DOE formally responds to WDIC request

By DEBE GRAVES
Staff Writer

Department of Energy officials today made a formal response to a request that they "moderate" relocation of personnel for the Site Characterization Project being conducted in Deaf Smith County as a part of a program to determine the location of the nation's first nuclear waste repository.

The request was made last week by Phil Neidzielski-Eichner of the Waste Deposit Impact Committee which represents six taxing entities in the area. DOE's Jeff Neff made a verbal response to the request last week and he and Robert Wunderlich, deputy manager for the salt repository project, have now filed a written response.

"In February, when the relocation was initiated, we announced that after the initial move of a small contingent to the Panhandle, we anticipated that about 50 people a month would relocate beginning in April," states the letter, which explains that the actual number of families relocating to the area has been smaller than initial projections.

Project statistics show 12 relocations in March, six in April, 16 in May and 21 in June for a total of 57. "Of these staff who have moved from Ohio, 13 are residents of Hereford," the letter states, "An additional 19 people who already resided in Hereford have been hired on the project."

Forecasts for the next five months are 30 relocations in July, 46 in August, 53 in September, 55 in October and 35 in November. "It is not possible to accurately predict how the staff will be distributed because the largest majority to still move are Battelle staff, many of whom have not yet been to the Panhandle," explains the letter.

The results of an earlier survey of residence preferences for Battelle staff indicate a 10 percent preference for Hereford, according to DOE. The 13 families who have moved to Hereford represents a 23 percent preference. "From the predictions, and the actual settlement patterns to date, we would estimate 10-20 percent of the project staff will reside in Hereford (37-74 families)," the letter states.

The letter continues with promises that DOE will provide WDIC and school systems with data about family size, number and ages of school children, and housing preferences for those choosing to make their home in Hereford.

Eichner responded to the letter with a statement of his own. "On June 18, 1987, the Department of Energy released the results of its residential preference survey of Battelle employees working on the Salt Repository Project. The numbers reflect a substantial interest in

DOE gets increase of funds

The Department of Energy will receive $80 million more in 1988 than in this year for its nuclear waste repository office, according to a report by the Amarillo Daily News today.

The DOE plans for the nuclear waste program ill cost $725 million. The additional $225 million will be requested in a supplemental appropriation bill next year.

Rep. Larry Combest said the committees are going to review the entire site selection contest, now not limiting to finances the battle against the dump site in Deaf Smith County.

Combest said that Rep. Morris Udall, chairman of the Interior Committee, has realized there is a problem and has publicly said their emay need to be a re-examination of the project.

The House Science and Technology Committee will study the issue as part of its job to annually reauthorize DOE.

WDIC council named, work to begin this month on listing priorities

By DEBE GRAVES
Staff Writer

The role of Waste Deposit Impact Committee is to protect the community's interests in relation to the DOE Repository Program, and part of that job, according to director Phil Niedzielski-Eichner, is the SCIC, Site Characterization Issues Council.

According to Eichner, the role of the SCIC will be to identify socioeconomic and geotechnical issues of community concern and establish recommended positions to the WDIC on priority issues of concern.

SCIC members will identify issues, collect information, develop and establish possible alternatives and make recommendations. The goal, according to Eichner, is for SCIC members to remain objective while participating in an active and constructive manner.

The socioeconomic study group will meet on June 30 to elect officers and begin ranking issues. The focus of this group will be potential impacts on areas related to social, service delivery (such as utilities and schools), quality of life, economics and fiscal (such as revenue and expenditures).

The geotechnical study group will meet on July 9 for election of officers and an overview of elements of the site characterization process. This group will focus on surface, subsurface, on and off site, geological, hydrological and shaft construction activities.

The efforts of the SCIC will be combined, in part, with initial study results of the Texas Nuclear Waste Programs Office which began impact assessment studies this week.

The Texas Advisory Commission on Intergovernmental Affairs (ACIR) is conducting studies for the state office. James Reed, socioeconomic issues manager of the Nuclear Waste Project for ACIR, was one of seven individuals conducting studies in Hereford this week. Reed stated, "We are coming into town with intent to see what is here and without performing any hypothesis of what we will find in terms of impacts. A fair summary of what we have heard this week is that people don't know what the impacts will be, there is an information gap."

Eichner, who will be combining some efforts with ACIR, stated, "We will gather baseline data and then try to make some projections which will provide lead time for taxing entities to make required changes."

He explained the data will be gathered and put through a series of "what ifs" concerning potential numbers of transferees who may choose to live in Hereford.

"We will say 'What if 20 people, or 40 people or 60 people move to town' and then we will try to make some projections so that services and quality of life will not be negatively impacted," Eichner said.

Reed, who spoke briefly to the SCIC groups, stated, "We have assembled a group of experts from a variety of fields and the common ground of experience in making impact assessments."

WDIC members believe that initial short term studies of the separate groups can be combined to determine issues which warrant long term studies.

The SCIC is formed of delegates appointed from six taxing entities located in the area chosen for site characterization studies for potential placement of a nuclear waste repository.

Each taxing entity, and the WDIC itself, named two members to each of two issues groups. The study groups are divided into geotechnical issues and socioeconomic issues.

Representing the City of Hereford on the geotechnical group are Arturo J. Gonzales and Ike Graves. For socioeconomic studies the city appointed Kathy Allison and Glen Phibbs.

Deaf Smith County appointees are Ruben Gutierrez and Paul Mason on geotechnical, and Bob Sims and Suzanne Stevens on socioeconomic.

Deaf Smith General Hospital appointed Joe Artho and Mike Brumley to study geotechnical, and Ralph Detten and Vance Devareaux on the socioeconomic group.

Hereford Independent School District appointees on geotechnical are Ken Glenn and Wayne Winget. Carl Kleuskens and Marc Williamson are the HISD appointees to study socioeconomic.

High Plains Underground Water Conservation District appointees are John Hays and R.D. Hicks, on geotechnical, and Helen Higgins and John Kriegshauser on socioeconomic.

Walcott Independent School District appointees for geotechnical are Tommy Brown and Bruce Coleman; its appointees for socioeconomic studies are Ted Eicke and Bobby Hammock.

WDIC appointees are Jay Eubanks and Tonya Kleuskens for geotechnical studies. WDIC made four appointments to the socioeconomic group, they are Gilbert Arellano, Homer Garrison, Margarita Perez and Cindy Simons.

Hope for compromise

Democrats pass budget

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress gave final approval to its $1 trillion fiscal 1988 budget opposed by President Reagan, but Democratic leaders are keeping the door open for a compromise with the White House.

"The president wants to cut the deficit," said Senate Budget Committee Chairman Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., as the Senate approved the budget 53-46 on Wednesday night.

"The Congress wants the same thing. I invite the president's cooperation."

The White House had no immediate comment on the final vote, but Reagan has made clear he won't cooperate if that means accepting a $19.3 billion tax increase — $64.3 billion over three years — that is the cornerstone of the Democrats' deficit-reduction plan.

Neither the Democratic budget nor the president's proposals reduce deficits nearly enough to live up to the targets in the Gramm-Rudman budget balancing law.

The budget is a guideline for Congress and doesn't require Reagan's signature. However, the president says he'll veto any taxes produced as a result of the budget, along with its domestic spending bills which he says would be too costly.

To counter the president's position, the Democratic budget ties a portion of military spending to tax increases as part of a strategy designed to force Reagan to the bargaining table.

The budget provides $286 billion for defense, $16 billion less than Reagan requested but still permitting Pentagon spending a modest inflation increase. However, if the president vetoes the tax package, which totals $64.3 billion over three years, the military budget would be frozen at $289 billion.

Truck Stop

A steep incline on the shoulder of the road during wet conditions may have caused this truck stop on Progressive Road between 15th Street and U.S. 60. Sheriff's deputies said the accident happened Wednesday around 10 p.m. No injuries were reported and the name of the driver was unavailable.

First step taken for impeachment

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements probably would never have been elected if his role in the Southern Methodist University football scandal had surfaced during the 1986 campaign, says a legislator who wants Clements impeached.

Rep. Paul Moreno, joined by Rep. Al Edwards, Wednesday filed a resolution calling for an impeachment investigation. It is the first step in the lengthy impeachment process.

"I feel that the governor deceived the voters of the state when he was seeking election. Had this thing come into being (during the 1986 campaign), Gov. Clements would not be Gov. Clements right now. He would probably be in jail," said Moreno, D-El Paso.

The resolution introduced by Moreno and Edwards, D-Houston, calls for a seven-member House committee to look into Clements' role in the SMU pay-for-players scandal and determine whether impeachment proceedings should be filed.

Clements has said he knew of improper payments to football players while he served as chairman of the SMU board before taking office in January. He has dismissed impeachment talk as political rhetoric.

It would take a majority vote of the Democratic-controlled House to create the special committee, which, in turn, could make recommendations to the House, which brings charges in impeachment proceedings.

The Senate then acts as a jury.

Reggie Bashur, Clements' press secretary, Wednesday said there is absolutely no foundation for impeachment.

"It's ridiculous. It's absurd. It's preposterous. It's a two-bit publicity stunt," he said of the Moreno-Edwards resolution.

Railroad barricade has specific rules

What are you supposed to do when the crossing gate is lowered at a railroad track intersection—if a train isn't coming?

Trying to beat the train will get you in trouble—either by citation or death. But, if no train is coming or if a law officer or railroad employee directs you, it is okay.

There have been some problems with this situation, according to Capt. Ted Langgood of the Hereford Police Department.

If the crossing arms come down and there is not an approaching train in the area, then the operator of the vehicle should stop and look both ways to be sure there is no danger before moving on. If there is no danger, then the driver may go around the barricade arms.

If the switch engine is working in the area and the bars come down, the driver has the responsibility to check and be sure there is no danger to lives or property by going around the barricade arms.

The only other time that vehicles are permitted to go around the arms, is when directed by a railroad employee or a law enforcement officer.

If a train is approaching in the general area when the driver goes around the barricade arms, it is considered an attempt to "beat the train" and a violation has occurred.

Have a blast—safely

Fireworks went on sale Wednesday, starting an explosive season of fun and fires.

Jay Spain, city fire marshal, said calls to his department will increase through July 4th due to the explosives. The rain Wednesday night dampened dry weeds and grass, but all hazards of fire and safety weren't washed away.

When fireworks are used properly, Spain doesn't mind them. "I don't like what they cause—fires and injuries—because people are careless with them," he says.

Just some common sense needs to be used when displaying fireworks, Spain says, to prevent damage and stay within the law.

It's illegal to shoot fireworks in the city limits. That law helps prevent home and alley fires. It only takes a spark on the right material to cause a big blaze.

If shooting in the county, stay away from tall grasses and weeds for the same reason. Get into an open area so sparks don't hit houses or out-buildings.

Always have an adult present for the fireworks show. Small children should never be allowed to handle the fireworks.

Teens should be under careful eye, too. Dad and Mom can be held liable for damages done by a youth using fireworks improperly. Spain said insurance companies are strict on claims caused by fireworks.

Personal injury is a concern, also. According to the Texas Safety Association, more than 8,000 persons are treated annually in emergency rooms for fireworks related injuries. The National Safety Council says about 46 percent of the fireworks related injuries occur among children under 14.

Injuries which can be caused by fireworks include second and third degree burns, partial or total loss of sight, lacerations and fractures.

While tankers head to gulf

Democrats build opposition

WASHINGTON (AP) — As a trio of U.S. warships heads for the Persian Gulf to back up President Reagan's pledge to protect Kuwaiti tankers, congressional critics are trying to agree on some type of action to oppose or delay the plan.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee was meeting today to discuss, and possibly vote on, a bill that would delay Reagan's plan until after Congress approves it.

Democrats, who control both the House and Senate, were working on a variety of proposals, but none has widespread acceptance. Party leaders had tentatively scheduled, and then postponed, a series of meetings earlier in the week to work out a consensus.

"The clock is running, clearly, and we haven't got much time, but there's still time if we can get together on something," said Sen. John Kerry, D-Mass., a member of the Foreign Relations Committee.

"There is no consensus on how we should respond," said Rep. Mike

Lowry, D-Wash., chairman of the House Democratic Caucus. "Moreover, time is running out."

The comments were underlined by the movement of three Navy warships through the Suez Canal, en route to the Persian Gulf to join other Navy vessels.

The warships will convoy 11 Kuwaiti tankers, which will also be protected by carrying U.S. flags and captains. Kuwait is an ally of Iraq, leading to congressional fears that the United States will be drawn into the 6½-year-old war between Iran and Iraq.

The three ships are the destroyer Kidd and the frigates Flatley and Klakring, which are both sister ships to the Stark. Thirty-seven U.S. sailors were killed May 17 when the Stark was hit by a pair of missiles fired by an Iraqi jet.

The ships are expected to arrive in about a week, where they will join six other Navy vessels, including five warships and the command ship LaSalle. No date has been announced publicly for the start of the U.S. convoys, but they are expected to begin early next month.

On Capitol Hill, several plans have been circulated, including:

—A 90-day delay in the reflagging operation.

—An outright ban unless Congress first approves.

—A non-binding resolution proposing a halt to reflagging unless various conditions are met, such as certain levels of help from U.S. allies.

Combust to be in Plainview

The meeting will be at 4 p.m. at the Plainview Chamber of Commerce at 710 West 5th Street.

DOE

Amarillo and Canyon over Hereford," states Eichner.

"In forwarding the data to the WDIC, Deputy Project Manager Robert Wunderlich listed a number of caveats to taking them too seriously, stating 'Because the results of the survey are of doubtful validity, we question their usefulness for the preparation of our impact analysis.'

"The WDIC staff concur with this assessment and intend to use Hereford's actual experience with relocation as its current planning foundation, i.e., 13 of 51 transfers to the area have decided to live in Hereford, or 25 percent of the total. We believe even these numbers may understate the potential, says Eichner.

"The community has many characteristics which will be desirable to transferees, particularly those with families. The school system is excellent, the values normally associated with an agricultural community are here, a variety of housing is available and work would be a two to three minute drive away. The situation will continue to be monitored for planning purposes," he promises.

Responding to other specific recommendations of the WDIC, Neff and Wunderlich stated that they suggest early work on establishing socioeconomic impact assessment programs be concentrated on services of prime concern and that the DOE will welcome opportunities to discuss progress on the study as data is compiled.

The WDIC also requested that DOE complete its assessment of impacts based on workforce size as revised from the original environmental assessments.

"The workforce size projected between now and November is within the bounds of that discussed in the EA," the letter states and claims that management decisions made about location of staff offices, since the publication of the EAs, were verbally verified to assure that community resources were adequate to absorb the influx of new residents.

"The gravity model used in the EA has been rerun with new staff levels and office locations, although in terms of predicting actual distribution of workers it has little utility," asserts the letter.

The letter also states that DOE is working parallel with WDIC to secure Congressional funding for local areas in the event of negative impacts. "However, our analyses of community service capacities indicate that the relocation of the staff do not overburden the available services," states the letter. "We also feel it is important to complete the project move from both a management perspective and from consideration of the difficult personal burdens placed on staff when additional uncertainties are introduced."

On the WDIC's request to establish land acquisition policy positions given legislative consideration, Neff and Wunderlich respond, "... we would be pleased to discuss with the policy positions adopted by the WDIC in light of Federal land acquisition requirements."

The letter asserts that Neff and Wunderlich welcome the opportunity to discuss the establishment of procedures for interaction between their office and WDIC and that their staff members will continue to provide information to the WDIC.

Concerning labor supply, the letter states; "The WDIC desires that programs be installed to offset negative impacts incurred by increased competition for the limited labor supply. We would suggest that contrary to having a limited labor supply in the area, the reverse seems to be the case. There is an extremely high response to posted project positions, and ample numbers of qualified applicants within those responding."

A final point the letter responds to is the WDIC request that a program be established to assist local vendors in learning the process required to compete for government contracts. The letter states that a workshop has been scheduled for July 16 as a first step in assisting area businesses with the competitive bidding process.

In summary Neff and Wunderlich state, "We are pursuing a 'moderate' path of relocating staff to the area. To date the tangible impacts to the Hereford area have been positive; and there have been no demonstrable negative impacts identified. Staff have been given relocation dates, and are progressing with their personal plans to move. The management inefficiencies of having two offices also result in our desire to conclude the relocations on a reasonable time frame."

One dead, seven hurt in military accidents

FORT HOOD, Texas (AP) — War games turned deadly serious this week as eleven people died in two accidents during National Guard training maneuvers.

One guardsman was killed and seven others injured when a tank accidentally fired on another tank Tuesday. That accident came one day after a military helicopter flying at tree-top level crashed and burned, killing all 10 reservists and National Guardsmen aboard.

The identity of the victim in Tuesday's accident was being withheld pending notification of next of kin, a Fort Hood spokesman who declined to give his name said late Wednesday.

National Guard officials said that the accidents, which both occurred during the two-week Starburst '87 training maneuvers, don't indicate there's a problem with safety.

"The field training is as real as possible to improve the professionalism of our part-time soldiers," said Maj. Gen. James B. McGoodwin, commander of the 49th Armored Division of the Texas National Guard.

"That's why our training has to be very rigorous, very strenuous and very realistic," he said.

The maneuvers are made as safe as possible, he said.

"In spite of this, we're going to have some accidents," he said. "We know this. We minimize this as best we can."

National guardsmen are aware of the hazards of duty, said Dan Donohue, spokesman for the National Guard Bureau in the Pentagon.

"Roughly half of the Army's combat forces are in the Guard. The need to train intensively, effectively and with great diversification is extremely important. Inherent in that training is an increased danger."

He said training standards are the same as in the active military.

"Yes, we do kill people, but we have an enviable track record and we have led the Army in terms of percentages," Donohue said.

Donohue said the pressure on the Guard to keep up with the equipment changes in an ever-modernizing Army is greater than on the standing army.

"When you tell a Guard unit you've got a year to get ready you're talking about 39 days of that year, and when you tell a full soldier you've got a year to get ready you're talking about 365 days a year."

The tank accident occurred Tuesday night during target practice at Fort Hood, which at 339 square miles is the largest military installation in terms of land in the free world.

The tank was firing at a camouflaged target about 900 meters away. The 152 mm gun launcher went too far to the left, firing a practice round at two other M-60 tanks that were illuminating the area with infrared searchlights, McGoodwin said. He said a practice round is not as fully-charged as a regular round.

The guardsman killed in the accident was standing outside the tank when the round was fired, as was a second soldier who was seriously injured, McGoodwin said.

All eight men were taken to Darnall Community Hospital, where one died at 2:52 a.m., one was hospitalized in serious condition and the other six were treated and released, said Fort Hood spokesman Sgt. Roger Allen.

Officials would not specify how the victims were injured.

Starburst exercises, training maneuvers that include about 13,000 Texas National Guard soldiers and 5,000 soldiers from Army reserve support units, will continue as planned, said Maj. Bill Coleman.

Investigators are still looking into the helicopter crash that littered 2½ acres with wreckage Monday morning. Officials said the investigation will take at least six weeks.

Injured in the tank accident was Pvt. Morty R. Redman, 19, of San Angelo, who was admitted to Darnall in serious but stable condition. He is assigned to Company B, 3rd Battalion, 112th Armor Unit of the Texas National Guard, a base spokeswoman said.

Those treated and released and also assigned to Company B were Staff Sgt. Don Hill, 38, and Spec. 4 Lester J. Tinney, 22, both of San Angelo; and Sgt. Christopher Galindo, 22, and Sgt. Larry Smith, 30, both of Ballinger.

Others were Sgt. Charles J. Klaus, 31, of Hays, Kan., assigned to Troop C, 1st Squadron, 124th Cavalry; and Spec. 4 Randy J. Coone, 30, of Colleyville, of Company A, 4th Battalion, 112th Armor.

All the guardsmen were in the Texas National Guard's 49th Armored Division, said Allen.

Before this week's accidents, there were 10 aircraft crashes at Fort Hood since 1980 with 11 people killed and at least 11 injured, statistics show. In all Army air accidents since 1982, seven people have been killed, while 15 people have died in on-the-ground accidents.

Hightower requests Federal help

WASHINGTON (AP) — Farmers are having trouble putting food on their own tables because of the slumping agriculture industry and need help from the federal government, Texas Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower says.

"The old poor, the new poor and the near poor are in need of immediate help at a time that Washington is washing its hands of them," Hightower told the House Select Committee on Hunger.

Hightower said the federal government could begin helping farmers through a series of initiatives including crop insurance and alternative crop loans, which would help farmers to take some chances and make some advances.

Since 1981, more than 43,000 Texas farmers and ranchers have gone out of business and that last year alone, 14,000 commercial farmers lost their farms, the Democrat said.

"Farm failures are already up 300 percent in the first four months of 1987 when compared to the same period last year," Hightower told the committee, chaired by Rep. Mickey Leland, D-Houston.

Minority farmers are losing their land at twice the rate of their white counterparts, Hightower said, and a Texas farmer, Ollie Williams, told the committee what he felt were the reasons.

"No financing, lack of education and, most important, lack of a market," said Williams, a founding member of the Hempstead Small Farmers Cooperative, an organization of black farmers who market watermelon to Kroger Co. grocery stores.

Current economic environment helps petrochemical industry thrive

HOUSTON (AP) — The declining dollar, continuing U.S. business expansion and lower oil prices are boosting the fortunes of the nation's petrochemical industry, analysts say.

"Companies are making about 35 percent more than they were in 1980-81," says Charles D. Holland, a professor and chemical industry researcher at Texas A&M University. "I can sell all I can make" is a statement you often hear.

Petrochemicals are a crude oil derivative used in a wide range of consumer and industrial products. After different stages of processing, they are used in everything from phonograph records to clothing, auto parts to detergents, wallpaper to furniture.

Two-thirds of the nation's basic chemicals are refined in Texas, with the state satisfying roughly 25 percent of world petrochemical demand, Holland says.

Most of Texas' petrochemical industry is located around Houston and the Texas Gulf Coast, which forms the world's largest single petrochemical complex.

While an $18 barrel of crude oil can be refined into gasoline that sells for $20, that same barrel can yield material worth about $53 after one stage of refining, says John R. Doshier, managing director of The Pace Consultants Inc. in Houston.

After three stages of refining, the barrel can be worth nearly $2,000, he says.

The high profit potential of the petrochemical industry drew many companies to invest in petrochemical plants, causing an overcapacity, analysts say.

"In the late '70s, it was fashionable to be big. There was overexpansion when there wasn't the return to justify it," says Holland, who is president of the Texas Institute for Advancement of Chemical Technology at Texas A&M.

When demand fell during the 1981-82 recession, many American companies found themselves saddled with non-competitive, out-of-date facilities, Doshier and others say.

Companies then cut costs, closed plants and laid off workers. When demand rebounded, the companies were slimmed down and competitive, Doshier says.

"What you've got is a number of petrochemicals in short supply, and a number of plants at full capacity," he says of the current situation.

About $1 billion worth of petrochemical refinery capacity still remains idle and may be brought back on line, Doshier says.

"It is rapidly becoming economically attractive, and I think we'll be seeing some mothballed plants being brought back," he predicts.

Tim Scott, a spokesman for Dow Chemical USA in Houston, agrees that restructuring has helped the industry, but he downplays the analysts' rosy forecasts.

"I think everybody has gotten back to basics," Scott says. "The improvement is just starting, and more improvement is ahead of us, but nothing dramatic."

The lower dollar has spurred sales overseas, making American producers more competitive against countries such as Saudi Arabia, which built petrochemical plants in an effort to diversify its economy, other industry figures say.

"A few years ago, we were paying a 30 to 40 percent tax on what we sold overseas," says Irvin Lipp, spokesman for Du Pont. "About 35 percent of our business is overseas, so the devaluation has been a benefit."

Gordon A. Cain, chairman of the Sterling Group, an investment banking firm with petrochemical subsidiaries, also says lower oil prices helped keep U.S. petrochemical firms from losing market share to overseas companies.

"The lower prices have made petrochemical-derived plastics more competitive with wood, paper, steel and aluminum," Cain says.

A study by Pace concluded that demand for refined petroleum products is expected to remain level until about 1990, and pick up again later in the decade.

Few industry officials are willing to forecast far into the future, but most say the industry will continue to do well if the current conditions of lower oil prices, continued economic expansion and a lower dollar exchange rate persist.

Holland sees the long-term demand for chemicals growing.

"The petrochemical industry in the long term is an expanding industry," he says. "Our whole life is dependent on chemicals."

Although a number of amendments — including the Equal Rights Amendment and an amendment that would require a balanced federal budget — have been proposed in the last 15 years, nothing has been added to the Constitution since 1971. In the almost 200 years since the Bill of Rights, only 16 amendments have been added to the Constitution, and one of those (the prohibition on liquor) has been repealed.

Waldheim visits Pope John Paul II

By JENNIFER PARMELEE
Associated Press Writer

ROME (AP) — As about 100 protesters shouted "Shame!" and "Assassin!" outside, Austrian President Kurt Waldheim met for 30 minutes in the Vatican today with Pope John Paul II.

The papal audience, Waldheim's first official trip abroad since becoming president last July, has prompted harsh criticism because of his alleged involvement in Nazi war crimes during World War II.

Some of the protesters outside the Vatican erected a replica of a gallows.

John Paul and Waldheim, speaking in German, exchanged speeches in the papal library, discussing disarmament and their hopes for world peace.

The official Vatican texts showed no direct mention of the controversy that has surrounded Waldheim's visit.

John Paul, speaking first, lauded Waldheim's work as former U.N. secretary-general and recalled his first visit to the United Nations in 1979 at Waldheim's invitation.

"The activity that you have carried out in the international field as a diplomat and as foreign minister of your country, as well as during your term — filled with responsibility — as secretary of the United Nations, has always been devoted to ensuring peace among peoples.

"You can now put into action in the service of your country your lifetime and professional experiences... after your election as the highest representative of the Austrian people, whom I treasure very much."

In response, Waldheim, who is Catholic, thanked the pope for receiving him and praised him as "a renowned moral authority."

"You, Holy Father, have never stopped to raise your voice tirelessly all over the world for the great aim of peace between peoples," Waldheim said. Waldheim expressed his wishes for progress in nuclear disarmament, but added, "We have long known that the world does not become safer and more peaceful solely by disarmament measures — however vital they are."

"What matters is spiritual disarmament that leads to the reduction of preconceived enmity between peoples, races and religions," Waldheim said. "Christianity has outlined for us a clear path: the spirit of the Sermon on the Mount."

On the fringes of St. Peter's Square facing the Vatican, up to 100 demonstrators from Jewish activist and political groups from Italy, Austria and the United States shouted slogans denouncing the Waldheim audience.

Waldheim has been accused of aiding the deportation of thousands of Jews and partisans who were killed in concentration camps during World War II. He denies the allegations.

The United States has barred Waldheim from visiting because of the Nazi allegations, and the Austrian president has been largely shunned diplomatically since taking office.

Some protesters, former Nazi prisoners, showed the numbers that had been tattooed on their arms when they arrived at concentration camps during World War II and carried signs bearing the names of several camps. Others wore death camp uniforms and carried protest placards, while another group erected a replica of a gallows with a hangman's noose.

Beate Klarsfeld, the Paris-based Nazi hunter who tracked down Klaus Barbie, the so-called Gestapo "Butcher of Lyon," stood beside a large placard reading, "Will Klaus Barbie be the Vatican's next guest?"

Pope John Paul II "has broken the rule accepted by all other countries

— not to allow Waldheim in," she told reporters.

Klarsfeld and four American protesters were detained by police for questioning for several hours Wednesday about a fire at Klarsfeld's hotel that apparently was set off by a smoke-producing device.

The demonstrators said they had intended to use the "smoke candles" during their protest today to simulate the smoke from concentration camp gas chambers.

The papal audience angered Jewish leaders around the world, and provoked criticism from the Israeli government.

In 1797 Andre Garnerin of France made the world's first parachute jump from a balloon.

Pitches Angels to 4-1 victory over Rangers

Sutton records 314th career victory

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — When he has games like he did against the Texas Rangers on Wednesday night, 42-year-old Don Sutton puts his retirement thoughts away.

Sutton, in his 22nd year in the big leagues, handled the 91-degree heat in Arlington Stadium and the Rangers like he was 22 in a 4-1 victory for the California Angels. He allowed just three hits in seven innings, struck out four and walked just one.

He tied Gaylord Perry for 12th place on the major league's all-time victory list.

"I've been thinking about retirement since I was 22 or 23," Sutton said, "but when it comes it will be on my terms."

"As long as I can get people out I will continue."

Sutton also moved into ninth place on the all-time innings pitched list, going past Kid Nichols with 5,089. After throwing 107 pitches, Sutton was taken out at the start of the eighth inning and DeWayne Buice earned his first save.

"It was a little hot out there," Sutton said. "Once you get over 100 pitches when it's this hot you are going to get tired. My limit is 96 pitches."

Sutton (4-8) guppped "My fastball is normally 73 miles an hour and it dropped to 70 miles an hour tonight."

The instructor will be Ruben Vargas, and the lessons will be taught at the Hereford High School tennis courts. Time schedules are 9 a.m. to 10 a.m. for the youth lessons and 7 p.m. to 8 p.m. for the adult lessons.

Registration deadline for the tennis lessons is July 31. Registration fees are $8 for YMCA members and $16 for YMCA non-members.

For more information on the tennis lessons, contact the YMCA at 364-8990. Registration forms are available at the YMCA.

He added "It was nice joining Gaylord in 12th place. You have to be around a long time to do that."

Sutton is now 314-246 lifetime. He is second all-time in the majors with 723 starts.

Angels' Manager Gene Mauch said Sutton "was as intense as I've ever seen him. He needed a win"

It was Sutton's first victory since June 14th.

Mike Loynd (1-3) took the loss as the Angels swept the three game series.

"We've had three straight games where we haven't played good," said Rangers' Manager Bobby Valentine. "You have swings in a season like this. Now we're having a swing on the other side. We hit some hard balls off Sutton but they were caught."

The Rangers were guilty of four errors, the team's highest total of the year.

Dick Schofield drove in two runs with two singles and Wally Joyner had two hits and an RBI in the victory.

Texas' only run came on a walk, a wild pitch, and Pete O'Brien's run-scoring single in the fourth inning.

The Angels have now won four consecutive games, their longest streak since May 2-6.

Texas is off on Thursday while the Angels travel to Chicago.

Blue Jays 5, Tigers 3
George Bell, who is a bona fide power hitter, hit another home run. Rance Mulliniks, who isn't, hit two.

That was enough for the Toronto Blue Jays to defeat the Detroit Tigers 5-3 Wednesday night, snapping Jack Morris' nine-game winning streak.

"The home runs surprised me as much as anybody," said Mulliniks, who hit a solo homer to start the scoring in the first inning and a two-run shot in the seventh that gave the Blue Jays a 5-2 lead.

Bell's fourth-inning homer tied the score 2-2. It was his 25th, tops in the majors.

The victory gave Toronto a one-game lead in the American League East over New York, which lost to Baltimore 4-0. Minnesota outslugged Cleveland 14-8 and leads the West by four games over Oakland, which defeated Kansas City 4-2. Elsewhere, it was Seattle 10, Chicago 7; and Boston 8, Milwaukee 7.

Morris, 10-3, had won seven straight starts and hadn't been beaten since April 20.

Winner, John Cerutti gave up the three Detroit runs and seven hits in 6 2-3 innings, including Terry Harper's solo homer, for his fourth victory in his last five starts.

Orioles 4, Yankees 0

Baltimore scored all its runs with two out in the first inning when Cal Ripken, Eddie Murray and Ray Knight homered off Ron Guidry, 0-3.

Dave Schmidt, 8-1, making his fifth consecutive start after 20 relief appearances, pitched a three-hitter for the Orioles' fourth victory in 26 games and their first complete game at home.

Twins 14, Indians 8

Kent Hrbek's towering three-run homer capped a four-run fourth inning for Minnesota's 14th victory in 17 games. The Twins are 41-29, the first time they have been 12 games over .500 since May 1979.

Cleveland led 1-0 when loser Greg Swindell walked Al Newman to start the Minnesota fourth. Kirby Puckett's single and a walk loaded the bases. After Tom Brunansky's sacrifice fly tied the game, Hrbek hit his 17th home run into the right-field upper deck.

Athletics 4, Royals 2

Curt Young and Dennis Eckersley combined on a five-hitter and Mike Davis drove in three runs with two singles. Young, 9-4, pitched seven innings and allowed four hits, losing his shutout to Juan Beniquez' two-run homer in the seventh.

Kansas City's Danny Jackson, 3-10, became the first 10-game loser in the majors. He allowed four runs and eight hits in 5 2-3 innings.

Mariners 10, White Sox 7

Alvin Davis led the Seattle attack with a three-run homer and RBI double to back Mark Langston's ninth victory. By winning for the eighth time in their last 10 starts, the Mariners moved into a virtual tie with Kansas City in the AL West, 4 1/2 games behind Minnesota. The White Sox lost for the 19th time in 24 games.

Gooden talks candidly about drug problems

NEW YORK (AP) — "I'm no drug addict, I'm no junkie," says New York Mets pitcher Dwight Gooden, who spent 28 days last April in rehabilitation following a positive test for cocaine use.

But the 22-year-old right-hander told the New York Post he was "glad I got caught," adding that he "might have ended up like Len Bias," the basketball star who died from cocaine use a year ago.

The newspaper, in today's editions, quoted the former National League Rookie of the Year and Cy Young Award winner as saying he was "very, very sorry for what I did."

Gooden said he first used cocaine while a high school student in Tampa, Fla., then stayed away from it until 1984, his rookie season.

"But I was never hooked," Gooden said. "I always used it in the off-season, and always with my friends from Tampa."

"I know some people think I was a junkie. But I never had a problem with it. I did coke the way someone would have a drink with dinner. Go to a party or a club and it'd be there. But once it was gone I never craved more. I let it go." But Gooden admitted a potential catastrophe was averted when his drug test came up positive.

He also said he's happy for the support he's received and regrets letting people down.

"I realize how I hurt my family and friends," he told the newspaper. "And the day I came back (his June 5 debut at Shea Stadium) when I heard everyone cheering, I realize I let down all the kids that looked up to me."

Gooden said he had been using cocaine two days prior to his arrest last December following a scuffle he and some companions had with Tampa police officers who had ordered their cars off the road.

"They (authorities) tested me for drugs and alcohol, and nothing showed up. So I thought I'd be OK in spring training, too."

Gooden refused to blame the pressures of baseball for his use of the drug.

"Why did I do it? Because I was stupid."

Gooden's advice to those considering the use of the drug is "never pick it up the first time."

Drinking is problem at sports events

By ED SCHUYLER JR.
AP Sports Writer

The song says "buy me some peanuts and Cracker Jack." It says nothing about beer.

Drinking a beer or two while watching a baseball game can be fun.

It is part of the picnic atmosphere that has been so much of baseball's tradition.

The song, "Take Me Out to the Ballgame," also has a line about going home which says "I don't care if I never get back."

Well some people don't care these days if they ever get back to ballpark, especially with their families.

There's nothing funny about having beer spilled on you, or the vulgar rantings of a drunk, or a fight fueled by false courage.

Rowdiness, caused by drunkenness at sports events was in the news again this week when the New York Yankees agreed to create a family section at Yankee Stadium in which beer drinking would not be allowed. The size of the Yankees' family section has yet to be announced.

The New York Mets also are expected to create a non-drinking section.

Several teams already have alcohol-free sections. The California Angels have a 2,400-seat family section in left field at Anaheim Stadium, which has not been filled for any game this season.

"It has been slow catching on, but comments from fans show the section has been well received," Angels spokesman Tim Mead said.

Family sections will protect a limited number of fans from rowdiness, but the majority will still have to put up with the irresponsible minority.

Half the 26 major league teams stop beer sales after either the seventh or eighth innings. All of them should do this, since some fans may have been drinking since even before arriving at the park and have to drive home.

Beer should be sold only at concession stands — this is done at six parks — and the number of beers per person per trip should be limited to two. This would mean one person couldn't go for rounds for large groups and would make the lines at concession stands long ... maybe too long to be worth the wait.

Don't sell beer in cups larger than 16 ounces.

There are those who would ban the sale of beer at sports events. Should this happen, the world would go on. But to expect it to happen is unrealistic.

If only common sense could be legislated.

Astros score 12-7 victory over Padres

By The Associated Press
With a little help from Tony Gwynn and Tim Flannery, the Houston Astros turned a five-run deficit into a rout of the San Diego Padres.

Gwynn barely missed a two-out bases-loaded drive to right field by Jose Cruz that scored three seventh-inning runs to break a 6-6 tie and lead to Houston's 12-7 victory Wednesday night.

Two innings earlier, Flannery had missed a golden opportunity for a double-play. A grounder from pinch-hitter Davey Lopes rolled between the infielder's legs, and Craig Reynolds brought the Astros their first run.

"We really battled back," said Houston Manager Hal Lanier. "It's a hell of a comeback after being five runs down. Cruz had a big hit but Tony almost made a great catch."

"Seems like always in this ballpark we're down several runs and we come back," Lanier added.

Flannery took credit for the Padres' loss, even though he had four hits for the second time in his career. He also drove in a run in the second on a single and later scored on Carmelo Martinez's sacrifice fly for a 5-0 lead.

"We needed the runs I guess, but defensively I blew the game," Flannery said. "In my mind, I had a big part in losing this one... I would like to have caught the ball and had the hits."

Padres Manager Larry Bowa said he didn't blame Flannery.

"He didn't try to miss it. It was physical mistake. He feels as bad as everybody," Bowa said.

Instead, Bowa blamed his relief pitching staff, which has consistently failed to pull through this season.

"Our middle-inning relief has not done much all year," Bowa said. "Middle-inning relief is important. You need someone in there in the middle innings who can shut the door."

Of Gwynn's near spectacular running catch, Cruz said, "I saw him running and said, 'He's going to get that ball.'"

Cruz, hitting just .245, had gone 0-3 before delivering his game-winning hit off reliever Lance McCullers, 3-5.

Lanier said he's not worried about Cruz' slow start this year — because of his ability to pull off such feats as the tie-breaking performance in the bases-loaded situation.

"He's been hot, cold, hot. He's hit some balls hard right at people. He's been going up and down. But he always comes back and gets a big hit for us," Lanier said.

Glenn Davis, who got off to a slow start this season, continued his recent batting tear by having his first four-hit game of his career. He is hitting .423 over the past 30 games and has driven in 25 runs during that span.

"I've been hitting it better," Davis said. "I've been getting a few breaks here and there."

But he still doesn't fyight at the plate.

"I'd not in a groove," Davis said. "It's just a feeling that hitters know about. I still feel uncomfortable."

Elsewhere, it was Cincinnati 5, San Francisco 4; Pittsburgh 9, Montreal 6; New York 2, Chicago 1; St. Louis 5, Philadelphia 3; and Los Angeles 5, Atlanta 4 in 10 innings.

Reds 5, Giants 4
After burning up the National League with his hitting in the first two months of the season, Cincinnati's Eric Davis is now burning opponents with his speed.

"When you've got speed, a lot of things can happen," San Francisco Manager Roger Craig said Wednesday after watching the fleet-footed outfielder score the winning run in Cincinnati's 5-4, 10-inning victory.

Davis, who has tailed off at the plate powerwise in June with only three homers after hitting a National-League-record 19 in the first two months, scored the winning run after an errant pickoff throw to first base.

It was the second time this month that Davis had beaten the Giants with his legs. On June 8, Davis dashed home with the winning run from first base on a 400-foot single by Dave Parker.

Davis led off the 10th with a single off reliever Scott Garrelts, 5-8. He went to third when Garrelts threw away a pickoff attempt and scored when first baseman Will Clark bobbed the ball in the right-field bullpen.

"You've got to do what you have to do to win," said Davis. "When the ball got away at first base, I just took off."

Dodgers 5, Braves 4
Mike Marshall's third hit of the game, a bases-loaded single in the 10th inning, lifted Los Angeles over Atlanta.

The Dodgers bounced back from a 4-0 deficit.

Pirates 9, Expos 6
Pitcher Brian Fisher hit a three-run homer and R.J. Reynolds and Barry Bonds added solo home runs as Pittsburgh ended a three-game losing streak with a victory over Montreal.

Fisher, 4-4, allowed nine hits and two runs in five innings as he won his second straight start. His second three-run homer of the season came in the second inning came off Jeff Fischer, 0-1.

"I'm not a hitter," said Fisher said. "He threw it where I was swinging, it hit the bat and went out."

Mets 2, Cubs 1
Bill Almon's bases-loaded single in the ninth inning lifted New York over Chicago.

The Mets filled the bases against reliever Lee Smith, 2-5, with one out on singles by Kevin McReynolds and Howard Johnson and a walk to Dave Magadan.

Almon, acquired from Pittsburgh last month and just 2-for-16 with the Mets, then bounced a 1-2 pitch cleanly up the middle.

Cardinals 5, Phillies 3
Terry Pendleton hit a two-run homer with two outs in the eighth inning, powering St. Louis over Philadelphia, despite Mike Schmidt's 512th career homer.

Pendleton's homer, his fifth of the season and second in 10 games, followed Willie McGee's two-out single. The homer off Mike Jackson,

1-6, snapped a tie that Schmidt created in the top of the eighth with his 17th homer of the season. Schmidt's homer moved him into a tie in 11th place on baseball's all-time home run list with Hall of Famers Eddie Matthews and Ernie Banks.

Kayla Burns feted with bridal shower

The E.B. Black House was the setting for a bridal shower Monday evening honoring Miss Kayla Burns, bride-elect of Matthew Schilling.

The bride-elect's chosen colors of peach and slate blue were used through the house and on the registry table which held a basket of peach and blue silk blossoms and a small white Folk Art goose.

In the dining room of the home, guests were welcomed to refreshments from a table featuring a centerpiece highlighted by a tall blue goose surrounded by ivy and baby's breath with peach and blue candles on white lace topping a peach tablecloth.

Guests were shown gifts for the couple throughout the lower floor of the Victorian home.

Hostesses for the evening were: Christine Marnell, Elizabeth Vogel, Judy Detten, Roberta Last, JoAnn Berend, Theresa Artho, Marian Yosten, Joan Straffuss, Brenda Miewes, Betty Koelzer, Viola Wagner, Rose Brownlow, Opal Walterscheid, Regina Warren, Carmen Flood, Sylvia Paetzold, Cindy Walker, and Theresa Paetzold.

Family reunion held

Children and grandchildren of the late Guy and Ethel Newsom attended a family reunion June 19-21 at Point Venture on Lake Travis near Austin.

Hosting the event were Jane Newsom Bookout of Austin, her husband, Norman, and their daughters, Dana and Kristi.

During the reunion Mrs. Bookout's brothers were honored. Carroll Newsom of Hereford and Wayne Newsom of Estes Park, Colo., celebrated birthdays which are on the same date. Also, given special recognition was Air Force Colonel John A. Newsom (retired) of Morgan Hill, Calif.

The 30 family members enjoyed visiting, swimming, water skiing, boating, fishing and golfing. Towns represented included Amarillo, Hereford, Lubbock and New Braunfels.

Newman reunion held

The children of the late Mr. and Mrs. W.F. Newman held a family reunion at the home of Carl and Pauline Kropff, north of Hereford.

Those attending were Mr. and Mrs. Stan Kropff, Mrs. Minnie King, Mr. and Mrs. O.C. Free, all of Canyon; Mrs. Aubrey Newman, Mr. and Mrs. Pat Newman and Katherine, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Felton and Steve, Leanna and Teigha Anderson, and Mr. and Mrs. Ben Snowden and Nanette, all of Amarillo; Mr. and Mrs. Fred Batterman, Michael Gooseby all of Dimmitt; Mr. and Mrs. Sid Perkins of Plainview; Mrs. Joel Newman of Elk City, Okla.; Mrs. Delton Cochran, Annette and Tim, all of Pecos; and Mr. and Mrs. Lee Newman, Mrs. Evelyn Finley, Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Finley, Sandee, Crystal and Sam, all of Hereford.

How they made it

According to a 1983 Federal Reserve Board study, the first in 20 years, the richest people got that way through banking, insurance and real estate. The fields made up 31 percent of the high-income group — families earning $280,000 or more annually.

Many movie lovers hate it when television squeezes film images by about 50 percent to accommodate its small, rectangular viewing area. So, a New York City theater sponsored a festival of CinemaScope and other movies shot for wide-screen reproduction.

Burns, mother of the honoree; Miss Burns; and Shelly Schilling, sister-in-law of the prospective bridegroom.

Ann Landers

Stapling not for everyone

DEAR ANN LANDERS: That column you ran on the stomach-stapling operation made it sound like the ideal solution for obesity. Your readers should be told that it does not work for everyone. I know. It nearly killed me.

When I had that surgery in October, 1983, I weighed 418 pounds. I had tried at least 15 different diets and was suicidal. I decided to try one more time — the stapling. Carrying around all that weight was hell, but what happened after the operation was worse.

Within seven months I dropped 184 pounds. This was too much, too fast. The reason I lost so much was because I threw up everything I ate. Finally I had to cut out all food and live on liquids. I still threw up. Sometimes the vomiting would go on for hours. It left me so weak I needed help to walk.

During those seven months, I was in the hospital for IV feedings five times. Each stay was 10 days. The severe vomiting broke some of the staples loose. I gained most of the weight back. Now I can't eat beef, pork, raw fruits or vegetables. After three years I still puree most of my food, and I still vomit three or four times a week because my stomach is easily irritated.

Ann, please understand that I had an excellent surgeon and in no way do I blame him. Also, I followed his orders exactly. I just happened to be one of those unfortunate people who couldn't tolerate the surgery.

Anyone who is considering this operation should talk to as many people as possible who have been through it. It is not the answer for everyone. Believe me, I know.—Thumbs Down in Georgia

DEAR THUMBS: Yours wasn't the only horror story I received, but an overwhelming number of readers wrote to thank me for giving "that great operation" such wide coverage.

People who are morbidly obese are willing to take risks—and they should be. Nothing works for everybody. I'm sorry you were one of the unlucky ones.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Your response to "Curious in Corvallis," who wondered how many females die during illicit sex, may explain why men are tempted to stray into strange beds.

You said, "The physical demands on a woman when performing sexually are much less demanding. All she has to do is be there."

Your comment reminded me of that old joke about the Frenchman who was arrested for having intercourse with a corpse. "I didn't know she was dead," he explained, "I thought she was English."—Jim G., Twisp, Wash.

DEAR JIM: Pretty funny. And now I'll get clobbered by all the British who read the column. I apologize in advance.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Several weeks ago I vacationed in Rio de Janeiro. On the second day I mailed 11 postcards. Not one person received a card.

While in Rio several tourists advised me not to send postcards. The reason given was that the postal workers in Brazil steam off the stamps, resell them and throw away the cards. Let's hear it from people who've been there.—Youngstown, Ohio

DEAR O.: Sounds mighty odd to me but I'll print the feedback. My readers are a faithful reflection of everything that happens everywhere. Write on!

How to — and how much? Find out with Ann Landers' new booklet, "How, What and When to Tell Your Child About Sex." For your copy send 50 cents plus a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562.

During the business meeting with President Thama Pearson presiding, the group discussed their recent picnic held early this month. Also, it was decided that the club would have an ice cream social at 7:30 p.m. July 27 in the Flame Room.

The door prize was by Dale Henson. It was furnished by Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Botts.

There were 33 members present and a guest.

Spies, counterspies chase across Europe and Mexico

By JERRY BUCK AP Television Writer
 (LOAP) — The game is afoot this summer, as television cameras track spies, counterspies and moles from Mexico City's Presidential Palace to Berlin's Checkpoint Charlie.

Two British miniseries, based on spy thrillers by Len Deighton and John Le Carre, are in production for future broadcast.

"Game, Set and Match," a 13-hour series based on a trilogy by Deighton, is filming in Britain, West Germany and Mexico. It will not complete production until October and probably will open the 1988-89 season of "Mystery!" on public television in the United States.

"A Perfect Spy," which combines espionage with Le Carre's remembrances of his father, winds up filming in July. The seven-hour miniseries is expected to the first offering in the 1988-89 season for Mobil's "Masterpiece Theatre."

"By the time we finish 'Game, Set and Match' it will have taken four months longer than the first world war," said Brian Armstrong, who is producing for Granada Television International.

Ian Holm stars in this epic story of treachery and betrayal, with much of the action taking place on either side of the Berlin Wall.

"We traveled 100,000 miles," said Armstrong. "We filmed in the jungle near Acapulco and in Mexico City."

Armstrong also took his crew into Berlin for scenes at Checkpoint Charlie and along the wall. East German security guards sometimes stood virtually nose-to-nose with the actors doing their scenes. The cameraman had to be careful to keep them out of the picture.

"A Perfect Spy" tells the story of Rick T. Pym, a notorious con man, and his son, Magnus, who grows up to become a British secret agent and practice the deceit he learned from his father. Ray McAnally stars as the father and Peter Egan plays the son from the age of 21 to 53.

"This is the most personal book Le Carre's written," said Colin Rogers, who is producing the series for BBC. "Le Carre has made no secret that the central character is his own father. His father was a professional con man. He died about two or three years ago and he now feels able to write about him as a character."

The "Perfect Spy" series has a structure completely different from the book. The story in the book moves backward and forward, whereas the series progresses chronologically. It was filmed on location in England, Austria, Switzerland and Greece. In Austria, they took over an entire town and turned it into a Czechoslovakian village.

"Pym works for the British Secret Service, but he's also a Czech agent," he continued. "It's about how someone can become a traitor. Pym's father is outwardly charming, but he destroys people. Treachery becomes a way of life for Pym as he grows up. It's what he finds exciting."

Abundant Life

DON'T FEEL INFERIOR
 By Bob Wear

Feeling inferior is the cause of much unhappiness, and most of us may have some of this feeling sometimes; however, we must not permit it to become dominant. With some persons, this feeling begins early in life; and is never discarded. Others pick it up along the way. It helps to know that this feeling can be reduced to harmlessness by seeing it or what it is; developing an honest sense of values; considering the whole self with both actual and potential worth; and finding and accepting a suitable life posture.

We must stop comparing ourselves with others. People who do this often concentrate on one outstanding feature of others and compare the whole of themselves with this one feature. This should not be done. Then, there are some who compare themselves with only a few exceptionally gifted and unusually well-trained people. This is certainly uncalled-for.

Let us choose goals which are within our reach, not goals which may have been chosen by others for themselves. We are not inferior just because we may not attain the goals someone else may have attained. We are different, but this difference is not to be considered inferiority. We must not overreach ourselves, and this includes buying things we are unable to buy just because we are trying to keep up with somebody or perhaps out-do someone.

Self-improvement is probably the best way to improve our feelings about ourselves. All of us have remarkable potential for self-betterment, and this very rewarding action can be on-going. With this, we will think less and less about being inferior or superior, and more and more about the more wholesome aspects of living.

Do not expect too much in any part of the living experience, but fashion expectations according to reality and truth. "The really happy people are those who do not expect too much from life, who have hobbies, reasonable ambition, and who recognize that it is human to have one's ups and downs."

Let us do our honest best, and feel good about ourselves.

No easy economic solutions or explanations exist

By JOHN CUNIFF AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — In a world as complex as today's there are no easy economic explanations or solutions, a contention you can test in just a few minutes.

To illustrate: The international investment position of the United States is said to have deteriorated over the past year since foreigners invested more in the United States than Americans invested abroad.

These are the numbers: Last year, foreign investors held $1.33 trillion of American assets, while American investors owned $1.07 trillion in foreign-based assets. The difference of more than $260 billion was double the 1985 figure.

The conclusion seems obvious: The American financial position is weakening. The country needs foreign funds. It is indebted to foreigners. It is a debtor nation.

But if such numbers suggest a weakened economy, why do foreigners continue to invest? If the rising numbers suggest the situation is going from bad to worse, how do you explain that some of it results from a rising stock market?

Doesn't a rising stock market suggest future economic strength? Doesn't foreign investment in the United States also indicate that investors view the American economy as a smart place to put their money?

Similarly, you might consider this contention: American manufacturing is on the decline, since fewer people are engaged in goods production today than a decade or so ago.

The lower employment is offered by some as evidence of a shrinkage in the role that manufacturers play in the American economy. It is a contention often used by those who believe foreign manufacturers have "stolen" U.S. jobs.

Government statistics based on the dollar value of manufacturing, however, tell another story. On that basis, manufacturing still accounts for about the same percentage — around 20 percent to 21 percent — of total domestic product as it did two decades ago, when the decline is said to have begun.

Critics of the decline-in-manufacturing argument say that precisely the opposite has happened. They say manufacturing has become more productive. Its output per man-hour has risen. It makes more with less. It is stronger.

A third debate involves the need for controlling insider trading. Many members of Congress, business and academe insist that new laws are needed to deal with those who profit on information not yet available to the public.

Their position seems to be an obvious one, since one insider scandal after another has rocked the securities business, cheating the public of untold millions of dollars and threatening to undermine marketplace confidence.

Much of the trading on inside information is in relation to mergers and takeovers, the news of which is kept from the public by lawyers, bankers, accountants and others who must make preparations for the announcement.

Because of past legislation forcing investors to make public disclosure when their purchases reach 5 percent or more of a company, and also make a public declaration of their takeover intent, dozens of people are involved.

Legislation, says Columbia University Professor James B. Rogers Jr., referring specifically to the Williams Act of 1968 — has of necessity forced takeover investors to greatly enlarge the privileged circle of insiders.

Therefore, he argues, one solution to the insider problem is to repeal the Williams Act.

Names in the News

TOMS RIVER, N.J. (AP) — Rock star Bruce Springsteen has donated $25,000 to help unemployed factory workers get back to work.

Springsteen sent the money to Hometowns Against Shutdowns, a non-profit organization set up by the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Union Local 8-760 of Freehold, local president Stanley Fischer told a news conference Wednesday.

Springsteen's song "My Hometown" from his album "Born In The U.S.A." describes a 1964 textile-plant closing in his hometown of Freehold.

CUMMINGTON, Mass. (AP) — Secretary of State George Shultz is being asked to stop people from trekking across his property en route to a skinny-dip pond.

The most-used trail to the state-owned Caulker's Pond on the Westfield River cuts through land where Shultz owns a weekend home.

Up to 200 people splash at the "swimsuit optional" area during summer weekends, and officials say the swimmers are at risk because the winding trail would slow rescuers. The lack of toilets also is seen as a health risk.

Officials insist they are concerned about health and safety, not nudity.

"If Shultz were to post his land and stand by it," this would be a big help, said Board of Health Chairman Kenneth Howes.

Officials wrote Shultz and hope to meet with him during his next visit. A spokeswoman at Shultz's Washington office said Wednesday that Shultz had not received the letter and had no comment.

NEW YORK (AP) — Jazz man Dizzy Gillespie's 70th birthday isn't until Oct. 21, but he already has celebrated it twice this year.

Grammy award-winning trumpeter Wynton Marsalis, 25, paid tribute at a Carnegie Hall concert called "Young Master-Old Master: Wynton Marsalis Salutes Dizzy Gillespie on his 70th Birthday."

"Artists such as Dizzy — they reaffirm all the values we hold most high, like integrity, freedom and justice," Marsalis said at the JVC Jazz Festival sponsored by the Japanese electronics manufacturer.

Earlier this month, Gillespie was given a tribute at a Wolf Trap concert in Vienna, Va.

Gillespie, who filled the second half of Tuesday night's concert with his 19-piece big band, said, "It's a great honor and pleasure to be standing in front of such an assemblage of master musicians when I know I should be in the back," referring to the trumpet players in the last row.

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — A television station that drew complaints from Gov. Steve Cowper's staff by showing the governor yawning as part of a promotional campaign has pulled the film off the air.

KTBY-TV owner Ron Bradley said the decision to pull the spots had nothing to do with pressure from Cowper's office. "They had been on the air five weeks. They were old," he said Wednesday, the day the spots were pulled.

In the promotion, Cowper appeared sitting behind a desk — his mouth open wide in a yawn. The brief shot was among others showing Alaskans.

David Ramseur, Cowper's press secretary, said the governor's office provided a business group calling itself the "Made In Alaska Committee" with a public service tape of Cowper urging people to buy Alaska products.

He said the committee gave KTBY the tape for production work and the station grabbed the shot of Cowper. "We feel like we sort of got sandbagged on this," he said.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Lew Wasserman, chairman and chief executive of entertainment conglomerate MCA Inc., had a polyp removed from his colon, a spokesman for Cedars-Sinai Medical Center said.

"He had a successful surgery and is resting in good condition," hospital spokesman Ron Wise said after the surgery Wednesday.

Taste of Summer

Where should the budget be cut?

NEW YORK (AP) — Can government spending really be slowed, if not cut?

There was a time when Americans believed that at least an attempt should be made, and so the attempt was made.

A new president made it the centerpiece of his economic policy, selling it with the welcome promise that less spending would help get government off the backs of the people. Congress went along, passing ERTA in 1981.

ERTA, short for Economic Recovery Tax Act, cut personal tax rates by 25 percent. The economy, elated at the lighter burden, crawled out of its terrible recession and set off on one of the longest expansions ever.

Bit by bit, however, government resumed its growth and slowly but certainly the benefits of the tax cut disappeared, the simple reason being that you cannot have tax cuts without less spending and still avoid big problems.

Now, all the benefits of the cut are gone, via a $287 billion 1981 increase in the Social Security tax, a 1982 increase of $311 billion in the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act, a $28 billion 1983 increase in the gasoline tax, a $90 billion increase in Social Security tax in 1983, and a $101 billion tax increase in 1984 that went by the name of the Deficit Reduction Act.

But the budget deficits didn't shrink much until lately, and the amount is arguable. They still are bigger than most people can count to without getting confused. There's a good reason: It is very tough to cut spending.

In contrast, it is quite easy to cut taxes, and so the Tax Reform Act of 1986 was passed with the promise it would reduce tax burdens of most people. No, spending wasn't really cut, but that was OK: Business would pay the bill.

If business could be stuck with the tab, then government and individuals would be off the hook. Government could spend, even skirting its own Gramm-Rudman-Hollings Act, and individuals could have lots of money to spend.

Forget the argument that business merely would pass on the bill in the prices it charged consumers for products. Never mind that business is merely the machinery of the economy and that the buck always stops with human beings.

The realization that any cuts in spending are achieved only through pain, debate, sacrifice and mutual accommodations seems too frightening to face. There must be an easy way out! But, of course, there isn't.

As a consequence, the tax cut of 1986 had not even been passed when it became obvious that revenues wouldn't accommodate themselves to spending. And so the plans began for the next tax increase.

Over the next four years, according to Chamber of Commerce calculations, taxes could be raised more than $100 billion. "Could" is a big word. If the impossible can be by some convoluted thinking be attainable, it is in taxing.

Meanwhile, and in spite of it all, the economy has grown and made more revenue available for spending. Revenues in 1988 are expected to grow by more than $70 billion without any tax increase. And by $300 billion in four years.

The situation provokes a pertinent question with an obvious answer from William Orzechowski, the Chamber's director of federal budget policy.

He asks: "Do you really believe the Federal government can use this money more wisely than hard-working Americans?"

Bentsen addresses criticisms of energy security measure

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate debate is scheduled this week on a trade bill that contains an energy security measure opposed by 29 senators.

The sponsor, Texas Democrat Lloyd Bentsen, says he's only trying to avert another oil crisis.

Bentsen seeks to establish a 50 percent ceiling on oil imports and require the president to reduce imports if they are expected to reach that in a three-year projection.

Last week, Sens. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., and Bob Packwood, R-Ore., sent out a letter in which they labeled Bentsen's measure unconstitutional because it upsets the traditional division of powers between Congress and the president.

Twenty-seven senators joined them in opposing the provision.

"The president could impose an oil import fee, a gasoline tax or tax incentives for domestic oil production," the two senators wrote. "He could use quotas or oil rationing. He could also suspend environmental regulations and antitrust laws, regardless of the impact on U.S. consumers or manufacturers."

The Bradley-Packwood letter suggested that oil prices are driven by a global market and that the price of U.S.-produced oil will always be the same as the price of imported oil.

"If supplies are disrupted and the world price of oil goes to $60 per barrel, so will the price of domestic oil," wrote the senators, both of whom are members of the Finance Committee.

Bentsen, who chairs the committee, called their arguments inaccurate, and in a responding letter, co-authored by Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., addressed the constitutional question and others raised by the measure's opponents.

"According to opponents of the Energy Security Act, the act is unconstitutional (because the) authority delegated to the president appears boundless," Bentsen wrote.

"This is not the case. The act ... directs the president, in limited conditions defined in part by him, to control imports of oil through the use of an authority that he has already, and has had for more than three decades, under ... the Trade Expansion Act."

He ridiculed the idea that an oil-independent America would make no difference in the price stability of oil for U.S. consumers.

"If the United States produced enough oil to satisfy all its needs and did not import any oil at all, there would be so much excess capacity in the world that virtually any disruption could be covered," he wrote.

As for the position advanced by opponents that a 50 percent import cap was merely an arbitrary ceiling and not necessarily a national threat, Bentsen was incredulous.

"The only foreign sources of oil on which our dependence can increase are unreliable. More than 70 percent of the new oil imported into the United States now and in the foreseeable future will come from the Persian Gulf.

"Fifty-percent dependence on foreign oil is a bona fide emergency in just about any circumstances that one can imagine."

Fears of gas rationing and suspension of environmental regulations under the bill are unfounded because the Energy Security Act does not give the president the power to take such sweeping actions, Bentsen said.

A close fight on the measure is expected when the Senate takes up the trade bill, which is expected this week.

A SOBER WARNING

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Putting warning labels on alcoholic beverage containers could curtail drunk driving, says Charles Phelps, a public policy analyst at the University of Rochester.

Phelps surveyed college students and found they underestimated the risk of a fatal crash when a drinking driver is at the wheel. Actually, says Phelps, the risk of a fatal accident increases 100 times for a driver aged 16-24 who has consumed six or more drinks in an hour; but students thought the risk was only about seven-and-a-half times.

A warning label that states actual risks might be a cheap, efficient way to help drinkers make better decisions about driving, says Phelps.

Some counties feast on funds while others starve

DALLAS (AP) — Some Texas counties get sizable chunks of federal funds, while others get the crumbs, a new study shows.

The survey by the Washington bureau of Harte-Hanks Newspapers ranking Texas counties on the basis of federal funds received per person in fiscal year 1986 shows that local economies can become dependent on the government.

Bell County, the Central Texas county that is home to Fort Hood, receives more federal money per person than any of the state's other 253 counties.

With about $1.2 billion in federal salaries, Social Security checks, contracts, disability payments and farm subsidies, Bell County receives about $7,447 per person from the federal government.

In contrast, Randall County, in the Panhandle, received only $43 million, about $514 per resident, the lowest in the state.

The Harte Hanks study found three reasons why some counties fare better than others: military bases, politics and need.

Six of the top 10 per capita counties are home to military bases. Second-ranked Kleberg County in southeast Texas has a naval air station in Kingsville.

If the military salaries were taken from Kleberg County, the county's average would fall from $6,921 to just $2,273 per person.

Some congressmen are more adept than others at getting federal monies to their constituents.

Democratic Rep. Jack Brooks, who has been in Congress 35 years, has a reputation for making federal bureaucrats shake when he goes in search of aid.

One of the counties in Brooks' district is fourth-ranked Chambers County, along the Gulf Coast southeast of Houston, the only county in the top six that does not have a military installation.

Third ranked Tarrant County is represented by House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Fort Worth, and collected $4.6 million in defense contracts alone, about 10 percent of all federal money that came to Texas.

Some counties have more residents who need federal aid. Such aid may be in the form of farm subsidies, Social Security, housing subsidies, veterans and unemployment benefits.

The study found that eight of the top 10 counties had unemployment rates lower than the state average while six of the bottom 10 had rates higher than the state average.

Counties with a military base can count on a steady income during hard economic times.

Among the top 10 per capita counties, six had military installations.

Entertainer Jackie Gleason dead at 71

By WILL LESTER Associated Press Writer

LAUDERHILL, Fla. (AP) — Jackie Gleason, who brightened television's Golden Age with blowhard bus driver Ralph Kramden's half-baked schemes and threats to send wife Alice "to the moon" on "The Honeymooners," has died at age 71.

The rotund comedian, who earned an Oscar nomination for his serious role as pool player Minnesota Fats in the 1961 film "The Hustler," died of cancer Wednesday at his home in this Fort Lauderdale suburb.

Gleason, the self-proclaimed "Great One" whose zestful, Falstaffian appetite for food, drink and cigarettes was legendary, was released June 18 from a Fort Lauderdale hospital after a month there.

"He was feeling in good spirits Monday and Tuesday. He quietly, comfortably passed away," said his wife, Marilyn.

Gleason became one of television's biggest draws during its Golden Age in the 1950s, creating such characters as the Poor Soul, Reggie van Gleason III and Joe the Bartender.

As Ralph Kramden, he won laughs when he blew his stack at nitwit neighbor Ed Norton or turned to his wife, threatening, "Bang, zoom!" "To the moon, Alice" or "One of these days, Alice."

In later years, he had a recurring role as redneck Sheriff Buford T. Justice in the "Smokey and the Bandit" movies and co-starred last year with Tom Hanks in the movie "Nothing in Common."

"I'm devastated," said Audrey Meadows, who played caustic Alice Kramden on "The Honeymooners." "I feel terribly sad because he was a very close friend and brilliant performer."

Jane Kean, who first worked with Gleason in vaudeville and briefly played Norton's wife, Truxie, said Gleason "was a joy to work with."

"If anything at all happened wrong, if a line was skipped, he always covered for you. He didn't want to go back and tape again. His theory was that an audience would never laugh twice at the same joke."

Jackie, who named himself "The Great One," truly was "The Great One," said comedian Milton Berle.

"He was great on improvisation, impromptu and ad-libbing. He could run the gamut. He did everything. All I can tell you is that the world is going to be less happier, more sorrowful with Jackie gone."

Gleason's capacity for enjoying life was reflected in his trademark lines "How sweet it is!" and "And away we go!" He drove himself hard on and off the set, once breaking a leg on the air.

Producer David Susskind once said Gleason could "put away more scotch per square hour than any man alive," and Gleason's weight at one point ballooned to more than 280 pounds.

He admitted smoking up to six packs of cigarettes a day, and scarcely cut back after triple coronary bypass surgery in 1978. He also underwent artery bypass surgery on his legs in 1983, and suffered from emphysema and diabetes.

"You only live once," Gleason once said. "Let's live it up."

Gleason was born Herbert John Gleason on Feb. 26, 1916, in a cold-water Brooklyn flat, the son of an insurance auditor who vanished one night on the way home from work when Gleason was a child.

Gleason became enamored of show business during a class play, quit high school and got a job as master of ceremonies at a theater, taking home $4 a night.

He also hustled money at a pool hall, developing skills that helped bring him his Academy Award nomination, and worked as a carnival barker, daredevil driver, stunt diver, disc jockey and nightclub comedian.

Gleason appeared in the movies "The Navy Blues" and "Springtime in the Rockies" before taking roles in such Broadway plays as "Hellzapoppin'" and "Artists and Models."

His big break came in the new medium of television. After two years as the lead in "The Life of Riley," he was signed in 1950 to "Cavalcade of Stars," and two years later had his own show.

He became the top male television comedian of the day. In 1954, he signed contracts worth $36 million with CBS and an automobile company, guaranteeing $100,000 a year through 1972.

"The Honeymooners" began as a skit within a show and became a series from 1955 to 1956, with Art Carney as sewer worker Norton and Joyce Randolph as Truxie, the Kramdens' neighbors in a run-down tenement in Brooklyn.

It won raves from critics, and even though only 39 episodes were broadcast, it developed a following that persists three decades later.

Two years ago, Gleason announced the discovery of 67 black-and-white episodes filmed live as part of "The Jackie Gleason Show" during the 1950s.

Gleason remained on television with his variety show from 1957-58, and broadcast live from Miami from 1964-67, backed by Sammy Spear's orchestra, the June Taylor Dancers and regular appearances by Frank Fontaine as the barfly Crazy Guggenheim.

Gleason won a Tony Award for his performance in the Broadway musical "Take Me Along" in 1959. Opposite Paul Newman in "The Hustler," he was heaped with acclaim by surprised critics.

Other movies included "Gigot," which Gleason also wrote and composed the music for, "Requiem for a Heavyweight" and "Don't Drink the Water."

"Ralph Kramden is a character that we might be getting from Mr.

Dickens if he were writing for TV," novelist John O'Hara once said.

Kramden was a bully who never hit, an aspiring big-shot who couldn't make the American dream square with Brooklyn reality. At the end, he would often plant a big kiss on Alice with the line, "Baby, you're the greatest."

"If you're doing situation comedy, you have to have the people like you," Gleason said in 1980. "That's what's probably wrong with the sitcoms today. There's no one you can really feel you want to like."

His passions — besides food and drink — included golf and music. Though he couldn't read a note, he wrote the theme for his TV show, composed a ballet and recorded 38 albums with the Jackie Gleason Orchestra.

Gleason was married three times, the last time to Marilyn Taylor, the younger sister of his long-time TV choreographer.

Besides his wife, survivors include two daughters by his first wife, Genevieve Halford, a stepson and four grandchildren.

There will be a public viewing Friday and a private funeral Saturday.

Here is a list of films starring Jackie Gleason:
"Navy Blues" 1941.
"Orchestra Wives" 1942.
"Springtime in the Rockies" 1942.
"All Through the Night" 1942.

Woman confirms husband's testimony in McFadden trial

BELTON, Texas (AP) — A woman has confirmed her husband's testimony that a teen-ager was in a car similar to one driven by Jerry "Animal" McFadden the day the youth and two others were seen alive for the last time.

Lavita Pace Boykin of Lake Hawkins told jurors Wednesday in McFadden's murder trial that she saw Bryan Boone of Hawkins, who went with Suzanne Harrison and Gena Turner on a weekend outing in May 1986.

Her husband, Gregory, gave similar testimony Tuesday.

McFadden is accused in the beating-strangulation death of Miss Harrison, 18, whose partially clothed body was found the day after she disappeared from Lake Hawkins.

Authorities found the bodies of Miss Turner, 20, and 19-year-old Boone 10 days later. McFadden has not been charged in those deaths.

The brother of Bryan Boone testified that Bryan was last seen going to visit Miss Turner. Kendall Boone said Bryan had talked to Miss Turner on the telephone near dinner-time and left for her house in his truck.

"Walter (the brothers' guardian) and I were in the front yard. I told him to be back for supper. We were going to cook hamburgers outside. That was the last time I saw him," said Kendall Boone.

Mrs. Boykin, 20, told jurors that her husband said, "Hey, look; there's Bryan." I slightly turned my head and said, "Yes, it sure is."

But defense attorney Vernard Solomon, in cross-examination, asked Mrs. Boykin if she remembered telling police in a June 1986 statement, "We did not wave at Bryan or anything."

Mrs. Boykin said in the third day of testimony she now remembers that her husband waved at the teen-ager who was sitting in a blue-and-white Bronco similar to one McFadden was driving.

Miss Harrison's mother, Mary Ann Harrison, sobbed Tuesday as she recalled the day of her daughter's death.

Clutching a handkerchief, Mrs. Harrison told jurors her daughter would have graduated with honors three weeks after she was killed. She gave a list of student activities her daughter participated in and said she had been accepted at Texas A&M University.

Mrs. Harrison said her daughter spent the night at Miss Turner's house the day before she was killed and then spent most of May 4, 1986, with her.

Later that evening, Miss Turner and Boone picked Miss Harrison up at about 6 p.m. and said they would not be out past 7 p.m., Mrs. Harrison said. But she said it was the last time she saw her daughter.

Committee approves cut for state department

WASHINGTON (AP) — A State Department office involved in promoting the Nicaraguan Contras engaged in highly questionable lobbying activities, a congressman says.

The office lost all funding under a fiscal 1988 House appropriations bill passed in committee Wednesday.

"This office engaged in highly questionable lobbying and advocacy activities connected to the Iran-Contra scandal," said Rep. Ronald D. Coleman, D-Texas, who introduced ed the amendment to eliminate funding for the Office of Public Diplomacy for Latin America and the Caribbean.

The State Department office, which was set up in 1983 to advance the administration's policies in that area, had a number of contracts with IBC, which was ultimately discovered to have channeled private funds into Swiss bank accounts for Lt. Col. Oliver North.

The U.S. Mint was established by an Act of Congress on April 2, 1792.

Wash wool with care
By Polly Fisher

DEAR POLLY — My sister-in-law gave me a wool blanket that she says she has washed in her washing machine many times. I'm nervous about that. However, how should such a blanket be washed? Can it be dried in the automatic dryer? — ANNE
DEAR ANNE — There are such things as washable wool blankets. If you're not sure that this is one, you'd be best off taking the blanket to a dry cleaner. However, if you trust your sister's assertion that the blanket is washable, here's the safest procedure for machine-washing a washable wool blanket:

Shake the blanket to remove excess dust before washing. Wash one blanket at a time. Fill the machine tub with lukewarm (80 to 90 degrees) water, add the blanket and let it soak for five minutes to loosen the soil. Then, add 1/2 cup mild detergent and wash, rinse and spin the blanket on the wool or delicate wash cycle. Machine-dry on low heat or the wool setting for 20 minutes. Remove the blanket from the dryer. Fold the still-damp blanket into fourths lengthwise, gently pulling it into an even shape. Unfold the blanket and place it lengthwise over two parallel drying lines. Let the blanket dry thoroughly at room temperature. When it is dry, brush the blanket and, if necessary, steam-press the binding.

I'm sending you a copy of my newsletter "The Care and Cleaning of Wool," which gives clear directions for cleaning various types of woolen fabrics. It also offers tips for sewing with wool, pressing wool and storing and maintaining the good appearance of wool garments. Others who would like a copy of this issue should send $1 for each copy to POLLY'S POINTERS, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 93863, Cleveland, OH 44101-5863. Be sure to include the title. — POLLY
DEAR POLLY — I'm confused. One expert says to water the garden in the evening so the water doesn't evaporate in the sun. Another expert says never water at night since it can promote disease. What's the best time to water the garden? — JENNY
DEAR JENNY — It really depends on the climate where you live. If you live in a dry climate, watering in the early evening gives the water many hours to seep into the soil without the heat of the sun causing significant evaporation.

In a humid climate, however, watering at night leaves the plant leaves moist for many hours, which can promote fungal diseases. In such a situation, it's best to water early in the morning. Then, the water still has time to soak into the ground before the full heat of the midday sun hits, but the morning sun will dry the plant leaves, decreasing the possibility of fungal diseases.
Take your own climate into consideration and plan your watering accordingly. If plant diseases are a particular problem in your area, you'll want to water in the early morning. If you live in a hot, dry climate and don't have much problem with diseases, save the watering for early evening. — POLLY

Use natural controls for garden pests, cockroaches, ants and other household pests with the hints and formulas in Polly's newsletter "Homemade Remedies for Household Pests." Send $1 for each copy to POLLY'S POINTERS, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 93863, Cleveland, OH 44101-5863.
