Precinct 1 road conditions blasted

By DEBE GRAVES
Staff Writer

A federally subsidized railroad crossing and the condition of county roads in Precinct 1 gained criticism during the Deaf Smith County Commissioners' meeting Monday.

crossing across from the Hereford Municipal Airport.

As the plan now stands, the federal government will pay the majority of expenses for the project with the state and county picking up a tab of $4,500 each.

Paetzold presented a plan which would move the railroad crossing east 1 to 1 1/2 miles. The plan would require construction of a new county road that would provide convenient access for more county residents, according to Paetzold.

Paetzold also requested the county consider employing a county manager, creating a similar position to the one Darwin McGill holds for the city.

"We could fire him if he wouldn't work, we can't fire commissioners who don't work," he said.

Paetzold was then joined by five other county residents in a heated exchange with Precinct 1 Commissioner Bill Brady concerning the condition of county roads in that precinct.

Paetzold presented pictures depicting roads in the precinct which appeared in various stages of disrepair. Some of the roads were torn up, others were bordered by tall noxious weeds causing driving hazards, still others had been improperly graded causing large shoulders and rounded centers.

Paetzold claimed the road problems started seven years ago when Brady took office as a commissioner.

"I'm tired of it," Paetzold stated, "I know I'm not going to get to first base, but I want to go on record that I have asked for changes. I want it on record that I have begged for it and pleaded for it."

Brady claimed that his road and bridge crew has been working on the roads but the residents present disagreed and threatened to call in Amarillo media to expose the problem if Brady doesn't take care of the matter.

Paetzold stated he had appeared before the commission two years ago and nothing has been done about the problem since that time. "I would ask any of you other three commissioners to come out and see what a damn mess we've got out there and it is nothing more than poor management. I don't know what we can do but ask for his, Brady's, resignation," he said.

Rita Reinart mentioned another concern of the group. "Canadian thistles are growing so tall that we can't see around them at intersections," she said, "I am afraid there is going to be a bad wreck and the county will be sued as a result of liability for roads not properly maintained."

Reinart also claimed that the thistles are seeding out along the roads and spreading to the farmland. She said that once the thistles begin to appear on farmland the land is ruined as the weeds cannot be killed off. She also stated that some of the thistle problem is occurring on state maintained roads and that they, too, have been unresponsive to requests to mow the weeds before they seed and to provide better visibility for drivers on the country roads.

Paetzold and Reinart also accused Brady of hanging up on them and refusing to return their phone calls. Brady denied the charges.

He stated that he has a new foreman on his road crew and that they are getting caught up on the road work. According to Brady, Precinct 1 has over 258 miles of road to maintain.

Brady also stated that the concept of a new county road has some valid points but that the matter would hinge on the desires of other landowners in the area.

Commissioner Johnny Latham stated, "It would be very expensive to do but I think it is something we should study."

Irked resident says nothing done since he complained two years ago

Commissioner Austin Rose said, "We need to get together and go look at the site Paetzold is referring to and talk to the landowners to see what they want."

Paetzold also complained about the four-day work week county road crews are on. County Judge Tom Simons explained, "The men work ten hours a day for four days instead of the traditional eight hours for five days. This saves the county money in terms of the number of trips the men have to make to a site. Since they often work several miles out in the country it is better to have them put in a couple of extra hours while they are at a site than have them return home at 5 p.m. and have to make a return trip out the next morning."

Before closing the meeting the commissioners and Simons traveled to the site Paetzold is proposing for an alternate county road and railroad crossing. They will be speaking with landowners in the area

CLARENCE STRANGE
...named Father of the Year

Clarence Strange 'Father of Year'

Clarence Strange, 83, was not only described as an exemplary father by his children but was also recognized as an outstanding father-in-law and grandfather in letters sent recently to KPAN Radio Station. The nominations were responsible for Strange being announced Friday as the 22nd recipient of the station's Father of the Year Award.

The honoree, who is known by "PePa" by his family and friends, was presented with a plaque by Chip Formby, news director of KPAN. He was also awarded gift certificates from Gaston's and the Hereford CattleWomen.

His family characterizes Strange as being a man of few words. His daughter, Nona Marie Sheck of Santa Fe, N.M., said, "He has taught us by example, not words, to be proud of honest work, to keep our word, to see a thing through and to cry in sorrow and laugh in joy."

His son, Rayburn Strange of Hereford, agreed, "Dad has been a good father, grandfather, trusted advisor and good friend and neighbor to many people in this area. His honesty, compassion, and quiet friendly manner have touched many people and enriched their lives."

Clarence Virgil Strange was born Oct. 29, 1903, in Madill, Okla. and moved to Hereford in the spring of 1929. For several years he was employed at Brumley's Chevrolet and in 1932 opened the Service-U-Like Garage, the business which he owned and operated for 20 years.

He married Mabel Eunice Curtisinger Oct. 1, 1933. Their early years of marriage were in the height of the Dust Bowl days. Because of the economy, Strange and his wife often took chickens, eggs, butter and other such commodities as payment for his work.

The couple reared six children, all graduating from Hereford High with three receiving college degrees. They include Rayburn Strange, Rosie Strange Griffin and Robert Strange, all of Hereford; Mary Ruth Strange Hamilton, Irving; Nona Marie Strange Sheck, Santa Fe, N.M.; and James Virgil Strange, Aubrey. There are also 13 grandchildren and two great-grandchildren. His wife died July 1, 1978.

Strange is a member of First Baptist Church and was an active member of the Hereford Volunteer Fire Department for 35 years and is a member of the Odd Fellows Lodge.

Proposal sparks concerns of fairness, parking space

By SPEEDY NIEMAN
Editor-Publisher

A proposal to tie-in a physicians' office complex on the west side of Deaf Smith General Hospital was aired at a public comment meeting called by the Deaf Smith County Hospital Board Monday night in the Community Center.

The concept being presented is for the hospital district to lease the land for such a building, which would be constructed on a condo-type approach with a doctors' group or a third party owning the building.

Approximately 25 people attended the public meeting Monday night, but about half of those present were from the medical field. Margie Ford, hospital board president, presided at the meeting and introduced Jim Bullard, hospital administrator, to explain the concept. Bullard and hospital board members then answered questions about the plan. From the questions posed, it appeared that citizens were most concerned about parking facilities and whether or not the plan would be fair to all doctors in the community.

Several citizens pointed out that parking was already a problem at the hospital at times. Bullard responded that the board believes there will be ample space to the north of the proposed building for a parking lot.

In answer to a question about the doctors who are interested in moving to the new building, Bullard said it was the physicians from Hereford Medical Clinic. He added that while the proposal is open to all interested physicians, "the fact is that only this group of doctors has indicated an interest."

In his opening statement, Bullard pointed out that such a plan would be beneficial to the hospital and to doctors. He said it offered physician convenience and, in turn, provides the hospital with additional lab service revenue. He added that the possibility of attracting specialists in the future is another consideration of the project.

Frank Zinser, a board member, said the plan offers the possibility of increased out-patient revenues for the hospital and makes some of the doctors more accessible to their patients in the hospital. He said the board was concerned about parking problems. He pointed out, however, that the board would study the placement of certain restrictions on the building plan as well as the parking.

The board was asked what liability the hospital district would incur if the plan failed and payments were not made on the building. Bullard and Zinser pointed out that the doctors or the building owner would be financially responsible, not the taxpayers in the district. They emphasized that no tax money was to be used in the project.

Dr. Tim Revell, who has a clinic across the street from the hospital, expressed a concern about the longrange operation of the project. He pointed out that some of the doctors interested in moving to the complex would reach retirement age in less than 10 or 15 years. He posed the concern that the hospital could be the loser if vacancies in the office complex existed and were not filled. He pointed out that there are openings for doctors in several clinics at present.

Zinser reiterated the hospital board's outlook that certain restrictions would be placed on the building, and that the hospital district would not be liable for building payments. He said the hospital district has no plans to acquire more land in connection with the project.

Bullard said the board as visualizing an office complex of about 9,000 square feet. He added that they believed there would be sufficient land remaining on the northwest hospital property for a parking lot.

Mrs. Ford said the concept of the project will be reviewed by the board again, following the public hearing, and that the idea will be presented to civic clubs for further information and feedback. She said there was "some pressure" to make a decision in the near future.

The board will make further study on how to structure the project, the restrictions to be placed on the plan, and decide if the doctors or a third party would have first option on the construction of a building. "I would think that the project would be started this year if we decide to follow through with the plan," said Mrs. Ford.

Asked about the small turnout at the hearing, Bullard said he hopes "that there is community interest and that citizens have trust in the decisions of the board members." He added, however, that public apathy could be part of the problem.

"As we progress through the steps, we hope there will be more interest shown and we get a better cross-section of opinion," Bullard added.

Difficult at this point

Neff says WDIC request to 'moderate' can't be filled

By DEBE GRAVES
Staff Writer

"We may be past the point of no return," stated Department of Energy Salt Characterization Project Manager Jeff Neff in response to Thursday's request by the Waste Deposit Impact Committee that DOE "moderate" the speed employees are moving into the area.

"WDIC is an important institution in our estimation and we consider their requests seriously, but it would be difficult to moderate movement at this point," Neff stated.

Three WDIC committee members voted during their Thursday night meeting to authorize Executive Director Phil Niedzielski-Eichner to approach DOE with a request to slow down the movement in the county until further baseline studies can be performed. The committee hopes to use the baseline studies to ascertain impacts to the community.

Neff said that currently nine project employees have chosen to live in Hereford but that he sees the development of a trend for a greater percentage of employees to make their homes in Hereford.

"I perceive a potential for the trendline to increase because the ones who have moved here have been very positive about their experience in Hereford. There is a feeling coming into play that Hereford will gain more people," Neff said.

Local DOE staff monitor the movement of transferees and locally hired employees on a weekly basis. Neff stated, "If we perceive an impact then we will re-evaluate our process as yet I have not been able to perceive a real tangible impact associated with movement into Hereford."

Neff listed personal reasons, such as staff members who have already sold their homes, as detriments to trying to slow down the process at this point.

"When project employees receive notification of their transfer to Texas they are required to decide to accept or reject the transfer," Neff explained. "Once they make a commitment to make the move and stay with the program they become excited and begin making arrangements to follow through on their decision. It would be difficult to stop the process at this point."

Another motivation the DOE has for encouraging rapid movement into the area is the inefficiency and expense of continuing to operate two offices, one in Ohio and one in Texas.

Neff stated that he is not expecting any backlash from WDIC's request in terms of turning away any employees who had decided to move to Hereford. "On a personal level the positive information they are receiving from employees already living here is the dominant theme," he stated.

Local reaction to WDIC's request has varied, however Mayor Wes Fisher reports, "I have been besieged with calls from people who are upset about the request and I was surprised at their request for delaying the moves. As far as the city of Hereford is concerned, so far, there have been nothing but positive impacts."

The city's representative to the WDIC, Tom LeGate, abstained from voting on the request and two other committee members were absent from the meeting.

That feller on Tierra Blanca Creek says it's hard to say who brags more the reformed smoker or the guy whose car gets 30 miles to the gallon.

When her friend's birthday supper was served, Helen refused a second helping of ice cream with a polite but wistful, "No, thank you."

"Do have some more, dear," the hostess urged.

"Mother told me to say 'No, thank you', Helen explained naively, "but I don't think she could have known how small the first helping was going to be."

We ran across a Father's Day column which we think will be of interest to a number of our readers. It was written by Lynn Brisendine, publisher of The Brownfield News and former advertising manager of The Brand. His father is T.E. Brisendine of 806 S. 25 Mile Avenue. Here it is:

I suppose we all have our heroes. We admire historic figures, athletes, idealists and folks who in one way or another have inspired us throughout our lives.

Many of these heroes have been, or are, public figures. Life has thrust upon them situations demanding unique action, where it be on a battlefield or in crisis. These individuals we honor with the title hero burst forth and seized the moment, making an indelible impression.

Some are simply gifted individuals who strike a ball farther, or run faster, or display exceptional strength. For most, these people are placed in another light and their achievements are remembered, but not in the same manner or respect as those who faced down life's crisis.

I have my heroes. They may well be some of your more respected names. Historically, I think of men who fought for a better way of human existence. Names like King David, the Apostle Paul, Benjamin Franklin, Abraham Lincoln, Teddy Roosevelt and Winston Churchill come to mind. These men struggled with crisis and forged better lives for all.

On an idealistic level names like John Kennedy, Martin Luther King and Billy Graham come to the fore.

I may be luckier than most

This week

State begins socio-economic study

The Texas Nuclear Waste Programs Office and the Waste Deposit Impact Committee of Deaf Smith County will begin a socioeconomic study of Deaf Smith County to help determine what financial impacts might be expected from the Department of Energy's presence in the Texas Panhandle as it does site characterization for a nuclear waste repository.

The initial phase of the study, which began Monday will focus on the collection of baseline data only. The Texas Advisory Commission on Intergovernmental Affairs (ACIR) will work with the WDIC to set up on-site interviews with government officials, businessmen, and educators.

Police issue 41 citations

During a three-day period beginning on Saturday, Hereford Police Department officers issued 41 citations, responded to four minor accidents and made eight arrests. Arrests included a 23-year-old male for third offense of no liability insurance, a 23-year-old male for criminal trespass, a 26-year-old male for assault, a 19-year-old male for no driver's license and exhibition of acceleration, a 43-year-old male for assault, a 36-year-old male for public intoxication, a 24-year-old male for driving with suspended license and a 26-year-old male for disorderly conduct.

Offenses and assaults included theft of beer from Allsup's and a bicycle from the 100 block of Centre; trespassing on the 200 block of Elm; assault on the 200 block of Ave. F, the 200 block of Knight and the 800 block of Knight; criminal mischief on the 900 block of Union; a dog bite on the 800 block of Brevard; disorderly conduct at Blue Water Garden Apartments; burglary at Green Top Apartments; kids fighting on the 200 block of Hereford Calle and a disturbance call on the 300 block of Brevard.

Officers investigated calls concerning domestic problems on Brevard, Ave. H, Lake and at Blue Water Garden Apartments. Also investigated was a possible suicide attempt on Kibbe.

A possible kidnapping involving an ex-husband who took his children from Dameron Park was investigated. The father took his children to eat and then returned them to the park; however, one of the juveniles has since run away from home.

Recovered property included a small TV and AM-FM clock radio. At 5:59 p.m. on Sunday, firemen responded to a fire call from the Adams Ranch south-east of the city.

Local documents such as budgets, capital improvement plans, newspapers and other locally-kept records will also be used to determine current levels of services. Secondary data such as U.S. Bureau of the Census information will be used, as will relevant data collected by state agencies.

Once the baseline data has been collected, the ACIR team will return to Austin to analyze the information. Results of the study are expected to be released in August.

Steve Frishman, director of the Nuclear Waste Programs Office, stressed that neither ACIR nor the WDIC will attempt to interpret or analyze baseline data during the data-collection phase to begin next week.

"What we're trying to do, is develop information that will tell us what the existing levels of services are," Frishman said. "Then, once we have that, we can look down the road and project what may happen to those levels as DOE's presence is felt in the area."

In February 1987, DOE began moving personnel into the Panhandle, signaling its beginning of site characterization activities. At present, DOE and its contractors have moved approximately 80 employees into the Hereford area. However, DOE has not performed what the state considers a satisfactory analysis of impacts site characterization may have on a region dominated by agriculture, and unaccustomed to rapid growth.

The DOE's Environmental Assessment of May 1986 concluded that no significant adverse socioeconomic impacts will be felt in the area of the Texas site as a result of a, then projected, 450 person characterization work force. The DOE has stood by that conclusion despite a recent 300-percent increase in the estimated number of site characterization workers. The department now projects that about 1,375 workers will be in the Panhandle area at the peak of DOE activities.

Frishman said the state is sponsoring the short-term study in Deaf Smith County in part because DOE has not done so, and because the state has a separate responsibility to assess what impacts site characterization may have under the Nuclear Waste Policy Act of 1982.

The advisory commission and WDIC staffers will begin their study by obtaining estimates on the total number of site characterization workers, the percentage of those workers who migrate to the Hereford area, and the number of people who come to the area looking for jobs that are created by increased economic activity. State and local participants in the study will then collect data relating to current community service levels in the following areas: education, housing, health and mental health services, protective services, justice systems, utilities, transportation, social services, etc.

Locals tour and ask questions during DOE open house Saturday

The Department of Energy and contractors Parsons-Redpath and Battelle held open houses at two local offices in Hereford Saturday from 9 a.m. to noon.

Employees provided tours of the offices and explained job functions for interested citizens. Refreshments were served at both offices, the DOE and Parsons-Redpath offices at 110 N. 25 Mile Ave. and the Battelle office at 1303 W. First St.

Parsons-Redpath is the construction manager for the DOE's exploratory shaft facility (ESF) which will be located in Deaf Smith County. The ESF will be a research facility on approximately 60 acres of land for studying the suitability of the area for use as a repository for nuclear waste.

The facility will consist of two 12-foot diameter shafts about one-half mile deep and associated surface and underground facilities. As the construction manager, Parsons-Redpath furnishes all things necessary and convenient to construct the ESF, but does not do the actual construction, which is subcontracted to private firms on a competitive basis.

Parsons-Redpath is a joint venture partnership of the Ralph M. Parsons Co. of Pasadena, Ca., and the J.S. Redpath Co. of Mesa, Az. This joint venture was established specifically for the construction and operation of the ESF.

The Ralph M. Parsons Co. is a wholly-owned subsidiary of the Parsons Corporation which is one of the nation's top construction and design contractors. In 1986, the Parsons Corporation was ranked number three among the nation's contractors with $6.4 billion in contracts. The company is a diversified construction and design firm with extensive experience in construction of high tech, transportation, defense, mining, and petroleum facilities.

J.S. Redpath Corp., since 1962, has been an industry leader in mining development, shaft sinking and outfitting. The deepest shaft ever sunk in the Western Hemisphere (Crelgton

No. 9 at 7,137 feet) was directed by Redpath.

Battelle Memorial Institute, with headquarters in Columbus, Ohio, has five business operations in the United States and Europe and has a staff of approximately 7,000. The institute pioneered the concept of contract research. It uses scientific expertise to meet the needs of industry and government through research and development, the management of large programs and facilities, and educational and invention and technology development activities.

Battelle was selected by DOE to manage the programs concerned with the longterm storage and ultimate isolation of commercial nuclear wastes. Objective of the programs include exploring salt and crystalline rock formations in the U.S. as potential sites for nuclear waste repositories and developing the technology for such repositories.

however, because many of my heroes are also my friends. People who have taken an interest in me as a person. People who inspired me, pushed me and encouraged me. There are teachers, newspapermen, preachers, just ordinary folks who continue to mean a great deal to me on a personal level.

I am luckier still because one of the top names on the list of heroes is a man who taught, and teaches me about life.

To a little boy he was the man who single-handedly defeated the Axis Powers in WWII. He told stories of many battles, Sicily, Anzio, Salerno, Caseno, the Rapido River, Southern France and on into Austria. He talked of the humorous things and he never failed to impress the feeling of fear.

In actuality, he was no more a hero than millions of others who interrupted their lives during the first half of the 1940s. But to a little boy that fact made little difference.

He came home, married, went to work and dedicated himself to one thing in this world, and that was his family.

He presided over a home full of warmth, love and laughter. Oh, there were occasional words of anger, but even then he seemed to be able to turn them into a lesson to be remembered at a later date.

He taught me to be a man. And with that mantle comes certain obligations, and behavior befitting the title. Somewhere through a mistake in our society, it became unmanly to say a few words; the words are always there but they seem to hang in the throat.

Only a few will sound the trumpet and beat the drum for this, my personal hero. The cadence is not from the skin of a drumhead but that of a heart saying, "I love you, Daddy."

Let me join with the rest of you as your honor your personal heroes. Happy Father's Day.

COUNTY

during the next week.

In other business the commissioners unanimously awarded three bids for county vehicles to the low bidder, Stevens Chevrolet. Steven's bid $12,475 with a trade-in for a 1988 half-ton four-by-four pickup to be used by Precinct One. $10,250 was Steven's winning bid for a 1988 half-ton pickup for Precinct 2. And, $9,827 was the winning bid for a 1987 Caprice to be used by the sheriff's office.

Commissioners also passed a resolution which will allow the newly formed Domestic Violence Center to apply for a Justice Assistance Act grant. The grant requires local matching funds which will be solicited from the county, city and school taxing entities. Outreach Coordinator Juliann Thompson reported that 15 local volunteers have been trained to assist in operating the center.

Extension Agent Dennis Newton was given permission to fill a vacancy on his staff. He will advertise the part-time secretarial position.

Melvin Weber received tentative approval for a proposed mobile home park to be located north of the Pioneer Addition, across from White Implement. Weber owns the land on which he plans to place 33 mobile home lots. County Surveyor Kenneth Hagar stated he had studied the plan and could see no problems. Weber will be required to obtain permission from the city commission and to comply with city and county regulations.

Commissioners accepted the resignation of Dianne Pierson, county librarian, who is taking a position as Assistant Socio-economic Director with the Waste Deposit Impact Committee. Pierson has been employed with the library for nine years and has been director for the past six years. Her resignation is effective July 10.

Pierson recommended Rebecca Walls be appointed an acting director for a trial basis of six to eight weeks to determine her suitability for the position. She also requested that main locks on the building be changed for security reasons. Pierson is currently interviewing applicants to replace Jack Nunley as custodian of the facility. Simons will make the final decision on hiring based on Pierson's recommendations.

Bradly provided a progress report on the remodeling process underway in the county courthouse and advised the commissioners of additional plans for painting various offices and of a problem with refrigerated piping which drips on the sheriff's desk.

A bond fee proposal passed at the last commissioner meeting will be implemented on July 1. Commissioners will review the job description of Sharon Pennington, employed in the Sheriff's office, with an eye to promoting her to the administrative secretary level in light of numerous duties she has taken on since her initial employment.

County Auditor Alex Schroeter presented a proposed policy for a county purchasing agent. The plan calls for large use items, such as printing, to be bid in lots. Commissioners expect the plan to provide noticeable savings for the county in the purchase of frequently used items. They will review and take action at their next meeting.

No bids were received on sealcoating projects for roads in Precinct 2 and it was decided that since other precincts require the same service one bid for all four precincts would be advertised.

In other business, Don Coffman of West Texas Gas, Inc. received permission to cross a county road with a gas line.

No action was taken on advertising for bids to lease or purchase computer equipment for the county.

It was decided to check with Panhandle Regional Planning Commission regarding the availability of grant monies to pave a road to Merrick Pet Foods. The company, being planned by Garth Merrick, will employ 30. Commissioner Troy Don Moore was advised that the August shipment of commodities for the distribution program will be his responsibility.

The next commissioners meeting is scheduled for July 13.

Considering the Options

Deaf Smith County Commissioners checked the suggestion given Monday for establishing a new county road. Looking over the site of the proposed road are,

Ann Landers

Drunk drivers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I know you have printed several letters about drunk drivers, but I hope you will find room for one more. Millions of people read your column, and if my letter saves just one life it will be worth the pain I am experiencing as I write this.

My husband and I never had children of our own but we had a nephew (my sister's boy) who was as dear to us as if he had been born of our very own flesh.

"Rick" was a beautiful baby and had the sunniest disposition of any child I had ever seen. He seemed always to be smiling, never cried and was walking and talking long before our other nieces and nephews. This child was special in every way. He captivated everyone on first meeting.

My husband took Rick on fishing trips. Every summer, starting when he was 6, we took him with us on summer vacations. Often he would spend weekends with us just because he was a pleasure to have around. He never met a stranger and had hundreds of friends.

Rick got his driver's license three days after his 16th birthday. Whenever he went out with his pals he was the designated driver because they all knew he never touched alcohol or drugs. Rick didn't consider himself a model among his peers, but that is exactly what he was.

Three weeks after his 17th birthday Rick was on his way home after having dropped off several classmates who were celebrating a football victory over their arch rival. He was within two miles of his home when a car came at him at about 75 miles an hour, going the wrong way on a one-way street. Our beautiful young Rick was killed instantly.

The driver of the other car was another teenager. He was dead drunk. The extent of his injuries was a bump on the head. This young man's driver's license had been taken away three months before for drunk driving, and the accident in which Rick died was his third wreck while under the influence of alcohol. Where is justice? A marvelous young life had been snuffed out by a teenager who had no business behind the wheel of a car.

What can be done, Ann, to prevent this sort of thing from happening again and again? It is too late for us, but not for others. Thank you for any suggestions you might have. P.S. I know this letter is too long to print. Please use as much of it as you can. — Heartbroken Uncle and Aunt

DEAR FRIENDS: Here is your letter, all of it. Thank you for writing.

What this country needs are tougher laws to deal with drunk drivers and a great deal more vigilance to make certain that those laws are carried out.

A driver whose license has been revoked and gets behind the wheel of a car drunk again should be dealt with harshly. Anyone arrested for drunk driving a third time should be made to enter a rehabilitation program and denied the right to drive for at least three years.

It should be pointed out that many drunk drivers are also drug abusers. I cannot emphasize too strongly that a person who has been drinking or using drugs is no judge of his or her condition. For the love of God and your fellow man, if you are one who does either of the above, stay out of the driver's seat. You are a potential suicide or murderer.

Texas man carves spoons, grows herbs

PARIS, Texas (AP) — A young woman watched Kenny Brackett quickly taper the lip of the spoon he was carving at a recent craft fair.

"I never knew a spoon could be so beautiful," she exclaimed.

Brackett carves wooden spoons and bowls both for art and function. They are made to use, but they also are on display at a local art gallery.

Trained professionally as a cook, Brackett says it was his own cooking that got him into carving spoons.

"I had difficulty finding a good ladle spoon," I said, "I'll just make me a spoon." I made my first spoon with a frog knife — a hoof trimming tool.

His own culinary needs also led him to another enterprise, growing fresh herbs he now sells to other Northeast Texas cooks.

Brackett and his partner, Dwain Hearn, began the herb business four years ago. Today, they have one acre of herb plants in production.

Each of Brackett's spoons is a little different, he says.

"The shape depends on the piece of wood — the shape and if it has any knots in it. I try to go with the grain of the wood. If the grain is twisted, I go with the twist. Sometimes I have to change directions because the wood won't cut one direction."

Some of the spoons' bowls are rounded, others gently pointed, some even heart-shaped. And he sometimes carves ornaments — a horse's hoof, a hand, a bird's head — into the end of his spoon handles.

He uses all kinds of native woods and fruit woods for the spoons, and mostly walnut, birch, hornbeam and basswood for the bowls.

"I try to make attractive use of the different variations in the wood," Brackett said, showing a large oval bowl he had carved from walnut. "This bowl has the darker heartwood down and the lighter sapwood up, forming a border around the top of the bowl."

He says he begins each spoon with a hatchet, a hickory stump, and a piece of wood. "I make two stock cuts where the bowl joins the handle and I do as much roughing out as I can do with a hatchet before going to the shavehorse."

A shavehorse is an old fashioned work bench which was generally used by coopers for making tool handles and wooden staves for barrels. Brackett made his own shavehorse, modifying a Swiss pattern.

He clamps the rough spoon into the shavehorse and uses a mallet, a gouge, a drawknife, and a small knife which has a one-and-a-half-inch blade. He also uses a Swedish carver's hoot.

Brackett uses two kinds of finish to highlight and preserve the beauty of the wooden spoons and bowls while leaving them safe for contact with food, Craftsman Salad Bowl Finish and Behlen's Salad Bowl Finish.

"When I first started out — before I found out about these finishes, I rubbed the spoons with safflower oil," he says.

The small sign in front of Brackett's home studio and herb business, located two-and-a-half miles west of Paris on U.S. 82, proclaims simply "HERB PLANTS."

Brackett and Hearn sell French tarragon, chives, thyme, rosemary, oregano, fennel, sorrel, sage, sweet marjoram, basil, lemon balm, a variety of mints, and a number of other herbs.

A greenhouse contains small potted plants for sale. Larger specimen plants are dug from the garden.

Brackett, who served as a cook in the Marine Corps for four years and later held civilian cooking jobs, uses fresh herbs in his own cooking and also makes herb teas. He shared some of his recipes:

PEPPERMINT TEA

A handful of peppermint leaves, washed well

Put in a Mr. Coffee coffeemaker. Fill decanter full of water and run water through. Pour into gallon jar. Run one more decanter of water through coffeemaker. Add 1-2 to 3-4 cup honey. Stir in while hot. Add to gallon jar and finish filling with water.

Can be served hot or cold. "I like it better cold," Brackett says.

FILLETTO ROSEMARINO

Cook a fine cut of choice tenderloin in some butter with some rosemary, two sage leaves, and 1 bay leaf, plus salt and pepper. Cook to taste. "Medium rare is ideal, I think,"

Brackett says. Toss in some brandy or cognac. Let it flame. Then stir up the drippings with a few drops of water. Serve.

PATE BEAU MONDE

8 ounces cream cheese
4 tablespoons cream
2½ teaspoons Beau Monde Seasoning (Spice Island)
7 sprigs thyme
6 sprigs marjoram
6 sprigs winter savory
1 good-sized sprig parsley

Chop all up extremely fine. Mix and refrigerate 3 to 4 hours before serving.

HERB FRENCH DRESSING

½ cup wine vinegar
1 cup safflower oil
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon dry mustard
2 tablespoons fresh basil
1 tablespoon fresh tarragon minced

2 twigs of peppermill
½ teaspoon Worcestershire Sauce

Mix together well.

HERBED CHEF'S SALAD

½ head lettuce
2 cups French sorrel, chopped
2 cups bronze fennel, chopped
2 medium carrots, chopped
1 pound smoked ham, chopped
3 hard-boiled eggs, chopped
2 cups fresh chopped chives
tomatoes, quartered, then halved
2 ribs celery

Serve with herb dressing.

SUNSCREEN

Protecting children from the rays

- Keep children under 1 year old out of the sun as much as possible.
- Avoid the sun between 11 a.m. and 3 p.m.
- Cover the child with a sunhat, long-sleeved shirt and long pants. Use a stroller with a canopy or umbrella.
- Use a sunscreen (SPF 15), although, for children 2 or under, consult a doctor.
- Beware of sun reflected off sand, cement or snow and be careful on cloudy days.
- Be especially careful at high altitudes and in southern climates.
- Avoid artificial tanning sources, such as tanning salons.
- Don't let children in the sun if they're taking certain medicines. Check with your doctor.
- Examine your child's skin regularly.
- Follow safe sunning procedures yourself.

While it's important for children to be outside, they must be protected from the sun's harmful effects. Damage from the sun's ultraviolet radiation cannot be erased. Some children soak up enough sun to give them skin cancer later in life no matter how careful they become when they grow up.

Rangers fall to Angels, 7-3

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — For nine years, reliever Greg Minton was the mainstay of the San Francisco Giants' bullpen staff, notching 124 saves.

"But I wasn't the most loved guy in Frisco when I left," Minton said Monday night after earning his first American League save in California's 7-3 victory over the Texas Rangers.

"In fact," he continued, "people would throw things at me while I was warming up in the bullpen and some of the other relievers refused to warm up at the same time."

If the 35-year-old right-hander continues to perform as he has since being acquired June 2 by the Angels, he will still be welcomed with open arms in California, albeit down the road in Anaheim.

He replaced winner DeWayne Buice, 3-3, in the seventh with two on, two out and the Angels leading 6-3.

He retired Ruben Sierra on a groundout, then faced six batters in the next two innings, getting all six outs on grounders.

"I tried throwing curve balls, but they're too hard to catch," Minton said jokingly, "so I went back to the old sinker."

Minton was released by the Giants at his own request — sort of.

"They were putting me into 10-2 and 9-1 games," he explained, "so I said, 'Release me,' and darned if they didn't. I was released one night and signed the next morning with the Angels."

He has made six appearances for California and has pitched 11 scoreless innings, allowing four hits.

"For me, pitching in the American League right now is like pitching in a Little League All-Star game," he said. "I don't know the hitters and they don't know me."

"But if I don't make any mistakes, like throwing the ball where I don't want it to go, I should have the advantage for a while."

The Rangers chased Angels starter Mike Witt in the third — his earliest exit since Sept. 18, 1983 — when Scott Fletcher's 2-run homer gave Texas a 3-2 lead.

But Buice relieved and held the Rangers scoreless for 4 1-3 innings while the Angels rallied against Greg Harris, 2-7, who allowed six runs on seven hits and four walks in six innings.

Three of the Angel runs were scored by batters who walked leading off an inning.

Wally Joyner drove in two of the California runs while Devon White had three hits, scored twice and drove in a run.

Organization encourages people to 'just consider'

HOUSTON (AP) — Howard Pierce was one of the lucky ones.

Doctors gave the 48-year-old Texaco Inc. employee six months to live unless he received a heart transplant. Six weeks later, he had a new heart.

The quick response was made possible through The Living Bank, a national organ donor registry and referral service based in Houston.

"It's a shame so many organs go unused," Pierce says. "It's remarkable for them (family members) to think of someone during their time of grief."

Each year, an estimated 18,000 to 22,000 potential donors will die and with those deaths comes the loss of thousands of livers, hearts, kidneys, corneas, bones and pancreas, which could save many lives, said W.P. Wear, board president for The Living Bank.

When it was founded in 1968, the Living Bank was housed in a 40-foot trailer and had only 20 members. Now more than 200,000 people are registered, says William D. Brewster, executive director of the non-profit organization.

"The primary reason for starting The Living Bank was that they had just had heart transplants, but there was a great need for education about donors," Brewster says.

Glen Karsten had done volunteer work at the Texas Medical Center and a friend called her one day asking about organ donations. Mrs. Karsten didn't know the answer, but promised to find out.

What she discovered was a void of information about organ donation since transplants were relatively new to medicine, Brewster said.

"In 1968 during all the heart transplants, I thought it was unfair to go to people when in shock and in grief and ask for their loved one's heart," Mrs. Karsten said. "One of my friends said there should be some way to plan ahead of time while you're young and healthy."

The result of Mrs. Karsten's investigation was The Living Bank. After a story about the organization appeared in "Reader's Digest" in 1969, about 32,000 letters came with questions about organ donations, she said.

"The theme to the letters was this is something I've wanted to do and didn't know how," Mrs. Karsten said.

Twenty years later, transplants are common and The Living Bank wants organ donations to be just as routine.

As Brewster describes his mission: "Make organ donations the usual, not the unusual."

The bank has provided 1,599 organs or tissues during the past three years, including 889 whole eyes and 380 corneas, Brewster said.

The Living Bank registers members by having them fill out applications designating specific organs for donation. The potential donor, the next of kin and another witness also must sign the application.

The donor gets a membership card and a sticker for their driver's license indicating they want their organs donated.

When the donor dies, the next of kin is notified to approve the donation. The Living Bank then contacts a procurement agency to handle the matter from there on.

"If the next of kin says no, then that's it," Brewster says.

The organization provides public education, handles a national registry of organ donors and is a referral service for procurement agencies.

For the past two years, the organization — which does not advertise — has received publicity from heart recipient Pierce, who frequently speaks to groups about organ donations and his experience.

"I encourage people to make their wishes known to their family because if your survivors aren't agreeable to making that donation, all the papers you sign mean nothing," he says.

Adds Brewster, "Lots of entire families are signed up. We have members as young as less than a year old and old as 100."

Before he needed a heart, Pierce was not a member of The Living Bank. Now he is, along with his wife, son-in-law and three daughters.

The organization drew the attention of President Reagan, who mentioned the bank during one of his weekly radio addresses. And Vice President George Bush and his wife, Barbara, signed organ donors cards in January.

The Living Bank, with a staff of seven plus volunteers, receives no federal money and relies solely on contributions from individuals, corporations and foundations, Brewster says.

Last year, it began teaming with the Texas Department of Public Safety to get more people to consider organ donations. Texans applying for or renewing their driver's licenses are being asked if they have considered being organ donors. If the applicant says yes, he gets an application for The Living Bank.

The partnership overwhelmingly has increased the number of members, Brewster says. In 1986, 38,000 new members were registered — about 60 percent of them resulting from the license program.

A similar effort now is in effect in Wyoming, which is contributing about 400 members a month, and Montana is engaged in a pilot project.

Texas Gov. Bill Clements recently signed legislation requiring medical personnel to ask family members of deceased if they want to donate organs. Twenty-nine other states already have similar laws.

Henri III of France was infatuated with his Maltese dogs. He hung three or four in a basket around his neck and strutted around the palace.

Teen stabbing linked to honors student leaves friends baffled

UNIVERSITY PARK, Texas (AP) — A suburban Dallas enclave of expensive brick homes and impeccably kept lawns is an unlikely setting for a street knifeing.

But on one of the tree-lined thoroughfares, less than a week before high school graduation, a teen-age argument led to the stabbing of a 17-year-old boy described as a skinny kid who usually steered clear of trouble.

The accused assailant is an 18-year-old honors student with no history of violence who police say used a pocketknife that was a graduation gift.

The stabbing, which left Garvin Donald Fitch in critical condition, shook the calm tenor of the exclusive suburb, leaving friends and school officials wondering how Todd Sharpe, an award-winning student who sang in the choir, and Fitch, the vice president of a school club, got caught up in violence.

"We just don't have any answers," said Jim Gibson, principal of Highland Park High School, which both students attended.

Sharpe, the son of a Presbyterian church business manager and one of the winners of the Ben W. Wiseman scholarship for exemplary leadership and character, faces charges of attempted murder. He is free on $5,000 bond.

Neither he nor Fitch, vice president of the school's Field and Stream Club, had a record of misconduct or violence and apparently did not know each other, Gibson said.

Police say an egg tossed over a fence sparked the fight, although they don't know who threw it or how the seemingly harmless prank exploded into a stabbing.

"It's like a blob that grows on you," said University Park police investigator J.V. McDonnell.

"Basically, just two guys got into a little heated discussion and one guy stabbed another," McDonnell said. "Nobody knows exactly why. I think it's just a heat of passion type deal."

Early on the morning of May 31,

Fitch was driving by a house where a swimming party was being held, McDonnell said. An egg was thrown and hit Fitch's jeep. Fitch stopped, and Sharpe, a guest at the party, came out to the street, McDonnell said.

"Sharpe and Fitch got into a little altercation, a little talking loud and a little swearing here and there and a little shoving," said the investigator.

A companion with Fitch began arguing with others at the party, distracting attention from the Sharpe-Fitch exchange, he said.

"Next thing you know, the boy was stabbed. No one actually saw the stabbing." The 2 3/4-inch blade pocketknife used in the stabbing was a graduation present to Sharpe, according to McDonnell.

The Sharpe and Fitch families declined comment. The Sharpe family's attorney, William T. Hill Jr., also refused to comment on the case.

The Fitch stabbing capped a year of tragedy at Highland Park, which has 1,400 pupils. Two students died accidentally this spring and school officials responded by setting up support groups.

After the stabbing, school officials organized a blood drive for the hospital where Fitch is staying.

The affluent suburbs, University Park where houses sell for an average of $200,000, and its pricier neighbor, Highland Park, are usually quiet places. Both are replete with stately two-story brick homes and tidy flowerbeds bisecting emerald lawns.

"It's supposed to be the elite of the North Dallas area," McDonnell said.

Gibson said there were only two incidents during the school year that could be classified as fights, and neither involved serious injury.

He said students didn't routinely carry knives on campus.

"I didn't want to believe it (that) something this tragic would happen in our high school," said Glenn Krueger, 17, who sang tenor in the choir with Sharpe.

He said he thought to himself,

"Todd wouldn't stab anybody. Especially a fellow student. Then I found it was true (the incident). I didn't know what to think. I've never known him to be violent."

"I think most (students) were angry at first," said Lee Hancock, Fitch's best friend. But now there is mostly sadness. "Basically I really feel bad for both families and both kids," he said.

The school principal said both students achieved in their own way. "It would appear totally out of character for either one of them to be involved in a stabbing incident," Gibson said.

School officials wouldn't release the students' grade point averages, but Sharpe was an honors graduate, meaning he had an A average. Fitch was "about a B" student, Hancock said.

Fitch was "kind of skinny," and had given up football because of the risk of injury, said Hancock, 17, who has known Fitch since he was 7.

"He's usually pretty conservative. If there's something everyone wants to go out and do and it doesn't sound too bright, he usually wants to go out and do something else. He's that guy in the group," Hancock said.

The students' backgrounds plus the lack of a witness to the actual stabbing has made the case more complex, but hasn't slowed the investigation, McDonnell said.

"Everybody says they're good kids and stuff like that... Everybody's trying to make the Sharpe boy look like the innocent little kid," he said.

Less than a week after the stabbing, Sharpe graduated, receiving his diploma to cheers and applause.

"I'm not going to back down," he was quoted as saying shortly before the ceremony, which school officials had attempted to prevent him from attending.

Krueger said the applause was started by Sharpe's friends and then others joined in.

"I clapped for Todd just because he's a great guy," Krueger said.

But despite the show of support, the incident has cast a long shadow across the Class of '87, Hancock said.

"It's going to be something that we remember for the rest of our lives. I really just feel bad it happened and hope it turns out all right."

DR. GOTT

Peter Gott, M.D.

Walking on tiptoes can be a problem

DEAR DR. GOTT — I have a beautiful, bright 7-year-old grandson who constantly walks on his tiptoes. His parents refuse to seek medical advice and they tell me to butt out. Will he outgrow this way of walking?

DEAR READER — Children often tend to walk on their toes. Although this occurs in normal youngsters, some orthopedic abnormalities — such as tight calf muscles — can produce this gait. Your grandson probably will outgrow the tendency to walk on his toes as he gets older.

Nonetheless, I agree with you that he should be medically checked. Perhaps, with your encouragement, his parents should mention this to his pediatrician at the time of the child's next routine examination.

DEAR DR. GOTT — How do children get worms from dogs?

DEAR READER — Intestinal parasites usually lay eggs that are passed from the body in waste matter. The unhatched eggs can survive for many weeks in soil. Children have a natural tendency to put their fingers in their mouths. If dirt (and worm eggs) are introduced into the children's intestinal tracts this way, the worms will hatch and begin another life cycle.

Therefore, dogs who have parasites should be wormed. Children who inhabit the same environment as the dogs should be encouraged to follow hygienic practices, such as washing their hands before meals and keeping their fingers out of their mouths.

DEAR DR. GOTT — What causes maple-syrup urine disease?

DEAR READER — Maple-syrup urine disease is an inherited disorder in children. These youngsters lack an enzyme needed for the breakdown of three amino acids (valine, leucine and isoleucine). The disease causes abnormal reflexes and a urine that smells like maple syrup. The condition is usually discovered in infancy and is treated by using diets that do not contain the particular amino acids. More aggressive medical therapy, such as dialysis, is seldom needed.
