Hanford was last on nuke dump list

SEATTLE (AP) — Before the Hanford nuclear reservation was named one of three finalists for a high-level nuclear waste dump, references calling it the worst of five possible sites were deleted from a federal analysis, a newspaper reports.

Last spring's working drafts of the Department of Energy's technical analysis recommended that Richton Dome, Miss., be selected for final study instead of the Hanford reservation, the Seattle Post-Intelligencer reported today.

The working drafts suggested DOE technical experts believed Hanford shouldn't have made the cut. They said it would cost more to build the underground dump there and that more lives could be lost during construction and transportation, the newspaper said.

Paragraphs describing the cost of developing Hanford and the problems of drilling there were crossed out, the newspaper said. It said handwritten instructions from senior staff at the DOE's Office of Civilian Radioactive Waste Management ordered deletion of statements ranking the eastern Washington state reservation the worst of five proposed sites.

The House Interior and Energy and Commerce committees are investigating the drafts, and have yet to identify who ordered the deletions, the newspaper said.

The edited drafts of the analysis were dated between April 4 and April 15, 1986. They were far more critical of Hanford than the final analysis released by the DOE in May in which Hanford, Yucca Mountain in Nevada and Deaf Smith in northern Texas were recommended as finalist sites.

The other two proposed sites were Richton Dome and Davis Canyon, Utah.

The staffers said they were unsure about the cost and health effects of drilling beneath the water table in Hanford's very hard basalt rock formations, the article said.

In the end, DOE contradicted its staff recommendations and argued that the environmental and socioeconomic impacts at Hanford balanced out the negative cost and health factors. The 570-square-mile Hanford reservation is more than 20 miles from a population center.

But the draft analysis read, "Hanford is the least desirable site because its enormously greater costs and greater health effects are not compensated for by its relatively slight advantage in environmental and socioeconomic impacts."

Congressmen say DOE distorted report on site

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Department of Energy suppressed and manipulated information to make two proposed nuclear waste sites appear more suitable than they really are, according to two congressmen.

The accusations were made Monday by Rep. Edward Markey, D-Mass., chairman of the subcommittee on energy conservation and power of the Energy and Commerce Committee, and Rep. Jim Weaver, D-Ore., chairman of the oversight and northwest power subcommittee of the Interior Committee.

In May, President Reagan accepted Energy Secretary John Herrington's recommendation to investigate sites at the Hanford nuclear reservation near Richland, Wash., Deaf Smith County in the Texas panhandle and Yucca Mountain at the weapons test range in Nevada.

In a letter to Herrington, Weaver and Markey said department documents "reveal that DOE systematically deleted unfavorable information concerning the desirability of the Hanford, Washington and the Deaf Smith County, Texas sites."

"Furthermore, it appears that DOE manipulated data ... to arrive at a predetermined set of sites," the two chairmen said.

"Editing of technical documents was done to reduce redundancies and remove judgmental statements," said Energy Department spokeswoman Ginger King.

New law may cause huge market in bogus documents

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Applications for amnesty by Mexican aliens living in the United States will not be taken until six months after the new immigration bill becomes law, a federal official said.

"I need to be emphatic that we'll not be receiving applications tomorrow," said Richard Casillas, a spokesman for the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service in San Antonio. "We need to educate employers and train personnel first. But we also need to emphasize that no one should be afraid to come forward. We won't be making arrests even if in the process of checking some applicant's background we discover a criminal wanted elsewhere."

Casillas said the city will need a "supermarket-sized facility" to process people seeking amnesty under the new law.

The immigration service will also open processing centers in Corpus Christi, Laredo and Austin, Casillas said.

An estimated 2.5 million to 5 million people could qualify for amnesty, but Casillas said he did not know how many in South Texas would take advantage of the program.

Officials say they expect a huge market in bogus documents to emerge to help people living illegally in the United States take advantage of the immigration bill passed Friday by Congress.

Fake documents are already being tailored to the requirements in the legislation. The documents include fake rent receipts, utility bills, income tax forms, driver's licenses and birth certificates.

The immigration bill would offer amnesty to millions of immigrants who arrived illegally if they can prove they lived in the United States since 1982, except for "brief, casual and innocent absences."

The White House says President Reagan is expected to sign the legislation.

In the past, fake documents could make someone appear to be a legal resident. But the new measure will probably create more demand because aliens could use the documents to become legal residents and eventually, citizenship.

"Probably what we'll be seeing now is a switch from just fraudulent immigration documents to documents indicating that you have been here since whatever date," said Vincent Henderson, an immigration investigator in Houston.

The bill imposes criminal penalties on employees who knowingly hire workers who do not have proper documents.

"We are going to have a new group of individuals creating documents," said Michael McMahon, deputy assistant regional commissioner for investigations at the Immigration and Naturalization Service office in Dallas. "There will be a lot more vendors, a lot more printing of documents."

Probation best for some offenders

By CINDY SMITH
Staff Writer

Being on probation is not the easiest way out of a crime according to two probation officers in Deaf Smith County.

Probation can be very strict and expensive. It is supposed to be an alternative to time spent in jail for the more minor type crimes.

"You can be put on probation for almost anything other than a violent crime," said Cindy Simons, adult probation officer.

According to Simons, sometimes it would do more harm than good to place a person in jail instead of on probation.

Juvenile probation officer Colleen Duffy agrees. She works with the children, the parents, and the victims of such crimes. Sometimes she has to make the decision of where to place the probationers and a lot of times, juvenile detention is not the answer.

Paying restitution, abiding by a contract that both the probation officers and the defendants sign, and watching one's step when tempted to do unlawful things is all part of being on probation.

"We have to know where they live, where they work, what's happening to them, their jobs..." said Simons. "We get people from all walks of life ranging from your businessmen to your poor man on the corner."

She also said that there are some people on probation who have killed people, for example people who have been charged with involuntary manslaughter.

All probationers have to reimburse the county or the victim for damages, court costs, or attorney fees. Simons said adult probation fees have provided approximately half of the operating cost of the office.

"Probation fees totaled $71,810.10 last year," said Simons.

Restitution, payments directly to the victims of the crime, totaled $39,196.60 last year in Deaf Smith County. "I think that's a lot of money to pour back to the victims," she said.

Simons also pointed out that the court costs equaled $15,067 and that fines for Deaf Smith County were $66,193.15.

According to Simons, adult probation is given for crimes such as burglary or drug and alcohol related offenses.

One of the hottest offenses in the county right now is driving while intoxicated. For DWI, a person usually receives one to two years probation. "But if you mess up..." warns Simons. "Each time, the fines get higher, the penalties get higher."

For DWI offenses, the offender, along with being placed on probation, has to also attend an eight-hour course about drinking and driving taught by Amarillo College.

She also added that on the second DWI charges the driver's license is taken away.

Simons recalled one young man that was a multiple DWI offender. "We've really been able to help him out with his life," she said. "We've

Legate named Mayor Pro-Tem

The Hereford City Commission named commissioner Tom Legate to the post of Mayor Pro-Tem for the remainder of his term during a regular meeting of the commission held Monday evening in the Hereford City Hall.

The commission was forced to select a mayor pro-tem after former commissioner Joe Reinauer resigned his post in September.

The mayor pro-tem does all business for the mayor if he is unable to attend a meeting or city function.

Commissioners also elected to accept a bid from Tune-Up Janitorial Service to clean the city offices and police department. The bid was for $600 a month.

Commissioners also accepted bids from Stagner-Orsborn for a cab and chassis to be used as a trash truck for the city.

The bid was for $30,687 and will come from money that was budgeted to buy a dump truck for the city's road crew. The truck will replace a trash truck that was destroyed in a fire.

Allied Millwrights was granted a bid for work to be done on the city's incinerator with a stipulation that the company comply with all requirements set in the specifications.

UT president's office taken over

AUSTIN (AP) - Sixteen young people protesting the University of Texas' business relations with South Africa took over President William Cunningham's office briefly.

The group, including 12 students, chained shut a glass door and held the office for about 20 minutes, officials said.

UT police broke in and arrested all 16, including two former students and two non-students.

Joyce Pole, UT spokeswoman, said misdemeanor charges of disruptive activity were filed against the invaders by university police.

Campus officials said that in addition to the criminal charges, which are misdemeanors, administrative disciplinary penalties will be sought against students who were arrested. Fourteen were identified as students, two as former students and two as non-students.

"We do think that what they did was an extremely serious thing and ought not to be taken lightly, either in the disciplinary or the criminal proceedings," said Ronald Brown, UT vice president for student affairs. The disciplinary penalties could include expulsion.

The Daily Texan, the student daily newspaper, said one officer was treated for a cut on the leg, received when he kicked in the glass door.

Cunningham was not in the office at the time.

"It was all very non-violent," Ms. Pole said.

After the arrests, other students continued demonstrations at several places on the campus.

Several persons dipped their hands in red paint and placed their palm prints on the UT main building of white stone.

The university issued a statement saying: "Demands were issued (by those in the office) for the UT System of Regents to take action by Wednesday Oct. 22 to divest investments in South Africa."

Jury should hear about bugging case

AUSTIN (AP) - Results of an investigation into alleged bugging of a Bill Clements campaign aide should be presented to a grand jury soon, says the agent in charge of the Austin FBI office.

Agent Byron Sage said he is "very confident" the case can reach the grand jury before the Nov. 4 election.

"We're still plugging along in a very specific direction," Sage said Monday.

Clements, Texas' first Republican governor in 100 years, is challenging incumbent Gov. Mark White, the Democrat who ousted him after a single term in 1982.

Both candidates have denied any knowledge of the bugging.

Authorities questioned aides in both campaigns, along with at least one newspaper reporter. Sage said authorities have begun giving lie detector tests to some people, although he declined to be specific.

The investigation began Oct. 5, when an electronic listening device was discovered behind a picture in the office of Karl Rove, an Austin-based political consultant working as chief strategist for the Clements' campaign.

While Clements' campaign officials didn't blame anyone specifically for planting the matchbook-sized bug, they did say their opponent would have the most to gain.

But Mark McKinnon, press secretary for White, said the Democrat's campaign is blameless. He voiced hope Monday that the case is solved quickly.

"We know that nobody associated with the Mark White campaign had anything to do with the matter, and that would leave only one other conclusion," McKinnon said.

Sun, wind, not hurting ozone

WASHINGTON (AP) - Whatever is causing protective ozone to disappear over the South Pole, it probably isn't the sun and the wind, according to scientists on the frozen continent.

They said Monday they believe a chemical process is behind the puzzling, recently discovered drop in ozone concentrations every October. But they are not ready to blame man-made chemicals yet.

The Antarctic discoveries, confirmed earlier this year, set off a flurry of scientific and governmental activity because ozone is necessary to support life as we know it, and the "hole" was the first concrete evidence of damage to the ozone layer despite more than a decade of warnings from some scientists.

The ozone drop, says, is to be occurring over the North Pole, another study has shown.

The formation of ozone - a pollutant at ground level - by ultraviolet rays high in the atmosphere keeps most of those rays from reaching the surface of the Earth, where they could be deadly to some life forms. The Environmental Protection Agency estimates that each one percent decline in ozone at high altitudes means 200,000 more skin cancers around the globe every year.

In a telephone hookup from the U.S. base at McMurdo Sound to a news conference sponsored by the National Science Foundation, Susan Solomon, leader of a special expedition to study the October ozone drop in Antarctica, said she was "more concerned" than she had been before the expedition, because science has been "unable to come up with an explanation."

But she said her group believes it can rule out two theories put forward to compete with the chemical theory.

U.S. weighs expulsion of Soviets

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Reagan administration is nearing a decision to retaliate for the expulsion of five U.S. diplomats from Moscow on spying charges, U.S. officials say.

A meeting was held Monday at the White House. Among the measures considered was the expulsion of Soviet diplomats from their embassy here, said U.S. officials who declined to be identified.

An announcement is expected shortly, perhaps as early as today.

Another 25 Soviets who were working at the U.N. mission in New York were identified as intelligence agents last month and ordered to leave. The Soviets responded Sunday by accusing the five Americans of "impermissible activities" and giving them until Oct. 31 to depart from Moscow.

Usually, the two sides cool down after a round of expulsions. But the Reagan administration considers kicking out the Soviets in New York a separate issue.

Administration arms specialists also met Monday at the White House to put the finishing touches on a new package of proposals to present to Soviet negotiators in Geneva.

The proposals include a ban on U.S. and Soviet intermediate range nuclear missiles in Europe and a pledge to uphold the 1972 Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty for 10 years, U.S. officials said.

The administration is proceeding on the basis of diplomatic hints from Moscow that the Soviets are willing to work out weapons reduction agreements despite their objections to "Star Wars," the U.S. strategic defense program.

Discussion of nuclear arms control measures broke down at the Iceland summit meeting Oct. 12 after Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev tried to hold Star Wars research to the laboratory.

His position was that testing and deployment of lasers, X-rays and other exotic technology is prohibited by the treaty since the intent would be to mount a defense against missiles.

really made an impact." She explained that he was sent to Vernon where he is now a volunteer who works at a job and helps others at the center with problems like himself.

The adult probation officer said hot check offenders, another common offense for probation, are nearly impossible to cure. For these offenders a money management course is offered along with the probated sentence.

"Everybody makes a choice," said Simons. "They make their own choice and if they do good, they get credit for it and if they do bad—they get the blame.

"I've signed my name, too, on the contract, I've told them what to do and whether they do it or not is up to them," she said.

Duffy views her job in the same way but with different laws to go by. Her caseload fluctuates.

Juvenile probationers in Deaf Smith County average 10 referrals per month.

"I can deal with these offenders in three ways," said Duffy. "I can counsel and release them, you know, give them a little scare. I can give them an informal probation which is an agreement between the officer, the parents, and the child, or I can recommend formal probation which means the child has to have an attorney and goes through the judicial system."

Duffy explained that an informal probation has conditions just the same as if the child had gone to court. This kind of probation usually lasts up to six months.

When the child has to go through the judicial system, the probated period can last either six to 12 months or the court can have the child committed to the Texas Youth Commission.

Another alternative for Duffy is to look at the juvenile's environment.

"A lot of times we find that these kids need to get out of the house, that they don't get along with the parents, that there's not enough structure in the home, that the parents lack supervision, or that the parents can't control the child anymore. In these cases we feel like the child needs to be placed in another environment."

Duffy said she usually uses the Buckner's Home, run by the Baptist Church in Amarillo, and homes in Lubbock and Dalhart. "I'm also using Texas Boys Ranch in Lubbock and Girls Town in Whiteface." She has four children in placement right now who are not on any kind of probation.

Duffy explained that her job is to follow the child "all the way through the first referral, all the way through the court proceedings, until some kind of disposition is resolved."

Presently, Duffy is dealing with 18 kids pending court for judgment mostly on motor vehicle or business burglaries.

Other juvenile crimes include criminal mischief such as slashing tires and spray painting walls.

"We can't put kids in jail as of Dec. 8, 1985," said Duffy. "Federal law prohibits incarceration of a juvenile in an adult facility."

Duffy said goes through Potter County Juvenile Detention Center. "And in order to get a child that has committed a crime detained we have to go through a detention hearing," she said. The detention hearing is held in the justice of the peace court.

"The justice of the peace has to release the child unless she finds that he or she is likely to leave," explained Duffy.

Other reasons a child might be placed in detention is that suitable care or supervision is not being provided, the juvenile has no parent or guardian, or the child has committed a felony.

"Potter County is very strict about what kind of kids they accept," Duffy said. She said the detention center also charges Deaf Smith County $75 a day and detention lasts for 10 days. After the 10-day detention the child is released or goes before a judge again.

As of Oct. 15, Duffy will now be able to place juveniles in the Lubbock County Youth Center for $40 a day and guaranteed bed space. This center also offers temporary shelter, long-term (up to 12 months) detention, and better counseling services.

Duffy explained that because of the benefits of the Lubbock Youth Center, she will not be using the Potter County Juvenile Detention Center unless there is no space at the Lubbock Center.

Other differences between juvenile and adult probation include the maximum length of juvenile detention being one year. "Also, my kids report in once a week," said Duffy. "The biggest difference is that we can't put our probationers in jail. So we use a lot of resources like the Family Services Center."

"I work closely with the schools making sure they attend classes and the police department keeps a list of all the kids that are on probation. They advise me if they see kids out and about," said Duffy. She explained that the police officer takes the initial report and refers it to the juvenile peace officer.

If the child has committed a minor offense (runaways, truants) the juvenile peace officer counsel and releases the child right then. More serious crimes are referred to the Justice of the Peace.

"Right now our juvenile referrals are up tremendously," said Duffy, "since 1984—it's doubled."

Psychotic chimps

DEAR ANN LANDERS: You frequently mention in your column that most problems have more than one side. This is true of the letter about the Norfolk, Va., zoo's attempt to place their two "crazed" chimpanzees in a private psychiatric center in Texas.

For 10 years I sent my university anthropology classes to the Norfolk zoo to observe the primates there. Chunky and Judy are spectacular, if tragic, examples of what happens when wild animals are raised in human homes.

Behavior considered cute when the animals were small becomes dangerous as they grow to maturity. These chimps were given to the Norfolk City zoo when their owners no longer could control them in their home.

I examined Chunky and Judy while they were under sedation. They are healthy animals and have every chance to live a normal life span. Despite the proper environment provided by the zoo, the presence of humans around the cage triggered increasingly violent behavior.

Chunky and Judy threw food and feces at the public and then turned on each other. When Chunky beat up on Judy and her her badly, it became apparent that they were no longer fit to be on public display.

Institutions such as zoos, museums and parks have a responsibility not only to provide the public with educational experiences, but to oversee the safety and well-being of the animals in their care. In the case of Chunky and Judy, that responsibility meant removing them from public view.

The Norfolk City Zoo Board chose the only humane alternative.—D.K. ABBASS, Ph.D., ANTHROPOLOGIST

DEAR DR. ABBASS: Thank you for clearing up all questions about the psychotic chimps. There is no doubt that the Norfolk Zoo Board acted in the best interest of all concerned.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: In response to the writer who resented a stranger's suggestion to "smile" on his way to visit a sick friend in the hospital, I wish to offer a strikingly similar set of circumstances with a very different reaction:

During the long and familiar drive to visit my terminally ill mother, I was feeling guilty about leaving my small children in someone else's care while I made those daily treks to the hospital. I parked the car and entered the hospital, still deep in thought. I didn't notice the older gentleman who shared the elevator with me until he said, softly, "You're not going to visit a sick person with THAT face, are you? Smile, for heaven's sake!"

I resented his intrusion but managed to force a smile. Suddenly I felt my facial muscles loosen and I became relaxed. I hope I thanked him because I was grateful that he prevented me from presenting "such a face" to my dying mother.

Today, 20 years later, when I feel myself getting tense, I think of the man in the elevator and he STILL makes me smile. What a gift from a stranger!—FOREVER GRATEFUL IN OHIO

DEAR OHIO: There is a lesson there for all of us. Sometimes, a smile when we least feel like it can have a healing effect. Try it. It works.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My nephew is a clergyman. We asked him to perform the ceremony when our daughter marries. How should we pay him? If we weren't related we would send a check. Should we do so anyway?—CANADIAN DILEMMA

DEAR DIL: No check. Send a gift.

Is pot a drug? Can LSD, PCP, cocaine and pills open new worlds for you? Stop guessing. Get the facts in Ann Landers' all-new booklet, "The Lowdown on Dope." For each booklet ordered, send $2.00, plus a long, self-addressed envelope (39 cents postage) to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611.

Wyche Extension members assemble

"It isn't the club, it's you" was the opening exercise given by Louise Packard when members of Wyche Extension Homemakers Club met recently in her home.

In the absence of the president, vice president Packard conducted the business meeting. Club members repeated the TEHA creed and roll call was answered by "What I contributed to the club last year."

The council delegate report was given by Esther Thuett, and Clara Trowbridge reported attending the annual Health Fair and taking several tests.

Louise Axe, Carol Odom, Pet Ott and Laverne Worley attended the birthday party given by the club for its adopted grandmother, Maude Richards, who celebrated her 95th birthday Oct. 10 at Westgate Nursing Home.

Packard introduced Mrs. Thuett who presented a book review on "The Wind" by Dorothy Scarborough, one of the books recommended for reading during the sesquicentennial year.

Preserve with rare plants, birds surrounded by development

DALLAS (AP) — A pristine enclave of wilderness just 20 minutes from downtown Dallas may be the last and only hope for a variety of birds and plants that naturalists are sheltering from the stampede of urban progress.

The Greenhills Environmental Center, a 500-acre natural preserve, already is surrounded by development and volunteers are stalking nearby fields, often just in front of bulldozers, to rescue rare plants about to be shredded into oblivion.

"We are really on the threshold of an explosion out here," said David Donohue, a Greenhills staff member. "We are surrounded by land in development."

Over the next few years, officials expect more than 15,000 acres of White Rock Escarpment lands surrounding the environmental center to be developed with houses and businesses. At that point, Greenhills will be the last significant parcel left in its natural state.

The preserve is the final retreat for rare plants like the White Troutlily, the Spring Coral-Root and the Texas

Purplespike, specimens that only recently have been identified.

Greenhills also is one of the last nesting grounds for the Black-capped Vireo, a rare bird that has attracted the interest, and concern, of the Smithsonian Institute and the National Audubon Society.

But it's the still undiscovered rarities that most concern Dr. Geoffrey Stanford, the Greenhills director.

"We are literally getting out to fields to be developed just ahead of the bulldozers and saving some rare plants," said Stanford. "This year, we discovered two orchids never before described in North Texas. Before, they were known in the state only in the Big Bend. This is an important scientific discovery."

The plants are being brought into the Greenhills preserve where Stanford and others hope they will thrive.

For now, the Greenhills workers are winning the battle against progress, but Stanford said development of land around the center in the next decade will pose trespassing and noise problems.

"With the city coming in, we need more fence work," he said. "Management problems will only increase. They are happening already."

The core of Greenhills, ironically, is on 27 acres of land donated in 1975 by Dallas developer Dave Fox. That original preserve was enlarged with 300 acres purchased by the city of Dallas, and 42 acres of Dallas County land added on the south.

"The land to the south of here is original cedar breaks," said Stanford. "We also have vestiges of native tall-grass prairie here. One type of rare Indiangrass I rescued from in front of a bulldozer."

Stanford said the center's conservation activity also includes teaching students from area schools about North Texas plants and animals and running a nursery for plants threatened with extinction.

"We are acting as a propagation center for some of these rare and threatened plants, and I am distributing them both to homeowners in the area and worldwide. An Australian park asked us to send them some seeds," he said. "Our mission is to get them back in use."

About 55,000 people visited Greenhills last year, compared with 34,000 in 1984, said Stanford. He said 65,000 to 75,000 were expected to visit this year.

"Just 20 minutes from downtown Dallas, you can come out here and, seemingly, be in the middle of nowhere," said Donohue. "These 500 or so acres will be a lasting tribute for our natural legacy."

Stanford, a physician who has studied botany, said he feels his work as a naturalist is just another form of the healing arts.

"I am doing my medical work on future generations by preserving for them open space, and native plants and animals," he said.

Ministers gather for rally

AUSTIN (AP) — "God is head of the church, not government," said a picket sign carried by followers of the Rev. W.N. Otwell, who has refused to get a state license for his church child care schools.

The signs were paraded up and down in front of the Capitol Monday and were due back today for a scheduled rally of fundamentalist followers from throughout the state.

About a dozen local supporters of Otwell, who fled the state to escape a contempt of court order, appeared Monday, led by Hank Thompson, minister of the Capital City Baptist Church.

"Repent, retire or be removed," said another picket sign in obvious reference to Otwell's troubled with

Attorney General Jim Mattox.

Mattox and Otwell are engaged in a dispute over the licensing of a boys' home in Fort Worth run by Otwell's Community Baptist Church. Last Friday, law officers raided the home Friday to take custody of any boys at the home but failed to find any.

"Mattox said when he raided the home he was going to take everyone on that property, take our kids and put them in foster homes and going to take all of us and put us in jail," Thompson said.

A court hearing is scheduled Wednesday in Austin on Mattox's motion to permanently close the home because Otwell will not get a state license.

Thompson said the ministers coming for the rally planned to stay over for the Wednesday hearing.

Central Texas man keeps alive legend

HICO, Texas (AP) — Forget the legend. Billy the Kid died in 1950 of a heart attack.

Kid, Hefner says, but most just wrote it off at the time as "talk."

His tiny print shop entitled "The Kid Legend of Billy the Kid" just in time for Hico's 100th Old Settlers Reunion earlier this year.

along." The legend of Billy the Kid's death goes like this: Billy escaped from a Lincoln, N.M., jail in April 1881, killing two deputies. The Kid's former friend, Pat Garrett, sheriff of Lincoln County, N.M., and two deputies tracked him to the home of Pete Maxwell in Fort Sumner, N.M.

romantic farce designed to sell dime novels and movies. "The Kid was not an outlaw. He didn't rob banks or stagecoaches," Hefner contends. "He never had a stand-up shootout. He didn't fast draw his gun. In the biggest shoot-out he ever had, he stood behind an adobe wall."

Downed not by bullets, but by old age, right in front of the old Hico News Review in downtown Hico.

Hefner, who returned to his roots in Hico nine years ago to escape the Dallas bustle and become the only elected Republican in the county, said his curiosity piqued the more he heard talk around town about the man who claimed to be the Kid.

He talked to Hico folks who had known "Brushy Bill" and pored over newspaper clippings and the few documents he could find. The result is a booklet Hefner published in

On July 14, 1881, legend says, Garrett shot Billy the Kid dead in Maxwell's bedroom. But Hefner quotes one of the deputies as saying, "Pat Garrett, you have killed the wrong man."

Hefner said his research shows the Kid may have been guilty of cattle rustling and the slayings of two deputies as he escaped from jail in Lincoln, but little more.

He said the Kid's granddaughter in Missouri wrote him after receiving his booklet and asked "What's the big deal? We knew this all

Whether or not "Brushy Bill" was Billy the Kid, Hefner acknowledges that he wants the Kid's mystique to turn a spotlight on this tiny community 180 miles northwest of Waco which relies on ranching and dairy farming.

Hefner believes not. He's more inclined to believe that the death was a ruse, designed to allow Billy to escape from the public eye. It's more likely, he says, that a derelict was buried in the Kid's place.

No birth certificate for Billy the Kid has been found. Within a year after his "death" at the age of 21, the Kid was romanticized into an outlaw hero who had killed at least 21 men, Hefner said.

"I'm practical enough that I'd like to bring this around to where Hico could enjoy a little tourism off this," he said. "I kind of daydream about a museum and maybe a statue in the park."

Contractors bidding lower for work

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Streets, sewers and parks are costing cities less as a result of the slumping Texas economy, officials say.

engineer. "We attribute that to the economy more than anything else."

The economic slump means fierce competition among contractors, resulting in lower bids for municipal projects.

Dick Perkins, a partner in the Fort Worth engineering consulting firm Teague Nall and Perkins, said his company has seen a 20 to 25 percent drop in project costs in the last nine months in the Dallas-Fort Worth area.

Kurt Schnellenbach, Arlington public works director, said the lower bids allow cities to do more projects than they had planned, but contractors aren't making any money on the work.

"Rather than closing their doors, contractors are bidding pretty much at cost," Perkins said.

"It's a good news-bad news situation," he said. Arlington in January awarded a $3.5 million contract to build Green Oaks Boulevard south of Interstate 20, nearly $1 million lower than what city officials expected the project to cost.

In Mansfield, officials four months ago got a low bid of $740,000 for a water line that they anticipated would cost $860,000 to build.

Officials last year estimated an $18.2 million cost for 22 street projects. But when the bids were opened, the cost was $16.7 million.

"There's a competitive market out there," said Chris Burkett, the Mansfield city engineer. "It's been a pleasant surprise."

Officials believed the Green Oaks project would cost $4.37 million. When five bids were opened in January, none were higher than the estimate. The lowest two bids were $1,000 apart.

The low bid for improvements on the Mansfield water treatment plant was $4.7 million, $900,000 less than what city officials had expected.

"That tells you they're cutting to the bone," said Ronald Sullivan, assistant city and is generally more expensive.

Man faces life in prison in pepper choking death of boy

HOUSTON (AP) — A 26-year-old man faces up to life in prison after being convicted of forcing ground pepper down the throat of his girlfriend's 2-year-old son, who later died.

after he had repeated a bad word. Upon returning, Coffey told police he found brown and gray stuff coming out of the child's mouth. The boy's face was purple, the statement said.

Prosecutors say the May 7 death of Christopher Kalmbach is one of the cruelest they have seen.

Emergency room personnel at Parkway General Hospital testified that the child was not breathing when Coffey brought him to the hospital.

The judge held the boy's mother, Patty Ann Kalmbach, 21, in contempt of court for refusing to identify her son in one of the photos shown to jurors.

She also refused to testify against Coffey, despite the judge's ruling that her testimony would not be used against her in her upcoming trial. She also is charged with injury to a child.

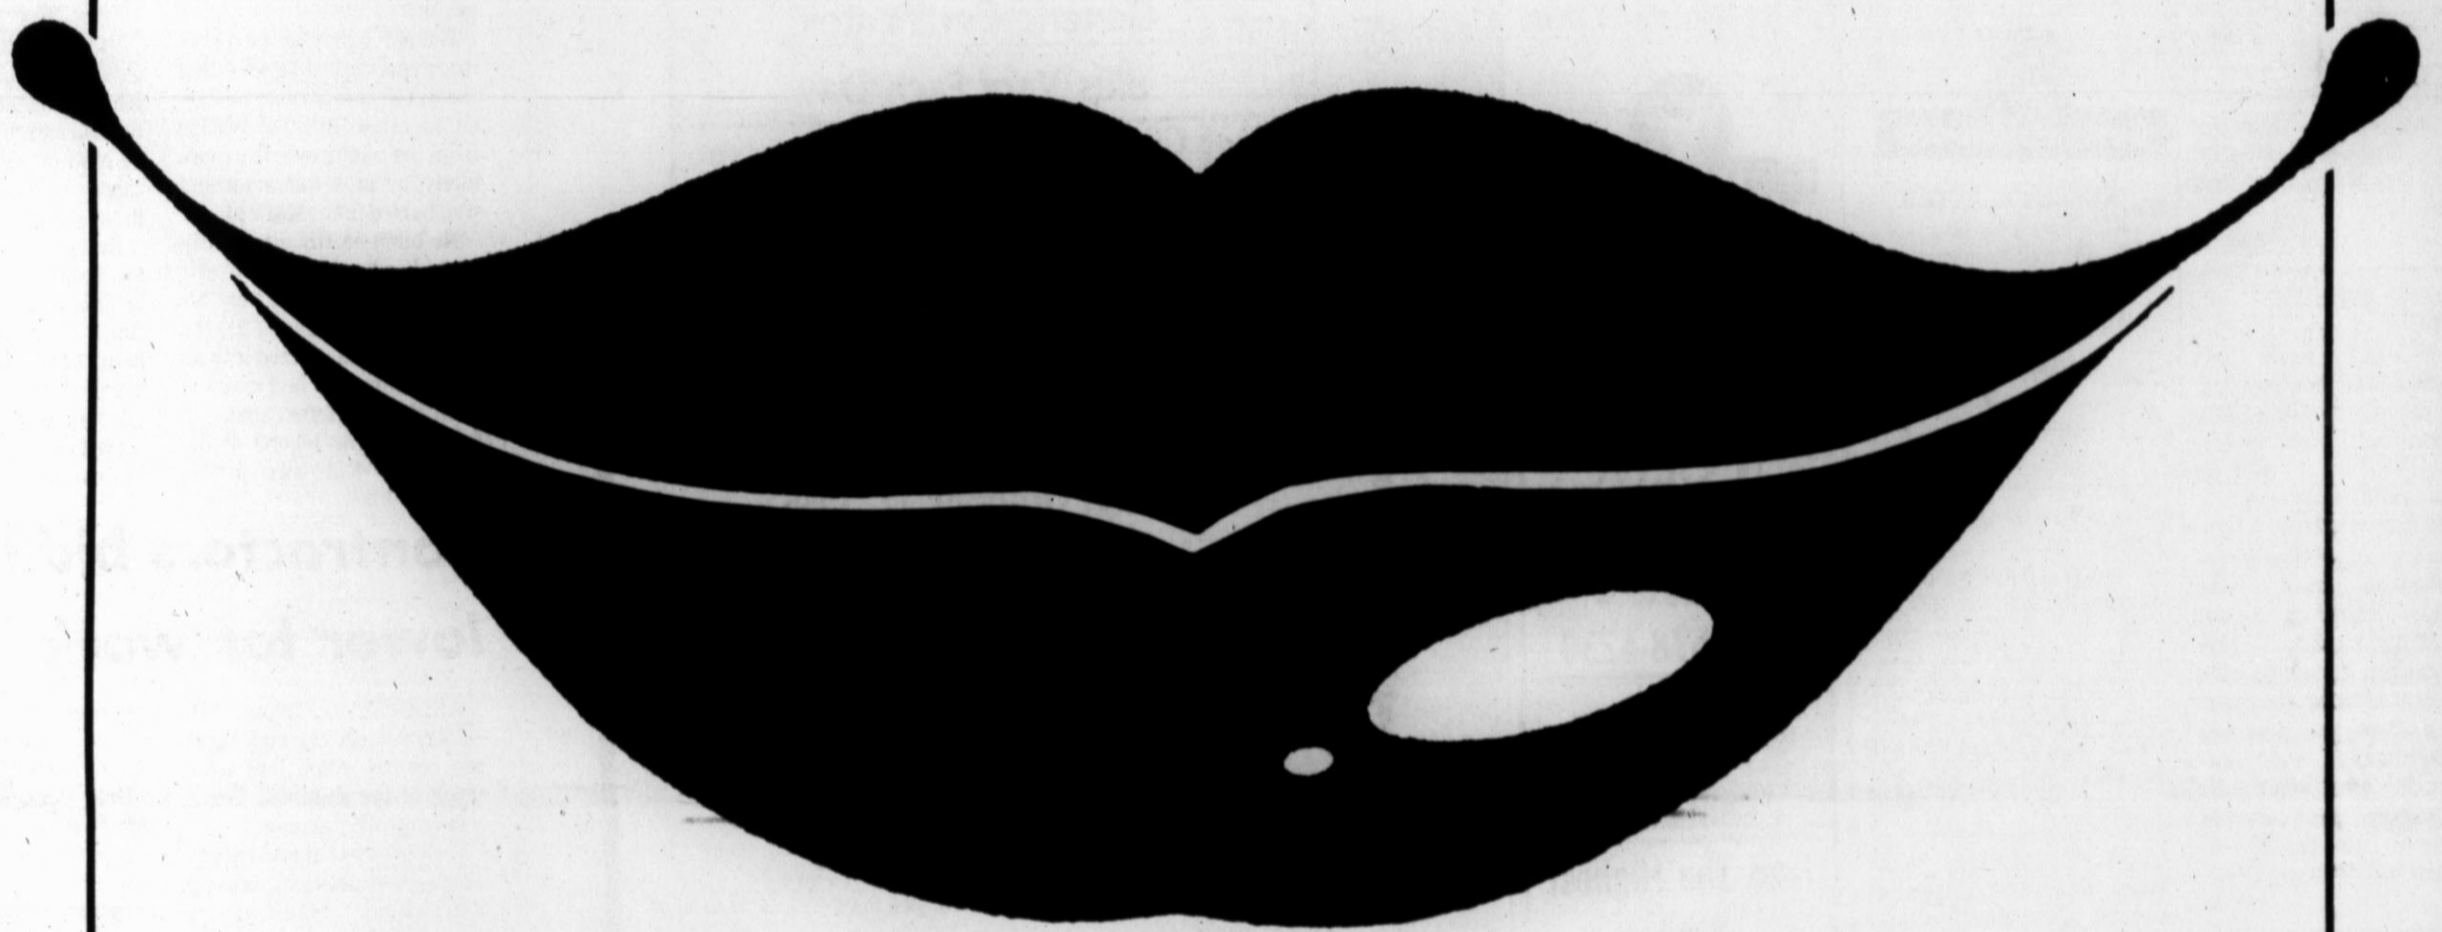

In a police statement read to the jury, Coffey told police he often used pepper to discipline the boy, but contended that the child took the pepper himself the night he choked to death.

Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev shattered the decorum of a 1960 U.N. General Assembly meeting by pounding on his desk with his shoe.

Coffey told police he left the pepper shaker with the boy
