KARACHI, Pakistan (AP) — The lights blinked out, the four Palestinian hijackers counted one, two, three, and the plane became a "holocaust" as the terrorists tossed grenades at terrified passengers and opened fire in the darkened cabin.

A total of 18 people died in the seizure Friday of a Pan Am Boeing 747 at Karachi airport, including 16 passengers and two of the Palestinians. One of the passengers, an American, was shot and tossed onto the tarmac soon after the hijacking began, and died later at a Karachi hospital.

Among the injured were more than 120 passengers and three Pakistan army commandos.

Survivors, many splattered with blood and still shivering from fright, recounted the 17 hours of horror Friday.

They said it began with angry orders by the hostile gunmen who later became friendly and then ended with the vicious attack on nearly 400 hostages in the jumbo jet.

"They started firing wildly," said Hussain Shafi, a passenger from Washington, D.C. "Children were crying. The plane was like a holocaust."

During the first six hours, the passengers were not allowed to eat, drink or go to the bathroom and were not allowed to talk, said Dr. Yashwant Bhandari of Short Hills, N.J.

"Everybody was crowded like cows in the middle of the plane," he said.

At one point, the hijackers called three or four people forward, but Bhandari said he didn't know why.

Mohammed Amin, a Pakistani businessman and passenger, said he understood the Arabic spoken by the hijackers and when the plane's lights went out he heard one of the gunmen tell another:

"The moment for the last jihad has arrived. If we are killed, we will all be martyrs." Jihad is the Arabic word for holy war.

Cynthia Buthello, a passenger from Bombay, India, where Pan Am Flight 73 originated, said the gunmen ordered passengers into the aisle as the plane went dark. "I think they said 'One, two, three' in their language and they just started shooting," she said.

David Jodice of Vienna, Va., said the hijackers "were shouting at us in pitch darkness and then we totally panicked when they threw a hand grenade at the passengers."

The grenade exploded with a "huge blast," he said, and screaming passengers, including dozens of women and children, struggled to hide or open the emergency exits as the hijackers opened fire with automatic weapons.

The hijackers changed from being "very harsh" to being "very nice" as the ordeal continued, Jodice said, and flight attendants were allowed to serve the passengers cold drinks and sandwiches.

One of the gunmen went around with a bag collecting all of the passengers' passports, the Virginian said, but there was no attempt to divide the passengers into groups by nationality or in any other way.

Negotiations with the hijackers ended in gunfire about five minutes after the plane went dark when the generator for the lighting system ran out of fuel.

The lights along the runway had been turned off, and officials apparently decided it was time to make their move.

Khurshid Anwar Mirza, director general of the Civil Aviation Administration, said the plane's lights had been expected to fail as fuel ran low, and when they went out army commandos took up positions near

First Lady campaigns in city

By SHAWN COCKRUM
Staff Writer

The First Lady of Texas, Linda Gale White, made a campaign stop in Hereford Friday to endorse her husband, Governor Mark White, as he seeks reelection.

Mrs. White told the group of almost 30 supporters in the Friendship Room of the Hereford State Bank that no other governor has had to make the kinds of crucial decisions that her husband has had to make.

"Mark has made some tough decisions. They've been the right decisions for the future of Texas. Through this administration's commitment to education, highways, health care, and water, we have laid a strong foundation to take us proudly into the 21st century," said Mrs. White.

Mrs. White took advantage of the opportunity to denounce White's opponent, former governor Bill Clements.

"Bill Clements, on the other hand, did nothing to prepare Texas for the future, and in fact, during a time when the price of oil was at an all-time high he offered no new programs on initiatives and vetoed a desperately needed prison while spending $1 million on taxpayers' money restoring the Governor's Mansion."

Mrs. White, who left for Amarillo following the meeting, said her husband has been very busy with the special session's, too busy campaign in the Panhandle. "Right now the special session is more important than campaigning. Mark will make it to this area soon," said the First Lady.

Her counterpart in the campaign, Mrs. Rita Clements will be in Hereford Tuesday at 10:30 a.m. for a campaign stop at HSB.

Only if crime committed

Immigration office too broke to deport aliens

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — The U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service regional office is so low on funds that it won't be sending illegal aliens back across the U.S. border, the agency's director said.

The regional agency stopped deporting aliens two weeks ago, district director Dennis Holm said Friday. Unless an alien commits a crime, Holm said, no one will be deported until the new fiscal year starts in October.

"When the money is gone, it's gone," Holm said from his Omaha office. "We're only going to pick up criminal aliens."

Since they stopped deporting aliens, 17 people have been released in Iowa and Nebraska, Holm said. Eight people were let go in the Panhandle and three people were released in Ravenna.

"Just to jail two or three aliens when they're so many out there is ridiculous," Holm said. "If we went out and picked them up, we'd have to ask them to voluntarily leave the country and they won't do that."

The district normally is allocated $30,000 to $40,000 a quarter to deport aliens. But, Holm said, a heavier than usual influx of aliens has depleted the money.

The cost of sending one person from Omaha to El Paso, Texas, by bus is $350, Holm explained.

Others have been flown to a deportation depot in Denver but that option has been discontinued temporarily since the agency can no longer use discount air fares supplied by recently folded Frontier Airlines.

"It's not cheap to send the aliens away," Holm said.

The regional INS office, based in Omaha, has five investigators that cover nearly 144,000 square miles, spanning from Chadron to Davenport, Iowa.

People who make it through the wire fences and harsh desert conditions along the Mexican border, the unofficial port of entry for many, often follow Interstate 80 into Nebraska, he said.

They find work in fields in the Panhandle and also in packing plants in Iowa and eastern Nebraska, Holm said. Many of them are single men who send money back to families in Mexico.

However, Holm said, now whole families are crossing the border because of an immigration bill that has stalled in Congress but would give resident status to aliens already here.

"Our interiors are getting fuller and fuller all the time," he said.

But since it cannot afford to deport aliens, Holm said, his office will focus on detecting fraudulent immigration papers and aiding other agencies in preventing drug smuggling.

Search on for terrorists' backers

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — The Reagan administration admits it does not know who is responsible for the 17 hours of terror aboard the hijacked jet in Pakistan, but warns it is searching for the backers of the "cruel and sinister terrorist act."

"We will always be vigilant in our efforts to find out who commits acts of terrorism, to prevent them, and, if necessary, to follow up on them with appropriate means," White House deputy press secretary Larry Speakes said Friday.

Conflicting claims made in Cyprus and Lebanon identified the Arab gunmen who took over the Pan Am jumbo jet as pro-Libyan or pro-Iranian. Libya's state-run Tripoli radio said the government of Moammar Gadhafi had no role in the hijacking, which resulted in at least 18 killed and 127 wounded.

"We are unable at this time to make any connection with any government or any other specific group that would be responsible for this," Speakes said. "We do know that Libya and Col. Gadhafi have the capability to cause terrorist acts on a worldwide basis, but we cannot connect this one at this time."

"Certainly we will try to determine if there is ... any backing to these individuals but at the moment we cannot make it."

In recent days, the administration had warned that Gadhafi might be planning terrorist acts.

Asked if the United States had been consulted by Pakistan on the use of force, Speakes said, "The decisions made in this incident were those made by the Pakistani government."

About 400 people were on board the plane when the gunmen seized the Boeing 747, which was bound for New York via Frankfurt, West Germany.

At least 127 people were wounded when the hijackers sprayed the plane's interior with gunfire when the aircraft's lights went out and commandos entered the cabin. The State Department said at least 17 of the injured were Americans. One

Planetarium beginning to fade

ODESSA, American (AP) — Devoid of students who seek unpromising careers in astronomy, the Poole Planetarium at Odessa College resembles a forgotten toy.

Equipped but locked up and empty, it could fade into infinity like a dying star unless some sort of community funding arises to keep it alive, a school official said.

The planetarium, located in a second-floor classroom of Wilkerson Hall, was used for astronomy classes through the 1984-85 year but is no longer used for academic purposes.

Vertical blinds enhance homes

By The Associated Press

Looking for a way to give your home a contemporary look without costly redecorating?

One suggestion offered by designers is the addition of vinyl vertical blinds, which are available in a wide range of colors to match any interior design theme.

One style of blind allows for the incorporation of various inserts — such as fabric, woven wood or wall covering — for a change in decor.

The blinds also can help keep rooms cooler in the summer and cut down on fuel bills during the winter because of vinyl's insulating properties.

Sales of ready-made and custom-made blinds and accessories have increased in recent years, and one survey estimates that more than 12 million consumers between the ages of 18 and 49 purchased ready-made drapes in 1985.

"Homeowners are looking for drapes that are sturdy, easy to maintain and affordable," says Dale Stroud, a marketing director in B.F. Goodrich's vinyl division, who notes that vertical blinds are an economical alternative to traditional drapes, which have to be dry-cleaned.

He adds they also fill the bill for rooms where furniture and floor coverings are the focus, and a complementary window treatment is needed.

"With a degree in astronomy, you can either be a practicing astronomer or teach astronomy to other people. It does not translate directly into a desirable career opportunity," said Bernhard Sedate, OC vice president for instruction.

"The interest never seemed to be as strong as we'd hoped. It just didn't take off," he said, adding an average astronomy class was about eight students.

He said there is always hope that the community might respond to efforts to keep the planetarium active.

"But realistically, I'm not expecting it. I'd be delighted but surprised to have a donor to resurrect the planetarium," he told the Odessa American last week.

Sedate said the only use of the planetarium this past year was by the Ector County Independent School District. The district paid a person from the University of Texas at El Paso to operate the equipment and give planetarium shows to sixth-graders this spring.

But Keith Dial, ECISD assistant superintendent for instructional services, said no decision has been made whether the district will do that again this year.

He said a study will be done first to see whether the project was worth the $1,500 it took to bring in the operator and lodge him for several weeks while the programs were presented.

Sedate said the 50-seat planetarium was built in 1965.

OC astronomy classes fulfilled a science requirement only. There was no degree program, Sedate noted.

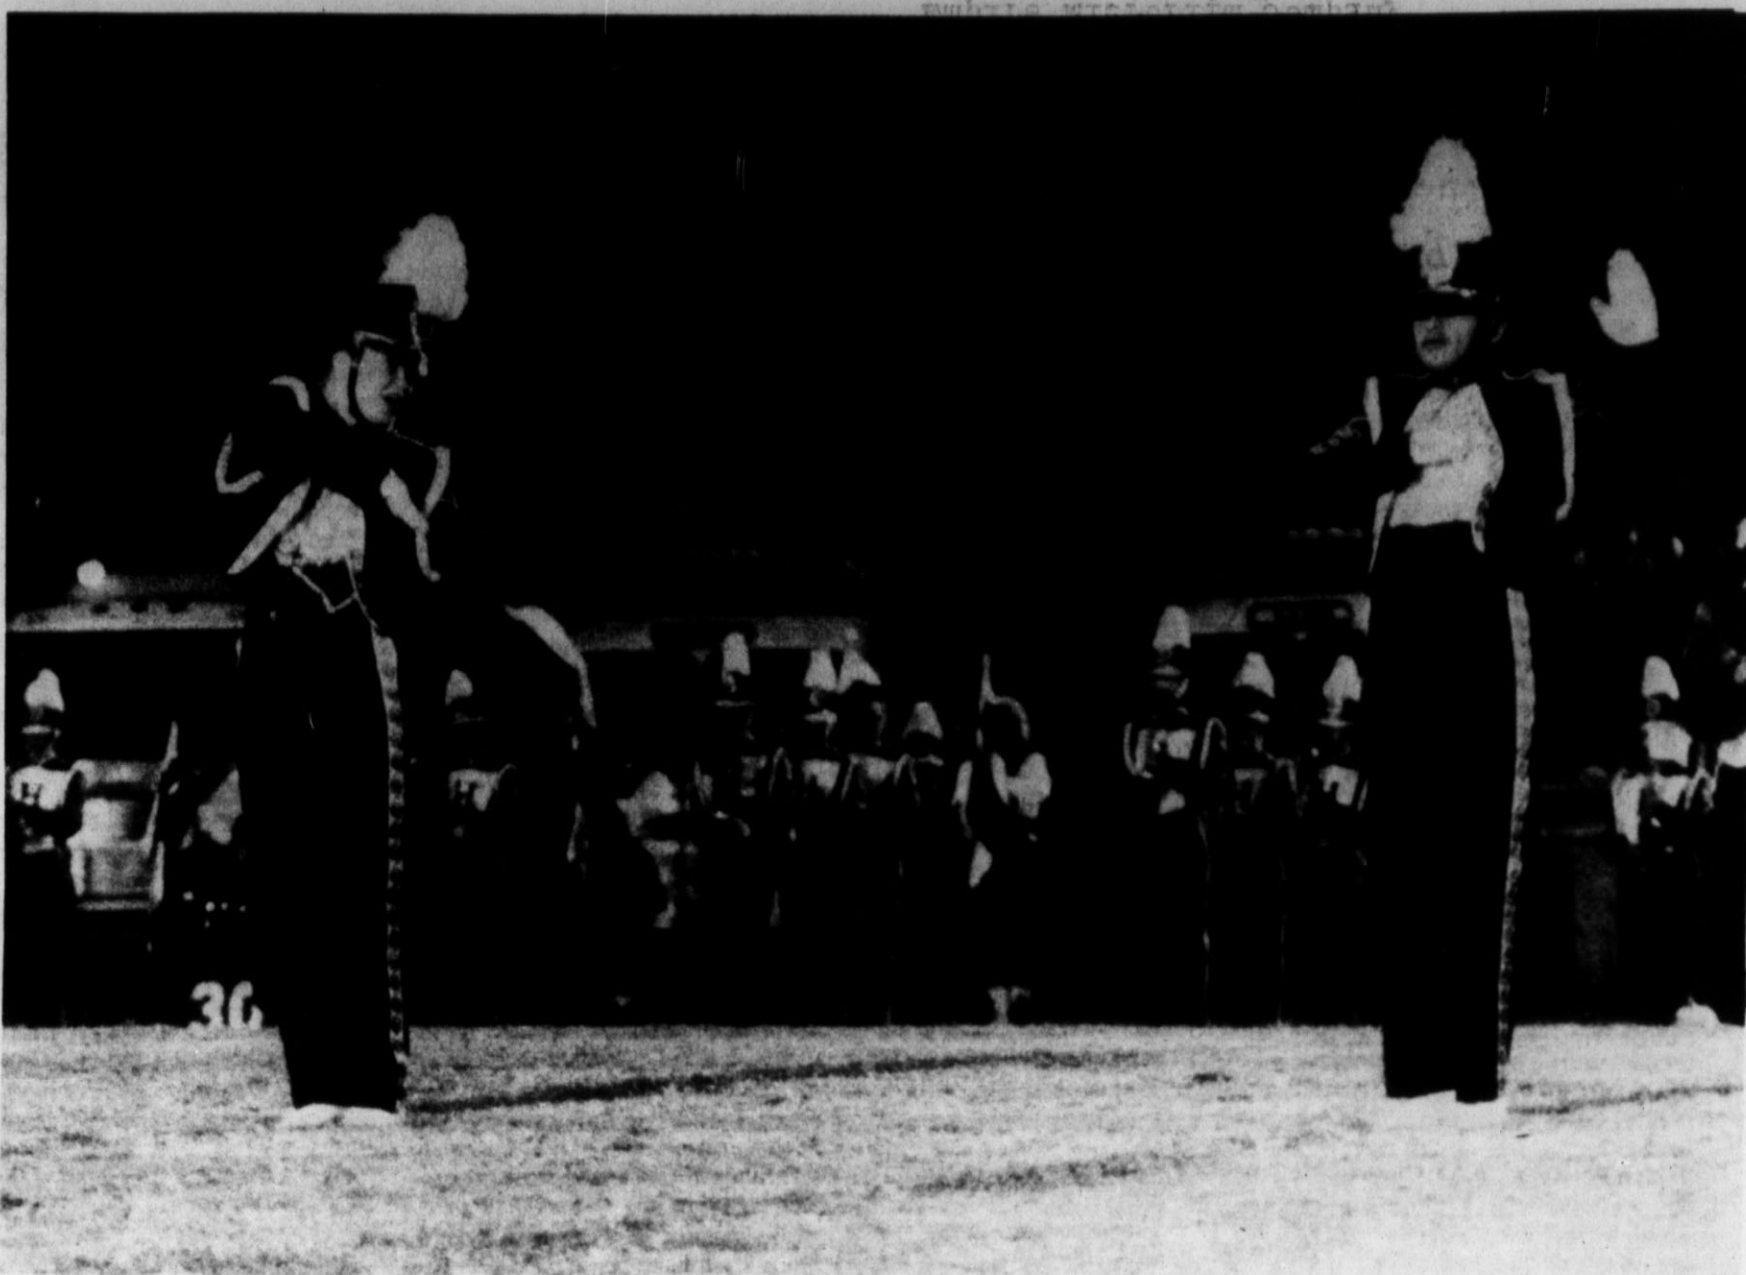

Scout units, church organizations and the general public attended planetarium shows more often than OC students, he said.

Sedate said the cost of maintaining the planetarium is about $25,000 to $35,000 annually.

Most of that amount was for a director's salary, he said, but also included repairs, maintenance, operation funds and promotional literature.

"When you get into replacing equipment or adding new equipment, you put that on top of that," he added.

He said the 21-year-old planetarium equipment is probably worth $25,000, but might not raise that much if sold now because of its age.

Top designers say tiles are key to bath and kitchen decorating

By BARBARA MAYER AP Newsfeatures

Despite a price tag as much as five times that of competing materials, tile surfaces on floors, walls, and countertops are becoming a craze in many parts of the country.

The variety of tile colors, patterns and shapes is making artists out of home decorators.

But to reap the maximum benefits, it's necessary not only to select patterns carefully, but also to pay close attention to the actual installation, even when you hire a professional tile installer, says New York interior designer Bebe Winkler.

According to the designer, who frequently specifies tile installations in kitchens and baths, choosing an experienced tile installer is key.

To avoid unpleasant surprises, however, especially when you don't know the installer's work, lay out the tile where it will be installed and decide jointly how wide and what color the grout should be and where tile cuts should be made. On countertops, for example, it usually works best to cut at the rear.

Before installation comes tile selection, a task that is becoming difficult, given the great number of choices. However, some design principles can help narrow down the field. For example, when selecting a tile pattern for floors or walls, remember that the size of the tile should generally be in proportion to the size of the room.

A large room may easily take a 12-inch tile while a smaller room may call for a small size, according to the Italian Tile Council.

Floor tiles are available in a variety of shapes that can be used in combination. For example, you might select white octagons and then install small black insets. Or you could create a border by laying a perimeter of rectangles end to end and then fill in with square tiles or a pattern.

Rectangles can be arranged in a single or double herringbone formation, staggered or used to create another design. Squares can be laid on the diagonal or in a brick pattern. You might also combine different colors and patterns to give the illusion of an area rug.

These few examples illustrate one of tile's greatest assets: it can be used to create many different effects. Add to this the fact that tile is an easy-care, long-lasting surface with generally good resistance to abrasion, water absorption, chemicals, dirt and fire, and you can see why this expensive yet desirable surface has been gaining adherents in recent years.

Tiles are frequently used on kitchen countertops and backsplashes. Other locations include hallways as trim or garden rooms where they can serve as passive energy collectors. Bathroom vanities, potting tables and flower arranging areas, dressing tables and kitchen tables have been tiled with excellent results. For corners and edges, tiles are usually angled or mitered. You can also buy rounded edging pieces that curve upwards to contain spills.

Although Italian tile is perhaps best known for its decorative appeal, tile is made in many countries. American makers offer a great choice in colors. Mexican tiles are appreciated for the handmade quality they display. French tiles are often of sophisticated designs.

"The shooting actually began from their (the hijackers') side," Mirza said.

At least one grenade was tossed onto the tarmac and exploded as the commandos rushed the aircraft.

The passengers managed to get some doors open and the hijackers "shot at the people trying to get out by the emergency chutes," said Amin.

More than 20 ambulances arrived, and were quickly filled with the

Near the runway police bound the hands of a young man they said was one of the hijackers. They called him by the name Mansour and said he had tried to escape amid the fleeing passengers.

His shins were banged against the tailgate of a police truck and he let out cries of pain.

"I am from Lebanon. I am a Palestinian," he shouted. "I am from the Palestinian commandos."

Reports

LOTTERY BILL DANGEROUS

AUSTIN — Texas' current dilemma mirrors that of many states before it. Revenues have begun to dry up, a deficit looms on the horizon and no one is particularly thrilled about a tax increase. If there was just another way to raise money...

At this juncture, almost 25 other states sought what they thought was a cheap way out. They enacted a state lottery, a revenue-raising measure that promised bundles of money and no new taxes for years to come.

The lure of lottery dollars has found its way to Texas, and our current fiscal crisis led Sen. Hector Uribe, D-Brownsville, to introduce legislation that would create the first Texas lottery. If it passes the Legislature, Texans would vote in a statewide referendum Nov. 4, and if the state lottery is approved, it could be in place as soon as 120 days after the election.

Our colleague's arguments for the lottery are honorable. He wants to try to save the state's financial woes without a tax bill. He estimates a state lottery ultimately could generate $1.2 billion per biennium for the state treasury.

On the surface, the lottery looks oh so good. It's run by the state, so organized crime couldn't get its hooks in the system. No one has to play the lottery unless they want to, yet it will generate more than $1 billion when it gets up to full speed. What possibly could be wrong with that?

A lot. For starters, the lottery wouldn't help a bit with the $3.5 billion deficit we're facing now. Though the lottery bill directs the state to create a lottery within 120 days of voter approval, State Comptroller Bob Bullock estimates it probably will take seven months to get a lottery on line. Bullock's official revenue estimate says a lottery will raise little or no money for the state during fiscal year 1987.

Secondly, lotteries traditionally have not staved off the need for a tax increase. On the contrary, lotteries usually precede massive tax increases.

New York created its state lottery in 1967. The state has had 11 general tax increases since, including the creation of personal and corporate income taxes. New Jersey created a lottery in 1979, and it too has had 11 general tax increases since. And, yes, it created a personal income tax after creating a lottery.

Tax increases tend to follow lotteries because lotteries are regressive in nature. "Regressive," as it applies to a lottery and other taxes, means more money is generated from the poor than the rich.

An article in the National Tax Journal says lotteries, "attract betting by low-income people in greater proportion to income than by high-income people and hence represent a highly regressive source of revenue." The same article said a lottery is "two to three times more regressive than sales taxes."

Simply put, a lottery preys on the poor. The U.S. Senate Subcommittee on Intergovernmental Relations in 1984 found 12 lottery officials in Delaware who admitted that lottery sales in poor neighborhoods increase to three to four times their normal levels on the day welfare checks are distributed.

Lotteries attract the poor with the promise of instant wealth. Sure, one person may strike it rich and win millions in a lottery, but for everyone who does there are thousands of others who spend desperately needed money on tickets only to win nothing. Lottery promotions never mention the odds of winning, but a person actually has a better chance of being struck by lightning than they do winning a major lottery.

We just do not believe a financial crisis should be the reason for implementing a lottery. Too many lawmakers, like the lottery players themselves, get caught up in the desire for money and don't think about the human consequences of what they do. Let's wait and talk about a lottery when we can examine all sides of the issue and not just focus on the money.

If you have questions about the lottery or other issues, please write us at P.O. Box 12068, Austin Texas, 78711.

Scorpions unofficial symbol of Durango state

DURANGO, Mexico (AP) — Savvy entrepreneurs have turned the menace of Durango, the deadly scorpion, into an unofficial symbol of state pride, and a big tourist business.

The "alacran," or scorpion, which can pack potentially lethal poison in the stinger of its tiny tail, is turning up on the shelves of this capital city's central market and gift and souvenir shops.

Most, however, are frozen forever in clear acrylic and mounted on tourist gifts like ashtrays, napkin holders, keychains, earrings, wooden boxes and Western-style string neckties.

"They're a curiosity," said Carmen Moreno, who sells the novelties in the huge market.

"When people go to the United States they take them as gifts," said Silvia Tremillo, another sales clerk.

Author B. Traven was referring to gold, not scorpions, when he titled his 1934 book "The Treasure of the Sierra Madre."

Durango, which Traven called "the lovely jewel of the Sierra Madre," is Mexico's fourth largest state in land mass and its leading producer of gold. The city of Durango 578 miles northwest of Mexico City and 675 miles south of the Texas border at El Paso.

Its 1.8 million people, affectionately nicknamed "scorpions," also make their living from agriculture, cattle ranching, forestry and mining of other metals like silver and iron.

The gold-rich Sierra Madre Occidental mountains on Durango's western side also are perfect breeding grounds for scorpions.

Ms. Moreno said the gift shops pay "hunters" eight pesos, or about one-tenth of a cent, apiece for live scorpions, which they preserve in alcohol until local craftsmen collect them to make into gift items.

A two-gallon jar sitting on the floor of one shop held nearly 10,000 dead scorpions, the clerk estimated.

Other Durango collectibles include candy shaped like scorpions, leather coin purses tooled in scorpions, "Durango" T-shirts and shopping bags with scorpions imprinted on them.

One postcard pictures the whopping 6.8-inch scorpion found in Durango in 1963. Most of those found today range from less than half an inch to about five inches long.

Durango's soccer team is called the Scorpions and the women of Durango also are sometimes known as "alacranas," female scorpions.

"They say it's because we have hot tempers, but that's not true," said Alicia Torres, a Durango native who now lives in California.

Manuel Ortega Martinez, a 24-year-old musician and student, said the locals don't get too excited about the tourist trinkets, except to offer them as presents.

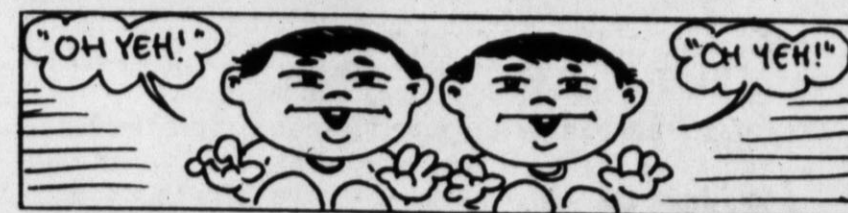

"We've got the real thing," he said. "My mom and my sister both have been bitten three times."

A readily available antidote, which is injected if the victim shows signs of poisoning, has nearly eliminated scorpion bites as a fatal ailment.

A vigorous eradication program has greatly reduced the number of scorpions found in the cities.

Despite the scorpion's vicious qualities, Ortega says the Durango people are proud of the nickname.

After all, he says, referring to one of the scorpion's innate characteristics, "If you don't bother it, it won't hurt you."

Color may affect mood

By The Associated Press

It may just be imagination, but psychologists say the color of your walls can have an effect on the way your home feels. So if you're about to repaint or wallpaper a room, it might help to keep some rules in mind.

Colors such as blues and greens, known as the "cool colors," will make a room feel more comfortable in the summertime, according to this theory, while "warm," colors such as reds, pinks and oranges will make a room feel warmer in winter.

In addition to changing the color of the walls, complete the color scheme by coordinating the room's floor and window coverings and furnishings in the same color family, advise experts at Trane Dealer Products Group, manufacturers of heating and air conditioning products.

Other suggestions include: — To implement the "cool" color strategy without entirely redecorating a room, use accessories. Pillows, throws or slipcovers for chairs and sofas, in a blue or green tone that coordinates with other colors used in the room can be used seasonally.

Other items easily switched include bedspreads, blankets, linens, lamp shades, tablecloths, area rugs and curtains.

— The ideal color strategy would combine the use of neutral tones such as white, ivory or beige on permanent features in a room with seasonal accessories in both the "warm" and "cool" colors.

Hospital tax beats options

Citing higher liability insurance costs, a heavy burden of indigent care, and a cash-flow problem, the Deaf Smith County Hospital District has approved an increase in the entity's tax rate of 2.69 cents.

Like many other taxpayers, we don't like tax hikes and we're finding them more difficult to live with all the time, but we were not too upset with this action. The board will probably formally approve the decision Monday.

When a governmental entity lays its cards on the table and justifies the need for tax increases, most citizens will go along with the action. It's when a board tries to slip something by and does not justify the need that taxpayers really get mad.

The tax hike will generate about $100,000 more than last year. We exchange newspapers with a number of area towns and the hospital problems are reported in many of those papers. Costs are exceeding revenues in places such as Brownfield, Seminole, Lamesa, Fort Stockton and Andrews.

The hospital boards are asking their taxpayers to subsidize the operation of the hospitals in all of the above towns. The largest amount we noticed was about $800,000, except for a whopping $4 million in Andrews.

The local hospital district is apparently doing all it can to legally collect debts at the hospital. Indigent care is a fact of life. Medical care in this country is going through a major restructuring and it's a painful process.

Once the federal government got into the health care business, costs—as you might expect—went through the ceiling with huge increases every year. Finally, Uncle Sam was forced to try to get a rein on the soaring costs and a cap on Medicare payments resulted.

Like a lot of other industries, the health care business priced itself out of the market place. The basic truth in these times is a person can't afford to get sick, or stay sick very long. And, despite the subsidies, it costs about as much to be sick in Hereford as in Brownfield, Amarillo or Houston.

This community needs and wants a viable, solid local hospital that provides basic and fundamental first-line care. It appears those serving on the hospital district board are striving to provide that health care with an eye toward holding the line on increases. That the board cut out salary increases and capital improvement funds indicates they are serious about their jobs. The cuts and tax increases still will leave the hospital with a cash flow problem.

Meanwhile, the hospital is taking steps to try to improve its revenue situation by offering services that will hopefully increase the patient days as well as the out-patient needs.

We would hate to see the hospital cut services or sell to a private hospital corporation. We like the tax hike better than the other options.

Voter turnout

It seems rather ironic that even though discussions of political issues, candidates and elections comprise so much of the daily news and personal conversations, few people actually feel any compulsion to participate in the democratic process. According to Texas Secretary of State Myra McDaniel, the reverse could be true in Texas this November, providing the ballot carries a proposed constitutional amendment to authorize a state lottery.

McDaniel predicted a 68 percent voter turnout if the lottery issue is on the ballot. However, she was quick to note that without the proposal the voter turnout across the state could be as low as 40 percent.

The reason for the difference in numbers is apparent. People feel strongly about the gambling issue. Positions are strongly stated both for and against, and each side is ready to mobilize efforts to encourage voter participation.

Due to efforts on the part of Sen. Bill Sarpalius, D-Canyon, the question of gambling is unlikely to appear on the November ballot. The bill that would put the question before voters was killed by Sarpalius's request for time to study it more closely. Rules provide for a bill to be "tagged" for 48 hours when such a request is made. But the question of whether or not Texas should have a lottery is not the major concern here.

The question is why aren't people as concerned about the choice of elected officials who will serve them as they are about the issues of a lottery and horse racing? A predicted difference of almost 30 percentage points in voter turnout is significant. It does not speak highly of the quality or integrity of the democratic process that has always been such a source of pride in this country.

Furthermore, what kind of an example does it set for the rest of the world? How much faith would there be in the results in an election in El Salvador or Nicaragua that only included 40 percent of the eligible voters?

Voting is not only a privilege in a democratic society, it is also a responsibility. The deadline for registering to vote in the Nov. 4 general election is Oct. 5.

We who would shine light in dark places need not search afar. Millions of Americans are unemployed or under-employed because they can't read a "help wanted ad" or wouldn't know how to fill out a job application. Twenty-three million of our own home folks don't know enough reading, writing and arithmetic to graduate from the fourth grade.

Another 35 million would never get beyond the eighth grade.

President Reagan says if we really care about our future, our freedoms and the kind of life our children will lead "we must make reading and learning a basic priority."

We are going to. And radio and television are going to help.

Anybody physically ailing seeks treatment. Anybody intellectually ailing is likely to try to hide.

And illiteracy is costly to us all.

One illiterate mechanic in the Navy cost you $250,000 because he could not read a repair manual correctly.

A train motorman, unable to read his service manual, was responsible for a fatal train wreck.

Yet, for every horror story, there are a hundred examples of youngsters who, rescued from illiteracy, now lead proud, productive, useful lives.

There are places to go for help—but the illiterate needs help in finding those places.

The American Broadcasting Company and the Public Broadcasting Service are collaborating in a concerted effort to bring together the Americans who are illiterate and the others who can help them.

Special programs will focus on the several aspects of the problem.

This is not just a problem of schoolchildren. Adult illiteracy is more commonplace than we have imagined.

A Ford employee in Detroit bluffed his way past job applications, menus and all written material. Had his wife read the mail, pay the bills, do the banking.

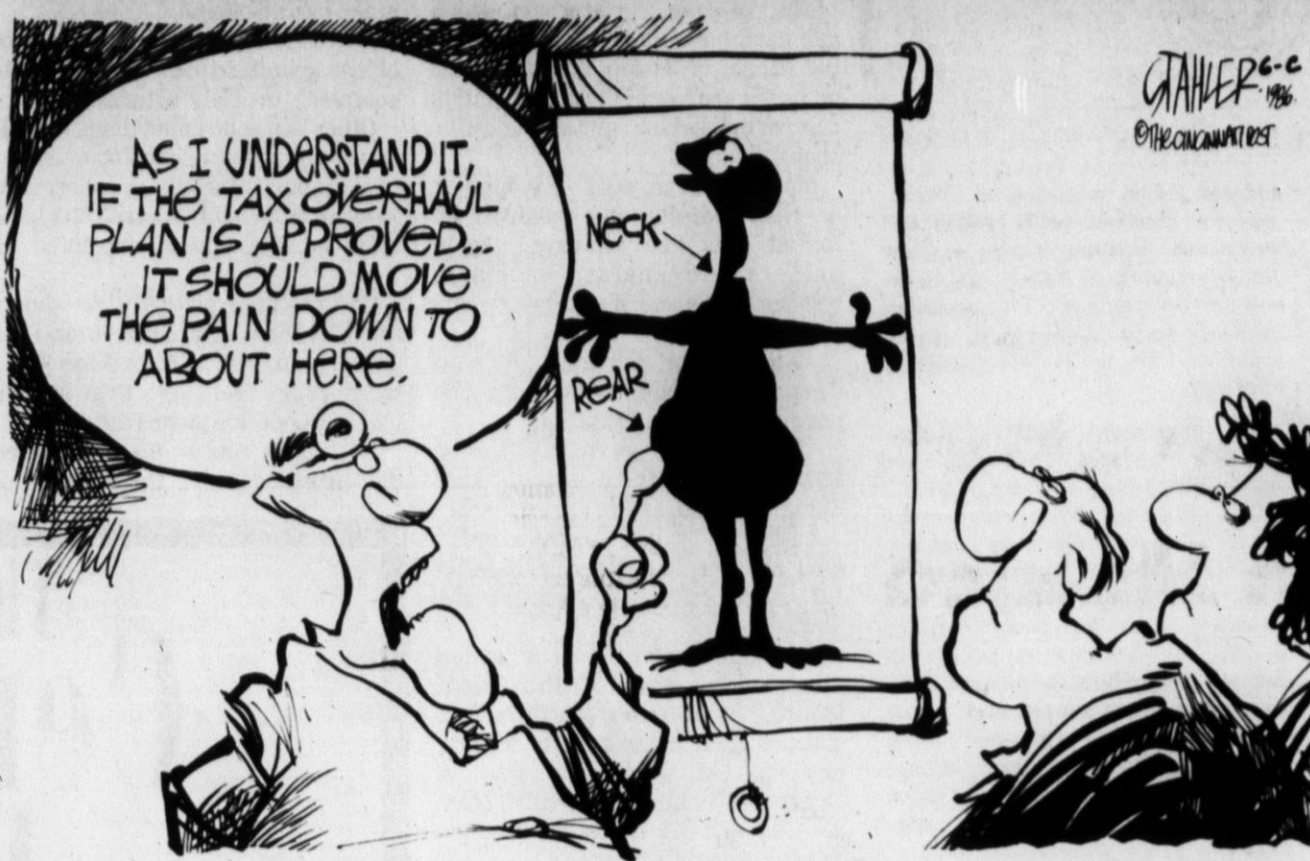

A computer company worker, illiterate, bluffed his way up the corporate ladder until he was making $75,000 a year. Then the bottom fell out.

And, as we have seen, there are real hazards in such deceit.

An industrial worker almost killed several people because he could not read assembly instructions. A mother did kill her baby because she could not read measuring instructions on the formula.

Project Literacy, U.S.—PLUS—is going to reveal that one of the world's "backward nations" is us—U.S.—but that this sickness we can cure!

HOW TO BUY A WATCH

I have received a great deal of flak because I drive a car made in Germany. I was in a car dealer's house one day. He raked me over the coals about my car. He was wearing a Rolex watch. He had on Gucci loafers. His TV was a Sony. His shirt was made in Tiawan.

I asked him about his watch. Rolex watches are not exactly made in the U.S.A. He told me the watch was not a real Rolex. It was a fake made in Japan.

I decided to buy a new watch. My old one played out so I set out to find a new one. I decided to buy one made in America. All of the ads on TV got to me. I was going to do my part. I had no idea what kind of experience I was in for. A few years ago Seiko ads said "Someday all watches will be made like this." The ads could have said some day all watches will be made by Seiko.

I went to about 10 stores. Every store was the same. They all had Seiko watches. I found one that had watches with a different name. I asked them where they were made. You already know the answer. They were made by Seiko.

I have nothing against Seiko particularly. I just want a watch that does not look like every other watch. What is worse is Seiko makes all of their watches look like cheaper versions of Rolex. I don't want a watch that looks like a Rolex unless it is a Rolex.

I thought all watches came from the Swiss. When I was young they talked about watches with Swiss movements and 23 jewels. I had no idea what a movement was and less idea what the 23 jewels did, but it sounded impressive. I had visions of little Swiss elves putting watches together in a little shop that looked like a Santa Claus workshop. Those little elves must be on welfare. I found one store that sold Swiss watches. They all looked like Seikos, or rather like Seiko's version of Rolex.

Whatever happened to expansion bands? I like the things. They are easy to put on, they do not require the fingers of a surgeon to fasten, and they do not wallow around on your arm. I did not see a single watch with an expansion band. When I asked for one they looked at me like I had cussed the Pope. No one wears those anymore!

I gave up and came home without a watch. I decided to buy a pocket watch. That created a new problem. Where do you carry a pocket watch. Pants no longer have those little pockets. I have a pair that has a flap where the pocket should be but it is a fake. I decided to look for a pocket watch anyway and worry about where to carry it later.

I found a great selection of pocket watches. They were made by Seiko.

Bootleg Philosopher

Scientific research

Editor's note: The Bootleg Philosopher on his Johnsongrass farm on Tierra Blanca Creek takes a sidelong glance at scientists this week.

Dear editor:

I have often thought there ought to be some way for scientists to get their names in the paper without having to discover something else that's bad for you.

There is now a way; they are now getting their names in the paper by discovering that what they first discovered was bad for you, they have now discovered it isn't.

Harvard scientists a few years ago announced coffee can help cause cancer. Now they've discovered they were mistaken and you and they, especially they I imagine, can drink it without feeling guilty. A scientist who likes coffee is bound to keep on researching till he finds it's all right to drink it.

But one mistaken piece of research doesn't stop another piece of research.

Now another group of scientists has come up with the notion that hamburgers can increase the likelihood of heart trouble. This is not the first time indigestion from eating too fast too greasily has been diagnosed as a heart attack.

I don't know how many hamburgers are consumed each year, but judging by the number of hamburger places there are in this country and the number of TV ads promoting them, it must be in the millions and millions, and scientists who think they're bad for you ought to come out of their laboratory and look around. If they don't want to come out, don't they know they can send out for hamburgers?

I don't know what the world is coming to when, among other things, breakfast cereal makers have started putting peanuts in cornflakes.

Yours faithfully,
J.A.

Boots 'n Tattles

By Jeri Curtis

Back home, it was a family felony to be too lazy to look up something in the dictionary.

With that little rule, we all grew up with the assumption that learning was an individual responsibility.

If only one of the five of us had been smart enough to blame somebody.

Our parents would have been ideal scapegoats. We could have said it was their fault, because they didn't finish high school and because we were poor.

We could have pointed our finger at the school system. Arkansas educators loved to cry "Thank God for Mississippi" every time a survey came out.

We could have blamed race. I could have said that I wasn't able to learn from a teacher who wasn't my color or from my own subculture.

Somehow it all got twisted. Nobody ever told us that because we were poor that we didn't have to study, too. Since the folks didn't finish high school, they preached twice as hard about the opportunities of education. As long as you ate at their table, you were going to get a diploma.

We would have felt guilty about blaming the teachers. Ruth Tucker—worthy of another whole column, no, a book—didn't think first grade was too early to start considering college. Nor did she think it was ever too late to learn. Only a few years back she received her doctorate, and we thought she was "old" back when Kennedy was shot.

From going to an integrated school, I learned to judge each person on their own character. That's an important lesson to learn.

The black principal of my high school taught us all another lesson. We ripped up with laughter the way he said it, but it's true. At the end of one of those assemblies explaining dress code, hygiene, and citizenship, he glided across the stage and said, "When you look good, you feel good. And when you feel good, you strut good." Dress for success summarized in two sentences.

In spite of her being black and her giving hard spelling tests, Grady McBeth won the hearts of a bunch of white kids with her tales about being a college basketball star. When Rose Butler's husband got transferred overseas, we were all disappointed that those students after us wouldn't have to take one of her vigorous history tests as a rite of passage.

Maybe because they were black, or grew up poor or were women, they had to work harder to prove themselves.

Maybe we all should do that, anyway.

Violence in courtships becoming campus problem

NEW YORK (AP) — Courtship violence — threats, slaps and beatings by boyfriends and girlfriends — affects at least two of 10 college students, and campus officials are hardly aware of the problem, researchers say.

"We didn't discover child abuse until the '60s, or spouse abuse until the '70s. But they've been there forever. Now, courtship abuse is the topic of the '80s," said Rosemary Bogal-Allbritten, associate professor of social work at Murray State University in Kentucky.

A national survey she recently completed with her husband, William Allbritten, the university's director of counseling, found that most college officials knew of only one to 10 incidents of such violence on their campuses.

But a study of students at Murray State three years ago indicates at least one-fifth of all college students experience some form of courtship violence, and 60 percent know of someone involved in a violent relationship.

The researchers, who made the more recent study public last week, contacted 1,922 campus housing directors, counseling and health center directors, student development vice presidents, security directors and chaplains. Abuse included threats, shoving, slapping, choking, attacks with weapons and sexual assault.

Using statistics, Sally Torrey, director of the Emporia State College Women's Resource Center in Kansas, has compiled this scenario of typical, advanced courtship violence:

It's a fairly serious relationship and one, or maybe both, experienced some physical abuse as a child.

The man has a volatile temper, is jealous and has trouble adjusting to college demands. The woman is emotionally dependent upon him. They argue a lot, but she's more adept at put-downs. They've broken up several times.

After an episode of violence he's contrite. He promises it won't happen again. She wants to believe him. They feel closer in the aftermath of violence, at least until the next time.

Ms. Bogal-Allbritten estimated that 20 percent to 40 percent of couples remain together after violence.

"It's a curious thing," said Ms. Torrey. "We've always thought that with spouse abuse, it was the marriage, finances, children that keep the woman in a battering relationship. And here we don't have those things, yet there's still a tendency for people to stay in the relationship."

In a paper presented Wednesday to the American Sociological Association, Jan Stets and Maureen Pirog-Good of Indiana University said that most courtship violence occurs after the initial dating stage, when the partners, no longer on their best behavior, enter into a brutal power struggle.

Nine missing after flooding in Mexico

MONTERREY, Mexico (AP) — Nine people, mostly children, were listed as missing in the aftermath of flash flooding caused by rare, heavy rains in this northern industrial city.

Nine people drowned and 3,500 others were driven from their homes during the day-long downpour, officials said Friday.

"We lament what occurred. ... There were serious damages," Jorge Trevino, the governor of the state of Nuevo Leon, told a news conference.

"There are many (people) missing," he said. "Very probably, unfortunately, there will be more" deaths. The rains were described as the strongest here in at least 20 years.

Raul Garza, director of the governor's press information office, said nine people had died, and authorities were compiling a list of the victims.

Authorities reported that on Thursday, up to 8 inches of rain fell during a 10-hour period in some portions of Monterrey and its surrounding suburbs. Monterrey, capital of Nuevo Leon state, is 138 miles from the Texas border at Laredo.

Flood waters had receded in most areas of the city by Friday and traffic was nearly back to normal.

City and state work crews repaired damaged roads, pumped water from the basements of two hospitals and some schools, fixed traffic signals and restored electricity in some residential neighborhoods.

There was no immediate damage estimate.

This city of some 2.8 million receives an average of just 20 inches of rain a year. A strict water rationing program is in place to conserve the normally scarce resource.

Because of the near constant drought conditions, the area's poor had built their tiny concrete and tin huts on the banks and inside of the city's drainage canals.

Many of these homes were lost.

when the Topo Chico canal overflowed its banks and water raged through others.

Garza said the majority of those people forced to flee their homes in the sudden flood spent the night with friends or relatives or found shelter at government centers opened during the disaster. He said many were able to return to their homes after the water abated.

The homeless were being given free food, clothing, blankets and construction materials through a joint program of the government's Conasupo low-cost food stores and the Integral Family Development centers, said Garza.

The downpour began about 4 a.m. Thursday, and by mid-day streets throughout the city were flooded.

Dozens of stalled vehicles clogged the main thoroughfares, and motorists were forced to swim to safety.

In another northern state, Chihuahua, the San Pedro and Conchos rivers overflowed their banks, forcing hundreds of families in rural areas to flee their homes.

Lack of traffic control preventing growth

MIDLAND, Texas (AP) — The lack of air traffic control or advisory information in the early-morning hours at Midland Regional Airport has prevented recruitment of airlines and businesses, the airport manager said.

The Federal Aviation Administration in June announced budget cuts would force Midland's flight service station to close from 10 p.m. until 6 a.m. daily.

Airport Manager Victor White said Friday he is concerned with flight safety, a healthy economy and luring more flights to the airport, which serves a West Texas area hard-hit by a sagging petroleum industry.

The airport's FAA flight service station formerly provided 24-hour weather advisories and traffic information. But since August 1981, the airport's air traffic control tower has been closed "during the midnight hours."

White said the lack of Midland Regional air traffic control or advisory information between midnight and 6 a.m. prevented the recruitment of airlines and businesses to the area.

He has sought help from chambers of commerce in Midland and Odessa. "I'm uncomfortable, personally and as an employee who is supposed to watch aviation," he said. "I've had lots and lots of people asking who they can contact about this."

Chambers from the two cities in August approved resolutions asking state politicians to urge the FAA to reopen the tower and/or the flight service station.

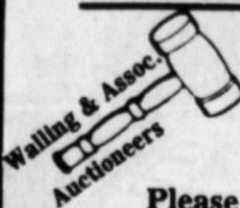

"The FAA's position is that nothing can be done," White said. "Unofficially, higher-ups in the FAA have said to go through political means — try to persuade politicians to convince the FAA to reopen the facilities."

FAA local coordinator Louis Pare said the lack of a 24-hour control tower "isn't just in Midland, it's nationally. There are more non-24-hour control towers than 24-hour towers."

He said 30 employees, including a manager, supervisor, clerical workers and air traffic controllers, operate Midland Regional's 18-hour tower.

"If the air traffic demands a 24-hour tower, it will be considered," said Pare.

FmHA assures protection of borrowers' rights

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Farmers Home Administration, caught off guard by a private bill collector's short-order timing, has assured delinquent borrowers that their rights will be protected before further legal action is pursued.

Vance Clark, administrator of the FmHA, said Thursday that he has directed his agency to review its debt collection procedures. The FmHA has long been regarded as the Agriculture Department's lender of last resort for farmers who cannot get loans elsewhere.

But Clark said the agency has a responsibility to collect $630 million owed by 6,500 delinquent borrowers who received collection notices from Capital Credit Corp., based in Fairfield, N.J.

"There is, sadly, the perception that we are moving in an unsympathetic, bureaucratic fashion against those who have suffered the most as a result of economic problems in American agriculture and who are least able to make payments," Clark said in a statement.

"We are deeply aware of the great difficulties many farmers are facing and are striving to help them weather the financial storm," he said.

"At the same time, we are responsible for balancing the interests of all farmers, including those who are not in serious jeopardy, and the interest of all taxpayers, against the concerns of those individuals from whom we are attempting to collect these long-overdue debts."

Clark said the New Jersey company was hired as part of a government-wide effort to reduce the volume of seriously delinquent debt. He said the debts involved "collection only" accounts, which Clark described as one in which the borrower's security has been disposed of.

"Most of the borrowers are no longer in farming, and their debts are years overdue," he said.

Hereford scores three first quarter touchdowns

Awesome Herd shuts out Andrews 28-0

By GARY CHRISTENSEN
Sports Editor

The awesome Hereford Whiteface defense did not allow the Andrews Mustangs to run wild at Whiteface Stadium Friday night—and the Herd offense scored a pair of touchdowns off turnovers enroute to a 28-0 victory over Andrews.

Hereford scored three touchdowns in a five-minute span in the first quarter for a 21-0 lead, and added a third quarter touchdown for the final margin of 28-0 in the 1986 season opener.

The Herd nearly doubled the offensive yardage output of the Mustangs, beginning the Don Cumpston Era No. 2 with a bang.

Although many penalties marred Friday's game, Coach Cumpston was radiating with happiness and enthusiasm after the victory.

The Whitefaces received the game-opening kickoff and moved from their own 26-yard line to the Andrews 17-yard line, but a holding penalty and an illegal procedure penalty ruined the scoring opportunity.

In a third-and-13 play from the Andrews 27, a Todd Shire passed was knocked down by a Mustang defender in the end zone.

A punt by Bobby Baker put the Mustangs at their own 10-yard line. After Andrews failed to gain any yardage in two rushing plays, Mustang quarterback Mike Visentine attempted a pass.

Herd cornerback Robby Collier picked off the pass at the Andrews 37-yard line and returned it 15 yards to the 22.

Vincent Brown rushed for a 17-yard gain in the first down play, and then Marcus Brown carried for a five-yard touchdown run. Tim Long kicked the extra point, and Hereford led 7-0 with 5:31 left in the first period.

The Herd defense then limited Andrews to six yards in three plays and forced the Mustangs to punt. Marcus Brown returned the punt 15 yards to the midfield line.

In the first two plays, Mark Artho carried for a combined 15 yards, and Vincent Brown carried for an 11-yard gain in the next play.

Four plays later, Vincent Brown rushed eight yards for a touchdown with 45 seconds left in the first quarter. The touchdown was set up by a pass completion of 15 yards to Baker from Shire.

Long was successful again with the extra-point attempt, making the Herd's lead 14-0.

In Andrews' first play of its next possession, the Mustangs' leading ball carrier, Cayetano Rios, fumbled the ball and Hereford's Fidencio Cantu recovered it at the Andrews 23-yard line.

Hereford needed just one play to get to the end zone. Shire found Kyle Streun all by himself in the center of the end zone for a 23-yard touchdown pass, with 31 seconds left in the first quarter.

Once again, Long kicked the extra point, and the Whitefaces had a big 21-0 lead.

The second quarter was filled with penalties, including eight against Hereford. For the first half, Hereford was penalized 10 times for 85 yards.

The closest Hereford could get to the end zone was the Andrews 28-yard line before penalties pushed the Herd back. Andrews had only 81 yards total offense in the first half compared to 214 for Hereford.

Andrews managed to get into Hereford territory only one time in the first half—to the Whiteface 37-yard line.

Early in the third quarter, a Hereford offensive tackle, Westley Brown, suffered a broken leg and was taken to the hospital for treatment. Back in the first half of the game, Andrews' Mike Moisant, an end, suffered a broken ankle and was also taken to the hospital.

Hereford drove from its own 44-yard line for its third quarter touchdown. The big play was a 21-yard gain from the Herd 49 to the Mustang 30.

After Shire rushed for a five-yard gain, Andrews was called for facemask penalties in the next two plays. Mark Artho and Bobby Medina each carried for five-yard gains in those plays, and the second facemask penalty put the ball at the Andrews threepyard line.

Marcus Brown carried for a touchdown, but it was nullified by a clipping penalty. He rushed for an eight-yard gain in the next play, and that was followed by a 10-yard touchdown pass to Baker from Shire with 7:50 left in the third period.

Long stayed perfect in his extra-point kicking, giving Hereford what turned out to be its final margin over the Mustangs, 28-0.

The shutout was nearly lost in the fourth quarter. Visentine completed a 15-yard pass to Kurt Willems into the end zone, but the touchdown was called back because in an illegal-receiver-downfield penalty with 8:55 left in the game.

That pass completion came in a fourth-and-four play, and Visentine's next pass attempt went incomplete.

The Whitefaces finished the contest with 343 yards total offense, compared to 180 for Andrews. Hereford had 211 yards rushing, led by Vincent Brown with 80 yards in 11 attempts.

Other rushing totals included Marcus Brown with 37 yards, and Mark Artho and Kyle Andrews each with 34 yards.

In the passing game, Todd Shire completed eight of 11 passes for 102 yards. Hereford had 132 passing yards altogether, with 10 of 17 passes completed.

Baker caught six passes for 75 yards in gains.

Andrews had only six yards passing. Of its 174 yards rushing, David Criswell had 122 of them on 21 carries.

Hereford totaled 22 first downs, and Andrews had nine first downs.

The Whitefaces play at home again next Friday, against Clovis in a 7:30 p.m. game. Andrews plays host to Midland that night.

Pro bodybuilder to speak at YMCA

A professional bodybuilder and the fitness director at Northwest Texas Hospital will be the guest speakers at the Hereford and Vicinity YMCA "Health Enhancement Night" on Thursday.

The program begins at 7:30 p.m. in the YMCA gym.

Ken Adcock, winner of many bodybuilding trophies and currently placed 60th in the nation in his weight class, will be one of the speakers. Adcock also is the owner of Strength Systems products for bodybuilders, weight lifters and power lifters. He is the Amarillo distributor for Beverly International nutrition products.

His titles include the Mr. South

Plains Classic, 1984; A.A.U. South Western America, 1985; and second place in the A.A.U. Mr. Texas, 1986.

Ledoux has been coordinating fitness and health programs at a community health center with NWTX since 1985. He has experience with West Texas State University as an instructor and as an intramural sports director, and was a coach in the Amarillo school system.

The two will lecture on bodybuilding and fitness, plus give exercise demonstrations and a bodybuilding exhibition.

Registration for fall YMCA classes may be done at that time also. New six-week sessions begin Sept. 15.

YMCA is organizing three volleyball leagues

The Hereford and Vicinity YMCA will have three volleyball leagues this fall—church co-ed volleyball, men's open volleyball, and women's open volleyball.

The church co-ed volleyball league will have "A" and "B" divisions.

Co-ed volleyball matches will be played on Monday and Tuesday nights, starting at 7 p.m., and the men's and women's volleyball matches will be played on Thursday night, beginning at 7 p.m.

The registration deadline is Sept. 17, and the leagues will begin the week of Sept. 22. The length of the season for each league will be 10 matches plus a single-elimination tournament.

Entry fee is $60 for each team, plus an $8 fee for each non-member of the YMCA. Teams playing in the church co-ed league must have at least three members who attend the church the team represents.

Players in all leagues must be at least 16 years old on Sept. 1. A player cannot play on teams in both divisions of the church co-ed league.

YMCA non-members playing on teams in two leagues must pay an $8 registration fee for the first team and a $4 fee for the second team.

For more information on the volleyball leagues, contact the YMCA at 364-6990.

Pursuing The Quarterback

Hereford's Kyle Streun (11) and defensive tackle Brent Berry (70) breathe down the neck of Andrews quarterback Mike Visentine Friday night. Visentine was able to complete only one pass (for six yards) against the awesome Herd defense, and one of his passes was intercepted by Robby Collier of the Whitefaces. (Brand photo by Mauri Montgomery)

'Y' flag football
signup deadline is September 17

Boys in the first through sixth grades may sign up for the Hereford and Vicinity YMCA flag football leagues, for which the season will start on Sept. 27.

The registration deadline is Sept. 17, and team practices will start on Sept. 22. The three leagues are: first and second grades; third and fourth grades; and fifth and sixth grades.

Six-year-olds may play in the first and second grade league. Registration fees are $6 for YMCA members and $14 for non-members of the YMCA.

Registration forms are available at the YMCA. The registration fee includes a flag football T-shirt.

Smashing Up Criswell

David Criswell (34) of the Andrews Mustangs was pretty much a one-man show for his team Friday night against the Hereford Whitefaces. Criswell gained 122 yards rushing in 21 carries, but neither he nor his teammates scored against Hereford. Here Criswell is halted by Derrell Page (57), Robby Collier (3), and Ricky Ruiz (32). (Brand photo by Mauri Montgomery)

A preview of NFL 1986 week No. 1

By The Associated Press

Both coaches envision a high-scoring shootout, and for good reason, when the Miami Dolphins host the San Diego Chargers in their National Football League opener Sunday.

"It's hard to visualize this as a low-scoring ballgame because both offenses have so much firepower," said Miami Coach Don Shula, pointing to the offenses that finished 1-2 in the league last year in passing.

Led by quarterback Dan Fouts, the Chargers averaged 304.4 passing yards a game last season, while the Dan Marino-led Dolphins averaged 257.1.

"I just wish we were playing Miami some other time, later in the year so our defense had a chance to become settled," said San Diego Coach Don Coryell.

Past Miami-San Diego matchups have produced some of the NFL's most memorable games. Three of the teams' last four meetings were decided in overtime, including an epic struggle in a January, 1982 playoff game that ended in a 41-38 San Diego victory.

Elsewhere, 12 other games will be played Sunday, including the defending Super Bowl champion Chicago Bears against the Cleveland Browns.

Other action includes the Los Angeles Raiders at Denver, New York Jets at Buffalo, Atlanta at New Orleans, Detroit at Minnesota, Houston at Green Bay, Los Angeles Rams at St. Louis, Philadelphia at Washington, San Francisco at Tampa Bay, Indianapolis at New England, Cincinnati at Kansas City and Pittsburgh at Seattle.

The New York Giants play at Dallas in Monday night's game. The Cowboys got a jolt Thursday when veteran cornerback Everson Walls walked out, saying he'll boycott the game unless the Cowboys meet his contract demands.

The Bears will open defense of their first NFL crown since 1963 against the Browns, winners of the AFC Central Division last year.

Led by the NFL's all-time leader Walter Payton (324 carries for 1,551 yards), the Bears had the NFL's top rushing offense in 1985 with a 172.6-yard average.

Few rivalries could be more competitive than the Raiders and Broncos. The last three games have gone into overtime — a league record — and the last five meetings have been decided by three points or less.

The Raiders posted 31-28 and 17-14 triumphs in 1985 en route to a 12-4 record and the AFC Western Division title. Partly because of those two setbacks, Denver became the first 11-5 team not to make the playoffs.

After two consecutive 2-14 seasons, the Buffalo Bills would have no reason to expect the franchise's first-ever sellout at home except for the arrival of quarterback Jim Kelly.

The only problem with selling 80,290 tickets for Sunday's anticipated debut of the former USFL star, who signed a five-year, $8 million contract, is that Bills Coach Hank Bullough hasn't guaranteed that Kelly is going to play in the game against the New York Jets.

"I'm not going to start Jim if he can't handle it all," said Bullough, who must choose between Kelly and Frank Reich at quarterback. "I don't want to put him in there until he's fully comfortable."

Kelly has had only three weeks of workouts with the Bills, but he said he is ready to play.

"I feel I know the offense good enough to go out there," he said.

For the Green Bay Packers and Houston Oilers, two young NFL teams trying to rebuild winning traditions, Sunday's season opener is an important step to the future.

"Both teams are trying to establish something, trying to imply personality," said third-year Green Bay Coach Forrest Gregg, who has replaced a score of players from last year's team that went 8-8 for the third consecutive season. "I think it will be an interesting game."

Houston Coach Jerry Glanville is in his first full National Football League season after going 0-2 as an interim coach last year in replacing Hugh Campbell. He also sees similarities between the Packers and Oilers.

"They've made some offensive changes too," Glanville said. "They're not just a running back and a lot of tricks. They have come back to hard-nosed football like we have. I think this will be a good game."

The Packers have a new starting quarterback, third-year pro Randy Wright, who will direct a revamped offense emphasizing ball control and short- to middle-range passes. Veteran long bomb specialist Lynn Dickey was cut in the last roster reduction.

Third-year pro Warren Moon returns as starting quarterback for the Oilers, who were 5-11 last season. He had a good preseason, completing 42 of 63 passes for 539 yards and three touchdowns, in an offensive set Glanville put in to take advantage of Moon's rollout capabilities.

The Oilers outscored preseason opponents 81-61 in going 4-0 in preseason for the first time since 1965.

The Packers, 1-3 in preseason, were outscored 86-73 and have scored only three touchdowns since opening the exhibition season with a five-touchdown performance in a victory over the Jets.

Said Gregg: "I think people don't know the Houston Oilers. They probably expect Houston to not be very good. I'm here to tell you that is not true. They have a very talented team."

"I think all of our players would trade that 4-0 to be 1-0 after the first game of the regular season," Glanville said.

The Packers and Oilers coaches this season both have stressed conditioning and formation of a winning attitude. The Packers haven't made the playoffs since 1962; the Oilers last were a playoff team in 1980.

The Houston-Green Bay series is tied 2-2.

Jumping For Joy Over Paydirt

Kyle Streun (11), with help from Keith Anderson (62), jumps for joy after catching a 23-yard touchdown pass from Todd Shire with 31 seconds left in the first quarter. The touchdown, plus the extra point, gave the Hereford Whitefaces a 21-0 lead enroute to a 28-0 victory over the Andrews Mustangs Friday night at Whiteface Stadium. Other Herd teammates congratulating Streun include Vincent Brown (22), Tim Koenig (61), and Rodney McCracken (80). (Brand photo by Shawn Cockrum)

In 1964-65, Bart Starr of the Green Bay Packers threw 294 consecutive passes without an interception. One Rose Bowl game was not played in California. It was played in Durham, N.C., in 1942.

YMCA announces six racquetball leagues

Six racquetball leagues will be organized at the Hereford and Vicinity YMCA this fall, with a registration deadline of Sept. 24.

The six leagues are: men's "A" singles, men's "B" singles, women's "A" singles, women's "B" singles, men's doubles, and women's doubles.

The men's singles matches will be played on Monday nights, starting Sept. 29. The women's singles matches will be scheduled on Thursday nights, starting on Oct. 1. Men's doubles and women's doubles matches will be played on Tuesday nights, starting Sept. 30.

The length of the season will be six weeks. Awards will be presented to the first and second place finishers.

Entry fee is $15 for YMCA members and $25 for non-members of the YMCA. For more information on the racquetball leagues, call the YMCA at 364-6990.

ABOUT SUPERSTARS
PONTE VEDRA, Fla. (AP) — Everybody on the PGA Tour is wondering who the next superstar of the game will be — the successor to Arnold Palmer, Jack Nicklaus and Tom Watson.

A modest candidate for the part, Payne Stewart, offered his definition of what it takes. "A superstar should be a golfer who can play successfully worldwide under varying conditions," he said. "He's someone who will be a contender every time he tees it up." "As they used to say about Jack Nicklaus: You know he's going to beat you. He knows it also. But the worst part is that he knows you know he's going to win."

Girls' volleyball planned at YMCA

A volleyball league for first through sixth grade girls is being organized at the Hereford and Vicinity YMCA.

The first and second grade matches in the league will be played on racquetball courts. Players will be allowed to let the ball bounce one time between each contact with the ball.

Third and fourth graders will play regular volleyball except that they will be allowed four hits to get the ball over the net.

Fifth and sixth grade girls will play regular volleyball.

Registration deadline for the league is Sept. 17. Practices start on Sept. 22, and the first league matches will be played on Sept. 29 and 30.

Playing dates are Mondays and Tuesdays at 5:30 p.m. Six-year-olds may sign up for the first and second grade league.

The registration fees are $8 for YMCA members and $14 for YMCA non-members. The fee includes a volleyball T-shirt for each player.

Ernie Nevers of the Chicago Cardinals scored six touchdowns, all by rushing, against the Chicago Bears in 1929 to set an NFL record.

Joe Carr, a member of the Pro Football Hall of Fame, was president of the NFL from 1921 to 1939 although he never played college or pro football.

Girls must supply their own tennis shoes, and knee pads are optional.

A MATTER OF CHOICE

Swedish government wants total child care system

By JOHAN RAPP
Associated Press Writer
STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Emilia's mother Tjastin Kraft-Petersson is pleased that Sweden's socialist government has launched a program to provide public day care for all preschool children older than 18 months.

Many Swedish parents, however, fear that they are losing the right to bring up their children themselves after the government last fall decided to give children "the right by law to public care by 1991."

Carina Stenstrom, a mother of four who writes editorials for Sweden's largest morning paper, Dagens Nyheter, said of the five-year program: "It is odd that the Social Democrats so persistently strive toward a totally collective child care system... when a majority of parents prefer solutions which give them the opportunity to take care of their children themselves."

The Social Democrats have said that public day care is a precondition for the equality of the sexes.

Mrs. Kraft-Petersson, 34, said that she and her family could not afford to live in the villa in Anderslov in the south of Sweden they bought a few years ago were she forced to stay at home and take care of Emilia.

Five days a week Mrs. Kraft-Petersson leaves her 2½-year-old daughter to be looked after by a day care nurse, while she goes to take care of other people's children at her job in a public day care center.

"I do not want to be alone at home with my child, I want to be outside my home and meet people," she said, adding that she thought it would be "boring" for Emilia to be alone at home with her mother all day long.

Since the parliament passed a series of sexual equality laws during the heyday of the feminist movement, Sweden now has the highest rate of gainfully employed women in the Western world.

At the time, in the 1970s, women took to the streets to demand "public day care for all" and money allocated to it has risen sharply. Of a total of $4.7 billion in different forms of family-related grants from public authorities last year, more than 40 percent went to day care. The number of preschool children in public day care has reached 65 percent, up from 20 percent in 1970.

Critics charge that because of the one-sided support to the public day care system and Sweden's high taxes families have difficulties making ends meet on one average salary.

Those who leave their children with public day care receive an indirect grant of $6,400 a year, which is what a full-time place at a public day care center cost the authorities in 1985.

Parents who choose to stay at home with their kids get no special support from the state.

This is in keeping with the Social Democrats' policy of encouraging two-income families, which it also says is a precondition for the equality of the sexes.

The Conservative party argues that parents are gradually losing the right to rear their own children and it has demanded that this right be written into the Swedish constitution.

"The indirect force exerted on parents to leave their children with public day care must be stopped," said Conservative parliament member Gote Jonsson in a recent interview.

To correct this situation the opposition has proposed a special government "parent grant." The state would pay a mother or a father a cash allowance to stay at home from work to look after the children until they start school.

But the most generous amount so far added up to only 3,200 taxable dollars per child a year, approximately a fourth of an average Swedish annual pretax salary.

Nevertheless, the Social Democrats have flatly rejected such ideas. Instead they plan to extend an existing special parents' allowance that enables either the father or the mother to stay at home with a newly born child for the first nine months with full salary compensation. The Social Democrats have said they want to double the period.

When the 18 months is up, the child can be put into public day care and the parent returns to his or her job.

Women integrating dominant system

By KIM SUE LIA PERKES
The Scottsdale Progress

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — "She can, but she hasn't decided to," said Pauline Lyttle, co-author of the book, "Why Jenny Can't Lead: Understanding the Male Dominant System."

"Jenny can't lead because she has chosen not to take the power and to be a leader," Lyttle added.

It's a political problem, she said: "A political system is a group of informal rules, policies and decisions that people choose to comply with."

"There are two political systems. The female political system has been very powerful when you talk about families and you talk about small groups in communities, but an organization such as the Army or corporations or entities requires different kinds of skills, which I choose to call the male dominant system."

The female political system works on the premise that women can control the environment, by, for example, putting their energy into legislation, rules and regulations, she said.

"In fact, legislation can be used as a tool," she continued, "but under the male dominant system, it is used very differently, based on the male premise, which is you really cannot control the environment."

"You cannot control earthquakes. You cannot control the outcome of an internal political struggle in the office. What you have to do instead of trying to control it is basically to use what I call the politics of resiliency. Powerful people use whatever is in the environment just the way it is and figure out how to prevail."

Women need to learn this male strategy in order to become effective leaders and to earn a spot on the "team," Lyttle said, adding that women traditionally never learned to be team players.

As homemakers, they were dependent economically and socially on their spouses, so other women were viewed as the enemy because if another woman should interfere with the couple's relationship, the homemaker could lose her security, she noted.

"In terms of female politics of exclusivity, women competing with other women was good survival in the home," Lyttle said. "History has demonstrated that survival is predicated on competition of one against the other. A woman's concept of a team is a team of one, which is why women think they have to be perfect. But in an organization, what you do is join ranks because with the other people on your team, whether you like them or not, you back them so you can reach a common goal."

Lyttle, president of Operational Politics Inc., a Colorado-based national consulting firm, was in Phoenix recently for a lecture at Planned Parenthood of Central and Northern Arizona.

She also conducts seminars, in which she teaches "effective organizational teamwork."

Power is like a football, she explained. "Anybody can pick it up, anybody can throw it, and anybody can catch it. Frequently, you will find that when someone throws a ball to a woman so she can make a touchdown, she feels like somebody has hit her with something. If she doesn't understand the rules of the game, she may accuse those people of trying to hit her."

By the mid-1990s, the Census Bureau predicts, women will represent 64 percent of the U.S. work force, and that makes it increasingly important that women know how to play the game, she pointed out.

Already, corporations are preparing for that change, she said. Men are learning management skills that are more people-oriented and sensitive in order to deal with the women's political system, but they won't teach women the male dominant system, she added.

"There is no place in society where women can learn men's skills, but increasingly there are more places for men to learn women's skills."

"the winning choice"

Good to his word, Lewis held line

AUSTIN (AP) — The Legislature's budget-balancing special session ended the way it began — with the state deeply in debt and House Speaker Gib Lewis not yet ready for new taxes.

His opposition through the 30-day session was as much a surprise as sunrise.

Despite all of Gov. Mark White's confidence, optimism and talk about compromise when he opened the session Aug. 6, Lewis' message was simple: no new taxes. Good to his word, he held the line.

Rumored daily to be about to bend, lobbied almost daily by the governor, bombarded by editorial criticism,

Lewis stood his ground.

And when the end came, without a tax hike, Lewis declined to call it a victory.

"I don't think it's a question of who's won or lost," he said. "It's just a question of what's right."

The governor wanted a temporary tax increase to help erase the $3.5 billion deficit. Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, who leads the Senate, wanted a permanent tax hike. Even some members of his own House wanted a tax bill.

But Lewis, 49, a self-made millionaire, talked about the pain of laying off employees from his label business. State government can't be immune to the tough times besetting other businesses, he said.

Lewis' answer was spending cuts and an array of cash management techniques he said would keep state checks from bouncing. After that — but only after — see if a tax increase still is needed, he said.

Throughout the grinding special session, many lawmakers believed the deadlock would break at any minute.

But Lewis said no, as he had for months.

On May 30, Lewis convened a House budget caucus where lawmakers were told the deficit would be at least $2 billion.

"In my address to the members of the Texas House that day, I stated that a tax bill is not and should not be our first and only choice," Lewis recalled.

On July 17, when White announced he was calling the special session, Lewis said: "I am pleased to see that the governor has not mentioned any tax increases ... this evening."

On the eve of the session, Lewis declared: "With the state revenue situation changing so rapidly, to pass a multibillion-dollar tax bill with the pressure of a 30-day deadline is, in my judgment, overreacting."

On Aug. 6, after White opened the session by asking for a one-year tax hike so the financial crisis "will not be our Alamo," Lewis said: "I'm still holding firm, no new taxes. We can balance the budget without a tax increase."

After White met privately with lawmakers and publicly recruited former Gov. John Connally and others to the tax cause, Lewis sent newspaper editors a letter.

"With the state's revenue situation changing so rapidly, passing a multibillion-dollar tax bill at the height of a recession and with the pressures of a special session deadline is, in my judgment, not in the best interest of the citizens of this state," he wrote.

By session's end, even Hobby had softened.

After insisting for weeks that a permanent solution was needed to the budget crisis, Hobby announced 48 hours before the session's end that a short-term answer was acceptable — including spending cuts, a temporary tax hike and what he called "accounting tricks."

Now, with a second budget session on the way, the looming question remains whether Lewis will agree to taxes.

He says the November election, where he faces a Republican opponent, has nothing to do with it. He says pictures of him as the lone no-tax holdout aren't accurate. He says he is representing the folks who elected a majority of his House.

"No one has talked about the poor old taxpayer. What about him? Have we taken him into consideration yet? I think the House is trying to take him into consideration," Lewis said.

What's next?

Lewis said his backing for a tax bill will come when all other budget-balancing steps are taken — and still prove inadequate.

"If we can pass some cash management bills ... and we get some strong reductions in state spending and we do those things we are within easy reach of doing ... if we do those things and at that point we're short from meeting the commitment of this biennium, then I'll be the first one to say we need some taxes," he said when the session ended.

But two days earlier, after a summit meeting at the Governor's Mansion, he reminded reporters, "I'm always against taxes. That's a popular thing to be. Remember that."

Computerized 'dansource' brings entertainers to together

By DAGMAR OBEREIGNER

Associated Press Writer

DENVER (AP) — A couple of Denver matchmakers have a list of eligible men and women who are graceful, disciplined, hardworking and look good in tights.

They are ballet dancers, hoping to land a job.

Michael Gleason and Tauna Hunter, dancers themselves with 15 years experience each, have launched a nationwide computerized service called Dansource, which aims to save both dancers and ballet companies time, energy and money by bringing them together.

Thought to be the first of its kind, the service charges a fee to companies looking for everything from a replacement for an injured Cavalier in "The Nutcracker" to a guest artist; and to dancers looking for off-season work or a permanent spot with a company.

Gleason noted that only the major companies hold national auditions, and the smaller ones depend on word of mouth.

"Hopefully through Dansource we can provide another way to get people what they need when they need it," Hunter said.

Gleason said a dancer could spend $2,000 on an audition circuit, only to be told, "Gee, you dance very nicely, but you don't fit in our company. Your legs are too short," or "Your hair's the wrong color."

He stressed that Dansource does not want to take the place of auditions — just augment them.

From a Tandy personal computer in the couple's home, Dansource supplies a ballet company with four computer pages of data on each dancer, including experience, training style, references and availability dates. Dancers also provide photos and are encouraged to send videotapes.

Gleason and Hunter, both in their "very early 30s," say Dansource has done well since its inception last October. Its mailing list is now 3,500. Twenty-five dancers are on file, about 50 companies have made inquiries, and 10 to 15 people have been placed.

One success story: The Southwest Ballet in Albuquerque, N.M., called on them recently, looking for a replacement for a dancer who had injured his knee. The substitute, needed for performances of "Donizetti Variations" a few days later, was on a plane the same evening.

Dansource also recently placed three male dancers with the San Jacinto Ballet of Houston, Texas, for performances through June 4 and possible summer touring.

Dansource has listings for choreographers, teachers and various consultants, too. The dancers range from 18-year-olds looking for their first job to "medal winners, very experienced professionals," Gleason said.

The couple also hope their service can help dancers wanting to make a transition from ballet to another career.

They themselves see Dansource as a business they can focus on after they stop performing. Gleason left the Colorado Ballet to concentrate on Dansource but still free-lances as a dancer. Hunter juggles Dansource with rehearsals at the Colorado Ballet, working at the business two to five hours a day.

For a dancer, the fee for being on file for a year is $100. Dance companies pay according to the size of their budget. Gleason and Hunter say they are not agents and make no guarantees when individuals or companies sign up. They collect no commissions.

"The dance world is too small," Gleason said. "We're not particularly rapacious to want to bleed it dry."

Both say they hope Dansource, by narrowing the field, can reduce the number of ego-draining rejections dancers must endure. They say they know of dancers who have quit after one too many of those.

For every 60 feet men dig down, the earth's temperature increases about 1 degree.

Faces designed

By ROBERT LEE ZIMMER

Associated Press Writer

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) — As patients watch, plastic surgeons are redesigning their faces on a television screen instead of in the operating room, and with a computer stylus instead of a scalpel.

It's like looking in a mirror and seeing the person they would like to be — the person they could be after cosmetic surgery.

"This eliminates presurgical anxiety," said Tony Scott, whose company is one of several offering these new computer systems. "If the patients are worried about how they look, you can bet they will be anxious about the surgery."

The computers, which allow the doctor and patient to preview the results of the operation, are beginning to catch on among plastic surgeons, though they are still relatively rare.

In his office, Scott uses a color video camera to capture the image of a young woman's face, then projects it on a television screen.

Four Generations

Four generations were brought together for a dinner honoring Victor Hill on his 80th birthday. The generations are Victor Hill, his son Abran Hill, his son, Victor Hill, and his son Abran Hill. The dinner was hosted by his children, Lucy Garza, Alma Lopez, Julia Arellano, Abran Hill, Chindo Hill, and Anita Gamez. There were approximately 150 guests present. Out-of-town guests represented Amarillo, Clovis, N.M., Plainview, Odessa, Dallas, Granbury, Texas, and Bakersfield, Calif.

Courses for gifted to begin Sept. 13

Again this fall, the Gifted and Talented Institute will offer challenging new learning opportunities for students of this area. Courses begin Sept. 13 on the West Texas State University campus, and continue each Saturday morning through Nov. 8.

University faculty and staff will lead enrichment classes at all grade levels, pre-school through grade 12. Reading, writing, the sciences, foreign cultures, the fine arts, and a variety of hobbies will be taught in creative new ways with plenty of hands-on experience.

Any students who have been identified by their school districts as gifted/talented, or whole principals or counselors will recommend them as capable of high-level academic performance, are eligible to participate.

Besides the customary courses open to all gifted/talented students, students grades 7-12 with national percentile rankings of 97 or above may learn from university professors on a one-on-one basis through GTT's Mentorships program. And school districts may select specific subjects and specific dates for their own custom-designed programs.

Some new courses this fall promise to challenge the students in some unusual ways. "Inside the Computer," taught by Mike Moore will actually take a computer apart in learning about hardware and programming. "Exploring the World of Sound," by Dr. George Eason, will help middle school students learn about the creative aspects of music and individual expression.

Dr. Gerald Schultz will take middle school students on a fossil hunt in Ceta Canyon. Jay Long's "Luv-a-Bug!" class will identify and mount some Panhandle insects. Cody Duncan's "Be a Star!" students will learn pantomime, improvisation, and make-up, culminating in their own presentation.

Tuition ranges from $25 to $75, depending on the course. The Gifted and Talented Institute is partially funded by a grant from the Rockwell Fund.

Mary Jane Reeves, director of the institute, has complete course descriptions, dates, and cost information. Call her at (806)656-2451 or write WT Box 208, Canyon, Tx. 79016, for applications or further information.

WHEN LESS IS MORE

PASADENA, Texas (AP) — Using less plastic for a gallon milk bottle can produce a stronger bottle.

This can happen says Phillips 66, when the manufacturing process adds plastic where extra strength is needed and subtracts plastic where it isn't. Savings for a gallon bottle can be up to 10 percent of the polyethylene material.

Abundant Life

THE SIMPLY LIFE By Bob Wear

ALL AVAILABLE information indicates that it is very much to our advantage to 'keep life simple.' Of course, this is not easy to accomplish; but it is possible. It seems that almost everything going on around us is purposely planned to complicate our life, to keep us dissatisfied, to increase our financial obligations, to keep us unsettled and disturbed. Nevertheless, we do have the privilege to think for ourselves, to ignore all disturbing influences, to establish and maintain a sound value system, and to be fully aware of present blessings. We can successfully resist all of the disconcerting and disturbing allurements directed toward us; when we have a strong desire to do so.

IT SEEMS that there are, from many sources, deliberate efforts to make the living experience complex and complicated. According to these sources, we need to do more of this, and more of that; we must go here and go there; we should do this and do that; we are urged to buy this and buy that. So much of this kind of pressure is applied in one way or another that we will be kept off balance, unless we have developed very strong resistance as a protective shield for the 'simple life'.

IF WE DESIRE to keep life simple, we must maintain a continuing alertness that enables us to protect the structure which supports this desirable manner of living. "Your life is what you make it. It can be simple if you will set it up with simplicity as a goal! It will take courage to cut away from the thousand and one hindrances that make life complex, but it can be done!"

THE WISELY-FORMED simple life is not dull, or boring, or uninteresting; but is characterized by personal stability, strong family, and meaningful identification with all that is admitted to be worthwhile.

THE SIMPLE LIFE Provides the climate in which we can be most productive and useful; and nurture all of the elements essential to continuing growth and development requisite to a full life.

Acker, Schlabs vows spoken Saturday

Joyce Lynn Acker of Amarillo became the bride of Thomas Wayne Schlabs of Hereford during a mid-afternoon wedding ceremony Saturday conducted in the Holy Family Catholic Church in Nazareth.

The Rev. Kevin Hand of the church performed the marriage.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Acker of Nazareth and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Schlabs of Hereford.

White mums and blue carnations decorated the altar and pews were marked by royal blue bows.

Denise Acker of Nazareth served her sister as maid of honor and Raymond Schlabs Jr. of Hereford served his brother as best man.

Bridsmaids included Melinda Acker of Amarillo, the bride's sister-in-law; Barbara Franks of Hereford, the groom's sister; Regina Spinhirne of Amarillo; Tina Anderson of Amarillo; and Colette Acker of Amarillo, the bride's sister.

Serving as groomsmen were Joe Clay of Hart; Gerald Marnell of Hereford; Kenneth Schlabs of Hereford, the groom's brother; Hugh Acker of Nazareth, the bride's brother; and Kevin Urbanczyk of Hereford.

Guests were escorted by Dale Acker of Dimmitt, the bride's brother; Cary Acker of Nazareth, the bride's brother; Melvin Betzen of Hereford; and Bryan Reinart of Hereford.

Cheese offers many choices

Taking care of your teeth can be as easy as eating a delectable piece of aged Cheddar along with your fruit, according to research done over the last few years.

Cheddar, Swiss and Monterey Jack cheese battle cavities by preventing sugar from forming an acid layer on the teeth, and according to the National Dairy Council, they are the only foods known to have this ability.

Cavities form when bacteria called dental plaque stick to teeth. This bacteria breaks down the carbohydrate foods we eat, changing sugars to plaque acid. The plaque adheres this acid to the teeth where tooth enamel is attacked and eventually causes decay.

Experiments have shown that aged Cheddar eaten immediately after a meal blocked an expected rise in cavity-causing plaque acid from the fruit's natural sugar.

In addition to Cheddar, Monterey Jack and Swiss, Gouda, Brie, Blue and Mozzarella have also been labeled "friendly" cheeses to teeth.

GRANTS ANNOUNCED

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Three grants were announced recently by the Los Angeles County Museum of Art.

It said it had received a permanent endowment grant of $300,000 from the Andrew W. Mellon Foundation for the support of scholarly publications on its collections. The museum says its ongoing program of documentation of its collections is designed to make the holdings available to scholars, curators, collectors and students as well as the general public.

A donation of $250,000, to be paid over five years, by American Medical International Inc. will be used for the museum's corporate membership program for general operating funds.

And, a $75,000 general operating support grant from the Institute of Museum Services will be used for the installation of the 20th century art collection in the Robert O. Anderson Building.

Jacklyn Birkenfeld, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Julius Birkenfeld, was flower girl and Truett Schlabs, son of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Schlabs, Jr., was ring bearer.

Janette Carnahan, accompanied by Carolyn Evers, sang "Bridal Vow," "God, A Man and A Woman," "One Bread, One Body," "On Eagles' Wings," "Only A Shadow" and "Mother At Your Feet Is Keeling."

Given in marriage by her parents, the bride wore a floor-length white bridal gown of organza and taffeta. The high neckline was outlined in chantilly lace and the fitted basque bodice was overlaid with lace to the dropped waistline and was accented with pearls and irridescent.

The waistline dipped to a point in the front and the back, and the long French puff sleeves with schiffli embroidered lace featured gaunlets coming to bridal points over the hands.

The softly gathered skirt was edged in chantilly lace with a pyramid design of schiffli lace on the front overlaid with a deep self-fabric ruffle that encircled the complete hemline which was also edged in chantilly lace. It swept into a cathedral-length train.

The scalloped two-tiered fingertip veil was edged in schiffli embroidered lace and was attached to a chantilly lace tiara which was enhanced by pearl trim.

She carried a bouquet of royal blue silk roses, light blue carnations and white silk stephanotis entwined with lace and ribbon.

Attendants were attired in matching floor-length dresses of bright royal blue taffeta. Each dress featured a princess style fitted bodice with a sweetheart neckline which came to a large V-shape in the back. The entire bodice was accented with oversized puffed elbow-length sleeves. The full skirts featured full-length side drapes in front which were held to each side by large bows made from the same fabric. The flower girl wore a dress identical to the attendants' gowns.

They carried bouquets of royal blue silk roses and light blue silk gypsophila accented with lace ribbons.

Donna Reinart invited guests to sign the registry book at the reception held in the Nazareth Community Hall.

Cake, coffee and punch were served by Sheila Acker and Lorealea Acker.

The three-tiered bride's cake was accented by blue flowers and made by Christine Acker. It was placed on the main refreshment table decorated by potted plants and flanked by candles.

The couple will make their home in Hereford following a Caribbean Cruise.

The bride, a 1979 Nazareth High School graduate, received her bachelor of science degree in medical technology in 1983 from West Texas State University. She is employed at Northwest Texas Hospital Laboratory.

The bridegroom, a 1975 graduate of Hereford High School, received his bachelor of science degree in plant science in 1979 from WTSU. He is engaged in farming near Hereford.

Say Tech researchers

Biopsy not always necessary

Diagnosis of disease often requires the inconvenience and expense of a biopsy, but researchers at Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center are working to sidestep that process.

The American Heart Association has awarded $9,500 to Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center for a medical student to do research on the cardiovascular system.

Third-year medical student Kenna Earley of Levelland began studies this summer in the laboratory of pharmacology Professor Thomas E. Tenner. Her work centers on beta adrenoreceptors—receptors found on the membranes of certain white blood cells.

Researchers can monitor the receptors by taking blood samples. The number and sensitivity of these receptors would allow for monitoring of several diseases, such as congestive heart failure, diabetes, Alzheimer's disease and asthma. "This process would allow us to understand what is happening in the disease process without biopsy," Earleysaid. "That would certainly be beneficial to patients in having a quick, non-surgical procedure."

Studies currently are being conducted on animals, and plans are to later adapt the procedure for humans.

"Beta receptors are responsible for functions such as making the heart beat stronger and dilating the bronchial airways," Tenner said. "Disease can cause a change in beta receptors, and the body then loses part of its mechanism to offset disease."

Tenner said the goal of the research is to prove that the white blood cells are viable for use in detecting diseases signaled by a change in beta receptors.

"The advantage of the grant is not only the research itself," Tenner said, "but also the chance for a medical student to perform studies in basic science that supports clinical management of disease."

"The main benefit of this grant is its bridge between research and the practice of medicine. Kenna will be able to apply the work she now does in the laboratory to her medical practice in the future."

Although they do not look much like ours, many insects have ears in strange places. Crickets and katydids, for instance, have ears on their legs which are actually membranes that work similarly to our eardrums.

Council president talks to organization

Pat Meiwes of Vega, president of the Amarillo Diocesan Council of Catholic Women, presented a program on "Leadership" during the initial meeting of the season of St. Anthony's Women's Organization Tuesday evening in the Antonian Room.

Father Patrick Walsh, pastor, and Father Frank Eldridge, former associate pastor of St. Anthony's, a visitor, celebrated the Mass.

Ministers of the word were Georgia Auckerman and Grace Paschel, and Ann Lueb was minister of music.

The business session was conducted by Pat Simnacher, president. Yearbooks were distributed and an overview of the upcoming year's activities was given. The theme of the yearbook and for the year's programs is "A Fountain of Faith."

Secret prayer friends for the past year were revealed and new members were greeted.

Unit chairmen who made reports included Annette Albracht, church unit; Cathy Friemel, family affairs; Janie Banner, community; Linda Briones, organization; and Martha Paetzold, ways and meals.

Martha Lueb was recipient of the door prize.

A salad supper was held for the 40 members present as well as guests. Hostesses were Martha Paetzold, Suzy Fangman, Elizabeth Vogel, Marian Yosten and Susan Marnell.

One, Two, Three...

Senior citizens at the Hereford Senior Citizens Center are stretching to the beat of one, two, three during an exercise aerobic class offered to participating seniors. The Hereford Senior Citizen Center is another United Way sponsored agency that has benefitted from the support. The United Way will hold a kick-off luncheon at noon on Tuesday at the Community Center to begin its annual fund campaign. The public is invited to attend.

Reunion planned today

NEW YORK (AP) — Several survivors of the Nazi slaughter of Jews were expected to gather at the Statue of Liberty Sunday, Sept. 7, "to thank America for providing them with a home and haven."

Benjamin Meed, president of the American Gathering and Federation of Jewish Holocaust Survivors, said the ceremonies to be followed by a dinner-reunion at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel would celebrate "40 years of new life."

The federation represents about 55,000 Jewish Holocaust survivors in the U.S.

Meyer to kick-off campaign

"Up, Up, and Away with United Way" is the campaign theme for the 1986-87 Deaf Smith County United Way fund drive.

Monday marks the official campaign date to continue through Oct. 10. The goal this year is $110,000.

Ron Meyer, former Southern Methodist University and New England Patriots football coach, will be the featured speaker at a dutch-treat kick-off luncheon to be held Tuesday at the Community Center.

The luncheon will begin at 11:30 a.m. and all United Way volunteers and civic clubs will be honored.

United Way president M.D. Gentry and campaign chairman Helen Langley urge every Deaf Smith County resident to become involved in giving.

Donations will be used to financially support the following ten agencies: Boys Scouts of America, Y.M.C.A., Big Brothers-Big Sisters, American Red Cross, Hereford Campfire, Inc., Hereford Family Services Center, Salvation Army, Hereford Senior Citizens Center, Hereford High Plains Epilepsy Association, and the Children's Rehabilitation Center. Each of the 10 agencies serve approximately 10,000 people in Deaf Smith County.

Deaf Smith United Way division chairmen for the 1986-87 campaign are Peaches Reinauer and Cherry McWhorter representing the agriculture division; Betty Drake and Fred Fox representing the general division; Leona Kimball and Homer Garrison in charge of the golden age division; Buddy Peeler and Mike Carr representing the major division; Carol Sue LeGate supervising the metro division; Charlie and Margaret Bell overseeing the pacesetters division; Marjorie Mims and Wanda Hoover representing the professional division; Donnie Houle and Ike Graves directing the special division; and Tony Calkins and Roberta Caviness who will represent the Whiteface division.

Loaned executive officers for the campaign are Raymond White of Whites Implement; Jeff Brown of Hereford State Bank; James Hull of Deaf Smith County Rural Electric Coop.; Bud Eades of High Plains Insurance; Steve Wright of First National Bank; Steve Nieman of Gilliland-Nieman and Associates; Rocky Lee of Summerfield Fertilizer; Vance Devereaux of Arrowhead Mills; Troy Waddell of Southwestern Public Service; Wanda Cobb of Lonestar Insurance Agency; and Chuck Moore of Witherspoon, Aiken, and Langley law office.

To make a pledge please contact one of the people above. They will be glad to make arrangements to pick up the donation.

Teachers to be honored

Members of the Hereford Education Association and Texas State Teachers Association are sponsoring a banquet Monday to honor all new teachers and their spouses.

The banquet will begin at 6:30 p.m. in the Community Center and will cost $4 per person at the door. There is no charge to all new teachers and their spouses.

New Arrivals

Mr. and Mrs. Mike G. Cantu are the parents of a boy, Mike Christopher Jr., born Aug. 29 in North West Texas Hospital in Amarillo. He weighed 6 lbs. and 12 oz.

Grandparents are Antonio Frausto and Mr. and Mrs. Pedro Cantu.

Officers installed by Friona resident

Members of the American Legion Auxiliary, Unit 192, met Tuesday at the Legion Hall for a frito pie and melon supper.

Following the meal for the 32 members and guests of the Legion and Auxiliary, a business meeting was held.

Geneva Williams of Friona, immediate past president of District 18, installed new officers for 1986-87. Juanita Reed, also of Friona, served as sergeant-at-arms.

Beverly Jesko will serve as president; Clara Trowbridge, first vice-president; Pet Ott, second vice-president; Troyce Hanna, secretary-treasurer; Lela Kemerer, chaplain; and Ruth King, sergeant-at-arms.

Beverly Jesko will serve as president; Clara Trowbridge, first vice-president; Pet Ott, second vice-president; Troyce Hanna, secretary-treasurer; Lela Kemerer, chaplain; and Ruth King, sergeant-at-arms.

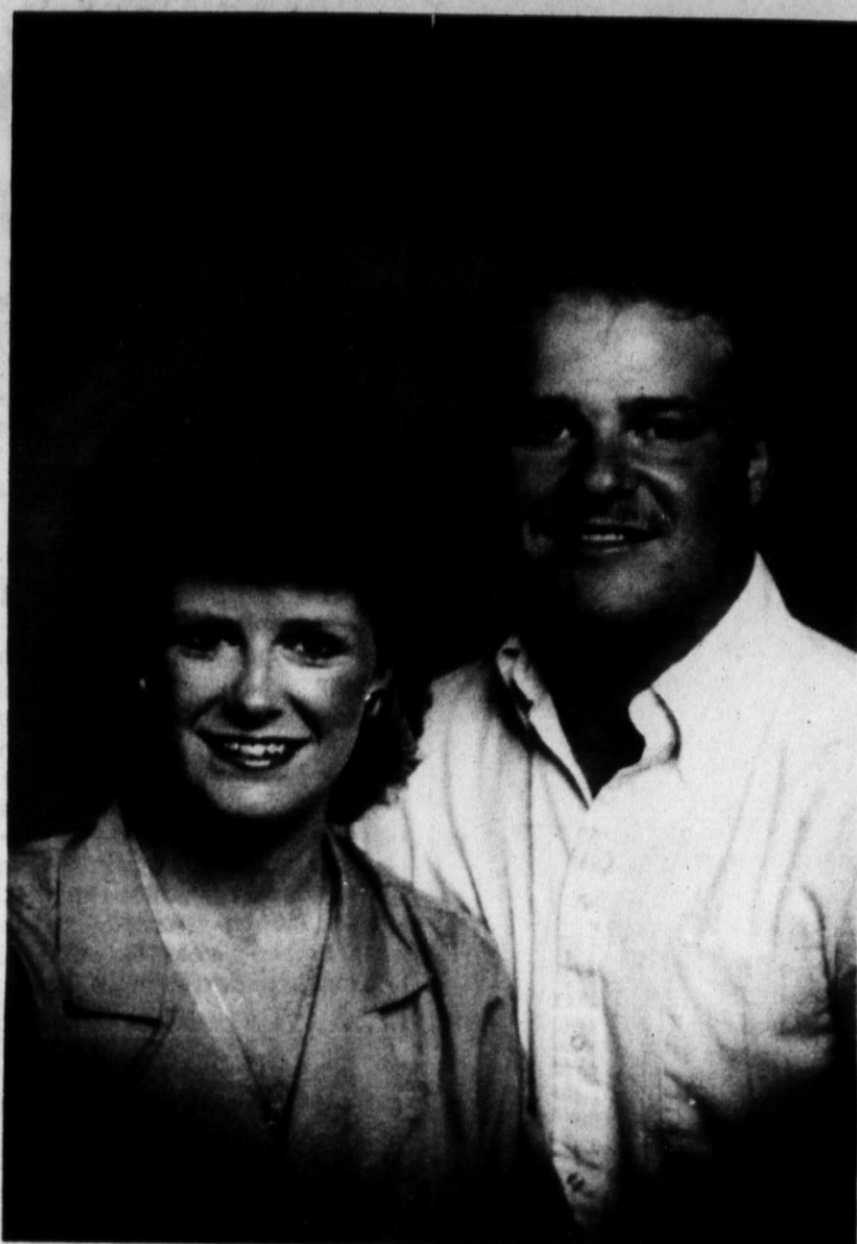

Also, during the business session, President Jesko appointed committees, approved the new budget and called attention to the Auxiliary's activities for this month.

Bingo parties were planned for Monday at the Amarillo Veteran's Hospital and Sept. 11 at King's Manor Retirement Home. It was also announced that the annual membership dinner for Auxiliary members will be Sept. 18 at the Legion Hall. Auxiliary members will co-host the zone meeting Sept. 25.

The program was presented by Kathryn Ruga on national defense. She stated that armed defense must take second place to the number one target, the destruction of the new concept now being used in many U.S. Schools, "Global Education." She stressed that this concept seeks to destroy patriotism and Americanism in favor of world control.

Ruga continued to explain that global education would creep into all phases of American life before the people would be aware of it and it is currently being taught in some states.

Serving as hostesses for the Tuesday meeting were Jesko, Hanna, Ruth King, June Koelzer and Betty Jo Carlson. The melons were furnished by Leroy Carlson.

LISA LAYMAN, SHAWN SAMPLEY

Couple to wed

Lisa Renee Layman and Shawn Aaron Sampley will be united in marriage Nov. 15 in Oakwood United Methodist Church in Lubbock.

The bride-elect is the daughter of R.L. and Martha Layman of 807 Baltimore and the prospective bridegroom is the son of Edward Sampley of Lubbock and Dottie Sampley of Big Spring.

Miss Layman, a 1982 graduate of Hereford High School, is secretary to the chief accountant for Furr's Inc.

Sampley, a 1982 graduate of Cooper High School, is a sales representative for Plains Leather Co.

Association to meet

The Deaf Smith County 4-H Parent Leader's Association will meet on Tuesday, Sept. 9, at 7:30 p.m. at the Hereford Community Center.

The organization is open to and composed of leaders of 4-H clubs and projects and parents of currently enrolled 4-H members.

Parents of youth desiring to enroll in 4-H are invited to attend the meeting as well as community members desiring to be leaders for these youth.

National council eliminates ruling

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — In an effort to give more young women a chance to enter this year's Maid of Cotton selection, the National Cotton Council announced today it is eliminating a rule requiring an applicant to be born in a cotton-producing state.

The new rule only requires that an applicant be a U.S. citizen and resident of a cotton-producing state.

Applicants for this year's selection also must be between the ages of 19 and 23, at least five feet five inches tall, and never have been married.

The Council is accepting applications for the 49th annual selection to be held in Dallas, Dec. 28-30.

The new Maid will make goodwill appearances on behalf of the U.S. cotton industry, speaking to various groups, taking part in charity events, and participating in fashion shows. In Washington, she will call on government leaders and meet ambassadors of countries she will visit on her overseas tour.

Overseas, the Maid will promote U.S. cotton exports through retail store appearances and visits with government leaders and other dignitaries.

The young woman who succeeds 1986 Maid of Cotton Sherri Moegle, Lubbock, Tex., will receive a $10,000 Ciba-Geigy educational award. First and second alternates will receive awards of $4,000 and $2,500, respectively, and all other finalists will receive $500. The awards are made possible by a grant to The Cotton Foundation from Ciba-Geigy Corporation.

Applications and information are now available at National Cotton Council headquarters, 1918 North Parkway, Memphis, Tenn. 38112. Deadline for submitting completed applications is November 7.

Red Cross Update

Special thanks to the uniformed volunteers for the birthday party Wednesday.

Margaret Gamez, Alice Gilleland and Betty Henson enjoyed the party with members of the uniformed volunteers. The uniformed volunteers will not meet for their regular luncheon meeting this month.

A Christmas Toys for Kids workday will be held all day Thursday, Sept. 25, at the office. Donated toys will be cleaned, repaired and sorted all day. Those wishing to bring a sack lunch and spend the day working on toys may do so or those who can only share an hour or so are asked to come when they can. Volunteers other than the uniformed volunteers are invited to help.

A disaster seminar will be held Saturday, Sept. 20 in the auditorium at Northwest Texas Hospital Pavilion. The seminar will begin at 8:30 a.m. and continue until 5 p.m. It will provide health professionals with information that would be needed in case of disaster. The fee will be $10 to cover the cost of books and materials. Pre-registration is required. Call our local office or the Amarillo Chapter for information.

A first aid instructor class is being planned for the fall. The instructor class is a 10-hour class that teaches how to teach first aid. To become an instructor, you must be at least 17-years-old and have a current first aid certificate. Please call the Red Cross office if you are interested in becoming an instructor.

The Board of Directors will meet Tuesday, Sept. 16, noon, at the Red Cross office.

The Deaf Smith County Chapter of the American Red Cross is a United Way Agency and receives funds for all of the chapters activities from the United Way.

Engagement announced

Betty Jean Davies and Bill Walter Smith announce their engagement.

The bride-elect is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard F. Barrett and the prospective bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jim Huckert.

Reunion being planned

The Hereford High School class of 1981 is tentatively planning a reunion for the summer of 1987.

Students interested in the reunion are asked to contact Alva Lee Peeler at 364-3840 or Rosemary Shook at 364-3142. Students may also contact Karol Shook at 1606 N. Main, Apt. 5, Copperas Cove, Texas 76522.

Despite MS affliction, Hereford woman copes

By CINDY SMITH
Staff Writer

Mary Allred had been experiencing numbness in her legs and feet. She then started having double vision and knew something was very wrong.

"We went to Lubbock for tests and she (Mary) took an arteriogram where they injected dye into an artery in the neck and x-rayed her head to look for a tumor," said her husband Jimmie Allred. The couple then traveled to Galveston for a second opinion.

In 1964 Mrs. Allred was diagnosed with multiple sclerosis, a disease of the central nervous system.

Multiple sclerosis is best described as an attack on nerves in the brain, spinal cord and optic nerves. "It's like a light cord with parts on the cord eaten off and shorted out," said Mrs. Allred. "Your spinal cord is scarred."

Mrs. Allred explained that MS means "many scars on the spinal column" and that it affects everyone differently.

No two cases of MS are the same. Symptoms of multiple sclerosis include numbness of limbs, loss of coordination and balance, bowel and bladder dysfunction, and partial or complete paralysis.

"They say MS is a young people's disease but Mary was 46 years old when they diagnosed her," said her husband.

MS usually strikes adults between the ages of 15 and 50 and is being diagnosed nationally at a rate of 200 victims per week which is a greater ratio than the polio epidemic of the 1940s and '50s.

"She was bowling back then and averaging 150 score but she got definitely worse after the arteriogram and has never picked up a bowling ball again," Mr. Allred said.

"What happened was," said Mrs. Allred, "some of my physical resistance was torn down and I could never build it up again."

Mrs. Allred now has limited use of her left side. She cannot walk but can occasionally stand in place using furniture as a crutch, but only for a short period of time.

"I have very limited movement in my left hand but what little I can do with it does help," Allred said.

"If she didn't have an electric wheelchair she couldn't get around at all," said her husband.

"Even after I was diagnosed with MS, I was still able to get up and get around," Mrs. Allred said.

"Used to, when I was able, I could push the wheelchair around and carry my laundry in the chair and put clothes away," she said.

Mrs. Allred now suffers from severe shortage of breath but she takes pride in being able to semi-care for herself. "I can manage by myself in the mornings," she smiled sitting near her wheelchair.

"She has to have assistance when dressing and with getting her breakfast but the rest of the morning she stays by herself," said her husband. Mr. Allred is semi-retired and works half a day. He explained that they do have a lady that comes over to help her dress but she doesn't stay long.

To accommodate his wife's condition, Mr. Allred has installed several handles, bars, and ramps throughout the house enabling her to stay alone.

The couple also has 10 easily accessible telephones with one being a mobile telephone that Mrs. Allred can carry with her.

"The ramps, the handles, and the phones are real handy for her, otherwise she wouldn't be able to go outside," said Mr. Allred.

Mrs. Allred doesn't cook lunch, the couple have the Senior Citizens Center bring them their noon meal.

"She doesn't exert herself physically," said Mr. Allred, "except when she is playing dominoes."

"Mine (her MS) has progressed very slowly compared to some. My condition slowly worsened. With many MS victims the disease strikes suddenly. They go to bed feeling fine and can't get up the next morning," said Mrs. Allred.

"I think I've been blessed by it, I'm not affected that way. A lot of people, their hands are real shaky, but I've never experienced that.

"Some people lose their vision completely and although I experienced double vision at one time, it hasn't occurred in several years," she said.

Mrs. Allred recalled that after she was first diagnosed she did a lot of china and oil painting. Her artwork ranged from landscapes to flowers to china cups and plates.

"I did the china painting for about two years but I had to hold the cups in my left hand..." she said.

Now she usually reads the Bible, has guests in to play dominoes, and watches religious programs on television.

"It's (MS) a good thing not to have!" said Mrs. Allred. "But I'm most grateful that I didn't have it when my children were small," explained Mrs. Allred thinking of how MS affects young mothers."

A century ago when New Yorkers had trouble raising funds for the Statue of Liberty's pedestal, Boston, San Francisco, Milwaukee and Glover, Vt., proposed themselves as sites.

A Painting Here, A Painting There

Mary Allred shows one of her many china paintings that she did after being diagnosed with multiple sclerosis. Allred has adjusted well, with the help of her husband, to the disabling disease but it still doesn't stop her from playing dominoes.

Secretary of State William Seward in 1867 signed a treaty with the Russian minister to purchase Alaska for $7.2 million.

The Shwe Dagon pagoda in Rangoon, Burma, rises 326 feet. Begun 2,500 years ago, to enshrine eight hairs of Buddha's head, the pagoda is sheathed in $90 million worth of gold. It is capped by 4,350 diamonds and other precious stones.

Alaska no longer has four different time zones. In 1983, the Alaska time zone, one hour behind Pacific time, was adopted by the entire state, with the exception of certain of the Aleutian Islands.

Want to arrest a friend?

The Hereford Chapter of the Panhandle Multiple Sclerosis Society will be making arrests and jailing people at the MS Arrest Jail located on the Community Center parking lot.

The arrests will be made from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Wednesday for $10 per person. Anyone wanting to have someone arrested and jailed should call 364-0406 and place a $10 pledge. Time spent in jail can also be specified by the person making the pledge.

Judge Tom Simons will be at the make-shift jail to supervise. His legal assistants will be Mary Ellen Lemons of Mid Town Beverage, and B.J. Lowery and Linda Lang of The Clean Team.

Proceeds from the jailing will benefit victims and research of multiple sclerosis in the Panhandle.

Seminar to be held

Deaf Smith General Hospital and Hereford Senior Citizens Center are co-sponsoring an informative meeting on the Medicare payment system. The meeting will be held Tuesday at 4 p.m. at the Senior Citizens Center. Violet White, R.N., and expert on Medicare's payment system, will give the presentation.

Medicare's system, more commonly known as diagnosis related groupings, has drastically affected health care over the past three years.

One exercise that could confound a contortionist is child's play for almost any politician: putting the foot in the mouth.

DONATE BOOKS!!!

During the month of September, the Friends of the Deaf Smith County Library will be accepting book donations for their annual book sale, which will be held Oct. 17-18 at the Deaf Smith County Library in the Bicentennial Room.

This sale enables the Friends of the Library to provide needed assistance to our library and helps make it one of the finest libraries in the area. We are asking that you support this event wholeheartedly.

You may donate books for the book sale at donation sites which are located at Sugarland Mall, TG&Y and the library. If you have any questions concerning book donations, please feel free to call the library at 364-1206.

BOOKS

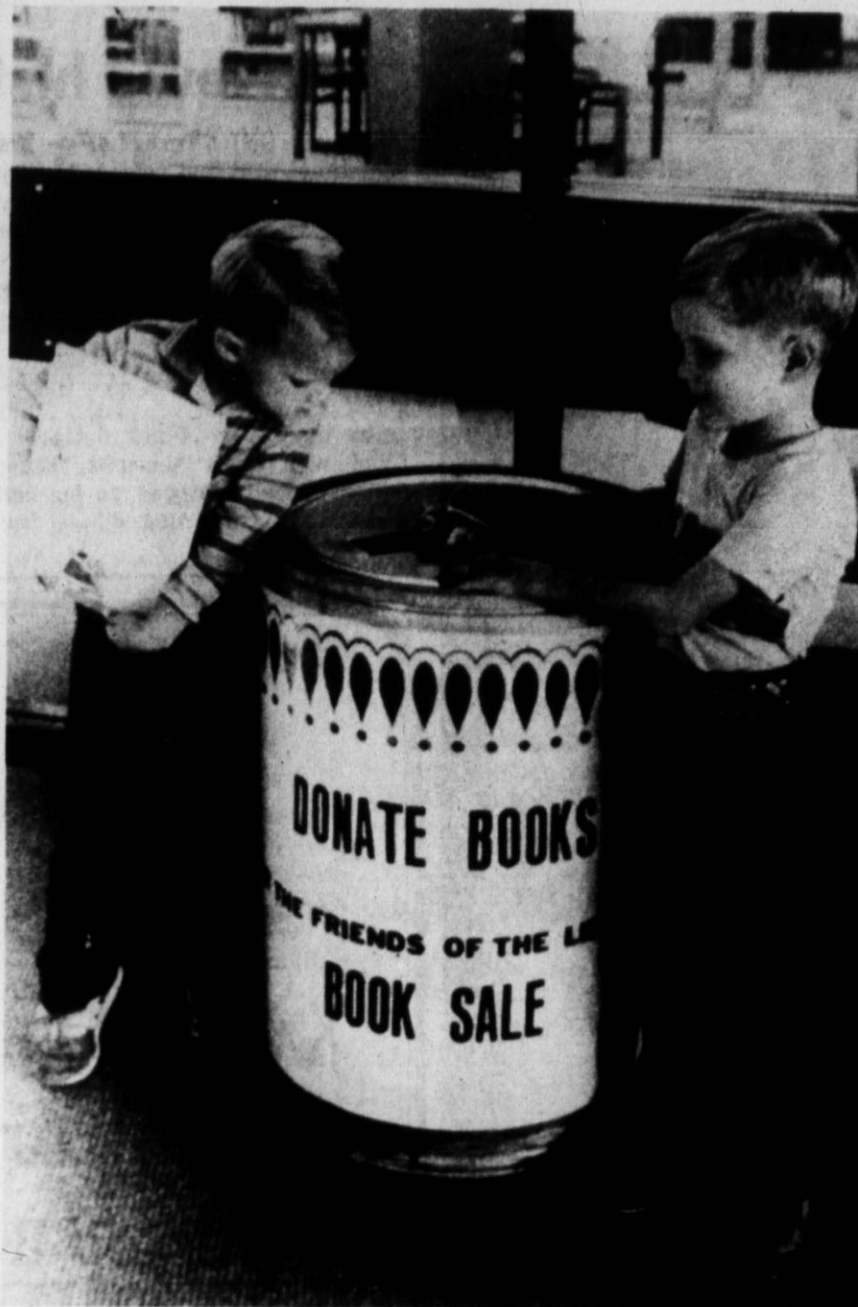

Two biographies of well-known Hollywood actors will be available this week for check-out. They are "Laughing On The Outside, Crying On The Inside" by Judy Carne and "Heart to Heart" with Robert Wagner by Diana Maychick and L. Avon Borgo.

"Laughing On The Outside, Crying On The Inside" tells the no-holds-barred story of the bizarre, roller-coaster personal and show business life of Judy Carne, the famous "Sock It To Me" girl. A riveting part of that story is the first full account of her often stormy, always complex marriage to superstar Burt Reynolds. In vivid anecdotes Carne tells about their life together. It is the story of true love gone sour, steering her into a downswing of drug addiction, a career nose-dive due to backlisting and poor business management, another doomed marriage, and a near-fatal accident. After all of this she emerged free, whole and ready again to take on the world in her spirited way.

"Heart to Heart" with Robert Wagner offers readers a rare glimpse into the stormy life of a Hollywood legend. It contains an in-depth account of Robert's early years as a struggling movie novice, from the days when he coaxed his way onto the back lots of major studios to the more difficult periods, when he learned to charm the delicate egos of major reviewers and movie stars. Maychick and Borgo also unveil his personal life, which has been filled with even more conflict and complexity. "Heart To Heart" details Robert's passionate romance with Natalie Wood, their stormy first marriage and subsequent remarriage, and his painful, poignant recovery after her tragic death. Here is a fascinating, candid look into Robert Wagner's private domain.

Special activities planned during annual Parents' Day

West Texas State University expects hundreds of participants for its annual Parents' Day, Saturday, Sept. 27.

For many parents, Parents' Day is the first opportunity in the school year to visit their sons on daughters in their campus environment. It's a time for parents to meet the students' professors and friends (sometimes the professors fit into the "friends" category as well as well as the other parents).

Organizers have scheduled a number of special activities for the day: receptions, a buffet luncheon, a style show, a football preview with Coach Billy Kelly, open house in the residence halls and church centers, an equestrian display.

That evening at 7:30, the WTSU Buffaloes take the football field against Mississippi College. The Parent(s) of the Year presentation will highlight the halftime activities.

Anyone interested in participating in Parents' Day activities or desiring more information should contact Frank Castleberry at 656-2296.

Jennie Grossinger, with her parents, founded Grossinger's Hotel in the Catskill Mountains of New York in 1914. It became an internationally known resort.

Club meets for luncheon

Members of Simms Study Craft Club met Wednesday morning for a salad luncheon in the Simms Community Building.

Tommie Savage presided over the business meeting and a special program was given by Theresa Artho. She demonstrated how to make wheat wreaths.

Tammie Turner and Pam Perrin were introduced as new members and Leanna Schaub was welcomed as a visitor.

Those present included Elsie Lloyd, Savage, Charlene Hughes, Kay Rhodes, Doris Jackson and Willie Roberts.

The next meeting will be at 1:30 p.m. Oct. 1 at the Community Building. Karen Flood will give the program.

Chapter meets Tuesday

Alpha Alpha Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi Sorority met Tuesday evening in the SWPS Reddy Room for its beginning day program and salad supper.

President Nan Gauthreaux called the meeting to order with 15 members present. It was announced that Mary Anna Laing, a member of the chapter, is hospitalized.

In other business, members were reminded of the area BSP Convention Oct. 18-19 in Wichita Falls.

New yearbooks were distributed by Barbara Burkhalter and Jean Holbert along with new book covers made by the women.

Committees were discussed and it was decided that the chapter's service project will be to provide food for Operation Good Shepherd. Each month members will bring a food item to the meeting to help stock the food pantry.

Burkhalter was chosen as the chapter's sweetheart for this year.

Others in attendance included Margaret Godwin, Margie Waddell, Alene Tindall, Lynda Brown, Brenda Thomas, Vida Grady, Lillie Shipman, Jan Walser, Karen Ruland, Phyllis Neill, Ronna Howell and Earline Schneider.

POLLY'S POINTERS

By Polly Fisher

DEAR POLLY — Could you repeat the directions for making a plant food out of unflavored gelatin? Thanks. — SUE

DEAR SUE — My pleasure. Simply mix one envelope unflavored gelatin with one cup hot water until the gelatin is thoroughly dissolved. Slowly add three cups cold water, stirring constantly to thoroughly combine the solution. Use this mixture to water plants once a month. Discard any left-over gelatin solution and mix only as much as you will use at one time, since the mixture can't be stored.

I use this mixture rather sparingly, since used in excess, the gelatin can tend to congeal on top of the soil, which is unattractive. A moderate amount used only once a month will give your plants extra nitrogen, which promotes lush, green growth.

I'm sending you a copy of my newsletter, "Hints for Healthy Houseplants," which includes this plant food formula as well as a recipe for making your own potting soil. The newsletter also gives specific care instructions for 20 of the most popular house plants, from African violets to sansevieria, as well as lots of helpful tips. Others who would like a copy of this issue should send $1 for each copy to POLLY'S POINTERS, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to include the title. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — To keep embroidery floss colors neat and separate, I put each color between different pages of a magazine. The magazine lies neatly in a drawer or cabinet, or it may be placed in a plastic bag. — WILLA

DEAR POLLY — I use a teaspoon to remove the caps from strawberries. I like this method even better than using a knife. — THELMA

DEAR POLLY — Sew several cloth napkins together to make a table runner. Or, for a different look, lay several placemats a few inches apart down the center of the table.

A French fry basket can be used as a vegetable steamer. — SHIRLEY

DEAR POLLY — To keep the legs of my breakfast set-chairs from scratching my shiny vinyl no-wax tile, I bought some plastic tips that shoe repair shops put on shoes. I glued them to the bottom of my chair legs and that solved the scratching problem! — ELEANOR

DEAR ELEANOR — Such a simple solution to an annoying problem! Your helpful Pointer earns you the Pointer of the Week award, a copy of my book "Polly's Pointers: 1081 Helpful Hints for Making Everything Last Longer." Others who would like this book can order it for $6.50. Make check payable to POLLY'S POINTERS and send to POLLY'S POINTERS, Box 91428, Dept. 55, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. — POLLY

FOOT PROBLEMS

BOSTON (AP) — Bill Walton reads about foot problems encountered by Bill Cartwright and Michael Jordan, two other NBA stars, and laughs ironically.

The Boston Celtic star said: "I remember the frustration I went through. I'd have the cast on my foot for six weeks. Then they'd take it off to find out that the bone hadn't healed. Another cast, six more weeks. I wondered for a long time if my foot would ever be strong enough to play professional basketball. I sympathize with what Jordan and Cartwright are going through."

After numerous operations and long absences from the basketball scene, Walton wound up in Boston where he helped the Celtics win the 1986 league championship.

fee is $30.

Topics to be covered this year include "What Kind of Beef Does the Consumer Want?"; "Response to Consumer Demands"; "Branded Beef"; and nutritional and health issue.

The Embassy Suites Airport Hotel in San Antonio will be the headquarters for the short course. A block of rooms have been set aside for those attending and the hotel should be contacted direct.

The registration fee may be sent to Texas CowBelles Beef Short Course, in care of Jeanne Evans, P.O. Box 1673, Bandera, Texas 78003. Make check payable to Texas CowBelles. For further information call Charmayne Klett at 364-7264.

The short course will be presented by Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas Agricultural Experiment Station, Texas A&M University-Department of Science, Texas Cattle Feeders' Association, Texas CowBelles and Texas Beef Council.

News history to 93-year-old woman

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — It's sometimes said that news is history in the making, and 93-year-old Mary Lindner is doing her part to make history of the news.

Ms. Lindner's hobby is clipping daily newspaper articles and sorting them into history books that she intends to pass on to her grandchildren.

She uses 12-by-14-inch notebooks filled with news accounts, some dating to her childhood, to jog her memory of events that shaped her life.

"I think it's so great to be in the world," she said. "I think it's good to put away things that have been done, but it's got to be somewhere where I can see it so I won't forget about it. It's worth a lot — what we had when we were young."

She said her fascination with saving articles began when she was a child studying history in school. Now, however, it is tough for Lindner to continue her hobby because she has cataracts, making it difficult to read.

But that is only one of the obstacles disrupting her project, she said. She often finds it difficult, she said, to know which articles to keep and when she has enough to keep the continuity in her notebooks flowing. She said she makes her decisions by guessing which subjects are of interest to her friends and relatives.

As a result, she said it takes her "years" to complete each notebook while the articles collect dust in category piles stacked on her bookshelf.

Truckin'

Four-year-old Jeffrey Stovall is really 'truckin' with his collection of approximately 115 miniature tractors. Stovall's display is on exhibit at the Deaf Smith County Library this week. His collection includes limited editions of Ford, Case, International, John Deere, and Allis-Chalmers tractors. Stovall is the son of Gary and Becky Stovall.

Spice up potatoes

The potato has long been known throughout the world. It dates back in history, showing that the Inca Indians planted the humble potato as far back as 500 BC. The early Spaniards called the potato a "papa" (meaning tuber), and the French and Germans call the potato the "apple of the earth."

The potato first came into its own via the poor people of Northern Europe. Hailed by the Irish, the potato became so popular in Ireland that it replaced almost all other crops. It is estimated that the average Irish adult ate between 8 to 10 pounds of this vegetable per day. So dependent were the Irish people on the potato, that during the crop failures of 1845 and 1846 over one million people starved to death and thousands of people emigrated to find food.

Today the potato is again receiving recognition. It was long thought of as a fattening food, and was excluded from many diets. Health conscious Americans now know that it is not the potato that is high calories, but the high calorie associates of the potato.

The potato is actually a nutrient dense vegetable that is low in calories. A medium-size potato has only about 110 calories. This is only about 5 percent of the average adult's total daily intake of calories. At this rate, a person would have to eat eleven pounds of potatoes to gain one pound of weight.

The potato is an excellent source of vitamin C, it can deliver about one-half of the daily need of vitamin C. It also furnishes several of the B vitamins, including thiamine, niacin and the hard to get GB. An average serving of this vegetable provides about 10 percent of the daily requirement of fiber.

Potatoes in Texas are produced commercially in the High Plains Valley and in North Texas. The season for Texas Red potatoes is May through October, with the peak of the harvest running through August.

Potatoes are known for their versatility, as they can be baked, boiled, steamed or fried. When selecting potatoes look for potatoes that are fairly clean, firm, smooth and of uniform size for even cooking. Avoid potatoes that are wrinkled or have wilted skins. Potatoes with soft dark areas, cut surfaces or those with a green appearance should also be avoided. Store potatoes in a cool dark place that is well ventilated. Do not refrigerate.

For more information about Texas Potatoes and free recipes write the Texas Department of Agriculture, 3652 North Dixie Drive, Odessa Texas 79762.

POTATO-TOMATO BAKE

- 2 lg. scrubbed potatoes
- 2 lg. thinly sliced onions
- 3 lg. tomatoes, cut into fairly thick slices
- 2 T. butter
- ¾ C. grated Romano or Parmesan cheese
- 2 tsp. paprika
- ½ tsp. salt

Preheat oven to 375 degrees F. Boil or steam potatoes in their jackets until partially cooked and sliced. In well-greased baking dish, place layers of onions, potatoes and tomatoes, dotting with butter and sprinkling with cheese. End with potatoes, again dotting with butter and sprinkling with cheese, paprika and salt. Bake for 1 hour until onions are well cooked and the tomatoes have released their juice and the potatoes have absorbed it. Serves 4.

MICROWAVE VINAIGRETTE POTATO SALAD

- 2 lb. scrubbed red potatoes

- ½ C. Water
- ½ C. vegetable oil
- 1 T. Dijon mustard
- 1 T. chopped parsley
- ¼ tsp. minced garlic
- ¼ tsp. chervil
- ¼ tsp. salt
- ¼ tsp. pepper

Put potatoes and water in 3-quart casserole. Microwave, covered on high 7-9 minutes, or until fork tender. Rearrange potatoes midway through cooking time. Drain; cool and cut into ¼ inch thick slices. Mix remaining ingredients. Toss with potatoes. Serve warm or cold. Serves 6.

"Restaurant" was originally the name of a soup invented in 1557 by a Frenchman named Palissy. The soup consisted of finely minced fowl and broth highly spiced with cinnamon and coriander. In 1765, a tavern was opened in Paris under the title "Restaurant" for the purpose of supplying this soup.

Theatre troupe to deal with teen problems

Today's teenagers are often engulfed by influences and stresses which threaten their physical and emotional health, their social adjustment and their plans for the future.

Parents and professionals are constantly seeking ways to improve the communication process with teens and combat potential problems. Six organizations have combined efforts to address these issues by sponsoring a dual segment event entitled, "Teens and Parents: How To Talk - How To Listen."

A unique educational experience, using drama to heighten the awareness of teen problems and pressures will be available for teens Thursday. An evening performance by the TeenAge Communication Theatre (TACT) is an exciting approach to exploring youths problems.

TACT is an improvisational theatre troupe comprised of teens dealing with issues such as peer pressure, teen pregnancy and substance abuse. The troupe stages a three-part production. Part one consists of a series of open-ended skits addressing problem issues. In part two, the actors return to the stage and, while remaining in character, invite questions and comments from the audience. Part three is a question and answer time with the actors about their participation in the TACT project. TACT is popular with teens and adults alike, and has received rave reviews for their unique performances.

"Teen Stress: The Pressure Cooker", "Developing Self Esteem in Children", "Families in Transition", and "Communication About Sexuality" will be some of the topics for the day-long workshop Friday, Sept. 12.

Both the TACT performance and the workshop will be held in the Fellowship Hall of the First Presbyterian Church at 1100 S. Harrison in Amarillo. The TACT performance on the 11th will start at 8 a.m. and will cost $25 ($15 for students).

For more information or to make reservations please contact Planned Parenthood, 606 W. 8th, Amarillo, Texas 79101 or phone (806)372-8731.

A Flair for Design

Design is fundamentally a matter of arrangement, a means of ordering visual and emotional experiences. Its elements are Line, Form, Color, Light, Material, and Space. These elements used in cooperation with the basic principles of Design, such as harmony and proportion, to name a few, are all needed to give unity and consistency to a work of art, or an effective interior space.

In the following weeks, we will discuss each of these "elements" and their relationship to the whole composition. Next week we will begin with a discussion of Line, its use in an interior space and its effect.

The qualified interior assistance at FINISHING TOUCHES is waiting to help you to achieve the special look you've been hoping for. Call 364-8870, or stop by 501 E. Park Monday thru Friday.

Hard times hit auto salvage yard in Corpus

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — At Bill Hinton's junkyard, wrecked cars and trucks, rusty traffic lights, second-hand radiators and even a newly painted '57 Cadillac offer mute testimony of a sagging economy.

"I've been in business for over 30 years, and I've never seen anything like the last seven months," said Hinton, owner of Agnes Street Auto & Truck Parts. "There's not any money in circulation. People are broke."

Hinton is not alone in his misery. Those spunky little foreign cars, which junkyard dealers say last longer, and a depressed market for scrap iron have hurt the salvage yard industry locally and nationwide.

In addition, some salvage yard operators say they are being undercut by importers who sell domestic and foreign parts produced in other countries for less than the junkyards charge for used parts.

"I tell you, it spooks me when I think about it," Hinton said. "I hope it gets better soon or I'm going to be in serious trouble."

Hinton's two-acre spread is one of the smaller salvage yards along Agnes Street on Highway 44. His 8-year-old yard is the result of a hobby that began years ago when he owned a few topless bars and a used car lot.

"I'll buy anything that looks too cheap," he said, referring to himself as a 56-year-old "junkie."

"One time I went to the base and bought a truckload of bowling balls. That's the only thing I haven't been able to sell."

Hinton stood in the junkyard, shirt-tail dangling over his grease-stained blue jeans, and glanced around. Business is down 50 percent, and last year's taxes indicate a loss, he said.

Down the street, 44-year-old Sammy Guajardo Sr., a veteran junkyard owner who said he has annual gross sales of nearly $1 million, tells a similar story.

Profits are down, he cut his staff in half and reserve funds are being hit.

"Used to, the phone would ring an average of once every 30 seconds," Guajardo said, while manning the desk at Sammy's Auto Parts & Radiator Shop. "As you can see, it's dead."

Guajardo, who worked at his father's salvage yard before starting his own shop 17 years ago, said business has dropped 25 to 40 percent from last year. More than 3,000 wrecked and junked cars crowd the 20-25-acre salvage yard he shares with his son, Sammy Jr., who runs Sammy's Foreign Car Parts next door.

The younger Guajardo said his business has been even slower than his father's.

"I thought it'd be the other way around, because if people aren't working they'll usually fix their car with used parts because they're cheaper," he said. "People are just not buying."

He said the sale of "after-market parts," which are made in foreign countries but sold cheaply in the United States, has cut into his profits.

"If my body parts are too high, they'll buy them from someone else. I have to take a loss, just so I can turn my money around, so I can pay for some of these cars."

He also said foreign cars "are better built" and "don't break down as often."

Despite the losses, the Guajardos say they are confident things will pick up. Others aren't as sure.

Frank Ochoa, manager of C.C. Auto Parts, said if it weren't for his bumper sales, "we might just close our doors."

Aurelio Sandoval, manager of ABC

Auto & Truck Parts, a 2½-acre lot, said he has lowered prices on some items just to attract customers.

"On doors, for instance, I'd sell them for like $65, and now I've been selling them for $45 ... just trying to get business," he said.

He said sales last year averaged $500 or more a day. This year, he said, he's lucky to make $300 a day and has seen as little as $30-$40.

In the past, junkyard dealers provided by selling stripped car and truck carcasses to scrap yards, which at one time paid up to $45 or $50 per ton for scrap iron, according to local salvage yard dealers.

Now, junkyard owners say they are lucky to get $35-$40 for the average 3,000-pound, or 1½-ton, car. In an attempt to hold out for a higher price, some are delaying trips to the scrap yard until they're overloaded with wreckage.

"It's very true. Prices are down," said Greg Ledet, manager of Commercial Metals of Corpus Christi, one of the larger local scrap yards.

"It was right around $30 for quite a while ... a couple of years ago. Today, it's in the mid-20s," he said. "It sure as heck decreases the amount of money they get for their scrap."

Scrap iron includes tin, car bodies and other steel products while scrap metal encompasses aluminum, copper, brass, stainless steel and nickel, he said. At the scrap yard the iron and metal is shredded, then sold to steel mills.

An article in the summer 1986 issue of Phoenix Quarterly said "in real terms, the price of scrap is about 70 percent less than it was 12 years ago."

Ledet said summer is traditionally slow because many steel mills are closed for vacations, maintenance and repair. He also blames the drop in oil and gas revenues and a depressed market in Mexico for the industry slump.

Tom Rhodes, secretary-treasurer of Industrial Salvage Co., described the drop in scrap prices as a chain reaction.

"As the price comes down from the steel mills and what they pay us for our scrap, the price comes down for the salvage yard owners who bring their car hulks to us," he said. Rhodes, however, said he doesn't think the slow, summer "relates necessarily to oil or anything else. It's always slow this time of year."

"There are so many crazy things that affect the scrap business. It's a commodity just like dealing in grain, corn or anything else. It depends on what the world market needs," he said.

Back in his tiny office, far away from the world market, Hinton realizes the magnitude of the economic situation, but admits he likes the salvage yard business too much to give it up.

"I'm single. I like to go out honky-tonking. I enjoy life," he said. "I haven't made a lot of money, but I've had a good time."

He paused and then smiled. "You want to buy a wrecking company?"

Anything You Say, Judge, Honey!

Judge Tom Simons, center, gets a kiss from his 'legal assistants' Linda Lang, left, Mary Ellen Lemons, center, and B.J. Lowery. The girls will be helping Judge Simons arrange bails on Wednesday for persons thrown in jail during the Multiple Sclerosis arrest. The MS-Arrest will take place from 10 a.m. until 3 p.m. Persons may call 364-0406 to have anyone in the community arrested and thrown in jail. Arrests are $10 per person and time spent in jail may be specified. Proceeds from the MS-Arrest will benefit the Pahandle Multiple Sclerosis Society.

Scientists to meet

GARRISON, N. Y. (AP) — Eastern Orthodox scientists meet this weekend at St. Basil's Academy for the founding conference of the Orthodox Christian Association in Medicine, Psychology and Religion.

On the agenda were questions about genetic engineering, AIDS and medical-psychological aspects of "miracles." Aim of the group is to increase interdisciplinary understanding from an Orthodox Christian perspective.

In 1863, President Abraham Lincoln signed the Emancipation Proclamation which freed more than 3 million slaves.

The first bowling match on record took place in 1849 at the Knickerbocker Alleys in New York City.

New blood test can be done in basic medical laboratory

A simple and inexpensive blood test developed at Baylor College of Medicine may soon allow even small hospitals to determine if new clot-dissolving drugs are helping heart attack patients.

The test costs about one-tenth that of the current procedure, a complicated arteriogram that involves inserting a catheter in the coronary artery system.

Arteriograms cost about $3,000 and are usually performed only at larger hospitals that have the complicated equipment and specialized personnel required to do them.

The Baylor test can be done in a basic medical laboratory for about $300.

"Preliminary studies show the blood test to be at least 75 percent as accurate as an arteriogram," said Dr. Benjamin Perryman, a researcher in Baylor's cardiology section. "With refinement, we believe the results will improve."

The test will probably not be commercially available for two years or longer.

The technology behind the test may also be useful for developing a method for early diagnosis of a heart attack.

A simple, reliable test is needed because of the increased use of new drugs designed to dissolve the blood clots that cause heart attacks. Doctors must know if the drugs are working to effectively treat the patient.

"The test will help identify those patients in small hospitals who are not helped by the treatment so they can be transferred to a more specialized facility," said Perryman, who developed the test along with Dr. Peter Puleo, also a cardiology researcher at Baylor.

A coronary arteriogram involves inserting a catheter into an artery in the arm or leg, and pushing it through to the main artery in the heart. A dye released into the catheter travels throughout the coronary artery system. By watching through X-ray machines how the dye flows through the arteries, physicians can determine if the clot has dissolved.

An arteriogram requires nursing staff, X-ray technicians and a physician trained in the procedure.

The Baylor test measures the amount of a heart tissue chemical that is released into the blood when a heart attack occurs. This chemical, called creatine kinase, is then converted into two different forms. By determining the ratio of the original form to the other forms, the test can tell if blood flow has been restored.

In a study involving 103 patients, the test identified 87 percent of those patients whose arteriograms noted were helped by clot-dissolving drugs. The test also identified 75 percent of those patients who were not helped by the drugs.

Because creatine kinase is released when the first damage occurs during a heart attack, "the logic behind the test could be applied to earlier diagnosis of heart attacks," Perryman said.

Fifty percent of heart attacks are diagnosed incorrectly because symptoms are often obscure. Early diagnosis of heart attacks will allow these patients to receive treatment sooner. Previous research suggests that the sooner a patient is treated, the better his chance of recovering, Perryman said.

Guests welcome to attend Genealogy Society meeting

The Deaf Smith County Genealogy Society will meet at 7:30 p.m., Thursday in the Heritage Room at the Deaf Smith County Library. The program will be "What Our Members Have Done in the Summer."

Each member will be given an opportunity to talk about his/her ancestor tracing experiences. Members and guests can pick up new ideas for research sources and methods to use in looking for "distant kin."

The group meets the second Thursday of each month, except during the summer, and meetings are open to the public. Membership is $5 a year. Memorial gifts are welcome. Donations are used for the purchase of genealogy books.

Reminder to researchers: The Amarillo Genealogy Society is sponsoring an all-day seminar on September 20 at the Central Library. The speaker will be Dr. George K. Schweitzer of Knoxville, Tenn.

The chances of a sextuplet birth are 3 billion to one.

We're Smiling From —Ear To Ear!— And You Should Be Too.

If you're one subscriber out of the thousands who are reading this ad right now, then you know why this paper recently won 1st Place in Advertising Initiative during this year's Texas Press Association Awards.

In advertising competition with 20 other comparably-sized daily newspapers (many having larger overall circulations) across the State of Texas, the Hereford Brand was chosen as the best in its division.

This means that other professionals in the newspaper advertising field find your ads more creative in graphic design, layout and message. Therefore, your ads have more chance for success.

It also means, dollar for dollar, we're delivering you the best product that your advertising budget can buy. The next time you have a message to convey, pick the winning choice!

We reach thousands every day!

Classified advertising rates are based on a minimum of 20 words. One day is 13 cents per word or $2.60 minimum. Rates below are for consecutive issues. No copy charge, and apply to solid ad lines only.

TIMES	RATES	MIN.
1 day per word:	.13	2.60
2 days per word:	.22	4.40
3 days per word:	.31	6.30
4 days per word:	.40	8.00
5th day FREE

Add 9 cents per word for additional days: 10 days (2 free) is 15.20 minimum; 15 days (3 free) is 22.40; month 27.80.

Classified display rates apply for special captions, paragraphing, bold type or larger type, and ads not set with full lines. $2.60 per column inch, $2 a column inch for additional insertions, or $1.75 a column inch per month.

LEGALIS
Advertising rates for legal notices are $3.50 per column inch for the first insertion and $3 per column inch for consecutive issues.

Deadlines for classified ads are 3 p.m. daily for the next day's edition; 3 p.m. Friday for Sunday's edition. Cash is required on advertisements under $10.

ERRORS
Every effort is made to avoid errors in Classified Ads and legal notices. We will not be responsible for more than one incorrect insertion. Advertisers should call attention to any errors immediately after the first insertion. In case of errors not the fault of the advertiser, an additional insertion will be given.

MR. AND MRS. POPE GOSSETT

Gossetts to observe wedding anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Pope Gossett of Hereford will observe their 60th wedding anniversary at a luncheon-reception at noon today at K-Bob's Steak House.

Hosting the event for their parents will be Barbara Perkins of Bosque Farms, N.M., Clyde Gossett of Hereford and Bill Gossett of Grand Junction, Colo.

The former Alice Marie Slater and Pope Gossett were married Sept. 7, 1926 in Raton, N.M.

In 1973, Gossett retired from ranching on the Fort Union Ranch where he was superintendent for 15 years before moving to Hereford. He has been in the ranching profession his entire life with the exception of four years when he served as sheriff of Colfax County at Raton.

Mrs. Gossett's hobbies include oil and tile painting, making silk flowers and other crafts.

DR. GOTT Trial and error is best approach

DEAR DR. GOTT — Last year my husband's colon was removed due to cancer, and the surgeon connected the small intestine to the rectum. What foods should he avoid? Is chocolate OK?

DEAR READER — I cannot give you a specific set of recommendations, because each case of colectomy (colon removal) is different and your husband's surgeon may wish to counsel him with specific advice. As a general rule, however, post-colectomy patients soon learn which foods they should avoid. Chocolate is usually OK, but salads, roughage and bulk foods may produce diarrhea. Ordinarily, trial and error is an appropriate approach.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I have been a longtime sufferer of sinus headache. One doctor suggested an operation to correct my deviated septum, but I don't really have a breathing problem. What's the connection?

DEAR READER — The maxillary sinuses consist of air-filled baffles within each cheekbone. These chambers communicate with the outside air through tiny vents that open behind the nose. Any physical condition that closes off these vents can block sinus drainage and thereby set the stage for sinus infection and headache.

If the nasal septum, a tough sheet of cartilage that divides the nose, is deviated (swung to one side or the other), it can press against the sinus opening, blocking the vent. Although you may not be aware of a breathing problem from a deviated septum, intermittent obstruction may occur. Once the deviation is surgically corrected, your sinuses may be able to vent properly; the headaches from sinus blockage may disappear.

Wedding planned

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Kindsfather of Hereford announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Lee Kindsfather of Houston, to John Bertus Wedgeworth III, also of Houston.

The prospective bridegroom, son of Mr. and Mrs. J.B. Wedgeworth Jr. of Carthage, Texas, and the bride-elect will exchange wedding vows at 7 p.m. Oct. 18 at the First Baptist Church in Hereford.

Miss Kindsfather is a graduate of Texas A&M University with a degree in chemical engineering and is currently employed at Rockwell Shuttle Operations Co.

The prospective bridegroom is also a graduate of Texas A&M with a masters degree in chemical engineering and is employed at Vista Chemical Corp.

Ann Landers Masturbation

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I have a teenage son who I am certain is masturbating. I believe this is an instinctive and natural part of discovering one's sexuality, but I don't want him to become obsessed with it. Another fear I have is that he will develop guilt feelings, as so many of us did when we indulged in this practice.

I have been informed that you have a book on masturbation that is very helpful. I have checked the bookstores and cannot find it. Several clerks have suggested other books on sex for teenagers, but having read your column for many years I know you relate to teens in a straight-forward, non-judgmental way and that my son reads and respects you.

Please tell me how much the book costs and I will send a check.—BRONX, N.Y.

DEAR N.Y.: I have no book on masturbation but I have a booklet on teenage sex. In it I discuss masturbation and answer questions most frequently asked by young people. (Does it cause pimples or dark circles under the eyes? Can people tell by looking at you whether or not you do it? Is it a sin? Do girls do it, too? Is it harmful?)

The booklet also lists the lines most frequently used on girls to break down their resistance. These lines were culled from nearly 20,000 letters from teenage girls when I asked them to write and tell me what approaches were used on them.

I discuss venereal disease, pregnancy, peace of mind and self-esteem, things that should be considered seriously when teenagers begin to consider crossing that line. Many teens who have sent for this booklet said it made better sense to them than anything they had ever read on the subject. It is called, "Sex and the Teenager." The cost is $2. It can be obtained by writing to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11996, Chicago, Illinois 60611. Please enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped (39 cents postage) envelope.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My son's girlfriend broke up with him to go with someone else. Like many other jilted lovers he went a little haywire. Darned if he didn't shoot himself in the leg.

When "Hank" came out of surgery the first person he asked for was "Wilma." I decided she had caused enough trouble and gave instructions to the nurses not to let her in his room.

The next day Wilma showed up. I stopped her in the hall and said, "Don't try to see Hank. He doesn't want to see you."

Hank kept asking for her and I told him she had left town. Soon after I heard that Wilma had suffered a complete mental breakdown and the fellow she dropped Hank for had gone in another direction.

To make a long story short, Wilma and Hank are back together again and they want nothing to do with me. I thought I was doing the right thing but it looks as if I messed up all the way 'round.

Please warn all parents of grownup children to keep their nose out of their children's love lives. I wish I had.—OUTSIDE LOOKING IN (WILMINGTON, DEL.)

DEAR DEL: Too bad you didn't MYOB. But no way can you undo the past, so stop beating yourself over the head. We all make mistakes and that was yours.

I hope Wilma and Hank see this and call to say, "All is forgiven." Let me know if it happens. I'll print the good news.

Health care professionals invited Sept. 13

Holistic approaches to caring for the elderly will be the focus Sept. 13 in the first of a three-part seminar for health care professionals and others who work with older individuals.

David B. Oliver, an expert in the field of geriatrics and gerontology, will be the keynote speaker for the seminar which will begin at 8:30 a.m. with registration in the lobby of the second floor, Pod C of the Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center (TTUHSC).

A $10 registration fee will cover lunch and refreshments. The seminar will be in TTUHSC, Room 2C103.

Dr. Oliver, who holds the Oubri A. Poppele Chair in Gerontology and Health and Welfare Studies at Saint Paul School of Theology in Kansas City, Mo., will speak from 9:30-10:30 a.m. on "Critical Variables in an Holistic Approach to Caring." He will discuss physiological, psychological and social aspects of the elderly.
