Nuke dump, other issues aired here by Combest

By SPEEDY NIEMAN
Editor-Publisher
U.S. Rep. Larry Combest, Republican from the 19th District, discussed current issues and answered questions of interest from Deaf Smith County and area citizens Friday morning during an "office-hour" meeting in the community room of Hereford State Bank.

Approximately 60 persons attended part, or all, of the meeting which was held from 11 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Combest discussed various issues, including the nuclear waste repository project in Deaf Smith County, the Persian Gulf confrontation, the super-conducting super collider program, taxes and the federal deficit, and other topics.

Congressman Combest spoke at Earth Friday morning and, following the Hereford meeting, he was scheduled to speak at Friona in the afternoon. The Lubbock representative said he would be visiting in the district much of the month, during the Congressional recess.

"These type of meetings are very important to me," said Combest, "because I get to hear what my constituents think about the issues which we are addressing in Washington."

Combest said he thought there was "a good chance" that Congress might get Nuclear Waste Policy Act changed to have only one site characterized, instead of three. He pointed out that it is a costly project and, "since all three sites are in the west," there is no regional issue involved. If the one site proved unsuitable, then another site would be characterized.

In view of court cases and the demands for a review of the whole process, Combest said the outlook was "encouraging" in the local fight to eliminate Deaf Smith County as one of the top three sites. He emphasized that the battle should continue, "because I've always said that we can't hold out for the governor's veto." He predicted Congress would override a veto, because none of the other states want the repository, either.

Combest said Congress was highly concerned about the Persian Gulf confrontation. "I support the U.S.

presence there, but I think we should have more support from allies, and there are some things I would have done different."

The Panhandle's site for a super collider installation is "still very much in the running", according to the congressman, but he pointed out that DOE and scientists would have much to say about the final decision. He feels the Illinois site will be difficult. (See COMBEST, Page 2)

Man stable following stabbing

A Hereford man is in stable condition in Deaf Smith General Hospital following a stabbing incident early Saturday in the 200 block of Main Street.

Two suspects are being sought by Hereford police in the incident after they were identified by witnesses.

Police were called at 1:01 a.m. Saturday to the scene, and were told that a man, 28, whose name was not released, was taken from the scene by private vehicle to the hospital, where he was being treated for a stab wound in the lower left abdomen.

Officers said the accident occurred along a parking area on Main. The suspects left the scene on foot.

Hereford police Friday also investigated an assault by threat, when a man, 18, threatened to hit someone with a chain belt; shoplifting by two juveniles at Lo-Mart; the theft of a bag with a 35 millimeter camera and shaving goods at the corner of Third and Main; and a prowler report in the 800 block of S. McKinley.

A juvenile was treated for bruises to the head and chest after a fight at the city swimming pool.

Babbling Brooks

It's amazing how you can remember where you were when certain things happened in history.

Just about everyone who was alive knows where they were and what they were doing when John Kennedy was shot.

I was at my grandmother's house watching As The World Turns when CBS began days of unending programming about the fallen President.

10 years ago today, Elvis died. I was a bored disc jockey at KDHN in Dimmitt, and decided to flip on the network to see what was happening.

"We will have a special report in 30 seconds," an announcer said, a solemn tone in his voice. "Elvis Presley just died."

I don't remember what record I was playing, but I faded the song out and broke in. "We now go live to ABC for a special report. Elvis Presley is dead."

For some strange reason, I had always been an Elvis Presley fan, even back when I didn't know we almost had the same birthday—Presley's was about 20 years and 364 days earlier than mine.

I later discovered he did record "Love Me Tender" on the day of my birth.

COMBEST

Responding to a question by the audience, Combest sees no connection between the SSC project and the nuclear waste repository. However, he pointed out that technology from the SSC program would benefit all energy-related systems, including the "Star Wars" program.

Combest was asked what he thought about Gov. Clement's statements that some savings and loan associations were in trouble and "might pay only 30 cents on the dollar" to clients. "I don't know what he said, but I assure you the government will back FDIC and FSLIC up to the $100,000 limit," responded the congressman.

"The only chance you take—and it's the chance you've always taken—is that if you have more than $100,000

Some people didn't have a lot of love for Elvis. He did some crazy gyrations with his body and couldn't sing a lick.

But he had a certain style. It was the way he performed, phrased, and pranced.

Elvis was from the wrong side of the tracks, back when that really mattered, back when your place in life was determined by not only your skin color but your address.

Maybe that growing-up-time put a little more rhythm in his blues, a little more soul in his songs.

And maybe his music opened the ears of more people to more music. Elvis appealed to a broad audience, and when he was hot, you could hear Elvis mixed in not only with the twang of George Jones but with the twanging, crashing guitar licks of Jethro Tull and Ted Nugent.

Elvis paved a broad path that allowed performers like Ray Charles to eventually be on country stations and people like Alabama to rock'n'roll on a station with a Q or Z in its name.

You can love Elvis tender or think of him as nothing but a hounddog, but his effect and his memories linger still.

in one place, because the insurance does not cover over that amount," said Combest.

Combest said he was opposed to an increase in the federal minimum wage. He said the labor lobby was pushing a number of proposals and he was urging the U.S. Chamber of Commerce and other business lobbyists to get ready to fight.

Asked about the federal deficit and spending cuts, Combest pointed out that the budget could be balanced in five years without cutting spending. "What Congress will not do is cut the increases in spending—we couldn't hold the increases to $25 billion this time." He added that some congressmen tried to cut the increases in half, "and we couldn't even accomplish that with a Republican senate."

According to NOW legal rights index

State ranks low in women's rights

DALLAS (AP) — Texas ranks far below most other states in protecting the rights of women on abortion, employment, domestic matters and other areas, a National Organization for Women attorney says.

Texas ranks 40th of the 50 states and the District of Columbia in a women's legal rights index compiled by the NOW Legal Defense and Education Fund. It published "The State-by-State Guide to Women's Legal Rights" this year.

"Everywhere, women's legal status has improved in the last decade," Roxanne Barton Conlin, the NOW fund's president, said Thursday. "In Texas, there are still many gaps" despite the Equal Rights Amendment provision in the state constitution.

Ms. Conlin, of Des Moines, Iowa, was in Dallas for several appearances on women's rights issues.

For example, a spouse may charge his or her partner with rape in Texas only when they reside separately or a divorce action is pending between them.

"In the domestic-violence situations involving battery, rape is also common," Ms. Conlin said. "Most states provide a lot more protection for women."

The organization ranks Washington first in protecting women's rights. South Carolina is last on the list, which uses statutory protections as criteria. Texas is tied with Oklahoma and Virginia for No. 40.

The Texas Legislature recently passed legislation providing battered spouses new remedies, including protective orders, temporary custody and support payments.

"The law has not been on the books long enough to see how it will do," said Ms. Conlin, 43.

But Texas has too few shelters for victims of family violence. State appropriations of $2.5 million per year fund 47 shelters; however, 157 are needed to meet the demand.

"Only 48 percent of the women needing help are getting it," she said.

The state does not fund abortions for low-income women, unless the life of a mother is endangered. Texas is also one of only three states in the country that doesn't provide for permanent alimony, she said.

"Alimony is intended as a protection for people who are full-time homemakers," said Ms. Conlin. "It is difficult to square the current law with the relative earning power of both parties."

State law does allow temporary alimony until a divorce proceeding is final and a property division is made. And lawmakers are considering a provision for alimony on a limited basis in cases where a marriage has lasted for 10 or more years and where a big disparity of earning power exists.

Though it is illegal for an employer in Texas to discriminate in wages on the basis of sex for the same grade, kind and quantity of work, inequities still exist, she said.

"A report by a private task force found that women in at least five state agencies were discriminated against," due in part to occupational segregation, Ms. Conlin said.

Texas is one of only 16 states with a provision prohibiting sex discrimination, but not much litigation has been brought under it.

"Perhaps some women are uncomfortable with the courts," the attorney said. "But it is a starting point."

What came to be called "The Blitz" began Sept. 7, 1940, when London underwent the first concentrated night air raid of World War II. In the first three nights, 1,000 people were killed and 3,500 seriously injured. The RAF prevented invasion during 1940, but the civilian population suffered massive bombing before the tide turned.

Grimm files Titanic suit

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — West Texas oilman Jack Grimm is suing a California corporation that is gathering artifacts from the wrecked Titanic, claiming he was squeezed out of a deal to share profits from the underwater expedition.

Grimm says The Westgate Group refused to honor a 1986 contract to share artifacts and profits of the expedition, deceived him about its ability to perform its part of the contract and later tried to cut him out of the deal altogether.

One of Grimm's companies, Titanic 1983 Inc., filed the suit in Abilene federal court Wednesday

Combest said he voted for a line-item veto for the president, but it failed. "Congressmen don't want to be put in the position of overriding the veto and going on record as voting for more spending."

The congressman also pointed out that he tried to repeal the pay raise for congressmen. "The floor leadership would not let the measure get to the floor. The day after the deadline passed and the pay raise was in effect, they let the members vote against the raise."

He said he was putting his raise into an escrow fund and, if the bill was not revoked, he would contribute to charitable organizations in his district. "I think that would be better than giving it back, because I know it would be spent for a worthwhile purpose," concluded Combest.

seeking half of the estimated $35.8 million profit expected from the North Atlantic expedition.

Named as defendants are The Westgate Group of Toluca Lake, Calif.; its president, John Joslyn; and its executive vice president, Doug Llewelyn, who hosts television's "The People's Court."

Since 1980, Grimm has spent more than $2 million on three expeditions to locate the wreck of the luxury liner that sank after colliding with an iceberg in 1912.

"This has been an important part of my life for seven years," Grimm told the Abilene Reporter-News Thursday. "Had we known they were going to handle the business this way, we would have been out there ourselves."

On Nov. 12, 1986, Grimm signed an agreement with Westgate calling for him to provide the expertise for the expedition and arrange for ships, submarines and equipment necessary to recover the Titanic's safes from two miles below the ocean's surface.

In return, Westgate would provide financing, documents related to the suit said. Under the contract, both parties would share equally in any return, the suit said.

Grimm said he arranged a contract with the French Institute for Research and Exploitation of the Sea for use of the three-man submersible Nautille and its mother ship, the Nadir, for an expedition to take place in June 1987.

Westgate failed to arrange financing and "did not even acquire the funds necessary for a deposit to reserve the vessels," the suit said. As a result, the contract for the ships was canceled.

By June 1987, however, Westgate informed Grimm that financing had been arranged, and Joslyn went to Paris to again contract for the vessels, the suit states.

When Joslyn returned, he told Grimm he "had a whole new deal" and told Grimm he would include him for one-eighth interest if Grimm would put up $1 million, the suit contends.

Grimm argues that this new arrangement breached the previous contract and precluded him from the venture, and the expedition left without him.

"They didn't give any justification," Grimm said. "They just said if you don't put up a million dollars you're out of it."

Joslyn refused to comment about the suit, said Felicity McKinney, who answered the phone at The Westgate Group offices Thursday.

Westgate Group is filming the French expedition for a television special.

For Mohawk woman

Indian bishop backs sainthood

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Catholic American Indians are hoping Pope John Paul II will designate a Mohawk woman who died 307 years ago as the first Indian saint when he visits Phoenix this fall.

"It would be a very beautiful thing," said John Pelotte of Gallup, N.M., the first Indian Catholic bishop. "We have every hope that the Holy Father will do this. We certainly have expressed that hope very loudly and clearly in all our correspondence with Rome."

Pelotte, who will join the pope here in September in a special meeting with 16,000 Indians, said such a canonization "would have a very strong impact" on the nation's 1.5 million Indians, about 285,000 of whom are Catholics.

The candidate for sainthood, Kateri Tekawitha, was beatified by the pope in 1980, the step before canonization.

"Up until the beatification, she was known only to the tribes of the Northeast" where the Mohawks are located, Pelotte said. "Now, you can find statues of her in Navajo churches. All across the Southwest, there are pictures and medallions of Kateri Tekawitha. This in itself is a kind of miracle, good enough for her canonization. She has been the great unifier of Indian Catholics."

If the pope designates her for sainthood, the College of Cardinals in Rome would process the canonization, which could take several months.

Pelotte said he has received no signals from Rome but thinks it is possible because Pope John Paul has named others to sainthood on previous trips.

Tekawitha died in 1680 at age 24 of smallpox after leading a life, according to the Catholic Encyclopedia, of "austerity and charity."

Her baptism in 1676 and her vow to remain a virgin met so much opposition she was forced to flee her tribe, but she continued working among other tribes, historians say. It is said that at the moment she died, her smallpox scars vanished.

The pope's visit with the Indians here is being billed as a step toward reconciliation in what Pelotte called an often-embarrassing relationship which started with priests accompanying the conquering Spanish and which some have blamed for the destruction of traditional Indian religions.

"But we have come a long way since," Pelotte said, citing a 1977 church decision acknowledging the right of Indian Catholics to be both good members of the church and followers of their own traditional religious beliefs.

The decision, the bishop said, came "after an uncomfortable meeting" in South Dakota between four Catholic bishops and a group of 66 Indians who formed a circle around and directed "very hard questions" at the bishops.

The Rev. Gilbert Hemauer of Great Falls, Mont., who organized what became known after the meeting as the Tekawitha Conference because the Mohawk woman had become the symbol of Indian Catholicism, said the decision resulted in thousands of new converts and in the return to the church of many Indian Catholics who had become disillusioned.

And, said Sister Carla Riach of the San Solano Mission at Sells on the Tohono O'odham Reservation, the decision means that "holy smoke" from burning greasewood can be used at Mass, in "purification ceremonies using water signs and in processions with drums and dancing."

Women's Health

BREECH BIRTH
By Harry S. Jonas, M.D.,
President, The American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists

whether or not the delivery might be premature, the size of your pelvis, whether you've had a normal vaginal birth before, and special risks—before deciding whether to handle the delivery vaginally or through cesarean birth.

Single, free copies of "High Risk Pregnancy" (p-067) are available by sending a stamped, self-addressed business size envelope along with the name of the booklet to: The American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists, Resource Center, 600 Maryland Ave., SW, Washington, DC 20024.

Most of us came into this world head first. When 95 percent of women go into labor, their babies are positioned with the head down. Once the head—the largest part of a newborn—is through the birth canal, the rest of the body slides out fairly easily. But five percent of the time, some other body part is in the down position, and it is usually the buttocks or feet.

When a baby is born buttocks first, it is said to be in a "breech position." Other possibilities are feet or knees first, or less often, shoulder or face first. These abnormal positions call for special action to avoid injury to the baby during birth.

Although your baby spends most of the pregnancy floating around in amniotic fluid within the uterus, during the last month or so he or she will get into position for delivery. If the baby is not head first, your doctor will weigh many factors—the baby's size,

Vaginal delivery for a breech baby can be risky because once the baby's feet and body are delivered, the large head may get trapped in the opening to the uterus. If the delivery is delayed for a few minutes, the baby may not get enough oxygen because of a collapsed umbilical cord, or there may be injury to the baby's head, spine, or other organs.

If your baby is in an abnormal position before you go into labor, your doctor may try to turn the baby around by gently pushing and pressing on your abdomen.

In many cases, however, the risk of problems with a vaginal delivery is too high, and your doctor will recommend a cesarean section.

Your baby may not decide to enter this world head first. But the important thing in any delivery is working for a healthy baby and mother.

TRUE COLORS

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Color video monitors have made their way from video games to personal computers to the medical lab. At the University of Rochester, they're now helping doctors diagnose heart disease.

"Color images are very helpful in showing the severity of heart ailments such as valve disease," says Dr. Raymond Gramiak. "Especially in children with congenital heart disease, these images let us study blood flow patterns that would otherwise be very difficult, if not impossible, to obtain."

Doctors at the university now rely on a "Color Flow Doppler Ultrasound Imager" to help them in diagnosing valve disease, problems of the aorta, and aneurysms of the heart, among other ailments.

Frozen fruit bars you make at home

By Polly Fisher

DEAR POLLY — Do you have any recipes for frozen fruit bars? My favorites are strawberry, banana and pina colada. — D.M.

Dear D.M. — Nothing could be easier than making your own frozen fruit bars. Juice bars are the simplest, of course. Simply pour fruit juice into your molds. Your molds can be commercial ice-pop molds or simply paper cups. When using paper cups, insert wooden or plastic pop sticks when the mixture has frozen to a slushy consistency. My favorite juice-bar juices are those put out by the all-natural juice companies; they often feature exotic, intense flavors such as apple-strawberry, pina colada, passion fruit and mango-papaya. Yummy! Of course, any fruit juice will do.

If you want a more substantial pop with even more intense flavor, puree fresh fruit to pour into the pop molds. Strawberries, bananas and pineapple all work very well. You can make the mixture as smooth or chunky as you like. To make pina colada, puree together fresh or canned pineapple and canned cream of coconut — about three parts pineapple to one part cream of coconut makes a good mixture, but proportions can be varied to suit your taste.

Of course, the beauty of making your own frozen fruit bars is that you don't have to add any sugar (many commercial bars contain sugar or other sweeteners). If desired, of course, it may be added, but most fruits and juices are sweet enough without added sugar. If your fruit seems too tart, try sweetening it with a little apple or pineapple juice. Have a cool summer! — POLLY

DEAR READERS — A few weeks ago, a reader asked for ways to keep her high-heeled shoes from scuffing while driving. Using the gas pedal can be hard on the heels of your favorite shoes! I suggested keeping a pair of soft slippers in the car to slip on instead of the shoes while driving. Our readers have responded with more suggestions. Here's the first wave! — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — Put a terry-cloth hand towel in your car (I keep one under the seat.) When I have on nice shoes, I arrange the towel so the shoe heel rests on it. The towel keeps the shoe from being worn. — D.C. K.F.

DEAR POLLY — To protect the heel of your shoe while driving, just slip a man's fuzzy stretch sock or girl's knee sock over your shoe.

Another idea is to cut a piece of plush bathroom rug or carpet and place it just below the gas pedal.

My favorite idea is to take an old plush bathroom rug and cut it a tiny bit larger than your rubber floor mat. Then, cut a piece of material large enough to sew onto the rug as a backing. Just slip this cover over your floor mat like a slip cover. It can be easily removed to wash and will stay in place and not get in the way of the gas pedal. — PATSY

DEAR POLLY — In order to prevent heel scuffing, rest your heel on a napkin or paper towel placed below the accelerator. I wear cowboy boots and this hint works well for me! — JESSE

DEAR POLLY — I keep some old nylon hose in the car, and when I drive, I slip it over my shoe. — L.F.

Covert actions nothing new

By JAMES ROBERTS, Andrews County News

The dictionary explains the word "covert" as meaning "not openly shown, engaged in, or avowed."

We overheard a conversation between three young men discussing the covert operations of Lt. Col. Ollie North and his buddies. The trio were registering their surprise at the idea of our government carrying on "covert" operations.

Shades of Benjamin Franklin! Old Ben, back during the Philadelphia convention in July, 1787, carried on a covert operation to hide most of the proceedings of the delegates not only from the press but also from some of the other delegates.

In more recent time, President Franklin Roosevelt put together a scheme that made Colonel North's operations tame by comparison.

Roosevelt faced about the same kind of meddling, cantankerous Congress as does President Reagan. In 1941, Congress came within one vote of killing the draft.

Secretly, Roosevelt bought a plan outlined by Claire Chenault, a retired officer serving as a free-lance adviser to the Chinese government, to organize a surprise attack on Tokyo and other Japanese industrial cities.

Chenault had gone to the White House and sold the president's aides on a plan to make a re-emptive air strike on a nation he believed was planning aggression against America.

The plan was to form a task group of bombers and fighter planes, which would be flown by American pilots. The United States, formally at peace with Japan, supposedly would not be blamed, since the planes would bear the markings or insignia of Chinese planes—and the Chinese were already at war with Japan.

President Roosevelt signed a secret executive order permitting Chenault and his friends to recruit military and naval aviators, who would be allowed to fly and fight as highly paid civilian mercenaries for the special mission, then return to the U.S. services with no loss of rank.

On December 1st, 1941, the First American Volunteer Group fighter pilots were in Asia and undergoing the training and the Second Group was on the way.

On Dec. 7, 1941, when the Japanese navy hit Pearl Harbor, 49 bomber ground crewmen were on their way by ship to Chenault's training sight.

Did this nation ever hold congressional hearings on Roosevelt's secret covert operation in China? Nope!

President John Kennedy had his "Ollie North" in brother Robert who carried out the planning and covert operation known as the "Bay of Pigs" because President Kennedy could not convince Congress of the communist threat in Cuba.

Newspapers and television were painting Castro as the savior of the downtrodden in Cuba and pooh-poohed ideas that he was a Communist.

The "Bay of Pigs" was a disaster from the beginning. But did we ever hold congressional hearings to pinpoint the blame and "get" the president. Nope!

President Carter had his covert operation in the rescue of the hostages in the Middle East—and the rescue effort failed in a half-dozen different places.

Did we hold Congressional hearings to try and pin the blame on the chief executive? Nope!

Back when we had the George Mahons, the Vanderbergs, the Connallys as chairmen of the powerful committees in the House and Senate, a president could keep Congressional committees informed and in on the secret operations.

But nowadays, anytime an executive briefs a congressional committee on any secret issue, it usually makes the six o'clock evening news.

As long as we have congressional committees trying to dictate foreign policy, we'll have a need for the "Ollie Norths" of this world.

land developer. Landow said the team of 15 fund-raising contributors he was empowered to speak for didn't like any of the already-announced candidates and would back a Gore bid. Before Landow came calling, Gore was ready to announce he would not run for president.

Few people outside of politics or San Francisco have heard of Walter Shorenstein. But to Democratic insiders his name is a household word. The Bay area real-estate developer is widely recognized as one of the premier Democratic fund-raisers, a man whose wide circle of friends and business associates allows him to raise huge amounts for candidates he favors.

It's no surprise that when Shorenstein announced he would like some Democratic hopefuls to attend a recent party in San Francisco he got results. Most of them immediately changed their plans and flew to the West Coast along with many Democratic leaders of the House and Senate.

Likewise, few outside of his immediate family and Democratic political professionals had ever heard of New York actuary Joel Boyarsky — until Delaware Sen. Joe Biden filed his first campaign finance report in March.

The report showed that between March 3, when he announced, and March 31, the cut-off date for the report, Biden had raised $1.7 million. More than a million dollars of that sum had come from the New York area; and much of it had been raised through Boyarsky's efforts.

At the time Biden was only a blip on the political map with about a 1 percent rating in the polls. But that kind of fund-raising clout made him instantly credible.

New York City has become the mecca of fund raising, especially among Democrats.

That is why on a recent hot July night three major Democratic candidates — Biden, Gore and Illinois Sen. Paul Simon — were all within a few blocks of one another at cocktail parties hosted by lawyers, developers and investment bankers. They were there to meet with friends and business acquaintances of their hosts, all of whom were willing to call their friends and associates in an effort to round up those $1,000 checks.

That is why small parties like these have become weekly stops for most candidates, and why the people attending have become the most important individuals in any political campaign.

HOOKS

Alcoholics are some of the best manipulators in the world. Somehow they learn how to hook us into their games. I do not know whether the alcoholism creates the ability to manipulate or if manipulators tend to become alcoholics.

I had a pet drunk when I lived in Tulsa. He would call me almost every Saturday night from some bar. I would go get him, drive him around until he was sober enough to take home, and invariably end up on the business end of some hook.

The game was always the same. I would try to talk to him about getting help. He would hook me with pity or some kind diversionary tactic to side track me into some philosophical discourse. The results were always frustrating to me and a joy to him.

One night he kept moaning about how he just could not get any answers. That is a good hook to use on a preacher. We feel honor bound to prove we have an answer to any and everything, whether we do or not. I bit his hook. "What kind of answers do you want?" I asked, expecting him to respond with some question about his faith or his search for faith.

He said, "What about the battle of Armageddon?"

I was shocked and said: "What do you want to know about that?"

He said, "Who is going to win it?"

I said, "I don't even know who is going to fight it."

He said, "See there, I just can't get any answers."

I learned my lesson. The next time he called I took my friend Tom along. Tom was a fifteen year dry member of Alcoholics Anonymous. Members of A.A. are hard to hook. Tom was especially hard. I watched a miracle unfold. Tom bit no hooks. He kept the responsibility squarely on the young man. In thirty minutes the guy agreed to go with Tom to A.A. the next night. By the way, he is still going and is dry.

I am still trying to learn how to do it. I work at it but somehow I just can't keep from explaining about the battle of Armageddon.

Cowboys don't talk . . . unless they have something to say

By Richard L. Leshar
President

WASHINGTON — Only moments before the tragic accident that took his life, Secretary of Commerce Malcolm Baldrige told a reporter why he enjoyed the company of cowboys. "They don't talk," Baldrige said, "unless they have something to say."

That comment may have been intended as a dig at the wordy Washington culture Baldrige had worked in since he joined the Reagan administration in 1981, where one can sift through tons of words in

Population centers

When the U.S. Census started in 1790, the geographic population center was 23 miles east of Baltimore. By 1850, the center moved to 23 miles southeast of Parkersburg, W.Va. Six miles southeast of Columbus, Ind., became the middle of the country's population by 1900.

Carbohydrates

Carbohydrates provide energy for body function and activity by supplying immediate calories. The carbohydrate group includes sugars, starches, fiber and starchy vegetables. The best sources are grains, legumes, nuts, potatoes and fruits.

futile quest of a coherent thought. To his everlasting credit, Baldrige did all he could to put a lid on the excess verbiage of the federal bureaucracy. He ordered the word processors at the Commerce Department programmed to reject certain bureaucratic words and phrases that clutter up paper to no purpose.

Of course, it was a losing battle. Bureaucrats use words the same way drunks use lamp posts—for support, not illumination. I have no doubt the bureaucrats of the Commerce Department are already back to their old tricks, utilizing interface to effectuate implementation of programmatic initiatives—whatever that means.

But Malcolm Baldrige fought many battles and he won more than he lost. He came to the Commerce Department at a critical time in our country's history when the trade deficit was beginning to soar and demands for protectionism began to echo through the halls of Congress. A lesser man would have ducked that fight, but that was not his way. He rose to meet the challenge and we should all be grateful that he did.

As a loyal Reaganite, Baldrige shared the President's firm commitment to free trade. But as a businessman, he understood also that free trade must be a two-way street.

In this debate, Baldrige's appreciation of precise language served him in good stead. He redefined the issue to make it clear that free trade and fair trade are and must always be the same thing. There are few today who would dispute that position.

Baldrige played a pivotal role in working with our trading partners to reduce barriers to commerce while at the same time fending off the protectionist drive in Congress. Because he was a man of integrity, resolve and irrepressible good humor, he was able to exercise tremendous influence both here and abroad.

He only spoke when he had something to say and his few, well-chosen words carried impact. Perhaps those of us who had the pleasure of knowing and working directly with this unique gentleman feel his loss most keenly. But every citizen who appreciates the complexity of the problems he wrestled with and the lasting contribution he made to our country should share the sadness.

Malcolm Baldrige made a difference and will be missed.

Bootleg Philosopher

Editor's note: The Bootleg Philosopher on his Johnsongrass farm on Tierra Blanca Creek reports on photographic memory this week.

Dear editor:

Final reflections on the Iran-Contra hearings:

One of the things they revealed was the wide variety of ways witnesses could come up with for saying they couldn't remember.

Some of them: I can't remember. I don't remember. I don't recall. I have no memory of it. My mind didn't register any such thing. and (my favorite) I don't think I can remember that.

There's a phrase, little used today, that might have covered everything, from "I don't honestly recall that" to what was never heard but frequently suspected: "I don't dishonestly recall that."

The phrase is "disremember." When asked about something that happened right under your nose and would be a little incriminating, you answer "I disremember that."

One of the outstanding "disremember-ers" was the witness with the photographic memory. With his steel-trap mind that forgets nothing and makes a mental photograph of everything he reads or hears, he finished college at the head of his class and rose rapidly in the military. That would be Admiral Poindexter.

He was at the center of the scheme to sell arms to the Iranian terrorists, the diversion of profits to the Contras, etc., but when he got on the witness stand his photographic memory seemed to fail him completely. He couldn't remember half the crucial things that happened right in his own office.

Committee members were baffled. They couldn't understand what happened to his photographic memory.

I think the answer is simple. He must have gotten hold of some bad film.

Yours faithfully,
J.A.

By GARY L. CHRISTENSEN
SPIRITUAL CHAMPIONSHIP

"Loveless words are mere noise. Love is the champion of the truth. Love is a friend of all truth. Love is happiest ('rejoiceth') when truth is believed and practiced.

"Let us magnify Grace by giving Love an opportunity to grow. Love will reward us a thousandfold. As we love we are like God, for 'God is Love.' (1 John 4:8.)"

—W.R. Hill, Hereford Brand, Oct. 15, 1925.

"Jesus said unto him, Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind.

"This is the first and great commandment.

"And the second is like unto it. Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." (Matthew 22:37-39)

TODAY'S INSIGHT: Spiritual championships are impossible in one's life as long as his pursuits are self-centered. Obedience to the first and second great commandments is the pathway to spiritual championship.

In the epistles of Paul, we find words of a spiritual champion: "This one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." (Philippians 3:13-14.)

"I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me." (Philippians 4:13.) "Now the end of the commandment is charity out of a pure heart, and of a good conscience, and of faith unfeigned." (1 Timothy 1:5.)

"I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith: Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness." (2 Timothy 4:7-8.)

Spiritual championship, then, is being a friend to the truth, a friend to God, a true friend to one's fellowmen. It is rejoicing in the truth, knowing that through Christ one is strengthened to do what is right and good.

Spiritual championship is focusing one's life on the Lord, expressing love unto Him by obeying His words and by loving one's neighbors "as thyself." A spiritual champion has charity flowing out of a pure heart, follows the voice of God in a good conscience, and has faith unfeigned.

We have a very compelling novel for you this week. Presumed Innocent, Scott Turow's first novel, has been one of the most eagerly anticipated books in 1987. Nobody who picks it up is going to lay it down lightly.

It is a gray gritty early spring in a midwestern city that is the setting for Turow's spellbinding book. Rusty Sabich, Kindie County's longtime chief deputy prosecutor, has been asked to investigate the rape & murder of one of his colleagues. Carolyn Polhemus was strong, sensual & magnetic; she was also clearly ambitious & quite possibly unscrupulous.

Her murder had been an embarrassment to Rusty's boss, Raymond Horgan, who is facing a serious challenge in the upcoming election.

Raymond looks to Rusty for a fast solution to the case that will help save him politically unaware that, only a few months before, Carolyn and Rusty were lovers.

Rusty is a passionate, brooding, fundamentally lonely man. As he nears 40, both his marriage & his career seem to be stagnating. His feelings become focused on his love for his son Nat, and desperate, enduring fantasies about Carolyn. Rusty makes little process in finding the killer. When Raymond loses the election Rusty suddenly finds himself accused of Carolyn's murder.

The Spy Wore Red is an autobiography by Aline Griffith, the story of Aline Countess of Romanones, a deep-cover OSS agent, infiltrating the highest levels of Spanish society. As an undercover agent, Aline wends her way through lavish Madrid balls & dinners, meeting the creme de la crem of Spanish society, noting handshakes, winks & nods among suspicious & sme previously unsuspected individuals. She & her colleagues live by code names & by their wits. When security is breached, Aline is endangered and she narrowly escapes several attempts on her life. When she falls in love with one of her fellow agents, complications and hazards abound.

This book contains so many amazing plot turns, the readers will have to remind themselves they are reading a memoir. It is full of astounding characters & startling revelations about them. Madrid high society is peppered with Nazi spies & Aline's mission is to expose them.

Reversing Diabetes, by Julian M. Whitaker, M.D., is a book for health care providers & patients who are concerned with the known risks & are searching for an alternative program of diet & exercise to help overcome the diabetic condition.

Citing numerous medical studies, Dr. Whitaker shows why many patients have been misdiagnosed & mistreated as a result of the sometimes highly inaccurate glucose tolerance test, why the traditional diet given to diabetics may have made their diabetes worse, & why many drug treatments may be both unnecessary & even dangerous. With case studies from his own private practice to support his claims, Dr. Whitaker reveals the remarkable simple & natural method of treatment that has helped many people at the Whitaker Willness Institute.

In Reversing Diabetes, you will discover the answer to numerous questions. It is based on sound nutritional principals & a conservative method of treatment shown to be effective in research studies available to doctors for decades. It is an important book for diabetic patients to better understand their condition & may improve the overall health & well-being of millions.

DR. GOTT

Sleeve may help after surgery

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I developed lymph edema following a modified radical mastectomy and have been using a Jobst gradient-pressure sleeve. Can you explain how this sleeve works — or, in my case, why it doesn't work? How else can I correct this problem?

DEAR READER — One consequence of radical breast surgery is lymph edema of the arm. This fluid accumulation is caused by the removal of lymph glands and channels — a necessary part of such surgery.

In addition to the circulation of blood through our arteries and veins, we have a second circulatory system, which contains lymph. This liquid is the clear fluid portion of blood; part of it travels through myriad thin-walled vessels, through lymph node filters and back to the heart, where it is recombined with blood — and the process starts all over again.

Lymph leaks out of lymph vessels in the skin and appears as the watery liquid in blisters. Lymph often leaks from the blood vessels themselves, as in congestive heart failure, when it cannot find ready access back into the circulation, it builds up in tissues, causing swelling and discomfort. This is what happens after radical breast surgery, during which many of the lymph channels — as well as the lymph nodes — are removed. In short, the lymph fluid in the tissues of your arm no longer can find a way to rejoin your bloodstream.

The Jobst sleeve is a pneumatic device that applies pressure to the arm, forcing tissue lymph out of the extremity. It often is a useful way to overcome lymph edema. However, it doesn't work for every patient. Since this problem is so difficult to solve, ask your surgeon for specific advice about other methods (such as diuretic therapy, to reduce excess fluid) that may be appropriate for you.

Venus, a virtual twin to the Earth in size and mass, is often called our sister planet. But, according to the "Orni Space Almanac," the similarity ends there. Instruments show that surface temperatures reach 878 degrees F, breezes of fire crack in the sulphuric sky and atmosphere pressures are 90 times those on Earth.

The most popular form of the card game bridge was thought up by the yachtsman and railroad financier Harold Stirling Vanderbilt on a cruise (probably on the bridge) from Los Angeles to Havana in the mid-1920s.

About idea of volleyball played on racquetball courts

Inventor of wallyball tells his story

By STAN HOVATTER JR.

Richardson Daily News
DALLAS (AP) — Welcome to the game of Wallyball, a game that features the court dimensions of racquetball, the athletic maneuvers of volleyball and the rules of both. Sounds like something right out of a Chevy Chase movie.

"Yeah, it does," said Joe Garcia, a former racquetball professional who invented the game in a Los Angeles suburb in 1979.

"The name itself is one of the major reasons why the game has become so successful. We now have over a million people playing the sport in this country and thousands more playing all over the world in Japan, South America and Europe." In the Dallas-Fort Worth area, the game is still in its genesis period. Wallyball is making the scene at health clubs.

The game can be played with two to five on a team. Most organized games are played with four players on a team and a regulation-size volleyball net.

The rules are simple, with players able to use side walls and back walls only on their side of the net. Other than that, the game uses volleyball rules, with the first to 15 the winner. A team must win by two points.

A Wallyball has the same dimensions as a volleyball, but is made out of rubber instead of cowhide.

"The walls are a big part of the game," said Jim Travis of Dallas, who directs a Friday night Wallyball tournament each week at a health club in suburban Garland.

"The players who have mastered the game are the ones who have learned to use the walls. The serve is the key, really, in this game. You can hit that ball off the wall and it's awesome. If you're a good server, you definitely have an advantage," Travis said.

Mainly due to the implementation of the walls, Wallyball is played much quicker than volleyball, and the pace is ferocious.

"The average game lasts about 15 minutes. The points probably last no longer than 15 to 20 seconds, if that long. The ones who are most successful at playing this game are the all-around athletic types," Travis said.

"The ones with good leaping ability would have a slight advantage. And, in some cases, the women are competitive with the men. The women here can play."

His health club began offering Wallyball about two months ago, Travis said, "and it caught on immediately. ... It's competitive, fast-paced and can accommodate a lot of members."

One day, he believes, there'll be enough interest to have a citywide or statewide tournament.

The game already has reached those proportions elsewhere in the United States, Garcia said. Wallyball is more popular in the East and Midwest, where indoor games are a must because of inclement weather, Garcia said.

Garcia said he conceived the idea for Wallyball in 1979, when he managed an unfinished racquetball club in Calabasas, Calif. He derived the game, more or less, by putting the game of volleyball on the racquetball court.

"We were sitting around the club, shooting the breeze and thinking of different ways of getting more people on the (racquetball) court," Garcia said in a telephone interview from his home in Carlsbad, Calif.

"We put up a volleyball net and went to it. Since we were using the walls, we came up with Wallyball. That's basically how it started and how we got the name. It wasn't a stroke of genius."

Interest grows in YMCA wallyball

The sport of "wallyball" had its beginnings in Hereford in the spring of 1986 when the Hereford and Vicinity YMCA organized some leagues. YMCA program director Jerry Brock said the interest in wallyball is growing in Hereford. Wallyball is volleyball played on a racquetball court.

Brock said the interest in the sport has come about "because of the quickness of the game, because you have to rely on only four players per team, and the variation of playing the ball off the walls."

The YMCA is accepting entries for this fall's wallyball leagues. There will be adult co-ed "A" and "B" leagues, and a high school league.

Signup deadline is Thursday, Sept. 10, and the leagues will start the season on Sunday, Sept. 13. Playing dates will be Sunday afternoons. Registration fees are $6 for YMCA members and $12 for YMCA non-members.

"We have two courts set up for wallyball play. Co-ed and men's leagues have been played at the YMCA," Brock said. "In our first co-ed league we offered, we had four teams participate. In last spring's league, nine teams participated."

"You don't have to be a good volleyball player to be a good wallyball player," Brock continues. "We had a last place volleyball team place first in a wallyball league."

Brock notes that the courts are available at all times for playing wallyball, and not just for league play.

"As people become more aware and involved in playing wallyball, the more teams we have," he adds.

The league seasons will be for six weeks, plus single-elimination playoffs after the regular season.

For more information on the wallyball leagues, contact Brock at the YMCA at 364-6990.

McGwire breaks rookie major-league homer record

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Oakland's Mark McGwire broke the major-league record for home runs by a rookie Friday night with his 39th homer of the season in the sixth inning against the California Angels.

McGwire, who leads the majors in home runs, hit the first pitch from Don Sutton for a two-run homer to left field with two outs. That moved McGwire past Wally Berger of the 1930 Boston Braves and Hall of Famer Frank Robinson of the Cincinnati Reds in 1956.

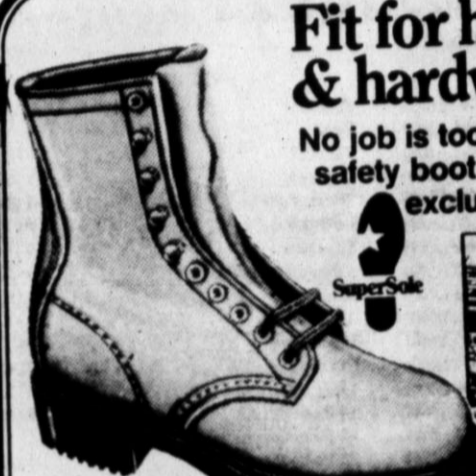

McGwire, the Athletics' first-round pick in the June 1984 free agent draft, broke Al Rosen's American League rookie home run record with his 38th last Tuesday night in Seattle.

He now has 25 this season against right-handers and 14 against lefties. It was his 22nd homer on the road and only his second home run this month.

McGwire, whose homer gave him 89 runs batted in, already has established an Oakland record for most homers by a right-handed hitter and still needs eight more to tie teammate Reggie Jackson for the club's all-time single-season mark. Jackson hit 47 in 1969.

McGwire hit three home runs for the A's last season in 53 at-bats — 78 at-bats fewer than the number necessary for him to have qualified as a rookie in 1986.

Whiteface football history is compiled

By GARY CHRISTENSEN
Sports Editor

A research project of mine was completed last week as far as all sources I could think of researching in. The topic of the research — Hereford High School football.

In doing this research, my aim was to find out as complete as possible the final scores for every HHS football game ever played, the date of each game, and the site of each game. Other information that I searched for included the names of all Whiteface head coaches, and which games were district games, non-district games, and playoff games.

My endeavors enabled me to put together complete information on all seasons since 1928. Other seasons that I think I have complete information on are the 1911, 1912, 1914, 1915, 1919, 1922, 1923, and 1925 seasons.

However, for all seasons from 1911 to 1927, more sources of information, if available, would be helpful to possibly make the records complete.

The first source of information I used was the Hereford Brand newspaper issues on microfilm at the Deaf Smith County Library. After that, I looked through issues of the Canyon and Tulla newspapers on microfilm at the West Texas State University library, since Hereford played Canyon and Tulla often in those early years of HHS football.

The last newspapers on microfilm that I looked through were Amarillo newspapers at the Amarillo public library. I then found that only one Hereford High School yearbook for the years before 1928 was available at the school library, and it was for a year that I had complete information on the football season.

I will now say to anybody who has information on those early years of Hereford High School football, please contact me at the Brand. I do not know if the football game scores were published each year in school yearbooks, but yearbooks seem to be the last possible source for information.

Ninth grade football players report Monday

Ninth grade football players are asked to report Monday morning at their respective schools for meetings with coaches and the issuing of equipment.

Coaches at La Plata Junior High School and Stanton Junior High School will meet with ninth grade football players at 9 a.m. at each school.

The first practice sessions are scheduled for Monday afternoon.

The 1987 season opens on Thursday, Sept. 10. La Plata plays at home against Bonham of Amarillo at 4:30 p.m., and Stanton travels to Plainview to play Plainview Blue at 4 p.m.

FEW SAW RECORD
HERSHEY, P.A. (AP) — When Wilt Chamberlain scored his record 100 points March 2, 1962, for the Philadelphia Warriors against the New York Knicks, the game here was seen by only 4,124 fans.

Hershey was the training site of the Philadelphia club, which played some of its home games in this city for several years.

"The gym where we played the game was small," recalled Chamberlain, "but typical for a town that size. The fans were good and they followed everything pretty closely."

"Once I reached the 70 mark in points, the fans started shouting: 'We want 100.'"

Fulton Walker of the Miami Dolphins set a Super Bowl record with a 96-yard kickoff return for a touchdown against Washington in the 1963 game.

tion in this research project.

On this page is a list of the all-time records against each of the 74 opposing schools or teams that Hereford High School has played, according to all information available.

The most victories without a defeat against one team was 25 versus Friona. The most games played against one school was 66 versus Canyon, an opponent that Hereford has a 33-32-1 edge in the all-time series.

Other teams that Hereford played five or more times and won all games against were Vega, Tascosa and Caprock. The all-time records show Hereford with an 11-0 record versus Vega, a 6-0 record versus Tascosa, and a 5-0 record versus Caprock.

Hereford's records against the 1987 regular-season opponents are: Andrews, 1-0; Clovis, 12-16; Pampa, 13-6; Frenship, 1-0; Lubbock Dunbar, 1-2; Levelland, 5-10-1; Dumas, 15-21; Canyon, 33-32-1; Lubbock Estacado, 0-1; and Borger, 10-5.

Hereford has played 26 of its 74 opponents in history just one time each. Another seven opponents were played just two times each. Twenty-five opponents were played at least 10 times each.

One of the opponents in the early years was West Texas State Normal College. The West Texas State University football guide shows that Hereford High School played seven games against West Texas State Normal College, winning four of them.

However, a close examination of the reports of two of those games showed that West Texas State Normal College lost to Hereford College 10-6 in 1910, and lost to what was called the "Hereford Town Team," 15-0, in 1920.

Hereford High School defeated West Texas State Normal College in 1911, winning the first two games by scores of 8-0 and 5-3 before losing the third game 5-0.

In 1914, the two teams met twice, with West Texas State Normal College winning both games, 20-0 and 58-6.

On two occasions, Hereford High School played the second team from the college. West Texas State Normal College's second team beat HHS 32-7 in 1915, and the West Texas State Teachers College second team defeated Hereford 32-0 in 1923.

Last football season, Brand publisher Speedy Nieman noted in his "Hereford Bull" column the information from the West Texas State University football guide about Hereford High School.

Nieman said a few people gave him their opinion that the team Hereford High School played was not one made up of college students, but rather high school age students.

When I was looking in an Amarillo newspaper on microfilm for some missing information on a game played between Hereford and Amarillo High in 1911, I came across an article which said something like this: "Amarillo High to play Normal College; cannot get any high school games scheduled."

I conclude then that Hereford High School did play five games against football teams made up of college students. West Texas State Normal College was founded in 1910, and its football team had at least one game against a high school team for 11 seasons before playing an entire season against college opponents.

There are many other findings too numerous to mention in one article about Hereford High School football history, but a series of articles will be presented during the football pre-season and throughout the 1987 Whiteface season.

This will certainly make trivia buffs out of the Hereford High School football fans!

Herd all-time records listed

Here are two lists of Hereford High School's all-time records in football. The first list is an alphabetical list of the HHS opponents through the years, and Hereford records against each opponent.

The second list is a numerical list, going from the best won-loss records to the worst won-loss records. The percentage is given in parenthesis for each won-loss record.

The overall record for Hereford High School, according to all available records, is 373-275-24.

Realtors expect market improvements

Most Realtors expect the existing-home sales market to improve over the next six months, according to a spring survey by the National Association of Realtors.

Although Realtors responding to this spring's survey were less optimistic about the outlook for home resales than respondents to a similar survey last year, 54 percent expect the volume of home resales to be higher over the next several months. This compares to 79 percent who expected increases in the resale market when questioned last spring.

The latest "Attitudes of the Real Estate Industry" survey conducted by the association's economics and research division included responses from 750 Realtors throughout the country.

Nearly 60 percent of the Realtors responding to the survey, which was taken before interest rates began their upward swing in late April, predicted increases in mortgage interest rates over the near term. Thirty-five percent forecast rates would remain the same and 5 percent predicted declines.

This is quite different from the survey results last year when just 23 percent had predicted rate increases, while 52 percent predicted no change and 25 percent predicted lower rates.

A majority of respondents expect home price appreciation to moderate somewhat in the next six months. Just 14 percent expect faster increases in home prices compared to the rate of increase during the last 12 months, while 40 percent expect the same appreciation rate, 37 percent expect slower appreciation and 10 percent expect a decline.

This compares with the April 1986 survey in which 38 percent expected a faster increase in home prices than took place 12 months prior to that survey, 30 percent expected the same rate of increase, 22 percent expected a slower rate of increase and 10 percent expected a decline.

Association analysts noted that "the downturn in overall construction activity has effectively curbed expectations for the next six months." The latest survey results showed that Realtors are not as optimistic about the outlook for construction activity in any category as they were a year earlier.

The percentage of respondents expecting an increase in single family housing construction activity over the next six months dropped from 66 percent in April 1986 to 46 percent in April 1987. Similarly, the percentage expecting an increase in multifamily housing construction dropped from 45 percent to 16 percent; the percentage expecting an increase in retail construction dropped from 38 percent to 22 percent and the percentage expecting an increase in office construction fell from 33 percent to 18 percent. The percentage of respondents expecting an increase in industrial construction fell from 29 percent to 15 percent and the percentage expecting an increase in land development fell from 17 percent to 15 percent.

Association economists noted that there are "a multitude of threats," to the real estate expansion that began in December 1983. They cited tax reform as one that is "causing major changes throughout American business" and that "is changing the fundamental economics of real estate development and investment."

"During the survey period, largely because of continued foreign trade problems, interest rates generally (and therefore mortgage rates) increased rapidly. Clearly these developments were on the minds of members as they completed the survey," the economists said.

The National Association of Realtors, the nation's largest trade association, represents about 750,000 members involved in all aspects of the real estate industry.

Now is time to repair home

If you're planning to sell your own home during peak home sales times this fall, now is the time to start getting it in good condition. Your investment in repair and small improvements now, could pay off later in profit.

"Selling your home involves a lot of marketing strategies, just like selling any other product," says Dr. Susan Quiring, a housing specialist with the Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service.

"The more appealing you make your home appear, the better impression it will have on prospective buyers."

"First impressions are important," the specialist says. "People may decide not to buy your house before they even look inside if the outside isn't attractive. Concentrate on improving the front of your house by mowing and trimming the grass, trimming trees and shrubbery, planting flowers, and repainting if necessary to make your house look more inviting."

"Inside the house, try to make it look clean, and uncluttered. You may want to put away some knick-knacks and small appliances to emphasize counter space. Clean and organize closets and cupboards to make the most of your storage areas. Polish the furniture and the woodwork, wash the windows, and maybe invest in a new shower curtain if it's needed."

Remember that good marketing sells," she says, "but be honest and don't try to hide any problems or defects.

ON THE HOUSE

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Certain adhesives are designed for a single purpose, such as those used for wall and floor tiles, but many adhesives are suitable for different projects on different kinds of materials. Because of this, there is an inclination to select a bonding project on the basis of its versatility.

Choosing an adhesive in that fashion is all right for ordinary household jobs, but a good craftsman knows that the success of most of his fastening operations depends to a large degree on using the right adhesive on a surface that has been properly prepared. Even the so-called all-purpose adhesives work better when used on particular kinds of materials.

Some examples of these are cyanoacrylates, often called the super or miracle glue that is very strong when used according to directions, but not quite as good as some other adhesives on wood, paper and polyethylene; polyvinyl acetates, a fine household white glue, but not ideal for joints under stress or exposed to water; epoxy, durable and waterproof, but not perfect with rubber and plastic; contact cement, wonderful when clamping is not practical or desirable, but not recommended for bonding wood to wood unless a special type is used; and on and on.

The lesson to be learned from all this is that, when buying an adhesive, be sure to read the label on the container in its entirety to be certain it will perform as you want.

Years ago, when you went into a neighborhood hardware store or lumber yard, you had only to tell the dealer what you intended to use the product for to get his advice on what to purchase and how to use it.

Today, too many hardware departments in large establishments are manned by persons who have very little knowledge about the do-it-yourself materials they sell. In some of them, you can't even find a salesperson until after you have made your own selection. Which means that if you deal in a store where advice and assistance are freely given — and which experience shows you is good advice — clutch it to your bosom and never let it go.

Technological advances enable adhesives to perform far more effectively than they did not too many years ago. But it is still important to prepare the surfaces in such a way that the bond will last permanently. Adhesives should be applied to clean surfaces. All traces of dirt, wax, grease, moisture and everything else must be removed.

When you glue something to a painted surface, remember that the adhesive will hold only as well as the paint adheres to the wall or other surface. Pay attention to the directions about whether to apply the adhesive to one or both surfaces. Allow the bonding material to dry for at least as long as the instructions say and preferably longer.

There is a big difference between gluing an item which will stay on a shelf and seldom be touched and one where the glued joint will be under stress. If the latter is the case, it obviously will need a longer curing time.

Especially important is whether any old adhesive remains on the surfaces to be joined. As with paint, the bond will be only as strong as the old glue. Sometimes when you bond something from which the old adhesive has not been removed, it will seem secure. Generally, however, it will only be a temporary repair, since the new adhesive will fail when the old adhesive pulls away from the surface.

When you are using a quick-setting adhesive, such as contact cement, you could encounter trouble if you try to set a large piece of material upon another.

Should you be even a fraction of an inch off as you set down the top piece, it will grip instantly and you may have a headache getting the two articles apart. That could happen, for instance, in cementing a plastic laminate to a counter or table top.

Here is a method the professionals use:

Apply the contact cement to both surfaces. Let dry for about 20 minutes or until the adhesive is dry to the touch. Now, take a large piece of brown paper or other paper on which there is no ink, and place it on the bottom surface. Very carefully, position the laminate, slowly withdrawing the paper and pressing down on the laminate behind it. Apply further pressure with a roller or by tapping with a hammer and wood block. Work from the center to the edge. As you finish the job, all the paper will have been withdrawn and you will have perfect positioning.

Q. — The basement walls in our house are made of poured concrete. I haven't given much thought to them over the years, but now I want to do some work that will require putting fasteners into them. I have never done this kind of work with concrete. What can you tell me about fastening things to this type of concrete? The walls seem terribly solid. When I tried to hammer a nail into one place recently, the nail just bent.

A. — There are several ways to fasten items to concrete. The simplest is by using concrete nails, which will not bend when they are hammered except in unusual circumstances. The nails are simply hammered into place, except that you need a strong hammer and have to use some muscle. Most of them will go right into the concrete without any trouble.

Occasionally, you will encounter some resistance. You can use another nail or drive it in another spot. Carbide-tipped bits can be used in portable electric drills to make holes for various kinds of anchor nails and bolts. The carbide-tipped bits make it more practical to cut into the concrete than the old-fashioned, non-power star drills, although the latter are still used. Professionals use power-driven studs. There also are some mechanical stud-driving gadgets.

For training camps

The Cowboys have found their home

An AP Sports Analysis
By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer
THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — In their formative years, the Dallas Cowboys tried Minnesota, Wisconsin and Michigan as training sites.

The year it snowed in July in Michigan is when Coach Tom Landry asked Tex Schramm if there wasn't something better somewhere else.

Schramm, who had spent 10 years in California with the Los Angeles Rams, remembered Thousand Oaks (with the help of former Army All-American halfback Glenn Davis) and a new school getting started there, California Lutheran College.

For the Cowboys, they finally found training camp heaven.

"It's been perfect," says Schramm, the club president. "I think it's rained once since we came here. The weather is consistent — beautiful all the time."

The Cowboys have been at Cal Lutheran College for 25 years, so long ago that Landry had hair on the top of his head.

"When we first came here, this was the Wild West," Landry says. "There weren't many people or houses. We used to run the hills around here for exercise. If you did that now, you might fall into somebody's swimming pool."

Scenes from the popular television series "Gunsmoke" were shot on a nearby hill.

"We used to stop practice to watch the cowboys chasing Indians," says linebacker Coach Jerry Tubbs.

Also, scenes from the movies "Iwo Jima" and "Ben Hur" were shot on the brown hills nearby.

The biggest excitement in recent years was a raging grass fire that was finally controlled about a mile away from the campus.

Landry loves the relative isolation of Thousand Oaks, which is about an hour's drive north of Los Angeles. The players are housed in dormitories, fed at the school cafeteria, and must meet nightly curfew.

It's easy to check on them. "We get a lot of work done here," Landry says. "There aren't as many distractions as there are in Dallas."

The players have some other thoughts on the subject, though.

Asked if he likes training camp, defensive lineman Randy White snorts, "We don't have a choice. There sure aren't any distractions here. Some of the guys call this place 'Fort Landry.'"

And some players like to test Landry's ability to monitor curfew.

Once, Ed "Too Tall" Jones was caught hiding in the shadows.

A Cowboys' assistant coach asked, "OK, who's there?"

"A tree," Jones replied.

"The Tree" was fined $100.

Still, some players figure it's worth a try.

Just a week ago two veteran players successfully escaped after curfew and were seen working their way through the shadows to a waiting car.

Thousand Oaks (or a Thousand Salt Mines as some players call it) is so small it's difficult to do something without somebody taking notice.

California seems like a long way for the Cowboys to wander to seek perfection before the regular season.

"Can you name one place in Texas where we can work out for three hours in the afternoon and not have a heat stroke?" Schramm asked. "The Houston Oilers work in San Angelo but they have their heaviest practices in the morning. You don't get as worn out when the weather is cool all day like it is here."

And then there's the beach at Malibu just 30 minutes away.

"I wouldn't know," Landry says.

"I haven't been there in 25 years."

Football recruit dies after workout

LOGAN, Utah (AP) — Carleton Oats, one of Utah State University's most-heavily recruited football players, died Friday night, more than three hours after he passed out following a workout.

Oats, 18, of Oakland, Calif., was flown by helicopter to the University of Utah Health Sciences Center at Salt Lake City. He arrived at the hospital at 4 p.m. MDT and died at 7:25, hospital spokesman John Dwan said.

Dwan said Oats died as doctors were preparing to perform exploratory surgery. The cause of death was unknown, and an autopsy was planned Saturday, Dwan said.

Craig Hislop, USU sports information director, said Oats' father, who has the same name, played football for the NFL's Oakland Raiders. The younger Oats, at 5-foot-10, 264 pounds, was considered a good prospect for noseguard or fullback, Hislop said.

Aggie trainer Dale Mildenerger said Oats arrived late Thursday along with 100 other freshmen. Oats reported to Coach Chuck Shelton and passed a physical examination and drug test, Mildenerger said.

The trainer said Oats got up Friday morning, ate breakfast, completed more examinations and then accompanied other players to the USU stadium to run four laps.

"Immediately after that, Oats experienced extreme breathing problems, then he collapsed and CPR was started," Mildenerger said. He was rushed to Logan Regional Hospital by ambulance and from there transferred to Salt Lake City," Mildenerger said.

The first 52 runnings of the Belmont Stakes were held in a clockwise direction, the horses running from right to left. In 1921 the event was changed to counterclockwise, from left to right.

Nuptials unite Stokesberry, Hubbard

MRS. JAD HUBBARD
...nee Deanna Stokesberry

Wedding vows were spoken by Deanna Marie Stokesberry and Jadin Lee Hubbard, both of Lubbock, early Saturday afternoon in First Baptist Church in Abernathy. The Rev. Dennis Teeters of the church officiated.

The bride is the daughter of Charles and Neoma Stokesberry of Route 4, Hereford, and the bridegroom is the son of Michal Ann Hubbard of Plano and Author and Marie Hubbard of Bastrop.

The church altar was flanked by 14-taper heart-shaped brass candelabra decorated with greenery, bows and flowers in the chosen colors of mauve rose. The unity candle, which had been used by her sisters, was placed in a crystal dish flanked by two tapered candles. White bows marked the parents' pews.

The bride's sister, Kelly Hamby, served as matron of honor and Tony Christopher of Abernathy was best man.

Bridesmaids were the bride's sister, Cindy Freeman of Hereford, Desirae Pyeatt of Lubbock, Denise Christopher of Abernathy and Janice Payne of Lubbock.

Groomsmen included Wayne Reeves of Lubbock; the groom's brothers, Dale Dingley of Bastrop and John Hubbard of Dime Box, Texas; and Mike Kinney of Abernathy.

Ushers were Gary James of Lubbock, Jeff Cruz of New Jersey, Audie Freeman of Hereford and Trent Taylor of Las Vegas, Nev.

The groom's cousin, Kyla Hubbard, daughter of Kyle and Ann Hubbard of Rochelle, Texas, was flower girl and the bride's nephew, Jeremy Freeman, son of Cindy and Audie Freeman, was ring bearer.

Lighting candles were the groom's cousin, Jennifer Taylor, and the bride's nephew, Codey Freeman.

Desirae Pyeatt vocalized "There is Love" and "Somewhere Out There" accompanied by pianist Lyndy Phillips.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown styled of white silk organza trimmed in silk Venice and Chantilly laces. The high collar and yoke were of Schiffl embroidery adorned with seed pearls. The lower part of the yoke, in organza, was overlaid with Venice lace appliques and pearls. The low-cut basque waist was overlaid in a row of Venice lace extending to the back where covered buttons extended for the neckline to below the basque waist. The back of the bodice was also of sheer organza enhanced by Venice lace appliques.

The full Victorian sleeves had a ruffle of Chantilly lace at the elbow; below the elbow, they were fitted. Venice lace appliques and pearls were joined by covered buttons at the wrists. The sleeves were edged in matching lace.

The full skirt of sheer organza had a row of Venice lace midway in front, extending around to the back. Large Venice lace appliques adorned the skirt at points and a row of Chantilly lace edged the bottom of the skirt which swept to full-cathedral length.

The lace edged pleated shoulder-length veil was attached to the back of a picture frame hat, slightly dipped in front and decorated with Venice and Chantilly lace and accented with appliques and seed pearls.

In keeping with bridal tradition, the bride wore her wedding gown as something new; gold ring belonging to her great-grandmother, something old and borrowed; and a garter, something blue. She also wore pearl earrings given to her by the groom.

She carried a heart-shaped cascading bouquet of mauve, white and pink roses with deep mauve rosebuds. It was tied with mauve and silver ribbon and white lace streamers.

The attendants' dresses were of mauve moire taffeta. They were fashioned with sweetheart necklines, fitted bodices, puff sleeves and full gathered skirts. Each carried long stem mauve roses with accent buds and mauve ribbons and white lace streamers.

The flower girl and candlelighter wore identical dresses to the bridesmaids' gowns. The flower girl carried a white wicker basket filled with mauve and white flowers and the Candle was entwined with ribbon and bows. The ring bearer carried a white lace trimmed heart-shaped pillow with gold rings tied on white satin ribbon.

Regina Shirley of Lubbock invited guests to register in the fellowship hall.

Serving at the bridal couple's tables were Shelly Kinney of Abernathy, Stacy Cruz of New Jersey, and Debbie Ward and Vickie Aedes of Albuquerque.

Both the bride's and groom's tables were covered with white lace cloths over mauve. At the bride's table the tiered cake featured a flowing fountain. A stairway led to a two-tiered cake to one side. Both cakes were white with mauve flowers. Pink punch was served from a crystal punch bowl and the bride's bouquet served as the flower arrangement.

At the groom's table, coffee was served from a silver service which belonged to the bride's grandparents. Iced tea was offered from a silver punch bowl and a fruit bowl centered the table.

The couple will be at home in Lubbock following a wedding trip to points of interest in Arkansas.

The bride, a 1981 graduate of Hereford High School, received her associate degree in computer information systems from South Plains College in 1983. She is currently employed with Plains Cotton Co-op of Lubbock as a computer programmer.

The groom graduated in 1982 from Roosevelt High school in San Antonio and is a student at South Plains College in Levelland. He is employed with Hanging Tree Hatters of Lubbock.

Special out-of-town guests included Martha Cranford of Lampasas; Mr. and Mrs. G.S. Hubbard of Brady, grandparents of the groom; and L.S. Stokesberry of Hereford, grandfather of the bride.

Sending children to school can be tough

Even the parents of children who have attended pre-school or day-care can have mixed feelings about sending their child off to kindergarten, says family life specialist Diane T. Welch.

"The pre-schools and day care centers that many children attend have some elements of school, but also try to simulate a home-like environment," observes the Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service home economist.

Kindergarten focuses on teaching children the formal skills they need for success in the school environment, she explains.

"It's not unusual for parents to almost regret that the child must face the demands of school, and yet be proud that he or she is growing into a self-sufficient individual who can adjust to and enjoy the world outside the home," adds Welch.

"Children will have mixed feelings too," she says, "so by expressing their joys and concerns, parents become a role model for the child, encouraging open communication about school."

According to the specialist, some parents fear that by allowing children to express negative emotions about starting school, they will encourage these feelings. But talking about it allows the child to acknowledge and work through these emotions without shame or guilt.

She suggests using the last few days of vacation to smooth the transition to kindergarten with some of the following activities:

-Don't make promises, but talk and wonder with the child about school. Read books about school and tell your own stories about the days when you went to school. Help the child understand about progress in learning. Some children are upset to find they can't read the very first day!

-Make a visit to your child's classroom and teacher. Some schools schedule these visits with parents in advance. Explore the playground and bathroom, try out the chairs and find the water fountains.

-Encourage your child to play with another child who will be in the kindergarten class, so he or she will have a friend there.

-Get a head start on schedule changes by adjusting bedtime and mealtime if that will be necessary once school begins. If new day-care arrangements for before or after kindergarten are necessary, start the day-care routine before school begins, so the child doesn't have to adjust to both at once.

-Help your child learn his or her whole name, address, telephone number and what to do if you're late arriving at home or school.

"The first day of kindergarten is also a time for parents to become involved in their child's schooling," maintains Welch. "Knowing and talking with teachers, joining parent-teacher organizations and doing volunteer work at school will help you be a part of this important aspect of your child's life."

According to the 1980 census, there were only 3,902 Hispanics living in the state of North Dakota.

DEAR READERS: I came across a fascinating paperback that tells the truth about Americans. I learned what they think, what they want, how they believe and what they worry about. This book is an eye-opener, a post-graduate course in people-watching, and it's a comfort to learn how many others share our fears, flaws and secret desires.

Here's a sampling:
A solid majority of American adults are close to being obsessed with their physical appearance. While 54 percent of men say they often think of their physical appearance, a much higher 75 percent of women say the same.

Here's what men would like to change:

-56 percent would change their weight.

-36 percent would like more hair.

-34 percent would change their height.

-27 percent could like to find a way to hide signs of aging.

-19 percent would like a different nose.

Women have a longer and more substantial list of changes they would like:

-78 percent aren't satisfied with their weight. (Fully 35 percent would like to lose 25 pounds or more.)

-48 percent would like to cover up telltale signs of aging.

-37 percent want to change their teeth.

-34 percent would like better-looking legs.

-32 percent would like to change their bust measurements.

-18 percent would change their feet. (Almost all wish they were smaller.)

If you feel stressed out, it will please you to know you have plenty of company. A whopping 89 percent of all adult Americans are right up there with you.

Stress is obviously part of the price we pay for being affluent and successful. Close to twice as many high-income people (as compared with low) report suffering from tension. Also, the better educated, the more likely a person is to experience stress.

Whites feel more stressed than blacks. Professional and executive types suffer more heavily from stress than individuals in other occupations.

About 114 million stressed-out Americans fight their anxieties and frustrations by taking medication, psyching themselves out, seeking counseling, exercising and engaging in recreational activities.

Close to 64 million do nothing to avoid or alleviate stress. They accept it as inevitable.

On any given day, more than one in three American adults will eat at least one meal away from home. This means almost 66 million Americans eat out every day.

I was surprised to learn that 42 percent prefer family-style, old-fashioned cooking. About 33 percent go to fast-food restaurants.

American cooking is the cuisine of choice by a wide margin (55 percent). Far behind comes Italian (14 percent), Chinese (12 percent), Mexican (8 percent), French (2 percent) and Japanese (2 percent).

The picture that emerges is a nation in which four in every 10 people have neither the patience nor the time to prepare meals at home.

Tips offered in choosing a healthy school lunch

Most parents will agree that a healthy, hearty lunch is an important and fun part of every child's school day. But school lunches and bag lunches have different advantages that deserve some attention from parents, says the Texas Medical Association.

Public school lunch programs in Texas provide one-third of the daily nutritional requirements for children. Each school district's menu planners must follow strict standards when deciding what to serve, including the number of servings from the four basic food groups, as well as the quantity of each serving.

Another plus for school lunches is that certain children are eligible for free or reduced-price meals.

Possibly the only disadvantage of the school lunch program is that your child may not always like what is being served and consequently may not eat well.

TMA suggests following the school lunch menu and packing a lunch for your child on those days.

When packing a lunch, remember that children have different nutritional and caloric (energy) needs than adults.

TMA offers these tips for parents:

-In general, children need more nutrients and calories than adults because they are very active and have rapid growth "spurts."

-Iron tops the list of nutrient needs during early childhood and adolescence. Iron is necessary for the formation of red blood cells and other functions and is especially important for adolescent girls.

-Protein is necessary for bone and cell growth and calcium is vital for building strong bones and teeth.

-Use the four basic food groups—meat, milk and cheese, fruit and vegetables, and bread—to plan lunches. Include a wide variety from each group to ensure that your child gets a balance and enough of the essential nutrients.

-Finally, remember that a child's eating habits often stay with him or her to adulthood!

rangements matching those on the main altar were used on the side altars.

Altar boys for the ceremony were Derek Zinser, Donny and Bobby Perales of Hereford. Lector was Keith Kalka, brother of the bride. Ministers of the Eucharist were Frank J. Bezner, Jr., uncle of the bride, and Mrs. Mary Kocan, great-aunt of the bride, Hereford.

Mrs. Lynn Crabtree of Canyon, aunt of the bride, was the organist while Mrs. Ron Matthews, of Hereford, also an aunt of the bride, played the piano and synthesizer. She played an assortment of musical selections prior to the ceremony. "Ave Maria" hailed the Mothers' entrance while a selection from "The Sound of Music" noted the bride's entrance.

Other musical selections were "Through the Eyes of Love," "There is Love," "Surely the Presence of the Lord," "Only a Shadow," and "Thee, Our Father." Vocalists were Beth Rohrback of Adrian and Louis Homen of Amarillo, cousin of the bride. At the conclusion of the ceremony a Medley of Bells was played by Mrs. Matthews followed by the recessional by Mrs. Crabtree.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was attired in a long formal wedding gown of white delustered satin. The gown was designed with a pearl Schiffli embroidered scoop neckline; the bodice was trimmed with heavily pearl-beaded Schiffli embroidery and a dropped rounded waistline. The gown featured three-quarter-length Renaissance sleeves accented at the shoulders with pearl beaded candy-box bows.

The ballgown skirt featured a sweeping train and a detachable 12-foot court train trimmed with pearl-beaded Schiffli embroidered medallions and an oversized candy-box bow at the back waistline.

Her veil was an asymmetrical white silk headpiece of roses with pearl sprigs. A short blusher worn over the face was attached to a detachable long veiling of imported silk illusion flowing the length of the formal train with scattered pearls.

A pearl necklace and earrings completed her bridal attire. She carried a large formal full flowing floor-length cascading bouquet arranged with white Cattleya orchids, roses, stephanotis blossoms, baby's breath, pearl sprigs, and was with the first layer featuring the bridal couple's names. A Precious Moments bride and groom music box topped the cake. The groom's cake was a German Chocolate cake topped with miniature figurines of a golfer, baseball player, computer, and calculator.

Storytelling session planned in Amarillo

Everyone loves a story! But storytelling is an art, and storytelling is more than the "children's hours" at the local library or nursery school. Mary Kay Wells, Coordinator of the Texas Panhandle Library System says, "Storytelling is how mankind, since the first caveman learned to communicate, passed history and tradition from generation to generation." In recent years, there has been a growing movement to revive the ancient art of storytelling.

On Thursday, Aug. 20 the Texas Panhandle Library System is sponsoring a day-long Storytelling

MENCKEN BIOGRAPHY

NEW YORK (AP) — Random House says it will publish a major biography of H. L. Mencken by Southern historian and University of Alabama professor Fred Hobson.

The book is slated for publication in 1989.

Hobson is the author of "Serpent in Eden: H. L. Mencken and the South." He is basing his biography on a great deal of recently released material: Mencken's personal and literary correspondence, a five-volume diary and a large number of letters to his wife, Sara Haardt.

The material suggests a much more complex and ambiguous man than we had previously known, he says.

Andy Griffith was born in Mount Airy, N.C., on June 1, 1926.

Tuesday's Lunch

Carefully preparing dozens of homegrown ears of corn, top photo, are some members of the American Legion Auxiliary preparing for their upcoming Country Lunch. The fundraiser, set for Tuesday at the Post Home located in Veterans park, will be served from 11 a.m. until 1 p.m. In addition to the corn, the menu will consist of roast beef and gravy, mashed potatoes, green beans, blackeyed peas, a relish plate, homemade rolls, cornbread, a choice of tea or coffee. and fruit cobblers. Shown, in bottom photo, are Betty Jo Carlson, Ruth King, and Ruth Gandy as they get ready to make delicious dessert cobblers. Tickets, available from Auxiliary members, cost $5 for adults and $3 for children under 12 years of age.

Auxiliary plans luncheon

The public is invited to a luncheon Tuesday, sponsored by the American Legion Auxiliary, from 11 a.m. until 1 p.m. in the Legion Post Home in Veterans Park.

Tickets are priced at $5 for adults and $3 for children under 12 years of age. Proceeds will be used for community projects and local programs. The menu will include fresh vegetables, roast beef and all the trimmings and a variety of fruit cobblers.

The Hereford unit of the American Legion Auxiliary was organized in 1930 to assist the Legion in carrying out their program which focuses on the veteran and his family.

During the depression era, the unit was very active. The C.C.C. group came to Deaf Smith County and many requests were filled including assisting financially in births, deaths, rentals and food.

Following the 1930s, numerous programs were established. The first Girl State program was held in 1940 with it being recessed a few years during W.W. II. The Hereford unit has been responsible for sponsoring at least one delegate since its inception.

In 1964 a new program was started. Joan Marnell was awarded the first $150 scholarship. It has since been increased to a $250 with its being presented each year to a graduating Hereford High School senior.

The unit also sponsors a monthly recreation party for the residents of King's Manor Retirement Home and to the patients in the V.A. Medical Center in Amarillo.

The unit has on the membership roll, six Gold Star mothers and one charter member.

BRANDED Women

By
Sandy Pankey

I have always had a compelling need to have a hobby but I have yet to find my niche among the talented, artistic individuals of this world. This is not to say I haven't tried my hand at a number of avocations.

It all began when I was six years old. My parents decided to purchase a piano in hopes their eldest daughter (me) would learn to play. I was a major disappointment, for much to their dismay, I was tone deaf. After several years of lessons, the only piano piece I could perform was a shortened version of the boogie-woogie that my dad had taught me.

I was in limbo a couple of years before announcing to my parents that I wanted to be a twirler. To my recollection I simply said, "If I don't take twirling lessons like my friends I will just die." After several weeks of relentless begging and looking pathetic, they agreed only if I promised to continue the lessons no matter what. Seems like I quit after a few weeks of instruction. My arms were black and blue from the baton (I was extremely uncoordinated) and I figured I would maim myself for life if I continued on my present course of destruction. Mother and Dad finally tired of my constant whining and let me quit.

By now I was 11- or 12-years-old and I was still searching for a hobby. Out of the blue I decided that anything having to do with horses would be "cool." In reality, I was scared to death of the beasts but my best friend had a horse so naturally I had to have one too. My dad bought three ponies for his three children with the understanding that we clean their stalls, and feed, water, and groom them each day. My enthusiasm for my new-found hobby quickly waned with the first load of manure I had to haul out of the stall. Yuck!

The years rolled by before the dreaded hobby itch again struck. This time I decided I had a natural ability to fix hair and it would be fun to be a part-time hairdresser. I, of course, had no professional training, but I reasoned that my eagerness made up for my lack of knowledge in my new chosen field. After contacting several friends, pleading with them to let me use them as guinea pigs, one finally agreed just to keep me quiet. I talked her into bleaching her naturally black hair a pale blonde. To make a long story short, we completed coloring her hair at midnight (too late to go to the store for more hair color just in case we needed to). I still don't know why she got so upset with me. So, she looked like a pumpkin head! Couldn't she explain to her class of six-year olds the next day that the "hair fairy" visited her during the night?

I almost forgot about the gourmet cooking period of my life. I found out that my culinary skills did not compare to those that Julia Childs possessed. I had begun collecting cookbooks with a passion never having actually prepared any of the recipes, until one Friday afternoon. It was the girls' regular card playing night and I offered to furnish refreshments. I studied one recipe for hors d'oeuvres and began mixing the condiments. Unfortunately, I didn't have all the necessary ingredients so I substituted something with instant potatoes. To hide the potato flavor, I added hot peppers and grated cheese and garnished each tidbit with an olive and popped the cocoon into the oven. None of my guests commented on my unusual cuisine. However, my card partner left early and was ill for two days.

I also "toyed" with an aerobics class. I say toyed because I never actually exercised, I just stood there in my new hot pink leotards, tights, and matching headband, socks and tennis shoes. The first and only time I perspired, I immediately concluded that I'm not the Jane Fonda type-more like the couch potato type.

Since I didn't stick with my exercise class, I found that I had gained 10 unwanted pounds and was going to need to buy new clothes. But wait! Why not sew my own wardrobe and save money? (I didn't take in consideration that I had never sewn before) I bought a portable sewing machine and sewing notions. I laid my material and pattern on the floor and began cutting. In those days deep shag carpet was the rage and much to my surprise when I lifted the material up I had cut the shape of my dress out of the carpet. I never finished that dress; I just tossed it in the dumpster and covered the spot on the rug with the sofa.

I have also tried golfing (I like riding in the cart); snow skiing (I really enjoy sitting in the hot tub afterwards); and oil painting (my picture turned out really good. It was a paint-by-number set).

Wait a minute. Isn't a hobby anything a person likes to do in his spare time? Then I do have a hobby afterall. I like to sit back and observe.

Brormann, Fangman united in marriage

Sharon Sue Brorman of Route 4 became the bride of Fred Mark Fangman of Route 5 in an early evening ceremony Friday in Immaculate Conception Catholic Church of Vega with Monsignor Peter Di Benedetto officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Frank and Dolores Brorman of Route 4, Hereford, and the groom is the son of Eugene and Elsie Fangman of Vega.

The church altar was decorated by two seven-branch candelabra accented with greenery and fresh flowers in shades of pink and fuschia.

Denise Brorman of Vega served her sister as maid of honor and the bride's brother, Tom Brorman, was best man.

Bridesmaids included the bride's cousin, Julie Dolle of Amarillo, Kris David of Odessa and Jennifer Galbraith of Dallas. Groomsmen were the groom's brothers, Ronnie and Kenny Fangman, and Scotty Cook of Grand Prairie.

Guests were escorted by the bride's brother, Mark Brorman; the bride's cousin, Steve Brorman; the groom's cousin, Tim Artho of Wildorado; and Roy Watley and Rick Jones.

Candles were lit by the bride's sister, Sara Brorman of Vega, and the groom's niece, Deanna McCracken.

Karen Wagner vocalized "The Wedding Prayer" and "Hail Mary-Gentle Woman" and was accompanied by Martha Brorman.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore the traditional white formal-length wedding gown of satin, Venice lace, schiffli embroidery, miniature seed pearls and white sequins. The wedding band collar was encrusted with bridal pearls and sequins and the yoke of the form fitted bodice was of sheer bridal illusion. The extra long-waisted bodice featured Venice lace appliques accented with pearls and sequins.

Long sheer sleeve extensions appliqued with beaded schiffli embroidery appliques were attached to Renaissance puffed sleeves. The full satin skirt with embroidery cut-out encircling the lower edge of the skirt was decorated by petal scallops and embroidery around the entire hemline. It swept into a cathedral length train adorned by sheer cut-outs.

The fingertip-length veil formed a pouff at the back of her picture brim hat which featured a satin crown and a beaded Alencon lace on the brim. A spray of silk flowers accented with pearl filaments decorated one side of the hat.

She carried a cascade of white roses and lily of the valley entwined with English ivy.

Bridal attendants were attired in tea-length dresses of fuschia moire taffeta. They were fashioned with puff sleeves, boat-necks dipping to V-backs and cummerbunds with bows marking the backs. They carried bouquets of peonies and roses.

The groom's sister, Monica Richardson of Vega invited guests to register at the reception and dance held in the Vega Parish Hall.

Cake was served by Sandra Perkins and Julie Crist of Wildorado and Jeanne Brorman of Canyon. Punch and coffee were poured by Lauri Paetzold and Nicole Fangman, the groom's niece.

The bride, a 1982 graduate of Vega High School, graduated from Texas Tech University in 1986 with a B.S. degree in business education. She is employed as a teacher at Stanton Junior High School. She is the granddaughter of Margaret Brorman and Mr. and Mrs. Ed Loerwald, all of Hereford.

The groom, a 1981 graduate of Vega High School, is engaged in farming northwest of Hereford.

Accent on Health

More than any other preventive health care practice, immunizations begun in childhood and kept current, save money, misery, and lives.

In the U.S., an estimated $1 billion are saved annually in would-be medical costs because of immunizations against polio, tetanus, measles, rubella (German measles), mumps, and diphtheria.

In Texas, proof of vaccinations for these six communicable diseases is required by law for all children registering for day care or public school. In addition, pertussis vaccine is required for children less than 5 years old in day care and public school. The Texas Department of Health (TDH) and the American Academy of Pediatrics recommend pertussis (whooping cough) vaccine for most children through six years old as well.

Wes Hodgson of the TDH Immunization Division, said, "Today's parents of young children are sometimes too young themselves to remember a time when immunizations were neither available nor required. But a few decades ago, outbreaks and epidemics of killer diseases such as polio and diphtheria not only threatened every child but were occurring more frequently every year."

Hodgson said because of vaccinations, polio and diphtheria are now rare in Texas. In the past ten years, only six cases of diphtheria and four cases of polio, one of them fatal, were reported in the state.

"What some young parents may not realize is that although outbreaks of vaccine preventable diseases are now less frequent in Texas, the diseases can still spread among us. Children are not born immune to these diseases," Hodgson said. "It is important that their parents follow their physicians' advice in scheduling all the necessary vaccinations and boosters, and in keeping accurate records for each child," he added.

The wheel and the wagon were developed together about 5,000 years ago.

PINOCCHIO'S MAGICAL WISH

VFW to sponsor fairytale Monday

The VFW Post No. 4818 is bringing a professional touring production of "Pinocchio's Magical Wish" to Hereford. The show will be presented live on stage at the Bull Barn with a performance scheduled for Monday at 7 p.m.

The production is a musical version of the old fairy story of Pinocchio, the wooden boy puppet who wishes ardently to become a real live boy and finally succeeds after a series of bizarre adventures. The show is enacted by the talented young professional actors and actresses of the nationally-touring World of Fantasy Players and carries elaborate special scenery, lighting, costumes and a sparkling and original musical score.

The story revolves around Gepetto the Toy Maker, who first carves Pinocchio out of wood; the Blue Fairy, who turns Pinocchio into a living boy; the Cricket, who strives valiantly to give him a conscience; the sly Fox and the wily Cat, who lead Pinocchio among evil companions; the Evil Gypsy, who carries him off from Gepetto's village; and sundry other fascinating characters along the way.

"Pinocchio's Magical Wish" is a joint effort of New York script-writer and director Tom Width and noted costumer and illusionist Philip Morris. The production includes some amazing special effects which really challenged the creative talents of both men.

his stage entrance from a giant cuckoo clock and making Pinocchio's nose grow longer when he tells a lie were relatively simple. Pinocchio's partial change into a donkey when he develops bad habits was also not too difficult to arrange effectively.

The greatest challenge was the creation of the underwater scene in which Pinocchio and Gepetto are swallowed by a whale. Audiences are sure to be delighted by the cleverness with which all of these illusions are accomplished.

Designed for the entertainment delight of kids from "three to eighty-three", "Pinocchio's Magical Wish" should provide a truly welcome diversion for children and parents of the community. Tickets will be on sale at the door or may be purchased in advance from any VFW member.

Every day, more than 107,000,000 Americans — seven out of 10 adults read a daily newspaper.

Wedding vows unite couple

Crystal Renee Simon of Amarillo became the bride of Ronald Wayne Tucker of Hereford Saturday afternoon at the West Texas State University Joseph Hill Chapel in Canyon. Bob Wear of the Central Church of Christ in Hereford officiated.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jim Simon of Amarillo. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Tucker of 837 Blevins, Hereford.

Two large bouquets of seasonal flowers adorned the front of the chapel along with two candelabra holding rainbow-colored candles. A large white bow bedecked each mother's pew while rainbow-colored bows trimmed the other pews.

Kerry Tucker, sister of the groom, served as maid of honor. The bride's brother, Kurt Simon, served as best man.

Ushers were Steve Tucker, brother of the groom, and Gary McKinney, a cousin of the groom.

Candlelighters were Christina Simon and Clarissa Simon, sisters of the bride.

Providing traditional wedding music was Jan Walser of Hereford.

Before the bride began her traditional walk down the aisle, she and the groom presented their prospective mothers-in-law each with a red rose.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a traditional white wedding gown featuring a stand-up collar emerging from a lace neckline. Lace Elizabethan sleeves adorned the gown, as did an A-lined skirt of white-embossed satin which flowed into a chapel-length train.

To complete her ensemble, the bride wore a fingertip-length lace veil edged in Chantilly lace and simulated pearls. She carried a cascading bouquet of pink baby roses and seasonal flowers.

Her jewelry was composed of her grandmother's wedding band and pearl necklace.

The bridesmaid was attired in a floor-length orchid dress trimmed in ruffles and bows and carried a nosegay of seasonal flowers. The candlelighters wore floor-length pink and blue dresses also trimmed with ruffles and bows and wore wristlets of carnations.

A reception followed at the University Church of Christ Fellowship Hall. Registering guests was Tamara Hamilton. Others assisting included Jill Walterscheid and Brenda Bell.

The bride's cake, served by Barbara Dutton, aunt of the bride, was a four-tiered yellow cake with white icing and pink roses. A yellow satin tablecloth covered the bride's table and was topped with a centerpiece composed of the bride's bouquet laying atop a silver goblet.

The groom's cake was a German chocolate cake topped chocolate roses.

Leaving for a wedding trip to Colorado Springs, Colo., the bride was attired in her mother's wedding suit of pink taffeta with lace.

The couple will be at home after August 19 at 435 Sycamore, Hereford.

The bride is a 1987 graduate of Canyon High School and served on the newspaper staff while she was a senior.

The groom, a 1984 graduate of Hereford High School, attended West Texas State University.

Out-of-town relatives attending the wedding included Mr. and Mrs. Howard Stallings of Midland, grandparents of the bride; Mr. and Mrs. Joe Dutton of Colorado, uncle and aunt of the bride; and Mr. and Mrs. Earl Simon of Colorado, uncle and aunt of the bride.

Depository accounts being established in Panhandle

The Texas Silver Haired Legislature is a non-profit, non-partisan organization established by an act of the 69th Texas Legislature in 1985. Modeled after the Texas State Legislature, this organization serves as a grassroots advocacy forum for the needs and priorities of the estimated 2.5 million Texans aged 60 years or older.

Because no state funding was provided for its operation, the Silver Haired Legislature operates as a strictly non-profit volunteer organization very much in need of operational and other necessary monies with which to serve its vast constituency.

In an effort to achieve this goal, the Texas Silver Haired Legislature is establishing temporary depository accounts in the name of the Silver Haired Legislature Foundation at local cooperating banks in the Panhandle and across the state for accepting donations.

Additional information can be obtained by contacting Joe Gidden at (806)655-7414.

Children may need vitamins

While you're out buying clothes, school supplies and lunch boxes to get your children started on the new school year, should you also be buying vitamins?

According to Dr. Alice Hunt, a nutritionist and Registered Dietitian, the answer is "probably not."

"Normal, healthy children who eat a varied and balanced diet will get an adequate amount of all the necessary nutrients their bodies need, so a vitamin-mineral supplement is unnecessary," says the Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service specialist.

Hunt also advises considering the foods your children eat regularly. For example, if a child eats a bowl of fortified cereal every day, it may be similar to taking a vitamin, depending on the degree of fortification.

The labels on cereals and other fortified foods list the percentage of the recommended daily allowances (RDAs) of vitamins and minerals contained in a serving of the product. According to the specialist, a number of these products contain 100 percent of the daily requirements for adults.

"If your child has a consistently poor appetite or eats only a limited variety foods, a check-up by a physician is appropriate," says Hunt. "The doctor may suggest a vitamin-mineral supplement to improve overall nutritional health."

Because excessive amounts of some nutrients, such as vitamins A and D, can be toxic however, she advises against giving a child supplements without checking with a doctor.

"Giving children vitamins can easily lull parents into a false sense of security that the child's nutritional needs are being met," cautions Hunt. "But a supplement is not an adequate substitute for a good diet."

The nutritionist maintains that the best thing parents can do to get children off to a healthy start on the school year is to stick to the basics: encourage them to eat a good breakfast, pack a nutritious lunch and have plenty of healthy snack foods around for after school.

Motorists urged to be cautious Labor Day

The Labor Day Weekend is a sure sign of things to come. Among them is the fact that another summer is about to pass.

It also represents the last three-day weekend before cooler weather sets in for many Texans, which has both local and state public safety officials concerned.

"We anticipate a large number of Texas motorists will take advantage of an extra day off to make that one last summer trip before winter," stated Major V.J. Cawthon, Regional Commander for the Texas Department of Public Safety. "This means Texas drivers will be sharing the roadways with more vehicles, being driven more miles than usual, by drivers who are probably more fatigued than usual," he added.

Even though safety officials remain optimistic that this can be a safer Labor Day holiday, they also realize that people will die needlessly on the state's highways during this period. "The tragic part of our traffic fatality picture is the fact that most of these accidents are caused by driver error, and definitely are preventable," Mayor Cawthon continued.

This underlines the importance of obeying all traffic laws. Studies have shown that when a traffic law is violated, property damage, injury and even death will many times be the result.

Major Cawthon concluded by asking Texas drivers to do their part in making this a safe holiday by remaining alert, adjusting your speed to match the existing road conditions, avoid the use of alcohol and please use your safety belt, no matter how short the trip.

Hart's friend Rice was party, 'action' girl

NEW YORK (AP) — Donna Rice, whose relationship with Gary Hart ended Hart's presidential campaign, was an "action girl" who drifted from one party to another in search of rich or famous men, according to a profile in the latest edition of Vanity Fair magazine.

The article said Miss Rice lived for two years with James Bradley Parks, a Florida drug trafficker sentenced to 10 years in prison in 1984.

Author Gail Sheehy writes that Hart, in addition to seeing Miss Rice, frequently spent time in Hollywood "hang(ing) out at Warren Beatty's house, sitting by the pool, which was often populated with topless starlets."

The article describes Miss Rice, 29, as having been flat-chested and a "spindle-legged and buck-toothed" girl from Irmo, S.C., who blossomed at age 21. It quotes a friend of Miss Rice as saying that the model underwent breast implants at age 28 because "smaller-chested women just didn't make it."

Miss Rice "is a character with no center, no concrete goal, the kind known to 'knockabout guys' as an 'action girl,' just drifting from party to party in a perpetual state of expectation that the next introduction will lead to the next connection, which she can then parlay into a meeting with the next rich or famous man," Sheehy said.

An effort to reach Miss Rice today was unsuccessful. Dori Marder, spokeswoman for New Retail Concepts Inc. in New York, for whom Miss Rice filmed a commercial Tuesday, said she could not give out a number for a representative for Miss Rice.

The article said that after winning a beauty contest, Miss Rice went to New York in the early 1980s and moved into the East Side apartment of a New York businessman for two years.

Back in Florida, she took up residence with Parks in an ocean-front condo, it said. She attended his sentencing on a 1979 charge of picking up 1,000 pounds of marijuana flown in from Colombia.

North refuses celebration

PHILMONT, N.Y. (AP) — Oliver North's mother said the fired National Security Council aide would not attend a hometown celebration in his honor because of concern for his safety, a festival organizer said.

North's mother, Ann, who lives about 40 miles north of here in Gunderland, told town officials that the Marine lieutenant colonel had been advised not to attend Saturday's event for security reasons, according to Sharon Johnson.

The 1,640 residents of this upstate New York town still plan to have the biggest celebration since the end of World War II, Johnson said.

Hundreds of people have called for information about Oliver North Day since plans were announced last month, she said. Red ribbons are tied around trees, flags are flying and signs supporting North hang in residents' windows.

"It's our way of showing that we are here for him, to support him in his time of trouble," she said.

"I'm not judging what he did as right or wrong."

ABC gambling on 'Dolly' as big hit

MARINA DEL REY, Calif. (AP) — Talk to Dolly Parton, and it's easy to see how she convinced network executives to fork over millions to give her a weekly variety show with a two-year guarantee.

The country songstress and movie star has more confidence in her newly pared-down, 95-pound body than Madison Square Garden contains on pro wrestling night.

"I decided to do the show because I felt that I could do it well," Parton said, perched on a stool at a news conference in a yacht club.

Her show, "Dolly," debuting this fall on Sunday night, will be a linchpin in the ABC schedule. ABC finished third last season and has a lot riding on the upcoming television year.

Add to that the fact that network variety shows have been abandoned in recent years since cable took much of the duty of entertaining the viewing public via music and comedy, and the Parton show looks like a pretty expensive gamble.

But country singer Barbara Mandrell had a successful variety series for two years on NBC until she quit, overcome by the hectic pace. And we are talking Dolly Parton here, megastar in many an American social stratum, an entertainer who talks often and sincerely of "the people."

Parton's production company owns the show. The two years ABC promises to keep her on the air, she says, is enough time to "get it right." And she has signed up Don Mischer, a successful producer of variety specials like the Grammy Awards.

Her show will be taped at the ABC studios in Los Angeles, but she will go on location — to a women's prison, to the reversed-sex ogling club Chippendale's, and on dream "dates" with desirable men, like Tom Selleck, perhaps. "As they say, it's a dirty job but somebody's got to do it," Parton said. Other regular segments will include "Vanity Fair," with Dolly as a beautician talking on semiserious subjects with the gals, and "Dew Drop Inn," a comic interlude set in a country-western bar.

Her guests are slated to include Lily Tomlin and Jane Fonda, Parton's co-stars in the hit movie "9 to 5," and she has already booked Pee Wee Herman, Tom Petty and Little Richard. She said her "wish list" includes Mikhail Baryshnikov, Liza Minnelli, Frank Sinatra and Bob Dylan.

One of the most interesting guests might turn out to be the real Dolly Parton, sans big, blonde wigs and skin-tight spangles.

"Hopefully, with the show, I'll be able to have a lot of different looks, too," she said.

Swimming pig, other attractions dot I-35

GEORGETOWN, Texas (AP) — On a 100-mile stretch of Interstate 35 in Central Texas, tourists can watch a pig swim, see what a snake pit does to their heart rate and venture below the highway to watch a re-creation of Creation.

It's America at play on a summer day. A straight stretch of highway, tourists yearning for something to tour, lots of billboards and a curious combination of businesses ever willing to quench the nation's thirst for roadside entertainment.

First, there's Georgetown's Inner Space Cavern, discovered in 1963 by state highway department drillers checking whether the ground would support an overpass over I-35.

Now, the cool cavern winds 40 feet under the interstate. Underground, a tour guide points out where the northbound lane runs overhead and mentions other noteworthy features.

"This is one of our imagination rooms, and if you'll use your imagination you can see King Tut. He's sitting on top of a Texas-sized duck foot. Over in the back is a mermaid riding on a dolphin. You might notice that our mermaid is missing her tail. Jaws has it over there," said tour guide Kim Gray.

One of the highlights is the Creation re-creation, a sound-and-light show sufficiently religious to have drawn objections from atheist leader Madalyn Murray O'Hair. The production, which begins in the kind of darkness that only a cavern can provide, happens at the Flowing Stone of Time in the cavern's Outer Cathedral.

In addition to inspiration, the cavern offers education, such as helping end the continuing confusion over stalactites and stalagmites.

Directly across I-35 from the cavern is the Candle Factory, complete with a first-hand look at candle-dipping.

"I was never involved much with candles, except for buying and burning them," said Ellen Nuckolls, who, with husband Paul, bought the candle business in June from its original owners.

For the record, it takes 17 dips to make most candles.

The cavern tour continues in San Marcos at Wonder World, which features, according to a brochure, "eons on top of eons of time revealed through layers of sedimentation." The tour "tells the dramatic story of the birth of Wonder Cave, from its geological origins to its use as a secret gambling parlor at the turn of the century."

Like many of the I-35 attractions, Wonder World has a souvenir shop. This one claims to have "10,001 unique collectibles."

There is a certain air of familiarity in many such shops. The giant Texas fly swatter is ever-popular, as are whips and the usual collection of T-shirts and post cards.

Since 1954, Ralph the Swimming Pig has been among the top attractions at Aquarena Springs in San Marcos, just west of I-35. Due to logistical difficulties, there have been and are now many Ralphs. But only one was named Ralph.

"He has to retire when he reaches 100 pounds because he can't swim anymore," said Erin Harwell, a public relations official for Aquarena Springs.

The San Marcos attraction is among the most lasting and popular of the I-35 sights. It opened in 1946 with its first glass-bottom boats and drew 450,000 visitors last year.

"The original Ralph was Ralph and they got him through one of our swimmers who lived on a farm and had taken our attractions supervisor home for Christmas. The pig liked to swim. The first Ralph was a natural. They were looking for a new attraction. They had had sea lions and they had problems with them because this is fresh water and sea lions don't really do too well in it," Ms. Harwell said.

A typical Ralph can ham it up in the show for about six months before becoming too much of a porker. At any one time there are about six Ralphs — all with different names — to swim the 13 shows a day.

"When we get a new Ralph he is given to a swimmer. He looks at that swimmer as his mom or dad," said Ms. Harwell.

One day the swimmer gets in the water with a feeding bottle and the pig follows, eventually becoming another Ralph, she said.

"They naturally, like dogs, would swim," Ms. Harwell said. "They are just averse to doing it."

Down the road in New Braunfels, the owner of the Snake Farm lets his signs do the talking. It's a roadside business built on the four E's of tourism:

"Exciting, Educational, Entertaining, Enjoyable," one of the signs says.

"Fascinating reptiles from all over the world," says another.

But the owner, a stout man with tight lips, declined a reporter's invitation to chat about the snake farm, which offers cage after cage of snakes and other assorted animals.

"Pink-toed tarantula. Eats insects," notes a card on one cage.

In addition to the individual caged snakes, there's a snake pit in a separate room. "Check your heart rate," says a sign on the heart-rate machine in the room.

Despite the impressiveness of the Snake Farm's signs, Garden Ridge Pottery might be the reigning I-35 billboard champ.

Its signs begin to tempt tourists and incurable browsers from miles and miles away. It is a big store.

"Right now we've got something in the range of 310,000 square feet. Hopefully, it will be adequate," said David Harris, general manager of the store, located in Schertz, just north of San Antonio.

Garden Ridge offers pottery, dried flowers and assorted other home decoration items from its three giant, connected metal buildings.

It makes your standard big discount store look like a mom-and-pop operation.

"We want to have a lot of inventory. Part of it is buying power. But we also want to impress the customer with size. We're particular about how high things are (stacked in displays) and we don't want to cut off vision. We want it to leave an impression," Harris said.

When you enter through the front

The business struggled by for a time, then closed. Another businessman took it over and tried to make it an amusement park. That, too, failed.

FAA increases study

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's airlines say a new government investigation of schedule-related delays at four more major U.S. airports misses the real cause of late flights. The basic problem, say airline representatives, is that the airport and air traffic control system cannot meet the demands of growing air traffic. The Department of Transportation said Thursday that it will study airline scheduling at Denver's Stapleton International Airport, Newark International Airport in New Jersey, New York's LaGuardia International Airport and San Francisco International Airport. The carriers involved could face penalties of up to $1,000 per violation per day, said Transportation Department spokesman Bob Marx. The department since April has been studying scheduling problems at four other large airports:

Chicago's O'Hare International, Atlanta, Boston and Dallas-Fort Worth. "DOT's ongoing investigation is an effort to distract consumer attention from the government's failure to improve the air traffic control system, and nothing more," said Clark Onstead, a vice president of Texas Air Corp., which owns Eastern Airlines, Continental Airlines and others. "It's a clever PR ploy." Stephen Hayes of the Air Transport Association, which represents the nation's major airlines, said airline schedules may lead to some delays but "the problem won't get solved in any significant way until we increase airport capacity."

IRS has surprise: more forms for us

WASHINGTON (AP) — If you thought there was a lot of paperwork involved in your home-equity loan or IRA account, wait until you see what the Internal Revenue Service has waiting for you.

For the home equity loan, it's called Form 8589 and it can get complicated. The IRS estimates that as many as half the 27 million couples and individuals with deductible home mortgage interest will have to file the form with their tax returns next year.

The two-page form and its four pages of instructions were made public Thursday. At the same time, the IRS released new forms that will be required of taxpayers who make non-deductible contributions to Individual Retirement Accounts and of those whose passive investments result in losses.

The new forms are among about 40 being created as a result of the big tax overhaul enacted last year.

"They basically reflect what Congress did to the tax law," said Arthur Altman, chairman of the IRS tax-forms committee. He said the agency has not had an easy time translating congressional intent into understandable forms.

The mortgage-interest form has been especially troublesome. "This easy-sounding provision has turned out to be a very difficult one for us to administer," Altman said.

As part of the tax overhaul, Congress agreed that interest on home mortgages (for one or two homes) generally would remain fully deductible. But the lawmakers added a couple of conditions:

—A full deduction will be allowed on mortgages, including home-equity loans, taken out after Aug. 16, 1986, only if the mortgage loan does not exceed the fair market value of the property.

—With two exceptions, a deductible mortgage may not exceed the purchase price of the house plus the cost of improvements. Those exceptions: part of the proceeds of the loan may be used for education or medical expenses.

The new Form 8598 will be required of any taxpayer who took out a home loan after last Aug. 16 (the date Senate and House negotiators completed work on the giant tax law) and used part of the proceeds for anything other than buying a house, or who refinanced an earlier mortgage after that date. The form will be used to calculate the allowable mortgage deduction.

Altman estimated that about 4 million people need to fill out only the first eight lines on the form. Those who used part of the loan for other purposes will have to complete one or both of the remaining parts.

Millions of taxpayers will have to file another new form, 8606, to determine how much, if any, of their 1987 IRA contribution is deductible. That is because the law denies a fully deductible IRA to workers who are covered by company pensions and earn more than $25,000 (if single) or $40,000 (if filing a joint return).

Covered workers are allowed partial IRA deductions if they earn up to $9,999 above those levels. Once income hits $35,000 (single) or $50,000 (joint) no deduction is permitted, but a worker may set aside up to $2,000 a year and the interest earned on that contribution remains tax-free until withdrawn.

Any worker who makes a non-deductible IRA contribution must file the new form.

25 amendments on November ballot

By MICHAEL HOLMES
Associated Press Writer
AUSTIN (AP) - Texans will decide the fate of 25 proposed constitutional amendments in this November's election, along with the question of legalizing gambling on horse racing.
Secretary of State Jack Rains, drawing slips of paper out of a cowboy hat, Wednesday determined the order in which the amendments will be placed before voters on Nov. 3.
For the first time, Rains said, two statewide referenda also will go to voters. By law, those follow the constitutional questions, he said.
Gov. Bill Clements on Wednesday issued a proclamation designating the order for the two referenda which had been sent to voters by the Legislature.
The question of whether to maintain the State Board of Education as an appointed, rather than elected, body will be listed ahead of the parimutuel gambling referendum.
"The top of the ballot will be the state elections. The ballot is constitutional amendments, referenda and whatever your local issues trail after that," he said.
Rains' drawing established the November constitutional amendment ballot order as follows:
-HJR104: To provide for the surety of a grain warehouse fund to be established by the grain industry for the protection of farmers and depositors of grain in public warehouse facilities.
-HJR48: To limit school tax increases on the residence of the surviving spouse of an elderly person if the spouse is at least 55 years old.
-HJR5: To authorize the Legislature to provide assistance for encouraging economic development.
-HJR65: To authorize agreements between the state highway department and counties of more than 400,000, adjoining counties and cities to aid turnpikes, toll roads and toll bridges by guaranteeing bonds.
-HJR4: To allow the Legislature to provide for state financing of the development of Texas products and businesses.
-SJR55: To provide for the issuance of general obligation bonds to finance local public facilities.
-SJR56: To authorize issuance of general obligation bonds for projects relating to corrections institutions and mental health facilities.
-SJR9: To allow legislators to be elected or appointed to other state offices but not receive any increase in pay granted to that office during his legislative term.
-SJR12: To allow the Legislature to exempt from ad valorem taxation
-SJR12, Part II: To provide for exemption from ad valorem taxes of certain property located in the state temporarily.
-SJR35: To permit spouses to hold community property with right of survivorship.
-SJR27: To allow for creation of special districts for emergency services.
-SJR34: To give the state a limited right to appeal in criminal cases.
-HJR35: To abolish office of county treasurer in Bregg, Fayette and Nueces counties.
-SJR6: To allow more than one justice of the peace court in certain precincts.
-SJR26: To allow the Legislature to define for all purposes the governmental and proprietary functions of a municipality.
-HJR88: To authorize issuing general obligation bonds for a "super certain unused offshore drilling equipment."
-SHR17: To permit the Legislature to include the speaker of the House or speaker's appointee in membership of an executive agency or committee.
-SHR53: To allow Legislature to limit authority of governor to fill vacancies in state offices at the end of a term in which the governor wasn't re-elected.
-SJR54: To authorize issuing $400 million more in water development bonds.
-HRJ83: To permit county to perform work, without compensation, for other governmental bodies.
-SJR5: To authorize the Legislature to permit the Amarillo Hospital District to serve certain residents of Randall County.

Utopia family's fortune is crystal clear

By ERIC WHITTINGTON
Corpus Christi Caller-Times

UTOPIA, Texas (AP) — Ron Bownds' family had used the crystal-clear spring water on the family's Utopia, Texas, ranch for 66 years before Bownds got a notion to do something with it besides water the cattle.

That was four years ago. Now, Bownds' Hill Country Spring Water of Texas Inc. sells 3.5 million to 4 million gallons of bottled spring water a year, including 9,000 gallons a week in the Corpus Christi-Valley area, his biggest market. He expects gross sales, which he says have doubled every year, to reach $2.3 million this year.

Bownds claims his Utopia brand bottled waters, sold in 1- and 2.5- and 5-gallon jugs and 8-ounce bottles, control 50 percent of the Corpus Christi bottled water market. He also sells Utopia sparkling water in glass bottles.

Bownds recently recalled the birth of his bottled water company.

"I was a geologist in Houston for an oil company, but I grew up in Utopia," about half way between San Antonio and Del Rio. "I didn't like the two-hour traffic jams and Houston was the first place I'd ever bought bottled water."

The oil company moved Bownds to San Antonio, which he enjoyed because of its close proximity to Utopia, but then wanted to move him back to Houston.

He didn't want to go back, so he quit.

It was then that the idea struck to bottle the water from the family spring and sell it. With $500 worth of equipment in an old meat packing plant on the ranch, Bownds, his wife and two employees started bottling and capping 300 gallons a day.

When he contacted the H.E.B. grocery store chain about buying some of its plastic jugs, Bownds got more than he bargained for. H.E.B. tested the water and liked it so much it gave Bownds a contract to supply water for H.E.B.'s Park Manor House brand.

Today, the company bottles 80,000 gallons of water a day, bound for markets throughout Texas as well as New York City, Cleveland, Baltimore-Washington, D.C., Seattle, Connecticut, Oregon, Oklahoma, Louisiana and Arizona. With 35 employees, Bownds' company is the largest employer in Utopia, except for the school district.

"Sparkling water is a baby boomer product," says Bownds, 35. They're health club members, etc., who are looking for an alternative to sugar, NutraSweet, and caffeine."

But "bulk waters," sold in quantities of at least a gallon, "are consumed by many different groups," he said. "A lot of them just don't like the taste of tap water."

Enter Corpus Christi.

Bownds said he sells lots of water here under two different scenarios, when the weather is especially dry and when it's abnormally wet. Dry weather, he said, induces people to buy bottled water in an effort to conserve the municipal water supply. Heavy rains, on the other hand, wash all manner of unsavory things into Lake Corpus Christi, which feeds the local water system, and make the tap water taste and smell rather potent.

"It looks to me like if you have too much rain, bottled water sells real well," Bownds said, "and the same thing happens if you have too little rain."

Nationwide sales of bottled waters have risen rapidly since the late 1970s. Wm. Perrier began heavily promoting its sparkling water. U.S. sales of water jumped another 15.8 percent last year, though Texas sales increased 32 percent.

Igloo keeping its cool for 40 years

By MICHAEL L. GRACZYK
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — Americans seeking relief from the heat of summer are most likely to dip into an Igloo.

From beaches to construction sites, the colorful plastic ice chests and water coolers bearing the Igloo Corp. name have been building a reputation now for 40 years for keeping cold things cold.

"We're the industry leader," says John Caldwell, vice president of sales and marketing for the Houston-based company. He estimates as many as 10 million Igloo products are in use. Igloo's chief competitors are Coleman and Thermos.

"This is a fun product. When I'm traveling and I run into people and they say, 'I've got one. It's a great product.' You always get a good smile. I enjoy that," Caldwell says.

But the chests and water jugs are building an even more loyal following among people who credit the products with saving their lives in situations that were anything but fun.

Steve and Lynn Kelly of Aurora, Colo., were on vacation in May, driving through a remote section of Utah when their car rolled over, collapsing the roof.

"The roof of the car stopped over our Igloo cooler," Mrs. Kelly said. "The state patrol said if the cooler wouldn't have been there, the car would have been on my head. Our Igloo came out without a scratch. Even the bottles inside did not break."

Igloo files are filled with letters from other grateful customers, like Judy Davis of Fayetteville, Tenn., whose husband Glen was in an accident similar to the Kellys'. Davis' Igloo lunchbox was wedged between the seat and the top of his rolled-over truck.

"He only had minor injuries and his lunch box is still as good as ever," Mrs. Davis said.

In Lanesboro, Mass., a 19-year-old construction worker escaped serious injury when an Igloo water cooler blocked the fall of 25 wooden trusses which would have crushed him.

Then there's the story of a California woman, Patricia Citarella of Hercules, who told of a bear unsuccessfully mauling her family's Igloo cooler to get at the food inside.

"He bit it, he threw it, but the little Playmate wouldn't give in," she said. "So the bear gave up. He left the cooler and all the little goodies behind."

The company has its roots in the oilfields, when in 1947 Production Tooling Co., a small Houston tool and die shop, began supplying metal water coolers as replacements for old wooden water kegs.

A Memphis, Tenn., company, John T. Everett Corp., took over sales and through a series of mergers became Texas Tennessee Industries Inc. in 1961.

"Then we developed the first two-handled ice chest — all plastic," Caldwell recalls. "At that time all were made out of metal. The problem they were trying to overcome was rusting and chipping and cracking." That was 25 years ago, when the 48-quart plastic ice chest was born. It's now known as the "Legend" model and is the foundation of the Igloo product line. It remains Igloo's most popular ice chest.

"We easily have millions around the world," Caldwell says. "Over the years, we've changed the handle. At one time we had it with rivets, now there's stainless steel screws and a hinge that locks at a 95-degree angle so the lid doesn't come down. At one time we had a two-piece lid. We added a stain resistant liner. We added a tray.

The secret of keeping an Igloo cold — and company officials say it can hold the cold three to four days under the right circumstances — lies in its polyurethane foam.

The foam, sandwiched between the inner liner and outer shell of the ice chest, expands 30 times its original size, says Mike Garcia, superintendent of the Igloo plant near Katy, west of Houston.

Names In The News

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Sandy Duncan will replace Valerie Harper in television's "Valerie," but the show will keep its name, says Lorimar-Telepictures, which dropped Miss Harper in a salary dispute.

"She's off the show," Lorimar spokesman Barry Staggs said Wednesday of Miss Harper. "We thought we had resolved our differences, but we were unable to work things out."

Also gone from the NBC-TV show is Miss Harper's husband, co-executive producer Tony Cacciotti, said Staggs. Miss Harper has refused comment during the dispute.

The revised show will feature Miss Duncan portraying Sandy Hogan, the sister of pilot Mike Hogan, who moves into the Hogan household to take over the care of her three nephews.

Miss Duncan has starred in motion pictures, on television and Broadway, including Tony-nominated performances in "The Boy Friend," "Peter Pan" and "The Canterbury Tales."

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Actress Jane Fonda began production work this week on a Columbia Pictures film version of "The Old Gringo," a novel by Mexican author Carlos Fuentes, an actors' union spokesman said.

It had not been confirmed yet if Miss Fonda also would act in the movie, Ernesto Gomez Cruz said Wednesday.

There have been reports that Miss Fonda will play the part of the teacher who becomes involved in the meeting of Ambrose Bierce and Pancho Villa during the Mexican revolution.

"We don't know yet who will play the leading roles in the movie," Gomez Cruz said in a phone interview.

The director will be Luis Puenzo of Argentina, whose "The Official Story" won an Academy Award two years ago as the best foreign language film, Gomez Cruz said.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Guitarist and singer Lindsey Buckingham, considered the creative force behind rock group Fleetwood Mac, plans to leave the band, its publicist says.

Two new members will "add very excitingly to the Fleetwood Mac sound" before the 20-year-old band embarks on a tour this fall, Mitch Schneider said Tuesday. He did not name the new members.

Buckingham and vocalist Stevie Nicks joined Fleetwood Mac in 1975 and heavily influenced its 1977 LP, "Rumours," which won a Grammy as album of the year.

"Tango," Fleetwood Mac's first album in five years, is No. 20 on the Billboard charts.

KINSTON, N.C. (AP) — Little Eva's doing a brand new dance now.

"I don't locomote no more," said Eva Boyd as she wiped the counter at Hanzies Grill, a soul food restaurant here.

It's been 25 years since Ms. Boyd, as teen-aged Little Eva, hit the top of the charts with Carole King's and Gerry Goffin's "The Locomotion."

"I ain't into singing over chicken," the 43-year-old Ms. Boyd said in a recent interview. She still sings with a gospel group from her church and is considering making a record.

"She sounds beautiful," said waitress Loraine Jackson. "If you listen to her sing, it sounds like Little Eva."

"Just older," Ms. Boyd said.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Singer Tony Joe White says the faces of people who survived a May tornado that ravaged the west Texas town of Saragosa prompted him to team up with country music star Waylon Jennings for a benefit concert.

"When I read that in the newspaper up here, there was something about the looks on their faces," White said in a telephone interview from Tennessee. "I knew some people weren't going to get any help."

The concert Sunday at a horse-racing track east of Austin also will feature Johnny Cash, Neil Young, Jessi Colter, Johnny Rodriguez, John Anderson and Steve Earle.

White said proceeds will go directly to victims of the May 22 tornado, which killed 30 people and injured 160 others.

White's latest album is called "Dangerous."

ODON, Ind. (AP) — A peace activist accused of taking a John Poindexter Street sign has volunteered to serve as the rear admiral's bodyguard when the former national security adviser returns to his hometown.

However, Old Settlers Festival organizers have declined Bill Breeden's offer to guard Poindexter, a key player in the Reagan administration's arms sales to Iran.

"I'm sure there will be somebody much higher than even the state police that will be his bodyguard," said Thelma F. Moore, the group's secretary-treasurer.

Breeden, 38, is scheduled to go on trial in October on a theft charge resulting from the disappearance of the sign.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Mark Harmon and his wife, Pam Dawber of television's "My Sister Sam," are suing for custody of Harmon's nephew, a son of the late rock star Rick Nelson.

Harmon alleges that Kristin Nelson, Harmon's sister and Nelson's former wife, is unable to take care of 13-year-old Sam Nelson.

Mrs. Nelson's attorney, Carl Osborne, said his client has completed a hospital program to end an addiction to prescription drugs.

The custody trial was scheduled to begin today in Los Angeles Superior Court.

Sam is the youngest of four children born to Kristin during her marriage to Nelson. The other children are daughter Tracy, 23, and twins Matthew and Gunnar, 19.

Mrs. Nelson, 42, was divorced from Rick Nelson in 1982. In 1985, he was killed with six others in a New Year's Eve plane crash in Texas.

Osborne said the twins, who live with Mrs. Nelson, will testify for their mother.

Harriet Nelson, the mother in the long-running "Adventures of Ozzie and Harriet" TV series that also starred Rick Nelson and brother David, is on the side of her former daughter-in-law but will probably not testify, Osborne said.

Harmon, 35, who gained fame as a plastic surgeon on television's "St. Elsewhere," stars in the hit movie "Summer School."

Before "My Sister Sam," Miss Dawber co-starred with Robin Williams in "Mork and Mindy."
