Holly Sugar awaits merger agreement

Holly Sugar Corporation's board has unanimously approved plans by senior officers at Holly and Arcanum Partners to acquire the company.

Pursuant to the merger agreement approved by the Board, which is expected to be signed this week, each existing share of Holly Common Stock, other than shares held by Arcanum, would, subject to the terms and conditions of the agreement, be converted into $40 in cash plus $90 in principal amount of an 11-1/2 percent subordinated debenture maturing in 2007. Holly has 1,121,493 shares outstanding of which 94,600 are owned by Arcanum.

No interest will be payable on the debentures for a five-month period following the closing. Thereafter, through the third anniversary of the closing, interest may be paid in additional subordinated debentures having a principal amount equal to 118 percent of what the cash interest payment would have been if the interest were paid in cash. After the third anniversary, interest will be payable only in cash. The debentures are redeemable by Holly at any time. In addition, sinking fund payments of 10 percent of the principal amount of the debentures are required in each year during 1998 through the maturity of the debentures in 2007.

The management group has delivered to the board of directors a letter from National Westminster Bank USA stating that, based upon discussions NatWest has had with certain other banks, it is highly confident that NatWest, together with such other banks, will be able to provide a commitment letter for a credit facility in the aggregate amount of up to $80,000,000. The letter did not constitute a commitment, and Holly has the right under the merger agreement to terminate the transaction if a commitment letter is not delivered to Holly before August 7, 1987. The financing proposed by NatWest will be subject to a number of conditions, including preparation and negotiation of appropriate documentation, receipt of the reversion of approximately $12 million (on a pretax basis) of excess assets from Holly's pension plans, and the receipt of certain representations, warranties and legal opinions.

The merger will be subject to a number of conditions, including the execution of the definitive agreement, the availability of the bank financing referred to above, receipt of a fairness opinion from Salomon Brothers Inc. and requisite shareholder approval.

Prior to Holly's Board approving the merger, Brookhill Equities, Inc. advised Holly and its management that Brookhill had withdrawn its proposal to acquire the Company and supported the merger agreement proposed by Arcanum.

The board of directors has called a special meeting of shareholders for Oct. 29, to consider the merger. Holly shareholders of record on Sept. 29, 1987 will be entitled to notice of and to vote on matters coming before that meeting.

A spokesman for Holly said that a tentative agreement had been reached to settle the existing shareholder litigation challenging Arcanum's leveraged buy-out proposals, subject to, among other things, additional discovery and court approval.

Agents deal with squalor, horrors

By DEBE GRAVES
Staff Writer

The door to the apartment opens. A man steps inside and sees waste smeared on the walls, and a toddler crying, naked in the corner.

The mother, a junkie, is lying on the couch, strung out on drugs and oblivious to the squalor around her.

That is the lurid description Raul Sanchez gave his wife of the conditions he viewed while working as an undercover narcotics agent in Hereford in 1985-86.

He would call home and ask if the house was clean and I would say yes," recalls Susie Sanchez. "Then he would tell me of walking in dumps where naked children sat on the floor in excrement."

Sanchez tells of children going hungry while addicted parents trade the family's food stamps to support their habit.

He talks about parents who encourage their young children to smoke marijuana and then brag of their child's prowess while laughing at those who act funny while on the drug.

These are all events which Sanchez says he observed in Hereford.

His wife and police contact David Wagner say Sanchez was often depressed and discouraged during the 10-month-long undercover operation.

"It is possible for a user to hide the habit from family members," he says. "They lie about what they have been doing and about where their money goes."

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

"People need to understand that it is incredibly hard on him," Susie says. "He is no robot who goes in and does the dirty work and then just leaves. He is under an incredible amount of stress while undercover."

Wagner, who is a detective with the Hereford Police Department and is in charge of narcotics investigations, says there was a great deal of stress on Sanchez because he was forced to view behavior which repulsed him but which he had to pretend to agree with.

"Every morning I would wake up and go to work afraid for my life," says Sanchez. "I kept doing it because when I arrest a dope pusher, when I see at least one kid is going to have a chance to make it, that is my high."

Experts agree that not all drug users live in squalor; in fact many are able to hide their addiction from close family and friends. Testimonies of some of the family members of those convicted in the 1986 trials, resulting from the drug operation, revealed that some of those men were good fathers and providers.

"Lots of times the family doesn't know what is going on until the person overdoses," says Harold

It's time for Larra Bianca's rock and roll week. It's mandatory, but growing in popularity.

The seven-year-old boy returned home after a week at summer camp, and his parents asked if he got homesick during his stay.

No, not me," responded the lad, "but some of the guys did—the ones who have girls."

Who says there is nothing to do in Hereford during the summer? The Hall of Fame, Al Guri Kosko winds up its three-day run here Sunday afternoon at the Circle A Arena west of town. Then, the big annual Town & Country Jubilee gets underway next weekend. The chamber office is still taking registrations for parade entrants and for booth space at the Jubilee Jubilee.

As I understand it, Texas still retains the right to split into more than one state. If you've ever wondered why some folks in this part of the country have proposed the state of West Texas, you need only look to the closing days of the special session for one of the reasons.

One particular action was called the "doomsday" provision, and it was aimed at showing Panhandle and West Texas lawmakers that they had better get in line and stop voting against new taxes. The provision required 100 votes to put the tax bill in effect at once instead of waiting several months.

The threat was to cut state spending on strictly Panhandle and West Texas projects and institutions. Fortunately, the bill did not come to pass but this kind of action shows what happens in Texas politics and what can happen in the future.

The Panhandle lawmakers, including Sen. Bill Sarpalus and Rep. John Smith, stood firm against new taxes, insisting that state spending could still be cut. The liberal elements of the House and Senate refused to go along with this, claiming Texans want more state programs, more state spending and want to be taxed more heavily to fund them.

Sen. Sarpalus, in a news conference last week, criticized his fellow legislators for not adequately dealing with the state's tax structure and voting down his "tax relief" amendment. His amendment failed by two votes on the floor. It would have required that the sales tax rate be lowered if the state ever ex-

Local Roundup

Hospital board calls meeting

The Deaf Smith County Hospital District will hold a special called meeting Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in the conference room at Deaf Smith General Hospital.

The agenda includes a cafeteria plan, computer bids, a follow up on bonds and loans, and an executive session to discuss personnel.

Police make three arrests

An 18-year-old man was arrested for public intoxication and injury to a child Friday after a boy, 14, told police he was assaulted in the 300 block of Blevins.

The minor gave police a statement and a warrant was issued for the man's arrest. Police said the child is in good condition.

A 45-year-old man was arrested after he reportedly struck his grandson, 3, in the face.

Police said the man was fighting with his wife, who was holding their grandchild, and tried to hit his wife but struck the child in the face with his fist.

The wife fled from the house and stopped a passing police car. She told the officer she was afraid the assault would continue, and the officer arrested the man for injury to a child.

Police said the child did not have any apparent injuries.

Police also arrested a man for public intoxication.

Two women filed assault charges against a man who assaulted one of them, reportedly his estranged wife, then began attacking the other woman when she tried to intervene.

Officers responded to two calls at Blue Water Gardens, including the burglary of a car and damage to some outdoor lights.

A woman reported that a man on work-release from the Deaf Smith County Jail has been causing problems at her house. Police said the man was contacted at the jail and ordered to stay away from the house.

A juvenile called police to his home Friday and told the officer that he and his friend had been fighting. The other boy said his friend would not say he was sorry for what he had done.

After a thorough, in-depth investigation, the officer told the boys not to play with each other if they could not get along.

Officers also worked two non-injury accidents, and issued four citations.

City Commission to meet

The Hereford City Commission will hold a regularly scheduled meeting on Monday, August 3, at 7 p.m. in the commission chamber of City Hall.

The announced agenda for the meeting includes the presentation of the city audit prepared by Brown, Graham & Company; public and final hearing on the curb and gutter assessment for U.S. 385; consideration of payment of delinquent taxes for purchase of a lot on Cherokee Street; action on color options to paint water storage ground tanks and consideration of cancellation of the Sept. 7 commission meeting date in observance of Labor Day.

Following the agenda items, time will be allocated for anyone in the audience who wishes to address the commission.

Chemical People meet Tuesday

The Chemical People Task Force will meet Tuesday in the lounge area at the Hereford Community Center.

The public is invited to attend.

Cheese distribution scheduled

Cheese and other government commodities will be distributed August 20 at 10 a.m. at the Hereford Bull Barn.

Everyone wishing to get the free commodities should bring their own sack, and senior citizens should use the east entrance at the Bull Barn.

A Panhandle Community Services official said many volunteers will be needed to help with the distribution.

Health provider open for all

By DEBE GRAVES

South Plains Health Provider Organization provides primary health care for all classes, not just indigent residents, in several area counties.

William Santana, director of health services, explains, "We are a non-profit corporation set up to provide primary health care." director of health services William Santana told a recent meeting of Concerned Citizens of Deaf Smith County. "We provide medical services to everybody, private pay, people with insurance, and we are funded by the federal government to provide services to migrants and indigents."

Services at SPHPO are provided on a sliding scale fee. People pay according to their ability based on poverty guidelines set by the federal government.

SPHP operates in nine clinics located in eight counties. The Plainview office is headquarters for the organization. Other clinics are open in Hereford, Dimmitt, Floydada, Crosbyton, Matador, Olton, Muleshoe and Littlefield.

Jolanda Martinez, clinic supervisor for the Hereford office, estimates that 30 percent of the patients seen in the Hereford office are qualified to pay full price for the medical services they receive or are covered by insurance.

Connally files bankruptcy; friends say he will return

DALLAS (AP) — John Connally's ebbing financial fortunes led him to bankruptcy court, but his friends say the three-term Texas governor is tenacious in an uphill fight.

"It's tough, but I think you'll see he'll be sticking strong," said U.S. Rep. J.J. "Jake" Pickle, D-Austin, whose friendship with Connally goes back to their college days.

Connally, a former cabinet member who left politics for Texas real estate and development, filed personal and business bankruptcy papers Friday.

"Connally's a fighter," Pickle said. "Don't write him off — he'll be back."

Pickle and Connally were fraternity brothers in the University of Texas, where Connally was student body president. They served together as aides to Lyndon Johnson when the late president was a congressman, and were partners in a radio station and other business ventures, Pickle said.

"In every crisis in our crowd, Connally was the one who'd sit us down and say, 'What can we do to solve this problem,'" Pickle said. "I'm like a lot of other people — I feel this personally."

"But I don't think he would want us crying for him."

George Christian, an Austin political consultant who was Connally's press secretary when he was governor, said he still has confidence in his longtime friend.

"I don't know much about his business dealings, but I do know the man," Christian said. "He's had adversity before and bounced back, and I expect he will again."

Former Gov. Preston Smith, who was lieutenant governor when Connally was the state's chief executive, said Connally got caught in a bad economic climate.

"I'm just real sorry," Smith said. "These things are happening to a great many people these days. He apparently made some investments that didn't work out."

After a long political career that ended in an unsuccessful try for the Republican presidential nomination in 1980, Connally went into business with former Texas Lt. Gov. Ben Barnes.

They formed the Barnes-Connally Partnership during the boom years of the early 1980s. By borrowing millions, Connally and Barnes developed shopping malls, office buildings and luxury condominiums. Within three years, their assets totaled $300 million.

But they were stung by the depressed Texas real estate market brought on by the fall in oil prices and its ripple effect across the state's economy.

Gift For 'Twin' City

A special bronze sculpture is shown in this photo from Bordertown, South Australia, after the gift from the Deaf Smith County Sesquicentennial committee was unveiled at a district council meeting. Bordertown and Hereford were "twin towns" during the Sesquicentennial observance by the two states. Holding the sculpture are Keith Willis, left, and Ian Hensley who were in Hereford last year and served as parade marshals for the Town & Country Jubilee.

DRUGS

Wheeler, chief probation officer for the 222nd District. A former sheriff in Oldham County, Wheeler has 34 years experience in law enforcement, 17 in Hereford.

"It is possible for a user to hide the habit from family members," he says. "They lie about what they have been doing and about where their money goes."

Wheeler says drug abuse usually begins as a social thing but gradually develops into an addiction. "Most of the users will swear they are not addicted but, just like and alcoholic, they can't leave the stuff alone. I've seen a lot of them on dope. I've seen a woman huddled in a corner in fear of the hallucinations the drug gave her. I've seen men put in padded cells to protect them from hurting themselves."

"Some act like animals, literally swinging from the furniture like monkeys while others are quiet," he says.

Like Sanchez, Wheeler carries memories of horrible sights with him.

His most vivid memory is a drug user who gathered all the glass in the house, including windows and glasses, and methodically ground the glass up. The man dumped the ground glass into the bathtub. Police discovered him bathing in the glass oblivious to the blood oozing from fine cuts all over his body.

"It is no different in Hereford than anywhere else," says Wheeler.

HEALTH

Bronchitis, pneumonia and other lower respiratory illnesses constitute the greatest number of illnesses seen in the clinic. However, Martinez says a number of their patients receive weekly counseling for the treatment of hypertension and diabetes.

Martinez says that the remaining 70 percent of the 50 to 60 patients seen each day in the clinic pay partially for the care and that only two or three of the clinic's clients receive free medical services.

Santana says that since the SPHP was organized, in 1973, the ratio of full-to-partial pay patients is inclined to be heavier to the indigent and migrant side because of the great number of people with little or no access to private care. He emphasizes however that this is not a free clinic as the vast majority of the patients do pay something for their care.

"We are not primarily a clinic for the indigent," he says. "We are a community health center here to serve a wide range of needs for all the community."

The Hereford office employs two full-time physicians, Dr. Gary Beach and Dr. William Benjamin, as well as five office employees for the medical staff and three WIC employees.

WIC is a program which offices with SPHP and provides supplemental dietary needs and nutritional counseling to Women, Infants and Children.

No pre-natal or obstetric patients are seen at the clinic due to the exorbitant costs of OB liability insurance. These women are seen for initial diagnosis of pregnancy and then are referred to applicable care programs.

Martinez says the practice in Hereford has grown rapidly. "The period of waiting for a new patient to get in to see one of the doctors used to be two or three days. Now it is a week to a week and a half because we are so busy."

Patients with emergency situations will be seen much faster. SPHP doctors share city call, for emergency room duty at Deaf Smith General Hospital, in rotation with other private physicians and clinics in the city.

"Drug users will do anything to get the drugs. They have one craving and will kill their own families to get the drug."

Wheeler says that many burglaries and thefts are committed to obtain funds for drug users and that an addict will stop at nothing to get a fix. "They have sold their bodies and everything else to get drugs," he says. "They have had prostitution rings here in the past where women sold themselves to get money for dope."

It is necessary for an agent to associate with the dark side of society to operate an undercover operation such as the one Sanchez was involved in here. There are personal repercussions as a sideline to the job.

"He's out there doing a big macho job but he relies on me for encouragement and just someone to say, 'It is okay, what you are doing is right.' I remember one call he made to me during the Hereford operation," says Susie. "It was Mother's Day and late at night he called and said, 'Why am I doing this? They are treating me like a friend and knowing I will bust them I feel like a traitor.' I told him to just keep thinking of the children he might save."

Sanchez admits he goes through a great deal of personal anguish during a drug operation because of the intensity of the situation and says there are other associated problems with his job.

"It is hard to give a credit reference," he laughs, "when the chief of police or sheriff you worked with is no longer in a city. To complicate things even more, sometimes the pay comes from the county seat instead of the city and so there is no record."

Sanchez says sometimes officials will deny he worked for them because they are protecting him from people who have no legitimate need to know his employment history. "They are not going to tell just anyone who calls that I worked for them because I might be undercover at the time and it could get me killed," he says.

Sanchez is a tall man with a large body build and when working undercover he lets his hair grow. "He looks like a bum sometimes," his wife says, "with long hair and this scruffy-looking beard. I throw him in the shower and take him to the barber before I let him go to the family reunion."

Susie, who says she has been harassed because of her husband's job, may not always like his appearance but she has no qualms about his integrity. "I know him. I perienced a budget surplus of more than three percent.

Sarpalius said the state needs a whole new tax structure and should abandon the current system designed in 1961 when most state revenues came from oil and gas. He added that lawmakers couldn't have completely eliminated the deficit by cutting the budget, "but we could have gone further than we did."

The state senator for Randall and Deaf Smith counties criticized the new tax bill for a high (6 percent) rate, jumbled expansion of the tax base, and the increase in franchise tax. He also complained about the $25 sales tax license. "That fee upset me," said Sarpalius.

"First, we require these stores and businesses to collect a tax for the state and do the paperwork, then we charge them for it. That isn't fair," stated Sarpalius.

A reporter at the news conference asked Sarpalius if he is aware that his seat has been dubbed "the most statistically winnable in the state." Sarpalius responded that he knew his seat had been targeted. "All I can say is I'm going to be ready for it."

know him so well and I know how cautious he is. I have no doubt about his fidelity because he has a fear of catching AIDS or something from the junkies he works with. He is careful because he is afraid for the kids and for me."

Sanchez, who was accused of providing drugs in return for sex with a Hereford woman, says, "I am tired of all of these lies. Those women were all junkies. I wasn't about to take a chance catching AIDS for one night with anyone."

Susie hurts for her husband when he is in danger and misses him during day-to-day family life just as some Hereford families are missing loved ones who are serving prison sentences for convictions of selling drugs.

Wheeler says the dealers, often addicts themselves, will not receive a lot of help in dealing with the addiction while in the penitentiary. "The prison system does the best it can and they have some good programs but they don't have enough personnel to carry the programs out."

He says there are drugs in prisons and that some prisoners come out having overcome the problem but others come out worse. "Some reach a point where they want help while other addicts never change. Their lives are broken by the drug and they have no desire to do anything else."

Sanchez says Hereford still has a drug problem. "We were fighting an endless war in Hereford, but we won a hell of a lot of battles."

(Editor's note: This is the third in a Brand series on the drug problem in Hereford. The fourth in the series will deal with positive steps being taken to fight drug abuse through prevention.)

Cemetery association to meet Thursday

The fifth annual meeting of the board of directors of the Rest Lawn Lot Owners Association, Inc. will be held at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, in the Hereford Community Center. Rest Lawn Cemetery is located north of Hereford on U.S. 385 and is owned and operated by those who purchase lots.

The private owners began operating the cemetery in August of 1982 as the result of a dispute with the former owner. Marian Kreig recalls lot owners engaged in a battle of wills with the cemetery owner who did not keep up the maintenance of the land.

"Graves were in a real state of disrepair," said Kreig. "Some had sunk into the ground with the tombstones sliding into the holes. On other grave sites you could see the grave liner."

Numerous work days were scheduled by the association members after they were deemed the cemetery. Restoration of the cemetery was a Key Club project in 1983-84.

All that hard work has paid off. Today Kreig says, "Things are running smoothly and are being taken care of but there are always things that need to be done."

Current officers for the association are Les Wagner, president; Tup Loerwald, vice-president; Kreig, secretary; and Pauline Howard, treasurer. Board Members are Helen Parsons, Arnold Betzen and Grant Hanna.

Two new board members will be elected during the Thursday night meeting and Kreig stresses that anyone who owns a lot in Rest Lawn is a member of the association and needs to attend the meeting.

Crimestoppers offers reward

Deaf Smith County Crimestoppers is offering a reward of up to $300 for the arrest and indictment of the persons involved in this week's "Crime of the Week." Between 5:30 a.m. and 3 p.m., a residence in the 600 block of Ave. F was burglarized. The burglars entered by removing a partition from a window, and over $1,500 worth of merchandise was taken.

Items taken included a VCR recorder, a Seiko watch, several rings and chains, and $200 worth of quarters.

Anyone with information on the burglary should call 364-CLUE or 364-2583. Callers may remain anonymous.

Hereford 'twin' receives gift

Bordertown, South Australia, has received a special gift from its Texas "twin" town, Hereford.

A special bronze sculpture was unveiled by the Tatiara District Council in Bordertown earlier this month, and two Australians, who visited Hereford last year were on hand for the ceremonies.

The sculpture is a gift of the Deaf Smith County Sesquicentennial committee. It features an Australian bushman and a Texas cowboy shaking hands and is adorned on the sides with a kangaroo, a rodeo rider and a Texas longhorn. It is inscribed "Bordertown (plus) Hereford (equals) Friendship."

The two towns were matched for the Sesquicentennial observances of Texas and South Australia. According to a report from The Border Chronicle, special guests at the unveiling of the sculpture were Keith Willis and Ian Hensley. The two

Bordertown residents were in Hereford last year for the Town & Country Jubilee and served as parade marshals. Former council chairman Bert Taylor and his wife, Janet, were unable to attend. They also visited in Hereford.

Accompanying the sculpture was a letter signed by Mayor Wes Fisher, C of C Manager Mike Carr and Argen Draper and Garth Thomas, Sesquicentennial committee co-chairmen. It stated the sculpture was sent as "a token which hopefully expresses this feeling of friendship found in 1986 and which will sustain it over the next 150 years."

Tentative agreement reached over crop dusting complaint

After a year of investigation and negotiations concerning crop dusting near the San Jose community, an aerial spraying service and the Texas Rural Legal Aid have reached a tentative agreement proposed by the Texas Department of Agriculture.

The agreement includes posting a notice in English and Spanish at the offices of Migrant Advocacy Services, Inc., in San Jose. The notice is to include the name of the aerial sprayer, chemical to be used, and date and time of spraying. The agreement also includes a commitment to only spray when the wind is blowing away from the San Jose community.

An anonymous complaint was filed with TDA by residents of San Jose (also known as Hereford labor camp) about a year ago. The complaint was then filed by Stephen McIntyre, staff attorney for TRIA. The complaint requested that TDA investigate and take appropriate action to protect the health and safety of families living at San Jose.

McIntyre said it was "an important agreement for the area because the people will now have the choice between remaining in their homes during the spraying or leaving the immediate area for a few hours."

"We will monitor the effectiveness of the notice and the behavior of the aerial service. If this agreement is insufficient, we will seek more protection from TDA," said McIntyre.

GARAGE SALES

Are you tired of the same humdrum routine everyday?

Do you need some extra cash flow?

Do you want to make big bucks with minimal effort?

Do you want this money-making scheme to be legal?

Do you want to clean out every room in your house or apartment?

Are you tired of picking up the kids' toys every five minutes?

If you answered "yes" to at least three out of the six questions then you qualify as a potential garage sale participant.

I decided to have at least one such sale a month. This astounding revelation occurred to me Saturday night when I was sitting on the livingroom floor greedily counting dollar bills (not Monopoly money). I not only counted my cash but wallowed in it. My newfound wealth came from a simple garage sale that day.

When you decide to have a sale you can either make it complicated by being organized or you can make it simple by deciding to have it at the last minute. I preferred the latter option and it was still successful.

Don't let anyone tell you that to make a good-size profit from the venture you must plan weeks ahead of time. Not so. At 3:30 p.m. Friday, I realized I was quite poor and I needed big bucks fast. I had the delusion of being super woman and could be ready for my sale by 7 a.m. the following day. That would give me 15½ hours before I opened my garage doors, to a, hopefull, free-spending public.

I learned a valuable lesson from my sale last week. That is, you don't have to do things the right way to make a profit.

Here are a few helpful hints:

1. Don't pre-plan. This is a must.
2. Don't bother to inquire about where to obtain a garage sale permit. Just wander around the courthouse for 30 minutes and you will eventually get the hint-you're in the wrong place—and head for City Hall.

3. Don't ask the clerk who waits on you at City Hall why in the heck you have to pay money for the privilege of holding a garage sale in your own home; she will only laugh at you.

Also, don't ask her why she's still laughing, as, she will respond that you are among 55 other people having a sale on the same day. (Remember, don't get discouraged)

4. Don't worry about placing an ad in The Brand before the 3 p.m. deadline because it's already 3:30 p.m.

5. Don't concern yourself about what to sell; this will only clutter your mind. Simply begin rummaging through the house and throw everything on the garage floor.

6. Don't bother to borrow a clothes rack: rig up your own even though you can't locate any wire or nails. Go back into the house and grab some coat hangers and take your pictures off the walls so you can get the nails.

7. Don't start marking a price on your treasures until 11 p.m. That way, you should finish at 4:30 a.m. or until you run out of tape and have to wake up your neighbors to borrow some more.

8. Don't look cheerful the morning of your sale. Everyone searching for their own treasures at the sale also got very little sleep. I know this for a fact because although the sale wasn't to begin until 7 a.m., customers began knocking on the door at 6 a.m.

9. Don't price large items such as furniture, appliances, etc. because before the end of the day, you won't have sold the items anyway and you just have to mark them down dirt cheap.

10. Finally, don't worry about running out of things to sell; put price tags on the dog, cat and kids and try to fetch an acceptable price for them. (The kids didn't sell).

I counted my profits one last time Saturday night before making out a deposit slip that would increase my bank account considerably. It was at that moment that my dreams were shattered: I forgot to divy up the cash with my fellow garage sale partners. Drats! I'm poor once again!

Oh, well. I was rich for a few hours or so I thought!

August Art Displayers

Pam Nixon Miller, an art major at West Texas State University, shows off some of her work along with that of two other artists at the local Chamber of Commerce office. Selected as August displayers, Miller, formerly of Hereford, Melanie Beene of Mississippi and Joni Lysford of Minnesota, also WTSU art majors, are exhibiting landscapes they created using pastels.

The ancient Greeks believed feeding snakes evergreen berries would destroy their venom. They stopped believing it after the snake bit them.

SPEEDY RESEARCH

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Nearly gone are the days of scientists toiling over steaming, boiling beakers. Today, they can zap their experiments in a microwave.

For the past two years, Tom White, a chemist for R.J. Reynolds, has been among a handful of scientists across the country pioneering the use of microwave ovens in the research lab.

By using a microwave instead of a hot plate to heat analytical samples, White says, sample preparation time is reduced by 80 percent.

Senior Citizens

Activities scheduled Monday through Wednesday at the Hereford Senior Citizens Center include the following:

MONDAY — Devotional 1 p.m.

TUESDAY — Stretch and flexibility 10-10:45 a.m., Beltone Hearing Aid 1-1 p.m.

WEDNESDAY — Young at heart day at YMCA $2 charge 9 a.m. until noon, ceramics 1:30 p.m.

Lunch Menus

MONDAY — Chicken and noodles, turnip greens, carrot and raisin salad, lemon meringue pie.

TUESDAY — Country-fried steak, hash brown potatoes, beets, broccoli spears, sliced pineapple-cheese salad, chocolate cake.

WEDNESDAY — Oven-fried chicken, green beans, corn on cob or whole kernel corn, tossed salad, apple pie.

'I do' .. maybe

If you're among those who have been distressed at the high divorce rate among American couples, don't give up hope. We have been told over and over that at least one of every three marriages in America will end in divorce. Now, pollster Lou Harris has come out with a new poll which indicates that only one in eight marriages ends in divorce.

This isn't exactly a picture of marital bliss, but at least the figure is much lower than those bandied about by government agencies. In addition, the National Center for Health Statistics reported recently that the number of divorces per 1,000 Americans dropped to an estimated 4.8 in 1986, the lowest figure since 1975. This may sound good but compares to only two out of 1,000 in France.

There is plenty of evidence to indicate that the vow of "til death do us part" doesn't mean much to many American couples. There is no stigma attached to divorce as there once was, and it's easier to take the legal steps. As a result, couples may not work as hard to preserve a marriage today.

We ran across a poem recently, aimed at young married couples, which we think our readers will enjoy:

Marriage beckons with all its glory,
a young couples' fate tragic story.
You want at once all the things you see—a home, a car, and baby makes three.

Furniture, gadgets, bric a brac, clothes—the uptown look from head to toes.
TV, stereo, washer and dryer—
bills keep going higher and higher.

Carpets, vac, and a new van,
boy this is fun to spend and plan.
Mother and dad took thirty years
what we got in a month from Wards and Sears.

Another baby, but dear the money—
honestly now, this isn't too funny.
Your check won't stretch for all our buying.
I'm getting tired of all this trying.

Payments due, we're going under—
I think I'm going back to mother.
I'm sick of things we can't afford—

So what do you care, you know I'm bored.

So that's the story across the nation—
young folks start with such elation.
They're over their heads before they know it,
and their worried faces sure do show
it.

So kids, when you're ready to say I do—
don't buy every gadget that comes in view.

Start out real slow, go easy on credit—too many bills and you'll sure regret
it.

Don't buy too much when first you get started,
or you're sure to end up broken hearted.
No money down seems nice and breezy,
but brother those payments sure ain't easy.

Bootleg Philosopher

Editor's note: The Bootleg Philosopher on his Johnsongrass farm on Tierra Blanca Creek ponders the Constitution this week, you might say.

Dear editor:

While it hasn't trickled down here to where you can notice it, who will be the next member of the U.S. Supreme Court has high priority among the thinkers in Washington.

Conservatives have raised $2 million to see that the President's nominee, Robert Bork, gets Senate approval. At the same time, liberals have raised $2 million to see that he doesn't.

If the amount of money raised determines which side wins, and they're tied, doesn't that leave the race about where it was before it started?

There's a question about the Supreme Court I've been pondering. As you know, members of the Court have to guess what the Constitution says when it doesn't say anything about some matters, the Founding Fathers not being able to foresee a nation with 20 million automobiles, 50 million television sets, and 950,000 lawyers.

So, the Court is left to its own imagination in deciding some issues. For example, it has ruled that if a pattern of behavior has consistently operated against a particular segment of the population, then that pattern is unconstitutional.

The question that bothers me is this: the President is the only one who can nominate anybody for a job on the Supreme Court; yet in the 200 years from George Washington to Ronald Reagan the voters have not elected even one woman President.

Clearly, a pattern of exclusion of women from the highest office in the land has been established.

Now if such a pattern of exclusion is unconstitutional, then doesn't it follow that Supreme Court members appointed under such a system are themselves unconstitutional?

I know a guy who claims man's biggest mistake was allowing women to learn to read.

Yours faithfully,
J.A.

Doug Manning

The Penultimate Word

THE BEAT GOES ON

Speakers tend to develop a set pattern in their speech. Those of us who speak often tend to develop more predominant and noticeable patterns. My college speech professors fussed at the ministerial students about "preacher tones." Fussed at or not, most of us developed nice ones, anyway.

I have been listening to another pattern lately. We have more than tones, we have a certain rhythm, or beat, to our speech. It may be possible to tell something about a speaker by noticing his beat.

Pat Robinson is strictly 3/4 time. I heard him on a radio press conference last Sunday. Every three beats he emphasizes whatever syllable is handy. I mean he really emphasizes that syllable. He can make the word "be" sound like it has at least two syllables and three "e's" I don't know whether I am ready for four years of strict 3/4 time.

Oliver North is 4/4 time played in military cadence. When he walks into a room, I expect to hear a John Phillip Sousa march, complete with sousaphones. When he talks, I expect to hear the Mitch Miller sing-along choir doing "Be Kind To Your Webfooted Friends."

John Poindexter is more of the classic chamber music with violins. He lights his pipe and speaks in Brahms lullabies.

President Reagan is good old country boy Two-Step. When he says, "My fellow Americans", somehow it seems as if Willie Nelson should be singing "My Heroes Have Always Been Cowboys" in the background.

Oral Roberts is a definite Polka. His son, Richard, is a Waltz. A Waltz is a Polka that is not quite up to speed.

For local flavor, Clint Formby speaks in 9/8 time. If asked how he is, nine minutes and eight stores later he catches his breath.

And Doug Manning? He is an opera waiting for the fat lady to sing.

Warm Fuzzies,
Doug Manning

Environmentalists 'running empty'

By Richard L. Lesher,
President

WASHINGTON — "He who hath the name of an early riser can sleep until noon," the English author James Howell wrote in 1659.

The evolution of the environmental movement in this country underscores the wisdom of Howell's comment. Many years ago, environmentalists earned a reputation for public service, focusing the nation's attention on real environmental problems and leading the campaign for tough clean air and water laws.

More recently, as some environmentalists have become extremist and irresponsible, they continue to enjoy the good name acquired long ago. They are running on empty, but the public doesn't know it.

That is why voters in California last fall approved Proposition 65 by a 2 to 1 margin. The law, promoted by environmental extremists, requires the governor to publish a list of chemicals "known to cause cancer or reproductive toxicity" and offers financial incentives for citizens to bring legal action against companies that sell products containing those substances. The law does not distinguish between substances that cause cancer in animals and those known to cause cancer in humans.

California Governor George Deukmejian opposed Proposition 65 but now it is law and he must enforce it.

The fundamental flaw in Proposition 65 is its indifference to modern science. Under laboratory conditions, scientists can induce carcinogenic reactions in test animals with a wide variety of otherwise innocuous substances. It is highly questionable whether those results have applicability to humans. Also, modern science can detect traces of chemicals down to levels of parts per quadrillion, which means you can find just about anything anywhere.

In other words, under the loose language of Proposition 65, an awesome host of common substances become suspect—bread, bacon mushrooms, herbs, cola, pepper, maybe even tap water. Taken to its illogical, absurd extreme, every victim of cancer in California will be encouraged to file suit against any company that sells food or beverages.

Unless the governor's plan prevails, California soon will be deluged in an avalanche of lawsuits as the lunacy is played out. But in the end, Proposition 65 may yet serve a useful purpose. It may awaken ordinary citizens to the silliness of the propaganda about carcinogens being ubiquitous. With luck, the public may come to realize that the environmental extremists who sold them this phony bill of goods should no longer be trusted or taken seriously.

Not just getting older, but dumber

By Joe Murray

If anybody asks how old I am, I say 46. But that's only half true. The other half of it is that I'm only four years short of 50, which is a whole lot older than 46.

But I'm not just getting older, I'm getting dumber. I used to know almost everything. Now, I hardly know anything.

Some people, when they say that, are kidding. What they mean is, they've come to realize they don't know nearly as much as they once thought they did.

But I really did used to know everything. I can still remember how it felt, to be completely and totally sure of yourself and your judgment. It felt doggone good.

But that's about all I remember of it. I've forgotten the rest - the everything else.

For what it's worth, my wife disagrees. She says I never did know much, that I only thought I did. But she's getting older, too. She's forgotten how smart I used to be.

But that's just part of the problem. They say you're only as old as you feel. Well, I wish I felt as old as I am. I keep waiting to mature. I've been waiting since I was 18. As far as I can determine, I've made no progress whatsoever.

It seems that I may skip maturity all together, go directly from adolescence to senility, from my first childhood to my second.

In the meanwhile, I'm faking it. Here lately, I'm starting to suspect that some other people have been faking it, too - people who know good and well they have no business in positions of responsibility, seeing as how they never got past being 18. But they need the money.

I've considered asking some of them, straight out. But they'd probably just fake an answer.

One good thing I've noticed about being older, women are staying pretty so much longer than they used to.

When I was 18, women stopped being pretty when they got past 23 or 24. Nowadays, I see women who are twice that age and older and who are still really good-looking.

Why that is, I don't know - advance of medical science I suppose.

But sometimes I wonder if it's just me. Most everything else is.

My wife probably knows. The older I get, the more she seems to know most everything. But I don't ask her about pretty women. I know better. At least I still know that much.

Best bill possible?

It took the largest tax increase ever enacted by any state in United States history, but the Texas Legislature has solved our state's budget-balancing problem for the foreseeable future.

At least that's what Gov. Bill Clements, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, Speaker Gib Lewis and Comptroller Bob Bullock tell us. We thought we had heard that before from former Gov. Mark White after another special legislative session. Let us fervently pray that the statement is more accurate this time.

Somehow we doubt that Texas legislators will be wearing T-shirts and lapel buttons or sporting bumper stickers boasting of the new record. But it should be recognized that, facing the type of fiscal problems they faced, they did what they had to do.

Gov. Clements, on signing approval, remarked that no one was happy with the result but "the fact we're all so unhappy about it ... is a pretty good sign that we did what we had to do."

Many Texas taxpayers and businessmen no doubt echo that sentiment.

... The compromise on taxes and spending looks about as logical as could be expected, given the state's huge loss of revenue from the petroleum industry.

An ugly side to the special session surfaced in partisan battles between Republicans and Democrats seeking to embarrass one another on tax voting. They sounded like the U.S. Congress there for a while.

Messy beaches

Texas beaches are becoming a world garbage dump while an international treaty to ban ocean dumping of trash, drafted in the 1970s, drifts aimlessly, awaiting ratification by the United States and many other nations.

In two cleanups, in April and last September, volunteers picked up a startling 263 tons — 526,000 pounds — of debris from Gulf Coast beaches. Another cleanup is scheduled for Sept. 19.

This year's cleanup will focus on foreign trash, litter that can be identified by labels or otherwise as international in origin. State officials estimate that 80 to 90 percent of the trash that accumulates on Texas beaches comes from ships and offshore oil rigs.

The "Don't Mess with Texas" campaign has a nice ring to it, but it will take more than residents of the Lone Star state to clean up our beaches. Texas officials at the highest level ought to press for both federal and international cooperation immediately.

Social Security

By JIM TALBOT
Social Security Manager
In Amarillo

Many people equate Social Security with the elderly and retirement, but the program actually provides benefits for people of all ages. Retirement may seem a long way off in the eyes of young people, but monthly retirement checks are only one of a package of benefits available to anyone who works long enough in Social Security-covered employment.

Disability insurance, for example, is an important feature of the Social Security program for young workers. It provides benefits to workers who are so severely disabled that there is reason to believe they will be unable to return to work for at least a year. There is a special requirement for work in the last ten years. In such cases, a worker can start receiving monthly payments after an initial 5-month waiting period.

These benefits will continue for as long as the person remains disabled. Moreover, a person who receives disability benefits for 24 months becomes eligible for Medicare, which can help meet the costs of health care.

If a married worker becomes disabled, monthly payments can also be made to the spouse and children. And if the person should die, survivors insurance will help protect the family through the payment of monthly benefits to the children and surviving spouse, if he or she is caring for an eligible child. If there are no children, the surviving spouse can receive payments at age 60 (50 if disabled).

These features are all in addition to the retirement benefits that many people think of as comprising the entire Social Security package. But Social Security is more—much more.

People who apply for supplemental security income (SSI) payments who claim to be disabled or blind may receive presumptive payments if they meet the other criteria for eligibility. Payments may be made for as long as 3 months so applicants will have some cash assistance while evidence is being collected and the decision on eligibility is being made.

The decision can be made and payment started by the local Social Security office if the impairment is readily observable and severe and there is a strong probability that the person is disabled or blind. If the condition is less obvious, a decision of presumptive payment may be made by the State Agency which is responsible for the disability decision.

Recently, the acquired immune deficiency syndrome (AIDS) has become increasingly important as a basis for presumptive disability payments. Other conditions in which a finding of presumptive disability is often found include chronic renal disease, severe mental deficiency, total deafness, or blindness.

On the other hand, some impairments, while real and troublesome, often do not warrant finding of presumptive disability. For example, back pain, except in case of traumatic injury to the spine, is difficult to evaluate, as are such conditions as high blood pressure, diabetes, and ulcers.

Presumptive payments are not considered overpayments and do not have to be refunded if it is finally decided the applicant is not blind or disabled.

Computer whiz files for divorce

LOS GATOS, Calif. (AP) — No charges will be filed against computer whiz Steve Wozniak over an alleged scuffle with his wife, police said.

Wozniak, inventor of the Apple computer, was accused by his wife, Candice, of throwing her out of his office July 9.

Wozniak has filed for divorce and is seeking joint custody of the couple's two children.

Police said Tuesday that prosecutors found no evidence to substantiate Mrs. Wozniak's allegations. Wozniak denied his wife's account.

Will Sherrill maintain nice guy image?

An AP Sports Analysis
By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer
LAKE CONROE, Texas (AP) — Being head football coach at a school in the Southwest Conference is not conducive to winning first places in popularity contests.

Add athletic director to the job and that narrows the circle of consistent friends to spouse and banker. Jackie Sherrill entered the SWC's competitive cauldron five years ago with a big salary, big ideas, and, some thought, a big mouth. The fancy-dressing easterner was paid more than any college football coach in history by Texas A&M University to leave Pittsburgh. His mission was to get to the Cotton Bowl on New Year's Day.

He did so after a slow start with back-to-back SWC football championships. However, along the way Sherrill, who dresses like a gentleman banker, got into scrapes with the media, coaches, and prominent SWC figures.

Five-day girls' basketball camp set this week

Girls in the first through sixth grade may sign up for the Whiteface Girls' Basketball Camp on Monday morning and then attend their first sessions of the camp.

All camp sessions will be held at the Stanton Junior High School gym, Monday through Friday.

Registration fees are $10 for each girl. The camp will be directed by Frank Belcher, head girls' basketball coach at Hereford High School.

First, second and third grade girls must register at 8 a.m. Monday. Their camp sessions will be held from 8:30 a.m. to 10 a.m. each day.

Fourth, fifth and sixth grade girls must register at 10 a.m. Monday. Camp sessions for this age group are set for 10:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. each day of the camp.

Each girl must bring her own workout clothes. The workouts will include shooting, dribbling, defense, and passing.

For more information on the Whiteface Girls' Basketball Camp, contact Frank Belcher at 364-8724.

Sherrill's ego and football team took a trampling in his early stint at Texas A&M but he kept warning the other coaches to get in their licks while they could.

He promised Saturdays of retribution. And he delivered, offending some, such as Texas Christian Coach Jim Wacker, in the way he ran up scores.

Meanwhile, the media, which had ranked Sherrill early in his A&M campaigns by calling him a $1 million mistake, launched a series of investigations to see how clean a program he was running.

Sherrill had a running feud with WFAA-TV in Dallas over their investigation of quarterback Kevin Murray and newspapers kept up the pressure. The NCAA has yet to act.

Faced with a difficult situation, Sherrill fought back.

He lectured the press on how to run its business instead of talking about Auburn before the 1986 Cotton Bowl, maintaining the press should focus on good news about the SWC instead of problems with the league.

On the Thanksgiving night after the Aggies clinched the Cotton Bowl against Texas he had a shouting match with the bowl's executive director Jim Brock. Sherrill also chased some writers out of the locker room who had assembled to hear A&M's invitation to the Cotton Bowl.

YMCA youth racquetball clinic scheduled

A youth racquetball clinic for basic beginners has been scheduled for Aug. 10-11, 13-14 at the Hereford and Vicinity YMCA.

Instruction on the forehand, the backhand, the serve, the ceiling shot, lobs, court positions, defensive plays, the kill shot, and the "Z" shot is planned, plus tips on conditioning. There will be no charge for the clinic for YMCA members. The registration fee for YMCA non-members is $5.

Youth ages nine to 13 may sign up for the clinic, which will be held from 4:30 p.m. to 5:30 p.m. each day. Instructors will be Dan Odell and Jerry Brock.

For more information on the racquetball clinic, contact Brock at the YMCA at 364-6990.

Sports Information Director Tom Turbiville decided after the Cotton Bowl to quit working for Sherrill and entered private business.

Sherrill even had to twist balloons into toy animals for Ohio State Coach Earl Bruce at a press conference as a form of apology after an exchange of unpleasantries during January's Cotton Bowl week.

If ever an SWC sports figure needed an image polishing, it was Sherrill, a man of tremendous energy but short in diplomacy.

Then, in late July, Sherrill held an extraordinary hour-long, off-the-record session with the press aboard a party boat on Lake Conroe to break some image ice.

Champagne was served and Sherrill Flag football leagues planned for boys at 'Y'

Boys in the first through sixth grades may register for the Hereford and Vicinity YMCA flag football leagues.

The leagues will be a first and second grade league, a third and fourth grade league, and a fifth and sixth grade league.

The flag football league season opens on Sept. 12. Practice sessions begin on Sept. 1. The registration deadline is Aug. 26, with registration fees of $9 for YMCA members and $15 for YMCA non-members.

Teams will be organized by the YMCA staff, and will be coached by adult volunteers.

Playing dates will be Saturdays for the third and fourth grade league and the fifth and sixth grade league. The first and second grade league games will be played on Tuesdays and Thursdays at 5:30 p.m.

For more information on the flag football leagues, contact the YMCA at 364-6990.

Fall kung fu class signup is under way

The fall shaolin kung fu classes at the Hereford and Vicinity YMCA have a registration deadline of Thursday, Sept. 3.

Classes will be held on Thursdays from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m. on racquetball court No. 3 at the YMCA.

Registration fees are $8 per month for YMCA members and $15 per month for YMCA non-members. Men, women, boys and girls all attend one class. Youth must be age six or older.

Instructor for the classes is Marcial Limas, who is a second degree black belt and has taught classes since 1974 in Chicago and in Hereford.

For more information on the kung fu classes, contact the YMCA at 364-6990. Entry forms are available at the YMCA.

Sherrill stated that "he was not a bad guy, no monster" and wanted to clear the air with the media. Right up front, he admitted he had made mistakes.

What followed was a remarkable round of name-calling where true feelings were laid bare. Sherrill said he didn't want anything held back and nothing was.

Sherrill gave his side, admitting to some mistakes and defending his actions in other instances, while the media delivered its grievances.

Amazingly, Sherrill had put an anchor around his ego and tossed it into Lake Conroe for this soul-searching session.

Also present was someone Sherrill has hired to do something about his public relations, Johnny Keith, who got some good experience when he was at Oklahoma trying to help the feisty Barry Switzer.

Keith hopes to cut down misunderstandings and misinformation between the media and Sherrill.

Keith convinced Sherrill he needed to go face-to-face with the media to get everything up front. So, the Jackie Sherrill Golf Invitational was devised.

"Jackie's really not a bad guy," Keith said. "At least he's trying to do something about his differences with the media."

At dinner, Sherrill was a charming host, staying to the midnight hour, talking football and telling stories.

The next day before he teed off Sherrill showed a sense of humor by playing in a Dallas Times Herald T-shirt.

"Somebody get a picture of this," he quipped. "I need to send them a copy."

Keith was asked how long he expected Sherrill's new nice guy image to last.

"Well, the coach is really sincere about this," Keith said.

Then he laughed "I guess the big test will be after our first loss."

Repeat championship titles are dilemma

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

The Super Bowl champion New York Giants have the most puzzling dilemma in sports hanging over them. Now that they're on top, how do they stay there?

Football has had five different Super Bowl champions in the last five years and no repeater since the Pittsburgh Steelers won consecutive titles in 1979-80. Not since the 1977-78 New York Yankees has a baseball team won two straight World Series, and, in fact, the last nine Series have produced nine different champions. No NBA team has repeated a championship since the 1968-69 Boston Celtics.

Only hockey has avoided the trend with Edmonton, the New York Islanders and Montreal the only Stanley Cup winners in the last dozen years.

Even in individual sports, where success does not depend on the performance of others, it is exceedingly difficult to repeat championships. For example, when Nick Faldo won the British Open, he became the 18th different player to capture golf's last 18 major championships.

Why is that?
"All manner of factors enter the equation," sports psychologist Thomas Tutko of San Jose State University said. "There can be real concentration, commitment and dedication to win a single event. Once you do, it's natural to let down. There is a certain mystique about winning before you have won. Once you win, you know what it's like. Then outside factors can interfere. Injuries and the accolades that follow a championship interrupt the pattern."

Championships create targets. "It's better to be the underdog than the favorite," Tutko said. "Other teams will be waiting for the Giants all season. The favorite has nothing to gain if he wins. He was supposed to win. But the underdog becomes a hero if he wins."

"The manager or coach has to be a psychologist," Tutko said. "The best ones are. They know motivation, when to cheer, when to support, when to comfort."

John Wooden filled that role at UCLA where his teams built college basketball's last dynasty. The Bruins won 10 of 12 NCAA tournaments and seven in a row. No school has won two straight since UCLA's streak of seven ended in 1973.

"I tried never to let the team feel satisfied," Wooden said. "I was on them when they won, not when they lost. When they lost, they needed a pat on the back."

Wooden's teams were workmanlike. "I think my teams showed less outward emotion than others," he said. "One player was dissatisfied with his playing time and said I ran the team like a machine. I took that as a compliment. In a sense, I wanted that."

"There was one team that I hurt by working it too hard. That was 1962. In retrospect, I think that team could have won. I wanted it too much then. You need a balance."

Wooden said he was able to create that balance by watching some of his contemporaries. Ed Jucker at Cincinnati and Phil Woolpert at San Francisco each won two NCAA titles, but when their teams later failed, they were driven out of coaching for a while by the criticism.

Hereford YMCA organizing girls' volleyball leagues

Volleyball leagues for girls in the first through sixth grades are being organized at the Hereford and Vicinity YMCA.

The third through sixth grade girls will play volleyball, and the first and second grade girls will play wallyball - volleyball on a racquetball court. The fifth and sixth grade girls will play regular volleyball, and the third and fourth grade girls will play regular volleyball, but will be allowed four hits per side.

Teams will be organized by the YMCA staff. The registration deadline is Aug. 26, and practice sessions will be scheduled from Sept. 1 to 11.

The first matches of the season will be played on Sept. 14. Playing dates will be Mondays and Tuesdays at 5:30 p.m.

Registration fees are $9 for each YMCA member and $15 for each YMCA non-member. Registration forms are available at the YMCA offices.

YMCA adult racquetball leagues set

Registration is under way for men's and women's racquetball leagues at the Hereford and Vicinity YMCA.

Divisions will include "A," "B," and "C," in both the men's and women's leagues. Eight players are needed for each division, and a maximum number of players will be determined for each division.

The women's singles division will play on Monday nights beginning Sept. 14. The men's singles division will start its season on Sept. 15 and will have matches on Tuesday nights.

The league season will be six weeks, plus a single-elimination tournament after the regular season. Entry fees are $10 for YMCA members and $20 for YMCA non-members.

Matches will be the best three out of five games to 11 points.

For more information on the adult racquetball leagues, contact the YMCA at 364-6990.

Minority, female hiring still slow

WASHINGTON (AP) - An internal review shows that some Agriculture Department agencies in Florida are lagging in their hiring of women and minorities, and have been slow to meet many other federal equal opportunity requirements.

The report, released Tuesday by the department, covered six agencies: Farmers Home Administration (FmHA), Extension Service (ES), Food and Nutrition Service (FNS), Soil Conservation Service (SCS), Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS), and Forest Service (FS).

Unlike an earlier review of USDA agencies in Arkansas, which was turned over to the department's Office of Inspector General for in-depth investigation after complaints of alleged activity by the Ku Klux Klan and other extremist groups, no such complaints were received about Florida operations, said Vivian Culp-

Mann, deputy director of information.

The Arkansas investigation did not turn up any evidence of KKK activity affecting USDA employment in the state.

Although the on-site reviews in Florida dealt mostly with agencies' compliance with federal civil rights rules affecting their own personnel and internal workings, those factors also have a bearing on how agency programs are administered to the public at large, the report showed.

All six agencies showed some shortcomings in their Florida operations. Some examples:

-In its review of the FmHA, which makes loans to high-risk farm borrowers, the department's Equal Opportunity Office of Advocacy and Enterprise found that the agency in Florida "does not adequately advertise and promote special programs such as the Federal Women's Program, Hispanic Employment Program, Upward Mobility and handicapped employee placement."

-Reviews of Extension Service operations "showed a large disparity in the number of whites contacted as compared to blacks and other minorities," the report said. "Such disparity could lead to the conclusion that blacks and other minorities are not being serviced in sufficient numbers."

-A review of the ASCS, which handles the major commodity programs, found that "a pattern of using a college degree as the sole selection criterion" for choosing county executive directors and county operations trainee positions "could have an adverse impact on employees based on sex, age or minority status."

California kenaf could aid farm woes

SOUTH PADRE ISLAND, Texas (AP) - A California firm hopes to begin producing paper in South Texas from a prolific plant that grows up to 15 feet high in four months, the company's chairman said.

J.K. "Jerry" Stanners announced at the Texas Daily newspaper Association's summer meeting that a firm he heads has agreed to form a joint venture with Montreal-based Canadian International Paper to develop the wood, called kenaf, for use in the manufacture of paper and paper-related products.

"The initial objective of this new venture is to complete the project economics, marketing and engineering to implement a three-year plan to construct a pulp and paper mill in South Texas," he said, noting that if the venture started immediately, it could be producing by late 1990.

Stanners is chief executive of the Bakersfield Californian and chairman of Kenaf International, a company named after the bamboo-like kenaf plant of the Hibiscus cannabinus family.

His company has studied different varieties of kenaf since 1981, in cooperation with Rio Farms, a non-profit agricultural research organization in Monte Alto, Texas.

The company has accumulated enough seed for production, he said, and is looking at Willacy County as

Bibb attends nationwide Young Cattleman's conference

Jack Bibb, of Hereford, recently completed a seven-day, nationwide tour with the Young Cattleman's Traveling Leadership Conference.

The conference is sponsored by the National Cattlemen's Association and its affiliate state and national breed associations.

Bibb, representing the Texas Cattle Feeders Association, was one of 23 young cattlemen participating in the tour of various aspects of the livestock industry.

Members of the group, all under age 40, began their tour at the NCA headquarters in Denver, where they received an orientation to NCA and Cattle-Fax. In addition, the group attended a unique finance seminar coordinated by Charles Kirk of Hall and Hall, a finance and investment firm. Participants were divided into small mock loan committees and asked to review and approve or disapprove loan applications.

They then flew to Dakota City, Neb., to spend the day at IBP's packing and processing plant. IBP President Bob Peterson and other company officials gave the cattlemen a tour of the facility and discussed beef packing and processing issues.

The young cattlemen next traveled to Chicago to visit the Chicago Mercantile Exchange, where they toured the trading floor and attended a workshop on using futures contracts as a risk management tool. While in Chicago, they also visited the National Live Stock and Meat board and listened as officers and staff outlined the Beef Industry Council's and the Cattlemen's Beef Board' beef marketing program.

New York City was the next stop on the tour. The group was briefed by the Food Marketing Institute on consumer trends, attitudes and concerns. They then toured three retail stores to see first hand how beef is marketed in a metropolitan area. While in New York, they also toured th Long Island Beef Company, a processing company with large exporting interests.

The final two days of the conference were spent in the nation's capital. Following a special tour through the Capitol building, the cattlemen attended a Congressional briefing and then were given the opportunity to visit their home state Congressman and Senators. The final day of the tour was highlighted by a briefing at the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

NCA President-Elect Dale Humphrey, who traveled with the group, noted at the conclusion of the tour that the 23 participants had a unique opportunity to gain insights into the cattle industry and challenged the young cattlemen to remain active in their industry in the years ahead.

Adolf Hitler renounced the Treaty of Versailles in 1935 and ordered Germany's remilitarization.

Mexico ends cattle exports

EL PASO, Texas (AP) - Ranches and feed lots in Texas, New Mexico and the border Mexican state of Chihuahua may lose millions of dollars because Mexico is closing the border to cattle shipments, industry officials say.

The Mexican Commerce and Industrial Development Ministry closed the border to cattle shipments earlier this week, apparently because of a meat shortage in Mexico City, said Sigifredo Corral, head of the Chihuahua Cattlemen's Association.

The move came after "a decision was taken at the federal level ... to normalize a supply problem" in Mexico City, Lucila Dominguez Ghica, assistant foreign trade representative at the commerce ministry office in Juarez, said Thursday.

The move stranded 2,500 calves in holding pens waiting to cross the border for fattening in U.S. pastures and feed lots, officials said.

Corral accused Mexico City butchers of trying to force ranchers in northern Mexico to sell beef on the domestic market for less than they can get from U.S. buyers.

"There's plenty of meat," Corral told the El Paso Times by telephone. "All you have to do is pay what it's worth."

He said cattle raisers in the northern Mexican states of Chihuahua, Sonora and Coahuila are calling for intervention by their state governments and the federal agriculture ministry to reverse the decision.

Corral said Mexico City consumers "don't even want our meat. They prefer meat raised in the tropics with yellow, not white, fat."

Chihuahua's original 1986-87 quota for cattle sales to the United States was 350,000 head, of which 308,849 have already been shipped, Corral said. He estimated the cutoff would cost Mexico at least $12 million in export earnings.

El Paso customs broker Pete Araujo said the situation was politically sensitive.

"The (Mexican) government periodically recalls export permits (as) a way of trying to bring down (meat) prices," he said.

U.S. ranchers already have made down payments on stock they planed to import from Mexico, Araujo said. Unless they get timely delivery of the animals, he said, they will begin charging interest or demand their money back.

Araujo said cattle imports from Mexico generate more jobs and wealth in the United States than imports of boxed beef from Australia or stock ready for slaughter from Canada.

U.S. Department of Agriculture veterinarian Walter Howe said he expected Mexico to allow animals already on the border to cross. Howe, who inspects stock before it crosses to El Paso, said he doubted that Chihuahua ranchers will be able to export more cattle before October.

John Hudgins of Canutillo Stockyards also voiced concern for the Chihuahuans' plight.

"They need to get the cattle out to keep from decapitalizing (because) of high interest and high inflation," he said.

On the U.S. side, Hudgins added, fewer animals probably will mean losses of $1.5 million to $2 million.

But Hudgins, who has raised cattle for 30 years, says he and other stockmen are used to uncertain situations.

We created them...now what do we do about them. SUPERBUGS, that is. Superbugs is the term some scientists have given strains of insects for which there is no known method of killing them chemically. Robert Metcalf, professor of biology and entomology at the University of Illinois, Champaign-Urbana, says, "The short-sighted and irresponsible use of pesticides...is producing strains of monster bugs. There are now about 30 species that nothing can kill." Most scientists agree this need not have happened. They believe a return to "integrated pest management" may prevent additional problems. Brian Croft, professor of entomology, Oregon State University, says, "The main thing is you don't want to give an insect too many looks at the same pesticide. What we are suggesting is you mix up your bag of tricks." They also suggest reintroducing natural predators into the insect environment which can better take care of the insect, combined with knowledgeable use of insecticides.

Beef conference should answer questions

COLLEGE STATION — In what direction should the beef industry be heading the next few years, and what will be the most effective way to travel down that road? These questions and a host of others will be addressed during the Beef Industry Conference at Texas

A&M University on Aug. 10 and 11, says Dr. Dan Hale, meats specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service and conference program chairman. The conference program will begin with discussions by professionals from the health, human nutrition and medical fields, giving their views on how beef fits into the American diet and what the beef industry needs to do to make beef fit better. Then, members of the meat retail and packing industries representing Kroger, Excel, Monfort and Val Agra will discuss what they are doing to meet consumer demand.

Finally, cattle feeders and producers will examine the feasibility of raising and feeding what the packer, retailer and consumer wants, Hale points out. "Since the release of findings from the National Consumer Retail Beef Study conducted by Texas A&M, there has been a fast push on the part of retailers to present leaner beef products to their customers," says Dr. Russell Cross, professor of meat science and muscle biology with the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station and A&M's Department of Animal Science. The beef industry has failed to look at the whole lean beef picture—from the cow-calf producer to the consumer," Cross points out. "The main purpose of the conference is to examine what the consumer wants and how the total beef cattle industry should concern their effort to produce leaner beef in the most effective manner."

In this regard, some of the issues to be addressed include packer hot fat trimming, packer cattle specifications, cattle feeder interpretation of packer specifications, branded beef, integrated cattle management systems, and breed use to meet industry needs.

More information about the conference and conference registration can be obtained by contacting Dr. Dan Hale, 114 Kleberg Center, Texas A&M University, College Station, Texas 77843; telephone: 409-845-2052.

Dairy herd smallest on record

WASHINGTON (AP) — As it winds down this summer, the government's $1.8 billion Dairy Termination Program (DTP) has whittled the nation's dairy herd to the smallest number of cows since records began 120 years ago, according to Agriculture Department analysts. "There were 10.4 million milk cows on farms on June 1, 1987, 5 percent fewer than a year earlier and the fewest on record," the department's Economic Research Service said in a new outlook report.

"The decline was almost entirely because of the DTP, as the number of cows held by non-DTP producers was about unchanged."

According to USDA historical records, the cow herd peaked at almost 28 million head during World War II in the mid-1940s. Since then, although the herd has decreased in size, there has been greater production per cow.

With the accumulation of huge, costly surplus stocks of dairy products, the government has throttled back on the level of milk price supports and taken other measures intended to curb the oversupply.

Under the DTP, also called the whole-herd buyout program, dairy farmers were offered an opportunity to sell their stock and retire from dairying for at least five years. The 18-month program, authorized in the Food Security Act of 1985, began on April 1, 1986. More than 1.5 million cows, heifers and calves were contracted for sale, mostly for slaughter but some for export.

In all, bids from nearly 14,000 dairy farmers were accepted out of 39,534 submitted. About 38 percent of the $1.8 billion in program costs comes from dairy farmers themselves through fees levied on all milk marketed.

The fees are charged all milk producers, estimated by USDA at about 175,000 but the DTP payments go only to those who disband their operations.

"Almost 100,000 cows will be disposed of during July-August as the DTP program draws to an end," the report said. "Then, the course of milk production will be set by non-DTP producers, whose recent production apparently has wavered. Milk production during the rest of 1987 may continue to lack steadiness."

For all of 1987, milk production may be down 1 billion to 3 billion pounds from last year's record level of 144.1 billion pounds. The report said further: "Dairy farmers can expect the milk-feed price ratio to favor expanded feeding of grain-based concentrates."

"Effective returns over concentrate costs will rise from last year's levels but will remain relatively low. In addition, the possibility of future cuts in federal milk supports "lends caution to expansion plans."

"Prices paid for culled cows sent to slaughter will be much higher than in recent years, which may stimulate some slaughter sell-off of marginal cows."

"While there are ample heifers to expand the herd if desired, cow numbers may not have as much upward pressure as before."

"During the rest of 1987, cow numbers may continue to drift around the level held by non-DTP farmers since late spring 1986," the report said. "The current economic conditions do not indicate that substantial changes will occur. This would leave growth in output per cows as the basic source of expansion in milk production."

That is what happened in 1986. Despite a reduction in the number of cows to an average of about 10.8 million last year from more than 11 million in 1985, average output rose to a record 13,293 pounds per cow from 12,994 in 1985.

Although records showing the size of the U.S. cow inventory date back to 1867, national figures on milk production go back only to 1924. At that time, there were 21.4 million cows producing an annual average of 4,167 pounds each.

Cattle festival scheduled Aug. 15

The fourth annual Fall Cattle Festival is scheduled for Aug. 15 at the Texas County Activity Center in Guymon, Okla., and will include a day of educational sessions and social events for stocker, feeder, cow-calf operators, and other men and women in agriculture-related businesses.

The agenda for this year's Fall Cattle Festival includes live cattle demonstrations and workshops on treating sick cattle, necropsy, receiving new cattle, stocker nutrition, vaccines, parasites, diagnostic laboratories and financing for marketing flexibility.

Wives attending the event will be treated to a style show and art exhibit. In addition, the program includes a noon hamburger fry, an evening barbecue with humorist Dale Menic and a dance.

"Each year over 2 million cattle are moved into the 120 mile radius surrounding Guymon, and within a 40 mile radius, there are 10 cow-calf operators each handling over 500 mother cows," said Dr. Jerry Swanson of Hitch Feeders in Hooker, coordinator of the Festival. "This makes Guymon an ideal location to draw large feedlot operators and other large stocker operators."

The Festival will begin with registration at 9 a.m. and workshops and live demonstrations at 10 a.m. Representatives of agriculture-related companies will set up booths and be on hand to visit with those in attendance.

An average of 500 people have attended each of the previous three Fall Cattle Festivals. About 40 companies will sponsor this year's event. Their sponsorship allows all events of the Festival to be offered free of charge to those attending.

For more information, contact Dr. Jerry Swanson, Hitch Feeders, Rt. 1, Box 53, Hooker, Oklahoma 73945 or call him at (405)338-3226.

Foreclosure rate up in Texas

'Economic situation grim'

The Texas mortgage foreclosure rate is more than 2 1/2 times the national average. Bankruptcy filings also are up across the state.

"When the economic situation is so grim, individuals need to know about bankruptcy, foreclosure and how the two interact," says Judon Fambrough, senior lecturer with the Real Estate Center at Texas A&M University and an attorney at law.

The bankruptcy code has three chapters that apply to homeowners—Chapters 7, 11 and 13.

Chapter 7 is commonly referred to as "straight" bankruptcy. A debtor's possessions are sold or auctioned, and the money is used to pay the creditors. With minor exceptions, the debtor is discharged from any remaining debts. Any individual and most businesses can apply for Chapter 7 relief. Debtors can convert from other chapters to Chapter 7.

Chapter 11 allows a business to reorganize its debts without closing its doors. It is available primarily to corporations.

"The ongoing business requirement makes most individuals and partnerships ineligible for Chapter 11," Fambrough says.

Chapter 13 allows an individual with a regular income to make planned payments on large debts. The total indebtedness must be less than $100,000 of unsecured debts and $350,000 of secured debts.

Foreclosure proceedings, on the other hand, may begin when a borrower fails to make a scheduled payment. The foreclosure process must comply with the procedure specified in the deed of trust securing the debt.

Unless the deed of trust waives the requirements for giving notice to the borrower, three notices are required by Texas law: a demand notice for payment of the installment, a notice declaring that the debt will be accelerated—the entire amount will come due at once—if payment is not made, and a notice that this acceleration has taken place. Lenders may combine the first two notices.

If the borrower cannot pay the entire balance once the notices are given, the property may be sold at a foreclosure sale.

"When bankruptcy and foreclosure occur together, the situation becomes more complex," Fambrough says.

In cases where foreclosure on a home precedes bankruptcy, the sale of the home may be set aside if the sale price was less than 70 percent of the fair market value and bankruptcy is filed for within a year of the foreclosure sale.

The foreclosure process is halted when a debtor files for bankruptcy after defaulting on a loan but before the foreclosure sale.

Should a debtor file for bankruptcy and then stop making payments, the lender cannot try to collect. The lender may ask for permission to foreclose if the property's value is decreasing rapidly.

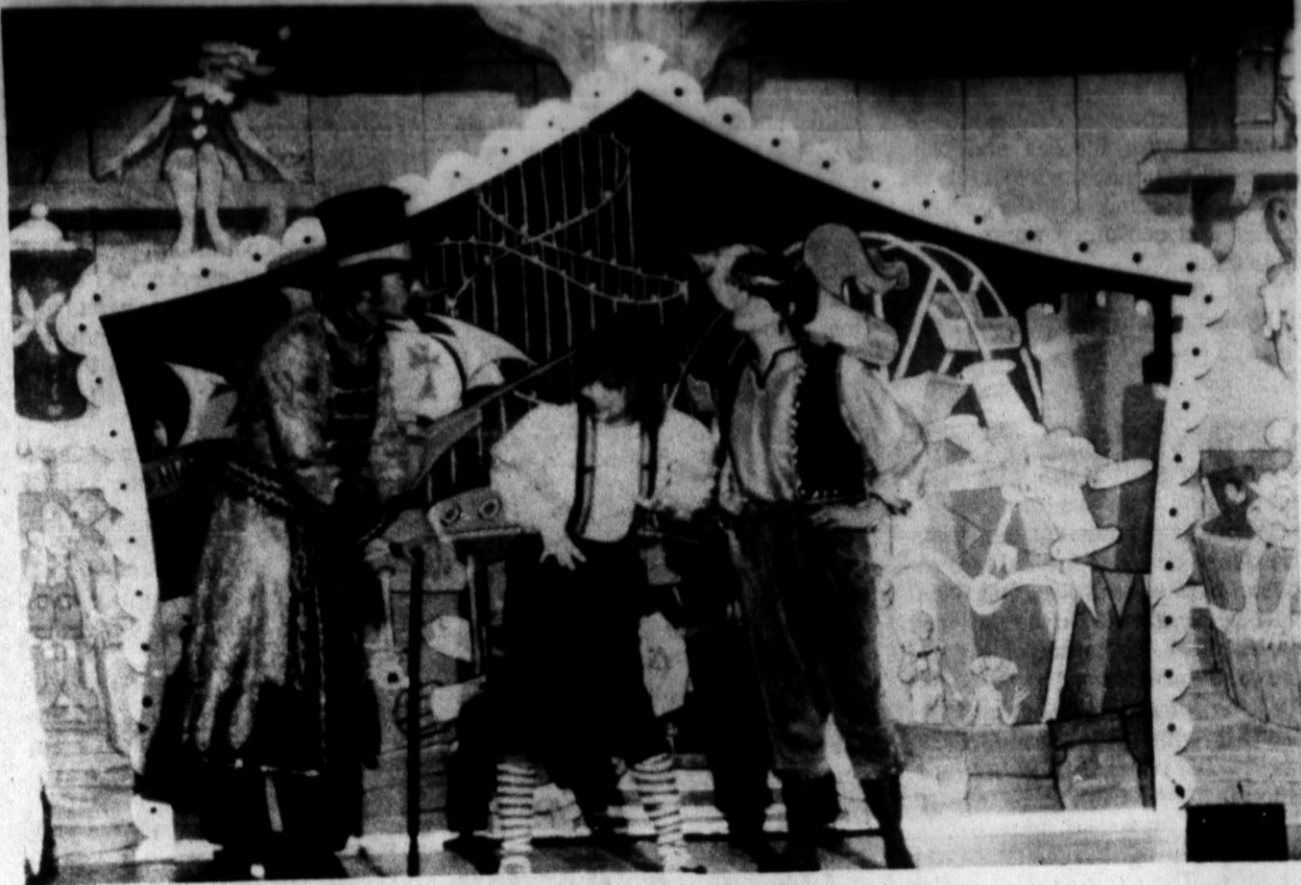

"The Bankruptcy Code allows individual debtors to exempt part of their assets from the bankruptcy estate," he says. They may choose either federal or state exemptions.

While federal exemptions cover a broad category of items, the amount is limited. Texas law does not limit the value of the exemption for a homestead, however, the personal property allowance of $15,000 does not allow exemptions for bank accounts or pensions.

For more information on foreclosure proceedings, order publication 529, Texas Home Foreclosures, from the Real Estate Center, Texas A&M University, College Station, Texas 77843-2115. Or call 409-845-2031 to order. Send $1 ($2 for non-Texas residents) for each copy requested.

The real Estate Center was created in 1971 by the Texas Legislature to meet the needs of many audiences, including the real estate industry, instructors, researchers and the general public. The Center's comprehensive program of research and education yields publications, audiovisuals and computer software distributed widely under the slogan "Solutions Through Research."

"Pinocchio's Magical Wish"

Local VFW to sponsor touring show

Local children and their parents will have an opportunity to observe the 104th birthday of the famous fairy-tale character of Pinocchio when the professional live stage production of "Pinocchio's Magical Wish" appears in Hereford Aug. 17 at the Bull Barn.

The appearance of this national-touring show is being sponsored by the Veterans of Foreign Wars Post No. 4818 with the performance scheduled at 7 p.m.

Tickets will be on sale at the door or advance tickets may be purchased from any VFW member.

The original story of Pinocchio was written in Italy in 1883, exactly 104 years ago, by one Carlo Lorenzini, writing under the name of "Carlo Collodi." The author was a professional soldier-turned-writer, an unlikely creator of one of the most famous children's fables of all time. Several novels which he wrote have been long forgotten, but his story of Pinocchio has been translated into 30 languages and is still a best-seller among children's stories over 100 years later.

In 1940, Walt Disney created a full-length animated cartoon movie of "Pinocchio", the same year that he released his famous production of "Fantasia". Both films are regarded as classics. Disney altered the original story somewhat to give it a lighter and cheerier touch, because the original story was a bit somber in spots.

The producers of "Pinocchio's Magical Wish" have taken up where Disney left off and created a bright and sparkling live musical stage production, with fascinating scenery, lighting, costumes, music and some amazing special effects. The talented and enthusiastic professional cast very cleverly portray the story of Pinocchio's magical change from wooden puppet to a real live boy and the many adventures he passes through to finally develop conscience and character.

"Pinocchio's Magical Wish" is a delightful theatrical experience which promises to thrill local children and their parents. Members of the sponsoring organization are particularly pleased to be able to bring suitable and wholesome entertainment into the community at a time when parents are finding it increasingly difficult to find shows of high quality that are appropriate for the entire family.

Octogenarian farmer still living off land

DENTON, Texas (AP) — The house is half hidden by an ancient cedar and the collapsed remains of the front porch.

A refrigerator and stove rust in appliance purgatory near the door.

The yard is testimony to 70 years of never discarding anything that might bear some future use: buckets, planks, dozens of tires, wire cable and half a dozen aged vehicles. Bodies of exhausted farm equipment stand like monuments to the 160-acre farmstead's past.

John Davis, 85, calls it Paradise Hill.

Davis lives alone. He never married.

"There was a couple of redheads ... one of 'em was a peach. Somebody took her away from me."

Davis has raised cattle and hay on a farm a few miles west of town most of his life. He still works from sunrise to sunset: hand-cranking his 1940

Oliver tractor, hauling hay, gathering pecans from a large orchard, tending 25 head of Hereford-red Angus cross cattle and an elderly bull.

"He's about 20 years old, I guess," Davis says. "I never was so attached to an animal. If he gets too old, I'll take him to Fort Worth. But I'll cry all the way."

Davis is an inventor of sorts. And a horticulturist. And a builder of musical instruments. Having made a violin years ago and begun another he's never managed to finish, he invented a clamp made of titanium to improve the sound.

He's experimented with grafting on fruit and pecan trees. His latest experiment is with a seedless Canadice grapevine he believes will grow well in this area.

Housing rates may decline

WASHINGTON — A representative from the National Association of Realtors told members of Congress recently that the downward trend of home affordability—mainly due to soaring home prices—could be reversed by keeping intact federal mortgage programs and strengthening state and local housing programs.

In testimony before the Senate Subcommittee on Housing and Urban Affairs, NAR First-Vice President Ira Gribin said "housing policy has been victimized in the debate over the proper size and function of the federal government." The subcommittee, chaired by Alan Cranston (D-Calif.), is part of the Senate Committee on Banking, Housing and Urban Affairs.

Gribin, a Realtor from Sherman Oaks, Calif., said cutbacks in the nation's housing resources are causing "housing affordability problems and declining homeownership rates." His testimony was the first presented in a sequence of congressional hearings scheduled to study the government's role in housing.

"As a nation, we must ensure that every citizen has the opportunity to enter the housing arena," Gribin said, comparing the progression of homeownership to a "ladder of housing opportunity" with rental housing on the first rungs, first-time buyers at the middle, and repeat buyers on the higher steps. "Regardless of the level of the housing ladder, appropriate policies, incentives and mechanisms must be available to facilitate affordable rental and owner-occupied housing."

According to NAR statistics, Gribin said the national median price of an existing single-family home rose 249 percent—from $23,000 to $90,300—between 1970 and 1986, outstripping a 183 percent increase in the national median income, which rose from $9,876 to $27,893 during the 16-year period. In high-cost areas, such as metropolitan areas in northern and southern California, New York and Boston, the gap between price and income is far wider, Gribin noted.

This affordability gap has led to pediments to investment in these securities. In addition to a continued flow of housing funds from private sources, the association supports a viable thrift system, with staunch backing from the Federal Home Loan Bank Board and a revitalized Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp.

Tax-exempt programs, including mortgage revenue bond (MRB) and mortgage credit certificate (MCC) financing are an essential means of state and municipal housing assistance for low and moderate-income buyers as well as first-time buyers, Gribin said. The NAR supports extension by Congress of the authority granted to state and local governments to issue tax-exempt bonds to raise mortgage capital beyond its scheduled expiration date in December 1988.

Gribin cited the success of the MCC program in several states, including California. Because MCCs allow a credit against federal income taxes for home buying purposes, lenders count the credit as extra income, which helps buyers meet loan qualifications. In Sacramento, "response was overwhelming" after the MCC program began operations last year, he said.

"As of April 1987, 500 MCCs have been awarded or are pending. The average household income of those applying for the program is $26,213; the average mortgage loan amount is $68,985...since first-time home buyers with moderate-incomes generally have difficulty meeting down payment and qualification requirements, the supplemental benefit provided by MCCs makes them exceptionally useful," Gribin said.

A total volume limit placed on all state-initiated bond issuance programs, including MRBs and MCCs, by the Tax Reform Act of 1986 could sharply reduce the number of home buyers able to receive benefits of the programs," he said.

DR. GOTT

Scar tissue is unavoidable

By Peter Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT — What is post-operative scar tissue? Can it be prevented?

DEAR READER — Scar tissue normally accompanies any healing injury. The reasons for this are not understood, but it is a natural reaction. Some patients tend to develop excessive scar tissue called keloid, which usually has to be surgically removed. Theoretically, any scar preventive would interfere with the healing process. I am not aware of any reliable technique or medicine that would simply and safely reduce scarring.

DEAR DR. GOTT — What is your opinion of foods from the nightshade family being the cause of arthritis?

DEAR READER — No reputable scientific study has indicated that foods, including those from the nightshade family, can cause arthritis. The most common form of arthritis, osteoarthritis, is due to the gradual wearing down of joint surfaces because of aging.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Food sometimes gets stuck in my esophagus. X-rays show that two spurs on the inside of the spine are pushing on the esophagus. The doctor does not know how to treat this. Do you have any ideas?

DEAR READER — You need to see a gastroenterologist. In rare instances, arthritic spurs on the upper spinal column can press on the esophagus, causing an obstruction. Pieces of poorly chewed food can become stuck or can be difficult to swallow in these circumstances. If, in the gastroenterologist's opinion, the spurs are the cause of the problem, you may be a candidate for surgical removal of the spurs.

Because the operation is tricky and most people prefer to avoid surgery that is not absolutely necessary, the specialist may be able to suggest alternative treatments. For example, careful chewing of your food and attempting to avoid swallowing large chunks may be all that is necessary to relieve your symptoms.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I had a series of shots for some of my allergies, and then was given drops to put under my tongue. How effective are the drops?

DEAR READER — Are they working? How are your allergies? Desensitization shots are usually more effective in controlling allergies, but if the drops work for you, fine. I'm not aware that the drop method is generally useful in treating allergies.

Local scuba diving teacher makes waves

When Ronny Sanders comes home after a weekend away with his body covered in hickeys, his wife knows what he's been doing—scuba diving.

"When I emerged from the water, the drysuit contracted and pinched me, making little marks all over me," the exuberant Sanders laughed. "That's when I encouraged my wife to take up the sport so she would understand how this can happen!"

A Panhandle native, Sanders has been in Hereford since 1967, graduating from Hereford High School in 1972 and West Texas State University in 1976. He took his first diving class in 1979, through Amarillo College, then became an assistant teacher for the next few years.

"I first became interested in scuba diving because I had been involved in water sports all my life, plus I liked the idea that this was a new sport to the Panhandle area," said Sanders. He is a Water Safety Instructor for the Red Cross, as well as a first aid and CPR instructor. In April he received certification to become a full-fledged scuba diving instructor.

"When I took classes, they were taught militarily and scare tactics were used, which discouraged most women from taking the classes. Yet an international organization named PADI (Professional Association of Diving Instructors) came in and set up ethics and standards that are now recognized worldwide. They taught that scuba diving should be fun but that safety is first," said Sanders, who is a PADI instructor.

He is proud of the fact that his wife has become interested in the watersport and should receive certification next week. "Many women resent it when their husbands spend so much time with the sport and look upon it as a mistress," Sanders said. "But now my wife, Kim, is beginning to see why I love it so much." According to Sanders, most women have an initial fear of deep water but that makes them safer, better divers in the long run. "Men often feel they have something to prove and show off, thinking they have to be macho," he said.

SCUBA is an acronym meaning self contained underwater breathing apparatus, which a prospective scuba diver learns in Sanders' local classes. Five classroom and five pool sessions, along with actual diving four times total 40 hours of instruction. Students are accepted as young as 12 years of age.

Sanders' tries to work classes around his students' schedules and even offers a crash course beginning Friday and ending Sunday. The City Pool is used for his classes, with the Amarillo YMCA pool being used in the winter.

As for physical requirements, a student should be able to pass a general physical exam. "Ear or sinus problems need to be checked and heavy smokers should have their lungs X-rayed," he said. "Women should be able to carry about 80 lbs. of scuba gear while men may carry 125 lbs. of such gear."

A corner office in Ray's Welding, located on 1st Street, harbors information and equipment on Sanders' favorite water sport. Sanders, along with his dad, owns the welding supply business in which his mother is secretary-treasurer and store operator. He knows his main income comes from selling such supplies and that scuba diving is, so far, a favorite pastime.

"Scuba diving is a noncompetitive sport that almost anyone can enjoy."

"When you go underwater, you experience a serene feeling as you can get away from the rest of the world while seeing a beautiful alien surrounding at the same time. You experience total weightlessness, much like an astronaut in orbit, and your inner fears come out," Sanders said. Light begins to fade at a depth of 30 feet into the water, so special camera and lights are needed to bring out the true colors of the underwater life...scuba diving can be a truly spiritual experience."

A listener easily gets caught up in Sanders' zeal for the sport, as he tries to dispell the myth that scuba diving is a very expensive pastime. "Studies show that scuba diving, at a cost of $50-$100 per day, costs about the same as snow skiing at a cost of $100 per day. Of course, like any other sport, it is up to the individual as to how much will be spent on equipment," Sanders noted. "I prefer to stay with proven serviceable equipment and promote American-made items as much as possible. The vest, tanks, fins, and goggles even come in different colors for the fashion-conscious diver," Sanders said.

Sanders is quite knowledgeable about various types of gear, noting the difference between a wet suit and dry suit. "A wet suit, made of a man-made rubber product called Neopren, can be used when the water is 70 degrees or warmer. This material is flexible, won't deteriorate, and has good buoyancy as tiny air bubbles are injected into the fabric when it is made.

"A dry suit allows the diver to enter water as cold as 29 degrees," he continued. A woolen undergarment may be worn beneath this suit."

The compressed air tanks are now attached to a comfortable velcro-closable vest, cited as an improvement over the old uncomfortable 'horse collars'. "These vests come complete with quick-release fasteners for safety," said Sanders.

Safety is of primary importance to Sanders, as he stresses using the buddy system when diving. "Each diver should always have a partner with him, for three reasons: for safety, to share experiences with, and for convenience. I'll sometimes take as many as eight students underwater, with all of them in pairs."

In the primary class, Sanders teaches step-by-step scuba diving practices while encouraging students to learn on their own in the advanced class. It is then that Sanders opens up a world of possibilities in scuba diving, noting that there are 15 forms of the sport.

"Some of the specialties include open water primary, dive master, advanced class night diving, underwater photography, search and rescue, cave diving, and wreck diving."

Sanders, who is required to carry a $1 million insurance policy as a PADI instructor, teaches his students of various possibilities that may occur underwater so they will be prepared and respond safely through habit. "I teach them about the changes that affect them: if you fly 10,000 feet in the air or descend 33 feet into water, the same pressure changes occur in the body," he notes. "Concentration is important, as there is a danger of nitrogen narcosis setting in at a depth of 100 feet down." Nitrogen narcosis is a stupor or drunken effect experienced by scuba divers in which they lose touch with reality. "It is much like drinking two martinis on an empty stomach," Sanders said. "People have been known to get such a false sense of security that they may try to remove their gear and race fish when affected this condition."

Sanders also notes that a diver's joints may get stiffer and there is some speculation in the medical field that scuba diving increases pressure on the heart, although such an allegation has not yet been proven. "Ancient divers often got 'the bends', brought on by staying underwater too long, which is a condition of bubbles in the blood setting in the joints. That is why divers now have scientific timetables to see how long we can safely remain underwater."

Although Sanders has not yet gone to any exotic scuba diving places, he hopes to visit Cozumel early next year. Certification places nearby where students are taken include Lake Meredith, Buffalo Lake, Lake Mackenzie, and the testing facility at Santa Rosa, N.M.

Sanders also notes that there are several inland places which provide beautiful diving, such as Arkansas.

Quite conscientious and respectful of the underwater world, Sanders tells students "Remember that you are invading a new surrounding, that you are a visitor." "Moray eels, famed to be quite vicious, will not attack you unless they are protecting their young or you provoke them. Remember that you are there uninvited; don't take souvenirs as you want to leave the underwater world just as you found it so others can enjoy it."

Physical handicaps should not deter anyone from scuba diving although an instructor should be told about any such conditions. "One man with artificial legs took the scuba diving class and excelled, as did a man who had only one foot," said Sanders. In another class I was helping teach, one student was a spunky 85-year-old grandmother. As one of our underwater lessons, we knocked the breathing apparatus out of a student's mouth, teaching them to calmly retrieve it. When we performed this routine practice on this lady, her false teeth came out, attached to the mouthpiece. We had a hard time not laughing; we took her back up to the surface and got her dentures reset. She didn't find the incident too amusing," Sanders laughed.

"I love scuba diving as it is fun and exciting each time and is a great confidence builder," said Sanders. "It is so rewarding teaching other people this noncompetitive, untimed sport and watching their faces glow with excitement. I derive joy from their joy; I share in their triumphs." His face glows, too, as he talks about his scuba diving, as he states "I highly recommend it to anyone."

A homing pigeon can fly at a speed of up to 60 miles an hour over a distance of 75 miles.

Wedding vows unite Love, Kaul in Saturday ceremony

Cristina Marie Love of Oklahoma City, Okla., became the bride of James Edward Kaul, also of Oklahoma City, during an evening wedding Saturday in the Church of the Nazarene in Hereford. Officiating was Ted Taylor of the church.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Jarrie Love of Nacogdoches, Texas, and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter L. Kaul of Rt. 5, Hereford.

The main church altar was decorated with a brass 15-branch arch candelabrum and flanked by two brass spiral candelabra. Each held 15 white tapers and were accented with English Ivy, baby's breath, and ribbon. Weeping fig trees stood before the two spiral candelabra while ferns stood on ivory pedestal columns flanking the kneeling benches. A white unity candle stood nestled in a bed of yellow and white daisies atop a brass pedestal and flanked by white family candles in brass holders. Church pews were marked with white satin bows adorned with white doves, English ivy and baby's breath.

Matron of honor was the bride's sister, Natalie Adams of Grand Prairie. Maid of honor was Miss Lisa Jones of Oklahoma City. Serving as bridesmaids were Jana Adams of Garland and Samantha Love of Nacogdoches, sister of the bride.

Best man was Kirby Kaul of Hereford, brother of the groom. Groomsmen were Jay Dill of Oklahoma City, and cousins of the groom, Bud Shirley of Hereford and Andrew Kaul of Miami. Ushers were Paul Kuper and Todd Collier, both of Hereford.

Flower girl was Cassie Elizabeth Adams and ring bearer was Daniel Wayne Adams. Both are the children of Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Adams of Grand Prairie.

Music was provided by Lisa Hilton of Hereford and included the selections of "Theme from Romeo and Juliet" and "The Wedding Song." Following the lighting of the unity candle, "My Love I'll Always Show" was sung and played on an acoustical guitar by the groom. The classical arrangement is by the religious musical group, Stryper.

Given in marriage by her brother-in-law, Wayne Adams of Grand Prairie, the bride wore a traditional white satin formal-length bridal gown fashioned with Elizabethan sleeves that were fitted to the elbow where they formed a full-gathered pouf of embroidered Alencon lace beaded with pearls and sequins.

"The fitted basque bodice dipped to points at the front and back with appliques of lace, hand-sewn pearls and sequins forming from the point up and over the shoulders to the gown's back. The full skirt was adorned with Alencon lace appliques, pearls, and sequins and swept into a cathedral-length train adorned with teardrop inserts with lace edging adorned with pearls and sequins and featured a wide-scalloped lace border forming the hem.

To complete her ensemble, the bride wore a fingertip-length two-tier bridal illusion veil attached to a wreath of tiny white silk roses and adorned with pearls and pearl sprays. The veil was further adorned by a gathered pouf at the top of the veil and a cascade of pearls that fell from the wreath down the side of the bride's face.

She carried a bridal bouquet of white silk roses accented by white stephanotis and English ivy. The bouquet was enhanced by cascades of pearl-sprays throughout the length of the arrangement extending to the bride's dress hem.

As something borrowed, the bride wore a pearl necklace, a family heirloom. Something blue was a garter fashioned for the bride by the groom's aunt, while something new was a gold bracelet, a gift from the groom. Something old was a set of pearl earrings belonging to the bride's maternal grandmother.

Bridal attendants wore tea-length brocade taffeta dresses in seasonal colors of yellow, orchid, peach, and blue. The fitted bodices of the dresses plunged to a deep-V in the back, featuring dropped waists accented with pouf sleeves of coordinating lace and lace bows at the back. They each carried three fresh white rose buds accented with English ivy, baby's breath and ribbon and streamers coordinating with each dress color.

A reception followed in the church's fellowship hall and was catered and served by Chad Fitzgerald and Cindy McCracken and Monica Devers assisting as servers.

Registering guests was Mrs. Dwight Shirley of Hereford, the groom's aunt. Others assisting were June Rudd, Wanda Verschelde, and Tamara Weston, all of Hereford; Mrs. Johnny Clark, Jr., of Baytown;

Mr. and Mrs. James Hooten of San Saba, and Kathy Graves of Uvalde.

The bride's table was adorned with a white hand-embroidered linen lace cloth from Portugal belonging to the bride's mother. The bride's bouquet, crystal appointments, and silver candelabrum adorned the table. Wedding scrolls were offered from a silver tray with an inscription from I Cor. 13 and a note from the couple to their guests.

The bride's cake was an all-white three-tiered banana nut cake surrounded by three heart-shaped satellite cakes all decorated with cupid's adorning the garlands. The cake featured a fountain in the center and was topped with two white doves.

The groom's table was adorned with an antique Irish lace cloth belonging to his paternal grandmother. Adorning the table were the bridesmaid's bouquets, silver candelabrum, and silver coffee urn.

The guitar-shaped German chocolate cake carried out the groom's hobby of classical guitar. Mints and nuts were served from crystal appointments and wedding scrolls were offered from a silver tray.

The bride's traveling costume consisted of a black and white tea-length silk herringbone dress with white trim and adorned with a fresh corsage of white rose buds.

Following a wedding trip to San Antonio, the couple will be at home after August 10 at 11100 Roxboro Dr., Apt. 705, Oklahoma City.

The bride is presently employed with Oklahoma Baptist Medical Center in Oklahoma City. She is a former student of Southern Nazarene University at Bethany, Okla., and will be a second year medical student at Oklahoma State University Tech branch in Oklahoma City this fall.

The bridegroom, a 1983 graduate of Hereford High School, is presently employed with the Waterford Hotel in Oklahoma City. He is a former student of West Texas State University.

Pre-nuptial celebrations included the rehearsal dinner which was an out-door cookout at the home of the bridegroom. Hosted by his parents, guests played volleyball. Assisting in the dinner were Messrs. and Mmes. Guy May, Roy Kuper, and Jerry Collier. A bridal brunch was held Saturday in the home of Carrie Shirley, assisted by Marilyn May and Serece Shirley.

Out-of-town relatives attending the wedding included Mrs. Ouida Billings of Del Rio, Mrs. Johnny Clark, Jr., of Baytown, Larry Kaul of Miami, Texas, J.T. Hooten of Memphis, Tenn., and Mr. and Mrs. James Hooten of San Saba. Out-of-town guests were from Nacogdoches, Grand Prairie, Garland, Oklahoma City, Uvalde, Littlefield, Shreveport, La., and Amarillo.

Children's pictures to be exhibited

Members of the Women's Division serving on the Town 'n' Country Jubilee Celebration committee are inviting residents to bring picture of the children to the Chamber of Commerce office by Aug. 11.

The pictures will be displayed on a large poster at the Jubilee Junction Saturday, Aug. 15, in Dameron Park.

Women wishing to assist during the annual observance, Aug. 9-15, are asked to call 364-6702 or 364-6763.

The California Medical Association says having your own personal physician can help keep medical costs down. People who belong to a health maintenance organization should ask to have a personal doctor assigned. Another tip: become familiar with strategies employers use to contain costs.

There's no dearth of advice on how to stay out of the hospital, but Grandma's may be the soundest of all, reports the U.S. Department of Agriculture. There is new evidence that fish oil can help prevent strokes by reducing blood clotting in veins and arteries. USDA's Agricultural Research Center advises the inclusion of fish oil — from fish, not supplements — in normal diets.

The Bell X-1 was the first plane to officially exceed the speed of sound. It was flown on October 14, 1947 by Major Charles E. Yeager. The plane was nicknamed "Glamorous Glennis."

Beard, Montgomery recite wedding vows

During an intimate wedding ceremony, family and close friends witnessed the marriage of Lydia Cortez Beard and Mauri Montgomery early Saturday afternoon in the parlor of First Baptist Church.

The nuptials were officiated by Dr. Ron Cook, pastor.

The bride's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Tony Cortez of 103 Ave. K and the groom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Richard C. Montgomery of 137 Mimosa.

The bride was attended by Brenda Valdez and serving as his brother's best man was Jay Montgomery. Special attendant was Kerris Brooke Beard.

Lila Liscano played piano selections during the ceremony.

Guests were invited to register at the reception held in the parlor by Sandra Fairweather.

Ruth Lucero served the bride's cake and Eleise Boren served the groom's cake. Punch and coffee were poured by Cynthia Thomas.

The couple left for a wedding trip to Cancun, Mexico and will make their home at 801 N. Lee St.

The bride, a 1982 Hereford High School graduate, is currently employed as a head teller at Hereford Texas Federal Credit Union.

The groom, a 1974 graduate of HHS, graduated from Texas Tech University in 1979 with a business administration degree in journalism. He has been employed by The Hereford Brand for eight years and has been the advertising manager for six years.

Out-of-town guests included Mr. and Mrs. Warren Wilson of Altus, Okla.; Dr. and Mrs. Sam Vines, Odessa; Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Wingert and Dan Vanderzee, all of DeSoto, Texas; Lonnie Perez, Spade; Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Higgins, Amarillo; and Mr. and Mrs. Danny Lucero, Canyon.

POLLY'S POINTERS Soy milk is healthy choice

DEAR POLLY — Can non-dairy creamer products be substituted for milk in baking and cooking, if you're allergic to milk? — E.L.

DEAR E.L. — Such products can be used with fairly good results, but they are not always the most healthful choice under the circumstances. Many non-dairy creamers are loaded with high-cholesterol fats, such as coconut oil. Even if the main fats are polyunsaturated, the creamers are still high in fat. Now that most authorities agree that adults should reduce the amount of fat in their diets, it makes sense to avoid overuse of such products. I think a better substitute is soy milk. It's low in fat, high in protein and calcium and makes a good substitute for milk in cooking and baking.

Soy milk can be purchased in some groceries, and most natural food stores. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — I have been alone for some years and have been retired, so I don't have the opportunity to take advantage of many "cents off" coupons or rebate offers. The savings from offers I was able to use did not seem to amount to much until I started putting them in a jar. It was surprising how they would add up for someone who would redeem them.

I've decided to donate the proceeds from this fund to a charitable cause. If enough people would use their coupon savings this way, it might have quite an effect on helping the unfortunate.

Along the same lines, have you considered adopting some charity, possibly a different one each month, and contributing the Polly Dollars? Probably just a postcard acknowledgement Pan, a Greek god, was believed to delight in frightening travelers. The word "panic" derives from his name.

that the tip had been used and the dollar donated would be a fine reward to your contributors. — ERIC

DEAR ERIC — Thank you for your lovely letter. I applaud your efforts to donate those coupon savings to good causes. However, I don't feel that the Polly Dollars are really mine to contribute. They belong to the readers who send in the Pointers and I don't think I can assume that all readers will want the dollars contributed to any particular cause.

However, perhaps you'll contribute the Polly dollar you'll receive for your letter to your own fund; then you, and all other readers, can make the contribution to whichever charitable organization they wish to choose. Again, thanks for a thoughtful letter. — POLLY

Wedding vows recited Saturday afternoon

Lina Esqueda became the bride of Carlos T. Ruiz IV in an early afternoon ceremony Saturday at St. Joseph's Catholic Church. Officiating for the couple was the Rev. Joe Bixenman of the church.

The bride's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Noel Esqueda of 409 Ave. K and the bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Carlos A. Ruiz III of 311 Ave. J.

The front of the church was decorated with two large brass stands holding large bouquets of fresh flowers in the bride's chosen colors. Pews were marked with burgundy and dusty rose bows accented with flowers.

The bride's cousin, Norma West of Canyon served as matron of honor and best man was Joe Mendoza of Hereford.

Serving as padrinos of laza were Mr. and Mrs. Abel Echevarria, the bride's aunt and uncle; arras, Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Echevarria Jr. of Canyon, the bride's cousins; Bible, Mr. and Mrs. Luis Sierra of Littlefield, the bride's cousins; bouquet, Mr. and Mrs. Todd Esqueda, the bride's brother and sister-in-law; and cojines, Santos Reyes and Sylvia Ruiz, the groom's sister of Hereford.

Guests were escorted by the groom's brother, Nicky Ruiz, and the groom's cousin, Danny Torres.

Junior attendants were Delma Garcia, Beverly Griego, Kathy Moreno, Ricky Ruiz, Hector Reyna and Danny Ruiz. Serving as flower girl was Jessica Gonzales, daughter of Jesse and Edna Gonzales, and ring bearer was Richard Salinas Jr., son of Richard and Diana Salinas. Musical selections were sung by Mr. and Mrs. Rudy Ramirez of Hereford.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was attired in a designer gown of silk over bridal satin featuring a high collar of embroidered lace, sheer bodice and Victorian sleeves accented with embroidered lace and pearls. The full skirt was fashioned with layers of ruffles and swept into a full cathedral-length train.

The fingertip veil of silk illusion with hand-rolled hem was attached to a headpiece of silk flowers, pearls, lilies of the valley and bugle beads.

She carried a cascading bouquet of silk roses accented with iridescent bridal blossoms, pearls, stephanotis lace and miniature ribbon roses tied into satin streamers.

Her jewelry consisted of pearl and diamond earrings which were given to her by the groom. In keeping with bridal tradition, the bride had a rosary as something borrowed; a garter, something blue; pearl and diamond earrings, something new; and a lace handkerchief belonging to her grandmother, something old.

The matron of honor wore a dusty rose floor-length satin gown and the bridesmaids wore burgundy gowns designed in similar fashion. Junior attendants wore floor-length dusty rose gowns with full skirts layered with ruffles on the sides and accented with bows at the waists. The flower girl was attired in a dress similar to the junior attendants' gowns.

Bridal attendants carried long stemmed dusty rose and burgundy roses accented with baby's breath and greenery with dusty rose and burgundy satin streamers.

The bride's cousin, Mrs. Adam Rendon of Anton invited guests to register at the reception and dance held at the Hereford Bull Barn.

Cake was served by Molly Lomeli and Annabell Moreno. They also poured punch and coffee.

The bride's table which was covered with dusty rose and white lace, was centered by a three-tiered white wedding cake. The table was appointed with silver.

The main bride's cake was surrounded by three cakes decorated with miniature roses. The bottom layer was decorated with bride and groom figurines beneath an archway of greenery and dusty rose and burgundy roses. It was topped with two white doves.

The groom's table was covered with a white and burgundy cloth and appointed with silver. A chocolate cake served as a centerpiece.

Leaving for a wedding trip to Santa Fe, N.M., the bride wore her wedding gown. The couple will make their home at 139 Beach St.

The bride is a graduate of Hereford High School and is currently employed by McCrory's in Hereford.

The groom, also an HHS graduate, is presently employed by Litho-Graphics office and Printing Supply.

Out-of-town wedding guests represented Georgetown, Del Rio, San Angelo, Amarillo, Dimmitt, San Jose, California, San Marcos, San Antonio, Lubbock, Oklahoma, Houston, Littlefield, Anton and Canyon.

Between the Covers

By REBECCA WALLS

This week we have a few best sellers that you have been waiting for. The first is Siblings Without Rivalry by Adele Faber.

Adele Faber and Elaine Mazlish refuse to accept the idea that nothing can be done about sibling rivalry. Drawing on their years of experience in teaching communication skills to parents, the authors have developed simple yet astonishingly effective ways to reduce the antagonism between siblings. Each skill prescribed in this insightful book is illustrated by their experiences of real parents.

Vivid dialogue & cartoons illuminate the many forms of sibling rivalry & show how to promote cooperation rather than competition. In this book you learn how to help children express negative feelings without doing damage, how to treat children unequally & still be fair, how to be helpful to both the "bully" & the "victim", how to reduce rage between battling siblings & motivate them to work out their own solutions.

Again and again we see how cooperative behavior can be encouraged & good will generated between brothers & sisters. Siblings Without Rivalry is an essential resource for helping children accept one another a gift that will remain with them for the rest of their lives.

The Closing Of The American Mind by Allen Bloom is another title appearing on the New York Times Best Sellers List.

Allen Bloom, a professor of social thought at the Univ. of Chicago and a noted translator of Plato & Rousseau, argues that the social & political crisis of 20th Century America is really an intellectual crisis. From the universities' lack of purpose to the students' lack of learning, from the jargon of liberation to the supplanting of reason by "creativity," Bloom shows how "democracy" has unwittingly played host to vulgarized continental ideas of nihilism and despair, of relativism disguised as tolerance.

According to Bloom the universities no longer provide the knowledge of tradition, philosophy and literature to make students aware of nature & man's place in it. The Closing of the American Mind is essential to an understanding of America's spiritual malaise.

On a lighter note we have Dirk Gently's Holistic Detective Agency by Douglas Adams.

Dirk Gently is a private detective who is more interested in telekinesis, quantum mechanics & lunch than fiddling around with fingerprint powder, so his investigations tend to produce startling and unexpected results. A simple search for a missing cat uncovers a bewildered ghost, a secret time-traveler, & the devastating secret that lies behind the whole human history & threatens to bring it to a premature end.

Sadly the cat dies. Dirk Gently is a person I'm sure you will want to meet.

Other titles that will be coming out this week are: Getting Better All The Time by Liz Carpenter and Everybody Loves Oprah! by Norman King.

THIS CAKE

ISN'T SO SHORT
DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — What makes a shortcake "short" even though it's stacked so high?

The short comes from the high proportion of shortening in the biscuit-like cake, says Better Homes and Gardens. Once you make the biscuit base, any type of shortcake is possible depending on a person's creativity and tastes.

Smith serves as hostess at covered dish salad supper

A summer social was attended by members of La Madre Mia Study Club Thursday in the home of Mysedia Smith. The salad supper was served in the patio area where secret pal packages were later opened.

Individual tables were covered with white cloths and centered with pots of silk flowers. Co-hostesses were Betty Owen, Merle Clark, Georgia Sparks and Mary Beth White.

During the brief business meeting with President Pat Walsh presiding, former members, Marcia Snyder of McAllen, was acknowledged as a special guest.

Other members in attendance included Susan Robbins, Betty Taylor, Sharon Hodges, Lavon Nieman, Mary Herring, Francyne Bromlow, Tricia Sims, Gladys Merritt, Nancy Paetzold and Betty Lady.

The highly flavored spice known as mace is actually the covering of the nutmeg. It is usually sold ground and is often used to flavor fruit pies.

MR. AND MRS. LEONEL S. GONZALEZ

Anniversary observed

Mr. and Mrs. Leonel S. Gonzalez of 408 Ave. I celebrated their 40th wedding anniversary Saturday with a dedicated Mass at San Jose Catholic Church. A supper followed in the church hall.

Leonel Gonzalez and Carman Nava exchanged nuptials July 27, 1947, in McAllen where they resided until moving to Hereford in 1976.

The observance was hosted by the couple's children: Mr. and Mrs. Hector Gonzalez of Italy, Mr. and Mrs. Leonel Gonzalez Jr. of Michigan, Mr. and Mrs. Ramiro Gonzalez and Mr. and Mrs. Juan Gonzalez, all of Amarillo; Mr. and Mrs. Ricardo Guzman and Mr. and Mrs. Ray Martinez, all of McAllen, Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Bendabout of Oklahoma, Albert Gonzales of Amarillo, Santiago, Reynato, Roy, Raul and Carmen, all of Hereford, and Frank of Austin.

Insect stings, bites may be dangerous

Insect stings and bites are usually annoying and mildly painful, but in some cases they can be dangerous.

"Few people have extreme reactions to bug bites and stings," says Dr. Mary Ann Heussner, a health education specialist with the Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service. "Yet for the few who are allergic, reactions can be quite severe."

"Unfortunately, most people don't know they're allergic until they're bitten, so it's important to recognize and understand the difference between a local and systemic reaction," says Heussner. "Local reactions may cause swelling and redness at the site of the sting or bite. Systemic reactions are far more serious and involve the entire body."

Symptoms of systemic reactions include dizziness, shock, fainting, wheezing, hives, a tightness in the chest, and facial swelling.

In the case of a systemic reaction, the specialist recommends you call the local poison control center, or immediately take the victim to the nearest hospital emergency room.

To prevent stings and bites, the specialist suggests the following:

- Always wear shoes outside.
- Avoid wearing bright colored and floral print clothing, and shiny jewelry which attract insects' attention. Wear long sleeved shirts and pants whenever possible.

-Keep picnic areas free of garbage. Spray garbage containers with insecticide and close the lids tightly.

-Avoid wearing perfume or cologne, or using scented soaps. Their odors may attract insects.

-Use insect repellent preferably a brand containing diethyltoluamide which will not harm your skin.

-If an insect lands on you, don't move. If you are attacked by a swarm of insects, run indoors, into water, or into a wooded area.

-When you notice an insect nest on your property, treat it promptly with appropriate insecticides.

"Most people can use simple home remedies to treat insect bites. However, those who are allergic should bring an emergency sting treatment kit along when they're planning to be outside for extended periods of time," says the specialist.

Heussner adds, "Insect stings and bites are usually annoying and somewhat painful, and in a few cases are very dangerous. The best way to stay out of danger is to avoid the bites, and understand what course of action to take if a violent reaction occurs."

Westway reunion held

The annual Westway Reunion drew 86 residents and former residents to the Community Building Sunday. At that time, the Man and Woman of the Year were announced by historian Leta Kaul.

Gary Phipps, vice-president of the Rix Corp., Rix Funeral Home in Hereford, was selected Man of the Year while Edith Chandler, senior citizen and foster daughter of Mrs. Viola Gray, resident of Westgate Nursing Home, was named Woman of the Year. The Johnny Townsend family was the Family of the Year and received the traditional "Bag of Beans."

Greeting former neighbors and scanning information provided by three scrapbooks kept since 1959 entertained visitors. Lunch was served at 1 p.m. with Joe Landers giving the invocation. Forrest Ricketts, president, conducted the afternoon program.

Kaul reported 10 graduates, 18 weddings, 9 deaths, 16 youths and the events in which they excelled. Residents who were students of the Class of 1937 included Gertrude Wilson Millard, Mary Turrentine Roach, Billy Smith and Gladys Lewis Willoughby.

In memory of those who passed away, Kaul read a selection from Proverbs and Forrest Ricketts led in prayer. Kaul also listed those who were recognized by The Hereford Brand in many Hereford activities.

Roxie Brooks, an early day resident and now 94 years old, was presented an award as the oldest living former resident. Traveling the farthest distance were Jim Hartman of Atlanta, Ga., and Maria Karnowski and children of Boise, Idaho.

The oldest lady present was Lola Landers of Wetway. John Harvey of Crosbyton was the oldest man in attendance. Mary Morrison received the plaque as Honorary Mayor for 1987.

Officers elected for next year's reunion were Howard Gore, president; Ulys Pierce, vice president; and Doris Wilson, secretary.

The Morrison family received the box of potatoes from Barrett Produce for having the most members present, winning by two persons over the (late) G.C. Hartman family.

Members of the Morrison family included Ralph, Brandi, and Joe, Diedra Drake, Deborah Noland, Raymond Morrison, Judith, Dick, Erin Shaddle, Patsy Burns, Ardie French, Mary Burns, Jayana Burns, Rebecca Burns and Mary Morrison.

Doris Wilson, secretary, closed the program by presenting an engraved silver tray to Leta Kaul for her work as historian for 27 years. It was noted that the reunions started in 1959 on the Kauls 25th wedding anniversary.

The meeting closed with Weldon Stephan leading the group in singing "God Bless America" and "God be with you till we meet again."

Women's Health

HYSTERECTOMY
By George W. Morley, M.D.
President, The American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists

By the age of 65, more than half of all American women will have had a hysterectomy, one of the most frequently performed operations in this country. If you are contemplating this surgery, you should understand fully what it is, and what are its benefits and risks.

A total hysterectomy is the removal of the womb (uterus) and the cervix (neck of the uterus). In some cases, the doctor may also remove the fallopian tubes, the ovaries, or both together. Rarely, will the operation be for the removal of the womb only. The doctor will perform the operation through an abdominal incision or through the vagina, depending on the reason for hysterectomy.

Having a hysterectomy ends your ability to become pregnant and to menstruate, but it does not cause undue weight gain, early menopause, or hormone-related problems unless the ovaries were removed too.

If you have not gone through menopause before a hysterectomy, you will continue to ovulate and produce hormones but will not have menstrual periods. If your ovaries are removed, you will go through "surgical" menopause and will probably receive supplementary hormones to replace the missing ones.

The most common reason to have a hysterectomy is persistent and excessive bleeding that doesn't respond to any kind of treatment.

Severe endometriosis is another reason for having a hysterectomy. Endometriosis can cause heavy menstrual periods, excruciating pain, scarring, and infertility. Scarring of the pelvis, precancerous or cancerous changes in the tissue of the cervix or the womb, growth of non-cancerous fibroid tumors in the womb, or weakened ligaments that allow the womb to sag, are other reasons for having a hysterectomy.

As with any surgery, you run a risk of complications such as fever or infection. Most doctors recommend about a week's stay in the hospital following the procedure. After about six weeks, you will have totally recovered.

Hysterectomy can improve your health and well being if you have had severe pain or bleeding, or other serious problems related to the uterus. If you have had cancer, or precancerous conditions, a hysterectomy can be a life saving procedure.

If your doctor recommends a hysterectomy for you, ask him or her why that is the best alternative, then if you have any doubts get a second opinion. You'll also want to know what effects the surgery will have on you emotionally and physically.

By BEVERLY HARDER
County Extension Agent
"Dry Clean Only." Do you dare disobey this order and hand wash your silk?

The Silk Institute not only dares, it recommends hand washing for the following silks: China, India, raw and spun silks, crepe de chine, pongee, shantung, tussah, dupioni and jacquard.

Hand washing will not only save money, it will refresh silk. Every time silk is washed in warm water, the seracin is rejuvenated. Seracin is a gum-like coating put into the fibers by the silk worm.

Before following the Silk Institute's recommendations to wash, make sure all the components of the garment—buttons, interfacing, lining, and shoulder pads—are hand washable. Test a small sample of the fabric for possible changes. Silk is not always colorfast, so the excess dye may run off and the silk will lose some of its color. Watch for darker colors running into lighter ones in print fabrics. Check to see if the colors bled by wetting an area of the garment, putting it between paper towels, applying pressure and checking for the presence of color on the towels.

The texture of silk often changes after washing. It may become stiffer, softer or crepier. It may also lose some of its sheen and become dull. Some shrinkage may occur, but it should be minimal.

If satisfied with the results after testing, go ahead and wash the garment.

Hadn wash silk in warm water with a milk liquid soap. Swish the suds through the fabric, but never rub, because this will damage the fabric. Prolonged soaking will cause the dyes in the fabric to run, so dry the garment immediately. Squeeze out the excess water, without wringing, smooth the garment and air dry, but not in direct sunlight. Silk dries quickly and should be pressed while still damp.

If there are any problems while testing the garment, or uncertainty as to what type of silk it is, have the garment dry cleaned. Hand washing is a great alternative once you're sure it will not damage the garment.

Who Is This Chicken

This fowl looks familiar and upon closer inspection it greatly resembles Bobby Boyd. Boyd will be portraying a chicken character in a novelty act during the Hereford Chamber Singers' concert planned at 8 p.m. Aug. 13, in the Hereford High School auditorium. Merlee McWethy, a member of the Chamber Singers, will also be performing in the fund-raiser entitled "Southern Jubilee" in which Susan Shaw is serving as music chairman. The concert is being held in conjunction with the annual Town 'n' Country Jubilee celebration and proceeds from the event will be used to help defray expenses for the group's trip to World Expo 88 in Brisbane, Australia in June of 1988. Tickets are priced at $4 for adults and $2 for children under 12 years of age. They will be available at the door.

The first formal rules for baseball required that the winning team score no fewer than twenty-one runs.

Hereford Art guild members plan programs, activities

Members of the Hereford Art Guild met Tuesday in the Community Center to plan programs and activities for the new club year.

After minutes were read by the acting secretary, Carrie Mae Doak, and a financial statement was made by Annie DeLozier, the yearbook chairman, Shirley Brown, distributed new books and led members through the books verifying the upcoming officers and committees. They also checked the roll to confirm telephone numbers and addresses.

Program chairman, Jean Reinauer, reviewed the programs listed for each month of the season. Acting publicity chairman, Eunice Petersen, reported the progress for enlisting new members.

The club made plans for the display of their booth during the annual Jubilee of Arts Aug. 14-15 to be held in conjunction with the Town 'n' Country Jubilee. Each member pledged to help man the booth.

The next Art Guild meeting will be Sept. 22 at the Community Center.

Brothers attend camp

Summer Camp Cadets Raul Roger Ramirez, 14, and Rolando Rene Ramirez, 13, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Rene Ramirez of Hereford, have completed a two-week stay at the Marine Military Academy in Harlingen, Texas.

During that time they participated in a variety of activities including marksmanship, swimming, boxing, soccer, and physical fitness training. The Academy program is also heavily structured around military history, drill, first aid, and patriotism. Boys attending the summer camp are supervised by retired Marine Corps drill instructors assisted by senior cadets who attend the academy during the academic year.

The Marine Military Academy in Harlingen is a private, military, college preparatory boarding school for young men in grades 9-12, plus a post graduate program. It offers military leadership training based on the proven traditions and customs of the U.S. Marine Corps.

Caring for a dementia victim can be difficult

According to the National Institutes of Mental Health, dementia is a brain disorder which affects about one out of seven older families. Fifty percent of the cases are probably Alzheimer's Disease. This incurable disorder results in a progressive memory loss which eventually leaves the victim unable to function normally.

"Managing a loved one with progressive dementia isn't easy. It involves understanding the disease, patience and skill," says Dr. Judith Warren, a gerontologist with the Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service.

She explains that impaired people must be monitored constantly, because of the problems their memory loss invites so it's important for family members to inventory possible sources of danger in the home. These dangers include high windows, stairs, power tools, appliances, knives, hot water, poisons, firearms, matches, medications, small objects, loose rugs, and improper lighting.

To make the dementia victim's environment safer, the specialist advises taking the following steps:

-Secure high windows and install gates at stair entrances.

-If the victim is still functioning enough to use appliances such as a hair dryer or electric razor, supervise the activity.

-To prevent burns, ask the utility company to alter the stove so the dementia victim cannot easily turn it on. Lower the setting on the water heater to 120 degrees or lower, and check the temperature and depth of bath water.

-Lock medications, power tools, knives, poisons, liquors, firearms and matches out of the victim's reach.

-Dispense the person's medications and supervise smoking. Remove small objects that might be ingested, loose rugs and harmful plants.

Names in the News

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Kirstie Alley is off to a flying start on NBC-TV's "Cheers" after showing up for her first rehearsal as a Shelley Long lookalike.

"I wanted to break the ice and get off to a fresh start," said Alley, who broke up the cast with laughter as she paraded in a blond wig and a conservative dress with her eyebrows colored blond and with makeup to look like Miss Long.

NEW YORK (AP) — Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis is leading a coalition that wants to prevent a skyscraper from casting a giant shadow on Central Park.

"One would hope that the city would act as protector of sun and light and clean air and space and parkland," Mrs. Onassis told a news conference Thursday. "Those elements are essential to combat the stress of urban life."

Mrs. Onassis will serve as chairwoman of a coalition of organizations that have joined to sue the project.

She was joined by journalist Bill Moyers in speaking out against the proposed 68- and 58-story paired towers near the Park's southwest corner. "Central Park is the people's park. It is the last great preserve of democracy in this city," said Moyers.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Movie director William Friedkin and his ex-wife, actress Lesley Anne Down, have settled their bitter child custody battle by deciding on joint custody of their 5-year-old son.

Miss Down's attorney, Marvin Mitchellson, said Thursday that Jack Friedkin will alternate three days with each parent.

"He's used to it and that's why we wanted to keep it that way," Miss Down said.

The couple split in 1985. Miss Down is now married to cameraman Don Fautleroy and Friedkin recently married Los Angeles news anchorwoman Kelly Lange.

The actress is best known for her roles in "The Great Train Robbery" and "Rough Cut." Friedkin's movie credits include "The Exorcist" and "The French Connection."

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Rock-country star Charlie Daniels' Volunteer Jam concert in September will mark a reunion of Lynyrd

Skyryrd, a rock 'n' roll band that disbanded after a plane crash killed two members in 1977.

Daniels said Thursday that the seven-member band would be his special guest Sept. 6 at Volunteer Jam XIII at Starwood Amphitheater.

Lynyrd Skynyrd is best known for the hits "Sweet Home Alabama" and "Free Bird." The band will play in more than 25 cities following the concert in Nashville.

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (AP) — Mystery writer Dick Francis' works will be made into movies if a proposed agreement is carried out.

Angel Entertainment Inc. and Dick Francis Films Ltd. of London said Thursday that they have tentatively agreed to produce up to seven of Francis' mystery novels as theatrical motion pictures or TV movies.

Angel director Anthony Adler said the contract was expected to be signed next week.

The Francis titles include "Bolt," "Break In," "Proof," "Twice Shy," "In the Frame" and "Slay Ride."

Francis' books have sold more than 40 million copies. "Bolt" was recently on The New York Times' bestseller list for 13 weeks.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I read the letter from "Suspicious" in Alabama, who had trouble believing that a woman could carry a child for nine months and now know she was pregnant. It can be done; in fact, it happened to me. The amazing thing is that I was seen by two doctors during my pregnancy.

I saw Doctor No. 1 because I was having gastrointestinal problems. He said I had an ulcer and prescribed medication.

When I noticed that I was gaining weight I went back to him. He agreed to give me an appetite suppressant. I continued to gain weight and was busting out of my clothes. The appetite suppressant didn't work. Late when I was depressed and then I'd become even more depressed because I would overeat.

After a few months I went back to my doctor because I had to urinate at least 10 times a day. He told me I had a bladder infection and prescribed sulfa drugs. They didn't help, so I consulted another doctor. During that visit I told him I felt a fluttering across my stomach. He said, "You are experiencing electrical impulses due to damaged tissue."

In March I went back to Doctor No. 1. Again he prescribed sulfa drugs. The next day I was in terrible pain. I phoned the doctor and he said, "Go to the hospital. I'll get there as soon as I can."

Shortly after I arrived at the hospital the doctor stuck his head in the door and said he was turning me over to a urologist who would "get my bladder problems straightened out."

The shifts changed at 11 p.m. One of the nurses became suspicious and called for a maternity nurse to check me. I almost passed out when she said matter of factly, "You are in labor."

I was rushed to the delivery room. A few hours later I gave birth to a beautiful 8-pound, 14-ounce boy. My husband and I were thrilled. We had been told we would never be able to have a child.

You may print my name if you like, Ann. If not, just sign me — It Happened in Ardmore, Okla.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Another case where the nurse was smarter than the doctor. Thanks for the testimony. It's a beaut.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I have a 10-year-old daughter who is driving me insane. Any attempt to discipline her ends in screams that can be heard by the neighbors. I am not talking about spankings. I mean being sent to her room.

Last week "Debbie" became so upset she vomited. The child cried so hard she had bright red circles around her eyes and her hair was wringing wet.

Her teachers tell me what a sweet child she is. They say she is beautifully behaved and very respectful. I hear the same comments from her Sunday school teachers. If they could see Debbie at home they would not believe it was the same child.

I know she hasn't had an easy life but neither have I. I was 16 when Debbie was born. I divorced her father when she was 3 and have had two divorces since then.

Please help me before I do something terrible to this kid.—Akron
