Judge blocks FCS from fund transfers

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Plans to transfer money from healthy farm credit associations in Texas to financially strapped farmers elsewhere in the country have been blocked temporarily by a federal judge.

U.S. District Judge Halbert O. Woodward Thursday issued a temporary restraining order against the Farm Credit Administration and Farm Credit System Capital Corp.

Woodward set another hearing for Oct. 3 before he decides on the case brought by numerous Texas Federal Land Bank and Production Credit associations.

The Texas entities filed suit to block the Farm Credit System from using money from healthy Production Credit Associations to bolster weaker ones.

There are provisions in the Farm Credit System allowing such a transfer of money among the associations.

But several member associations in Texas claim that a transfer of millions from their coffers will sink them into the same financial straits being experienced by those that the funds are supposed to help.

In arguing against the transfer plan, Production Credit Association attorney, Harlow Sprouse of Amarillo, said: "The action (transfer of funds) probably will help farmers somewhere else, but it will hurt us. How does that serve the public interest?"

Almost a year ago, Farm Credit System officials announced that monetary aid from outside the system could be necessary to recover $428 million in agricultural loan losses the previous year.

The Farm Credit System had set Monday as the day for starting the transfer of funds from healthy associations, including those in Texas, into troubled spots elsewhere.

But the transfer was halted by Woodward's action.

"I am not intimating which side I will choose," Woodward said of his temporary order Thursday.

Alan Van Fleet of Houston, a Federal Land Bank lawyer, said, "Texas was the first to repay the government seed money (setting up the credit system) more than 20 years ago."

"The purpose of the plan was not that the strong would become the weak. That (transfer) would be the beginning of the end of the FLB system in Texas."

Seven panelists to speak at drug forum Monday

The cocaine death of 9-year-old Manuel Saucedo, who died in August from an allergic reaction to the drug, has inspired the organization of a Drug Information Forum on Monday night to advise Hereford parents and youth on drug use and abuse.

At 7:30 p.m. in the Hereford High School Auditorium, seven panelists with experience in drug abuse, drug prevention programs and an drug rehabilitation will give short talks and be available for questions from the audience.

The forum is under joint sponsorship of concerned citizens affiliated with The Chemical People, Deaf Smith County Sheriff's Department, Hereford Police and Hereford Ministerial Alliance. Sponsors organized the forum to make Hereford residents more aware of the problem in Deaf Smith County.

Panelists for the forum will be: Lt. David Wagner, Hereford Police Department's narcotics officer. Wagner will exhibit samples of controlled substances and drug paraphernalia to show parents what to look for if they suspect a child is using drugs.

Colleen Duffy, the Deaf Smith County Juvenile Probation Officer, will discuss her experiences with youth drug offenders which she has encountered during nine years in juvenile work. She will discuss legal ramifications and review prevention tips for parents.

Dennis Latham, associate pastor at the Hereford Church of the Nazarene, and a former drug user, will tell of his experience as a substance abuser and how he came clean.

Gary Longanecker, director of Hereford Family Services, will represent The Chemical People on the panel.

Kay Kropff, director of the Drug and Alcohol Abuse Care Center in Canyon, will have information on rehabilitation.

Peggy Boehning, director of nursing at the Drug and Alcohol Abuse Care Center in Canyon, will provide information on the psychological and medical effects of drug abuse.

Stan Kropff, director of the Panhandle Regional Crime Prevention Program in Amarillo, will have a film on controlled substances.

Tax overhaul bill ready for last hurdle

WASHINGTON (AP) — Supporters of landmark tax-overhaul legislation are confidently predicting the package will easily pass its final congressional test in the Senate, clearing the way for the most thorough revision of the tax code in a generation.

Senate debate on the measure, which sailed through the House on Thursday on a bipartisan 292-136 vote, could begin as early as today.

"We will have a margin equally as impressive" when the Senate votes, predicted Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee and a chief backer of the measure. He added that perhaps as many as 85 of the 100 senators would vote to approve the legislation.

President Reagan's signature on the legislation, which he has declared to be his No. 1 domestic priority, is certain. A ceremonial signing is likely the week of Oct. 5.

The bill would cut individual and corporate tax rates and eliminate or reduce several deductions and exclusions, including those for Individual Retirement Accounts, consumer interest and sales taxes. On the average, individual taxes would be cut about 6.1 percent and more than 6 million working poor would be dropped from the tax rolls.

Nonetheless, several million couples and individuals would face tax increases.

The reduction in individual taxes is being financed by increasing the overall burden on business by $120 billion over the next five years, a move that concerns opponents of the legislation and some economists.

Much of the upcoming Senate debate, expected to stretch over two days or more, was expected to focus on that concern.

Despite the strong showing in the House — 176 Democrats and 118 Republicans voted yes while 74 Democrats and 62 Republicans voted no — legislators had mixed feelings about the bill, which was evident from the House debate.

"Tax bills are kind of like fish: five days later, they both stink," said Rep. Buddy Roemer, D-La., who voted to approve the measure.

Lower rates are the most striking feature of the package.

The top individual rate, now 50 percent, would be cut to 33 percent, although about three-quarters of Americans would pay a flat 15 percent rate. The 46 percent maximum corporate rate would be cut to 34 percent.

High water contamination found under nuclear plants

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. John Glenn, releasing government findings that groundwater under many nuclear defense plants is highly contaminated, likens the environmental problem to a "creeping Chernobyl."

"We'd better wake up before it's too late and we find ourselves with an environmental disaster that could even rival Chernobyl," the Ohio Democrat said Thursday, referring to the nuclear disaster at the Soviet nuclear power plant last April.

According to the General Accounting Office report, the groundwater under many nuclear defense plants operated for the Department of Energy is contaminated at high levels with radioactive or chemical materials or both.

The report included a review of the Feed Materials Production Center in Fernald, Ohio, the Mound Laboratory in Miamisburg, Ohio, the Savannah River, S.C., fuel fabrication plant, the Savannah River reprocessing facility, the N-reactor in Richland, Wash., the reprocessing plant at Richland, the Rocky Flats fabrication plant in Colorado and the Y-12 plant at Oak Ridge, Tenn.

"Groundwater at eight of the nine facilities we reviewed is contaminated with various radioactive and/or chemical materials as a result of the facilities' operation," the GAO said. "In some cases solvent contamination exceeds proposed drinking water standards by a factor of 1,000 or more. In other cases, the radioactive material in the groundwater is more than 400 times greater than the drinking water standards."

The GAO, which is the investigative arm of Congress, also reviewed the Los Alamos National Laboratory in New Mexico, but found no groundwater contaminants that exceed drinking water standards. And it said concentrations at the Mound facility do not exceed standards.

DOE does not believe the contamination poses a threat to public health because it is generally confined within the facilities' boundaries or quickly becomes diluted or dissipated if it has migrated off-site, the GAO said.

Glenn called the information in the

Third meeting fails to resolve Daniloff case

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz held a third and lengthy meeting with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze, but failed to pin down an agreement to free reporter Nicholas Daniloff from Moscow.

"The Daniloff case is still not resolved, that is the bottom line," State Department spokesman Bernard Kalb said after the 1 1/4-hour session Thursday night at the U.S. mission to the United Nations.

Shultz was flying back to Washington today and planned to return to New York Sunday. U.S. officials left open the possibility of another session with Shevardnadze before the foreign minister's scheduled departure for Canada Tuesday.

Apart from Daniloff's confinement, a U.S. order expelling 25 Soviet diplomats from the United Nations is an obstacle to a settlement — and to a superpower summit meeting.

"In your eyes, Daniloff is the obstacle," Gennady Gerasimov, the Soviet Foreign Ministry spokesman, said Thursday. "In our eyes the order is an obstacle."

Kalb declined to provide any details of Shultz' meeting with Shevardnadze.

House adopts cap on subsidy pay

WASHINGTON (AP) — Worried over reports that some of America's largest agribusinesses are receiving multi-million-dollar subsidies, the House is imposing a limit of $250,000 per farmer in federal payments.

"This is going to prevent the great big, abusive payments," said Rep. Silvio Conte, R-Mass., who forced a compromise on the issue with farm-state lawmakers. "This is a step in the right direction."

The subsidy cap was tacked onto a $562 billion spending bill which passed the House late Thursday, 391-208. But the measure still is subject to Senate action, and White House officials have warned it could be vetoed. So passage of the subsidy limit is far from assured.

But Conte's move was a sign that lawmakers have grown impatient with the high cost of farm programs. Some from farm states also shared that feeling, worrying that reports of huge payments will erode support for future farm bills.

The government is expected to spend a record $30 billion this year on various agriculture programs, and new s in the farm law are resulting in very large payments to some producers and merchants.

A California cotton and wheat operation, the J.G. Boswell Co., is expected to receive at least $20 million in subsidies, for example. Rice and dairy payments of more than $1 million will be common, and payments under wheat and corn programs will run well above normal levels.

The law is aimed at lowering commodity prices to make them more competitive internationally, while shielding farmers from the impact of lower prices through subsidies.

But Conte said he and other non-farm lawmakers had been misled when they voted for the farm bill last year.

"They argued that this would help the poor, desperate family farmers who were going bankrupt," Conte said of his farm-state colleagues who pressed for the subsidies in last year's farm bill. "They're still in trouble, and the rich are getting richer."

The Conte amendment would retain the current $50,000-per-farmer limit on direct income subsidies, but would create a new, overall limit of $250,000 on those and other payments. Included in the new cap would be disaster payments, loan forgiveness and other subsidies. It would apply to 1987 through 1999 crops.

Baptist, Clements criticize White

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White is hearing a chorus of criticism over his decision to allow the pari-mutuel gambling bill to become law without his signature.

Republican gubernatorial candidate Bill Clements said Thursday the move shows White's indecisiveness, while the Christian Life Commission said White had allowed gambling interests to hijack the special legislative session.

In announcing his decision Wednesday, White said his Baptist convictions and his personal beliefs make him opposed to gambling. He said he will vote against it when the question is placed on the ballot next year.

But White said he also believes it was his duty as a public official to give voters the last word on the controversy, so he allowed the bill establishing the November 1987 gambling referendum to become law without his signature.

Gary McNeil, spokesman for the Christian Life Commission — an arm of the Baptist General Convention of Texas — said White had "allowed gambling to hijack the special sessions of 1986," which was convened to solve the state's $2.8 billion budget deficit.

House panel approves tax bill

AUSTIN (AP) — A sales and gasoline tax hike bill is set for House debate, thanks to Speaker Gib Lewis' move that freed it from a committee that had it bottled up.

Lewis took the stalled tax bill from the Ways and Means Committee Thursday and gave it to the State Affairs Committee. The strategy worked — it took about six hours for the State Affairs Committee to vote 7-4 approval for the $758.5 million, temporary tax bill.

"We're running out of time," Lewis told House colleagues in explaining the move.

It is not unusual for a House speaker to send a stalled bill to another committee. But it is unusual for a tax bill to get that treatment.

The tax bill set for Saturday debate in the House would raise the sales tax from the current 4 1/2 percent to 5 1/4 percent, and add 5 cents to the current 10-cent-per-gallon gasoline tax.

If the House and Senate approve the plan by a simple majority, both increases would take effect Jan. 1. But if both chambers approve it by a two-thirds majority, a prospect lawmakers called unlikely, it would take effect immediately once the governor signs it.

The committee-approved measure would also allow cities and counties not collecting transit taxes to add a half-penny to their local sales tax as a means of reducing property taxes.

Lewis was the main roadblock to tax hikes until last week when he conceded that spending cuts would fall short of solving the cash crunch caused by a projected $2.8 billion budget deficit.

AUSTIN (AP) — The lawmaker who created the ambitiously named Texas Commission on Economy and Efficiency won House support Thursday for his push to kill the commission.

It has been inefficient, he said.

"Nothing has come out of it," said Rep. Charles Evans, R-Hurst.

In a voice vote, the House gave preliminary approval to Evans' bill to put the commission out of business in January. The 15-member commission was created in 1985 and given a four-year mission to find ways to save state money.

"I'm not upset," Evans said. "I just don't think they've done their job."

His bill faces another House vote before going to the Senate.

Evans said commission input was needed, but lacking, as lawmakers work on the projected $2.8 billion budget deficit.

The commission "has not made one iota of a statement, and they've had two years to look into it," he said.

Jess Irwin, commission executive director, said the agency is working on reports that should be ready in December. He said there is less state government fat to look for because of voluntary cuts made by state agencies earlier this year as a result of the budget crisis.

"I don't know why he's dissatisfied," Irwin said of Evans. "He has never expressed his displeasure with me."

The commission had $185,000 to spend during the current biennium, and Irwin said the agency would have had to find private funds in order to continue operating beyond January.

The Legislature for the past two months has been grappling with the budget problems after Comptroller Bob Bullock forecast during the summer that the 1986-1987 deficit could reach $3.5 billion.

Since then, the deficit projection has been lowered to $2.8 billion, primarily due to the slide in oil prices and the resulting effect on the Texas economy.

Citizens groups attack Air Force plans for radio tower network

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Air Force, seeking suggestions on what to include in an environmental study of a nationwide network of radio towers intended to survive nuclear attack, got some unwelcome advice: describe the effect of an atomic blast on host communities.

Officials of the service's Electronic Systems Division made clear at the outset of a hearing Thursday they were thinking of such elements as the effects on land use, health and the adjacent scenery by the Ground Wave Emergency Network, or GWEN.

One such GWEN tower is being constructed 6 miles west of Hereford on Harrison Highway.

Not ripe for inclusion, said Col. Arthur Kishiyama, chairman of the division's environmental protection committee, was the effect a nuclear war would have on the land and population surrounding the towers.

"We believe that a reasonable cause-and-effect relationship between the presence of GWEN — the cause — and nuclear attack in a future war — the effect — cannot be established," Kishiyama said. "In fact, we believe the opposite is true: that GWEN will help deter a nuclear war by enhancing our capability for strategic communications."

Claims that GWEN invites attack "are speculation," the officer said, and "the National Environmental Policy Act does not require analyses of speculative impacts."

But many of the 14 public witnesses representing environmental, community and anti-nuclear groups contended otherwise. And they said the deterrence policy was just as speculative.

Eric Christianson of the Natural Resources Defense Council suggested the nuclear attack question was no more speculative than the requirement that operators of nuclear power plants take into account possible attacks by terrorists.

"There are no potential impacts of the GWEN system" on the environment "greater than nuclear war," added Barbara Keller, legal coordinator for the No-GWEN Alliance of Lane County, Ore., which is fighting a proposed tower site in federal court.

Nancy Foster, co-director of The GWEN Project in Amherst, Mass., complained that an earlier environmental assessment document by the Air Force made no mention that the radio network would be used in a nuclear conflict.

GWEN is intended to relay teletype orders to nuclear missile and bomber bases nationwide in case of an enemy nuclear attack. The network's radio signals hug the ground and thus are designed to be immune to the communications blackout in the upper atmosphere, known as the electromagnetic pulse, that a nuclear explosion can cause.

With the United States having survivable communications available to order a counterstrike, the military reasoned, the Soviets would be less likely to launch a first-strike attack.

Col. Paul Hanson, who directs the project from Hanscom Air Force Base, Mass., said about 30 of the 299-foot-tall GWEN towers have been erected. The goal is 56 in the current phase connecting 37 military bases and command centers.

Under the new phase, for which a draft environmental impact statement will be issued next February or March, the number of towers would grow to 127.

The GWEN project, with an ultimate price tag estimated at $800 million, has suffered recent setbacks in Congress. The House Appropriations Committee trimmed the Pentagon's $97 million request for the 1987 fiscal year to $51 million, and the counterpart panel in the Senate slashed it to $20 million.

Both committees cited what they called the Air Force's failure to address concerns of citizens in the largely rural communities chosen as GWEN sites.

Some of that grassroots resentment surfaced at the hearing.

"We were repeatedly told that federal supremacy rules," Gail Pocock of Sherman, Maine, said in describing the attitude of Air Force officials at a town meeting. She said she was concerned by the effect that a tower planned for her area would have on farm land.

Victoria Lord, also of Sherman, branded the Air Force irresponsible and unresponsive, ill-treating people who "pay the taxes to support the country and fight for freedom."

Hanson, who took over as project manager earlier this year, acknowledged such community-relations problems and said the service now was working cooperatively with Gov. Joseph Brennan and other officials and groups in Maine.

Regan set to veto sanctions bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, abandoned by key allies in a tough foreign policy fight, was poised to veto legislation today imposing new economic sanctions against the white-minority government of South Africa.

Reagan has until midnight to veto the measure or it will become law without his signature.

The legislation, which was approved by huge margins in both the House and Senate, includes a ban on all new American investment and bank loans in South Africa.

The White House is resigned to seeing the Democratic-controlled House override the veto, leaving it up to the Republican-ruled Senate to decide whether Reagan wins or loses.

Even in the Senate, Reagan faces long odds. Thirty-four votes are needed to sustain the veto if all 100 senators vote, and Reagan had only 14 senators on his side when the legislation was debated.

It's unclear how hard Reagan will fight to have his veto sustained, or whether he will offer "sweeteners" to build support.

"It all depends on where the votes are," said one senior administration official, speaking on condition he not be identified. "If we're within striking distance, we'll go for it."

Journalist escapes from kidnappers

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — An abducted British journalist said he ignored a gunman's threat to shoot him if he did not submit and kicked his way to freedom today when his kidnappers' car got stuck in traffic.

Correspondent David Hirst of The Guardian newspaper, the longest-serving Western correspondent in Beirut, said he was seized by three gunmen on the Moslem side of the Mreijeh crossing on the Lebanese cap's Green Line at 6:45 a.m.

He said the taxi he was riding in got a flat tire and that the driver and an escort of three Druse militiamen were changing it when the gunmen approached the vehicle. They asked him who he was, then pulled him from the car.

At least three kidnapped Britons have been killed in Lebanon during the past 18 months.

The silver-haired Hirst, who speaks Arabic, said his abductors forced him into a BMW automobile and were driving him toward a Shiite Moslem suburb when the car stopped in a traffic jam.

The journalist, in his late 50s, said one of the kidnappers threatened to shoot him if he did not stop kicking and shouting.

But he kept struggling and kicked the door open and escaped, he said. He made his way back to downtown Beirut and the office of a Western news agency, where, his face scratched, he told other journalists of his ordeal.

Government reacts to broadcast

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The government reacted indignantly Thursday to the use of the Mexican flag and other national symbols in a CBS News broadcast implicating a cousin of President Miguel de la Madrid in the cocaine trade.

The official El Nacional newspaper carried a front-page headline charging "insidious manipulation of our patriotic symbols."

Attorney General Sergio Garcia Ramirez, who summoned local reporters to his office Wednesday evening to respond to the allegations, also identified the figure disguised and given a code name "Kermit" in the television interview, as Jacques Denise Derive.

"Kermit" was identified on the broadcast as a former bodyguard of Edmundo de la Madrid, the president's first cousin.

He said the cocaine was carried in Edmundo de la Madrid's suitcases on return trips from unspecified South American countries and that customs officials did not require him to open them.

Garcia Ramirez confirmed that the man interviewed figured in the investigation that the president ordered after the allegations first surfaced in the United States earlier this year.

"We have not released up to now the details of this investigation, because releasing them would have compromised and frustrated the attorney general said.

The text of his statement was made available Thursday by his office.

He said premature release of information about the investigation would only benefit criminals.

Study shows virus like AIDS may travel through mosquitos

NEW YORK (AP) — Although a wealth of evidence indicates AIDS is not transmitted by mosquitoes, an unconfirmed study suggests that leukemia caused by a virus like the AIDS virus may be spread by mosquitoes or bedbugs, a scientist said.

"We've argued that a good candidate for transmission would be a domestic insect," Melvyn Greaves of the University of London's Institute for Cancer Research said in a recent interview.

One such insect is the mosquito known as Aedes aegypti, which transmits yellow fever, Greaves said. "The other would be a bedbug or similar insect which is not a mosquito but takes blood meals."

The findings raise again the question of whether AIDS might be transmitted by mosquitoes, Greaves said. Other researchers interviewed by The Associated Press noted, however, that previous studies have found no evidence of the transmission of AIDS by mosquitoes.

Greaves said he and his colleagues found that the leukemia, a form called T-cell leukemia, was most likely to occur near open water sources — where mosquitoes breed — and in the poorest homes, where it is difficult to keep mosquitoes out.

T-cell leukemia is caused by a virus called HTLV-I, for human T-cell lymphotropic virus, type I. AIDS is caused by a virus that is frequently designated HTLV-III (type 3) and is believed by some scientists to be related to HTLV-I.

Truckers unaware of new laws

AUSTIN — DPS License and Weight Service officers report they are encountering truckers who say they are unaware of a recently enacted Texas law.

S.B. 332, which became effective on Jan. 1, 1986, requires that the name of the owner, operator or lessee of commercial vehicles with three or more axles be displayed on both sides of the vehicles. All truck-tractors also are included. The statute mandates lettering with a minimum height of two inches.

Failure to comply with the law is a Class C misdemeanor offense which is punishable by a maximum fine of $200.

Public utility vehicles, registered farm vehicles and trucks hauling timber in its natural state on the first movement are exempt from the statute.

DPS officials indicate that most tractor-trailer trucks were in compliance with the law before the effective date. The statute should help persons identify trucks which leave the scene of an accident or illegally dump waste.

Ann Landers

SHHH

DEAR ANN LANDERS: The Lord was very good to me. He gave me the opportunity, quite by chance, to see your column that was titled: A PRAYER WRITTEN FOR PEOPLE WHO LIVE WITH THE HARD-OF-HEARING. I happen to be one of those people.

It has taken me a couple of weeks to sit down and write this letter. I could not get your column out of my mind. Whenever I was alone I kept thinking what my poor wife must be going through while suffering with her progressive hearing loss. The hearing aids she bought never achieved the results she anticipated.

For a long time I thought she was self-centered and not interested in anything I (or anyone else) had to say. Now I realize it was not a lack of interest, but an inability to hear what was being said.

My wife is still reluctant to join in conversations, afraid that what she thought she heard may not be what was actually said and that she might give an odd reply and appear foolish. So that dear woman remains silent, knowing full well that many people believe she is stupid.

The literature I received from the organization you recommended, SHHH, was excellent. Thank you for performing a valuable service.—Mr. J. in Havertown, Pa.

DEAR MR. J.: Thank you for letting me know I helped. I have recommended two organizations that send literature and assist the hearing-impaired and am pleased to do so again. They are SHHH (Self-Help for Hard of Hearing People, Inc.) 7800

Wisconsin Avenue, Bethesda, MD 20814, and the Hearing and Tinnitus Help Association, 32-A S. Main St., New Hope, Pa. 18938. (Enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope—39 cents postage.)

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I've never written to you before but have no one else to talk to about this. Right now I'm so mad I'm seeing stars.

What can one do when a good friend brings along her mother-in-law to every luncheon, dinner, wedding, picnic, whatever? This uninvited person takes a place at the table as if she were expected.

Last week I attended an elegant dinner where the hostess could not join us at the table because there was no room. The ever-offending mother-in-law showed up as usual and the hostess had to dash off and write up a place-card for her.

What makes people so rude, crude and arrogant to think they can get away with such behavior? Is there a solution to his problem?—Kentucky Fury

DEAR KEN: The solution is simple. When you invite the daughter-in-law say the following: "Space is sharply limited. This invitation is for you and you only. Please do not bring your mother-in-law. There will be no place for her."

DEAR ANN LANDERS: When I read that one of your correspondents suggested onion to relieve the pain of a burn, I knew I had to write and let you know that half an onion works like magic on a bee or wasp sting.

The pain stops at once and the swelling goes right down. I speak from experience.—Ware Neck, Va.

DEAR WARE: Thanks for the tip. If anyone out there tries it, I'd like some feedback.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am planning to get married around Christmas. A few months ago, in haste, I asked my future sister-in-law to be my maid of honor. I regret it now because I am not as fond of her as I once was. Can I "annul" that request and ask my closest friend?—Asked Too Fast In Montreal

DEAR TOO FAST: If you "annul" that invitation, you future sister-in-law may never completely forgive you. Don't take the chance of creating a lifetime problem. It isn't worth it.

Teaching your kids about the facts of life can be easy or awkward. Ann Landers' booklet, "How, What, and When to Tell Your Child About Sex" can spell the difference. Send 50 cents along with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request, to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611.

Baptist, Clements criticize White

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White is hearing a chorus of criticism over his decision to allow the pari-mutuel gambling bill to become law without his signature.

Republican gubernatorial candidate Bill Clements said Thursday the move shows White's indecisiveness, while the Christian Life Commission said White had allowed gambling interests to hijack the special legislative session.

In announcing his decision Wednesday, White said his Baptist convictions and his personal beliefs make him opposed to gambling. He said he will vote against it when the question is placed on the ballot next year.

But White said he also believes it was his duty as a public official to give voters the last word on the controversy, so he allowed the bill establishing the November 1987 gambling referendum to become law without his signature.

Gary McNeil, spokesman for the Christian Life Commission — an arm of the Baptist General Convention of Texas — said White had "allowed gambling to hijack the special sessions of 1986," which was convened to solve the state's $2.8 billion budget deficit.

House panel approves tax bill

AUSTIN (AP) — A sales and gasoline tax hike bill is set for House debate, thanks to Speaker Gib Lewis' move that freed it from a committee that had it bottled up.

Lewis took the stalled tax bill from the Ways and Means Committee Thursday and gave it to the State Affairs Committee. The strategy worked — it took about six hours for the State Affairs Committee to vote 7-4 approval for the $758.5 million, temporary tax bill.

"We're running out of time," Lewis told House colleagues in explaining the move.

It is not unusual for a House speaker to send a stalled bill to another committee. But it is unusual for a tax bill to get that treatment.

The tax bill set for Saturday debate in the House would raise the sales tax from the current 4 1/2 percent to 5 1/4 percent, and add 5 cents to the current 10-cent-per-gallon gasoline tax.

If the House and Senate approve the plan by a simple majority, both increases would take effect Jan. 1. But if both chambers approve it by a two-thirds majority, a prospect lawmakers called unlikely, it would take effect immediately once the governor signs it.

The committee-approved measure would also allow cities and counties not collecting transit taxes to add a half-penny to their local sales tax as a means of reducing property taxes.

Lewis was the main roadblock to tax hikes until last week when he conceded that spending cuts would fall short of solving the cash crunch caused by a projected $2.8 billion budget deficit.

Regan set to veto sanctions bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, abandoned by key allies in a tough foreign policy fight, was poised to veto legislation today imposing new economic sanctions against the white-minority government of South Africa.

Reagan has until midnight to veto the measure or it will become law without his signature.

The legislation, which was approved by huge margins in both the House and Senate, includes a ban on all new American investment and bank loans in South Africa.

The White House is resigned to seeing the Democratic-controlled House override the veto, leaving it up to the Republican-ruled Senate to decide whether Reagan wins or loses.

Even in the Senate, Reagan faces long odds. Thirty-four votes are needed to sustain the veto if all 100 senators vote, and Reagan had only 14 senators on his side when the legislation was debated.

It's unclear how hard Reagan will fight to have his veto sustained, or whether he will offer "sweeteners" to build support.

"It all depends on where the votes are," said one senior administration official, speaking on condition he not be identified. "If we're within striking distance, we'll go for it."

Journalist escapes from kidnappers

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — An abducted British journalist said he ignored a gunman's threat to shoot him if he did not submit and kicked his way to freedom today when his kidnappers' car got stuck in traffic.

Correspondent David Hirst of The Guardian newspaper, the longest-serving Western correspondent in Beirut, said he was seized by three gunmen on the Moslem side of the Mreijeh crossing on the Lebanese capl's Green Line at 6:45 a.m.

He said the taxi he was riding in got a flat tire and that the driver and an escort of three Druse militiamen were changing it when the gunmen approached the vehicle. They asked him who he was, then pulled him from the car.

At least three kidnapped Britons have been killed in Lebanon during the past 18 months.

The silver-haired Hirst, who speaks Arabic, said his abductors forced him into a BMW automobile and were driving him toward a Shiite Moslem suburb when the car stopped in a traffic jam.

The journalist, in his late 50s, said one of the kidnappers threatened to shoot him if he did not stop kicking and shouting.

But he kept struggling and kicked the door open and escaped, he said. He made his way back to downtown Beirut and the office of a Western news agency, where, his face scratched, he told other journalists of his ordeal.

Government reacts to broadcast

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The government reacted indignantly Thursday to the use of the Mexican flag and other national symbols in a CBS News broadcast implicating a cousin of President Miguel de la Madrid in the cocaine trade.

The official El Nacional newspaper carried a front-page headline charging "insidious manipulation of our patriotic symbols."

Attorney General Sergio Garcia Ramirez, who summoned local reporters to his office Wednesday evening to respond to the allegations, also identified the figure disguised and given a code name "Kermit" in the television interview, as Jacques Denise Derive.

"Kermit" was identified on the broadcast as a former bodyguard of Edmundo de la Madrid, the president's first cousin.

He said the cocaine was carried in Edmundo de la Madrid's suitcases on return trips from unspecified South American countries and that customs officials did not require him to open them.

Garcia Ramirez confirmed that the man interviewed figured in the investigation that the president ordered after the allegations surfaced in the United States earlier this year.

"We have not released up to now the details of this investigation, because releasing them would have compromised and frustrated the attorney general said.

The text of his statement was made available Thursday by his office.

He said premature release of information about the investigation would only benefit criminals.

AUSTIN (AP) — The lawmaker who created the ambitiously named Texas Commission on Economy and Efficiency won House support Thursday for his push to kill the commission.

It has been inefficient, he said.

"Nothing has come out of it," said Rep. Charles Evans, R-Hurst.

In a voice vote, the House gave preliminary approval to Evans' bill to put the commission out of business in January. The 15-member commission was created in 1985 and given a four-year mission to find ways to save state money.

"I'm not upset," Evans said. "I just don't think they've done their job."

His bill faces another House vote before going to the Senate.

Evans said commission input was needed, but lacking, as lawmakers worked on the projected $2.8 billion budget deficit.

The commission "has not made one iota of a statement, and they've had two years to look into it," he said.

Jess Irwin, commission executive director, said the agency is working on reports that should be ready in December. He said there is less state government fat to look for because of voluntary cuts made by state agencies earlier this year as a result of the budget crisis.

"I don't know why he's dissatisfied," Irwin said of Evans. "He has never expressed his displeasure with me."

The commission had $185,000 to spend during the current biennium, and Irwin said the agency would have had to find private funds in order to continue operating beyond January.

The Legislature for the past two months has been grappling with the budget problems after Comptroller Bob Bullock forecast during the summer that the 1986-1987 deficit could reach $3.5 billion.

Since then, the deficit projection has been lowered to $2.8 billion, primarily due to the slide in oil prices and the resulting effect on the Texas economy.

Citizens groups attack Air Force plans for radio tower network

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Air Force, seeking suggestions on what to include in an environmental study of a nationwide network of radio towers intended to survive nuclear attack, got some unwelcome advice: describe the effect of an atomic blast on host communities.

Officials of the service's Electronic Systems Division made clear at the outset of a hearing Thursday they were thinking of such elements as the effects on land use, health and the adjacent scenery by the Ground Wave Emergency Network, or GWEN.

One such GWEN tower is being constructed 6 miles west of Hereford on Harrison Highway.

Not ripe for inclusion, said Col. Arthur Kishiyama, chairman of the division's environmental protection committee, was the effect a nuclear war would have on the land and population surrounding the towers.

"We believe that a reasonable cause-and-effect relationship between the presence of GWEN — the cause — and nuclear attack in a future war — the effect — cannot be established," Kishiyama said. "In fact, we believe the opposite is true: that GWEN will help deter a nuclear

Claims that GWEN invites attack "are speculation," the officer said, and "the National Environmental Policy Act does not require analyses of speculative impacts."

But many of the 14 public witnesses representing environmental, community and anti-nuclear groups contended otherwise. And they said the deterrence policy was just as speculative.

Eric Christianson of the Natural Resources Defense Council suggested the nuclear attack question was no more speculative than the requirement that operators of nuclear power plants take into account possible attacks by terrorists.

"There are no potential impacts of the GWEN system" on the environment "greater than nuclear war," added Barbara Keller, legal coordinator for the No-GWEN Alliance of Lane County, Ore., which is fighting a proposed tower site in federal court.

Nancy Foster, co-director of The GWEN Project in Amherst, Mass., complained that an earlier environmental assessment document by the Air Force made no mention that the radio network would be used in a nuclear conflict.

GWEN is intended to relay teletyped orders to nuclear missile and bomber bases nationwide in case of an enemy nuclear attack. The network's radio signals hug the ground and thus are designed to be immune to the communications blackout in the upper atmosphere, known as the electromagnetic pulse, that a nuclear explosion can cause.

With the United States having survivable communications available to order a counterstrike, the military reasoned, the Soviets would be less likely to launch a first-strike attack.

Lt. Col. Paul Hanson, who directs the project from Hanscom Air Force Base, Mass., said about 30 of the 299-foot-tall GWEN towers have been erected. The goal is 56 in the current phase connecting 37 military bases and command centers.

Under the new phase, for which a draft environmental impact statement will be issued next February or March, the number of towers would grow to 127.

The GWEN project, with an ultimate price tag estimated at $800 million, has suffered recent setbacks in Congress. The House Appropriations Committee trimmed the Pentagon's $97 million request for the 1987 fiscal year to $51 million, and the counterpart panel in the Senate slashed it to $20 million.

Both committees cited what they called the Air Force's failure to address concerns of citizens in the largely rural communities chosen as GWEN sites.

Some of that grassroots resentment surfaced at the hearing.

"We were repeatedly told that federal supremacy rules," Gail Pocock of Sherman, Maine, said in describing the attitude of Air Force officials at a town meeting. She said she was concerned by the effect that a tower planned for her area would have on farm land.

Victoria Lord, also of Sherman, branded the Air Force irresponsible and unresponsive, ill-treating people who "pay the taxes to support the country and fight for freedom."

Hanson, who took over as project manager earlier this year, acknowledged such community-relations problems and said the service now was working cooperatively with Gov. Joseph Brennan and other officials and groups in Maine.

Study shows virus like AIDS may travel through mosquitos

NEW YORK (AP) — Although a wealth of evidence indicates AIDS is not transmitted by mosquitoes, an unconfirmed study suggests that leukemia caused by a virus like AIDS virus may be spread by mosquitoes or bedbugs, a scientist says.

"We've argued that a good candidate for transmission would be a domestic insect," Melvyn Greaves of the University of London's Institute for Cancer Research said in a recent interview.

One such insect is the mosquito known as Aedes aegypti, which transmits yellow fever, Greaves said. "The other would be a bedbug or similar insect which is not a mosquito but takes blood meals."

The finding raises again the question of whether AIDS might be transmitted by mosquitoes, Greaves said.

GROUNDWATER

report "shocking and frightening."

"What these figures show is that the Department of Energy and its predecessors have been carrying out their mission to produce nuclear weapons with an attitude of neglect bordering on contempt for environmental protection," Glenn said.

DOE spokesman David Devane said the department has initiated an aggressive program of environmental safety and health initiatives.

"We recognize that the nine facilities addressed in the GAO report have environmental problems," Devane said. "We've already included them among the top priority sites that are being reworked."

found that the leukemia, a form called T-cell leukemia, was most likely to occur near open water sources — where mosquitoes breed — and in the poorest homes, where it is difficult to keep mosquitoes out.

T-cell leukemia is caused by a virus called HTLV-I, for human T-cell lymphotropic virus, type I. AIDS is caused by a virus that is frequently designated HTLV-III (type 3) and is believed by some scientists to be related to HTLV-I.

Truckers unaware of new laws

AUSTIN — DPS License and Weight Service officers report they are encountering truckers who say they are unaware of a recently enacted Texas law.

S.B. 332, which became effective on Jan. 1, 1986, requires that the name of the owner, operator of lessee of commercial vehicles with three or more axles be displayed on both sides of the vehicles. All truck-trailers also are included. The statute mandates lettering with a minimum height of two inches.

Failure to comply with the law is a Class C misdemeanor offense which is punishable by a maximum fine of $200.

Public utility vehicles, registered farm vehicles and trucks hauling timber in its natural state on the first movement are exempt from the statute.

DPS officials indicate that most tractor-trailer trucks were in compliance with the law before the effective date. The statute should help persons identify trucks which leave the scene of an accident or illegally dump waste.

Ann Landers

SHHH

DEAR ANN LANDERS: The Lord was very good to me. He gave me the opportunity, quite by chance, to see your column that was titled: A PRAYER WRITTEN FOR PEOPLE WHO LIVE WITH THE HARD-OF-HEARING. I happen to be one of those people.

It has taken me a couple of weeks to sit down and write this letter. I could not get your column out of my mind. Whenever I was alone I kept thinking what my poor wife must be going through while suffering with her progressive hearing loss. The hearing aids she bought never achieved the results she anticipated.

For a long time I thought she was self-centered and not interested in anything I (or anyone else) had to say. Now I realize it was not a lack of interest, but an inability to hear what was being said.

My wife is still reluctant to join in conversations, afraid that what she thought she heard may not be what was actually said and that she might give an odd reply and appear foolish. So that dear woman remains silent, knowing full well that many people believe she is stupid.

The literature I received from the organization you recommended, SHHH, was excellent. Thank you for performing a valuable service.—Mr. J. in Havertown, Pa.

DEAR MR. J.: Thank you for letting me know I helped. I have recommended two organizations that send literature and assist the hearing-impaired and am pleased to do so again. They are SHHH (Self-Help for Hard of Hearing People, Inc.) 7800

Wisconsin Avenue, Bethesda, MD 20814, and the Hearing and Tinnitus Help Association, 32-A S. Main St., New Hope, Pa. 18938. (Enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope—39 cents postage.)

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I've never written to you before but have no one else to talk to about this. Right now I'm so mad I'm seeing stars.

What can one do when a good friend brings along her mother-in-law to every luncheon, dinner, wedding, picnic, whatever? This uninvited person takes a place at the table as if she were expected.

Last week I attended an elegant dinner where the hostess could not join us at the table because there was no room. The ever-offending mother-in-law showed up as usual and the hostess had to dash off and write up a place-card for her.

What makes people so rude, crude and arrogant to think they can get away with such behavior? Is there a solution to his problem?—Kentucky Fury

DEAR KEN: The solution is simple. When you invite the daughter-in-law say the following: "Space is sharply limited. This invitation is for you and you only. Please do not bring your mother-in-law. There will be no place for her."

DEAR ANN LANDERS: When I read that one of your correspondents suggested onion to relieve the pain of a burn, I knew I had to write and let you know that half an onion works like magic on a bee or wasp sting.

The pain stops at once and the swelling goes right down. I speak from experience.—Ware Neck, Va.

DEAR WARE: Thanks for the tip. If anyone out there tries it, I'd like some feedback.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am planning to get married around Christmas. A few months ago, in haste, I asked my future sister-in-law to be my maid of honor. I regret it now because I am not as fond of her as I once was. Can I "annul" that request and ask my closest friend?—Asked Too Fast in Montreal

DEAR TOO FAST: If you "annul" that invitation, you future sister-in-law may never completely forgive you. Don't take the chance of creating a lifetime problem. It isn't worth it.

Teaching your kids about the facts of life can be easy or awkward. Ann Landers' booklet, "How, What, and When to Tell Your Child About Sex" can spell the difference. Send 50 cents along with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request, to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611.

DR. GOTT What's wrong with this picture?

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

As he lolled in his Styrofoam chair, Dr. Ethan Mergatroyd floated aimlessly, like a bathtub toy, in the middle of his above-ground swimming pool. He lifted a chilled glass of gin and diet tonic and mused as he pressed the cold container to his furrowed, sweating forehead. He lolled and mused and reflected about his career.

With the help of bank credit, he exhibited most of the trappings of a successful professional, including a cordless telephone, a condo on Cape Cod and a home computer. But, he concluded with a snap of his head, he didn't have it all. "Why?" he asked himself for the hundredth time. Why had he not been accepted by his medical comrades?

This perfectly simple but vital goal had thus far eluded him, despite his most valiant efforts. He couldn't understand it. There were mutterings and titterings among the nurses when he made rounds. His opinions were never solicited. He seemed permanently relegated to the least prestigious hospital committees, such as the Radioisotope and Quality Assurance Committees.

He thought he deserved more respect, more power. "Why don't they bow down to me?" he pondered. He had followed all the rules, made all the right moves, played all the political angles. Although the M.D. degree entitled him to adoration and acceptance, he had yet to bask in the warmth of these virtues. Where had he failed?

Having a blonde wife hadn't helped. Sure, she was No. 3, but it seemed like an ideal match and he had been ready to move up. She shared his hunger for the good life and believed in his ability to provide — hitched her wagon to a star, she'd said. He felt all cuddly inside when she offered that testimonial; it was just what he needed to hear.

Buying a Cadillac hadn't helped. He scrimped and saved during his first two years of practice just to make the down payment on the cushy Eldorado, and thereby prove to the peasants that he had made the grade. He knew he couldn't afford the monthly gasoline bills, much less the automobile itself. But owning it made him feel important, and the bank had been ever so understanding when he applied for a loan.

Giving lawn parties for other doctors hadn't helped. He'd had the bright idea to organize a volleyball game between the surgeons and physicians. His side lost the game, and he was awarded a dinky little cap with a sculptured horse's head on it. Since he had the whole event catered, that was the limit. He really put out for those doctors, and he suspected that they schemed to give him the hat regardless of which team won.

Cultivating a certain class of patients hadn't helped. He thought that becoming a doctor for well-connected hypochondriacs would guarantee instant success. He envisioned that the constant flow of referrals to his surgical associates would provide a bonanza of unnecessary operations. He would be a hero. He especially believed that the anesthesiologists would welcome the business and would accept him with the same enthusiasm with which they accepted the insurance checks generated by his face-lift referrals. But it was not to be.

Writing a newspaper column hadn't helped. Doctors nipped him to death for making inconsequential human errors. In trying to please everybody, he'd failed to please anybody. He wasn't taken seriously, his views were so controversial that he was labeled a crackpot. He had tried — Lord, had he tried — to put doctors in a good light, but that had been impossible. He was criticized for duplicity. How can you support a profession that says one thing and does another? Eventually, he'd taken the easy path and served his own self-interests. He'd grumbled, but other Health-makers had proved to him that it's a dog-eat-dog world out there.

Nothing had helped. Mergatroyd was mortgaged to the hilt, had exhausted his revolving line of credit, enjoyed berating his patients, depended on a steady supply of free tranquilizers from drug companies, assumed a grandiose and sententious attitude, spent conspicuously, made friends with the bishop, complained constantly about his work schedule and ingratiated himself to his colleagues. In short, he had behaved like any other modern doctor.

As Mergatroyd slowly sipped his drink, he gently revolved in the chlorinated stillness of the pool. Where, he wondered, oh, where have I gone wrong?

DEAR DR. GOTT — My family has an inherited blood disease called familiar spherocytosis. Some 50 of my first cousins and my daughter have this rare disorder, in which the red blood cells are ball- or sphere-shaped. Removal of the spleen — and in most cases, the gall bladder — has been the procedure our doctor advised. We are fortunate that we have dedicated doctors to work with, as few are familiar with the disease and some members of my family come home to be treated.

I would appreciate any information you could give us about spherocytosis, particularly if it is possible to transmit it to others through blood donations.

DEAR READER — Hereditary or familial spherocytosis is, as you described, a hereditary abnormality of red-blood-cell production. The disease itself is due to malformation of the blood cells in the manufacturing process, hence, although spherocytes can be transmitted by blood transfusions, the metabolic abnormality cannot.

Patients with spherocytosis often have anemia. Although this can be temporarily overcome by transfusions from a normal donor, the anemia recurs and too much iron can build up in the body, causing toxicity and liver disease.

I agree that you are fortunate to be in the hands of physicians who are familiar with this unusual blood disorder. I am sure your doctors would be willing to give you more detailed and specific information about the disease.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Please explain, in layman's terms, what peptic esophagitis means.

DEAR READER — Acid is produced in the stomach, which is lined by mucus-secreting cells to protect the stomach lining from digesting itself. The intestine and the esophagus do not have this protection. Therefore, when excess stomach acid leaks out of the stomach, it can cause inflammation and ulcers when it reacts with the delicate linings of the intestine or esophagus.

When gastric acid burns the intestine, peptic ulcer can develop. When it goes the other way, upstream into the esophagus, peptic esophagitis can occur.

Ordinarily, the esophagus is protected by a sphincter (ring of muscle) that prevents reflux, the discharge of stomach acid into the esophagus. In certain circumstances, such as hiatal hernia, the ring doesn't function well enough to stop the flow of acid. Heartburn, gas, dyspepsia and indigestion result. This usually means that esophagitis is present.

To give you more information, I'm sending you a free copy of my Health Report on HIATAL HERNIA. Others who would like a copy should send $1 and their name and address to P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT — What is Grave's disease and what can be done about it?

DEAR READER — Grave's disease is a form of thyroid overactivity that is associated with bulging eyes. The eyes usually improve when the thyroid excess is treated. This involves the use of medicine, radioactive iodine or surgery.

HEAD INJURIES

NEW YORK (AP) — More Americans under age 34 die from head injuries than from all other causes combined.

More than 50 percent of such injuries are sustained in automobile crashes. Head injuries require 3.5 million days of hospitalization annually and take up 35,000 man-hours of working ability each year, according to the National Head Injury Foundation.

Rehabilitating a survivor of a serious head injury can cost as much as $9 million over a lifetime, and some 70,000 survivors suffer physical and intellectual disabilities that can prevent their return to the workforce.

A STRUGGLE FOR GRADS

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — The difficulties many two-career couples face can surface in college, according to student counselors at the University of Rochester.

Upon graduation, a student couple may find that the best job opportunities call each half to a different area of the country.

Women students feel as much need as men to prove themselves by landing a good job, say the counselors, so many couples must decide whether to postpone marriage, marry but live apart, or compromise on careers so that they can share a home.

Students seeking counseling hope for "quick tips on making it work," says counselor Nancy Castro. "They don't realize they must make hard choices."

POLLY'S POINTERS Fresh horseradish is simple recipe

By Polly Fisher

DEAR POLLY — I grew horseradish in my garden this year. I don't know how to prepare it. I can remember my mother grinding it, but do not know what she did next. — MRS. L.T.

DEAR MRS. L.T. — Actually, all you need to do is grind the horseradish before using it as a relish, seasoning or garnish. The grated horseradish can be kept in a tightly-covered container in the refrigerator for two to three months. For longer storage, add one-half cup vinegar to each cup of grated horseradish before packing it in clean containers. Packed this way, the horseradish can be stored in the refrigerator almost indefinitely.

For a delicious dressing for cold meat, try mixing a tablespoon of prepared horseradish (either grated fresh or grated and preserved in vinegar) with two cups of unsweetened whipped cream. Delicious on cold ham, roast beef, lamb or other cold meats. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — Thought your readers might like to try my recipe for a Boursin-type cheese spread.

Mix eight ounces softened cream cheese, one-fourth pound softened butter, one clove minced garlic, one teaspoon oregano, one-fourth teaspoon thyme, one-fourth teaspoon marjoram, one-fourth teaspoon dillweed, one-fourth teaspoon basil, one-fourth teaspoon black pepper. Refrigerate in a covered crock or glass jar. This tastes very good on stoned-wheat crackers. — CATHY

DEAR POLLY — When cooking vegetables, I use Nature's rule: If the vegetable grows under ground and is in the cool earth, I start them in cold water and cover the pot (carrots, potatoes, etc.). If the vegetable grows above ground in the warm sun, I start them in hot water and leave them uncovered (cabbage, broccoli, etc.). — PATRICIA

Whiteface JV beats Frenship, 46-22

The Hereford High School junior varsity football team fell behind Frenship 22-8 in the first half, but outscored Frenship 38-0 in the second half to win the game at Frenship Thursday night, 46-22.

Hereford is now 3-1 for the season, with the only loss coming against a varsity opponent. The Hereford junior varsity plays at home next Thursday at 7 p.m. against Lubbock Dunbar.

About the 46-22 victory over Frenship, Hereford Coach Craig Yenser said, "Our defense held them to no first downs in the second half. Our offensive line did a tremendous job in the second half. The backs ran very well."

Frenship led 14-0 at the end of the first quarter. Each team scored a second quarter touchdown, with Hereford's coming on a three-yard run by Kyle Andrews. Jason Scott passed to Pat Mercer for the two-point conversion.

Keith Brown scored a pair of touchdown runs to help Hereford cut the Frenship lead to 22-20 in the third quarter. Brown's touchdown runs were three yards and 32 yards. The point-after attempted failed after both touchdowns.

Mercer caught a 45-yard touchdown pass from Scott to move Hereford into the lead, 26-22.

The other third quarter touchdown for Hereford was scored by Anthony Johnson, who rushed 10 yards for the six points.

In the fourth quarter, Scott completed a 30-yard pass to James Hernandez, and John Washington carried for the two-point conversion, increasing the Hereford lead to 40-22.

Frankie Abalos caught a 15-yard touchdown pass from Stuart Mitts for Hereford's final touchdown of the game.

Defensively for Hereford, Joe Cera recovered a fumble, Marcos Marquez recorded a quarterback sack, and Andrews intercepted a pass.

Whiteface Special Teams Players

HHS sophomores lose to Friona JV 16-12

Hereford High School's sophomore football team lost a close battle to the Friona junior varsity Thursday at Whiteface Stadium, 16-12.

Hereford, 0-4 for the season, plays the Tulia junior varsity on Thursday, Oct. 2, at 7 p.m., in Tulia.

Friona led 16-6 at halftime Thursday, scoring a touchdown in each of the first two quarters.

Hereford's first half touchdown came in the second period when Jared Victor caught a 28-yard pass from Jason Barrow. In the third quarter, Jeff Farr rushed 34 yards for a touchdown to close the gap to 16-12.

"Defensively, we played well enough to win," said Hereford Coach Stan Carter. "The defense gave us numerous opportunities to win—shut them down in the second half."

"We had a great goal line stand—four plays inside the five-yard line late in the game."

Billy Sievers recovered a fumble and J.T. Heaton intercepted a pass.

"We had good field position all night. Offensively, we knocked on the door but couldn't get through. Credit Friona's defense to stop us three times inside their 20-yard line. We are getting better each week, just not there yet," Carter said.

Quarterback Barrow had 150 yards total offense. John Tohm rushed for 75 yards, and John Cantu rushed for 50 yards.

"Moses Cases is our defensive player of the week. Gilbert Jarez was our special teams player of the game. Brent Cumpston made two great acrobatic catches," Carter notes.

The HHS sophomores, after playing at Tulia next week, play at home on Oct. 9 against Amarillo High at 7 p.m. Their next game after that will be on Saturday, Oct. 18, at Lubbock Coronado at 10 a.m.

Red Raiders face No. 17 Baylor

Texas Tech homecoming is Saturday

The Texas Tech Red Raiders battle a top 20 ranked opponent for the second time in three weeks when they host Baylor Saturday.

The game, which has a 12:04 p.m. kickoff, is the Red Raiders homecoming contest.

Baylor is ranked 17th in the Associated Press top 20 poll. The Bears were ninth in the poll before losing to Southern California, 17-14, last Saturday.

Both teams have 2-1 records. Texas Tech, which defeated New Mexico 14-7 last week, won its season opener 41-7 over Kansas State, and lost to No. 2 ranked Miami 61-11 two weeks ago.

Baylor opened the season with two victories—31-28 over Wyoming and 38-7 over Louisiana Tech.

About the Red Raiders' victory over New Mexico, Coach David McWilliams said, "The main thing that we got out of the New Mexico game was that we show we could win a game in the fourth quarter. When the game was on the line we responded."

"That was something we needed to show ourselves. We made some mistakes but it's nothing that can't be corrected. Offensively, we moved the football (439 yards) and defensively, we played very aggressively."

New Mexico Coach Joe Lee Dunn said, "That is the best we have been defended in two years. I don't think that 14-7 score was indicative of how bad we got beat."

Texas Tech is averaging 396.7 yards total offense per game, and the Red Raider defense is allowing 367.3 yards per game—most of the opponents' offense coming in the contest against Miami.

About facing Baylor, McWilliams said, "Our second season starts now. We have made some progress in each game, even though the Miami score doesn't show it. We have a major test this week with Baylor, who many have picked to win the Southwest Conference."

"Their loss last week doesn't change their standing. It only means they will come to Lubbock mad."

Southern California's placekicker Don Shafer was not bothered by a torrential downpour and booted a 32-yard field goal with two second remaining to boost the Trojans to their 17-14 upset of Baylor.

USC trailed 14-7 with 3:50 to play and had gained only 88 yards in offense up to that point. Their only score had come on a 99-yard interception return of a fumble.

The Trojans then put together two scoring drives of 61 yards each to win the game.

"After studying the film I'll say the same thing I did after the game. I've never had a defense play better for three and one half quarters," said Baylor Coach Grant Teaff.

"We completely dominated USC in every way. The offense had a very good day with the exception of not putting them away when we had chances in the first half and third quarter," Teaff continues.

"The fumble at the goal line was a 14-point swing. It gave them new life, but we still remained in control. Our inability to put points on the board in the third quarter was a big factor. Two missed field goals were a key."

"Although I'm keenly disappointed we didn't win, we came out knowing we are a very good football team. I learned a long time ago that how you respond to defeat says more about you as an individual of team than anything I know of."

"We will not cry over spilled milk. We won't worry about what might have been. We'll set our jaw straight and turn our attention to Texas Tech."

Teaff said the Red Raiders are "much better than they were at this time a year ago. Their offense is much more wide open. It's harder to defend."

"They're stronger defensively. It's homecoming for them, so they'll be ready to play. It will be a tough game. I was impressed with the way they came back after losing to Miami. It says a lot about their players and coaches."

Billy Joe Tolliver is averaging 187.3 yards passing per game for Texas Tech. He has completed 54 of 123 passes. New Mexico had eight pass defenders in most of the game, so McWilliams turned to his running game.

Sophomore Isaac Garnett had 83 yards rushing in 12 carries, and Ervin Farris had 76 yards in 14 carries.

Tolliver still threw 45 passes, 10 fewer than the school record he set against Kansas State.

For the season, Farris has 181 yards in 35 carries, and Garnett has 112 yards in 23 carries.

The leading pass receivers for Texas Tech are Eddy Anderson with 13 catches for 156 yards, Tim Tannehill with 12 catches for 106 yards, and Wayne Walker with eight catches for 139 yards; Travis Price has also caught eight passes, for 104 yards.

Quarterback Cody Carlson leads the Bear offense, having completed 49 of 83 passes this season for 615 yards. David Davis and Matt Clark each have caught eight passes, Davis for gains of 105 yards and Clark for gains of 123 yards.

Will Rozelle long for simpler days of football?

TV replays cause controversy in NFL

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer
Dragged kicking and screaming into the 20th century world of instant replays, the NFL has found nothing but grief as the payoff. It's enough to make Pete Rozelle yearn for the simpler time of leather helmets and wooden goal posts. For years, there were complaints about officials blowing calls, a malady easily cured by modern television technology, which affords a second look at every play and has been available for a decade or two.

Each year, the subject of using replays would come up and each year it would be dismissed by Rozelle and Co. Too expensive. Too complicated. Too unreliable.

Eventually, the resistance was broken down and the league adopted replays on a one-year, experimental basis. Now, with the system all of three regular-season weeks old, some people are furious with it and demanding a return to the good, old dark age days.

There have been glitches. There is no question about that. People accustomed to the usually efficient operation of the NFL have been troubled by some of the warts that have developed.

In the glare of a Thursday night national TV game, one reviewer took almost three minutes to confirm a 4-yard pass play, while the two teams stood around, waiting for him to make up his mind. This was, of course, a terribly significant play since it set up a fourth-and-14 situation instead of a fourth-and-18.

In another Monday night TV game, the replay official was too slow reviewing a lateral that had been ruled a forward pass and cost Denver a legitimate TD against Pittsburgh. If there had been no replay rule, there would have been no review, late or otherwise. So what damage did he do besides depriving the Broncos of a TD they didn't really need in a 21-10 game?

Miami howled when an apparent New York Jet fumble on an overtime kickoff was not reviewed by the replay official, who said the TV view of the play was inconclusive. Last year, there wouldn't even have been a replay official to look at it and decide it was inconclusive. Would that have been better?

The victim of the Miami-Jet non-call was Dolphins Coach Don Shula, one of the fathers of the instant replay. He was obviously disturbed over the sequence, but unlike other critics of the system, Shula is smart enough to give it time.

"The whole intent is to correct obvious errors," he said. "They're running into problems with mechanics. The replay official is human, just like the seven on the field, the players and the coaches."

Tex Schramm, president of the Dallas Cowboys and another leader in the battle for the replay rule, agreed with Shula's view.

"You can't condemn the system," he said. "It's working. We haven't hurt anybody with it. We've had confusion. We've had calls not made. But they wouldn't have been made without the system either, would they?"

"When it's a close call, it's either no question or it's inconclusive and you go on. Unless it's totally clear, you don't get a reversal. That's one of the prices of the system. On the Denver call, it was a classic call for a replay. Denver still won the game.

When we get the mechanics down, it will save a play like that."

The guidelines for reversal are clear. The evidence must be indisputable in the mind of the replay official. In 24 of the first 42 NFL games played this season, there has been at least one communication between the replay official and the field crew. Seven calls have been reversed. In no case has a reversal come on a game-turning play, unless you count the Miami-Jets game, which was a non-reversal.

In the long run, the replay rule is nothing more than an admirable attempt to correct identifiable mistakes. If it is not perfect, it has a lot of company, even in the carefully controlled world of the NFL.

Stanton 8th, 9th football teams win

Stanton Junior High School posted a pair of football victories Thursday, defeating Marshall of Clovis, N.M., in eighth and ninth grade home contests.

Stanton defeated Marshall 8-0 in the ninth grade game, and scored a 32-6 win over Marshall in the eighth grade game.

For the season, the Stanton ninth grade team has a 1-2 record, and the eighth grade team is unbeaten at 2-0. The only touchdown in Thursday's ninth grade battle came with 11 seconds left in the first half.

Ron Hathaway rushed 13 yards for the touchdown. Jason Walterscheid completed a pass to Zane Watts for the two-point conversion, giving Stanton its 8-0 lead and final margin.

The Stanton eighth grade team led 14-0 at halftime and 26-6 after three quarters of play in defeating Marshall 32-6.

Jermaine Williams scored a touchdown and two-point conversion for an 8-0 Stanton lead in the first quarter. Williams rushed 40 yards for the touchdown and caught a pass from Max Mungia for the two-point conversion.

In the second quarter, Oscar Pesqueda caught a 30-yard touchdown pass from Mungia.

Two big touchdown runs were scored by Stanton in the third quarter. Jose Nava rushed 55 yards for a touchdown, and Williams rushed 40 yards for the other touchdown.

Shea Brannon returned a punt 30 yards for Stanton's fourth quarter touchdown.

Stanton defensive player Joe Balderez recovered two Marshall fumbles.

Next week, the Stanton eighth grade and ninth grade teams both play Plainview Red. Game times are 4 p.m. for the ninth grade and 5:30 p.m. for the eighth grade, at Plainview.

Stanton's seventh grade football team will play "A" and "B" games versus Plainview Red next Tuesday at the La Plata field, at 4 p.m. and 5:30 p.m.

8th, 9th grade Mavericks lose games to Gattis

La Plata Junior High School suffered a pair of defeats to Gattis in Clovis, N.M., Thursday—16-0 in an eighth grade game and 40-0 in a ninth grade contest.

The La Plata ninth grade team is 0-3 for the season, and the Maverick eighth grade team is 0-2. Both teams play at home next Thursday against Marshall of Clovis—ninth grade at 4 p.m. and eighth grade at 5:30 p.m.

In other football action next week involving La Plata teams, the La Plata seventh grade "A" and "B" teams play at Plainview Blue Tuesday at 4 p.m. and 5:30 p.m.

In Thursday's ninth grade game, Gattis scored with a long pass and with a punt return. Those touchdowns came in the first and fourth quarters.

Coach Ed Coplen said his leading players of the game included Brandon Murdoch, Burt Noland, Brian Waggoner, and Danny Berumen.

Coach Tommy Bowling, eighth grade coach, said about his teams 40-0 loss, "Our biggest problem was turnovers and giving up the home run ball. We played better than what the score indicated.

"Several good strong runs were turned in by Chris Tardy and Greg Ubranczyk, and several good catches by receivers Zack Farr, Matt Bromlow, Amado Lopez, and Garrick McPherson.

"Cody Page had several solid tackles on defense."

Herschel Walker, the plumber, enjoys notoriety

DALLAS (AP) — Herschel Walker says he's enjoying the notoriety of his famous name.

That's Herschel Walker the plumber's apprentice, not Herschel Walker the running back for the Dallas Cowboys.

"Up until the time the Dallas Cowboys signed that other Herschel Walker to be on the team, my life was real ordinary," said the 25-year-old plumber.

He said the name alone carries such an aura that some people momentarily overlook the fact that he weighs only 150 pounds, has blond hair and blue eyes.

He opened a new bank account two weeks ago.

"The manager of the bank personally wrote me a letter and thanked me for doing business at his bank," he said. "He asked me to, please stop by and say hello the next time I came by."

The plumber said the manager apparently didn't stop to wonder why a man with a multimillion-dollar contract would be opening an account with only $125.

The song, "Sidewalks of New York," is played before the running of the Belmont Stakes.

The baseball stadium Candlestick Park was the site of the last Beatles concert.

Great cockroach hunt is on across the nation with bounty

DALLAS (AP) — From darkened closets in the heart of Texas to humid kitchens on the Florida coast, the great cockroach hunt is on.

Enterprising pest controllers and hardware store owners in several states are sponsoring contests for the biggest bug or have done so.

By awarding cash or merchandise for the huskiest insect, the businesses bring in additional customers. But the owners say there's more than commercialism at work.

And the entrants apparently seek something besides a free can of roach spray.

"They're doing it for the silliness of it — that's why they bring in a Zip-Lock bag with a roach in it," said Ronnie Dyer, owner of Drusilla Ace Hardware in Baton Rouge, La.

"We already know we have foul weather and bad mosquitoes. We claim to have the worst government here in Louisiana. Why shouldn't we have the biggest roach? It really is pitiful — the politics and the economy," he said. "We might as well have some fun."

Dyer began his "Big Roach Contest" about two months ago, offering a free can of bug spray, retail value $7, for the largest roach brought in every day.

He'd like to beat the winning roaches crowned in contests in Florida and Texas. He claims to have a bug measuring 2 1/2 inches — bigger than one a fraction over 2 inches in Clearwater, Fla., and a 1.9-inch victor in Dallas.

Despite claims of it being all in good clean fun, there is some state pride involved, the sponsors admit.

"When Texas did it first, people said, 'My God, Florida has bigger roaches than Texas,'" said John Butherus, district sales manager of Truly Nolen Pest Control in Clearwater, Fla., which along with WFLA radio offered a $500 prize to the winner of an Aug. 15 contest.

"People really got into it," Butherus said. "One lady had a hole connecting a duplex. She kept roaches out of her place. But for the contest, she unplugged the hole and used a funnel to catch the ones from next door as they came over to her half. She brought in about 50 of them."

He predicts California will be the next battleground for the roach war between the states.

Dallas crowned its cockroach queen on July 11. Trapped by two women in the basement of their Southwestern Bell office building, the bug, now deceased, is ensconced in the Smithsonian Institution's insect zoo in Washington.

"Bugs are big in Texas," said Michael Bohdan, owner of the Pest Shop and Bizzy Bees Pest Control in Dallas and local contest organizer. He personally presented the dead roach to museum officials along with about 20 live runners-up.

"I hear they're big (in New York), but I've learned one thing ... cockroach hunters are like fishermen: they all lie, and everyone says they've got bigger ones and bigger ones," he said.

A letter to the Amarillo Globe-Times from a puzzled reader asked why any state would want to boast of having the largest cockroaches, saying it is one of the rare things "even a Texan would be reluctant to brag about."

But Sally Love, director of the insect zoo at the National Museum of Natural History, said she invited Bohdan to display his bugs because "it's something people want to see."

Louisiana's Dyer says his store is sold on cockroach contests because they attract more customers. The staff sometimes wears "roachbuster" T-shirts. And when he's broadcast 10-second television spots, or radio advertisements, they bring in about 40 to 50 people at a time of the year when shoppers normally "don't spend money at hardware stores — they spend it on the kid's blue jeans for school," Dyer said.

While the Dallas roach may have been given the red carpet treatment in Washington, Dyer says he's becoming a home-grown celebrity. He's been on area talk shows and interviewed by USA Today about his roach contests.

"I'll be eating a hamburger and somebody will say, 'You're the one with the roach contest,'" Dyer said.

In Florida, a bug named "Nasty Dude" caught in a woodpile behind Charles Rigby's Clearwater home, won the contest, edging out entrants including one showcased in a miniature gray coffin with pink plastic roses on top.

Contest sponsor Butherus, like Bohdan, compared the bug hunters to anglers — the stories about the ones that got away were rampant in Florida, he said.

And there's always some talk of the roach war between the states.

"If we do come up with a 3 1/2-inch roach" and beat out all the others, conceded Louisiana's Dyer, "it wouldn't be that positive."

Retiree can't get running water, friends dig waterline

CEGO, Texas (AP) — For nine years, J.P. Cawyer Sr. has been driving a 250-gallon tank to the Cego well where he loads up with water and hauls it back to his mobile home about two miles away.

Since moving to the area in 1977, the retired railroad worker has been trying to get running water so he won't have to haul it every other day. "Well, it's terrible. That's the only way to put it," said his wife, Joan Cawyer, describing life without that little convenience.

Cawyer says officials with the Cego-Durango Water Corp. have over the years promised to supply him with water. "They'd say, plan on getting it next week," he said. "Well, next week hasn't come yet."

This week Cawyer and about 25 neighbors and friends began digging a waterline from his house to existing lines in the Cego water system about a mile away. Cawyer's lawyer, Everett O'Dowd, said once the newly built waterline is within a few feet of the existing line, he plans to send the corporation a check to cover the deposit for tapping into their line.

Five friends of Cawyer's are chipping in about $5,000 to purchase 6,400 feet of pipe and to rent a ditchdigger, said David Kurtz, who helped organize the effort. About 20 to 30 people have donated their labor, he said, and five neighbors have given Cawyer easements to dig through their land along Farm-to-Market Road 1239.

Wanda Shaake, secretary-treasurer of the water supply corporation, said Thursday that Cawyer's home was not within the corporation's service area. She refused further comment because of a possible lawsuit.

Alton Rothe, president of the corporation's board of directors, also refused comment to the Waco Tribune-Herald.

O'Dowd maintains Cawyer is entitled to water from the Cego system because the system's articles of incorporation state the corporation was formed to furnish water "to individuals residing in the rural community of Cego-Durango and the surrounding rural areas."

Cawyer said homes on either side of his house tap into the Cego water system.
