

Talks with Soviets break in disagreement

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — High level superpower arms control talks ended bitterly today with the Soviet Union accusing the United States of a "complete retreat" from positions agreed to at the Iceland summit. Secretary of State George P. Shultz said "Star Wars" was still the sticking point.

After five hours of meetings with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze over two days, Shultz, clearly disappointed, told reporters: "I can't say the meetings have moved us along in any significant way, and I regret this."

Shevardnadze, in an acerbic summary before boarding a plane for Moscow, said he departed with a "bitter taste."

He accused the U.S. side of a "complete retreat" from the Oct. 11-12 summit meeting in Iceland between President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

Arms control positions conveyed by Shultz "represent a mixed bag of old mothballed views and approaches," he said. "One cannot avoid the impression that our partners (the Americans) wished to forget Reykjavik as soon as possible."

The Reykjavik summit ended in deadlock over the Star Wars antimissile program, after Reagan rejected restrictions on testing of it as part of an arms reduction deal.

The arms talks in Vienna, on the periphery of a 35-nation Helsinki review conference, focused on the tentative agreements between Reagan and Gorbachev to reduce nuclear weapons and the dispute over Star Wars, which sidetracked an accord in Reykjavik.

And Fall They Do

Autumn's nickname of fall has come true in Hereford as leaves begin to drop from trees along the National Cowgirl Hall of Fame drive. The extended forecast calls for lows in the lower 30s and even into the 20s this weekend. Highs will be in the 40s.

Farm groups differ over prospects of Democratic controlled Senate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two powerful farm groups differ on whether the Democratic takeover of the Senate will mean serious moves to overhaul federal commodity programs designed last year by Congress to help wean producers from government supports.

Robert J. Mullins, chief lobbyist for the National Farmers Union, says the Senate's 55-45 Democratic majority will bring "a change in atmosphere" for farm legislation when Congress convenes in January.

"They're going to be much more receptive to some changes for farm policy, rather than just cutting price — which we expect the administration to propose again," Mullins said Wednesday in an interview. "I would think that some supply-management ideas would probably get a better hearing."

But John Lewis of the American Farm Bureau Federation's Washington office said there was "no clear mandate" in Tuesday's voting. "I don't think there'll be significant changes" in U.S. farm programs, he said.

The federation supported the administration's drive on Capitol Hill last year for "market-oriented" programs aimed at reducing commodity price supports so that U.S. wheat, corn and other crops would be more competitive in world trade.

Farm exports are at a nine-year low and are cited as a major reason for depressed prices and sagging farm income.

Next in line to succeed Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., as chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee is Sen. Patrick J. Leahy, D-Vt.

Lewis said Leahy would maintain a strong voice for dairy farmers as chairman, as Helms has for tobacco. Mostly, however, Lewis said he thought Leahy would not interfere in committee development of other programs.

"I don't see any evidence of a real farm revolt, except in the two Dakotas," Lewis said, referring to the defeat of Republican incumbents, Sens. Mark Andrews of North Dakota and James Abdnor of South Dakota. "I certainly don't see it as a mandate for Senator Harkin's mandatory control legislation."

Before adjourning this fall, a dozen Senate and House Democrats, including Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, unveiled a plan to move away from the "misguided conception" of the 1985 law toward supply management of U.S. crop production, including increases in federal price supports.

Agriculture Secretary Richard E. Lyng contends that despite the record subsidy costs of the current programs the 1985 law should be given a chance to restore U.S. competitiveness in the global export market. Some fine-tuning, however, might be needed, he said.

Orville L. Freeman, president of the non-profit, privately supported Agriculture Council of America, said he thinks Congress will embark on "an enhanced export drive" and will recognize a need to use more effectively the provisions of the 1985 law, including the Food for Peace allocation of U.S. commodities.

Freeman was secretary of agriculture in the Kennedy-Johnson era of the 1960s. As head of the council, Freeman is committed to strengthening the U.S. farm export position.

"I think we're going to see a Congress now quite militant and quite insistent that the tools at hand are used more effectively, and that there will be oversight studies and hearings which will look in great detail as to what has and hasn't happened about exports," Freeman said in a telephone interview from his Washington office.

"Where American agriculture is concerned, a rise in protectionism is a great danger and must be faced and overcome," he said.

Democrats retain 17 of Texas' seats

DALLAS (AP) — Despite efforts by both Republicans and Democrats to target specific incumbents for defeat, voters returned all 26 of Texas' congressmen to Washington and kept the party balance intact.

The Democrats re-elected 10 congressmen in contested races and placed seven unopposed representatives in the 100th Congress. The GOP retained a seat that had been vacated by Rep. Tom Loeffler and saw all nine of its incumbents gain re-election.

U.S. House Majority Leader Jim Wright was among the winners Tuesday, along with three Democrats tagged by the GOP as too liberal for their constituents.

Wright, D-Fort Worth, handily beat Republican challenger Don McNeil, an Alvarado businessman. Complete returns showed Wright winning with 69 percent of the vote.

The expected successor to Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill as House speaker when Congress convenes in January, incumbent Democrats as out of touch with their constituents failed to win over voters.

Rep. John Bryant of Dallas won re-election to the 5th district over Tom Carter, garnering 59 percent. Veteran Rep. J.J. "Jake" Pickle of Austin trounced former Austin Mayor Carole Keeton Rylander with 72 percent of the vote in the 10th district, and Ron Coleman of El Paso captured the 16th district with 66 percent of the vote over GOP challenger Roy Gillia.

"We saw two weeks of heavy negative campaigning against Bryant said. "We were about it. But we made a final effort to emphasize the positive with my record. We never mentioned my opponent's name."

In the only race not involving an incumbent, Republicans retained sprawling 21st district, which Lyflier abandoned to make an unsuccessful GOP gubernatorial bid. Former Bexar County Commissioner Lamar Smith easily defeating Democrat Pete Snelson, a former state senator from Midland, with 61 percent of the vote.

"We had broad grass-roots support from Democrats, as well as from Republicans," Smith said. Snelson blamed his defeat on party affiliations. "I think the bottom was party labels and experience," he said. In the 2nd district, Democrat

Clements already at work, meeting with advisors, planning task force

AUSTIN (AP) — Work already has begun for his next administration, Gov.-elect Bill Clements says, adding that the state's faltering economy will get the attention it needs.

"We'll immediately get to work," Clements said Wednesday, a day his aides said was marked by numerous meetings with advisors.

Clements credited his emphasis on jobs as a key factor in his win over Democratic Gov. Mark White. He told a news conference he will appoint within days an economic task force of 40 to 50 prominent business and academic leaders to write recommendations on creating jobs and business development.

"When you have a problem that's well-identified, you don't sweep it under the rug. You do something about it," Clements said. "These problems are crying for solutions. I intend to put some solutions on the table."

Full proposals from his task force will be presented to the Legislature when it convenes in January, he said. "We're already starting to talk about it..."

Texas' first Republican governor in 102 years when elected in 1978, Clements capped his comeback bid with a decisive victory over the man who ousted him four years ago.

According to near-final returns compiled by the secretary of state, Clements received 1,804,065 votes, or 52.71 percent, to White's 1,575,740, or 46.04 percent. Libertarian Theresa Doyle received just 42,346 votes, or 1.23 percent.

Clements, 69, said his emphasis on jobs was crucial because Texas unemployment has soared to record high levels.

"The people of Texas are terribly concerned about our economy. That was the difference. It was a unifying factor that pulled everybody together," Clements said.

In a wide-ranging news conference, Clements gave a preview of his next administration's agenda.

Tied to the economic problems is the state budget. The Legislative Budget Board was told Wednesday that 1988-89 revenues could fall $3.5 billion to $5 billion below what originally was anticipated.

However, Clements reiterated that overall state income is up, and he pledged to cut spending where needed and limit the growth of many programs.

"We are not going to have the growth in some of the programs that have heretofore been anticipated. Our revenues will be up; they will not be down. But we will not have the growth some people would like," he said.

Clements pledged a thorough review of the state's tax structure, suggesting he may back a plan similar to that recommended by Comptroller Bob Bullock.

Bullock's plan calls for a broader sales tax base, to apply the levy to many goods and services, such as lawyer's fees, not now covered, and lowering the rate from the 5 1/2 percent it will hit in January.

The governor-elect stopped short of endorsing that plan, however, and said any overhaul should be "revenue-neutral."

"We've already been talking to Mr. Bullock's office," Clements said. "We will take a hard look at restructuring."

Texas reports poor turnout

AUSTIN (AP) — Almost 47 percent of Texas' registered voters showed up at the polls on election day, slightly higher than state officials' predictions.

With 99 percent of the state's precincts reporting, 3,413,029 of 7,287,173 registered voters had cast ballots in the governor's race Tuesday.

Secretary of State Myra McDaniel had predicted a 44 percent turnout. Gov. Mark White, defeated by Republican former Gov. Bill Clements, had talked about the possibility of a 50 percent turnout.

In 1982, when White ousted Clements, 3.2 million votes were cast in the gubernatorial race on a rainy Election Day across the state. That represented a 50 percent turnout.

In 1984, when President Reagan carried Texas over Democrat Walter Mondale, 5.3 million ballots were cast in a 68 percent turnout. Regional reports from Tuesday's election showed varied turnout around the state. In the Panhandle, where Clements pulled 63.79 percent of the vote, total turnout was 50.6 percent.

In North Central Texas, where Clements gathered 56.39 percent, total turnout was 48.6 percent.

Traditionally Democratic East Texas also went for Clements, giving him 50.98 percent of the vote in a 43.52 percent turnout.

Upper Gulf counties reported a turnout of 45.67 percent, and gave White 50.28 percent of the vote.

In South Texas, where White hoped to build a big lead, the incumbent had 51.41 percent of the vote in a 42.64 percent turnout.

Clements edged White in Central Texas, where the turnout was 52.85 percent, and the GOP challenger won big in West Central Texas by taking 64.22 percent of the vote in a 52.29 percent turnout.

In West Texas, there was a 43.29 percent turnout with Clements taking almost 56 percent of that vote.

White House backed Hasenfus flight

WASHINGTON (AP) — The C-123K cargo plane shot down a month ago while flying supplies to Nicaraguan Contra rebels was part of a secret White House-initiated program that relied on intelligence operatives to circumvent a ban on U.S. military aid, according to sources involved in the effort.

The White House operation began in early 1984 when President Reagan approved a plan to replace CIA assistance to the rebels with help from Americans outside the government and from U.S. military allies, current and former administration officials and Contra leaders say.

The operation has come in for renewed attention now that Eugene Hasenfus, the C-123K's cargo handler who parachuted from the plane and was captured, has been put on trial in Managua.

Although aspects of the White House program had been disclosed previously, the Oct. 5 crash of the arms-laden aircraft in southern Nicaragua revealed a previously secret supply network using American pilots and operating out of El Salvador's military airfield at Ilopango.

Sources both inside the supply network and the administration said U.S. officials played at least a supporting role in the operation — placing the ex-CIA operative who directed the flights at Ilopango and helping to coordinate the flow of supplies. The sources discussed the U.S. role only on condition they not be named.

Administration officials have denied responsibility for the flight and professed ignorance about who was behind it.

Elliott Abrams, assistant secretary of state for Latin America, told Congress last month that it would be "inappropriate" to investigate the supply operation, which he described as a "private initiative ... not organized, directed or financed by the U.S. government."

"I think today is the first day of a new political era when we try to figure out what happens in post-Reagan," he said.

But Reagan, while conceding that the Senate loss was a setback, is not one to accept such a dismissal.

Israel, U.S. sign missile accord

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Israel and the United States signed an accord giving Israel about $6 million to research strategic missile defense systems as part of President Reagan's "Star Wars" program, a Defense Ministry spokesman said today.

Israeli May became the first non-NATO country to join the research program into space-based defense, officially called the Strategic Defense Initiative.

Israel is expected to research a defense against Soviet-made SS-21 medium-range surface-to-surface missiles which were recently deployed in Syria, a defense industry source told The Associated Press.

The Israel Arms Development Authority — called Rafael — and Israel Aircraft Industries are expected to be main beneficiaries of the grant.

Freed hostage prepares to go home

WIESBADEN, West Germany (AP) — David Jacobsen, given a clean bill of health after 17 months of captivity in Lebanon, spends a final quiet day with his children in West Germany today before they all head home.

"They are scheduled to leave on Friday," Air Force spokesman Jeffery Mulcahy told reporters today.

He said the family planned a tranquil day. Doctors, after completing three days of examinations at a U.S. Air Force hospital in Wiesbaden, said Wednesday that Jacobsen, 55, suffered no major health problems during his captivity.

However, the physicians said they had recommended the Huntington Beach, Calif., native have routine follow-up tests after going home.

Jacobsen was kidnapped in Beirut, Lebanon, on May 28, 1985, while on his way to work as director of the American University Hospital there.

His Shiite Moslem kidnapers released him Sunday, and he arrived the next day in Wiesbaden. He was accompanied by Anglican Church envoy Terry Waite, who has been working for the release of Westerners held captive in Lebanon.

Air Force officials said that Jacobsen's three grown children, Eric, Paul and Diane Duggan, spent Wednesday with their spouses touring sites near Wiesbaden, a Rhine River city.

On Tuesday, Jacobsen spoke to reporters from a hospital balcony draped with American flags after being reunited with his family.

A hospital loudspeaker system played a song titled "When The Word Comes," a ballad about homecoming that was written and recorded by Jacobsen's sons Eric and Paul in 1985.

Asked why Jacobsen sometimes appeared to ramble, talking about everything from the U.S. Congress to baseball games, Col. Charles K. Maffet, the hospital's director, said that was "perfectly normal" in a just-released hostage.

"His remarks are very consistent with anyone returning from a captive situation," the hospital director said. "He likes to talk and wants to talk, because he hasn't been able to do that."

"Things that you and I might consider trivial are very important (to him). He spent 17 months worrying about life-and-death situations, and today the World Series is important to him," Maffet said.

Beach-Nut named in phony juice sales

By EDWARD FROST Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Beech-Nut and two company officers have been charged with selling sugar-water as apple juice for babies to avoid losing $3.5 million the company spent on concentrate it knew was bogus, authorities say.

Beech-Nut Nutrition Corp. was indicted Wednesday on 470 counts of conspiracy, mail fraud and violations of the federal Food, Drug and Cosmetic Act. President and chief executive officer Neils L. Hoyvald and John F. Lavery, vice president for manufacturing, and four other people were indicted on conspiracy and food and drug violations.

The Fort Washington, Pa.-based company sold millions of bottles of apple-flavored sugar water labeled as pure apple juice to avoid losing $3.5 million it spent on what it knew was phony concentrate, the indictment said.

Beech-Nut blamed suppliers for misrepresenting the concentrate and said in a statement that it was not able to detect the counterfeit juice at the time.

"The issues in the federal case are technical and hinge on whether or not the Beech-Nut employees had sufficient knowledge about the supplier's product," the statement said.

The counterfeit juice, sold from 1978 to 1983, was not believed to be a health hazard and no more is on the market, said U.S. Attorney Andrew Maloney. "I understand it looked like apple juice, tasted like apple juice and it may have done nutritionally many of the things that apple juice does, but it wasn't apple juice."

However, he said the Food and Drug Administration could not rule out the possibility that a potential risk to consumers existed.

The adulterated concentrate was made from beet sugar, malic acid, apple flavor, caramel color, corn syrup and cane sugar syrup but was sold in bottles labeled "100 percent apple juice," Maloney said.

Maloney said Hoyvald and Lavery learned from government food inspectors and their own employees in the summer of 1982 that the concentrate was phony but continued to sell it.

To avoid a potential loss of $3.5 million if the phony concentrate were seized, on Aug. 12, 1982, they allegedly ordered 25,000 cases shipped in nine trucks from the company's Canajoharie warehouse in western New York to another warehouse in Secaucus, N.J., the indictment said.

On Sept. 1, 1982, the concentrate was moved to San Juan, Puerto Rico, and elsewhere and sold, the indictment said.

The company shipped the phony juice to 20 states, Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands and five foreign countries, it said.

Hoyvald and Lavery denied the charges, the company said. Company attorney John S. Martin had no other comment.

DEMOCRATS

Brooks, D-Beaumont, the dean of the Texas delegation, picked up 62 percent of the vote over GOP challenger Lisa D. Duperier.

Beau Boulter, R-Amarillo, earned 64.9 percent of the vote to earn re-election over Wellington farmer Doug Seal, his Democratic opponent in the 13th district.

In the 19th district, Larry Combest, R-Lubbock, won with 62 percent of the vote over Democrat Gerald McCathern, a Hereford farmer.

In the 24th district, incumbent Democrat Martin Frost earned re-election over GOP foe Bob Burk by a margin of more than 2-1.

In the 26th district, incumbent Republican Dick Arney piled up 68 percent of the vote to easily defeat Democrat George Richardson.

Two Republican incumbents breezed to re-election over supporters of political extremist Lyndon LaRouche. Bill Archer of Houston defeated Harry Kniffen, a Houston truck driver, and Tom DeLay of Sugar Land beat Houston political consultant Susan Director. Archer picked up 87 percent of the vote in the 7th district, while DeLay nabbed 72 percent in the 22nd district.

Steve Bartlett, R-Dallas, easily won re-election in the 3rd district, capturing 94 percent of the vote over independent Brent Barnes and Libertarian Don Gough. Mickey Leland, D-Houston, who received 90 percent of the ballots in Houston's 18th district, had no trouble with independent Joanne Kuniansky.

Albert Bustamante, D-San Antonio, won re-election to the 23rd district by picking up 90 percent of the vote over Libertarian Ken Hendrix.

Unopposed were Jim Chapman, D-Sulphur Springs; Marvin Leath, D-Marlin; Kika de la Garza, D-Mission; Charles Stenholm, D-Stamford; Henry B. Gonzalez, D-San Antonio; Mike Andrews, D-Houston; and Solomon Ortiz, D-Corpus Christi.

IRS holds $1.9 million in refunds

DALLAS — A check averaging $510 awaits each of 3,854 North Texas taxpayers pending their contacting the Internal Revenue Service with their current mailing address. The IRS has a total of $1,967,546.72 in undeliverable refunds for taxpayers who filed claims earlier this year.

According to Terry Green, IRS Chief of Taxpayer Service, the IRS has already made at least two attempts to reach these taxpayers. "The check has been mailed to the address on the return. If it is sent back to IRS as undeliverable by the post office, the taxpayer's account is credited, and the IRS mails a special letter, or notice, to the taxpayer at his or her address of record," Green explained. "The list at the end of this article, then, is comprised of those taxpayers whose notices were also returned as undeliverable."

Green said the most common reasons for a check being returned are lack of forwarding addresses being filed when taxpayers move, illegible handwriting, or name changes since the refund was claimed. "Considering the fact that over 2 million taxpayers in North Texas do get their refunds on time, the percentage of undeliverable checks is small. But we feel that even one check is too many. The money belongs to the taxpayer and we'd like to match the check to its owner," Green said.

If you name appears on the following list, call IRS at (214)742-2440 in Dallas, (817)263-9229 in Fort Worth, or 1-800-424-1040 elsewhere in Texas between 6:00 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. weekdays. You will be asked for your name, social security number, and expected amount of refund. After providing the required information, the IRS will reissue your check and you should have it in time for the Christmas holidays.

Forget him

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I have fallen in love with a European. I spent the whole summer with him and it was heavenly. Now I am back home.

I know he misses me and loves me. He has told me so many times. But he says he is not into long-term relationships. I find it so hard to go on with my life. I am 19 and desperate. Please give me some advice. -S.S. IN N.Y.

DEAR S.S.: When a man says he is "not into long-term relationships", that's shorthand for, "I take my fun where I find it but I don't want to make any commitments."

Forget him. As they say in the department store business, "Your first markdown is the cheapest." In other words, the sooner you write it off the less it will cost you in the long run.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I was a nurse in emergency who got fed up with child abuse cases. It was more than I could stand.

I decided to quit nursing and join the American Red Cross.

I would like to applaud the silent heroes of our country—those wonderful people who donate blood to save the lives of children and adults they will never meet.

Unfortunately, we never read about them. Nor do they get the praise they deserve. They give a part of themselves, as well as their valuable time, because they know that somewhere, somebody needs something they can offer.

Let's not forget the Red Cross volunteers. These valiant people work for absolutely nothing because they know they are needed. We know they save lives.

I'm so glad I met these people, Ann. They have renewed my faith in humanity. I try to thank them whenever I can, but it would sure help if you would thank them on behalf of the millions of people who read your column.—R.N. IN LITTLE ROCK

DEAR R.N.: I'm pleased to print a letter in praise of blood donors and a splendid organization, whenever disaster strikes, that beautiful symbol of hope and help arrives. It is the one organization that is welcome everywhere. The Red Cross transcends all barriers. Long may its magnificent flag wave.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Last week I buried my elderly mother. She was laid to rest in her hometown and I asked the minister from her small church to officiate at the service. For some reason a substitute minister showed up. The man never knew my mother personally, but that is no excuse for what happened. He mispronounced her last name three times. Worse yet, each time he said it differently.

At the cemetery he was told about it and I asked, "Do you have it right now?" He said, "Yes." But you guessed it. He flubbed again.

All he had to do was write Mom's name on a piece of paper and place it in the Bible where he could see it. This was, after all, a task for which he was paid. He owed it to the family to do a decent job.

We were outraged, but I'm sure the good Lord knew who Mom really was—UPSET IN ALBANY carelessness of that clergyman was inexcusable. I hope someone in the family will drop him a note. It would be a favor. He needs to make certain it doesn't happen again.

BORDEAUX FACTS
There are four things to take into account when evaluating the red wines of Bordeaux. The most important is the vintage, the next the quality of the wine, the third its age, and the fourth is the region. Ripe vintages upgrade all qualities and districts, making them slower to mature and giving them a longer life span. Young red Bordeaux should be drunk cooler than mature ones. Young reds go with strongly flavored, rich dishes. Mature reds are served with plain roasts of lamb or beef. Very old wines go with all kinds of white meat or fowl. In addition, dry white Bordeaux can be served with any fish dish, especially oysters. It cuts the richness of patés, but is generally not served as an aperitif without food.

112-103 over New Jersey Nets

Dawkins leads Spurs to win

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — The pressure of being first-round NBA draft choices seems to be having different effects on Johnny Dawkins and Dwayne 'Pearl' Washington in the early weeks of the season.

Dawkins, the 10th pick overall in last year's draft, seems to be a player whose star is on the rise after coming off the bench Wednesday to tally 25 points and lead the San Antonio Spurs to a 112-103 victory over the New Jersey Nets.

Washington, the 13th player selected in the first round and the man expected to provide the spark and excitement in the Nets' backcourt, appears to be a player who may have temporarily lost his starting job.

"The reason we drafted Johnny was for his one-on-one capabilities," said Spurs Coach Bob Weiss. "We have to play him through his turnovers and bad shots. In the long run, I think it's going to pay off for us."

Dawkins scored 16 points in the Spurs' season opener, but only had six and three in his last two outings, seeing limited action. Against New Jersey, he played 35 minutes, hit 10 of 15 shots from the field and five of eight free throws, grabbed six rebounds and had three assists. He had seven points in the crucial final quarter.

"The coach told me to be more aggressive, penetrate and look for my shot," Dawkins said. "He's shown a lot of confidence in me. I worked a lot both mentally and physically to prepare for this season. I think the mental pressure is tougher than the physical pressure."

But while Dawkins was a key man for the Spurs in the decisive fourth quarter, Washington was on the bench. The former Syracuse guard upset Nets Coach Dave Wohl by showing up late for the team's pre-game meeting and then turning in a lackluster effort that included 10 points and one assist in 19 minutes.

Although Wohl would not specifically name Washington, it appeared his star rookie was the target when he said after the game: "I expect to change my starting lineup for the next game."

The Nets meet Milwaukee here on Friday.

The Spurs led by as many as 19 points in the first half before the Nets rallied in the fourth quarter, pulling within 97-95 on Mike Gminski's two free throws with 5:12 remaining.

But that was as close as the Nets, losers of three in a row after an opening-night victory, ever got.

With San Antonio ahead 101-98 with 3:51 to play, the Spurs, who connected on 15 of 16 free throws in the quarter, scored six of the next seven points to put the game out of reach at 107-99 with 1:28 to go.

Mychal Thompson, who had 22 points and 11 rebounds, opened the decisive spurt with a jumper. Artis Gilmore added a basket on a hook shot and Dawkins canned two free throws.

Alvin Robertson added 22 points for San Antonio and David Greenwood had 19 points and 11 rebounds. Tony Brown topped New Jersey with 21 points, while Orlando Woolridge added 19.

In the first half, Thompson scored four points in an 8-0 Spurs run, giving them their biggest lead of the first half at 54-35.

Bidding war waged for Miami-Penn State matchup

DALLAS (AP) — The Florida Citrus Bowl and the Sunkist Fiesta Bowl launched a bidding war for a New Year's Day national championship game between No. 1 Miami and No. 2 Penn State, The Dallas Morning News reported in today's editions.

Each bowl is offering a $2.6 million package, the newspaper reported. The Citrus Bowl committee decided Wednesday to offer each team $2.4 million and free hotel space in Orlando, Fla. The accommodations added $200,000 to the offer.

The newspaper attributed the report to unnamed bowl sources.

The Fiesta Bowl, played in Tempe, Ariz., will offer each team as much as $2.6 million, including $200,000 in travel costs. The Fiesta Bowl is considering guaranteeing the money even if one of the teams loses a game after this weekend.

Bruce Skinner, executive director of the Fiesta Bowl, said it appeared that the Fiesta and Citrus were the top contenders for a Penn State-Miami matchup.

Red Raiders aim for 4th SWC win

Texas Tech plays at TCU

The Texas Tech Red Raiders will aim to up their Southwest Conference record to 4-2 Saturday when they play at TCU at 2 p.m., at Amon Carter Stadium in Fort Worth.

Last year, Texas Tech walloped TCU 63-7 in Lubbock, in a game that quarterback Billy Joe Tolliver made his starting debut. Tolliver set a conference record with 422 yards passing in that game.

Tolliver completed 26 of 43 passes for five touchdowns, and the Red Raiders totaled 699 yards in offense. Texas Tech edged Texas 23-21 last week, and TCU scored a 30-14 victory over Houston. TCU is 1-4 in the Southwest Conference.

With 1:15 left in last week's game between Texas Tech and Texas, the Red Raiders' Brad Hastings and Desmond Royal stopped Texas quarterback Bret Stafford for no gain in a fourth-and-three play at midfield.

"The last thing I wanted to see was Jeff Ward get a chance at another game-winning field goal," Texas Tech Coach David McWilliams said.

The Red Raiders' punt return man, Tyrone Thurman, set a school record with a 96-yard return for a touchdown, the second longest punt return in Southwest Conference history. Scott Segrist kicked three field goals for the Red Raiders.

About the win over Texas, McWilliams said, "I maintained myself pretty good until I got into the locker room after the game and the team gave me the game ball. It got to me."

"This team has learned it can't be rattled. I knew our players would stick together and win it, but more importantly, they knew it, too."

McWilliams, speaking about the increase in confidence in team members and the rest of the season, said, "Our players have the confidence they can play with anybody. We've talked all season that we can't be an up-and-down team. We are playing on a level now where we wanted to be but now it's important we raise that level."

"We can't accomplish all our goals in one week. Beating Texas was great, but a single thing won't accomplish any of our goals. It will take all 11 games to accomplish what we want so we can't rest on just one game. There will be more pressure and excitement now in our season but that's what we wanted. We want each game to be extra special."

TCU gained a 14-0 lead in the third quarter over Houston and then came up with six Houston turnovers the rest of the way in posting the 30-14 win. TCU intercepted three passes and blocked a Houston punt.

Falanda Newton returned one of the interceptions 85 yards for a touchdown, setting a school record for the TCU Horned Frogs.

TCU has six underclassmen who each have had 100-yard rushing games. They are sophomore fullback Roscoe Tatum, junior halfback Tony Jeffery, sophomore halfback Bobby Davis, quarterbacks Scott Ankrom and David Rascoe, and redshirted

Two other TCU players have come close—freshman Tommy Palmer with 86 yards against Rice and freshman Tony Darthard with 79 yards against Arkansas. Sophomore Scott Bednarski had 62 yards rushing against SMU.

McWilliams said about TCU, "They are a dangerous team who will be high after beating Houston last week. They are very explosive offensively and their younger players are starting to reach the point in the season where they have gotten the experience to mature."

"It would be a horrible mistake to go down to Fort Worth and think we would have an easy time."

TCU Coach Jim Wacker said, "Is this ever going to be an exciting week? Maybe we can find a little redemption from last year's nightmare. I know one thing, David McWilliams and his staff, hey, they're doing a great job in Lubbock this year."

"First, they go up in the hills and shut down a great Arkansas team. They, they enjoy a super win last Saturday against Texas. Texas Tech is playing 'lights out' football."

Texas Tech averaged more than 49 pass attempts per game for its first five games of the season, but in its last three games, has averaged 27 passes per game. The rushing yards per game was 134 in the first five games and 211 in the last three games.

"When the defense starts dropping people back to help double cover, we have to be able to run the football. We went to the running game almost completely in the third quarter against Texas and were able to expand our lead," said McWilliams.

Seaver, four others file for free agency

NEW YORK (AP) — Tom Seaver has filed for free agency, although he will probably be pitching again for the Boston Red Sox next season.

Seaver and Boston catcher Rich Gedman, designated hitters Dave Kingman of Oakland and Cliff Johnson of Toronto and California infielder Rick Burleson declared free agency Wednesday.

A total of 51 players have filed for free agency. The deadline for filing is midnight Nov. 11.

Seaver, who turns 42 this month, was acquired by Boston from the Chicago White Sox in a trade June 29. He had a 7-13 record last season, including a 5-7 mark with Boston.

The Red Sox did not exercise their option on Seaver for the 1987 season, in which he would have been paid $1,125,000 under his original contract. Instead, Seaver's lawyer, Bob Lawrence, and Boston General Manager Lou Gorman worked out an amendment to his contract that allowed Seaver to file for free agency and permits the Red Sox to sign him at any time.

Tradition transcends Thanksgiving, Christmas for many hunters

White-tailed deer season opens Saturday

By RAY SASSER

Dallas Morning News
 FREER, Texas (AP) — The town of Freer is a dusty little place, a brush-country dot on the map about 100 miles south of San Antonio in Duval County.

Unemployment runs through this part of the state like an August brush fire, and drought is almost as certain as death and taxes.

But for Freer and a hundred other rural Texas towns, fortunately, there is some relief at the opening of white-tailed deer season on Nov. 8, Lone Star deer season being a tradition that, for many, transcends Christmas, Thanksgiving and the Fourth of July.

"When deer season finally arrives, everybody around here is smiling," says Leonel Garza, a Freer businessman who used the appeal of the whitetail to parlay a pair of dusty gas pumps and a grease rack into a multifaceted business called "Muy Grande Village."

Muy grande is, of course, Spanish for "very big," and in the language of Texas deer hunting it is synonymous with trophy whitetail buck. Garza's Muy Grande Contest began in 1965 and has grown to become one of the state's largest deer contests.

"I started the contest because I had a service station and nobody would trade with me," says Garza. "That first year I gave my personal wristwatch to the hunter who brought in the biggest buck."

Last year, the Muy Grande contest had 5,113 entries and offered about $10,000 in merchandise prizes. "It gets bigger every year," Garza says. "Freer, like much of Texas, is having hard times. Unemployment is 22 to 30 percent. The whole town of Freer benefits from deer hunting."

In Seguin, between Austin and San Antonio, the town's hunting festivities are rightly called "Buck Fever Night."

"We've always gotten involved in projects for golf, football, soccer, and all the various other sports," says Tuddy Deitz of Seguin's ABC Bank, the sponsors of Buck Fever Night. "Last year we decided to sponsor something for the hunters and it has far surpassed anything else we've ever done."

"The response was so great we couldn't fit everybody into the (700-seat) coliseum, so we had Buck Fever on two successive nights this year and drew about 1,200 people."

Buck fever was a mysterious, if not well-timed malady. Its symptoms were even serious enough to keep workers off their jobs in the days when the season opened the same date every year, which was usually a work day. Rural schools often scheduled holidays for opening day.

In the late 1960s, the Texas Parks and Wildlife Commission succumbed to pressure to set the opening of deer season — and most other hunting seasons — on Saturdays.

"Deer hunting really is a Texas tradition," says Horace Gore, the homespun leader of TP&W's white-tailed deer program. "It's also a big business. Texas A&M did a study a couple of years ago that indicated deer hunters spend about $100 million per year in lease fees alone. Add up all the other expenses involved in hunting, and deer hunters probably put $250 million or so per year, cash money, into the Texas economy."

Unlike many other states that have open lands on which sportmen can hunt for free, virtually all the quality Texas deer range is private property.

State law says the game belongs to the people of Texas but the division of land is considerably less equitable. What most Texas hunters wind up doing is paying a lease fee, or trespass fee, to hunt their deer on someone else's property. That fee may range from $100 to several thousand dollars.

"About 50 percent of the Texas white-tailed deer occur in Central Texas," says Gore. "That's also where about 50 percent of the hunting takes place. The second most important geographic region is the piney woods of East Texas. The brush country of South Texas is third. Two hundred thirty-six of the state's 254 counties have some kind of deer season."

By a long shot, Texas Texas has more deer than any other state, its herd being estimated at 3.7 million animals. Hunters take about 10 percent of the deer each year, but Gore and other biologists would like to see that harvest at about 20 percent.

"There are too many deer on a lot of the Texas range," notes Gore.

"The bag limit is lenient enough to allow enough deer to be killed. Under the present system, a hunter can legally take as many as four deer, but very few of them kill more than one."

"What we have is a situation where a few hunters will lease a sizeable piece of property for the entire season and not hunt more than two weeks. We did a survey in the eastern Hill Country that showed the average 1,000-acre lease supported 10 hunters. Those 10 hunters, on the average, killed nine deer a year — six bucks and three does."

"Now, most 1,000-acre places in that part of the state support 80 to 90 deer, so the potential is there for a lot more hunting recreation. I suspect there are 200,000 to 300,000 hunters in Texas who simply don't have a place to hunt. It's going to be up to landowners to solve the situation, maybe by leasing their property for half the season to two different groups of hunters."

The prognosis for this year's deer season?

Good news and bad. Due to abundant early summer and fall rains, the animals are in excellent condition although the hunting may be slow.

"The more rain and mild weather we get this time of the year, the more food the deer have and the less they move around," says Gore. "It's apt to be a little slow — good for the deer but bad for the hunters."

For most of Texas' 550,000 deer hunters, their season is an opportunity to trade the pressures of modern life for a simpler set of problems, to spend some time watching sunrises and sunsets, maybe to get a shot at a deer.

"No matter how I'm feeling when deer season rolls around, I always feel better when I get to the deer camp," says Jim Smith of Groves.

Smith has been hunting the same Mason County deer lease for 27 years. Now, he says, "It feels like home."

YMCA sets 'Turkey Smash' volleyball tournament

The first annual "YMCA Turkey Smash Volleyball Tournament" has been scheduled for Nov. 13, 15 and 16 at the Hereford and Vicinity YMCA.

The tournament will have four divisions, and will include consolation brackets.

The starting times for the first tournament matches of each day are: 6:15 p.m. on Thursday, Nov. 13; 4:40 p.m. on Saturday, Nov. 15; and 1:20 p.m. on Sunday, Nov. 16.

The four divisions will be co-ed "A," co-ed "B," open men's, and open women's. If not enough co-ed teams, a minimum of six, enter the tournament, all teams will be put in an open division.

Entry fee is $25 per team. Entry deadline is Tuesday, Nov. 11. No matches will be played on Friday, Nov. 14, because of the high school football game between Hereford and Borger at Whiteface Stadium.

For more information on the volleyball tournament, contact the YMCA at 364-6990.

Astros' Lanier receives another managerial honor

HOUSTON (AP) — When Hal Lanier became the manager of the Houston Astros, he knew some people expected the team "to lose 100 games" this season.

Instead, the Astros won nearly 100 and became the National League West champions. And on Wednesday, Lanier became the first rookie to be named the NL Manager of the Year.

"It was a great year for the team, and a great year for me," he said.

Lanier received the award one day before he was to start a belated honeymoon to Fiji. He and his wife, Mary, were married in the spring.

Lanier received 19 of a possible 24 first-place votes in balloting by the Baseball Writers Association of America. Davey Johnson, who managed the World Series champion New York Mets to a victory over the Astros in the NL playoffs, was second with three first-place votes. Roger Craig of the San Francisco Giants got the two other first-place votes and finished third.

The voting by two writers in each league city was done before the playoffs. Five points were awarded for a first-place vote, three points for second and one point for third.

Lanier finished with 108 points to 62 for Johnson, 42 for Craig, three for John Felske of the Philadelphia Phillies and one for Jim Leyland of the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Lanier had been a coach for St. Louis for five years before Houston hired him after the 1985 season, one in which the Cardinals used pitching and an aggressive style to win the NL pennant. Lanier took over a Houston team that in 1985 finished tied for third in the division with an 83-79 record, 12 games behind the champion Los Angeles Dodgers.

"No one picked us to do well. People were saying we would finish in fifth place and lose 100 games," Lanier said.

But the Astros, with a style similar to what Lanier had seen in St. Louis, went on to a 96-66 record, the second-highest victory total in the major leagues. Houston finished 10 games ahead of runner-up Cincinnati and won its second division championship.

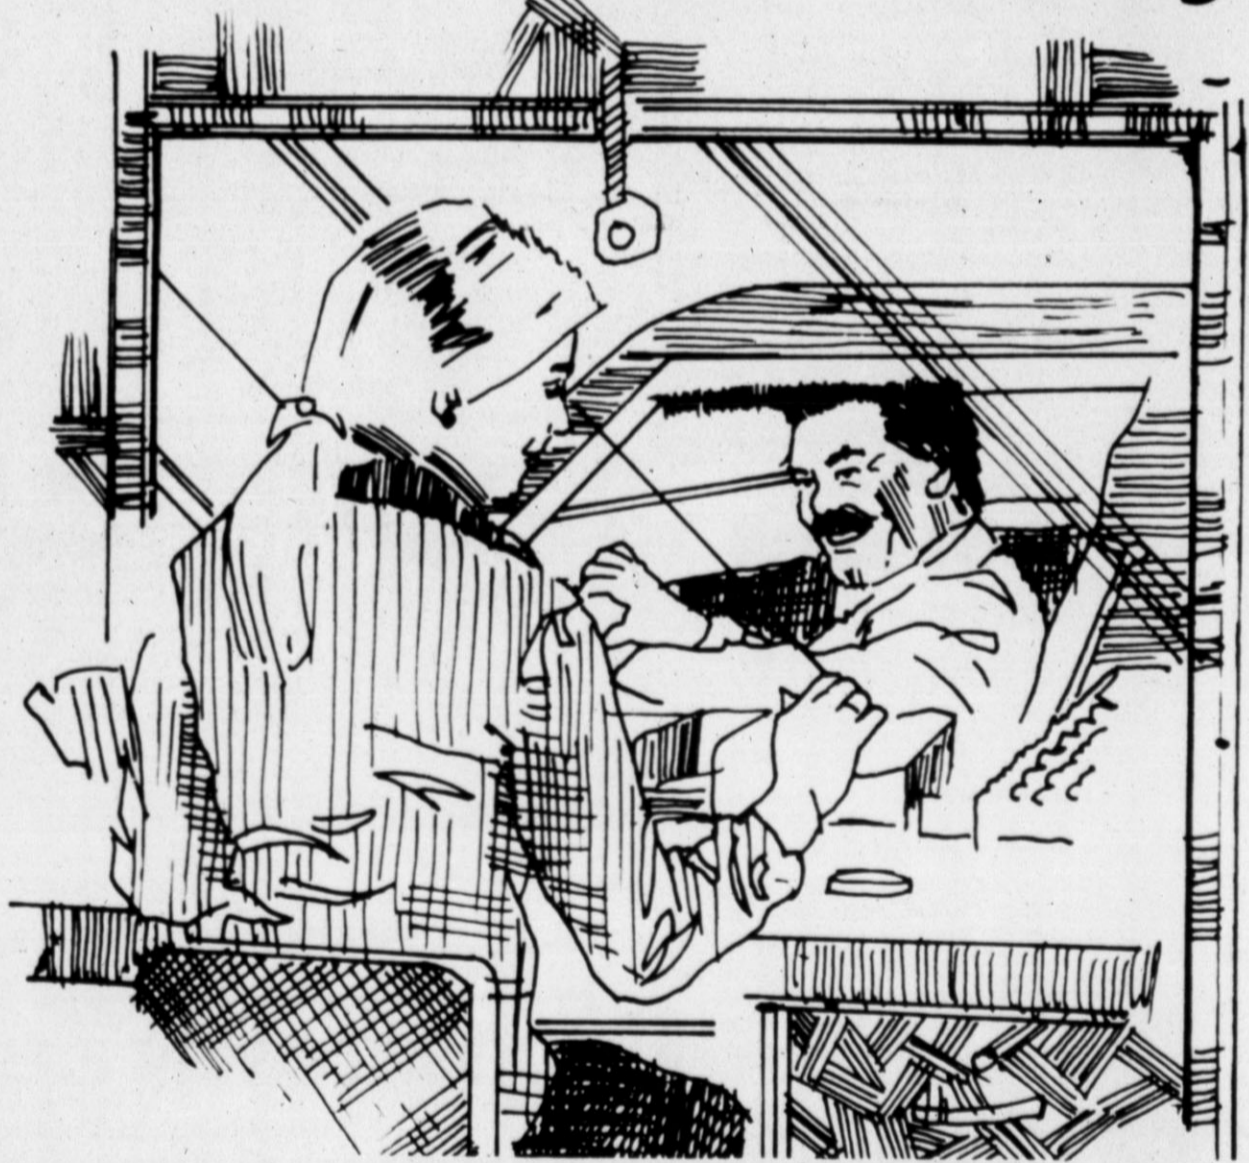

The Astros lost to the Mets in six games in the closely contested playoffs, with the final game going 16 innings.

Lanier said his biggest contribution to the Astros may have come off the field.

"I think I helped bring a winning attitude," he said. "The ballclub felt it was a good ballclub, but the desire to win this year seemed to be more than it had in the past."

Last week, Lanier was named Associated Press Manager of the Year in nationwide balloting by sports writers and broadcasters. Earlier this week, Boston's John McNamara was named American League Manager of the Year by the BBWAA.

DR. GOTT Some doctors just don't listen

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I began to lose my hair, and also became impotent. Doctors told me that it was all in my head and that I needed a psychiatrist, that it was caused by a problem between my wife and me, etc. Then I found out that the medication I was taking was the culprit. Why don't doctors believe their patients?

DEAR READER — This is a good question. The answer depends on how far you want to generalize about the medical profession. Some doctors simply don't listen to their patients; these practitioners are not good doctors, in my opinion. Nonetheless, many perfectly capable physicians sometimes don't listen to their patients. There are many reasons for this: I suppose they all boil down to the fact that doctors are human and make misjudgments. Good doctors who sometimes fail to listen carefully to their patients usually regret their lapses. What may have seemed to be a straightforward case of imagined illness suddenly becomes an unusual disease: (that the doctor didn't think of) or a side effect of medication (that the doctor didn't know of or forgot about).

I believe that the prudent practitioner must always assume that a patient's complaints are bona fide and real. If the doctor is unable to discover an appropriate cause of the complaints, he or she has the responsibility of referring the patient to another doctor. This is why there are specialists — physicians and surgeons who are trained in dealing with specific diseases or specific organ systems.

As a general rule, doctors try to do a good job and provide service. Physicians who are not comfortable listening to their patients (and giving them the benefit of the doubt) probably should seek other lines of work. Patients could help them with that decision by making tracks to the kind of doctor who does listen.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Does having a tubal ligation have any effect on weight gain?

DEAR READER — No. Weight gain after gynecological surgery is almost always due to diet. The woman consumes more calories than she burns up.

To give you more information, I'm sending you a free copy of my new Health Report, WEIGHT CONTROL THROUGH CALORIE CONTROL, which offers healthy tips on weight loss, diet and exercise. Others who would like a copy should send $1 and their name and address to P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT — A recent test showed that my urine had a urobilinogen level of 8, a small amount of bilirubin and a specific gravity of 1.030. All other values were normal. Is this something I should investigate?

DEAR READER — Yes, you should. There are traces of bile in your urine, which could indicate liver blockage or liver disease. In my opinion, you need a thorough medical examination and blood tests. Ask your doctor's opinion about this.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I've been diagnosed as having mixed connective-tissue disease, and I find that it's almost impossible to get any information about it. Could you tell me something about this strange disease?

DEAR READER — Connective tissue is tissue that supports and joins body parts together. Connective tissue disease can affect any of the supporting structures in the body. Inflammatory arthritis, lupus, scleroderma, eye disease, muscle and bone abnormalities and heart ailments are common manifestations of connective-tissue disease.

To a large degree, the treatment of your disease depends on its severity and which organs are affected. In general, some connective-tissue diseases are untreatable; others can be treated with medicine, such as cortisone.

I believe that your own doctor is your most reliable source of information. Ask him or her to give you a thorough explanation of your particular condition.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Can a person live without sleeping? If one doesn't get enough sleep, what parts of the body are harmed?

DEAR READER — People cannot live without sleeping. Sleep deprivation causes brain malfunction, poor judgment, hallucinations and altered behavior, as well as just plain fatigue. Although there appears to be no hard-and-fast rule about how much sleep a person needs, most people require an average of six to eight hours per day in order to function normally.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Somewhere I read that if a child has polio, she gives immunization to any children born to her. Is this true? I had it in 1918 and have four girls.

DEAR READER — A mother's immune proteins are passed on to her newborn children. However, the protection lasts only a few weeks at best. The mother's gift of temporary immunity is short-lived; the baby must develop its own permanent immunity to various diseases by experiencing the natural infection or by being immunized with vaccines.

I might add that babies are susceptible to certain infections that ordinarily do not cause serious adult disease. In addition, mothers who are carriers of some diseases (or who have only partial immunity to them) can infect their babies during the birth process or immediately thereafter.

Reagan facing confrontation with Democrats over political agenda

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democrats, savoring a return to dominance in Congress, are moving swiftly toward a confrontation with President Reagan over who will set the nation's agenda leading up to the 1988 presidential election.

Trade legislation was at the top of the list of jubilant Democrats as they began to set priorities Wednesday for their new Senate majority.

"I can say it all in four words: The Democrats are back," exulted

Democratic Party chairman Paul G. Kirk Jr.

While most of the early attention was focused on national and gubernatorial elections, Democrats also strengthened their grip on state legislatures across the land — a development that could prove crucial in the congressional redistricting squabbles that will follow the 1990 census.

According to the National Conference of State Legislatures,

Democrats will occupy at least 4,479 of the 6,461 legislative seats nationwide, a gain of at least 187.

With some outcomes still subject to change, Democrats will control at least one chamber in at least 40 states — and both chambers in as many as 29. They now control both chambers in 26 states.

So far as congressional politics is concerned, Senate Democratic leader Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia pledged to try to cooperate with the Republican president, but also sent a clear signal of likely confrontations to come.

"I would hope that the president would read the message that was sent by the American people," he said. "And that message is: 'Look, your economic policies have not worked in so many instances.'"

The president, however, told political aides at the White House that he saw a different message in the election returns.

"the winning choice"

Of medical advances

Chaplains adapt to brave new world

HOUSTON (AP) — In a day of technological breakthroughs, hospital chaplains say they are also journeying through the medical frontier.

The modern hospital chaplain no longer can be content solely to reach out and lend comfort to people suffering in illness, injury and sorrow. Houston chaplains say they have become ethicists, too, offering the insight and values that religion gives to complex medical dilemmas.

"We are having to help people learn how to make choices," said Chaplain Tom Cole, director of pastoral care for Memorial Hospital System. The choices are excruciatingly difficult.

How long does a wife keep her comatose husband alive with a respirator or other life support systems, when there is no hope for a recovery? Does advanced medical technology only go to people who are able to foot the bill through their own wealth or insurance coverage? How does one choose who should receive organ transplants when there aren't enough donors to meet the demand?

Today's chaplains are trying to transfer their seminary training in ethics to the complexities of biomedical ethics, a burgeoning field spawned by advancing medical technology in the past decade.

Three of Houston's veteran chaplains reflected on how dramatically medical technology has changed their professions.

They say there aren't clear-cut, simple solutions to complex problems posed by technology. But they believe religious values can play an important part in helping medical professionals and ultimately patients and their loved ones to make important decisions.

"The only place we look at life beyond this life is in the realm of religion," said Chaplain Julian Byrd, director of pastoral care and education at Hermann Hospital. The long-range dimension of religion helps to balance the tensions between quality and quantity of life in the here-and-now, said Byrd, a United Methodist minister.

Chaplains help communicate these religious values by being part of hospital ethics committees, which include lawyers, administrators, doctors, nurses and other health professionals. Byrd, for example, is chairman of Hermann Hospital's ethics committee.

A chaplain adds the dimension of a "theistic ethic" to the competing value of a "humanistic ethic," said Cole, a Southern Baptist. The former evaluates life as a gift of God; the latter as a commodity, Cole says.

"The chaplain is going to hold out for some means for everyone to be cared for, not to put people on a scale," he said.

The reality, however, is that "we do know that we do have to pick and choose," Cole said. "But chaplains can help the medical world push toward the ultimate goal that all people will receive the medical care that they need."

Chaplain Elton L. Stephenson of Methodist Hospital recalled the early days of organ transplants in Houston.

In the late 1960s at Methodist Hospital, the heart was removed from a young boy who was "brain dead." But his heart was still beating before the surgery.

"Our nurses were all uptight," Stephenson recalled. They wondered if the boy still had a chance for recovery. A neurologist assured Stephenson that there was no chance the boy would recover so that his brain would become active.

Although chaplains have a role in decision-making, the final decisions are made by doctors, said Stephenson, who supervises two chaplains at Methodist Hospital. Chaplains must resist the temptation to consider they are "pseudo-experts" on medicine, psychology or other disciplines outside of religion. Stephenson said chaplains must be ready to tell patients "Ask your doctor" about medical questions.

Stephenson, 65, a United Methodist minister, said he has been a chaplain at Methodist Hospital for 35 years, a longer tenure than any other current chaplain in Houston. Although advancing medical procedures and technology have brought major changes to the chaplain's role, the basic thrust of the work remains the same. That purpose is to show an interest in patients: to console and comfort them during traumatic times. That means putting patients' interests first, and trying to meet their needs, Stephenson said. Those actions range from making sure patients get the little things they need from the store to praying with them for recovery. About half the patients he visits want a chaplain to pray with them.

"They still feel like they can trust a minister," Stephenson said. "They seem to get some comfort out of the fact that the minister is there to help them in the midst of the decision-making."

One-fourth of children live with only one parent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Single parents — mostly women — now head more than one out of every four families with children, according to a new Census Bureau study which also found that a majority of black families have only one parent.

Single parents accounted for 26 percent of all family groups with children under 18 years old in 1985, a proportion twice as large as in 1970, the Bureau said.

Single-parent families increased 27 percent between 1980 and 1985. Even though that rate was down considerably from the 49 percent jump in single-parent families that occurred between 1970 and 1975, the Bureau considers the growth "one of the most significant changes in family composition over the past 15 years."

Divorce, separation and widowhood are the leading factors in creating these families, the Bureau said, but, "The proportion of single parents who are mothers who have never been married has increased dramatically."

Dr. Harriet P. McAdoo of Howard University in Washington pointed out that young people postponing marriage, and the growing divorce rate, are helping create more one-parent families.

As a result, "Children are being raised by their mothers for a significant number of years of their lives," said McAdoo, a professor in the university's Department of Social Work.

In addition to the number of divorces and separated women, there is a large number of out-of-wedlock pregnancies among both black and white women, she said in a telephone interview.

That was borne out by a separate Census Bureau report on fertility issued last June, which found 20.2 percent of white births and 74.5 percent among blacks last year were out-of-wedlock.

A variety of reasons were cited at the time, including the lessening stigma in recent years for women who have children on their own.

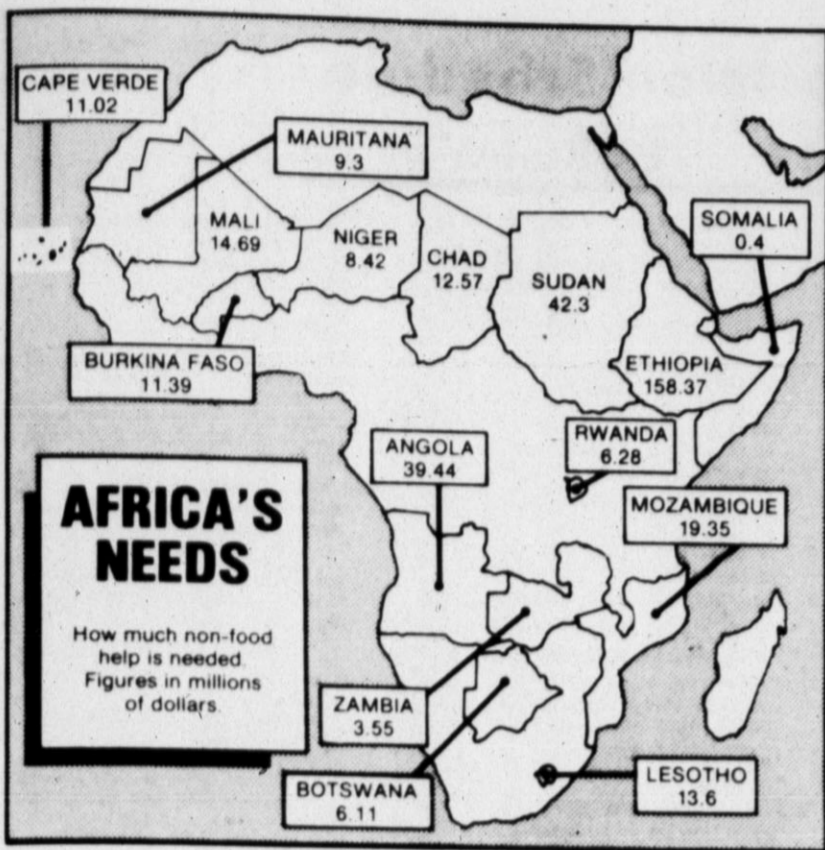

Researchers at The Urban Institute suggested that young women are no longer rushing into wedlock once they become pregnant, but are giving consideration to their future — including whether the father is good husband material and how marriage will affect their education and economic outlook.

The new report, "Household and Family Characteristics: March 1985," found that of 33.4 million family groups with children, 8.8 million — 26.3 percent — were headed by a single parent.

That's up from 12.9 percent single-parent families in 1970.

Some 60.1 percent of black families with children were maintained by a single parent, the study said, up from 35.7 percent in 1970. For whites, 20.8 percent had one parent, more than double the 10.1 percent of 1970.

The overwhelming majority of single-parent families are headed by women, accounting for 4.9 million of the 5.7 million white single-parent families, and 2.6 million of the 2.8 million black single-parent family groups.

Seminary president urges Baptists to stop feuding

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — A seminary president urged Texas Baptists on Wednesday to stop feuding and to start solving challenges facing the denomination.

Russell Dilday, president of Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary in Fort Worth, said Baptists should put aside all "the turmoil and divided fellowships of the past and look to the future."

Dilday gave the closing speech at the Texas Baptist General Convention.

Nearly 3,000 delegates attended the convention, which focused on the continuing conflict between fundamentalist conservatives and moderates.

"There has been a tremendous loss of trust that has immersed us in anxiety and fear," Dilday said. "Our students are confused, our attention is improperly focused and our people are discouraged. There is a yearning to look forward to new challenges and to leave the negative behind."

Also Wednesday, a Baptist official said Christians should give support to victims of AIDS, or acquired immunity deficiency syndrome. The disease destroys the body's ability to resist infections.

Phil Strickland of the Texas Baptist Christian Life Commission said AIDS victims are lonely and afraid. They should not be quarantined. Instead, he said, Christians should give counseling, emotional support and friendship to the victims and their families.

NOTICE OF PROPOSED REDUCTION IN AT&T's TEXAS RATES

The Public Utility Commission of the state of Texas has entered orders in two recent cases that would substantially reduce the charges which AT&T pays to the state's local telephone companies and which could allow AT&T to reduce prices for most of AT&T's customers on calls placed within the state of Texas.

The total amount of the reduction to AT&T's customers is expected to be between $115.3 million and $120.6 million. This is in addition to the $19.8 million reduction in AT&T's Texas basic long distance prices that went into effect on March 1, 1986 and is in addition to the approximately $2 billion in AT&T interstate price reductions that took effect earlier this year.

If the changes are approved, all of AT&T's direct dialed long distance, directory assistance, WATS and 800 service customers would be affected, and would experience a decrease in their prices for these services when calling within the state of Texas. The following tables show the anticipated impact of the changes on AT&T customers by service category:

Class of Service	Approximate Overall % Reduction	Approximate Overall Dollar Reduction (in millions)
Long Distance	9.2	$ 68.4
Directory Assistance	20.0	1.0
WATS	29.1	29.7
800	19.9	21.5

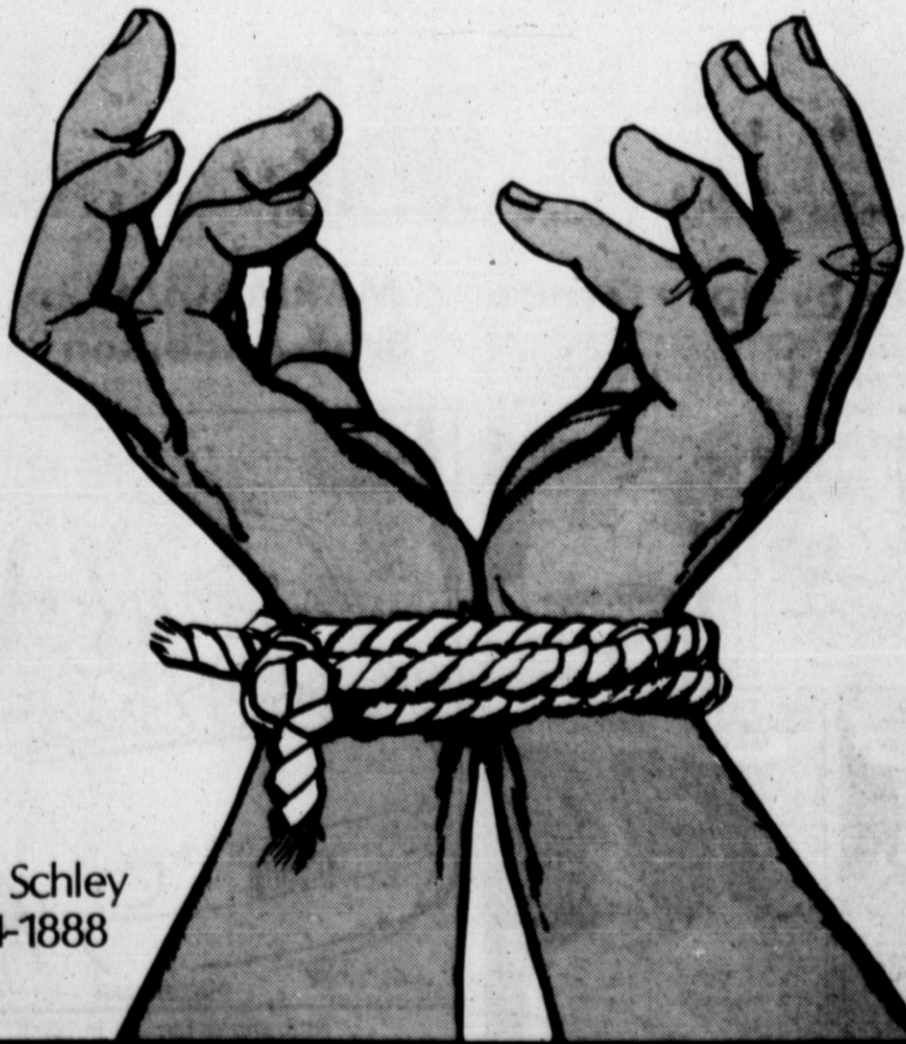

The rate reductions are presently anticipated to occur in two phases on or about October 22, 1986 and November 12, 1986. The matter has been assigned as Docket Nos. 6926 and 7113. Persons who wish to intervene or otherwise participate in these proceedings should notify the Commission as soon as possible. A request to intervene or participate or for further information should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Blvd., Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757. Further information also may be obtained by calling the Public Utility Commission Consumer Affairs Division at (512) 458-0223 or (512) 458-0227 or (512) 458-0221 teletypewriter for the deaf. A complete copy of the tariffs reflecting the potential rate reductions will be on file with the Commission on or before October 23, 1986.

Boxleitner back in grubby western attire

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Bruce Boxleitner shed the fancy secret agent threads of his television series for worn, dusty western duds in the film version of Louis L'Amour's novel "Down the Long Hills."

"I never had to wash my wardrobe," he said. "I could spill my lunch on it and make it look better. All I cleaned was my long underwear."

Director Burt Kennedy picked the wardrobe for the movie on the Disney Channel.

"It looked like it was right out of a John Wayne movie," said Boxleitner. "Burt fixed the hat so that it looked like a cavalry hat. I had the bib shirt and the suspenders."

Boxleitner, sitting in his motor home dressing room at the Whiteland Air Park in the San Fernando Valley, where he was filming an airplane stunt scene for CBS' "Scarecrow and Mrs. King," was nattily attired in a blue pin-stripe suit.

He recalled that he had once met

Wayne. "He told me to do a simple story," Boxleitner said. "People were getting too many psychological hangups in the Westens."

Boxleitner's first series was ABC's "How the West Was Won," based on the 1963 blockbuster movie that had Wayne among its all-star cast. Boxleitner met his wife, Kathryn Holcomb, when she played his sister on the show.

He also starred in "Wild Times," twice appeared with Kenny Rogers in "The Gambler" and played Wyatt Earp in another TV movie.

"I love doing Westerns," he said. "When this came up, I said I wanted to do it. It was great to work with Burt Kennedy and Jack Elam again. I worked with both of them doing 'How the West Was Won.' I don't get much opportunity, because they make so few Westerns. But I may do another one next summer."

He turned the location shooting in Utah into a combination of work and vacation, accompanied by his wife and their two children, Sam, 6, and Lee, 7 months. The youngest son is named after his character, Lee Stetson, in "Scarecrow and Mrs. King."

"Down the Long Hills" will be shown on the Disney Channel beginning Saturday, Nov. 15. Boxleitner stars as a widowed father who searches for his son after a wagon train massacre. The boy and a young girl escape into the mountains on a red stallion that is being hunted by both Indians and some horse thieves.

Elam plays a mountain man who helps in the search. Bo Hopkins and Michael Wren play the horse thieves, Tom Brown is the son and Lisa Macfarlane is the girl. Don Shanks plays a Cheyenne warrior.

Archduke Ferdinand Maximilian of Austria-Hungary landed in 1864 in Vera Cruz, Mexico, to become emperor.

Oliva Dionne gave birth to quintuplets in 1934 in a farmhouse near Callender, Ontario.

Envoy acts on behalf of no government

LONDON (AP) — Anglican Church envoy Terry Waite, in a rare show of anger, said he does not represent any government in his efforts to free American and other hostages in Lebanon and that such speculation could cost him his life.

Waite, who helped win the release of American hostage David Jacobsen on Sunday, spoke to reporters at London's Heathrow Airport late Wednesday.

"The rumor and speculation of the last few days has made my own contacts a little nervous. It means there is a new vulnerability in the situation."

He commented on his return from Wiesbaden, West Germany, where he left Jacobsen and the freed hostage's family, reunited at an American military hospital. U.S. Air Force doctors said Wednesday that Jacobsen suffered no major medical problems from his 17 months in captivity and could leave whenever he wanted.

Waite said he had been waiting for word on prospects for further releases, but had none.

"Now the situation has changed. There has been so much speculation, a great deal of misinformation and various people cutting in for a variety of reasons that it has made the whole scene extremely complicated," he said.

Asked if he would return to Beirut, Waite said: "I am ready to go to Beirut if the signal comes that it is wise to do that or to an adjacent country if the signal comes that it is wise to do that."

Looking tired, the tall, bearded envoy of Archbishop of Canterbury

Robert Runcie added: "I need further information that may affect my return to Beirut. This is not a setback, it's the normal process. But I wish it had been different and we could have got a few more people out."

Waite has also been trying to win the release of other hostages, including Americans Terry Anderson, Associated Press chief Middle East correspondent, and Thomas Sutherland, acting dean of agriculture at the American University in Beirut. Anderson, 39, was kidnapped in March 1985 and Sutherland, 55, in June 1985.

Waite, normally patient and calm, angrily criticized some press speculation following Jacobsen's release.

"There are certain speculative comments now moving around that perhaps Mr. Waite is used by or closely associated with governments. All I can say to those people who write such speculative comments is: Realize that that sort of comment will cost me my life."

He declined to identify a specific report, simply saying it was one British editorial in particular.

Illustrating the danger to himself, he said: "When I was in Beirut last Christmas I was given 24 hours to leave the country and was told that if I did not do so I would be killed. I left within 24 hours and I returned on other occasions."

He said the press reports which angered him were "nothing more than speculation and deductions drawn from speculation. ... It is much more complicated than I have seen anyone analyze it yet."

Senator Bill Sarpalio Reports

HELMET LAW POSSIBLE

AUSTIN — At least once or twice a legislative session, there arises an issue that leads to one of the oldest debates in our democracy. How far can government intrude in the name of safety before it infringes on the basic liberties of the American people?

There's no pat answer to that question, we're afraid. No handy constitutional amendment or court decision clearly outlining the parameters of government intrusion. It instead is a question that can be answered only on an issue-by-issue basis, with the amount of intrusion constantly being weighed against the value of the safety being offered.

We cannot predict every instance in which the intrusion-versus-safety issue will be dredged up during the forthcoming legislative session, but we can promise you it will come up at least once — when we debate a bill to require all motorcycle riders to wear helmets while riding their motorcycles.

This indeed may prove the quintessential liberty-versus-safety issue. Motorcycle riders will argue they harm no one but themselves by riding without a helmet that no government intrusion is necessary to protect them from themselves.

Proponents of the proposed law will point out that motorcyclists who wear their helmets are being harmed, financially, by those who do not. As a higher percentage of Texans ride without helmets, proponents argue, a higher percentage of motorcycle riders will be injured or killed, hence higher insurance rates for all riders.

These very same riders will counter with statistics they believe prove helmets to be of limited safety value and to have little effect on insurance rates. They also will point out that there is little hue and cry from the helmeted riders to make their unprotected brethren wear helmets.

Naturally, the proponents in turn will hold tight, claiming the lives that undoubtedly would be saved by a helmet law more than justifies the government's right to make riders wear helmets.

Next year's helmet-law debate will be a classic because, unlike last year's mandatory seat-belt law debate, it will be pure, virtually unencumbered by worldly arguments.

A huge federal hammer hung over the seat-belt bill when it was approved by the Legislature because the Department of Transportation was threatening to require airbags in all automobiles if two-thirds of the nation's populace wasn't covered by a mandatory seat-belt law. Airbags, by the way, add an extra $1,000 to the price of a new car and cost several hundred dollars to replace after they've discharged.

There is no federal threat involved in the helmet law, just those who believe safety alone gives the government a little extra leeway and those who believe the government has no right protecting a person who is harming no one else but himself.

We said earlier that there are no hard-and-fast answers to the question. We know at least 1,000 lives have been saved by the seat belt law and consumers saved an added expense on their new automobiles. We can estimate a substantial number of lives probably would be saved by a helmet law. But, we do not know for sure whether government would be pushing too far by passing such a law.

Benjamin Franklin some 200 years ago came as close as anyone to answering the question when he said: "Those who would give up some essential liberty for a little temporary safety deserve neither liberty nor safety." Unfortunately, Franklin didn't tell us whether riding a motorcycle without a helmet constitutes an essential liberty.

We're reserving judgement until the full debate is laid before us in the Senate. In the meantime, though, let us know how you feel by writing us at P.O. Box 12068, Austin, Texas, 78711.

Falling Soviet creates fireball

By The Associated Press

A fireball that blazed "like a string of lights" across the West, sparking scores of calls to authorities from Texas to Utah and California, was a Soviet rocket booster disintegrating in the atmosphere, the Air Force says.

It "almost looked like a sparkler going down," San Bernardino County Sheriff's Deputy Fred Wegner in Needles, Calif., said of the bright object that also was seen Wednesday night in Texas, Arizona, Nevada and Utah.

"It appeared to have a smoke trail... When we first saw it, it was so big we figured it was right here over us," Wegner said, adding it "had a couple of lights in the front and lights showered out along the tail."

"The United States' space command at Cheyenne Mountain reports that a Soviet rocket body used to launch a satellite re-entered the earth's atmosphere at 9:11 p.m. tonight over the western United States," said Air Force Lt. Col. Chuck Wood at the North American Defense Command in Colorado Springs, Colo.

The craft, which NORAD had monitored, burned up on re-entry, he said. NORAD generally tracks such objects — among more than 6,000 it monitors in orbit — but cannot tell precisely when, and therefore where, they will come down.

"Ground and satellite systems all over the world had given indications that the rocket was due down this week," Wood said.

The rocket was launched Sept. 5, Wood said, but he did not know from where.

"It looked like 100 stars all falling together — it was moving very fast and appeared to be like a comet with bright debris falling off it," said Adrienne Berry at McCarran International Airport in Las Vegas, Nev.

"It was moving slow like a jet coming in for a landing, but not a real slow," said Greg Vergis of Las Vegas. "It was awfully pretty. It just held me there until I lost the view behind a building."

In 1953, Edmund Hillary of New Zealand and Sherpa Tenzing Norgay of Nepal became the first men to reach the top of Mount Everest.

The organization of American States, meeting in Washington in 1962, voted to condemn Britain's military effort to recapture the Falkland Islands from Argentina.

Joan of Arc was burned at the stake in 1431 in Rouen, France.

Christopher Columbus sailed from Spain in 1498 on his third visit to the New World.

South American Indians called the rubber tree cahuchu, which means weeping wood. The drops of oozing latex made them think of big white tears.

How to Prevent Accidents When Digging Near Underground Gas Lines

Natural gas is delivered through a system of underground piping. Some of these pipes might be located beneath the ground where your excavation work is to be done. Personal injuries and property damage can occur if the pipes are struck or disturbed by digging, drilling or blasting.

Before excavating, drilling or blasting, you or your contractor should thoroughly check the surrounding area to see if any gas pipeline warning signs are in or near the proposed work site.

Prevent an accident—call in advance

If any warning signs are nearby, call the number shown on the sign or contact the company at the number shown below—and indicate the county, township and section in which you will be working. Please call 48 hours in advance of any excavation operations; the phone line is in operation seven days a week, 24 hours a day. If we have pipelines near the area, we'll be happy to dispatch trained field personnel to mark or stake the facilities at no cost to you.

POLLY'S POINTERS Hardened erasers can be rescued

By Polly Fisher

DEAR POLLY — I use a lot of pencils, but have a problem with the erasers. They tend to go hard before I use them up. Then when you do try to use them, they smear instead of erase. Any suggestions to help solve this? — NORMA

DEAR NORMA — You should be able to restore those erasers by rubbing them lightly with coarse sandpaper. This should remove the hard, smooth surface and make them "erasable" once more. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — Some time ago, a reader asked for a recipe for peanut-butter cups. I have an easy recipe for these: Mix 1 cup creamy peanut butter, 2 cups powdered sugar and ½ cup melted butter. Form into little balls and refrigerate. Melt 1 package of chocolate almond bark. Put a little chocolate in the bottom of a petit-four cup, place a peanut butter ball in the cup on top of the chocolate, press slightly, then add a little more chocolate on top of the ball. This makes about 90 cups. You may also use a mixture of ½ package white almond bark, 3 ounces semi-sweet chocolate chips and 3 ounces sweet chocolate chips. — ELLA

DEAR ELLA — I'm glad your recipe reached us in time for Christmas. My only question is: Why almond bark? Are the nuts put into the cups along with the melted chocolate? I'd suggest that you could use a pound of any good quality milk chocolate or dark chocolate. In any case, the recipe sounds delicious! — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — Love your column! I held a handy hints party for several ladies. Each guest brought three handy hints along with a bag of the materials needed to demonstrate the hints. — MARIE

DEAR MARIE — And I love your hint party idea! What a great get-together. Your helpful Pointer earns you the Pointer of the Week award, a copy of my book, "Polly's Pointers: 1081 Helpful Hints for Making Everything Last Longer." Others who would like this book may order it for $6.50. Make check payable to POLLY'S POINTERS and send to POLLY'S POINTERS, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — Here's what I've found to be the best way to prepare fresh horseradish. I scrape it or peel it, cut it into small pieces, then put it into the blender with a little white vinegar and blend until finely grated. If kept for a long time in the refrigerator, this horseradish will turn dark. However, it will stay white and keep indefinitely if put in the freezer. — ROBERTA

DEAR POLLY — Do you want to know how to have some real nice hard-cooked eggs? Wrap them in foil and put them in the oven for twenty minutes. If you want to cook a dozen or more, put them in a pan in a cold oven and turn the heat to 350 degrees for 30 minutes. Try it — you will be surprised. — H.W.

DEAR H.W. — You're right, I was surprised — delightfully so! I baked a jumbo egg wrapped in foil at 350 degrees for about twenty minutes. I did not preheat the oven. The egg was nicely done with a very slightly soft center. Twenty-five to 30 minutes would produce a firmer center. It was the easiest egg I've ever hard-cooked. Of course, the energy needed to heat the oven is not really worthwhile for a single egg, but the trick is certainly worth remembering if you're already baking something else. And for doing a large quantity of eggs with no fuss and bother, this method is very useful. Many thanks. — POLLY

The sole thing that approaches the excitement of watching a chess match is an evening spent watching while the bread rises.

Approach tried on theories

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP)—The field of economics is moving into the laboratory, resulting in scientific experiments that can put theories to the test. "It's a new vision of economics," said Dr. John Kagel of the University of Houston. He and Dr. Raymond Battalio of Texas A&M University are among more than 100 scholars nationwide participating in the emerging new field of experimental economics. Kagel and Battalio participated Tuesday in the 24th Annual New Horizons in Science Briefing. The event, cosponsored by Texas A&M this year, brings journalists together with the nation's top researchers to discuss advances in science. "For the most part, economics has been a descriptive and theoretical science, but in recent years researchers have been seeking to put their study of market forces and economic behavior on a sounder scientific, or predictive, footing," Battalio said. "Experimental economics is breathing new life in the field and has already begun to produce some pragmatic results," Battalio said. Until about 10 years ago, nobody had tested Adam Smith's basic economic principle pertaining to equilibrium prices resulting from producers with the lowest costs and buyers who put the highest value on the items produced, Battalio added. "Since then, there have been over 100 experiments testing the theory, and sure enough they found Adam Smith was right," said Battalio, whose own research draws the same conclusion. Experiments have even shown that transactions take longer and the equilibrium prices tend to be higher in posted-price markets, where sellers list their prices and buyers take them or leave them, he said. Such experiments have helped in making policy decisions, he said, such as when the railroad companies petitioned the Department of Transportation to require

Woman's Health

WHAT IF I MISS MY PERIOD?

By Harry S. Jonas, M.D., President, The American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists

By the time most girls reach their 16th birthday, they will have begun to menstruate or have a monthly "period." With certain exceptions, this is something that will occur every 21 to 35 days until a woman reaches her 50s or so, and experiences menopause.

After a young girl has menstruated for a while, she will soon recognize when her period is due—either by counting the number of days if her period comes regularly, or by certain physical symptoms, such as tender breasts, mild cramping, and mood changes. However, once in a while, she may find that her period doesn't come.

Missing a period now and then is usually not serious. In young women who have just begun to menstruate, one period followed by several missed periods is not uncommon, because it takes the body time to ovulate or produce an egg on a regular basis. For someone with established periods, a missed period could be caused by a temporary hormonal imbalance brought on by an emotional upset, a sudden gain or loss in weight, or changes in lifestyle. Some women who exercise frequently and strenuously may miss a period or stop menstruating altogether.

Women on birth control pills may occasionally miss a period or have very little bleeding during their periods. This is perfectly normal, and is due to the levels of hormones in the pill.

Another common reason for missing periods is the approach of menopause. As the levels of estrogen start to decrease, many women will skip periods or have irregular periods.

Of course, one of the most obvious reasons for a missed period is pregnancy. If you have any of the other common symptoms of pregnancy, such as nausea, swollen breasts, fatigue, and frequent urination, you should have a pregnancy test.

If you have missed more than one period in a row, it is a good idea to let your doctor know. This is especially important if you have any abdominal pain—call your doctor immediately.

In most cases, missing a period once in a while is normal and you shouldn't worry, especially if the next period arrives on time with all the usual symptoms. However, if you are concerned, ask your doctor.

Single, free copies of "Menstruation and the Menstrual Cycle" (p-049) are available by sending a stamped, self-addressed, business size envelope along with the name of the booklet to: The American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists, Resource Center, 600 Maryland Ave., S.W., Washington, DC 20024.

Oil takes its toll on Democrats in Southwest

DALLAS (AP) — The economic misfortune of the oil patch translated into bad times at the polls for Democratic candidates in the Southwest, and Republicans, riding the tide of voter discontent, made one of their strongest showings in years.

Of nine gubernatorial and U.S. Senate races in the Southwest on Tuesday, Republicans waltzed away with six offices. Before Tuesday, the GOP held only two of the nine.

In the oil states — New Mexico, Texas, Oklahoma and Louisiana — the balance of power shifted almost as quickly as petroleum prices have plunged this year.

Republicans captured governors' mansions in Texas, Oklahoma and New Mexico, retained an Oklahoma Senate seat and narrowly lost a Louisiana Senate race. Before the balloting, Democrats controlled four of five.

"I think elections are frequently the result of economic forces," Bob Brischetto, director of the Southwest Voter Research Institute in San Antonio, Texas, said Wednesday. "If you look at the Republican governors now, they sort of sweep across the Southwest."

Democrats had tried to pin the region's downturn on President Reagan's opposition to an oil import fee, which could raise prices for domestic producers. Instead, analysts said, voters opted to try changing the guard as an economic remedy.

In 1982, while the state was in a recession, Democrat Mark White knocked Republican Bill Clements out of the Texas governor's office. Oil sold for $32 a barrel and unemployment stood at 7.9 percent.

Tuesday, with oil at $15 a barrel, unemployment in Texas up to 9 percent, and the economy even worse off, Clements tossed White out of Austin.

"The tough economic times played right into Clements' hands this time," Jack Martin, an Austin businessman and veteran political observer, told The Dallas Morning News after Clements won by a 53-46 margin.

In New Mexico, Garrey Carruthers recorded the largest victory in the state ever by a Republican gubernatorial candidate by pledging "a new beginning."

The state has had to tighten its fiscal belt because of the drop in oil revenue. And Democratic candidate Ray Powell was tagged with the baggage of incumbent Toney Anaya, who may not succeed himself.

Powell conceded Tuesday night that "New Mexicans want a change in state government and they are entitled to have it."

Republican Henry Bellmon, a former two-time senator, will take over the gubernatorial reins in Oklahoma after defeating Democrat David Walters in an acrimonious campaign in the oil-ravaged state.

Bellmon won with a plurality of 47 percent, to about 45 for Walters and nearly 8 percent for two independents. Walters urged his followers to support Bellmon. "Let's attack problems together," he said.

Freshman Republican Sen. Don Nickles won re-election with 54 percent of the vote, turning back seven-term Democratic Rep. James R. Jones.

In Louisiana, which has led the nation in unemployment at times this last year, 63 percent of the voters turned out to give Democratic Rep. John Breaux a Senate victory over strong Republican opposition, keeping the office held by Sen. Russell Long in Democratic hands.

Breaux, the only oil patch Democrat to win a major race, rode a traditional Louisiana Democratic tide of black and Cajun support to victory and immediately said that in Washington he'd work for an oil import fee.

Arkansas' incumbent Democratic governor and senator, Bill Clinton and Dale Bumpers, held on for re-election wins. Clinton, the first man since Orval Faubus to be given 10 years in the governor's mansion, beat Republican Frank White for the second time in three races between the two.

This election, Clinton said, "was a mandate for more schools, better jobs and a brighter future for our state. ... It's time for this state to pull together."

In Arizona, Republicans captured the governor's office being vacated by Democrat Bruce Babbitt, and the GOP made its best showing since the 1970s. Evan Mecham, an auto dealer, defeated Democrat Carolyn Warner and independent Bill Schulz with about 40 percent of the vote. Mecham will be the first Republican governor in Arizona in 12 years.

The Senate race to replace GOP elder statesman Barry Goldwater was won by former prisoner of war John McCain III, now a two-term congressman.
