

Because it missed its deadline

Valley View will send cash instead of kilowatts

From staff and wire reports
Valley View Energy Corp., the company scheduled to generate electricity by burning cattle manure at a Hereford plant, will be sending the city of Austin cash instead of kilowatts for the next two years.

A two-year delay in the project means the company must pay Austin $1,000 a day because it missed a deadline to send electricity by Oct. 1. A second $1,000-a-day penalty will be added next April for a second plant to be built in Hansford County near Gruver.

The current schedule calls for construction of the Hereford plant to begin in March and to be operating in the fall of 1988. The second unit at Gruver is supposed to be operating in the spring of 1989. Officials of the Dallas-based Valley View Corp., which could end up paying $1.4 million over two years, say they are determined to see the project through.

A variety of problems in getting agreements with several power companies to transport electricity between the two plants and Austin has set the project back about two years, Valley View officials reported.

"We greatly underestimated what it would take to get the agreements in place, but are going to live up to the contract," said Valley View President Don Lieb. The last of seven key agreements with power companies to move electricity to Austin was signed two months ago, according to Lieb.

In addition, a complex agreement with three power companies owned by Central and South West Corp. to allow the manure-powered plants to tie into the statewide electric power system was completed about a month ago, he said.

Mike Carr, executive vice president of Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce, said the community has "been anxious to see the project get started because it means jobs for county residents." However, Carr said the payments shouldn't affect completion of the project, which was funded by two issues of Deaf Smith County industrial revenue bonds in the total amount of $92.6 million.

"Utilizing manure will assist the feedyard industry here, and the fact that it's a $100 million project means a lot of employment as far as construction workers," he said. "There will also be 75 to 80 permanent jobs at the plant."

The manure-powered project is the brainchild of Dallas businessman Edwin L. Cox Jr., who is principal owner of Valley View Energy through a trust. The 39-year-old businessman stepped into the national spotlight last year with his $127 million leveraged buyout of Swift Independent Packing Co.

Early last year, Cox acquired Friona Industries for $41.8 million. He already had extensive holdings in the ranching and meat packing industries.

Cox may have more financial problems with other holdings than with the energy plants. The Dallas Times Herald recently reported that InterFirst Corp. was having difficulties with almost $80 million in loans to, or personally guaranteed by, Cox. The article also reported that Cox had resigned as a number of InterFirst Bank Dallas' board of directors.

Cox spokesmen insist that the businessman has not pledged enough collateral to fully secure InterFirst's exposure on loans. The Dallas news article reported that part of the property pledged is the Springlake Farms in Lamb County, comprising 21,900 acres. But, it reported, there are two creditors in line in front of InterFirst—Travelers Insurance Co. and Farmland Industries, and both are threatening to foreclose on the property.

Cox has made few public statements about the loan problem with InterFirst Bank. When he resigned from the bank board in late June, he said through a spokesman that he had stepped down to renegotiate his loans at "arm's length."

Flakes collect in northwest county, snow, cold rain fall elsewhere

Approximately two inches of snow covered the ground in the far northwest corner of Deaf Smith County, thanks to a front that also brought rain and cold temperatures to Hereford.

Mrs. Clint Homfeld reported at 8:30 a.m. today that about two inches of snow had formed a blanket in the northwest corner of the county and flakes were still falling. She said some of the snow had melted.

The Homfeld rain gauge measured 2½ inches for the last several days, she said.

Downtown Hereford had 1.12 inches Monday night and a total of 2.70 inches from the weekend, according to KPAN Radio.

Snow also was reported falling, though not sticking, early today at Walcott. At Walcott School, the rain gauge indicated that 1.5 inches of moisture fell Monday night.

Bobby Hammock at the County Barn in Bootleg said a real wet snow started falling at about 7:30 a.m., but wasn't building up much. The snow had made the ground look about like a heavy frost by 8:30 a.m.

Rain at Bootleg since Saturday morning totaled 1.5 inches by today.

Eva McKnight reported that in Ford it looked like some light snow was accumulated on the north sides. Her gauge read 1.4 inches of moisture.

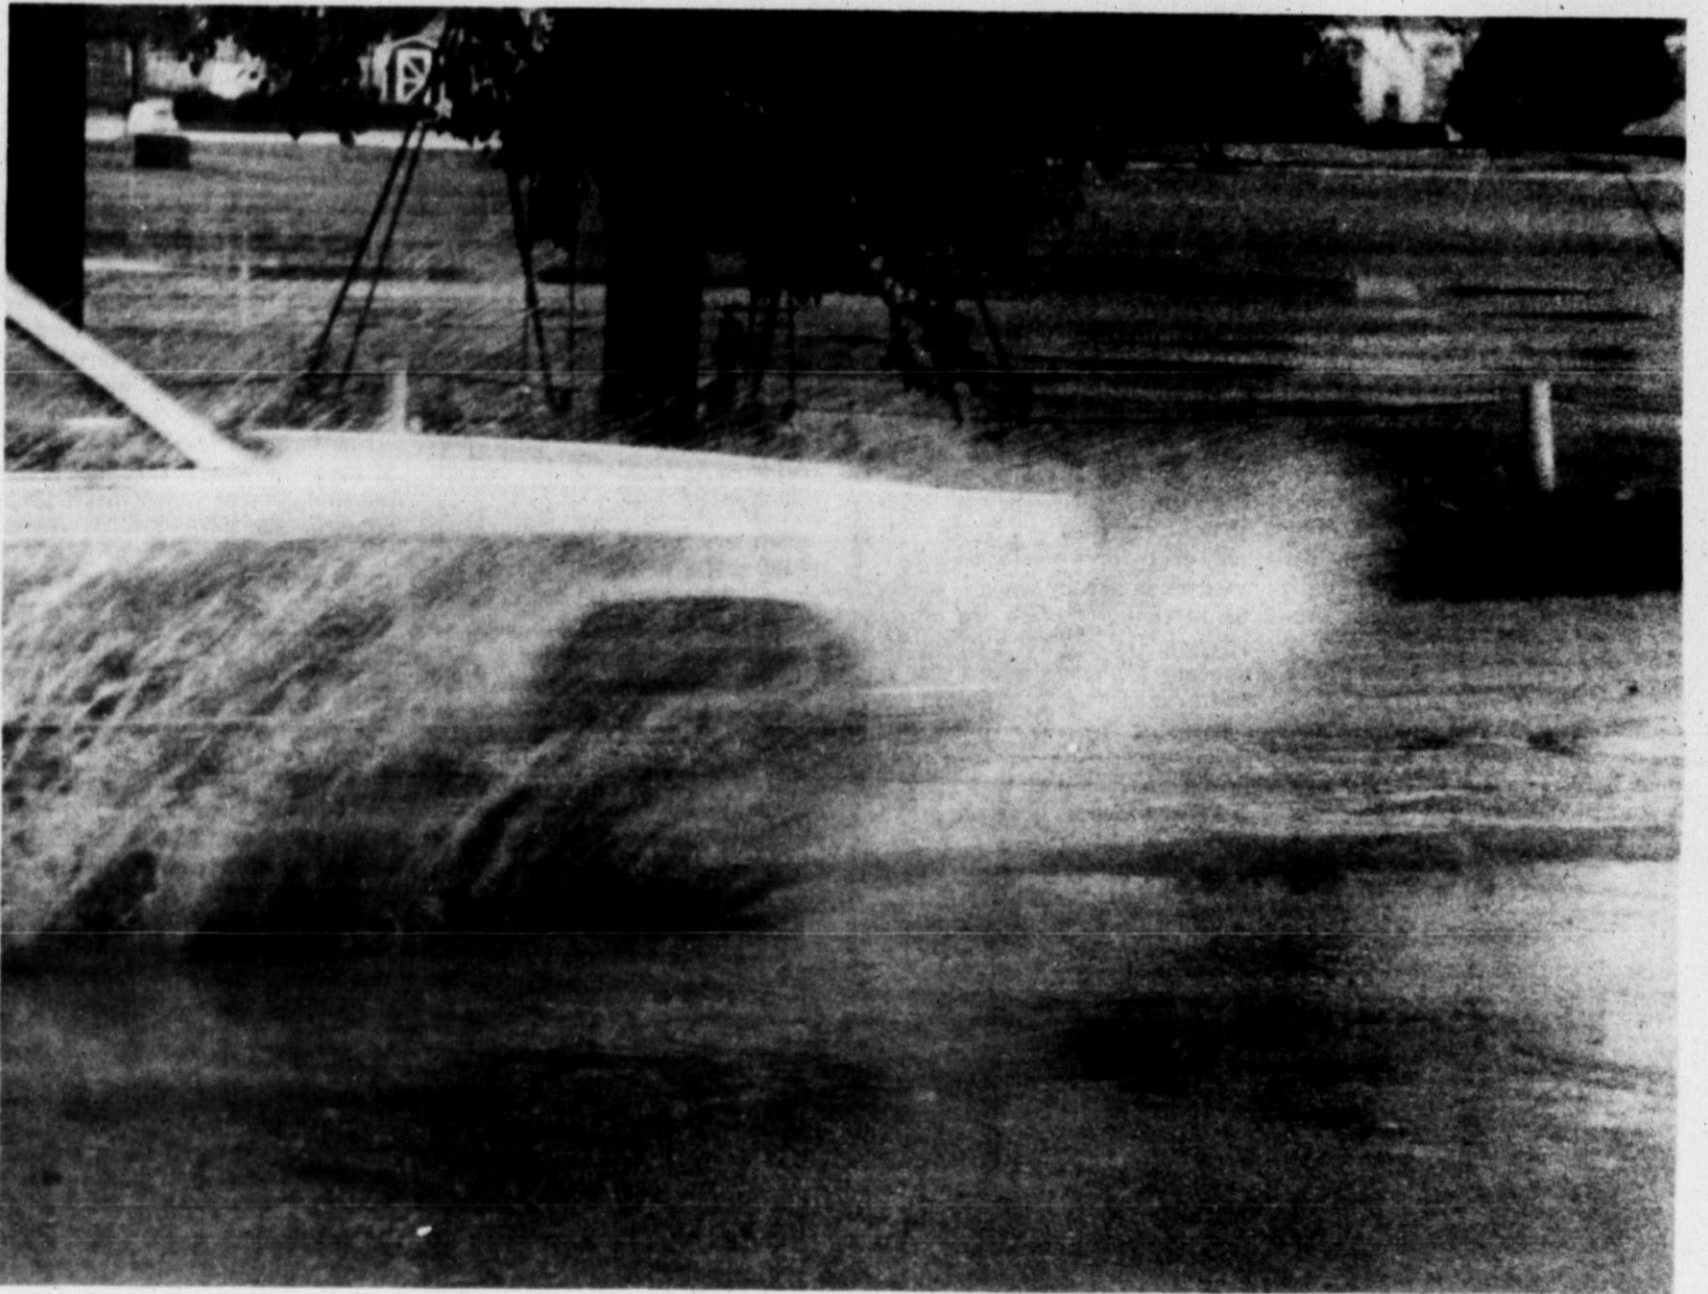

Other rain reports showed 1.6 inches at Dawn for the weekend and Monday, and 1.8 inches for Saturday and Tuesday at Milo Center.

Westway reported 1.20 inches of moisture since 8 p.m. Monday and at Easter the weekend saw 1.75 inches of moisture.

Locally, a 60 percent chance of rain is forecast for tonight, with a low in the upper 30s. Clouds should start breaking by Wednesday afternoon and the chance of rain will drop to about 30 percent. High Wednesday should be in the mid 50s.

Rain will continue over most of the state, except in South Texas.

Early morning lows across the state ranged from 36 at Marfa in the Davis Mountains to 77 at Corpus Christi.

More Rain

Hereford received another 1.12 inches of rainfall last night to bring the total for the year up to 28.89 inches. The average rainfall for Hereford is 17 inches.

Forecasters are calling for a 60 percent chance of rain for Today. Wednesday is due to be a little warmer. (Brand Photo by Shawn Cockrum)

Jacobsen reunited with children in West Germany

WIESBADEN, West Germany (AP) — Three children of freed American hostage David Jacobsen had an emotional reunion today with their father, who doctors say endured his 17 months of captivity in Lebanon remarkably well.

Jacobsen arrived at the U.S. military base in Wiesbaden on Monday, one day after being freed in the Lebanese capital of Beirut by his Shiite Moslem captors.

His children, Eric and Paul Jacobsen, and their sister, Diane Duggan, entered the military hospital at 11:30 a.m. (5:30 a.m. EST) for the private reunion.

Jacobsen, 55, was administrator of the American University Hospital in Beirut when he was abducted May 28, 1985 by the pro-Iranian Islamic Jihad organization, which holds at least two other Americans hostage.

Following a preliminary medical examination Monday, Wiesbaden Air Force hospital chief Col. Charles K. Maffet said that "although he (Jacobsen) is tired, our initial impression is that he is physically in very good condition."

"It also seems that he has dealt with the stresses of his captivity remarkably well," Maffet added.

"Initial evaluation did not reveal any evidence of physical abuse," said Maffet, adding that Jacobsen was eating normally and drank some wine to celebrate his freedom.

He said the medical evaluation would be completed in a few days.

Jacobsen's children and their spouses left their homes in California on Monday to meet with State Department officials in Washington before continuing on to West Germany.

Air Force spokesmen said they did not know when Jacobsen, a native of Huntington Beach, Calif., would be returning to the United States.

In an emotional statement to reporters after his arrival here, the former hostage pleaded for the release of other Western captives in Lebanon.

"I can't tell you how very, very happy I am here today. But it's with really mixed feelings to be a free man again," he said with a shaky voice, appearing on the verge of tears.

Six Americans and 13 other foreigners remain missing in Lebanon.

YMCA to offer specialty classes to ease strain

Back pain and back injury, leading causes of disability and absenteeism are costing Americans 45 million lost workdays a year. The cost to the individual and to business and industry is estimated to be in the billions.

Chronic pain and the inability to carry out normal activities are the symptoms of this disabling malady.

The tragedy is that much of the suffering and accompanying costs are preventable. Experts say that much of back pain is linked to a sedentary lifestyle and tension. It is estimated that more than half of low back pain is attributable to under-exercise and is potentially preventable.

A growing number of companies and individuals are making the investment in a medically sound program designed for prevention of back problems. Research on cost benefits is just emerging but early studies document clear savings in fewer injuries and lost workdays due to back pain.

The Hereford YMCA is one of approximately 100 Y's providing a program advised by a committee of orthopedic specialists, rehabilitation experts and corporate medical directors. The program is based on principles of Dr. Hans Kraus, a pioneer in research on prevention of back pain and injury.

Key components to an exercise program such as the Y's Way To A Healthy Back are relaxation, flexibility and strengthening exercises along with education about function and anatomy and advice about proper techniques for sitting, lifting and standing.

Relaxation is used at the beginning and end of each session, these exercises aim to break muscle tension that is often the cause of neck and back pain and to warm up the muscles for exercises that follow.

Flexibility exercises try to lengthen hamstring and calf muscles in order to reduce stiffness and rigidity of the trunk.

Progressing from mild to more strenuous, muscle strengthening exercises work to build up key postural muscles.

The exercises are not arduous and the program is progressive, beginning with six exercises at the first session and working up to eighteen by the end of the six week course.

This specialty class is available at the YMCA through Susan Marnell, Fitness Director, a new session begins on Tuesday, Nov. 4th. For more information contact Marnell at 364-6990.

Farm expenses down, but so are prices for commodities

WASHINGTON (AP) — The bad news for farmers is that average commodity prices were lower in October, reflecting a bumper corn crop being harvested and the government's decision to lower federal supports.

If there was much good news in the Agriculture Department's monthly report issued Friday, it probably was that farm expenses have dropped, helping ease costs for some producers.

According to the report, prices farmers get for raw products dropped 0.8 percent in October, moving the monthly index to one of its lowest readings in eight years.

The decline from September was attributed mainly to lower prices for hogs, corn, soybeans, eggs and lettuce. Higher prices during the month for tomatoes, strawberries, milk, broilers and some grain, including wheat and rice, offset part of the drop for the other commodities.

Overall, the October index was down 1.6 percent from a year ago, the department's Agricultural Statistics Board said.

Meanwhile, prices paid by farmers to meet expenses — a figure revised only every three months because of a cutback in agency funds — declined 0.6 percent from July, the previous reading. The next revision will be in January. Compared with a year ago, farm expenses were reported down 1.2 percent.

"Lower feed and fertilizer prices for the quarter more than offset the increase in feeder livestock prices," the report said.

The index of expenses was the lowest since October 1978.

According to the preliminary October figures, based mostly on mid-month averages, prices of livestock and livestock products were down 0.7 percent from September but averaged 8.2 percent more than a year earlier. Crop prices were down 1 percent from September and 14 percent below October 1985.

Farmers have harvested huge grain crops in recent years, and global supplies also are large. With a lag in export demand, U.S. supplies have grown to record levels.

Using the authority given it by Congress in last year's Food Security Act, the Reagan administration has opted for reducing government price supports on the major crops in hopes of making U.S. wheat, corn and other commodities more affordable to foreign buyers.

Programs aimed at reducing crop production by paying farmers to idle part of their land have climbed to record levels. Overall, farm subsidies may climb to around $30 billion this year.

Net farm income is forecast by USDA in the range of $25 billion to $29 billion this year, down from $30.5 billion in 1985.

Consumer food prices, meanwhile, are expected to continue rising modestly this year, perhaps by an average of 2 percent to 3 percent, according to department economists. Last year, food prices rose an average of 2.3 percent.

October farm commodity prices averaged 121 percent of a 1977 base used for comparison, according to the preliminary figures, down one percentage point from September and two points below October 1985.

According to USDA records, the October index was the second-lowest reading since November 1978, when it was 119. The other low mark since then was 120 percent in September 1985.

The October report also computed the parity ratio at 50 percent, unchanged from the previous reading in July. In September 1985, the ratio dropped to 49 percent, matching the all-time low set in June 1932 in the depths of the Depression. The ratio, which depends partly on prices farmers pay to meet expenses, is also computed on a quarterly basis.

Although many economists say the old parity standard is outmoded because it doesn't take into full account changes in farm productivity, others contend the ratio remains useful in comparing year-to-year changes.

Under the parity formula, prices farmers get for commodities are compared with prices they pay to meet expenses. It then uses a 1910-14 measurement to express what happened. At 100 percent, the indicator would theoretically mean farmers had the same buying power as they did in 1910-14.

For example, the average price of corn in October was $1.31 per bushel the farm nationally, according to the preliminary figures. That was 27 percent of the October parity price of $4.92 per bushel.

The report also said:

- Cattle averaged $54.60 per 100 pounds of live weight, unchanged from September but up from $52.10 a year earlier. Those are averages for all types of cattle sold as beef.
- Hogs averaged $53.40 per hundredweight, compared with $58.30 in September and $43.10 a year ago.
- Corn, at $1.31 per bushel, was down from $1.44 in September and $2.11 a year earlier.
- Wheat prices at the farm, according to preliminary figures, averaged $2.33 per bushel, compared with $2.28 in September and $3.09 a year ago.
- Rice averaged $3.94 per hundredweight, against $3.82 in September and $7.73 a year earlier.
- Soybeans were $4.50 per bushel, compared with $4.86 in September and $4.85 a year earlier.
- Upland cotton was reported at 45.4 cents per pound, compared with 47.4 cents in September and 57.3 cents a year earlier.
- Eggs were 58.1 cents per dozen, against 62.8 cents in September and 63.9 cents a year earlier.

Party chairmen predict low voter turnout

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG AP Political Writer

The Republican and Democratic national chairmen today predicted a low voter turnout as Americans went to the polls to elect the nation's 100th Congress. At stake: Control of the Senate and probably the tone for the last two years of the Reagan presidency.

said on NBC's "Today" show that while interest in the election may be slight, the turnout might not be as low as in 1982, the last midterm election, when barely 41 percent of the voting-age population voted.

Political experts attributed the lack of interest in the election to the absence of a dominating national issue or major international crisis and said voters were turned off by a themeless, negative campaign.

"You couldn't dynamite a national issue out of this electorate. People are generally content," said Democratic pollster Harrison Hickman, who appeared with Teeter.

Curtis B. Gans, director of the Committee for the Study of the American Electorate, predicted the turnout would drop from 1982, when 41.1 percent of the voting age population went to the polls, or about 68,254,000 people.

A handful of Senate races were rated tossups as Election Day dawned, with the outcomes probably hinged to which side did a better job getting their supporters to the polls.

Republicans and Democrats turned to television and telephone to exhort their faithful to go to the polls.

supporters claim Hashemi was responsible for smuggling weapons into Saudi Arabia aboard an Iranian airliner carrying pilgrims to Mecca earlier this year. The same sources accused Hashemi of engineering the kidnapping of Syrian Consul Iyad Mahmoud in Tehran last month.

The Arab diplomat said Hashemi had been angry at Syria for pressuring Iran to free hostages. However, the kidnapping of the Syrian envoy only increased the pressure because Iran was embarrassed by the exposure of its ties to the kidnappers.

Al-Qabas quoted sources as saying the Americans wanted the U.S. hostages freed before Tuesday's elections in the United States.

Frank Fahrenkopf, chairman of the Republican National Committee, called it "upsetting" that many voters would stay home in an off-election year.

Democratic national chairman Paul Kirk, appearing with Fahrenkopf on today's CBS "Morning News," conceded, "We may not have the turnout we'd like."

By NICOLAS B. TATRO Associated Press Writer

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Arab newspapers reported recent high-level contacts between Iran and the United States, and said the exchanges may have been linked to David Jacobsen's release from captivity in Lebanon.

Arab diplomats, meanwhile, told The Associated Press that Jacobsen's release was connected to an internal power struggle in Iran. The 55-year-old American was freed Sunday after being held for 17 months by Islamic Jihad, a pro-Iranian Shiite Moslem group.

In Kuwait, the daily newspaper Al-Qabas said Jacobsen was freed as a result of U.S.-Iranian negotiations.

"The release of Jacobsen took place as a result of indirect U.S.-Iranian negotiations which were conducted through a third party as well as negotiations between (Anglican church envoy) Terry Waite and circles close to the kidnappers," unidentified sources were quoted as telling Al-Qabas.

The newspaper quoted U.S. and Arab sources in Paris as saying no more American hostages were expected to be freed before the Reagan administration meets demands presented by Islamic Jihad.

In Beirut, the pro-Syrian magazine Al-Shiraa said a U.S. envoy, former National Security Adviser Robert McFarlane, went to Tehran to discuss Iranian support for terrorist groups and that U.S. military spare parts were provided to encourage Tehran to cease such support.

The Washington Post carried a report today on the Al-Shiraa article. The Post quoted McFarlane as "categorically" denying that he was in Tehran "last month."

A central figure in the case appeared to be Mehdi Hashemi, who had charge of spreading Iran's Islamic revolution to other nations. He is a brother of the son-in-law of Ayatollah Hussein Ali Montazeri, the chosen successor of Iranian leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

An Arab diplomat who was formerly stationed in Iran said Hashemi had direct control over Islamic Jihad and other terror groups. The diplomat, like other Arab envoys interviewed by The Associated Press, spoke on condition of anonymity.

Iran's official news agency last week announced the arrest of Hashemi on charges of treason and murder.

Hashemi's opponents include Parliament Speaker Ali-Akbar Hashemi Rafsanjani and President Ali Khamenei.

Al-Shiraa quoted Hashemi's supporters as saying Khomeini had been unaware of the infighting. "He (Khomeini) is still in bed and unable to perform any duties because of the severe heart attack he recently suffered," an unidentified Hashemi aide was quoted as saying.

Hashemi's supporters were quoted by Al-Shiraa as saying Iranian officials demanded in the talks with McFarlane that the United States halt military, financial and political aid to Iraq, which has been at war with Iran for 6 years.

Iran also demanded spare parts for U.S.-made warplanes, tanks and other hardware, the weekly said. It quoted Hashemi's supporters as saying the United States provided the spare parts, and that the supplies helped boost the performance of Iran's air force.

Al-Shiraa also said Rafsanjani's supporters claim Hashemi was responsible for smuggling weapons into Saudi Arabia aboard an Iranian airliner carrying pilgrims to Mecca earlier this year. The same sources accused Hashemi of engineering the kidnapping of Syrian Consul Iyad Mahmoud in Tehran last month.

The Arab diplomat said Hashemi had been angry at Syria for pressuring Iran to free hostages. However, the kidnapping of the Syrian envoy only increased the pressure because Iran was embarrassed by the exposure of its ties to the kidnappers.

Al-Qabas quoted sources as saying the Americans wanted the U.S. hostages freed before Tuesday's elections in the United States.

In pea-soup weather, sailors often don their pea coats — but the coat's name isn't derived from the weather. Sailors' heavy coats used to be made out of pilot cloth, a heavy twilled blue cloth with a nap on one side. The cloth was sometimes called P-cloth, from the initial letter of pilot, and the garment made from it came to be called either a pea jacket, or later a pea coat. The term pea coat has been in use since the 1720s.

POLLY'S POINTERS Right place for a smoke detector

DEAR POLLY — Can you tell me the best place to put our new smoke detector? — MRS. H.G.

DEAR MRS. H.G. — Smoke detectors can be valuable safeguards against injuries and deaths in home fires if they're properly placed and used. Here are some guidelines to follow.

In general, you should have at least one smoke detector on each floor. Larger homes obviously need more detectors than smaller homes.

Sleeping areas need the most protection. One detector in a short hallway outside bedrooms is usually adequate. However, if you sleep with the bedroom doors closed, you may want a detector in each bedroom for maximum protection.

Hallways longer than 30 feet should have one detector at each end. Ideally, there also should be a smoke detector at the top of each stairwell. Smoke rises easily through stairwells.

If a smoke detector is placed in the living area of the home, be sure to keep it away from the fireplace or wood stove to avoid false alarms. Smoke detectors in the kitchen and dining areas should be kept away from cooking fumes or areas where people smoke.

If a detector is placed in the basement, mount it on the ceiling at the top of the stairway, not near a furnace exhaust.

The best place to install the detector is on the ceiling, at least 6 inches away from the dead air space near walls and corners. If placed on the wall, a detector should be 6 to 12 inches below the ceiling and away from corners. Keep the detectors high, since smoke rises.

Don't place smoke detectors closer than 3 feet from an air register that might recirculate smoke. Don't place them on insulated exterior walls or ceilings; temperature extremes can affect batteries and the temperature differences may keep smoke from reaching the detector.

Your local fire department can help you determine the placement of smoke detectors in your home, if you'd like additional help. — POLLY

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I would like to address this to your readers:

DEAR MR. AND MRS. JOHN Q. PUBLIC: I'm a 13-year-old boy who hit his head diving through an inner tube in a back yard pool.

I'm a 26-year-old housewife who was slammed into broadside by a drunk driver.

I'm a 36-year-old male who had a motorcycle wreck at 18 miles per hour.

I'm a 52-year-old farmer who sat down in his backyard swing and the chain broke.

We all have one thing in common. We crushed our spinal cords. We are handicapped. We are in wheelchairs.

When your children see us in public places and make a comment, don't yank them away as though we were monsters. They are curious about what has happened to us. Let them ask and we will tell them.

When we park in a handicapped parking place that seems spacious to you, please don't glare at us and become angry. We need a space large enough to get out of our vehicles.

Mr. Businessman, when we ask your security to ticket the vehicles, please don't become belligerent and say it drives away customers. We spend money, too.

What I'm trying to explain is that we are you, only we had our accidents before you did. We didn't think it could happen to us either, but a patch of wet sand and a motorcycle going 18 miles an hour changed my life forever.

I still love my wife and 7-year-old son as before. I want to be able to take them out to eat, to movies and on vacations, just as you do. I don't get upset because you have 5,000 parking spaces at a shopping mall and I have only three. The physically disabled don't need your sympathy, and we don't need your resentment either. —G.W.L. IN NORCROSS, GA.

DEAR NORCROSS: You've written a letter that is sure to shake a lot of complacent people out of their comfy, little cocoons. Thank you for reminding us once again that the difference between you and us is a split second of bad luck. We all need to be brought face-to-face with that chilling fact of life and you did just that.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Today I stepped out of a fabric store and saw an elderly woman lying on the sidewalk with a small crowd of onlookers standing around gawking. The woman had fallen and shattered her glasses while running to catch the bus. Her face was cut and she appeared to have a fractured wrist. Someone had the good sense to call a police car to take her to the hospital, but no one seemed to know what to do next.

I bent down, took the woman's hand, and began talking to her in a calm, reassuring way. I told her she would be OK and that help was on the way. As I spoke, I kept patting her hand. She calmed down and even began joking about it "not being her day" when the police car arrived.

Ann, please tell your readers that they need not be nurses or doctors to offer comfort to an injured person. (I am a former teacher). If someone witnesses an accident, first direct a person nearby to call an ambulance or the police. Then kneel at the injured person's side and speak softly in an authoritative, reassuring manner. Even if a person has not been seriously injured he or she needs to know that someone is in charge and someone cares. —M.N. IN MIDDLETOWN, R.I.

DEAR M.N.: Thank you for addressing a problem that cannot be anticipated. It's good to be told what to do in advance.

From HHS cross country teams

Two runners qualify for regionals

Two Hereford High School athletes qualified for the class 4A regional meet in Lubbock next Saturday, and one other athlete missed a berth in regionals by just three seconds.

Nancy Garza of the HHS varsity girls' team, and Benny Carrasco of the Hereford varsity boys' team both qualified for regionals. Each finished in third place in their respective races on Saturday at the District 1-4A meet in Lubbock.

Alina Benitez of the HHS girls' team finished in sixth place, three seconds behind the first place runner.

Garza's time was 12:55 and Benitez had a time of 13:10. Carrasco's time in the boys' race was 16:51.

The top ten runners at regional meets qualify for the state cross country meet.

In team standings, the Hereford girls placed third and the Hereford boys placed fourth. Winning the team championships were the Canyon girls and the Levelland boys.

"This was Nancy Garza's best time of the year and her highest finish. She ran a good race," said

Hereford Coach Martha Emerson.

"Alina Benitez also ran well, JoAnn Tohm and Carolyn Rieves also ran their best races of the season, but the team missed a chance to advance to the regional meet with a third place finish," she continues.

"This was Benny Carrasco's best race of the year. Ishamael Castillo and John Cordova also ran very well. "These young men really did put forth a good effort but simply got beat by some very good runners," Coach Emerson adds.

Other placings for the Hereford girls' team were Rieves, 15th; Tohm, 21st; and Elia Hernandez, 35th. In the boys' race for Hereford, Castillo placed 18th, Cordova was 20th, Manuel Diaz placed 22nd, Craid Waddell came in 30th, Arturo Martinez placed 32nd, and Herman Nava was 37th.

Rams edge Bears 20-17

By MARIO FOX
AP Sports Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — Eric Dickerson won the battle of the running backs from Walter Payton. More importantly, he helped the Los Angeles Rams win their battle with the Chicago Bears.

Dickerson, the NFL's leading rusher, churned out 111 yards on the ground and caught a key pass to set up Mike Lansford's game-winning 50-yard field goal with four seconds left as the Rams edged the Chicago Bears 20-17 Monday night.

In addition to his rushing yardage, Dickerson caught three passes for 46 yards, including an eight-yarder that got the Rams to the Bears' 32 with nine seconds left. Lansford, who had kicked a 26-yard field goal in the third quarter, then drilled home the 50-yarder to give the Rams the win.

Dickerson, trying to break his own single-season rushing record of 2,105 yards, boosted his 1986 total to 1,141 with seven games to go. He also raised his career rushing total to 6,288 yards, bettering the Ram record of 6,186 yards set by Lawrence McCutcheon.

Payton, the NFL's all-time leading rusher, had 61 yards on 19 carries before going out with a dislocated big toe on his right foot in the third period. He may miss Sunday's game in Tampa Bay.

Dickerson gave credit to quarterback Steve Dils, who managed to complete only six of 25 passes for 137 yards, with one interception. He tried to go deep eight times and connected only once — but that one was a 65-yard touchdown to Ron Brown with 1:28 to play in the third period that tied the game at 17-17.

The Bears led 3-0 at halftime on Kevin Butler's 30-yard field goal in the first quarter before Lansford's 26-yarder tied the score and started a wild 31-point third quarter.

The Rams made it 10-3 when LeRoy Irvin returned a fumble by Bears' punter Maury Buford 22 yards for a score.

But Chicago's Dennis Gentry returned the ensuing kickoff 84 yards. Two plays later, Payton's replacement, Thomas Sanders, ran 10 yards for the tying touchdown.

On the next series, Gary Fencik intercepted a Dils' pass and returned it to the Rams' 34. On the first play after the interception, Sanders galloped 34 yards for his second TD to put the Bears ahead.

But Dils tied it on the following series when he hit Brown in full flight for his only long-distance completion of the night.

HHS spikers lose in season finales

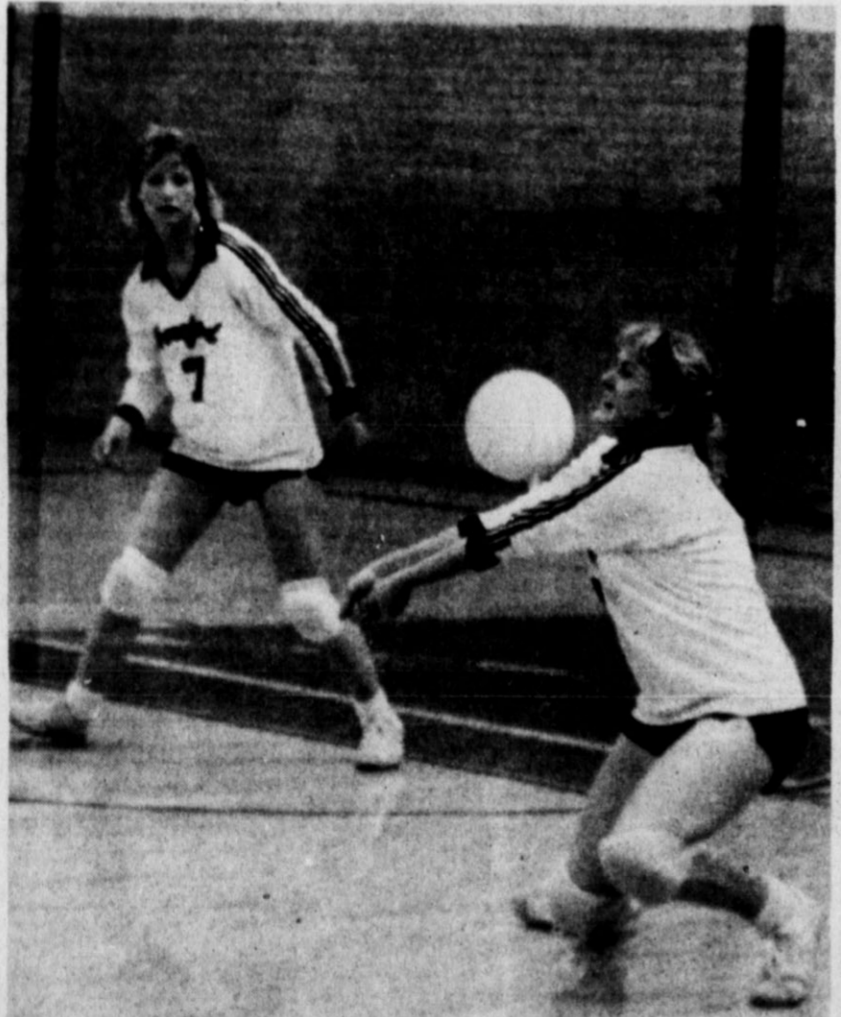

The Hereford High School varsity volleyball team had a tough time in its final match of the 1986 season, losing a home match to Borger on Saturday, 15-7, 15-0.

Borger also won the junior varsity match, 17-15, 9-15, 15-8.

Final season records for the HHS teams are 2-19 for the varsity and 2-16 for the junior varsity. The varsity was 2-10 in District 1-4A matches. In game one of Saturday's varsity match, Kamille Martin served two aces, Jeanette Mumau recorded a kill for a point, and Shea McGinty blocked a Borger spike for a point. McGinty also had two kills for side outs.

Borger held a 7-3 lead before Martin's aces and Mumau's kill brought Hereford to within one point, 7-6. But Hereford could score only one point the rest of the game, on McGinty's kill.

Dallas Cowboys look for another quarterback

Danny White out for regular season

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Quarterback Danny White, who got the Dallas Cowboys into three NFC championship games but never the Super Bowl, apparently will miss the remainder of the NFL regular season because of a fractured wrist.

White, at 34 the second oldest quarterback in the NFL, will wear a cast for four to six weeks and might not even be available should the Cowboys get into the playoffs.

Dallas Coach Tom Landry said a search is on for another quarterback.

"We'll have to go with somebody who has been competitive this year,"

Landry "As tough as it is on quarterbacks we'll have to go with three. We won a championship with a third-string quarterback last year."

The Dallas Morning News reported today that the Cowboys are going to try out former Cleveland Browns quarterback Paul McDonald, who spent six years under pass offense coordinator Paul Hackett at USC and with the Cleveland Browns.

The other possibility is Scott Campbell, who was released by Pittsburgh this year after two seasons there, the News said. Campbell had a workout with the Cowboys last month.

Landry wouldn't name the quarterback the Cowboys were seeking but said there was hope White could be ready this year.

"Danny would need three or four weeks for rehabilitation," Landry said.

"We'll prepare Steve Pelluer like he's our quarterback for the rest of the season."

The Cowboys have seven weeks left in the regular season.

"If Danny was ready for the playoffs he would be rusty," Landry said. "You've got to go against live competition to be ready in the playoffs."

Pelluer, a former fifth-round draft pick from the University of Washington, started three games for the Cowboys after White suffered a groin pull.

White started for the first time in a month two weeks ago in an easy victory over the St. Louis Cardinals and only played a half.

"It will hurt us to lose Danny because of his experience," Landry said. "But Steve will be great."

Dr. Pat Evans, a team physician, said White could possibly heal in time for the playoffs but added "It's not likely."

The Cowboys also have Reggie Collier, who has yet to participate as quarterback in an NFL down after being signed out of the USFL's Orlando Renegades. He has moved up to second string but Landry added

"We would have to really restrict our offense with him in the game."

Pelluer passed for 339 yards against the Giants in the loss.

Landry said Pelluer "did just an excellent job. And he'll get better and better over the next few weeks."

Dallas running backs Tony Dorsett and Herschel Walker suffered slight injuries, but were expected to be ready for Sunday's 3 p.m. meeting in Texas Stadium with the Los Angeles Raiders.

Dorsett has been bothered for weeks by ankle and knee sprains. Walker was kicked in the shin during the Giants' game and limped through the final minutes.

"We believe everyone will be able to play except for White," Landry said.

White, an 11-year veteran, was injured in the first quarter on a blind-side blitz by linebacker Carl Banks.

In 1985, White missed two regular season games and portions of three other games with a bruised left shoulder, a sprained right hand, bruised ribs, sprained neck and a concussion.

"We'll miss him," Landry said.

HHS sophomore football team loses to Monterey

The Hereford High School sophomore football team held a 6-0 lead late in the game, but Lubbock Monterey scored in the last two minutes of the game and kicked an extra point to defeat Hereford 7-6 Saturday.

The game was played at Whiteface Stadium. The HHS sophomores, who are now 0-7 for the season, close out the 1986 season this Friday with a road game against Lubbock Christian High School.

The game will start at 7 p.m. at the football field near the Lubbock Christian High School in Lubbock.

After a scoreless first quarter on Saturday, Hereford gained a 6-0 lead in the second quarter. Glenn Parker rushed 28 yards for the touchdown.

"John Tohm and Jason Barrow ran tough along with Parker," said Stan Carner, offensive coach for the HHS sophomore team. "Our offensive line had a good performance."

Defensive Coach Ron Young said, "Anthony Gonzales and Scott Devers played good defensive games." J.T. Heaton intercepted a Monterey pass.

Dick Button of the United States, the 1948 gold medalist in men's figure skating, played the piano and often worked out his ice routines on the keyboard.

Prairie dogs inhabit recycled swimming pool

KIDS FACTS FAMOUS CITIES

PECOS, Texas (AP) — Prairie dogs may not be known for their swimming skills, but the animals are having the time of their lives at the Pecos Municipal Pool.

The old municipal pool, that is. The facility, which was deemed unrepairable and filled with dirt, is the new home for prairie dogs at Pecos' Maxey Park.

"The pool was just sitting there, all filled with dirt, so we put a fence around it and started catching the prairie dogs," said Pecos parks foreman Tom Rivera.

Rivera's idea actually takes care of two problems. Not only does it utilize what otherwise would have been a wasted facility, it also gets the prairie dogs out of the public park area.

Prairie Dog Park was built more than 15 years ago with fencing and landscaping in a small area of Maxey Park. Apparently, no one foresaw that the animals would dig under the fence and take over the entire park.

Although there are only about 20 prairie dogs, more than 100 holes — about one every three feet in some places — dot the public park area.

"People want to be able to run, play frisbee, flag football, but they have to watch out for the holes or break an ankle," Rivera said. "And the animals were starting to spread out to the ballparks."

The perfect solution, then, was to find a place where the prairie dogs could not dig their way out — a place with concrete underground barriers, like a swimming pool.

City workers took the fence from the old prairie dog park area and put it around the pool. The Cyclone and chicken wire fence also has tin on its interior to prevent the animals from climbing out.

Acknowledging the new prairie dog home "doesn't look very pretty now," Rivera has plans to remedy that, too.

"We'll plant some grass and maybe a couple of trees this spring, and have a little rock pile in there, too. We'll also be spraying the concrete so it looks decent," he said.

"So far, we've used all old materials, because the budget doesn't allow anything new. But it would be nice to have a few picnic tables out around the pool."

Workers this winter plan to concentrate efforts on the public park area, where holes must be filled and the ground leveled off.

But first, all the prairie dogs must be rounded up.

With a cat trap used in city animal control, workers have been catching one or two prairie dogs a day and relocating them in their new home, which now has about 15 of the animals.

"I think it's really better for the animals, too," Rivera said. "They get fed more — corn and rabbit pellets — and get fresh water every day."

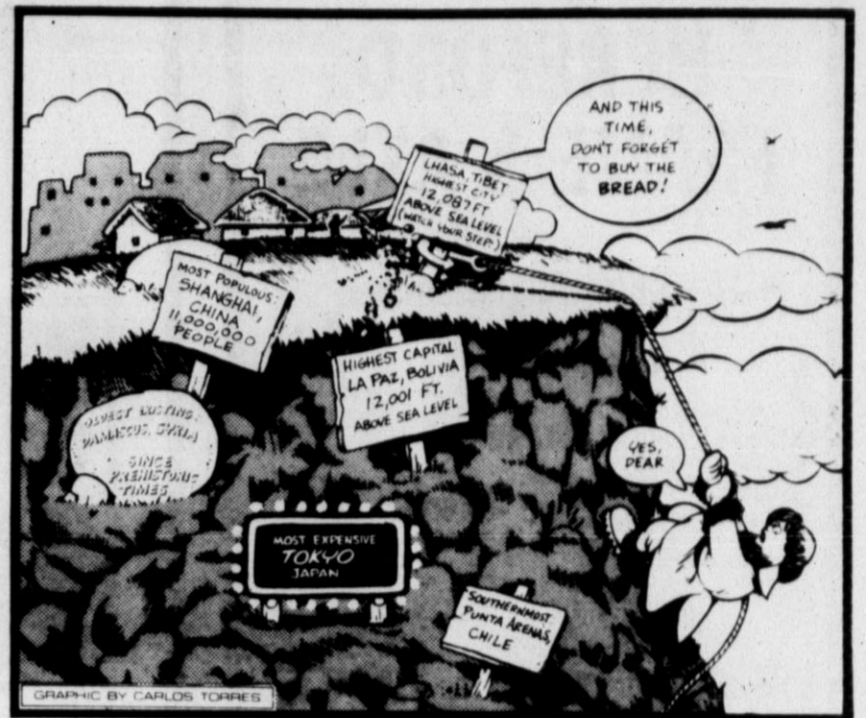

The prairie dogs also don't seem to mind sharing their meals with the ground squirrels and birds that have taken refuge there.

People who have visited have enjoyed being able to observe the prairie dogs at close distance. The area is open to the public, and many already have taken advantage of the new, old facility.

Which brings Rivera to his new problem: what to call the new park area.

"I haven't thought of a name yet," he said. "Maybe Prairie Dog Haven."

Of all the cities in the world, here are several that stand out.

The United States in 1940 transferred 50 destroyers to Britain in exchange for a lease of air and sea bases in Newfoundland and the British West Indies.

In 1978, Egyptian commandos flew to Cyprus and attacked a jetliner at an airport near Nicosia to free hostages held by two Arab guerillas. The hostages were freed, but 15 commandos were killed.

Texas Most Wanted Fugitives

LUFKIN, Texas - Daniel Alvarado Velazquez recently spent his 28th birthday doing the same thing he probably did for his 27th birthday - running from the Texas law.

Velazquez, a native of El Salvador, is wanted on a murder warrant issued out of Lufkin in connection with the Christmas Eve, 1984, killing of 58-year-old Jose Rojas.

Police reports indicate Rojas was attending a small neighborhood Christmas party when the incident occurred.

Witnesses say Velazquez drove up to the get-together and jumped out of his vehicle hollering and brandishing a machette. Investigators say the partygoers scattered quickly as the suspect swung the machette across the stomach. Fortunately, the injured person was able to escape.

However, Jose Rojas was not so lucky. He was stabbed in the abdomen with a black-handled utility knife, then staggered in the neighbor's house where he collapsed on the front porch.

He died about an hour later in the emergency room at a local hospital.

Detectives say witnesses identified Velazquez as the offender. The killing has left investigators rather perplexed. According to a Lufkin Police Department spokesman, no one seems to know why Velazquez was upset when he drove up to the party, or why he allegedly acted in such a violent matter.

answer to that question, this week Daniel Alvarado Velazquez has been added to the Texas Most Wanted list.

A reward of up to $1,000 is being offered by the Texas Crime Stoppers Advisory Council for information leading to the capture of Velazquez.

Police say Velazquez is about 5-foot tall, 120 pounds, with black hair and brown eyes.

After fleeing from the crime scene, the suspect reportedly went to Houston and still might be in that area.

Anyone who might have information concerning Velazquez whereabouts is asked to call the Texas Crime Stoppers Advisory Council toll-free at 1-800-252-8477 or their local Crime Stoppers program. In all cases, callers do not have to reveal their identities.

FIGHTING THOSE BABY BLUES

By Harry S. Jonas, M.D., President, The American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists

"Baby blues"—it may sound like a catchy song title. Actually, it refers to a common but distressing condition that affects many women after childbirth.

Many mothers experience baby blues—feelings of sadness, depression, and unexplained crying spells—soon after their baby is born. Most doctors believe that the blues are brought on by the rapidly changing hormone levels coupled with the stress and fatigue of a new baby. However, new studies show that baby blues may not be just the result of physical changes.

The research showed that women who had good support from their partners through pregnancy were much less likely to feel depressed and sad after having the baby. Although support from family and friends was also important, a supportive mate made the difference.

In rare cases, the baby blues can become a serious problem, called postpartum depression. With this condition, the sad feelings do not go away within a short time and the mother becomes very depressed and withdrawn, and often unable to care for her baby. This is more likely to happen to women who have experienced episodes of depression before pregnancy, and who also lack a good support system. Both medical and psychological treatment is needed in these few special cases.

If you're a new mother and feeling blue, don't worry; you're going through something perfectly normal. Right now, the only thing you should be thinking of is taking care of yourself and your newborn. If possible, let your spouse and others take care of cooking, housekeeping, and other child care. Sleep and newborns often seem incompatible, but try to rest as much as possible, and catnap when the baby sleeps. Eating right is as important as sleep, especially if you are breastfeeding.

When it comes right down to it, it would be an unusual woman who didn't feel a little blue or anxious after having a baby. Having help from others and being able to talk about your feelings are two very important ways to beat the confusion and stress of coping with a newborn.

If you find yourself crying for no reason, or feeling sad even though you have the world's most wonderful baby, just remember that you've got those baby blues, and they'll soon pass.

Who are the people who write letters to the editor?

ODESSA, Texas (AP) — Peggy McCrary likely wrote her first letter to a newspaper editor 30 years ago when she was a bride in her native Albuquerque, N.M. But, she said, she's long forgotten what it was about.

Since then she's taken pen in hand to protest traffic near her family's corner house in El Paso, and the practice of starting parades with sirens in Carlsbad, N.M.

Mrs. McCrary, who moved to Odessa in 1979, first wrote to The Odessa American more than three years ago, when she decried a syndicated column by Dr. George W. Crane.

"Oh, I thought it was terrible," said Mrs. McCrary. "He thought women should be barefoot and pregnant and stay at home."

A regular contributor to The American's letters-to-the-editor columns, Mrs. McCrary recently took exception with an area school system's hair code and newspaper print that rubs off on hands.

"Just one little thing will tick me off, and I will decide to spout off about it," said the mother of four, who considers herself "just a housewife."

Mrs. McCrary, who has a degree in advertising and worked briefly as a copywriter, also hasn't hesitated to telephone the paper to point out a misspelling.

And she remembers coming in one day with a dayglow orange and green sign with the correct spelling of "florescent."

"They probably said, 'that kook,'" she said.

Mrs. McCrary, a golfer and bowler who considers herself a liberal, insists she writes about "pretty frivolous" topics — she has a scrapbook of her calligraphy that includes the pithy plea, "Lord fill my mouth with worthwhile stuff — and nudge me when I've said enough."

In contrast to Mrs. McCrary, Malcolm Tweedy's correspondence centers on world affairs: the need for "peaceful negotiations" despite the Soviet arrest of a U.S. journalist or concern that this country is planning to expand military commitments in Nicaragua.

"I feel I follow a policy that is common sense," said Tweedy, who with his wife owns the Stone Village Motel in Alpine. "You might say I'm an enlightened person."

Born to Americans living in London, the 64-year-old Tweedy boasts a "complex background."

His father was a native of San Angelo who headed an American brokerage company in England. Tweedy served in the U.S. military in World War II and majored in French and German at Princeton University.

In the 1940s, he wrote for The San Angelo Standard Times and later taught at a private elementary school in Pennsylvania for 25 years.

"I'm a historian by trade," said Tweedy, who returned in 1978 to Alpine, where he and his wife once operated old Fort Davis as a tourist attraction for about two years.

He scribes his concerns every couple of weeks, often sending them to publications worldwide.

"I just have a lot of fun in life," said Tweedy, who puts on a melodrama every year and reports weather for a Midland television station. "I haven't had an unhappy moment in a long, long while."

T.S. Nettleton, retired office manager for Gulf Pipeline who has lived in Odessa since 1936, also is a familiar name in The American's letters-to-the editor columns.

The 85-year-old Nettleton said he first wrote about nine years ago after he read someone else's comments about the area's history.

"I thought, 'Shucks, he don't know nothing,'" he said.

Nettleton, who terms himself a "conservative," remembers the most disturbing topic that prompted him to write was city parking meters. "I just thought there was more space than there were parking meters," he said. "I just couldn't see any use in them."

One who compiles a scrapbook of his printed letters, he speculates "just ego" keeps his letters flowing. People he meets around town often inquire, "When are you going to write another letter?" he said.

He routinely asks his wife of 52 years to pass judgment on his missives before they're mailed. He notes she nixed only one, about making cigarettes from loose tobacco.

"I'm not very articulate," Nettleton said. "I wouldn't know a dangling participle from some of those other terms."

Another longtime writer is Joe Seay, insurance agency owner and president of Odessans for Decency.

Seay said he began his letter-writing campaign about 10 years ago, prompted into action by a proposal to sell liquor by the drink.

The 52-year-old Seay, who's raised four kids and lived in Odessa for 30 years, said he's "a straight arrow" who hails from a sheltered, Baptist background in Arkansas.

He said his recent letters have sought to educate the public that Odessans for Decency is a "peaceful, prayerful" group and that obscenity isn't protected by the U.S. Constitution's First Amendment.

Seay, who estimated he's written letters to newspapers 50 times, said he believes he recently swayed some citizens to his way of thinking.

"There are always those negative calls, but more recently they've been fewer and fewer," he said.

Former Department of Public Safety Trooper Ray E. Garnett is among the newspaper's newer contributors.

The 53-year-old Garnett, who quit the DPS after 13 years and moved to Odessa 13 years ago to become a self-employed carpenter, wrote first in September to defend pari-mutuel betting. "I guess I'm reaching the golden age where I sit around and don't have anything better to do than write letters to the editor," he said. "The Baptist preachers got me riled when they started calling all the race track people sleazy."

Garnett said he's written a second letter, as yet unpublished, and has more pressing issues on his mind.

"I been smitten by the bug, I think," he said, noting he has an inclination to "tackle the untouchables" — like ministers and judges.

That's not unlike citations he issued while in the DPS, he said. "I didn't mind the Fords and the Chevrolets ... I seemed to tune in more to the Cadillacs and Lincolns. I guess I'm a frustrated poor boy."

DR. GOTT Health fairs have their drawbacks

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

According to the Journal of the American Medical Association, more than 2 million people visited health fairs last year. Health fairs are voluntary programs, usually sponsored by lay organizations, that offer medical screening tests at practically no cost to the people who are tested. Some health fairs offer little more than blood-pressure recording, height, weight, hearing and visual checkups, and health education in the form of brochures and pamphlets. Others include eye examinations, cardiograms, urinalyses, stool blood determinations and up to 30 blood tests.

While no one would deny that the thrust of health fairs is admirable from a humanitarian standpoint, some experts are criticizing the concept. Their criticisms are worth examining.

To begin with, all laboratory tests have built-in errors for both false positives and false negatives. Even in normal populations, test abnormalities have been reported in more than 50 percent of patients. For any test, there exists a probability of random fluctuation — in other words, a certain probability that a well person may show a value outside the normal range. This probability is present in every test; therefore, 25 tests will compound that probability by a factor of 25. Put another way, a healthy person has a 40 percent chance of showing at least one "abnormal" result if he has 25 tests, each one of which has a potential 2 percent error.

Second, many patients who undergo health-fair screenings are already known to have some disease and be under treatment. When predictably abnormal test results are obtained and reported, patients may be unduly alarmed. Conversely, because each test has its own built-in false-negative probability, certain patients who follow unsound health habits could be harmed by a false sense of security if their test results are "normal."

Third, there is conclusive evidence that the successful treatment of many diseases bears no relation to early detection. For example, the unexpected discovery of high blood sugar in a patient who has no symptoms does not necessarily mean that the diabetes could be treated any more successfully than if the patient waited until symptoms of excessive thirst and frequent urination developed. The only exceptions to this rule of thumb are cervical cancer and bowel cancer, both of which can be treated more successfully if detected early.

Finally, the identification of a disease is only the first step toward controlling the disease. Behavioral modification and medical follow-up — particularly with respect to compliance with therapy — are vital parts of a successful outcome. The objective of any screening program must extend beyond the simple detection of an illness; it has to include both treatment and control of the condition. Critics claim that physicians and patients often fail to follow through on further evaluation of screening data.

Health fairs are not inexpensive when the hidden costs are figured in. Assuming one follow-up visit per abnormal test result, the total cost for a two-day health fair with 1,000 participants has been estimated to be $70,275. In a study conducted by the Kaiser Permanente Medical Group, researchers discovered that "new diagnoses (not necessarily of benefit to the diagnosed patient) were made in only 0.0075 percent of the people screened." This does not appear to be a cost-effective enterprise.

The most satisfactory, accurate and efficient way to diagnose disease is still the old-fashioned one-on-one evaluation in the doctor's office. The medical history and a thorough physical examination seem to form the most valuable cornerstone of good health care.

Future health-screening programs for the general public may contribute to consumer well-being, but as the researchers point out: "Is any health-screening procedure appropriate for a health fair even though that same procedure lacks merit in the physician's office? The answer may well be 'yes.' At the moment, we lack sufficient information to make such a judgment."

DEAR DR. GOTT: I've had four ultrasound treatments over the last several months for an inflamed cartilage in the chest area. It still bothers me. Is this the best treatment?

DEAR READER: Ultrasound treatments sometimes help the pain of chest-wall inflammation. You appear to be having continuing trouble, so I conclude that ultrasound is not the best treatment for you. Ask your doctor to recommend anti-inflammatory medicine or other forms of physical therapy.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I seem to have excessive ear wax, which runs out of the ear and gets the ear inflamed. What can I do about this?

DEAR READER: The application of hydrogen peroxide once every week or so might help your wax problem. Pour about one-third of a capful in each ear, wait until the fizzing stops, and then drain or wash out the residue. The effervescent action of peroxide tends to loosen wax particles and bubble them out of the ear. The treatment is safe and inexpensive. If this simple approach doesn't solve your problem, check with your doctor.

DEAR DR. GOTT: For the past few months, many foods and drinks have tasted moldy or fungusy to me. Now things are beginning to smell that way, too. Is this an allergy or a sign of a disease? I am 33 and more than 100 pounds overweight.

DEAR READER: You might have an allergy or a fungus infection in your throat or sinuses. See an ear, nose and throat specialist.

DEAR DR. GOTT: What exactly is high-colonic irrigation? Are there any health benefits or hazards associated with it?

DEAR READER: High-colonic irrigation is a whale of an enema. It is an old-fashioned practice that does no good, is uncomfortable and can cause bowel injury. In some cases, such a forceful enema can actually rupture the intestine.

In the past few years, high colonics have enjoyed renewed popularity in the form of a cult. Some misguided people believe that "toxins" are removed from the body by this method. I think that they are engaging in some spooky sexual practices. There is no scientific evidence showing that colonic irrigation is superior to an ordinary enema in relieving constipation. In fact, enemas are best avoided. Bran, vegetable fiber and mild laxatives are preferable.
