Area towns asked to help procure SSC

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) -Leaders of the Amarillo "super collider" project have made a sales pitch to about 30 representatives from Panhandle towns for money needed to lure the atom smasher to the Texas Panhandle.

"This thing would have the most important economic impact that anything has had in the the Panhandle of Texas since the railroads," said Larry Milner, president of the Amarillo Chamber of Commerce.

Hereford Mayor Wes Fisher said the conference was "a very good, upbeat meeting."

At least 33 states are competing for the physics project.

Justice Powell resigns

WASHINGTON (AP) - Supreme Court Justice Lewis F. Powell, a moderate who has been the pivotal vote in many of the court's close decisions, today announced he is retiring from the nation's highest court.

The announcement was such a surprise that the White House learned of his intentions only this morning.

Powell, who has suffered from prostate cancer, made the announcement in a printed statement shortly after he left the bench for the last time. "I have advised the chief justice and associate justices that I have elected to retire as an associate justice. The president will be advised today," the statement said. Powell's departure gives President Reagan the chance to change significantly the court's ideological balance with his third appointment. His most recent appointment, naming William H. Rehnquist to replace Warren Burger as chief justice, merely replaced one conservative with another.

Texas in the national competition. Milner released figures Thursday night obtained from economicimpact studies conducted by what he called Amarillo's two chief competitors, a site in Batavia, Ill., and one in Stockton, Calif.

The Illinois study says the super collider would produce 3,445 manufacturing jobs, 5,541 nonmanufacturing jobs, 388 state and federal jobs and $1.5 billion in disposable income during a six-year period beginning in 1988.

"And that's only half of it, because that's just the construction phase," Milner said.

Milner said he received the California study Thursday and did not have complete figures. But the survey indicates the super collider would bring about 7,600 direct and 4,800 indirect jobs to the Stockton area.

West Texas State University is expected to complete a similar study of the super collider's economic impact on the Panhandle by next week, Amarillo Mayor Glen Parkey said.

State consultants have said the Panhandle must come up with $447,000 to present a first-class proposal to the U.S. Department of Energy by Aug. 3, Milner said.

Fisher said Hereford's share in that cost would be about $9,100.

"It's worth that for the unity (of area towns)," Fisher said. "It's a commission decision of course."

He added that at the meeting it was reported that there is a good chance that the SSC will be larger than 50 miles in circumference, possibly up to 100 miles.

Chamber breakfast set July 2

25 Cents

At 6:30 a.m. next Thursday is the annual "Firecracker Fun Breakfast" to celebrate the Fourth of July in Hereford.

The bi-monthly Chamber of Commerce breakfast takes a patriotic theme annually in July, and this year's tribute is sponsored by the First National Bank.

Emcees John Stagner and Charlie Bell will handle the giveaways, games and announcements of upcoming events. A special award will be presented to the person attired most patriotically. New residents and chamber members will be introduced, as usual.

The breakfast will have some surprises in addition to the presentation of the honorary "Bull Chip Award" to a deserving Hereford resident.

Reservations may be made by calling the Chamber office, at 364-3333, by Wednesday, July 1, at 5 p.m. The cost is $4.

Deception tried on arms sale

WASHINGTON (AP) - Lt. Col. Oliver L. North, Rear Adm. John M. Poindexter and other top administration officials orchestrated an effort last November to deceive Congress and the Justice Department about U.S. involvement in arms sales to Iran; assistant attorney general Charles Cooper told Congress.

Cooper, who was in charge of an investigation of the arms sales launched by Attorney General Edwin Meese III, said Thursday it became apparent to him that at least North and Poindexter were lying when they helped prepare congressional testimony for then-CIA director William J. Casey.

Powell once said, "I try very hard to reconcile views I may have to help put a court (majority) together."

sites for the final competition, with a finalist to be announced in July 1988. City and county officials from areas around Amarillo have until Aug. 1 to contribute money to the project. Most seemed agreeable Thursday to the plan, which would require towns to either contribute from reserves or raise taxes, the Amarillo Globe reported.

Fisher. "With these kinds of numbers, it's hard to be opposed to it."

But while Potter County Judge Elisha Demerson said he was pleased with the way the project is going, he still needs to think about the more than $100,000 requested of his county.

he said. "My election promise was to not raise taxes, and we'd probably the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn., have to do that to support this plan."

Impeachment chairman says to finish budget first

AUSTIN (AP) - A resolution caling for a legislative inquiry into possible impeachment proceedings against Gov. Bill Clements should wait until budget work is finished, says the chairman of the committee considering the measure.

"I think we've got a lot of other things to do first, like the budget," said Rep. Pete Laney, D-Hale Center, chairman of the House State Affairs Committee.

Reps. Paul Moreno, D-El Paso, and Al Edwards, D-Houston, filed the resolution this week following a Methodist bishops' report on the Southern Methodist University payfor-play football scandal.

"I think that's an SMU problem until the time thta there's something that shows the law's been broken or something like that," Laney said Thursday.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby sought to downplay the impeachment talk that started when the bishops' indicated that Clements, as chairman of SMU's board of governors, tried to cover up the scheme that led to severest sanctions ever against a collegiate football team.

Hobby, a Democrat who would become governor if Clements, a Republican, were ousted, said he sees no reason to consider such a move.

"His administration has been unfortunate for the state, as there have been other unfortunate administrations, but I see no grounds for imeachment," Hobby said. But two members of the House committee said a hearing on the olution should be held.

"I think it's our obligation and duty to do a thorough investigation of all the facts, both pro- an antiimpeachment, and then vote based on the evidence," said Rep. Debra Danburg, D-Houston.

"I think the issue is that every time I turn on the 6 or the 10 o'clock news, you have first the budget issue and next the impeachment issue. So I think it's an issue, and I think we ought to address it," said Rep. Lena Guerrero, D-Austin. House Speaker Gib Lewis, D-Fort Worth, said the question diverts attention from the budget crisis. "I think it takes away from what we are here to do, and that is to try to balance the state budget. If we get that done and have time to mess with it (the impeachment inquiry), we might look at it," Lewis said. The executive director of the citizen group Common Cause of Texas urged Clements to come forward and tell all about his role in the affair.

"The people of Texas deserve to know the truth about the involvement of our highest elected official in "The report contains shocking revelations about the callous disregard of the most elementary concepts of ethical conduct,' Hildreth said.

Clements refused to respond. When an SMU question arose during an impromptu news conference, he walked into his office without answering.

Clements first disclosed March 3 that he knew about and continued payments to SMU players while on the board of governors.

Harvey Prickett, president of American Correctional Systems Inc. based in Fort Collins, Colo., said the company hopes to locate the state's first private prison in Jefferson County because "it has achieved a reputation for being willing to all go together in one direction." 'We're willing to risk in excess of $32 million for a 500-bed prison unit and we are prepared to risk four times that amount to build a 2,000-bed prison unit to meet the state's needs," he said.

"There is a need for 10,000 prison cells in Texas. We're willing to take the gamble that inmates will be sent to our facility because it will be a high quality prison that will operate cost-effectively and provide more than ample security."

Jefferson County owns 69 acres west of Port Arthur Road that could use such a prison system, Lei

In a day full of revelations that ended the seventh week of the Iran-Contra hearings, it also was disclosed:

-At least one additional major shredding incident, in addition to North's previously described destruction of National Security Council documents, took place as the affair unraveled last fall.

Sen. Warren Rudman, R-N.H., hinted at the shredding, saying figuratively that it could "fill up a half of a boxcar." But he said he was "not at liberty to discuss" it further until the incident is detailed in later hearings.

-Former National Security Adviser Robert C. McFarlane, in an interview with Meese as the attorney general carried out his investigation last November, withheld some details of the affair because he was "trying to protect the president," Cooper said. McFarlane made the comment privately to Meese, who recounted it to Cooper.

-President Reagan expressed "complete surprise" when told by Meese that a memo had been found in North's files that outlined a diversion of Iranian arms sale monies to the Nicaraguan Contra rebels, Cooper said Meese told him. Reagan has contended that he knew nothing of the diversion of funds.

At a meeting on Nov. 20 called by Meese to review Casey's testimony, North inserted language into the draft testimony stating that no one in the U.S. government knew a flight into Iran a year earlier by a CIA-linked air cargo company was carrying U.S.-made Hawk anti-aircraft missiles from Israel.

The original statement had been false, maintaining that the CIA was not aware of the weapons shipment, but North's change broadened the deception. In fact, the weapons were being carried on a plane manned by CIA agents and directed by Duane Clarridge, the agency's covert operations director for Europe. North innew his statement to be false at the time, as did Poindexter, who was at the meeting and voiced no objection, said Cooper, who also

Renews controversy

Against odometer rollback in automobiles

Consumers can protect themselves

By LAWRENCE KILMAN Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) - Is it new or is it used? If a car's odometer is disconnected at the factory, as has been charged in a case against Chrysler Motors Corp., there is no way for consumers to know for sure.

But when it comes to used cars, consumers can take steps to avoid automobiles that may have been driven farther than the odometer indicates.

Odometer fraud is estimated by the U.S. Transportation Department to cost consumers $1 billion a year. Until now, doctored mileage had been identified as only a used-car problem.

The Chrysler indictment Wednesday charged that the company, the automaking arm of Chrysler Corp., sold as new up to 60,000 cars that had been driven by company executives with the odometers disconnected.

Some of the cars were wrecked and repaired before being sold, according to the indictment.

Chrysler has denied doing anything illegal or improper.

"In a situation like this on a new car, there is absolutely nothing you can do. Zero. Zip," said Bob Knol. head of the auto test division of Consumers Union, publisher of Consumer Reports magazine. "There is nothing you can look for if the odometer is disconnected at the factory and then reconnected."

Most new cars have between 10 and 40 miles on their odometers when they are sold, which represents testing and the driving it takes to get the car from the factory to the truck. train or boat, and then to the dealercan't just build cars, look at them with electronic stuff, pat them on the head and let them go. But the Chrysler indictment charged that executives drove the cars mal for plant people to drive produc-

how they're doing," Knoll said. "You days or weeks at a time, and up to 400 miles with the odometers disconnected.

Federal law requires dealers to keep records on odometer readings. Dealers must sign statements saying the odometer reading is correct as far as they know, and they face civil and criminal penalties for lying.

Tampering with an odometer is a misdemeanor but will become a felony beginning in 1988. The measure, sponsored by U.S. Sen. J. James Exon, D-Neb., increases the civil penalties for tampering from $1,000 to $2,000 per vehicle and raises the criminal penalty from one year to three years in prison.

Used-car buyers have ways to check whether odometers have been "clocked," or rolled back. The Used Car Book, written by the editors of Consumer Automotive Press and published by Fawcett Columbine in New York, recommends:

-Looking at the maintenance stickers on the door post to see if the recorded mileage ever exceeded the present odometer mileage. Sometimes a motorist can tell if the odometer has been rolled back by the irregular alignment of its numbers, but this is inconclusive.

-Checking wear and tear. A car with less than 20,000 miles should not have excessive wear on the accelerator, clutch or brake pedals. It shouldn't have a sagging driver's seat. The metal trim around the ignition lock shouldn't be dulled by key scratches.

-Contacting the prior registered owner and asking what the mileage was when the car was sold to the dealer.

In many cases, the previous owner's name can be found at the local department of motor vehicles.

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration also takes reports on odometer fraud and provides information about odometer tampering to consumers through its auto safety hotline, 1-800-424-9393.

Homicides, suicides, mishaps are biggest killers of youth

By JAMES LITKE Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) - Homicide, suicide and accidents far outstrip disease as the leading killers of America's young, and the pressures of modern life are partly to blame, says the author of a study published today.

"We need to look at what we're doing to kids, given this tremendous pace," said Dr. Robert Blum, director of the University of Minnesota's Adolescent Health Program.

Three of four 15- to 24-year-olds who die are victims of violence, according to the report in the Journal of the American Medical Association. Accidents, primarily car accidents, account for more than half the deaths, and remain by far the No. 1 cause of death among the young.

Homicide deaths among young people have climbed 300 percent in 30 years to become the No. 2 killer, and suicide has climbed even faster over the same period, surpassing disease to become the third-leading cause of death "Violence has overwhelmed illness to the point where this age group is the only one whose health status has not improved over the last 30 years,"

Blum said.

"Now that we've gained some control over organic illness and infectious diseases, we must learn to cope with different, but more preventable causes of death."

Blum said doctors "are in a unique position to develop prevention strategies for these kids. But doctors tell us medical school never prepared them to deal with the social problems underlying these problems."

Blum, 39, said the stresses facing today's young people are apparent in the numbers of accidents, homicides and suicides.

"The pace of living is being sped up. Experiences when I was growing up, that you confronted in your 20s and 30s, now are being forced upon kids of 10," he said.

The doctor, who reviewed dozens of studies on adolescents, said even accidents may be less random than they are assumed to be.

He noted car accidents account for about 60 percent of all young people's accidents, and more than half those who die are found to be intoxicated. Yet, he said, adolescents rank automotive safety as a low priority in one survey after another, and increasing numbers of them report drinking and driving.

Accident fatality rates in the general population have declined about 26 percent since 1950, standing at 42.3 deaths per 100,000 population in 1980. Accident rates involving 15to 24-year-olds have climbed steadily, reaching 61.7 deaths per 100,000 by 1980.

The homicide rate in the general population in 1980 was 10.8 per 100,000 population, a 100 percent increase from 1950. Among 15- to 24-year-olds, homicide was the cause in 15.6 deaths per 100,000 people per year.

The suicide rate among 15- to 24-year-olds quadrupled, accounting for 12.3 deaths per 100,000. That compared with a rate of 11.4 in the general population, a negligible increase since 1950.

After suicide, the leading causes of death among young people in 1980 were cancer, 6.3 per 100,000; cardiovascular disease, 4.1; congenital anomalies, 1.4, and influenza and pneumonia, 0.8.

Minister repeats remarks on Jews, Jesus, salvation

DALLAS (AP) - A former president of the Southern Baptist Convention has publicly reiterated his belief that Jews can't find salvation without Jesus, renewing a controversy that first erupted seven years ago.

"I'm not against the Jewish people," the Rev. Bailey Smith told 2,000 cheering Southern Baptist vangelists last week in St. Louis. "But unless they repent and get born again, they don't have a prayer." The Dallas Times Herald today reported Smith's comments. delivered June 17 at a conference at a Southern Baptist convention. The Times Herald said Smith's speech was made when the conference was not in session.

Jewish leaders responded with dismay to Smith's comments, which echoed his 1980 statement that "God doesn't hear the prayers of a Jew."

"I'm very upset, I'm furious," the Rabbi James Rudin, national interreligious director of the American Jewish Committee, told the Times Herald Thursday from his New York office. "It is really unfortunate that we have another insensitive and theologically biased example of Christian anti-Semitism from a man we heard it from seven years ago." Smith was president of the Southern Baptist Convention in 1980. Urging ministers to tackle tough issues, he noted that few publicly supported him in 1980.

"When I was willing to put myself into a national controversy, because I just happened to say that if you don't know Jesus Christ, you haven't got a prayer, some men that I loved and trusted wouldn't stand with me on that, and they'd come to me, and they'd say, 'Bailey, that was true, but you shouldn't have said it," Smith said. "Folks, if the Bible is true, you ought to say it."

said. The company would need 15 acres of land for every 500 inmates, which it would lease or buy from the county, Prickett said.

Under the company's innovative plan of operation, local unions would train medium-security inmates in marketable job skills and a local industry would employ about 40 percent of the inmate population at rates ranging from minimum wage to $6 per hour.

The plan would allow the inmate to save money and, at the same time, reimburse the state for a portion of the cost of incarcerating him, Prickett said.

State law allows inmates to keep 20 percent of money earned while incarcerated. An inmate who earned $48 a day would see that money split four ways: to pay for his toiletries and daily care; to a savings account in his name; to a general welfare fund for psychological and redirectional programs for the inmate's family; and to a union trust fund.

eliminate the inference that someone in the government knew. ... Everybody in the room was deferring to North."

Casey also was present at the meeting, and was silent when North proposed the change, Cooper said. Testimony a day earlier from former CIA general counsel Stanley Sporkin had established that Casey knew of the Hawk shipment within days after it was carried out.

The North language was deleted from Casey's testimony before he delivered it to the congressional intelligence committees after an internal campaign waged chiefly by State Department legal adviser Abraham Sofaer, who threatened to resign if the assertion were left in.

Reacting to Cooper's testimon during a break in the hearing, Senal ee chairman Daniel In D-Hawaii, said: "I don't feel too ba now, because at one time I thou we were the only ones being lied to. They lie to each other."

The inmate could collect the money from the fund if, after being released, he joins the union, keeps a clean record for two years and maintains steady employment.

"That creates a true incentive for rehabilitation," Prickett said. "It creates a financial deterrent with the inmate's own money. Never before has there been such a financial carrot hung out to an inmate without it being a burden to the taxpayer."

Eaton's plan for a prison system would create a $2 million annual payroll for 110 employees, with food service contracted out locally at an additional $1 million per year. It would require 125 acres of land.

The state would have the option to buy the prison outright after three years, he said.

County officials who heard the proposals offered support for the plans.

"We're the fourth-largest contributor to the TDC population," said State District Judge Larry Gist. "There's no reason in the world why we should not share some of the benefits of that. I'm all for this idea in whatever form it takes."

Smith could not be reached for comment.

"I genuinely thought he understood what we were trying to say to him (in 1980), so our hurt is deeper today," said Mark Briskman, regional director in Dallas of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith. "The debate has never been what his theology is or what his beliefs are. He's a Baptist, and I respect that.

"The issue is the use of these remarks in an inappropriate way in an inappropriate forum, (and) that this creates the potential for real bigots and real anti-Semites to use it as a sanctioning device."

Conservative Christians believe the only way to achieve God's grace and heaven is through Jesus. Jews believe in prayer and observing God's commandments.

Southern Baptist leaders said they hope Smith's remarks will not hamper progress between Jews and evangelicals. Since Smith's 1980 speech, Jews and conservative Christians have met frequently to discuss their differences.

"If people understand Bailey to be a friend of the Jewish people, one who is an ardent supporter of Israel, and at the same time understand him to be unequivocal in his conviction that nobody comes to God other than through Jesus, there'll be no trouble," said the Rev. Paige Patterson, president of Criswell Bible College in Dallas.

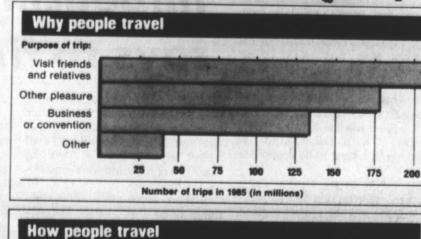

"But if they construe this to be hidden vestiges of anti-Semitism and fodder for anti-Semitism, it can be explosive."

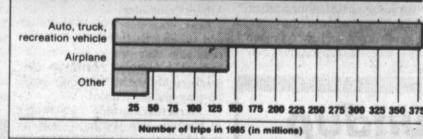

The Rev. Adrian Rogers, president of the 14.6-million member Southern Baptist Convention, said he hopes Smith's remarks won't be interpreted as anti-Semitic.

"It seems to me that Bailey Smith is saying what historic Christianity is and states that Jesus Christ is the on-ly hope of the world," Rogers said.

In a 1996 survey of evangelical Christians' attitudes toward Jewa, the Anti-Defamation League found that 85 percent disagreed with the assertion that God does not hear the prayers of a Jew. The survey also found that 59 percent believed Jews com't be forgiven for their survey day can't be forgiven for their purported role in Jesus' crucifixion until they ot him as their savior.

BETTY GAYLE COOPER-COCKERELL

Durant, Oklahoma A champion in the rodeo arena many times over, Betty Gayle Cooper is also a champion in the

The list of Betty Gayle's accomplishments as a member of the Women's Professional Rodeo Association is long and impressive: World Champion Calf Roper in 1979, 1981, 1982, 1983, and Reserve Calf Roper in 1985. She was named All-Around Cowgirl in 1981, 1982, and 1983. Other titles earned during these years include Reserve Goat Tyer in 1981, and Champion Goat Tyer in 1982

MARGIE ROBERTS HART Strong City, Kansas

The E.C. Roberts family of Strong City, Kansas, will long be remembered as a rodeo family of champions, and they were led into the rodeo arena by Margie, the oldest child. Even though her brothers, Ken and Gerald, are named in the Cowboy hall of Fame and her father was the Rodeo Man of the year in 1979, Margie was the first in the family to ride in any rodeo competition.

Beginning in 1937, Margie went on the rodeo circuit with her educated high school horse and a few contracts to trick ride and show her buckskin. Her appearances included girl's steer riding and lady saddle bronc riding at such well-known rodeos as Cheyenne, Pendleton, Deadwood, Phoenix, Dallas, Houston, and Ogden. During World II, there were many all-girl rodeos, and Margie

The winner of many awards and purses in rodeo competition around the country, Margie won the women's bronc riding contest at the Cheyenne Frontier Days Rodeo in 1941, capstone of a long career as a roughstock rider in Wild West Shows as well as rodeos. She was a trick rider as well, performing in more than a dozen states, including Madison Square Garden in New York City. She was the first person to introduce the "dive" to rodeo audiences, performing this daring stunt by leaning straight and stiff far over the neck of a running horse.

With her husband, Al Hart, Margie went into the stock breeding business near Strong City, Kansas, in 1961. Beginning with orphan calves from nearby feedlots, the Harts soon had a small herd of cows. By using artificial insemination practices, they developed a few exotic maine Anjou, one of the most popular of the ne

PATSY MONTANA Lakewood, California

The distinction of being a yodeling cowgirl belongs especially to Patsy Montana, who recently celebrated her 50th anniversary as a performer in country western music. Patsy, in fact, paved the way for other female vocalists to achieve fame and fortune in the Country Western arena when she wrote and recorded the alltime hit "I Want To Be a Cowboy's Sweetheart.' With this popular number, Miss Montana became the first woman, ever, to sell a million copies of a country record; the year was 1936.

Patsy recalls that her first singing experience came at a little country church's summer singing school in the community of Shover Springs, Arkansas, where she lived with her parents and 10 brothers.

Patsy managed an audition for the WLS National Barn Dance in Chicago and was soon touring with one of their groups. The Prairie Ramblers, whose members all claimed to have been born in Kenlog cabins, were Patsy's for many years. To hey appeared at nearly every co ty fair in the country and became regulars on the National Barn Dance radio program. Montana remained a headliner on the show well into the 1950s.

Listing honors accorded to Patsy Montana would be an awesome task because they have come from many sources. For example, in 1970, she tied with Tex Ritter for the Academy of Country Music Pioneer Award. She was the first woman voted as a Kentucky Colonal. Patsy was the first woman in the Arkansas Hall of Fame and has been adopted by two other states, Montana and Wyoming. On October 12, 1985, as part of its nnual tribute to American Country Music, the Smithsonian Institution's National Museum of American History honored Patsy Montana by recognizing her unique contributions to America's musical heritage by ining in the celebration of her 50th iniversary as a performing artist. Having developed the course outlines for classes taught in the equestrian courses at the university, Ms. Cooper has led both the men's and women's teams to seven National Intercollegiate Rodeo Association (NIRA) team championships. Her titles include Director of Equine Athletics, Academic Chairman of Equestrian Studies, and Instructor of Equestrian Studies.

Betty Gayle Cooper was born and reared on a ranch near Hobbs, New Mexico. Rodeoing is a tradition in the Cooper family; in fact, they are a family of champions. Her brother, Roy, was eight times the world champion in the Professional Rode Cowboys Association and another brother, Clay was a top PRCA calf roper, having qualified for the National Finals Rodeo himself.

Anne Stradling's admirers state that she has spent her money and time on the museum since she quit actual ranch work and riding. "It's a money losing proposition," Anne says. "It costs me at least $10,000 a year out of my pocket to keep it going," she adds. The museum and its objective of honoring the horse as one of man's most important gifts from the animal world continue to take her time, her work, and her money.

Horsemen, both buyers and sellers, visit the ranch. Sculptors, artists, writers, opera stars, photographers, mining personages, politicians, and old friends from all over the country visit in the Stradling home. Her friend, Ruth Fitch, says, "This is a small town with no great industries since the mines closed down. There is no attraction to tourists except the museum which brings visitors to town for days at a time. Many want to buy property here and retire in a ple which they would not have h about except for the museum. Death came to Margie Roberts Hart on April 23, 1982, ending a life that had been filled with joys and the hardships of following the rodeo circuits from one end of the country to the other, as well as other ventures that involved horses and cattle.

LAURA GILPIN Colorado Springs, Colorado

Laura received her first camera, a Brownie box model, on her twelfth birthday, and her picture taking spanned the remaining sixty-six years of her life. A darkroom was to be her familiar haunt, beginning with a summer spent working on autochrome plate pictures in 1908. In 1932, she made a trip to the Yucatan Peninsula to photograph the ruins at Chicken Itza. These pictures became the subject of a book publish-ed by Laura in 1948, entitled Temples In Yucatan: A Camera Chronicle of icken Itza.

In 1941, Laura published The os: A Camera Chronicie. Her books not only included beautifu mposed pictures but also the text give the photos added meaning.

In 1956, she began work on her Navajo book, and the next years were spent in trying to keep the bills paid, making visits to the Navajos, and contacting publishers for this latest book. She bought a house in Santa Fe, New Mexico, to be closer to the subjects of her book. The Amon Carter Museum in Fort Worth finally agreed, in1 973, to publish her Navajo chronicle for which the first pictures had been taken sixteen years before.

Game-winning runs score on pop fly lost in sunlight

Astros suffer 4-1 loss to San Diego

By SHARON L. JONES Associated Press Writer SAN DIEGO (AP) - San Diego sunshine proved to be a bit much for Houston Astro Bill Doran, who lost a pop fly in the sun for a single that drove in two game-winning runs for the Padres.

"When it was going up, I lost it and never saw it again," the second baseman said of Carmelo Martinez' popfly during the Padres four-run sixth inning Thursday afternoon that brought San Diego the 4-1 victory.

Martinez's popup, which hit just beyond second base, would have been the third out in the inning and would have sent the game into the seventh with the score 1-1. All four runs were scored after Houston history. starter Mike Scott, 9-4, retired the first two batters.

"These things happen," said Scott. "There's nothing anybody can do about it. We've got the best second baseman in the league and if he can't see it, he can't catch it."

During summer day games, the sun sits high above home plate at San Diego's Jack Murphy Stadium, making it nearly impossible for infielders to see a ball in the sky, ballplayers say.

Martinez conceded the two RBIs to the bright sun.

"A couple of weeks ago, he'd have caught it. I'm lucky," said Martinez, who going into the game had hit in seven of his last 10 games, batting .407

"That sun is really bad, bad," he added. "Sunglasses help, but you know that sometime you're going to lose it."

Padre Manager Larry Bowa called it a fortunate break for Martinez and the Padres.

"We had a little luck but you have to be lucky in this game when you play every day," Bowa said.

Tony Gwynn took the win, the Padres' ninth in the last 12 contests, to mean much more. He said it's continued a winning streak that has brought the major league's losingest team confidence - and respect.

"For a while we were the laughing stock of the league, but now we're coming into the picture," Gwynn said. "Now we're playing well. We're hopping."

The Padres, still last in the major leagues with 24-48, are 6-3 on this homestand with three games left. Earlier this season they were losing at a record rate in major league

Going into Thursday's game, Padres pitchers had given up 76 home runs in the first 56 games, but only 10 in the last 16 contests.

"We're starting to develop some consistency, which is the key," said starter Dave Drevecky, who combined with Lance McCullers for the win. "I hope the momentum lasts a long time," he added.

In bringing his record to 3-6 Thursday, Dravecky allowed only four hits and one run, Chuck Jackson's first major league home run, in 6 1-3 innings.

When asked about the Padres, Doran said, "When you look up and down the lineup, there are many who can hurt you with the bat.

"It's not a bad ballclub," he said. "In fact, I think it's a good team. Not a team to take lightly.' Dodgers 2, Braves 1

To Atlanta Manager Chuck Tanner, it was a "a billion-to-one" shot. Actually, Ted Simmons had a hard time believing it, too.

"As soon as I hit it, I saw it was going right at him. He had no where to go. It was unbelievable," Simmson said after his line drive hit teammate Glenn Hubbard between first and second base in the ninth inning of Thursday night's game with the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Simmons got a base hit on the play, but Hubbard was declared out and Braves wound up losing 2-1.

"In 41 years of pro ball, I've never seen a game end like that," Atlanta Tanner said. "Someone asked me what were the odds of something like that happening. One in a hundred years, and all the games played everywhere. So, how many billions of games is that?"

The Braves-Dodgers game wasn't the only one to end on a bizarre play Thursday night. In San Francisco, the Giants pulled out a 7-6 decision over the Cincinnati Reds with two runs in the ninth. The deciding run scored when Will Clark hit a basesloaded ground ball through the middle into center field for an apparent game-winning single.

But Cincinnati's Eric Davis came running in to snag the ball and step on second base. However, he had no play at first as the winning run scored.

In other games, it was St. Louis 3, Philadelphia 0; Montreal 7, Pittsburgh 2; and New York 8, Chicago 2. Cardinals 3, Phillies 0

Greg Mathews pitched a threehitter and Jack Clark singled in the go-ahead run, leading St. Louis over Philadelphia.

Mathews evened his record at 5-5 with his second career complete game. He struck out five and walked five.

Clark singled home a run in the third and Tito Landrum had an RBI single for the Cardinals off Bruce Ruffin, 4-6, in the fourth. Terry Pendleton doubled in the eighth and later scored on a fielder's choice by Curt Ford for the Cardinals' final run.

By winning, the Cardinals increased their lead in the National League East to 5½ games over the New York Mets, Montreal Expos and Chicago Cubs.

Expos 7, Pirates 2

Tim Raines hit a two-run homer and Mitch Webster went 4-for-5 with three runs batted in as Montreal defeated Pittsburgh.

Dennis Martinez, 2-0, earned the victory by limiting the Pirates to two runs and six hits over 5 1-3 innings. He left with a torn fingernail on his pitching hand one batter after allowing Johnny Ray's two-run single in the sixth.

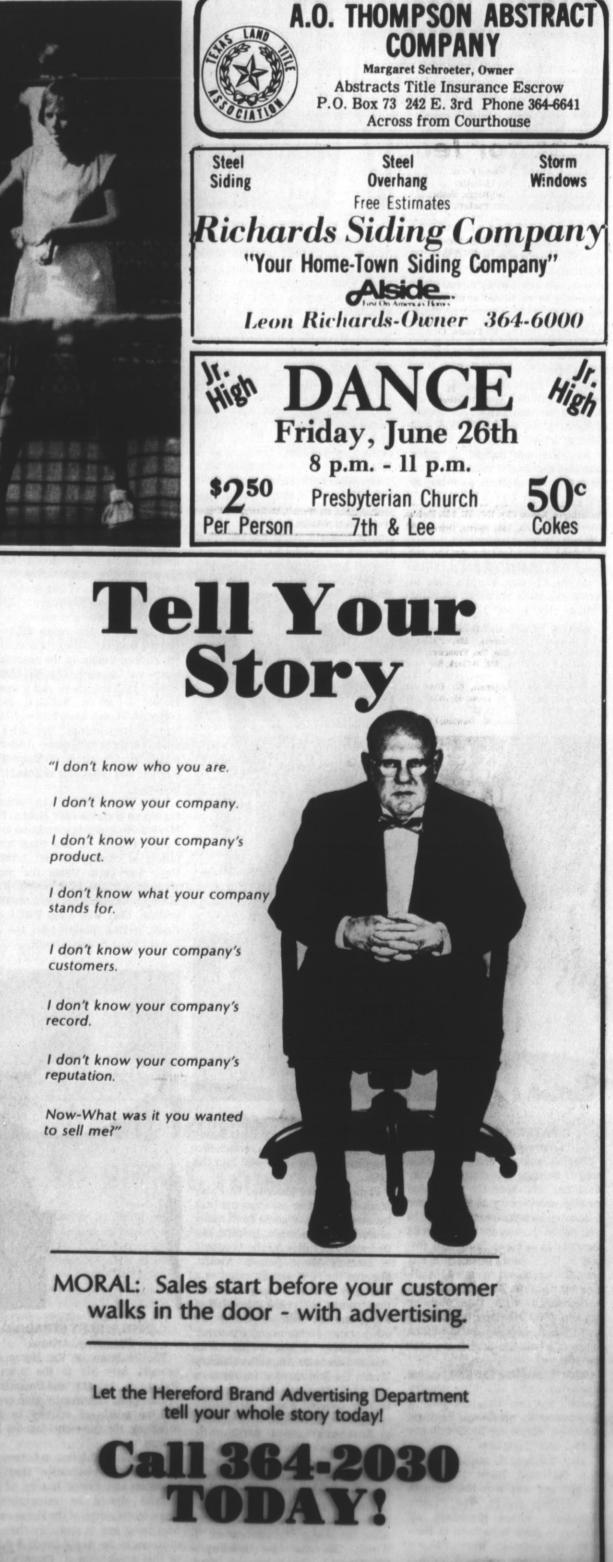

Andy McGaffigan pitched hitless ball over the final 3 2-3 innings for his seventh save. Mets 8, Cubs 1

Dwight Gooden allowed three hits in seven innings to lead New York over Chicago. Gooden, 4-1, allowed one unearned run, struck out five and walked five in his fifth start since returning from drug rehabilitation.

"Dwight's 95 percent if you're talking about quality performances," said Mets Manager Davey Johnson. "He's close to being the Gooden of last year and the year before. Dwight's had some trouble in day games in the past, but he's already beaten Chicago twice now and that's a good sign."

Steve Trout, 4-2, who had won his previous four starts, was the loser, allowing five runs on nine hits in 3 2-3 innings.

Overall farm figures don't tell inside story of agriculture

By DON KENDALL AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - An Agriculture Department economist says some of the general figures being cited as evidence of farm recovery don't tell much about what is actually going on inside the nation's agricultural sector.

After being "buffeted by the boom of the 1970s and the bust of the 1980s, things appear to be stabilizing now," says Clark Edwards of the department's Economic Research Service.

Export prospects are improving, land values have stopped falling, and the credit crunch appears to be easing. Net cash income - the difference between cash receipts and cash expenses - could be a record high nationally.

The number of farms in the United States have dropped about 2 percent a year since the 1982 level of about 2.4 million, after a decade of relative stability in the 1970s.

Although these figures indicate that U.S. agriculture "is in a position to start working its way out of its difficulties, they tell us little about what is going on inside the sector," Edwards said in a new report.

You may not know whether an egg in the refrigerator is raw or hardboiled until it's cracked open, he said. And if you want to know more about the farm sector, you have to crack it open too.

"When you do, you will find that the sector includes a lively variety of types and sizes of farms with different legal forms of organization, different ways of operating, and different goals and family situations," Edwards said.

He added: "Because of this variety, changes in the statistics which describe the total sector sometimes

Laborers using threats

WASHINGTON (AP) - Threats of violence and other forms of coercion are still being used by laborers hired to unload truckloads of Florida produce at out-of-state markets, a study made for the Agriculture Department savs. The average unloading fee for a full load at typical markets in 16 cities surveyed was $55.66 in 1986, a 67 percent increase from 1980.

The survey said produce truck unloading fees were the highest in veil surprises. When the sector as a whole is doing poorly, some farmers are still doing quite well. When the sector shows signs of improvement,. some farmers nevertheless find themselves in deepening finacial difficulty."

For example, the net income of livestock producers tends to improve when the income of crop producers is down. The price of corn and other feed grain is an income item to the crop sector, and an expense item to the livestock sector.

"To the extent that there is specialization in crop or livestock farms, a reduction in feed grain prices can cut income to crop farmers and increase income to livestock farmers," Edwards said. "This has been happening. Farm prices for feed grains dropped by one-third from 1984 to 1986.'

Lower crop income has been supported by direct payments from the government. Meanwhile, net income in the livestock sector has improved as lower feed costs stimulate larger production.

"Contrast this with shifts between the crop and livestock sectors during earlier periods, when export markets for grain and oil crops (soybeans) were burgeoning and market prices for these crops were strong," he said. "Cash grain farms flourished under these conditions, while incomes on cattle and hog farms fell." Another example of surprises hidden in overall statistics is the shift between crops covered by federal programs and those that are not, Edwards said. Acreage restrictions on program crops can reduce surplus production and support crop prices as intended. When capitalized into land values, the programs can indirectly raise the value of land used for both program and non-program commodities.

Decisions by the secretary of agriculture in carrying out farm law can affect earnings from crops competing for the same land, whether program or non-program crops.

'As an example of how program planting changes can influence non-

This is a project that provides food for hungry people in surrounding inner city situations. The project involves Presbyterians in growing produce. Volunteers cultivate, plant, weed, harvest, and deliver food to local food pantries as well as bring people in need to harvest food for themselves. Please pray today for the cultivation of this practical work of the Gospel.

Ann Landers Child support

36-year-old man who was involved in neurotic dame anymore. Of course 1 a stormy two-year relationship with a 34-year-old woman.

We lived together with her two kids (by two different men) for a year. During that time we drank too much and fought constantly.

I finally decided the relationship was never going to work and moved out. She called me at work every day, crying and wanting to see me. I tried my darnedest to be a good friend and let her down gently, but she made pest of herself and bothered the life out of me. When she begged for one last goodbye I made a terrible mistake and agreed. I don't know whether it was habit, loneliness or just pure lust, but I ended up spending the night with her. I'm sure you can guess the rest. She got pregnant.

I know you have said repeatedly that a man is 50 percent responsible for what happens between the sheets, but I feel resentful and bitter. She keeps phoning and begging me to come back to her. Last night she said, "I am counting on you to be at the hospital when I give birth."

As far as I'm concerned the relationship is over. I admit I made a big mistake when I slept with her, but must I pay for that one mistake for the rest of my life? To make matters worse I have been dating a wonderful lady and am considering marriage.

I don't want to be a rat, Ann, but I DATE BOOK

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a don't care to be involved with that would see the child, but she'd like to make it a package deal and I don't want that. Please help me think straight. I need your advice .- Messed Up in San Diego

> DEAR MESSED: It sounds very much as if the woman trapped you in a last-ditch effort to hang on, but this in no way relieves you of your responsibilities, which are considerable.

> You say you would like to see the child. I suggest that you be prepared to do more than just look. The word that comes to my mind is "support." I'm talking long-term-like 18 years. That's the law, mister.

> Meanwhile, I see no reason why you can't continue with the new relationship. I just hope the lady cares enough about you to put up with the morass of problems that lie ahead. Good luck. You're going to need it.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: This letter is to thank you for saving my life.

For years you have been telling women that if they have any unusual bleeding, especially after menopause, to see a doctor immediately. When it happened to me, I remembered what you had said, and made an appointment with my gynecologist. He did a D & C and found cancer cells in the uterus.

Ten days later I was in the hospital for a hysterectomy. The week following the operation was the longest I have ever endured, but the news was wonderful. The cancer was confined to the uterus and they got it all.

Thanks to you, I'm alive today and will live to see my grandchildren grow up. Please, Ann, take good care of yourself and keep on with your good work. I think you are wonderful.--A Grateful Reader in Winnipeg

The United States attained the Montana territory through the Louisiana Purchase in 1803, and the exploration of Lewis and Clark in 1805-06. Fur traders and missionaries traveled the area in the early 19th century, and the Indian uprisings, culminating in the 1876 Battle of Little Big Horn, slowed population growth until the coming of the Northern Pacific Railroad in 1883.
