

Trade deficit narrowed slightly in Sept.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's merchandise trade deficit narrowed slightly in September to $12.6 billion, the second consecutive monthly decline, the government reported today.

The September gap between imports and exports followed a $13.3 billion deficit in August, down from a record $18 billion shortfall in July. September's figures were the lowest deficit since a $12.1 billion imbalance last April.

Still, the deficit so far this year including the September figures has been running at an annual rate of $170.5 billion — far above last year's record $148.5 billion deficit.

Economists have predicted that the trade deficit would begin to improve soon as declines in the value of the U.S. dollar begin making imported goods more expensive — and thus less competitive with domestic products.

The fact that the deficit has now declined for two back-to-back months may be viewed by some economists as a sign that the long-awaited turnaround may at last be beginning.

Imports in September totaled $30.1

billion, down from the $30.9 billion in August.

Exports totaled $17.5 billion, down from the $17.6 billion during August.

As usual, the largest single deficit was with Japan, $4.1 billion in September, but that was down from the $4.7 billion of the previous month.

Helping to narrow the gap with Japan was a reduction in automobile imports — $1.5 billion in September against $1.8 billion in August.

The United States in September ran a $1.8 billion deficit with Western Europe, $1.5 billion with Canada and $1.5 billion with Taiwan.

For manufactured goods, the United States ran a deficit of $10.5 billion — down from the $12.1 billion of August.

It was the lowest deficit in manufactured goods since a $10.4

billion shortfall in April.

The United States did run a surplus on agricultural trade of $138 million in September, up from the $132 million of August that had followed three months of deficits in farm trade.

Oil imports increased in September, to $3.1 billion from $2.6 billion the previous month.

Texas one of only 5 states to cut higher education

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas is one of only five states that cut higher education appropriations for this school year and ranks next-to-last in how well it treated colleges and universities compared with two years ago.

Those were among the findings in an annual survey published Wednesday in the Chronicle of Higher Education.

Higher education leaders in Texas said the survey under-reported the state's appropriations, and they cautioned that the diverse funding methods among the states can make comparisons difficult, if not impossible.

But they do not dispute that the state has one of the poorest showings in the degree to which support for higher education has increased or decreased since 1984.

"I don't think there is any question that Texas is at the bottom in terms of support for higher education," Kenneth Ashworth, Texas commissioner of higher education, told the Austin American-Statesman.

"Unfortunately, (the survey) is accurate on that," he added. "But there is a dispute over the magnitude of the problem."

University of Texas President William Cunningham said he had expected the survey to show Texas at the bottom in the amount of support relative to two years ago and said that "makes it much harder for us to recruit the outstanding faculty."

"This is the second year in a row that we've been listed as either 49th or 50th in increased support for higher education," Cunningham said. "We cannot build a world-class university with this pattern of funding."

The annual survey, compiled since the late 1950s by the Illinois State University Center for Higher Education, is one of several regular national studies that help form public opinion on how well states support colleges and universities.

The survey is widely quoted — and widely debated — by higher education officials across the country, and the Chronicle accompanied the survey results with an article cautioning that the numbers can be interpreted in many ways.

Texas appropriations for the 1986-87 school year are listed in the survey as $2.14 billion, the third-highest dollar amount of state appropriations. According to the survey, that figure represents a 9 percent decline from the level of state support two years ago, leaving Texas 49th on a list that compares current and past support.

The Chronicle noted that the Texas figures do not take into account budget cuts approved by this year's special legislative sessions.

Ashworth said the reported 9 percent cut in the original appropriations is misleading, apparently a result of the survey counting only the Legislature's general revenue appropriations each year. He said the original figure for 1986-87 was actually $2.98 billion if all sources of state funding are counted.

The higher figure includes tuition revenue, a special contingency fund for schools that brought in less tuition than expected, and money from other special funds and income sources.

The $2.98 billion does not include local support for junior colleges, which get about one-third of their budgets from local taxes, Ashworth said.

The survey indicates that Maine increased appropriations the most from 1984 to 1986, boosting the level of support 37 percent. New Hampshire, Nevada, Arizona and Massachusetts had the next highest percentage increases.

Jury mulling sentence for murder

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — Prosecutors failed in their attempt to link a man convicted in the 1985 slaying of a Fort Worth cocktail waitress with a woman's murder earlier last year in California.

Benjamin Herbert Boyle, 43, was convicted Tuesday of capital murder in the rape, kidnapping and strangulation of Gail Lenore Smith, 20, of Fort Worth, whose nude, bound body was found along U.S. 287 north of Amarillo on Oct. 15, 1985.

The jury was to hear evidence today to decide if Boyle should be put to death by injection or sent to prison for life.

Prosecutors attempted Wednesday to offer a single textile fiber that would have linked Boyle to a homicide in California if it had been allowed into evidence during punishment testimony before the jury. The fiber testimony from a California officer was presented Wednesday to the presiding judge out of the presence of the jury.

However, State District Judge Don Emerson decided not to allow evidence that Boyle may have been involved in the slaying of a woman identified only as "Jane Doe" found dead June 21, 1985 in Truckee, Calif. But testimony will be admitted from a woman Boyle pleaded guilty to attempting to kidnap in Colorado in October, 1979.

In the absence of the jury, prosecutors brought forth evidence Wednesday from officials in Truckee who investigated the "Jane Doe" homicide a year ago. "Jane Doe" is a term detectives use for a woman's body that hasn't been identified.

Jurors convict woman of assault

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — Jurors convicted a woman on all six counts of aggravated sexual assault and indecency with a child in incidents involving three of her young students at an El Paso YMCA day-care center.

The jury handed down its verdict Wednesday and was to deliberate today on the punishment for Gayle Stickler Dove, 42. She faces up to life in prison on each of the three aggravated assault counts and 20 years on each of the indecency charges.

Parents who packed State District Judge Sam Callan's courtroom to hear the verdict were admonished by Assistant District Attorney Debra Kanof to show no emotion before jurors.

The parents, some of them weeping, filed from the courtroom and headed directly for the witness room, where they remained until Mrs. Dove left the courthouse.

Neither videotaped interviews with the abused children or the youths themselves were brought into the courtroom.

Such videotapes were used in the March trial of Mrs. Dove's co-defendant, Michelle Noble, who was found guilty and sentenced to life in prison.

"Motive has been shown to you. You know what's going on here," Ms. Kanof said. "We have mean and vicious people here molesting children and they're smart."

Because of the extensive media coverage of Noble's trial in El Paso, Mrs. Dove's trial was moved to Amarillo.

Remains laid to rest after 14 years

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Elizabeth Castillo raised six children alone for 14 years while awaiting word of her husband, who was shot down over Laos in 1972.

Air Force Lt. Col. Richard Castillo finally returned. He was buried in Fort Sam Houston National Cemetery Wednesday with full military honors.

"It's both sorrow and joy," Mrs. Castillo said. "Sorrow that he's gone, but joy that he's finally home."

Castillo was a infrared sensor operator on a AC-130 Spectre gunship shot down by a surface-to-air missile over Savannakhet Province, Laos. He was one of a crew of 14, all of whom were lost.

"If it weren't for men like Richard, the world would not be like it is today," said Monsignor Mark Deering, who celebrated Mass at Randolph Air Force Base Chapel No. 1.

Representatives from Missing In Action-Prisoner Of War organizations all over Texas, including the Alamo Area Vietnam Veterans, attended the funeral. Some came in uniform; others wore badges proclaiming their affiliations.

"Richard was a good family man," the monsignor said. "He had dedication and loyalty to the flag which we all love."

Mrs. Castillo was left alone with six children — the youngest was almost 2 and the oldest was 9 when their father left — never knowing if her husband was dead or alive.

The Air Force declared Castillo dead in 1979, but offered no proof. Mrs. Castillo, who did not believe he was dead, never remarried.

Many smokers favor tobacco ad ban

CHICAGO (AP) — Six of 10 Americans, including many smokers, favor banning tobacco advertising from magazines, newspapers and billboards, a new survey by the American Medical Association indicates.

In a telephone poll of 1,510 adults, 64 percent supported a ban on tobacco advertising, while 29 percent opposed one, the AMA reported Wednesday.

Among smokers polled, the ban was favored by 48 percent and opposed by 46 percent, perhaps the most surprising result, said Dr. Robert McAfee, an AMA trustee from Portland, Maine.

"What they're saying is, 'Yeah, I smoke ... but let's not have others be exposed to this addiction,'" McAfee said in a telephone interview Wednesday.

Seventy-one percent of non-smokers said they would support a ban, while 23 percent opposed it. The random sample poll was conducted in May and June.

Tobacco advertising is banned from television and radio. The survey tried to gauge attitudes about extending the ban to all advertising, including newspapers, magazines and billboards, McAfee said.

Argentina, Britain squabble

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Argentina and Britain both promised to use force if necessary to assert what they claim to be their rights to waters around the Falkland Islands, the scene of a war between the two countries in 1982.

Britain on Wednesday declared a 200-mile fishing zone around the islands, which it retook from Argentine occupation forces after a 10-week battle that killed about 1,000 men.

Argentine President Raul Alfonsin rejected the British move as a provocation and an encroachment on Argentine sovereignty.

The Falklands sit about 300 miles off the southern Argentine coast. The new British fishing zone, which previously was three miles, overlaps Argentine territorial waters.

Alfonsin, after meeting Wednesday with government and military leaders, said Britain's declaration would "cause serious tensions and conflicts, with consequences as yet unforeseeable."

Sandinistas present evidence

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — A revolutionary tribunal today weighed prosecution evidence against U.S. mercenary Eugene Hasenfus, ranging from what Nicaragua says is a card giving him access to a military base in El Salvador to an Arkansas fishing license.

Sandinista prosecutor Ivan Villavicencio handed evidence one piece at a time Wednesday to the secretary of the People's Tribunal, made up of a lawyer, truck driver and laborer.

Villavicencio also asked the tribunal of the leftist Sandinista government to view the videocassette of an interview Hasenfus gave to the CBS program "60 Minutes."

The program, translated into Spanish, was shown on Nicaraguan television. In the interview, Hasenfus said he believed he was working for the U.S. government.

Hasenfus, a 45-year-old former Marine from Marinette, Wis., is charged with terrorism, conspiracy and violating public security. He faces up to 30 years in prison if convicted.

He parachuted from a burning C-123 cargo plane carrying arms for U.S.-backed Contra rebels when it was shot down Oct. 5. He was captured by Sandinista troops the next day in southern Nicaragua. Wallace B. Sawyer Jr. of Magnolia, Ark., American William Cooper and a third crew member, still unidentified, died in the crash.

Among the evidence introduced was a card purportedly giving Hasenfus security clearance for Ilopango military air base on the outskirts of San Salvador, El Salvador. It was numbered 4422, made out to Hasenfus and bore the Salvadoran air force emblem.

Telecourses offered through college

By DEBORAH SCHMOOK The Odessa American

ODESSA, Texas (AP) — Cindy Patton decided to go to college this fall — in front of the television in her home.

"It's my first semester back after more than 10 years," said the mother of three.

Ms. Patton is one of 66 students taking telecourses through Odessa College this semester — 40 students are taking government, 14 are taking biology and 12 are enrolled in marketing.

Clayton Alred, the college's telecourse coordinator, said most of the students are from Odessa, with six enrolled from area towns including Crane, Andrews, Monahans and Midland.

Lessons produced in California are aired on KOCV-TV and picked up by cable companies for the outlying areas, Alred said.

Ms. Patton said the tapes are repeated several times per week, which allows students to double-check their notes.

Spring telecourses will be Introduction to Management, Introduction to Psychology and State and Federal Government II, Alred said.

But the participants don't spend all their time in front of the television. Ms. Patton said they come to the college for review sessions and take examinations about every three weeks.

She said she adheres to the broadcast times for her government class. "Some people are using the VCR, but my VCR isn't working properly," she said. "I find it better this way and am more motivated to get the reading done."

But if Ms. Patton misses a lesson on television, she has the opportunity to review the tape at Odessa College's Learning Resources Center. The tapes at the center also allow students to stop them or pause them at various points.

"Yes, I'd definitely do it again. It's fit in real well," she said.

Not having to dress up to go to class is another benefit, said Ms. Patton, who also takes a history course at Odessa College while working toward a teaching degree.

Shirley Hill of Monahans, who is enrolled in the biology telecourse, receives her lessons via videocassettes from the Odessa College library, instead of on cable television that is not available where she lives.

Each cassette sent has 12 lessons, or four weeks worth, she said.

"I have a family and a job and I'm taking three courses. This way I don't have to drive to Odessa every week for the class. I go every three weeks to take the test," she said.

"I think it's a wonderful program," said Ms. Hill, who is working toward a teaching degree. "I never gave up my dream of getting a college education."

Mid-management instructor Clinton Forbes leads the review sessions and administers tests for the marketing course. He said telecourse classes are more demanding for professors than regular classes.

"It's a lot easier to stand in front of a class and teach a group than to keep 12 individuals close to the same pace," Forbes said.

Don Huff, dean of science and health who supervises the biology telecourse, agreed.

"It doesn't lighten the work day. I still have to prepare and I spend time individually when they have a problem," he said. "I don't think it's any easier for the instructor."

Even though well past teen years

Band members move, shake

(Editor's Note: This AP story features a senior citizens' band which was started by Mela Barela, late mother of Hereford's Dino Barela.

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Ben Gallegos plays a rope-strung wash tub. Thomas Sanchez plays a coffee percolator with a flute-like spout. Feliz Perez plays a basinet fashioned into a guitar. And Nina Gallegos conducts them all with a big spoon.

It's another concert of Mela's Kitchen Band.

Mrs. Gallegos described a typical musical rendition of the most untypical group: "We make a lot of noise and we move and shake."

The band made up of 15 senior citizens began about 10 years ago when a club for the elderly at an Albuquerque Catholic church was entertained by an out-of-town kitchen band.

One of the club members, Mela Barela, decided people here could do the same thing.

From that spur-of-the-moment start, the kitchen band has gone on to bigger and better things. It has performed at the New Mexico State Fair and at rest homes, senior citizens centers and clubs throughout the Albuquerque area, as well as in Denver, San Antonio, Texas, and Nogales, Ariz. In Arizona the group was so well received the Nogales senior citizens started their own kitchen band.

A popular instrument is a cheese grater played with a fork. Then there's the juice maker, which can be played with "a spoon or knife or whatever the notion," Mrs. Gallegos said.

One member beats on a frying pan lid with a spoon. It is an instrument that arose by default.

"The lid fit around what the lady believed was a waterless cooker," Mrs. Gallegos explained. "She ruined it and all she had left is a lid."

The band actually doesn't make all the music itself. Tapes of popular songs, mostly waltzes and polkas, are played while the band members beat out the tune.

"Polkas are the favorite," Mrs. Gallegos said. "Some people like to dance. If there is space, they dance. We were on stage at the Spanish Village (at the state fair) and they were dancing down on the pavilion."

The band has played at the state fair for the past five or six years.

Mrs. Gallegos favors a march traditionally used to lead newlyweds into a reception hall after a wedding. She sometimes gets away from her conducting chores to lead a march, especially when the group performs at senior citizens centers.

"I go slow so they can join in," she said.

All the band members themselves are senior citizens. Both Nina and Ben Gallegos — the parents of five and grandparents of 14 — celebrated their 70th birthdays this summer.

"We're very active," Mrs. Gallegos said. "Whether you feel like it or not, you know you have to keep an appointment. We've been pretty active, pretty healthy, too."

Gallegos took over directing the group five years ago because Mrs. Barela was in ill health. She died last year, but the band has kept on.

"We still participate in her honor," Mrs. Gallegos said.

After cowboy fashion craze

Industry soft, but still recovering

By DORALISA PILARTE Associated Press Writer

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — When the Urban Cowboy fashion craze rode off into the sunset, it apparently went barefooted because left behind was a strong hankering for boots, the footwear of the West.

Boots are enjoying an enduring popularity in markets far beyond the Southwest, where the cowboy footgear is not a fashion, but a tradition. New markets are arising in the Northeast and Midwest, and industry watchers believe the boot is making a comeback.

Boots were an integral part of the western wear look made famous by the John Travolta-Debra Winger movie hit "Urban Cowboy." The fad faded, and many people hung up their Stetson hats and retired the wide belt with the big buckle. But they kept wearing the boots.

"In the Urban Cowboy era, you strolled out in a costume. That was very short-lived," said Frank Scivetti, vice president for sales and marketing of the Justin Boot Co., a division of the Fort Worth-based Justin Industries. "Now it's not uncommon for a man in a three-piece suit to be wearing a pair of boots."

Justin Industries, a conglomerate which also owns Nocona Boot Co., is one of the recognized leaders in the high-quality, handcrafted share of the bootmaking trade. Its biggest competitor is Tony Lama Co., Inc., an El Paso family business that grew up to become a corporation with shares traded on the New York Stock Exchange.

Justin and Tony Lama both limped through a sales decline starting three years ago, but executives of the companies believe better days are ahead. "I think we're in the upswing," said Frank Tisdale, a member of the Tony Lama board of directors.

Lama now employs 850 people and had $67 million in sales in 1985. Ninety percent of the firm's business is boots, but it also sells belts, wallets and other leather products.

The golden age for the two companies were the western wear boom years of 1980-82. The firms both hired armies of workers and Justin added Nocona to its holdings. Hard-pressed to keep up demand, both Justin and Tony Lama also built new plants in El Paso, the border town that is the capital of western bootery.

"It probably wasn't a very bright thing to do, in retrospect," Scivetti admits now. "We're back down to our basic market, which is substantial."

There still are 16 boot manufacturers in El Paso, but employment, which peaked at 3,300 in 1982, has stabilized at 1,300, just slightly less than the average of 10 years ago.

Hector Venegas, a labor market analyst for the Texas Employment Commission, said the Urban Cowboy fad introduced Yankees and Midwesterners to the comfort and style of boots, and many have remained loyal to the cowboy footwear. That's good news for El Paso, said Venegas.

"You've got the best ones (boot-makers) in the world right here," he said. "It's an industry that over-expanded to meet the fad and then contracted. For the moment, it's in a state of stabilization."

Venegas expects employment in the industry to increase during the final quarter of 1986 as the boot-makers brace for the Christmas demand.

Rick Savitz, vice president, controller of Justin Industries, said sales from the company's three bootmaking divisions was about $100 million in 1985.

"Our unit shipments are about the same level as last year and the company anticipates a good fall season," he said.

A hard-times economy in the Southwest, triggered by slumping energy prices, has slowed buying in the best western boot market, said Jessica Gallia, vice president of Epler, Guerin and Turner, an investment analysis firm.

"One of the reasons for the Urban Cowboy movie was because Texas was in and this was the place to be. People always love a winner," said Ms. Gallia. Now, though, she said, "The boot business is suffering from weakness in the Texas economy and weakness in the oil patch. Business is soft and it'll stay soft for a while."

But fashion watchers believe a change is coming.

Tomi Block, a spokeswoman for the National Retail Merchants Association, said denim and boots look ready to kick their way back into style.

"Cowboy boots are back again," she said. "I was just on Seventh Avenue (in Manhattan's apparel district) and about half of the boots on the displays were Western."

They included Edith Hunter and Jewell Hargrave of Cultural Club, Martha Lueb and Anna Werlein of North Hereford Club and Mona Gee from the Ford Club.

Gee read several times from "Kids Stuff" as the opening exercise.

Maudette Smith, chairman of the education committee, reported that 73 students had participated in the Health Fair Poster Contest recently. The judges awarded prizes to C.J. Kuback, a kindergarten student at Northwest; Michael Blum, student at St. Anthony's Catholic School; and Soledad Rendon from La Plata Junior High School. Honorable mention was given to Jamie Steiert at First Baptist Kindergarten.

Carol Odum, yearbook committee chairman, called a meeting at her home Nov. 11. Also, Lottie Werthenberger, finance committee chairman, reported that the council will sponsor a cake walk at the Halloween party in the Bull Barn Friday.

Sherry Blackwell, recreation committee chairman, asked that the Christmas party be held Dec. 8. The council voted in agreement.

County agent, Beverly Harder, reminded the group of the ladies program to be held in conjunction with the Vegetable Growers Convention scheduled Jan. 20 at the Hereford Community Center. This will be an all-day meeting from 9 a.m. until 3 p.m. with six speakers scheduled. Topics to be discussed include natural fibers, corn husk dolls, unusual fruits and vegetables. There will also be a catered lunch at noon.

A nominating committee of Mary Carter, Carol Odum and Mariellen Homfeld was elected to secure a slate of officers for the coming year. Their report will be made at the November council meeting.

It was announced that the Westgate Bazaar will be Nov. 15. Council voted to have a table at the event.

Members of the Ford Club served refreshments from a table decorated with a Halloween motif.

Ann Landers Should report incident

DEAR ANN LANDERS: You reach more people with one column than I could contact in a lifetime. I think my story might save many women from possible theft by security people at airports.

I put my purse on the conveyor belt and walked through a detector. On the other side, a young man started talking to me about the book I was carrying while he went through the contents of my purse. I knew I wasn't even carrying anything that might be considered a weapon but I was patient.

He finally handed me my bag and wished me a good day.

I impetuously decided to look in my wallet just to make sure I still had my money. To my horror, there wasn't a thing in it. I turned around to walk over the the same man and he was watching me. He walked toward me and handed me my money - said it had fallen out on the belt. It couldn't possibly have fallen out. My wallet was snapped shut and my purse was zipped.

I reported this man to the gate attendant, but I doubt that it did any good. She said I should write to airport security about it. Please advise for future trips, not only for my sake, but for the welfare of others - how could I have protected myself?—P. IN SOUTH CAROLINA

DEAR S. CAROLINA: Two ways. You could have removed your wallet from your purse before you put it on the conveyor belt. Or, since the airport security personnel is obligated to ask permission to go through your purse, you should have kept your eyes glued to the inspector as he went through your purse and not become distracted by small talk about a book.

I hope you took the time and trouble to return to the airport and report the incident to the top airport authority. That inspector should not be allowed to go merrily on his way ripping off the public.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'm sure you've been asked every question imaginable, but here's one I've never seen in your column and I need an answer.

What does one do when an invitation arrives for a golden wedding anniversary or a 75th birthday party and on it is the handwritten and underlined message that says, "No gifts please." Does that mean no PURCHASED gifts? They want money only? Or does it mean no money either?—C.A. IN N. DAK.

DEAR N. DAK: "No gifts" means NO gifts. Money is considered a gift. You can safely assume that the only present they want is your presence.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: We've heard so much about cocaine users lately that I think the figures are wildly inflated. Can you give us some reliable statistics?—X. IN L.A.

DEAR X: These figures are reliable. They are from Newsweek, Aug. 11, '86.

5 million regular users
20-24 million have tried cocaine
563 cocaine-related deaths
30 percent of all college students will have tried cocaine by their fourth year.

Scary? You bet. And still no good answers in sight.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Who said, "A doctor is a person who still has his adenoids, his tonsils and his appendix?"—J.P.M., WILLIAMSTOWN, MASS.

DEAR WILL: It was that incomparable wag, H.L. Mencken.

Are drugs OK if you learn how to control them? Can they be of help? The answers are in Ann Landers' all-new booklet, "The Lowdown on Dope." ## Alzheimer's Disease topic of club program

Katie Hall presented a program on Alzheimer's Disease when members of Cultural Extension Homemakers Club met recently in the home of Virginia Sumner.

Hall explained that the disease causes brain deterioration. She also related her experiences involving a close relative who had the illness and told of the stress that the family must deal with. She stated that the patient has no stress but often experiences a personality change.

Sumner led a prayer for the group and Bertha Dettman led the Pledge of Allegiance to the U.S. flag and to the Texas flag.

"Twelve Days of Harvest" was read by Sumner and roll call was answered by "What I contributed to club last year."

Dettman discussed and gave a report on the changing of the constitution and by-laws of the club.

Club members will meet for a Thanksgiving dinner at 6 p.m. Nov. 11 in the Energas Flame Room. The next regular meeting will be Nov. 14 in the home of Mary Lou Spinhirne.

The hostess served refreshments of cake, cheese crackers, coffee and punch to 14 members and a guest, Melba Ford.

U.S. STILL TOPS IN ELECTRONICS

NEW YORK (AP)—Despite the well-publicized advances by the Japanese in the consumer electronics field, the United States continued to dominate the world electronics industry in 1985, according to MIS Week.

The nation's share of total production was 47 percent, compared with 21 percent for Japan, notes the management information systems journal. Europe had 21 percent, and the rest of the world had 11 percent.

While Japan does lead in consumer electronics, the U.S. maintained its lead in all other categories. It accounted for well over half of all world production in computers, software and services, test and measurement equipment, professional electronics gear and office automation equipment.

Professional electronics gear includes radio communications equipment, professional TV and radio and navigation hardware.

Nearly 15 percent of the European market was held by American imports, not including goods manufactured by American subsidiaries in Europe.

DR. GOTT Foods might cause migraine

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT — My mother, my niece and I all have migraines. My sister and my son have the cluster type. During his migraines, my son has extreme pain, and one side of his face gets swollen and discolored. He's been seen by an M.D., an ophthalmologist and a neurologist. He has a prescription for ergotamine, but the side effects cause him to limit its use. Do you have any advice?

DEAR READER — I have two suggestions. Your son — and other migraine sufferers — may be reacting to a dietary component. Try eliminating certain foods, such as chocolate, caffeine, milk products or cured meats. By experimenting this way, your son may be able to identify a food or food additive that makes the migraines more frequent or results in more severe headaches.

Second, medicines (called beta-blockers) have been reported to be useful in preventing migraines. Ask your doctor about obtaining a prescription for a beta-blocker.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Sometimes when I menstruate, I have what looks like a bloody clot. Is this the unfertilized egg?

DEAR READER — No. An unfertilized egg is microscopic in size. During menses, women frequently pass clots; this is normal. However, I might mention that excessive menstrual bleeding, with or without clots, can cause iron deficiency. If your menstrual pattern suddenly changes or if you bleed heavily, see your gynecologist.

DEAR DR. GOTT — What do stools tell about the workings of the body? My wife says hers are black and stink; mine are yellowish.

DEAR READER — The material that we eliminate largely reflects what we eat and how we digest it. For example, high-vegetable-fiber diets produce large, light-colored stools. Lack of dietary fluid will result in hard stools and constipation; beets can color stools red. Of course, certain diseases affect intestinal functioning. Ulcers can cause diarrhea, gas and — if bleeding is present — tarry black stools. Malabsorption of food will produce loose, oily, foul-smelling stools. Bowel inflammation can be seen as diarrhea or blood in the stool. Liver disease often is associated with pale stools.

Stool analysis is useful in diagnosis. For instance, parasitic diseases are diagnosed when the parasite or its eggs are found in the stool. Some bowel infections are readily identified by stool cultures that isolate the bacteria responsible for the disease. Stool-fat determination helps diagnose the many forms of malabsorption. Stool-blood analysis is an important early indicator of intestinal bleeding, commonly from polyps, ulcers, cancer or diverticulitis.

Any patient who notices a change in normal elimination patterns — frequency, quantity, quality and caliber — should check with a doctor. Along with chest pain, change in stool pattern is one of the most reliable early indicators of disease.

DEAR DR. GOTT — What is the dumping syndrome and why does one get it?

DEAR READER — Dumping syndrome is a complication of stomach surgery. After part of the stomach is removed and a patient eats, the gastric contents empty too quickly into the small intestine. This "dumping" causes sweating, nausea, weakness and dizziness. The condition is permanent, but the symptoms can be prevented if the patient limits his diet to small, frequent meals consisting of high-protein, high-calorie foods.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I'm 49, and 25 pounds overweight. When I become overheated, the right side of my face becomes red, hot and sweaty; the left side becomes pale, cool and dry. One neurologist said the problem was in my neck, but he was unconcerned. Another said he was unfamiliar with the condition, but that it was untreatable. I'm not satisfied with either answer. Do you have any suggestions?

DEAR READER — You seem to be describing an isolated malfunction of the sympathetic nerves. On the right side of your face, the blood vessels relax (to cause redness and heat), whereas blood vessels on the left side are stimulated to constrict, causing coolness and pallor. Although this appears to be a circulatory disorder, I suspect that the real basis is a nerve abnormality.

Your symptoms could be caused by many conditions, ranging from migraine equivalent to a peculiar side effect of some medicines. I suggest that you ask your doctor for a referral to the neurological clinic in a teaching hospital, where the specialists may be more able to identify the source of your problem.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I was told that I have aura migraine. The optometrist told me the treatment would be more painful than the migraine. Since the blinding spells are getting more frequent, should I accept the diagnosis?

DEAR READER — You can accept the diagnosis, but you do not have to accept the pronouncement of painful treatment. If your visual difficulties are caused by migraine, preventing the migraine will stop your "blinding spells." Beta-blockers often are useful for this purpose. Ask your doctor about this treatment. In addition, the use of other prescription drugs, such as ergotamine, may help abort a migraine attack once it has started. Again, your doctor can advise you.

DEAR DR. GOTT — My husband uses snuff. Lately he constantly sniffs his nose, clears his throat and has a slight cough. Any connection?

DEAR READER — Sure. Snuff is powdered tobacco and is just as irritating to the nose, throat and lungs as its more familiar counterpart: tobacco smoke. Also, snuff can cause cancer. Your husband would do himself a favor by getting off the stuff.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I am 12 years old and have had a rash on my chest for three or four years. All I'm allergic to is sulfa. My doctor has prescribed cream and soap, but they don't help. What else can I do?

DEAR READER — Ask your doctor to refer you to a skin specialist. Three or four years of unsuccessful treatment is valid enough reason for you to see a dermatologist.

DEAR DR. GOTT — What is the difference between capsular and extra-capsular extraction methods for cataract removal?

DEAR READER — A cataract is made up of three components: a hard nucleus, a soft cortex and a capsule that surrounds the whole cataract structure.

During an intra-capsular extraction, the nucleus, cortex and capsule are removed.

During an extra-capsular procedure, the nucleus, cortex and only the front part of the capsule are removed. Ophthalmological opinion is swinging more in favor of the extra-capsular surgery, because this enables the patient to be more easily fitted for a contact lens. The disadvantage is that the retained capsule can become cloudy with time and the patient may have to consider more cataract surgery at a later date.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Five years ago I had a transurethral prostatectomy. Now my urologist says I need the operation again. I realize that the prostate can grow back, but in five years? Would medication prolong the inevitable?

DEAR READER — During a transurethral resection (TUR), the urologist uses a special instrument that is introduced through the penis and cores out the portion of prostatic tissue causing obstruction. A TUR is more simply performed than the alternative procedure, in which the entire prostate gland is removed through an abdominal incision.

After a TUR, prostatic tissue can regrow after several years and again cause obstruction. Men may require a second or third TUR. I am not aware of any medication that could be safely taken to shrink a swollen prostate gland.

Humor follows campaign trail

Correspondent Michael Graczyk and Austin AP Correspondent Michael Holmes have been traveling with the Clements and White gubernatorial campaigns for about a week.

By MICHAEL HOLMES and MICHAEL L. GRACZYK Associated Press Writers

Campaigning for governor is serious business, of course. But from time to time, even the best of candidates has to crack a grin.

Democratic Gov. Mark White ate lunch Sunday at the Cathedral of Faith Baptist Church in Dallas. Sitting next to him for fried chicken and chocolate chip cookies was a young member of the congregation, 4-year-old Arthur "Tre" Smith.

The boy nibbled less-than-enthusiastically at a chicken leg while trying hard to get a bite of his cookie.

The governor explained the priorities — chicken first — and simultaneously created a new regulation to accompany the no-pass, no-chock, no-cookie rule. "It's the no-chicken, no-cookie rule," White explained.

Look for President Reagan to show up on a television commercial for former Gov. Bill Clements, a Republican, this week. But don't look for Reagan to campaign in person.

"He is aware of the fact I would love to have him here, but he has three or four extremely important Senate races," Clements said.

Fort Worth TV station KXAS, quoting a Washington magazine called "Insight," said Reagan was skipping Texas because White House staffers were nervous over Clements' so-called "secret plan" to balance the state budget.

"If that's from 'Insight,' they must be out of sight," Clements retorted.

For White, fresh fruit has been a priority item as his campaign days extend 14 hours and more.

Entering a Houston hotel, he speared an apple from a courtesy basket in the lobby with his left hand while never missing a beat in his conversation with a local Democratic official on his right.

In Wichita Falls, he stopped his entire motorcade suddenly when he spied a farmers market.

At a stand labeled "Betty's Texas Tomatoes and Produce," White greeted the owner with a handshake.

Long Parliament is the name of a session of the English parliament that lasted without a break from 1640 to 1653.

then extended a $20 bill to pay for a basket of plums.

The woman declined payment. "Well, let me shake your hand again," White said.

The Reagan administration has sent delegates to help Clements, including Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige.

But at an Austin news conference, Baldrige spoke so softly, a news reporter had to ask him to speak up. He did — a little — and Clements the next day admitted to reporters that Baldrige was "low key."

But speaking later to a Fort Worth Rotary Club audience, Clements described Baldrige as "eloquent."

White received campaign help, too. San Antonio Mayor Henry Cisneros — anything but a retiring public speaker — introduced him at nearly a dozen stops over two days.

Speaking so loudly that he nearly lost his voice, Cisneros won fans wherever he went.

In Tyler, Sheriff J.B. Smith apologized after the mayor's speech for having mispronounced his name on introduction.

"I may not know how to pronounce your name," he told Cisneros, "but I know you're one heck of a good speaker."

U.S. Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole, campaigning for Clements in Dallas, was extolling the virtue of one of her top deputies. He was, she said, a Texas native and proud of it.

The aide, it was learned later, was born in Ohio.

Texas is a big state, but to make an appearance in Texarkana, White's jet actually landed on an airstrip in Arkansas.

In the terminal, White approached a young woman behind a counter.

"Ya'll vote in Texas?" he asked. No, she said. "But I'll shake your hand."

Clements and his staff travel in one plane this fall, while news reporters travel in a second.

The Clements aircraft has been nicknamed "Nuance" and the press plane "Innuendo" in reference to the oft-repeated terms Clements uses when describing White.

White gets in his own digs. While the governor knocked on doors in a San Antonio neighborhood, one of his campaign volunteers stood in front of a yard sign that touted Clements.

"Apparently there's one on every block," White said of the only Clements sign in sight. "I see they've solated him."

Fine arts center has secret asset

STEPHENVILLE, Texas (AP)—Tarleton State University's Clyde Wells Fine Arts Center, christened in 1980, has been mostly known for its state-of-the-art performance halls.

But it has a somewhat more secret asset, a high-tech recording studio designed by internationally-known acoustician Rolly Brook, who pioneered the transformer-less sound mixer and other advances used in professional studios.

Richard Denning, the Wells Center's technical director for the past two years, hopes to give the studio a higher profile, complete some renovations and get it into full service to musicians on and off campus by Tarleton's spring semester.

The studio houses more than $100,000 in professional equipment. In the main studio, one of four, as many as 12 microphones placed virtually anywhere in the building can be recorded directly on tape. Indirectly, sounds from hundreds of microphones can be recorded on one tape.

Among the studio's assets are a $16,000 Neotek mixing board, and three smaller mixing boards. It also has a $6,000 Sequential Circuits "Prophet Five" synthesizer, with a computerized keyboard that can imitate almost any sound.

Despite the elaborate set-up, assistant technicians Carl Nowotny and Grantlan Goodman decided the studio needed some changes to make it more functional.

Nowotny and Goodman — both musicians as well as recording engineers — had manned the controls in the studio for more than five years. They began making small changes; re-wiring, re-arranging and turning a smaller studio into an isolation booth.

"The way it evolved was really neat," Denning said. "Everyone's idea went into it. Each idea led to another idea."

Brook had acoustically designed the smaller studio — formerly used to record the choir — for a pleasant sound atmosphere. Nowotny and Goodman felt the acoustics should be put to wider use, especially since the main studio had the power to do everything the choir studio could at the flip of a few switches. All the equipment was taken out of the smaller room and microphones were set up in the space. The result "sounds professional," the technicians said.

Lapidary Club celebrates 10th anniversary Monday

The members of the Deaf Smith County Lapidary Club celebrated the club's 10th anniversary at their regular meeting Monday, at the Energas Flame Room.

Thama Pearson conducted the business meeting and Ruth King read the minutes of the October 1976 meeting when the club was organized.

Following a short business meeting, election of officers was held. Thama Pearson was re-elected president; Roy Martin, first vice president; Weldon Roberson, second vice president; Betty Henson, secretary; Ruth King, treasurer. Members paid their dues for the upcoming year.

Hosts for the meeting were Ruth King, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Martin, and Mr. and Mrs. L.J. Matthews. The door prize, furnished by Mr. and Mrs. Weldon Roberson, was won by Lena Elmquest.

The Christmas party will be held Dec. 8 at the Flame Room. The next meeting will be held Monday, Nov. 24, at the Flame Room. Anyone interested in joining the club is invited to attend the meeting.

A film on Capulin Mountain in New Mexico was shown by Lurline Cawthon. There were 39 members present.

'TOUCH SHOPPING' GROWING FAST

NEW YORK (AP) — "Smart boxes" that enable customers to "browse" shopping malls and retail stores electronically and "touch shopping" via computerized electronic machines is a fast-growing trend, reports a New York-based marketing company.

Some 30,000 of the electronic devices are already installed across the nation, and within four years the number will more than double to 70,000, according to the Howard Marlboro Group.

Within the same four-year span, electronic sales transactions will reach $16 billion at retail, the company says, predicting that by the turn of the century one of every $5 spent at retail will be expended via an electronic machine.

It adds that the general public's first exposure to computers in everyday routine came with the arrival of the now-familiar automatic bank teller machines.

La Plata gained a 6-0 lead in the first quarter when Cody Page threw a touchdown pass to tight end Amado Lopez. Lopez took the completed pass 90 yards for the touchdown.

Yucca tied the game up at 6-6 early in the second quarter, with a sustained drive.

La Plata, after receiving the kickoff, scored in the first play of its next possession. T.J. Head completed a pass to Zack Farr for a 62-yard touchdown play.

Lopez kicked the extra point, and La Plata held what was its halftime lead, 13-6.

The last Maverick touchdown was scored in the fourth quarter. Chris Tardy got some good blocking in front of him and scored with a 40-yard run.

When the game ended, La Plata was threatening to score. Time ran out with the Mavericks at the Yucca two-yard line.

"Tremendous credit goes to the whole team who played the whole game with virtually only three substitutes," Coach Bowling said.

"The defense played inspired ball, shutting down Yucca's potent ground game in the second half," he added.

The tryout sessions will be held at 5:30 p.m. each day at the La Plata practice field.

Athletes must be age 18 or older, and be out of high school, to play on the semi-pro team.

YOU WILL HEAR A LOT FROM THE SO-CALLED CONVENIENCE BANKERS ABOUT PROPOSITION FOUR BUT YOU PROBABLY WILL NOT HEAR THIS:

The big banks of Texas hope to create a bank monopoly at your expense. Proposition Four has disguised branch banking as "full service banking". Whatever they call it - Branch Banking is a bad idea for Texas, and Texans will end up footing the bill for the big Texas bank holding companies to get bigger.

You especially don't want this to happen now since the Texas Legislature just passed a law permitting the large banks of New York City to purchase some or all of the large Texas bank holding companies. Not only can this legally happen now, but is almost certain to take place in the immediate future.

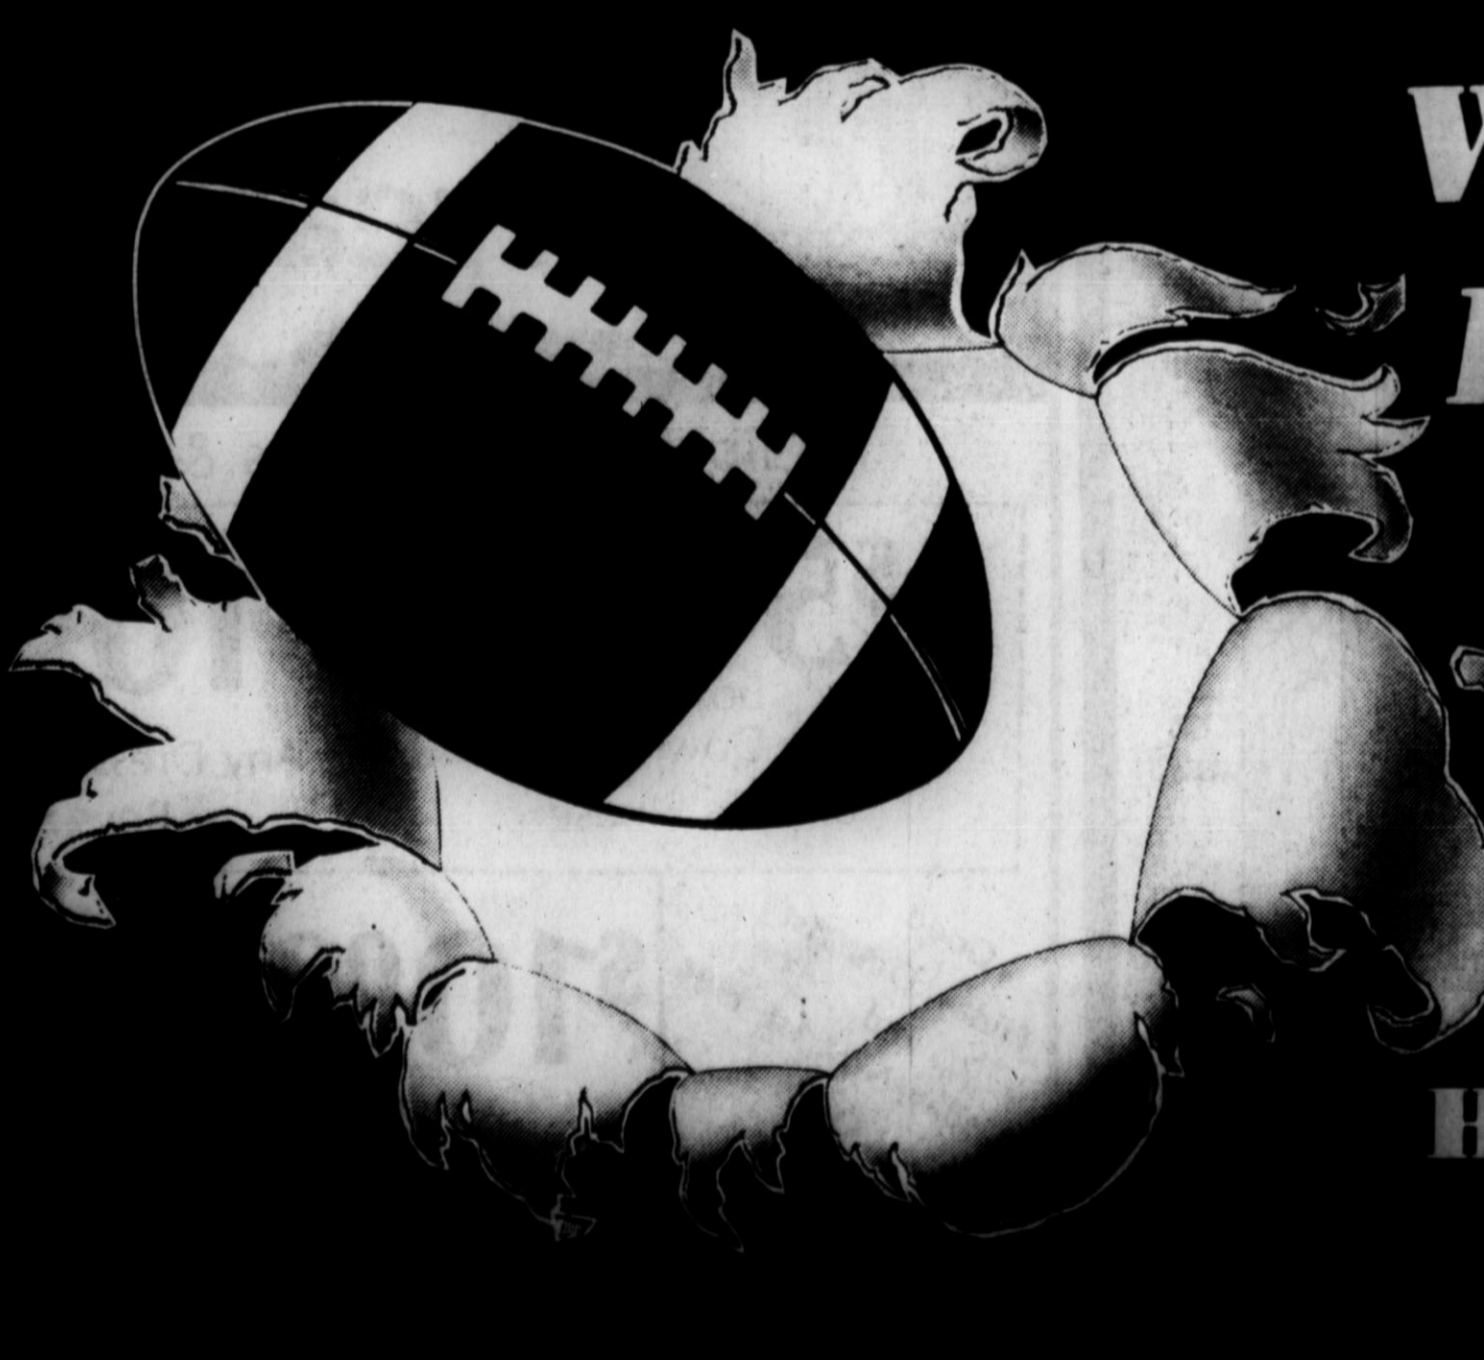

For all these years, Texans have never wanted or allowed the big banks of New York City to own and control the Texas Banking Industry. We are sure that this position by the people of Texas still has never changed.

1986-87 NBA season opens Friday night

By BILL BARNARD
AP Basketball Writer

Twin Towers Akeem Olajuwon and Ralph Sampson of the Houston Rockets weren't the first giant duo to start on the same team, but they unquestionably started a trend that now shows at least a dozen NBA teams with huge front lines.

WT, A&I to meet in key LSC game

The top two teams in the Lone Star Conference, both with 3-0 records, will play Saturday night in Kingsville, Texas, when the Texas A&I Javelinas host the West Texas State University Buffaloes.

Game time is 7:30 p.m. at Javelina Stadium. West Texas State has a 4-4 record for the season, and Texas A&I is undefeated at 7-0.

Last year, West Texas State defeated Texas A&I 37-17. Before that game, the two schools had met on three other occasions, with WTSU winning in 1939 and 1940, and Texas A&I winning in 1941.

West Texas State defeated East Texas State 49-19 last week, and Texas A&I beat Central State of Oklahoma, 38-17. East Texas State

The first team to successfully pair two big men was the 1963-64 San Francisco Warriors, who often started a front line of 7-foot-1 Wilt Chamberlain and 6-11 Nate Thurmond.

With the steady improvement of the Houston Rockets the last two seasons, culminating in their trip to the finals against the Boston Celtics, a majority of the teams that open the regular season Friday and Saturday will be able to field similar Twin Towers lineups.

"They (the 7-4 Sampson and the 7-0 Olajuwon) are having a big effect," Magic Johnson of the Los Angeles Lakers said. "You have real matchup problems not only with them, but with Boston, too."

The matchups Friday night have Milwaukee at Detroit, New York at New Jersey, Indiana at Philadelphia, Washington at Boston, Utah at Dallas, San Antonio at Denver, Golden State at Phoenix, the Los Angeles Clippers at Sacramento and Seattle at Portland.

On Saturday, the Lakers are at Houston for a nationally televised game. Chicago is at New York, New Jersey at Atlanta, Detroit at Indiana, Washington at Cleveland, Dallas at San Antonio, Boston at Milwaukee, Portland at Utah, Phoenix at the Clippers, Sacramento at Seattle, and Denver at Golden State.

Boston successfully counters Sampson and Olajuwon with 7-0 Robert Parish and 6-10 Kevin McHale, with 6-11 Bill Walton coming off the bench. Larry Bird, the NBA MVP for three straight seasons, is the "small forward" at 6-9.

"Our frontcourt, which has worked together for five seasons, returns in full force," Coach K.C. Jones said in assessing the Celtics' prospects for the season.

and Central State are two of the three common opponents this season for WTSU and Texas A&I.

The Buffaloes defeated Central State 35-28 in September. Texas A&I beat East Texas State 42-0 on Oct. 18.

The other common opponent has been Howard Payne University. Texas A&I scored a 52-0 win over Howard Payne on Oct. 11, and West Texas State beat Howard Payne 31-7 on Oct. 18.

West Texas State had its highest total offense effort of the season, 539 yards, in the 49-19 win over East Texas State. Those yards included 197 yards rushing, the best rushing total by WTSU this year as well.

Another season high in that game was 35 points in the first half.

J.R. Compton and Votie Patterson each scored two touchdowns for WTSU. Compton scored with touchdown runs of 13 yards and nine yards, and Patterson had a seven-yard touchdown run and a 15-yard touchdown pass reception.

Quarterback Tod Mayfield completed 27 of 45 passes for 340 yards and two touchdowns. Stan Carraway caught nine passes for 114 yards and one touchdown.

Mayfield and Carraway each reached milestones in their college careers. Mayfield has more than 6,000 yards passing in his career, and Carraway has more than 2,000 yards receiving in his career.

The Texas A&I Javelinas have been ranked No. 2 in Division II by the NCAA News. Texas A&I is off to its best start 1981, when the Javelinas won their first seven games and finished with a 9-2 record.

Texas A&I has won 13 Lone Star Conference championships, including last season. The Javelinas have had at least one first-team All-America honoree for 21 consecutive seasons.

Offensive leaders for Texas A&I include running back Johnny Bailey with 1,330 yards and 13 touchdown runs in 158 carries, and quarterback Darcy Davis, who has thrown seven touchdown passes this year.

West Texas State will have an open date on Nov. 8 before hosting Eastern New Mexico on Saturday, Nov. 15 at 1:30 p.m.

A Buffalo running back from Hereford, Wayne High, has caught 17 passes this season for 93 yards, with the longest catch going for a 20-yard gain.

High has rushed 21 times for 38 yards, with the longest run going for a 12-yard gain.

The New York Mets, who finished last in the National League East in 1983, had the best record in the league in extra-inning games, 12-4.

Ty Cobb batted .300 or better for 23 consecutive seasons, 1906-1928, a major league baseball record.

NEW NAMES
For years, California's best wineries named their wines after the grape variety from which they were made. This practice began in the late forties as a quality-conscious effort to distinguish California's best wines from the cheap, domestic, generic jug wines. The latter were inexplicably named after such French wine regions as Burgandy and Chablis. California's labeling system is known as varietal labeling, meaning that the wine is named after the grape that accounted for at least 75 percent of the wine in the bottle. Now, after four decades, a change is taking place. A number of extremely high-quality wineries have begun to offer their best wines not under their varietal names, but under proprietary or trade name such as "Insignia."

At THE STORE you will find a terrific selection of domestic and imported wines to complement just about every meal. COMBEST COMMENTS
by Congressman Larry Combest

In a few days we will all have an opportunity to go to the polls and cast our ballots for those we wish to represent us in the councils of government. It is an opportunity I hope our citizens will not take lightly, for in many parts of the world it is an opportunity that never comes. In our own history, many of our kinsmen and neighbors have died on battlefields near and far in order that we might govern ourselves. This is one of those times when we must not let them down, but must exercise our right and duty.

I hope my record as your congressman during the past two years is one that meets with your approval. I am standing for re-election as your congressman for the 19th Congressional District, and I earnestly ask for your vote in this election so we can continue the fight for sound, conservative government in Washington.

I hired on as your full-time, working congressman. I have kept that commitment to you. I have not missed a single vote in the House of Representatives during my two years in office.

During those two years, I have worked to make certain that the voice of the farmer, the small businessman, the energy producer of the 19th Congressional District is heard and heard ed in Washington. You are the people who keep our small towns and cities alive. You need a voice in Washington, and I have tried to be that voice.

Much remains to be done. Those who prefer the route of "tax and spend" still outnumber us in the House. It is important that the "conservative coalition" in the House be maintained if we are going to make progress toward fiscal integrity in our federal government.

So please remember to go to the polls and vote on election day. I know that these are not the best of times. The weather has not been good to us this year. But we have come through rough times before in West Texas, and we will come through this time as well. And when we do, we will go on to better times for all our people.

come together for the Washington Bullets, where three-time MVP Moses Malone was acquired to play alongside 7-6 Manute Bol, the league's leading shot-blocker last season.

"My philosophy has always been that to succeed in this league you have to have a dominant center," Bullets' Coach Kevin Loughery said. Seven-footers Patrick Ewing and Bill Cartwright, whose debut together for the New York Knicks was postponed last season because of injuries to both players, are expected to be ready for Chicago on Saturday.

The Atlanta Hawks, who won a surprising 50 games last season with 7-footers Kevin Willis and Tree Rollins, return with that pairing again.

Denver Coach Doug Moe plans to shuffle his lineup to allow 7-foot Blair Rasmussen to move to center and 6-11 Wayne Cooper to shift from center to forward.

Meanwhile, trades have brought together 7-1 Sam Bowie and 6-11 Steve Johnson at Portland, 6-10 Jack Sikma and 7-2 Randy Breuer at Milwaukee, and 7-2 Artis Gilmore and 6-10 Mychal Thompson at San Antonio.

The 1986 draft will make several other teams bigger, including Cleveland with 7-0 rookie Brad Doughterty and 6-11 Mel Turpin, Phoenix with 7-foot rookie William Bedford and 7-1 returnee James Edwards, Dallas with 6-11 rookie Roy Tarpley and 7-2 veteran James Donaldson, and Golden State with 6-11 rookie Chris Washburn and 7-foot Joe Barry Carroll.

Red Raiders to host UT Longhorns Saturday

The Texas Tech Red Raiders, playing at home for the first time since Sept. 27, will host this Saturday a Texas Longhorn team that upset Southwest Conference leader SMU 27-24 last weekend.

Kickoff for Saturday's game is set for 12:04 p.m. at Jones Stadium. Texas Tech is 2-2 in the conference and 4-3 overall, and Texas is 2-1 in the conference and 3-3 for the season.

Saturday's game will mark the first time for Red Raider Coach David McWilliams to go against Coach Fred Akers of Texas. Both were assistants on Darrell Royal's Texas staff from 1970 to 1974, and McWilliams was an assistant under Akers for nine seasons.

Texas Tech scored 28 points in the fourth quarter to defeat Rice 49-21 last week. The Red Raiders had 496 yards total offense, the most ever in a game versus Rice, and Texas Tech's 322 yards rushing in that game was the most for the Red Raiders since 346 in 1979.

About the victory over Rice, Coach McWilliams said, "Our offensive line did a good job of finally wearing down their defensive line. Offensively, we kept plugging."

"When we couldn't throw the ball, we were able to break down their resistance on defense and run the ball. I felt like our secondary really played well. It was one of our better games of pass defense."

About playing the Texas Longhorns, McWilliams said, "We are trying to approach every game as being equal in importance. But when you start breaking it down as far as personal reasons, every player and coach has a particular game that he wants to win more than any other.

"Certainly, Texas is that game for me. We won't approach it any differently from any other game but there is no question that it would be my pick of the game to win this year."

"Defensively, they are banged up but they are strong in the front line where most everybody is back. They have a lot of depth at defensive tackle and the defensive ends are extremely quick."

Their secondary has a lot of good speed and hard hitters. They have had a lot of injuries at linebacker and that's been a problem for them the last few games.

"Offensively, they are explosive. I have a little advantage in that I know most of their people and know their abilities. I can tell, Bret Stafford is one of the finest quarterbacks around as far as taking his team and moving them."

"They have the ability to get deep on you and the ability to hit you with a big, big play right away."

ENMU plays at East Texas

For the second year in a row, the Eastern New Mexico University Greyhounds will have to play at East Texas State University during the ETSU homecoming.

The game, a Lone Star Conference contest, is scheduled for 1 p.m. Saturday at Commerce, Texas.

Eastern New Mexico is 1-2 in the conference and 6-2 overall, and East Texas State is 0-2 in the conference and 1-6 overall. The two teams have not played any common opponents this season.

ENMU's conference win was 41-10 over Howard Payne University last week. ENMU has lost conference games to Abilene Christian 34-10 and to Angelo State 35-14.

East Texas State's conference losses were 42-0 to Texas A&I and 49-19 to West Texas State.

The Greyhounds led Howard Payne just 7-3 at halftime before scoring 21 unanswered points in the third quarter. Rufus Smith rushed for 137 yards and two touchdowns and Randy Johnson has 102 yards and one touchdown.

ENMU has 252 yards rushing and 144 yards passing for 396 yards total offense, compared to 56 yards rushing, 142 yards passing and 198 total yards by Howard Payne.

"It was a great ball game for us. We had good blocking," said ENMU Coach Don Carthel. "We went to sleep the first half, but the third quarter was our best quarter in the two years I've been here. We had some great moments."

About this week's game, Carthel said, "East Texas has played an outstanding schedule. They have a lot of talent and have some people that can really fly. They're a dangerous ball club and can't be taken lightly."

ENMU and East Texas State have played twice before in the history of the two schools. East Texas State won both of the games, 40-30 in Portales in 1983 and 51-38 last year in Commerce.

Eastern New Mexico led 22-16 at halftime in last year's game before East Texas State moved into the lead, 36-25, in the third quarter.

Euleless firefighter draws illustrations

EULESS, Texas (AP) — Large, intricately detailed illustrations of fire engines hang in the office of Euleless Fire Chief Randy Byers, catching the eye and inevitably stimulating conversation.

Because of their quality and subject matter the obvious question to the chief is, "Where did you get those?"

The answer is rather surprising for anyone who imagines firefighters are like a Norman Rockwell painting of three middle-aged men in black rubber boots sitting on the back of the ladder truck petting a dalmatian.

Using colored pencils and working between 24-hour shifts, firefighter William Davidson drew the engines and sold them to the chief.

"I like him and everything but I can't give it away," Davidson said.

Davidson says he has been interested in art since he was a youth growing up in Colleyville. He credits his current prowess to his interest and persistence, rather than a natural gift, as many non-artists would.

Drawing pictures as a youth, Davidson said he would sometimes finish with something and then say "that doesn't look quite right" and start over.

As the years went by, Davidson improved. During his four years in the Navy, he was able to earn extra money selling pictures of airplanes to pilots on the aircraft carrier where he served.

After his discharge, Davidson continued his hobby, attending art classes at Tarrant County Junior College and accumulating a houseful of pictures of World War II aircraft and other vehicles.

Although he has done a few landscapes and animals, the 34-year-old firefighter's favorite subject is any type of motor vehicle. His favorite medium is colored pencils because of the detail he can achieve.

When Davidson does the wheel of a fire engine he likes to show every lug nut, the reflections in the aluminum wheels and any scratches there might be. The same is true with the gauge panel on a pumper. If the gauges aren't properly detailed, the firefighters who work on the truck will be able to tell, he says.

Davidson says he settled on his career as a firefighter after "bumming around" for some years. Now other firefighters frequently ask Davidson why he doesn't quit the fire department and go into art full time.

"I have a lot more confidence doing what I do for the fire department than I do in my artwork," Davidson said. "I don't know if I could make a living at it."

But he does have a steady stream of people who want his work. "Somebody always wants them as soon as their completed," Davidson said.

However, art, like fishing and working on automobiles, is a hobby and source of relaxation for Davidson and he doesn't know if he would want to make a living at it.

"It might get old quick if I did it every day," Davidson said.

Every now and then someone who has seen Davidson's work approaches him with plans to produce prints to market to a larger audience. So far none have come together.

"Maybe one of these days I'll be rich and famous, but I'll still be a firefighter," Davidson said.

University celebrates 75 years

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — In the mid-1920s, Sister Immaculate Gentemann's favorite retreat was an attic window in the oldest building at Our Lady of the Lake University. From there, she viewed the distant, twinkling lights of San Antonio.

Today, the spot in the Main Building still is one of Sister Immaculate's favorite retreats. But the view has changed. The twinkling lights that danced across the barren land are now a blur of bright lights illuminating the sprawling city.

As San Antonio has changed drastically during the years, so has Our Lady of the Lake University, which this week celebrates its 75th anniversary.

"I can appreciate the 75th anniversary because I have experienced the growth," said Sister Gentemann, who entered the Sisters of the Congregation of Divine Providence in 1925 and is a former dean of the university's prestigious Worden School of Social Service.

Our Lady of the Lake opened in 1911 as a two-year liberal arts college for women. It began with only one student.

Today, the West Side campus is a four-year, co-educational university with 1,800 students and bachelor and masters degree programs in 32 fields.

Reflecting on her years with the university, Sister Gentemann said she takes pride in the strides made by the university's founding Sisters of the Congregation of Divine Providence.

"In our congregation, we don't go along with the times only. Whatever had not been tried yet, we took the risk.

"As we talk of goals, we have got to take some risk because if we don't risk, we won't know. We liked to have the road marked out, but we would zig-zag a bit."

Our Lady of the Lake was the first college in San Antonio accredited by the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools. It was the first college in Texas to open a school of social work and the first private college in the state to award degrees in speech pathology.

CHILDREN'S LIVES

WHAT PARENTS THINK

(Source: Louis Harris/Westinghouse Broadcasting Co.-Group W)

Parents are far from optimistic about the lives of children. Of 1,250 parents polled, less than half feel that American children are happy, or safe or adequately helped by schools and the government.

Transplants gets thumbs up from surgeons

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Big toes may look a bit large when attached to the hand, but they make reliable replacements for thumbs destroyed in accidents, say doctors who performed 60 successful toe-to-thumb transplants.

"There are problems with them being a little bigger and leaving a defect on your foot, but those are very acceptable tradeoffs," said Dr. Fredrick Valauri, who told a medical convention Monday that the controversial transplants should be considered safe and effective.

Critics have argued patients risk losing a toe besides the destroyed thumb if the operation fails. They advocate alternative operations, including moving the index finger to the thumb position while keeping nerves and blood vessels intact, or reconstructing the thumb using pieces of hip bone and skin from toes or other body parts.

But since 1972, Dr. Harry Buncke's surgical team at San Francisco's Davies Medical Center succeeded in all 60 toe-to-thumb transplants it performed, and hundreds of such transplants elsewhere also had a high success rate, said Valauri, a plastic surgeon who works with Buncke.

Toe-to-thumb transplants have restored accident victims' ability to grasp objects, tie their shoes, pop champagne corks and even thumb-wrestle, Valauri, Buncke and their colleagues said Monday in a paper presented to the annual meeting of the American Society of Plastic and Reconstructive Surgery.

They said transplanted big toes make thumbs with better sensation, appearance and grip strength than those created by other surgeries for people whose crushed or severed thumbs couldn't be reattached.

"If you have a choice of missing a thumb or a big toe, you're better off missing the toe," because the thumb accounts for nearly half the hand's ability to function, while the foot loses only some of its "pushoff" ability without a big toe, Valauri said.

The parrot is the only bird that yawns.

Legislator wants to join parliament

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Unlike ambitious state legislators who aspire to seats in the U.S. House or Senate, New York state Assemblyman Dov Hikind wants to win a seat in another legislative body — Israel's parliament.

A self-described "Jewish militant" he was one of the early New York City leaders in the Jewish Defense League and has become a rare exemplar of strict religious observance in the statehouse.

Committed to Orthodox Judaism, he refuses to work when Assembly sessions run into Friday night and Saturday — the Jewish Sabbath — even though such weekend sessions are only called to deal with major issues.

Hikind, 36, first won his Assembly seat in 1982 from a largely Jewish district in Brooklyn on his record of Jewish activism and arrests for anti-Soviet demonstrations.

Seeking re-election next month as a Democrat, he said this may be his last political campaign in the United States.

"One of the most crucial things in my life is Israel," he said. "I often wonder who needs me more, America or the state of Israel. I do intend to go home to Israel, and it won't be when I retire."

He said he plans to seek a seat in Israel's parliament, the Knesset, as part of the right-wing Likud party.

"I am a Jewish nationalist," he said. "I don't believe in physically throwing out the Arabs from Israel, but I could support taking actions to encourage them to move."

While about a fourth of New York's 211 state legislators are Jewish, in a state with nearly 2 million of the nation's 5.8 million Jews, Hikind's actions and appearance make him stand out.

He is the only lawmaker who wears a yarmulke, the Jewish skullcap, in his legislative work. He is one of the few legislators with a beard — also a sign of religious observance among Orthodox Jews.

He strictly observes Jewish dietary laws, refusing to eat anything at the many affairs held for legislators in Albany. He said he eats all his meals in his office, where he keeps a refrigerator stocked with kosher food.

"It does wonders for keeping my weight down," said the 6-foot, 193-pound Hikind. "I've always been very religious. I'm proud of being Jewish and I try to do my best in following what's required of us."

"When there's something I can't do because of Jewish law it doesn't bother me, because I have no choice in the matter."

He recently made a five-week visit to Israel with his wife and three children and said he is ready and able to fight for the Jewish state.

In his district of 117,000 people, 65 percent Jewish, his advocacy for Jewish causes and stands as one of the legislature's most politically conservative Democrats are popular, giving him 60 percent of the 1984 vote.

Soviet Union

The Union of Soviet Socialist Republics has approximately 250 million people. Russians make up 52 percent, Ukrainians 16 percent, Uzbeks 5 percent and Byelorussians 4 percent. It covers 8,649,490 square miles, one-sixth of the world's land area, and it is the biggest country in the world. The USSR contains every type of climate except the distinctly tropical.

Limited role as vamp grew to steady character in '227'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — When Jackee Harry accepted a limited role as the vamp in NBC's "227," she had to commute to Los Angeles from her regular job in a soap opera in New York.

"I was only supposed to do seven episodes," said Harry, who was in the NBC daytime serial "Another World." "And Sandra wasn't supposed to be funny. Just be glamorous and the brunt of the jokes. She was supposed to spice up the show for a while then be gone."

But after the producers saw her perform in the pilot as Sandra they extended her contract to 13 episodes. "I was happy," she said, "but I still figured I'd be gone."

The NBC comedy is now in its second year, and Harry is now a fixture as the sexy and funny Sandra.

"227," centered on the residents of an apartment building in Washington, D.C., also stars Marla

Gibbs, Hal Williams, Helen Martin, Alaina Reed, Regina King, Curtis Baldwin and Kia Goodwin; Gibbs, who previously starred as the maid in "The Jeffersons," plays Mary Jenkins, whose penchant for gossip and meddling frequently brings her into conflict with Sandra.

Harry is near the end of her role in "Another World" after commuting between New York and Los Angeles to do both shows. "I just have to fly back to New York for the Christmas show, then I'll be released," she said.

She spent 2½ years on "Another World" as Lily Mason, a former prostitute. "I wanted to be evil," she said, "but they said no, they wanted me to be likable. I owned a night club, fell in love and got dumped. I really wanted to be bad. Then I embarked on a singing career. That's how they're writing me out of the show. I go to Los Angeles to sing."

Harry said she has endowed Sandra with a little bit of Mae West, some of Opal (the character Dorothy Lyman plays on "All My Children") and "my girlfriend Valjean and my Aunt Verna in Philadelphia."

Harry was born in Winston-Salem, N.C., but grew up in New York, where she attended the High School of Music and Art and Long Island University. She was teaching history at Brooklyn Technical High School when she got a job in the chorus of a Broadway musical. She quit teaching. She also appeared in "Eubie" and "One Mo' Time" on Broadway and in several Off-Broadway shows.

Church members learning how to teach illiterates

RICHWOOD, Texas (AP) — Surrounded by charts of vowels and letters of the alphabet, Johnnie Tauber leads a dozen or so adults in song. "Aa-aa-apple and bb-bb-ball," the group sings. "Cc-cc-cat and dd-dd-doll."

What looks like a first-grade phonics lesson is just that, although some of these adults are training to re-teach older students and adults to read.

The 36-week program "Sing and Say, Read and Write," was developed by a teacher in New Jersey public schools over a 17-year period and is distributed all over the United States by the Christian Broadcasting Network.

Sponsors of the program say it does not promote any particular religious doctrine, but strictly teaches students to read and write.

Statistics show that one of every five adults in the nation is functionally illiterate, a figure that may be higher in oil-producing states like Louisiana and Texas where many drop out of high school to take advantage of high wages available in industry.

Charles Logan, pastor of the Living Word Fellowship, an interdenominational church, became aware of the program and the problem of illiteracy through CBN programming.

Six months ago, he started training to teach the literacy program. Now he is looking for others to teach and assist with reading and writing classes for adults and children.

Anyone who knows how to read can teach someone else the skill, Tauber said. Students see, hear and write the letters they eventually will put together as words and sentences, mastering each step before they move on.

"Time is not an element," Tauber said of the program, which stresses thorough learning of material rather than getting to the next lesson.

Tauber, who traveled from Beaumont to give training sessions at the church recently, said the success of the program depends on the involvement of the community.

First, those who need the program have to be located and told about it.

"Everybody knows someone who needs this program," he said, adding since those in need probably can't read about it, organizers are counting on word of mouth.

Then details like scheduling, transportation, program funding and staffing have to be worked out.

Logan currently plans to conduct adult classes in two 45-minute sessions on Tuesday nights starting Jan. 6 at his church, located east of Highway 288 on County Road 233 in Richwood.

Classes for children also are planned during the day.

Program developers recommend cutting off enrollment in adult classes at the junior high level, since adults are capable of comprehending more and moving faster.

When Lois Dittfurth heard about the program through her church, His Grace Assembly of God in Sweeny, she thought of two elementary school girls she knows who are having trouble reading.

She has talked to one of the girls' mothers about placing the fifth-grader in special education classes, but the youngster resists, saying other kids will make fun of her.

Ms. Dittfurth thinks she might be able to help, particularly because she can relate personally to the struggle to read.

Having never learned to read phonetically, Ms. Dittfurth graduated from high school with minimal reading ability and spent years re-teaching herself the basics.

With Ms. Dittfurth at a recent training session was her pastor's wife, Debbie Abate, who is concerned about illiteracy in her community.

She said the catchy tune used to teach students the sounds of the alphabet helps them learn without the stress of memorization and repetition.

The program may seem elementary, but Tauber said someone who has trouble reading recognizes the need for reviewing the basics.

One child reported he knew his father was making progress in the program because he heard Dad singing the alphabet while shaving in the bathroom.

Organizers say the program is not a replacement for basic education, but an enhancement to what's being taught in school.

Tauber points out that teaching adults to read benefits everyone.

"Either you're going to carry the burden of unemployment or you're going to carry the burden of education," he said.

Woman despairs over impending loss of farm

MOUNT PLEASANT, Texas (AP) — May Hess says she hasn't been able to sleep well since she learned she may lose the farm her family has owned since the 1950s.

"My heart's broke," said the 68-year-old woman, who has sought help from country singer Willie Nelson's Farm Aid and the Texas Farm Crisis Hot Line. "I'm totally disgusted with everything. You see, I won't have any place to keep my cows. It would completely wipe me out."

Mrs. Hess said she promised her mother she would never let the 80-acre farm slip out of the family.

But on Friday she received a letter from an attorney for the State Bank of Omaha, 40 miles southeast of Mount Pleasant. The letter said the bank would foreclose on her land if she didn't pay the more than $30,000 plus interest owed the bank on a past due loan in 10 days.

Texas Department of Agriculture officials say Mrs. Hess isn't alone.

One of every six farmers and ranchers in the state say they plan to leave the business. In the last three years, about 5,900 fulltime grain, cotton, peanut and rice farmers quit for financial reasons.

"It's a situation where we've done every possible thing to help," said Randy Moore, board chairman of the Omaha bank. "It's not that we don't intend to keep on and on. But the bank examiners have less patience than we do."

"This land is something I've had for years," Mrs. Hess said, standing on her piece of property about 110 miles east of Dallas. "To my mother, this was almost heaven down here. She said, 'Don't ever sell it.' I won't."

Mrs. Hess says she hasn't slept since she realized she may lose the land.

"I don't know who to talk to anymore," Mrs. Hess said. "I don't know who my friends are anymore. I thought the people at the bank were my friends, but now I don't know."

Bank officials said they had no choice. Bank regulators will force them to foreclose if they don't get their money, they said.

"There are certain rules that regulators expect you to operate under," Clint Moore, the bank's assistant vice president, told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

"Sooner or later, a note's got to be paid or the interest has to be paid,"

he said. "Let's put it that way."

Mrs. Hess posted her land as collateral when she borrowed $16,000 from the Omaha bank three years ago to pay some of her brother's medical bills and some of her property taxes.

She said she planned to use the cows to raise money for payments. She says she kept up with at least the interest until three months ago when the bank wanted a $4,000 payment.

At that time, she contacted the Farm Aid office and the Austin-based Texas Farm Crisis Hot Line became involved earlier this month.

Hot Line spokeswoman Nancille Gallimore said Omaha bankers say a $7,000 payment would delay foreclosure until at least next year. But the bank won't delay foreclosure without the payment, said Nancille Gallimore, executive director of the non-profit group.

On Tuesday, the Hot Line found Mrs. Hess a free lawyer. A Hot Line official was to investigate her circumstances.

"Yes, we can help May," Ms. Gallimore said. "If need be, we can get a bunch of farmers out there to protest it."

Meanwhile, bank officials say that they have talked with Farm Aid and Hot Line officials several times.

"We've told them, 'we don't want to take her place. We don't want to do anything, but is she going to get any money,'" said Dan Middleton, senior vice president of the bank. "We've never received any offers."

Gerald R. Ford, 38th president of the United States, was born to Leslie King and Dorothy Gardner on July 14, 1913. He was named Leslie Jr. At the age of 2, his parents were divorced. His mother later met and married Gerald R. Ford, who formally adopted the boy and gave him his own name.

NOTICE OF PROPOSED REDUCTION IN AT&T'S TEXAS RATES

The Public Utility Commission of the state of Texas has entered orders in two recent cases that would substantially reduce the charges which AT&T pays to the state's local telephone companies and which could allow AT&T to reduce prices for most of AT&T's customers on calls placed within the state of Texas.

The total amount of the reduction to AT&T's customers is expected to be between $115.3 million and $120.6 million. This is in addition to the $19.8 million reduction in AT&T's Texas basic long distance prices that went into effect on March 1, 1986 and is in addition to the approximately $2 billion in AT&T interstate price reductions that took effect earlier this year.

If the changes are approved, all of AT&T's direct dialed long distance directory assistance WATS and 800 service customers would be affected and would experience a decrease in their prices for these services when calling within the state of Texas. The following tables show the anticipated impact of the changes on AT&T customers by service category.

Class of Service	Approximate Overall % Reduction	Approximate Overall Dollar Reduction (in millions)
Long Distance	9.2	$ 68.4
Directory Assistance	20.0	1.0
WATS	29.1	29.7
800	19.9	21.5

The rate reductions are presently anticipated to occur in two phases on or about October 22, 1986 and November 12, 1986. The matter has been assigned as Docket Nos. 6926 and 7113. Persons who wish to intervene or otherwise participate in these proceedings should notify the Commission as soon as possible. A request to intervene or participate or for further information should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Blvd., Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757. Further information also may be obtained by calling the Public Utility Commission Consumer Affairs Division at (512) 458-0223 or (512) 458-0227 or (512) 458-0221 teletypewriter for the deaf. A complete copy of the tariffs reflecting the potential rate reductions will be on file with the Commission on or before October 23, 1986.

Mosquito man gets paid to be human pincushion

ANGLETON, Texas (AP) — Four days a week during mosquito season, Vincente Luna walks through fields and slogs through marshes on a mission.
He calmly waits, even hopes, for mosquitoes to bite him.
And he gets paid money for doing it.
Luna's job with the Brazoria County Mosquito Control District is taking "the counts" how many mosquitoes land on him in a given period of time to give his bosses an idea of where malathion pesticide is needed most.
At 36 points along the edges of the salt marshes, home of voracious varieties of mosquitoes, Luna gets out of his truck to take a count.
His equipment is basic pants and a long-sleeved shirt, a long-handled dipper for taking larva samples, rubber boots, and most importantly his eyes.
The counts, or landing rates, are how many mosquitoes land on his body from the waist down in a minute.
"I have to attract 'em with body heat, be a guinea pig," he said.
He can't use bug spray, since that would scare the mosquitoes away, but Luna said he hasn't used it in years anyway.
"I've been doing it so long I'm used to it," the unperurbed Luna said at one location as clouds of mosquitoes swirled around him.
"They only bother me when they get up my nose or behind my glasses."
Mondays and Thursdays are the salt marsh runs, 120-mile loops from Bridge Harbor marina near Surfside northwest to the Brazoria National Wildlife Refuge and Slop Bowl area, then west along Farm Road 2004 back toward Angleton.
Another mosquito control employee surveys the western salt marshes.
Tuesdays and Fridays are the freshwater runs, were water in and around cities and towns is checked for mosquitoes. On Wednesdays, he checks mosquito traps in various areas that catch mosquitoes which are then tested for diseases.
The saltwater runs may be the best, giving him a chance to drive nameless roads through the vast flatness of the salt marshes that seem to stretch to infinity.
The 73-year-old Luna has been helping Brazoria County fight mosquitoes since 1970. Things have changed, but not very much.
"You've got roads in the marshes now, you can drive where you need to go. And there's two of us now. I used to run the county by myself.

The Newspaper BIBLE

A PRAYER THAT RATTLED THE RAFTERS!

As soon as they were freed, Peter and John found the other disciples and told them what the Council had said.
Then all the believers united in this prayer: "O Lord, Creator of heaven and earth and of the sea and everything in them—You spoke long ago by the Holy Spirit through our ancestor King David, your servant, saying, 'Why do the heathen rage against the Lord, and the foolish nations plan their little plots against Almighty God? The kings of the earth unite to fight against Him, against the anointed Son of God!'"

"That is what is happening here in this city today!" For Herod the king, and Pontius Pilate the governor, and all the Romans—as well as the people of Israel—are united against Jesus, Your anointed Son, Your holy servant. They won't stop at anything that You in Your wise power will let them do. And now, O Lord, hear their threats, and grant to Your servants great boldness in their preaching, and send Your healing power, and may miracles and wonders be done by the name of Your holy servant Jesus."

After this prayer, the building where they were meeting shook and they were all filled with the Holy Spirit and boldly preached God's message. All the believers were of one heart and mind, and no one felt that what he owned was his own; everyone was sharing.

And the apostles preached powerful sermons about the resurrection of the Lord Jesus, and there was warm fellowship among all the believers, and no poverty—for all who owned land or houses sold them and brought the money to the apostles to give to others in need.
Acts 4:23-35

College freshmen drink more, less liberal

WASHINGTON (AP) — Today's college freshmen are more likely to drink beer, but less likely to smoke cigarettes and cling to liberal political ideas than their counterparts of 20 years ago.
They also racked up higher grades in high school than their predecessors, but need more remedial help in college, and they are far more interested in being well-off financially.
Those are some of the findings of a study released today that looks back on 20 years of polling data of 6 million young people as they set out on their college careers.
The report charts some dramatic changes on the nation's campuses since 1966, including the emergence of women as a majority of every freshman class since 1978. Women, outnumbered 57-43 in 1969, now occupy 52 percent of the freshman seats.
The surveys of nearly 300,000 students at 550 colleges each fall are conducted by the Higher Education Research Institute at the University of California, Los Angeles, and sponsored by the Washington-based American Council on Education.
The researchers found that the percentage of freshmen who frequently smoke cigarettes has declined by about half since 1966, from 17 percent to 9 percent, while the percentage of beer-drinkers rose from 54 to 67 percent.
More young men than women have kicked or avoided the smoking habit. Smoking among freshmen men fell by two-thirds over the two decades, but among the women it dropped only 14 percent. In last year's entering class, women were nearly twice as likely to smoke as men, 11.3 percent versus 6.6 percent.
The report says that contrary to the conventional wisdom that college students are more conservative, "the real migration in student political attitudes has not been from left to right but from liberal to middle-of-the-road."
The proportion identifying themselves as political conservatives has risen from 18 percent to 21 percent since 1970, while the proportion of liberals fell from 37 percent to 22 percent, and the middle-of-the-road group increased from 45 percent to 57 percent.
More than half the freshmen in 1969 favored abolishing the death penalty; last year only a quarter did. Support for legalizing marijuana has dropped from 53 percent in 1977 to 22 percent in 1985.
The authors of the study, UCLA education professor and institute director Alexander W. Astin and Kenneth C. Green, the institute's associate director, said the trends "are fascinating and potentially disturbing."
They expressed alarm at the precipitous drop in students who are interested in a career in teaching.
Between 1968 and 1985, the proportion of freshmen planning to pursue elementary or secondary school teaching careers plummeted from 24 percent to 6 percent.
The United States in 1899 ratified the Treaty of Paris in which Spain ceded Cuba, Puerto Rico, Guam and the Philippines to the U.S. for $20 million.
In 1929, Charles Lindbergh inaugurated the first air mail service between the United States and the Panama Canal zone.
During World War II, General Dwight D. Eisenhower was named commander in 1943 of the Allied forces in North Africa.

Long days. You had to rush it," he said.
The six months of the year he takes counts, Luna's days start at Mosquito Control District headquarters in Angleton.
By 7:30 a.m., he is barreling south on Farm Road 523 toward the first stop, tools and equipment rattling in the back of the bright yellow-green four-wheel drive truck.
"I remember when I was a young man in the early '30s, living in Angleton, you'd hear a buzzing, not as loud as an airplane, and you'd look up and see a black cloud," he said.
"You'd think it was rain but it wasn't. It was mosquitoes. It sounded like a small engine."
At many of the stops he gets out and literally beats the bushes with the long-handled dipper, looking for his quarry.
"A lot of times you come down here, they'll cover you up. Not today, though," he said.
The dipper, which he uses to sample water and check for mosquito larvae, also serves another purpose.
"I've killed quite a few rattlers with it," he said dryly. "Got a whole box of rattles at home."
The counts are low this particular day, ranging from zero up to eight to 10 mosquitoes per minute at one location near Cox Lake in the Slop Bowl area of the wildlife refuge.
He also catches a few mosquitoes for later identification at the office, trapping them in a test tube that has chloroform soaked cotton in the bottom.
The vast flatlands of the refuge have ground that ranges from soggy to under-water year round. Dozens of birds spoonbills, marsh hawks, gulls, cranes, herons, egrets break the monotonous landscape.

At one point Luna spots Charles Cooper flying the district's spray plane low over, another part of the marsh and calls him the radio.
"How's it going today, Cooper," he shouts into the radio. "Don't have many out here today, one eight to 10 count."
Cooper acknowledges the message, his voice scratchy with static, and waggles the planes wings in farewell before heading to another part of the marsh.
"That's good for us when I don't find so many. People don't gripe so much," he said with a grin.
There are times, though, when some may question his sanity a little.
Like the times when the counts go up over 75 per minute, or clouds of mosquitoes turn the yellow-green truck almost black, or a boggy spot strands him for hours.
In one pasture, he dips water out of a cow hoofprint. The stagnant brew harbors dozens of larvae.
"These are four or five days away from being mosquitoes. And this is just one cow track," he pointed out.
The days can be long but Luna does not mind being outside.
"I'll probably do this for a while yet," Luna said with a grin as he wheeled the truck into the parking lot at the end of another day of being a human pincushion.

During Nazi operation Waldheim admits to supply officer role

WASHINGTON (AP) — Austrian President Kurt Waldheim ended months of denial by acknowledging he had a role in the Nazi army's "pacification" of a region of Yugoslavia, an operation that cost thousands of lives, The Washington Post reports.
The Post, in today's editions, also reported that in 1947 and 1948, Yugoslav and Soviet intelligence operatives tried blackmailing Waldheim into becoming a communist agent by threatening to charge him with war crimes if he did not cooperate.
Yugoslavian sources told the Post they had heard that Waldheim had been approached to work as a communist agent. But through a spokesman, Waldheim denied the incident, and the Post said it was unable to confirm that he was ever actually recruited.
Waldheim, the former secretary-general of the United Nations, sent a 13-page memo to the Post in April denying that he was involved in the 1942 operation in Kozara, a mountainous area that was home to 80,000 Yugoslavs, including 3,500 partisans. The memo said that Waldheim was transferred to an Italian infantry division 180 miles away, where he was a liaison officer.
However, Gerold Christian, a spokesman for Waldheim, told the newspaper that "additional research" has revealed that Waldheim's earlier statement was incorrect. Christian said Waldheim was in Kozara serving as a supply officer.
The New York Times, in today's editions, also confirmed through a spokesman Waldheim's involvement with the Nazi unit. "He was in the operation, but he was not in the fighting troops," Christian said. The spokesman said that Waldheim served several functions, including translator and supply officer.
Christian, the Times reported, said he could not explain why Waldheim could not previously recall his participation in the unit.
Eli M. Rosenbaum, the general counsel of the World Jewish Congress, reached in New York by the Times Wednesday night, cited the conflicting accounts given by Waldheim.
"Waldheim has flip-flopped so many times that he has lost credibility on everything relating to wartime activities," the Times quoted Rosenbaum as saying. "The man obviously has no shame, and I only wonder how many different stories he feels he can come up with."
The Post cited German reports showing that Lt. Kurt Waldheim was a member of the staff of the Nazi commander in the Kozara area, Gen. Friedrich von Stahl.
The Post said documents show Stahl recommended Waldheim and others for the puppet Croatian

The report says that contrary to the conventional wisdom that college students are more conservative, "the real migration in student political attitudes has not been from left to right but from liberal to middle-of-the-road."
The proportion identifying themselves as political conservatives has risen from 18 percent to 21 percent since 1970, while the proportion of liberals fell from 37 percent to 22 percent, and the middle-of-the-road group increased from 45 percent to 57 percent.
More than half the freshmen in 1969 favored abolishing the death penalty; last year only a quarter did. Support for legalizing marijuana has dropped from 53 percent in 1977 to 22 percent in 1985.
The authors of the study, UCLA education professor and institute director Alexander W. Astin and Kenneth C. Green, the institute's associate director, said the trends "are fascinating and potentially disturbing."
They expressed alarm at the precipitous drop in students who are interested in a career in teaching.
Between 1968 and 1985, the proportion of freshmen planning to pursue elementary or secondary school teaching careers plummeted from 24 percent to 6 percent.
The United States in 1899 ratified the Treaty of Paris in which Spain ceded Cuba, Puerto Rico, Guam and the Philippines to the U.S. for $20 million.
In 1929, Charles Lindbergh inaugurated the first air mail service between the United States and the Panama Canal zone.
