a woman, in a Dutch maternity ward.
"We were the unsung heroes," said Brennan, the national representative of The National World War II Glider Pilots Association. "You never read about us. You hear about Normandy but you never hear about us. The only way to get jeeps and artillery on the ground were with gliders. On the ground we were medics, engineers and infantrymen. And we didn't get out until the fighting stabilized. But we don't get the recognition."
Until now.
Forty-one years after the war ended, Brennan and the country's remaining 1,500 World War II glider pilots will be awarded a plaque memorializing the American glider pilots killed in action.
Brennan, who moved to Albuquerque from Washington, D.C., a decade ago, will be among the 150 former glider pilots who will gather Tuesday at the Tomb of the Unknowns (formerly The Tomb of the Unknown Soldier) at Arlington National Cemetery in Arlington, Va. The plaque will be displayed at the Tomb of the Unknowns Museum there.

The U.S. Army headquarters also will accord the glider pilot association the cherished "Army Honor Wreath Ceremony," complete with the U.S. Army Ceremonial Color Guard, two platoons of the Honor Guard and music by a unit of the U.S. Army Band.
Brennan, 68, is one of about 30 ex-glider pilots in New Mexico. The national association, which has about 1,500 members of the original 6,000 glider pilots, is divided into regional chapters called wings. The wing that spans New Mexico, Arizona, Utah and Colorado has about 100 members.
Today, glider pilots are a vanishing breed because the Defense Department discontinued the American military glider pilot program in 1952, Brennan said.
And he said only two of the original 14,000 CG-4A gliders can be found today, one in the association's Silent Wings Museum in Terrell, Texas, and the other at the Air Force Museum in Dayton, Ohio.
Glider pilots, always operating behind enemy lines, were among the war's heaviest casualties.
Glanders were loaded with everything from TNT to food and from soldiers to jeeps. Each flew only one mission because of the damage sustained in the short field crash landings, Brennan said.
The gliders flew 300 feet behind C-47 tow planes, dangling on a one-inch diameter nylon rope that Brennan refers to as the umbilical cord. Once at the landing zones, the glider pilot released his aircraft from the "tow ship."

The gliders, with 83-foot wing spans, often were landed between anti-glider poles, 20-foot tall rods connected with wires that were mined and booby-trapped.
"It was like flying a stick of dynamite through the gates of hell," one glider pilot recalled.
Brennan agreed.
He was piloting a glider in Holland in September 1944 when he crash-landed deep in German occupied territory. He received seven wounds in the air from a small caliber cannon. The glider, carrying a jeep with two men, caught fire.
The two men bandaged Brennan before fleeing. Brennan was hidden in a barn by a woman who turned out to be a German sympathizer. She reported him to German authorities and he was captured, interrogated and "got the hell kicked out of me."
He escaped, however, and spent the next 10 weeks disguised as a woman in a Dutch maternity ward. He was freed when the British took the town.
Brennan lost part of his left foot in the incident and injured his hand — constant memories of the harrowing experience. A doctor also recently told him his missions left him with two ounces of shrapnel fragments in his body.
"We were an important part of the airborne forces," he said. "The airborne divisions couldn't function without glider pilots because of our ability to land jeeps and other equipment. Before the airborne invasions they referred to us as the bastards that nobody wanted. But after the invasion of Sicily and all the others, our worth became known."

Musicians bring back Waco's big band tradition

By BOB DARDEN Waco Tribune-Herald

WACO, Texas (AP)—Waco has a deep and abiding Big Band tradition. Under the tutelage of legendary band director Kyke Skinner, young Waco musicians once fanned out across the country to meet the needs of Big Bands everywhere.
Forty years later, an intriguing combination of old-timers and new-timers have gathered together to recreate that sound. They call themselves the Waco Jazz Orchestra.
Mike Jacobson, assistant professor of music and director of jazz studies at Baylor University, heads up the new WJO, with an assist from Dave Hibbard from the McLennan Community College music department, and says the enthusiasm and skill of the players invigorates him each week.
"In the eight months since we've been rehearsing, I've been impressed with the caliber of musicians locally. There's an outstanding soloist on just about every instrument," he said.
Jacobson said Wacoans Thomas Riggs, Bill Haskett, Al Newman and Hibbard began discussing the idea of a community jazz orchestra last year. At first the informal group met at a hotel. When that was eventually closed to them, they approached Baylor. The university made the orchestra part of its Continuing Education Program, offering it as a not-for-credit class.
The group rehearses from 1 to 3 p.m. Sundays in the band hall at Waco Hall on the Baylor campus.
"We've got about 30 regulars in the band," Jacobson said, "and they range from music professors to accountants to housewives to students at Baylor and MCC."
The standard instrumentation for a Big Band is a four-piece rhythm section, five trombones, five trumpets and five saxes (some of whom double on other wind instruments).

"Right now we've got more musicians than the standard Big Band instrumentation, which means we do a little rotating of personnel," Jacobson said. "It's really too big for one band, but not quite big enough for two yet."
Being a community band, some players are more proficient than others. But Jacobson says he likes it that way.
"We've got everything from professional musicians down to people where music is their avocation and they want to keep their chops in shape — but have no other outlet. The organization is open to anybody who wants to come and participate. If we get enough for a second band, we'll probably break up by proficiency, but we're not going to discourage anybody from coming."
Presently, the band has about 30 tunes in its active repertoire, with 10 of those being prepared for upcoming concerts.
Baylor and MCC, along with donations from individuals within the band, have provided the charts for these songs. The continuing education course costs $15 per semester, which helps pay for sheet music.
The WJO repertoire includes standard Big Band numbers in addition to some original arrangements and songs provided by the band's musicians. Jacobson said the WJO goals include performance opportunities and providing an outlet for talented local arrangers and writers.
"We do standard tunes like Duke Ellington's 'It Don't Mean a Thing If Ain't Got That Swing' (arranged by former Wacoan Charles Burleson), 'September Song', a couple of Latin things like 'Speak Low' and more contemporary charts like 'Fat Mama's Revenge', which we got from the Dallas Jazz Orchestra," Jacobson said.
As the band continues to grow, Jacobson said they may set up a staggered rehearsal schedule for musicians who can't come on Sunday afternoon. He also wants to make it more active in the community.

"I've enjoyed it from the beginning. It's a different type of outlet for me," said Jacobson, who attended Arizona State and Indiana University and is working on his doctorate from Indiana. He taught jazz and saxophone at Mansfield University for 10 years before coming to Baylor in the fall of 1985. He's also performed in bands backing Lou Rawls; Sammy Davis Jr., the Temptations and even Liberace.
"It's gratifying to get out in the community," he said. "I've really enjoyed the musicians I've met. Everybody in the band really wants to be there, especially since there are no financial rewards that come with playing with the WJO."
"Eventually we'd like to sponsor some kind of jazz festival with Baylor and MCC and even bring in some big name jazz artists to headline it."

Wheat, corn glut expected

WASHINGTON (AP)—New world crop projections by the Agriculture Department show an abundance of wheat and corn in 1988-87, indicating further that American farmers may see grain prices sag even lower in the coming year.
According to USDA economists, wheat prices at the farm may average $2.25 to $2.50 per bushel in the 1986-87 marketing year, compared with $3.16 last season and $3.39 in 1984-85.
Corn prices at the farm could slide to a range of $1.80 to $2.05 per bushel in 1986-87, down from $2.35 and $2.62 the last two years, respectively, the department said.
