DOE awaits real estate reports for land access

The Department of Energy has attempted "to interact with landowners and operators with utmost sensitivity to their feelings and interest" on the critical issue of land acquisition and access for the site characterization of a proposed nuclear waste repository in Deaf Smith County, a DOE official told the Senate committee on Energy and Natural Resources in a Monday hearing in Washington, D.C.

Jeff Neff, manager of the Salt Repository Project office in Hereford, said DOE is now awaiting the Real Estate Planning Report from the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, which will describe the lands needed and recommend the property interests that should be acquired. The report should be ready this summer and Neff said that relevant portions will be sent to the state and all landowners.

officials and the public in the Panhandle.

The process that led to the site in bedded salt in Deaf Smith County began in 1957, according to DOE testimony, when a panel of the National Academy of Sciences recommended salt formations in the U.S. be studied for potential underground sites for permanent storage of high-level radioactive waste. The U.S. Geological Survey launched national screening studies the following year.

Neff said it was 1976 when the survey identified two bedded salt areas in the Texas Panhandle for further study—the 18-county Palo Duro basin south of Amarillo, and the 5-county Dalhart basin north of Amarillo. The statement continued:

"Other salt deposits identified by USGS in the national screening process for further study included bedded formations in the Paradox Basin of Utah and Colorado; the Salina Basin in Michigan, New York and Ohio; and salt domes in Louisiana, Mississippi and eastern Texas.

"Within those regions, DOE then moved, step-by-step, to identify smaller areas for more intensive study, evaluating thickness and depth of salt, the presence of faults, seismicity and salt dissolution. Also considered were such factors as the existence of other natural resources such as oil and gas, land uses, and density and distribution of population.

repository. The U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission, and state and local groups will review and monitor plans and results.

(Part two of this article will be published in the next edition of The Brand. It concerns the other three categories covered by Jeff—a summary of consultation and cooperation activities, a summary of major institutional issues, and highlights of current and past interactions with local governmental officials and the public in the Panhandle.)

Death slow for aliens in boxcar

SIERRA BLANCA, Texas (AP) — Eighteen illegal aliens trapped in a locked steel-walled boxcar "started to get crazy" and fought each other in 130-degree heat as they died "little by little," the lone survivor says.

Border Patrol agents on a routine inspection of a freight train near this town 87 miles east of El Paso found the bodies — some with their tongues chewed — inside the blood-splattered boxcar.

The car had been locked from the outside, apparently by a smuggler who brought the 19 into the country, and was littered with a bag of animal crackers, six cans of corn, bags of toiletries and six empty jugs, the officers said.

The men, ranging in age from about 21 to 35, had clawed at the wood-lined door as the temperature rose as high as 130 degrees, according to Border Patrol agent Stanley Saathoff.

The aliens had boarded the train late Wednesday afternoon at El Paso, authorities said.

The only person found alive inside the car Thursday, Miguel Tostado Rodriguez, 21, of the Mexican state of Aguascalientes, survived by breathing through an opening punched in the floor of the boxcar with a railroad spike, Saathoff said.

"People started dying little by little, little by little," Tostado said.

"They started fighting with each other because they were desperate to breathe and (for) water," he said. "They didn't have any water. So they started to get crazy and fight each other. They didn't have any oxygen so they started fighting each other."

Tostado spent the night at an illegal alien detention center in El Paso, and was to undergo further questioning today, the Border Patrol said.

Tostado said that in desperation

★ Today's ★ Brand combined

Today's issue of The Brand is a combined Friday-Sunday edition because of the July Fourth holiday. The Brand will not print a paper Saturday, which is when the Sunday paper usually goes to press.

Regular Sunday features and pages will be found in today's combined issue, including color comics, the editorial page and lifestyle pages. The Brand skips publication four days a year—July 4, Thanksgiving Day, Christmas Day and New Year's Day.

"We will then meet with landowners to discuss land acquisition plans. Through this process, we hope to be active in negotiations this fall," reported Neff.

Neff's remarks to the committee were divided into five categories: (1) a brief history of how the Deaf Smith County site was designated; (2) a review of major issues for the Texas site and how these are expected to be resolved during site characterization; (3) a summary of major institutional issues; (4) a summary of consultation and cooperation activities with the State of Texas; and (5) highlights of current and past interactions with local governmental

His own small part in history helps teacher show real world to kids

Travels to Thailand, the Azores, England and Germany as a Vietnam Era veteran lends credence to his teaching of world history, says Joe D. Rogers.

Although he wasn't in the front lines of America's most recent major military conflict — he says he was in Vietnam about an hour — his experiences on a support crew give him an opening to tell his students about the times when some of their parents were starting life in the real world.

From 1968-72, Rogers fought the war with a screwdriver, on 12-hour nightly shifts in Thailand to repair and maintain planes with the Air Force 49th Combat Support Wing, which could pack up its entire portable base and move around the world.

It was more the uncertainty of the times that caused much of the disillusionment associated with the Vietnam Era, Rogers says. In addition to the questions about the conflict itself was the sexual revolution, changes in education and society's values in general. For the veteran coming home after a year of service, the changes may have been too much to add on to the absence of a welcome by the public.

For those still at home, there was the uncertainty of being drafted.

"There was a lot more 'Vietnam' than what happened in southeast Asia," Rogers notes.

The students at La Plata Junior High may feel distant to the conflict, but they have been affected in ways they do not know.

"A lot of parents have equipped their kids differently than our parents did," Rogers says.

Rogers tries to relate this to them so they can see the importance of history and current events — the real world.

They are catching on. @outside the giggling and macho acts, the kids are realizing there's a world out there. While freshmen are just beginning to be exposed, they bring their parents' values learn more and build their own ideas.

Rogers says he's had some stand on their desk and argue with another student over some philosophy or point in history, but has noticed it's not yet "cool" to be very patriotic.

"Kids now are sharp, they are dedicated to an education," Rogers says. "Most know they are studying for careers that aren't created yet."

Rogers is warning the boys in his classes that good grades get the scholarships that get the degrees that get the jobs. He tells them that if they don't study, they are liable to be working for those girls sitting next to them.

As he strives to make history alive for his students, he remembers when it really quickened for him.

Waiting for plane parts, he read about planes, then read about why the services had these planes and why the U.S. need those planes so he could understand some more whys.

"There you are, reading history and liking it," he laughs.

Horse rider thrown into road, killed near Easter

A horse spooked by stormy weather threw its rider onto slick pavement and into the path of a pickup truck on FM 2397 near Easter late Thursday afternoon.

Lisa Jobe, 26, of Rt. 2 Hereford, was pronounced dead at 6:20 p.m. in Deaf Smith General Hospital by Dr. Nadir Khuri.

A Castro County Sheriff's spokesman said the woman was southbound on horseback on a county dirt road. At the T-shaped intersection of F.M. 2397, she fell on wet pavement and slid into the path of an eastbound pickup driven by Kenneth Raymond Frye of Hereford.

The accident was 1½ miles from Easter. Services are pending with Rix Funeral Home of Hereford.

Local Roundup

City agenda slated

Participation in a regional drug unit and in the effort to procure the Superconducting Supercollider to the area are on the agenda for the Hereford City Commissioners. They meet Monday at 7 p.m. for a work session and at 7:30 p.m. for the business meeting in the City Hall.

The regional drug unit is part of a collective effort of the Panhandle Regional Planning Commission to put together a task force and seek funds from the state.

Information from a recent SSC meeting in Amarillo will be supplied at the city meeting.

Other agenda items include:

-A public hearing on a zoning case to change 609 Austin from two-family to mobile home district.

-A request from Melvin Weber to place a mobile home subdivision a half-mile north of town on the east of U.S. 385. An opposition petition has been received by the city. The land is within the city's extra-territorial jurisdiction where the city has control but no zoning authority. The improvements would have to be consistent with the city's subdivision ordinance.

-Setting final hearing on giving notice to property owners on U.S. 385 a paving assessment.

Summer school starts July 6

Students registered for the HISD summer school program should report to class Monday at 8:30 a.m. Classes will be held at each elementary campus from 8:30 to noon, Monday through Friday, and tuition is free. Parents are responsible for transportation. Contact the campus principal or Marc Williamson at the HISD office for any information.

Hospital board calls meeting

Deaf Smith County Hospital District directors will meet at noon Tuesday for a special called meeting in the hospital conference room.

Agenda items are a presentation of automated information systems and an executive session for legal matters.

Weather

THURSDAY'S HIGH: 90 FRIDAY A.M. LOW: 70
MOISTURE: None reported by 7 a.m. at KPAN.
OUTLOOK: Tonight and Saturday, partly cloudy with isolated late afternoon and evening thunderstorms with rain chance less than 20 percent. Low in upper 60s and high in mid 90s. Wind south 10 to 15 mph. Saturday, chance of thundersorms with low in upper 60s and high near 90.

Family fights top police report

Two calls involving family disputes were investigated on Thursday, according to the Hereford Police Department report. Officers responded to a family dispute on Adelito Calle and to a family fight on South McKinley. Charges will not be filed in either incident.

Other offenses reported include trespassing on the Municipal Golf Course, a windshield broken on the 600 block of Irving, a barking dog problem on the 600 block of East Fifth, a license plate stolen from a vehicle at the Red Carpet Inn, a dog bite on the 300 block of Bradley, harassing calls on the 200 block of Ave. J and charges are to be filed on a man for disorderly conduct in the 200 block of Ave. F.

A 45-year-old man was arrested for public intoxication. One minor accident was investigated and 14 citations were issued. Hereford Fire Department responded to a call involving a woman who fell from a horse and was hit by a vehicle.

Chemical People to meet

Chemical People Task Force will hold a meeting at 7:30 p.m. on Tuesday, July 7, in the lounge of the Community Center. Members of the group invited anyone interested in fighting the growth of substance abuse in the community to attend.

Jeweler Jim

Jim Klepac heats gold in a crucible before pouring it into a mold to cast a ring. Metal working such as this dates back thousands of years.

In tradition of Revere

Local jeweler casts custom orders

The Fourth of July holiday turns one's thoughts to our forefathers: George Washington, Thomas Jefferson and that famous horse-rider Paul Revere.

Revere was a silversmith whose name still appears on quality stainless steel cookware. In fact, in spite of Longfellow's poem, Revere was probably a better silversmith than horseman. Historians say he was not the man who successfully warned New England villagers that the Redcoats were coming.

In Hereford, Jim Klepac uses somewhat different methods than were available in Revere's day, but he, too, works as a silversmith. Klepac recently added custom casting to the services he offers at the jewelry and clock repair shop he opened in Hereford earlier this year.

After retiring from the Navy, Klepac attended and graduated from watchmaker and jeweler schools and then moved to Hereford. He had been employed with a local jewelry firm since September of 1979 but decided last winter that it was time he went out on his own.

Klepac's shop, located on North 25 Mile Ave., has achieved immediate success with orders for manufactured jewelry, watch and clock repair. But he still wasn't doing all he wanted to do with his business and so he recently began accepting orders for custom jewelry.

"With custom casting the customer can select the exact setting, metal content, style and stone desired for a fine piece of jewelry," Klepac explains. Other advantages to the custom process, according to Klepac, include superior quality of workmanship, economy of cutting out middleman pricing and opportunity for the customer to have direct input in the manufacturing process of the jewelry.

"It's like this," he laughs, "I don't live off in some other city, if a customer doesn't find the quality of my work satisfactory, they know where to find me. I stand behind my work."

The casting process is a five-hour procedure which begins with the selection of a wax pattern. "The wax pattern is the design of the desired piece of jewelry," says Klepac.

The wax pattern is a model of the exact shape of the jewelry and is "vested" with material to form a mold. At one time, plaster of paris was used to vest the mold. After the plaster dried it was carefully broken to remove the pattern and then put back together for the casting process. Modern jewelers have updated materials such as UltraVest which provide more accurate and less troublesome molds.

In the next stage the wax pattern is burned out. During this phase high heat melts the special wax pattern which exits through a sprue channel which is then used to pour in molten metals.

"At this point silver or different weights of gold are heated to liquid stage and forced into the mold," says Klepac. There are different methods of forcing the metal into the mold including the use of centrifugal force. Klepac uses a vacuum which literally sucks the molten liquid into the mold. The vacuum prevents bubbles which are a common problem with the other methods.

The metal is then allowed to lose the red tint it takes on when melted and is then quenched in water. After it has cooled the metal form is removed from the flask and remaining vestment material is cleaned off.

"Next the metal is 'pickled' to remove the oxidation which darkens the surface of metal when heated," states Klepac, "Then the excess metal, such as the sprue, is removed."

Silver and gold are pickled in either a mixture of sulfuric acid or a commercial product. Sterling silver is silver which has been treated with a chemical which causes a thin film of fine metal to form on the surface.

The piece is then usually sanded and polished and suddenly the shapeless, ugly colored lump which was removed from the vestment material begins to take on shape and the luster associated with fine jewelry.

"At this point we are ready for the addition of stones, if desired," says Klepac who mastered the techniques of soldering and cutting metal; casting and setting stones in jeweler's school.

With over 300 completed castings to his credit, Klepac could easily be termed an expert craftsman...now if we can just find him a horse.

Evangelist confident of prospects in presidential primaries race

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Television evangelist Pat Robertson, who has received $8.2 million in campaign contribution, says he will announce his candidacy in September for the Republican presidential nomination.

Robertson, 56, the founder of the Virginia-based Christian Broadcasting Network, said he is confident that by then he will have received 3 million signatures urging him to seek the presidency.

"I surely expect to receive all of those supporters by the end of August and I expect to be a candidate sometime in the middle of September," Robertson said at a news conference Thursday.

Robertson met with about 200 pastors from area churches and hosted a reception for some financial backers in San Antonio. He had appearances scheduled in Midland and Fort Worth today.

Robertson also said he supports the nomination of U.S. Appeal Courts Justice Robert Bork to the U.S. Supreme Court.

The nomination of Bork, a conservative, already has sparked filibuster talk in the Senate, which is charged with confirming the nomination. Critics charge Bork's appointment could shift the court's balance of power to the right and could have an affect on decisions on abortion and civil rights issues.

"I am delighted with Bork's selection," Robertson said. "I think it was a magnificent appointment and I believe as soon as he is confirmed, and I can't imagine why he wouldn't be confirmed, it would mean the reversal of Roe v. Wade and the pro-life people would be very pleased about that."

Robertson said the problems of fellow evangelists Jim and Tammy the men tried to get air by jabbing the spike into the floorboard, but that it was much too late for the rest of them. "We all took turns, but as the wafer ran out, the others lost strength," he said.

"With the darkness inside, I couldn't tell about the others," he said. "I thought some of them would be alive, but when the doors were opened, they were all dead."

Two of the dead apparently were part of a smuggling ring and were guiding the others to the Dallas-Fort Worth area for $400 to $500 per person, said Hudspeth County Sheriff Dick Love.

"We do know someone had to close the door and lock it, and we know it had to be a smuggler," said Michael G. Wheat, an attorney for the Border Patrol's El Paso sector.

The boxcar was of a type "that once the door is closed, it automatically locks. You cannot open it from the inside. Whoever closed that door knew that," said Border Patrol agent M.S. Dudley.

Some of the men had been dead for several hours when the gruesome discovery was made at 7:20 a.m., six miles east of this town of 700 people, Wheat said. Tostado told investigators others were breathing up to an hour or two before, the attorney said.

"Everything is going very nicely," he said, adding that his support in Iowa, one of the first caucus states, is good.

ALIENS

As the heat grew in the boxcar, they began to shed clothing; some went into convulsions and died. It was very messy... and most don't have identification," Wheat said.

He said authorities are working with the Mexican consulate and other agencies to identify the victims.

Saathoff said he decided to inspect the boxcar after noticing one of the doors lacked a seal.

In addition to inspecting boxcars in Sierra Blanca, Border Patrol agents conduct similar checks at the El Paso yards, but the boxcar slipped through because the seal was intact on the side seen by agents, Wheat said.

"I could hear Miguel's pleas for help: 'Please help us. We need help,'" Saathoff said. "I opened the door and saw Miguel standing at the end of the door — he was very wet, in his underwear, crying some, visibly shook."

"There's blood on the floor," said Assistant Chief Patrol Agent William Harrington. "Some of their tongues are chewed. It's a gruesome sight."

The men were lured north from their Mexican homes by the promise of a better life in the United States, despite the new immigration law making it illegal to hire undocumented workers, Saathoff said. "There's nothing there, where they're from," he said.

Tostado is from the city of Povelon Artega in central Mexico. Six of the dead were also from Aguascalientes state, and six others were from the neighboring state of Zacatecas, said Beatrice Lopez Gargallo of the Mexican consulate in El Paso.

Tostado suffered no injuries, said Dr. Bill Lipsey, who examined the man. "He had apparent dehydration and oxygen deprivation, but he appeared to be largely recovered. His only complaint was that he felt weak," Lipsey said.

Last year, the Border Patrol apprehended 44,900 illegal aliens in El Paso train yards, 14 percent of the total 312,000 in the entire El Paso sector, said James Selbe, associate chief of the Border Patrol.

In April 1984, five Salvadorans were killed and six other aliens were injured near Kingsville, Texas, when a train drove through them as they marched across a railroad trestle.

During the Fourth of July weekend seven years ago, 13 people died attempting to cross the Organ Pipe Cactus National Monument in the Arizona desert. Authorities rescued 12 Salvadorans and two Mexican smugglers.

Poster Child visits Hereford, spreading word about epilepsy

Poster Child

Epilepsy Poster Child Janie Keys, seated, visits with local association representative Jeff Brown, of Hereford State Bank, and Donna West, of Brown, Graham and Company. Keys lives and attends school in Amarillo.

Janie Keys, poster child for the High Plains Epilepsy Foundation, spent some time in Hereford earlier this week. Fifteen-year-old Keys visited with Jeff Brown, local representative of the foundation, and Donna West, chairman of Pacesetters Division of United Way. The High Plains Epilepsy Foundation is a United Way Agency.

Keys said her job as poster child is to visit branch offices of the 26 counties involved in the area foundation and spread the word that epilepsy is caused by easily explained incidences and not something to cause shame. "The toughest part of having epilepsy," she said, "is overcoming the myths about it, for instance people used to believe that it was caused by devil possession and now we know it is caused by incidences such as a high fever or a blow to the head."

Keys says she takes a drug, Dilantin, to control her seizures and that her last seizure episode was two years ago. Though the drug has some adverse side effects Keys says it is worth the negative effects to be free of seizures which she describes as, "an electric sensation spreading throughout my body."

She was chosen as poster child for the agency through a series of interviews. "The judges were looking for someone who could talk openly about their experience with epilepsy," she comments.

Those interested in learning more about epilepsy and its medical control should contact the Amarillo office at 372-3891 or the local United Way Agency at 364-5220.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: The New Orleans Times Picayune runs a column called "Working Woman" by syndicated columnist Niki Scott. I hope you will find room for this piece in your space, Ann. I think it could cut down on the number of rapes in this country.—A Constant Reader

DEAR CONSTANT: What a splendid contribution. I thank you on behalf of all the women you have helped today. Thanks, too, to Universal Press Syndicate for permission to reprint this column.

A RAPIST TELLS YOU HOW TO AVOID HIM

"If you're a working woman, I'm looking for you, and you'd better hope I don't find you. I'm a rapist."

"I'm not going to tell you why I'm a rapist, but I'll say this. I do it because I like it. It's like hunting, but easier."

This is the way the letter began. It had no return address and arrived in an ordinary batch of mail. My heart stopped while I read it. I'm printing it because it rings true, and because although his boasting is frightening and infuriating, we can learn from it. We need all the help we can get. The letter continues:

"As I said, working women are my game, and they're usually pretty easy targets. Mostly that's because they travel by themselves, work by themselves and are so dumb about taking care of themselves."

"I live in a big city, but I often hunt in the suburbs. Small offices in big buildings or small businesses are good places to find women alone. That's where you might find me at the end of a day. Most of the time, a simple lock on the door stops me, and I stay away from places where I see people coming and going."

"I've never been caught, never even come close, and that's because I don't take stupid chances. I don't break in to get at a woman I want. Most often I can walk right in — or she lets me in."

"The thing is that I look pretty harmless and pretty ordinary. In fact, I try to look like I belong wherever I am. I'm neither big nor small. I'm deliberately clean cut. Nobody who knows me would think I'd do such a thing."

"Darkness is my friend, but I don't always hunt after dark. The end of the workday is my time. Everybody's too interested in getting the hell out to pay much attention to what's going on around them."

"Shopping centers around closing time are good, too. Many of the women I've raped came my way because they were dumb. They stayed late and parked a long way from the store. They locked their keys in their cars or left their lights on and ran the batteries down."

"I pick up women because of their situations, which I've studied before I move. Looks don't mean a lot to me, but she's always alone in a place where nobody else will come, or I get her to go to one. You'd be amazed how easy that is."

"About self-defense for women: Don't make me laugh. I don't go after a woman who looks like she'd be able to whip me in a fight."

"The best protection from me you working women have is company or a locked door you're smart enough not to open when I ask. More than that, the best protection from me is for you to remember there are lot of guys like me out there who are looking for you."

DEAR ANN LANDERS: When my husband and I go out for the evening it's in a dirty car, any old shirt will do, his patched slacks are good enough and his running shoes "feel great."

Where does he take me for dinner?

Either to a greasy spoon or some joint on the edge of town that the truckers think is terrific.

When he goes out with the boys on Friday night, he dresses to the nines, puts lifts in his shoes to appear taller and wears a man's girdle to pull in his gut. He sprays himself with cologne till I could gag, then heads for the carwash before meeting the guys.

Mr. Hot Shot rolls in at about 3 a.m., looking very rumpled and he's exhausted. I think I smell a rat. What say you?—Suspicious in Queens

DEAR SUS: A rat? Smells more like a skunk to me. And what kind of dumb bunny are you to put up with this garbage every Friday night? Sounds as if a nice long talk is overdue.

IS IT FAIR TO TAX YOUR INSURANCE POLICIES?

The Texas Legislature is now debating a 6% sales tax on your personal and business insurance. An attempt is being made to pass this law overnight before you can act.

$1.8 billion sales tax on insurance policies

A sales tax bill currently under consideration in the special legislative session in Austin would raise your insurance costs by 6%. This would include insurance policies on your home, your car, your property, your business, your life and health insurance and more.

HERE ARE THE FACTS:

- Texas would be the only state in the

- nation with a SALES TAX on insurance policies to be paid by YOU.
- Insurance premiums are already taxed and a sales tax would be DOUBLE TAXATION.
- This will be a MANDATORY TAX (most of us have to pay car insurance, liability, homeowner insurance, health and workers compensation insurance).

If you feel this PERSONAL, MANDATORY TAX is UNFAIR then call your state senator, then call Governor Clements. Do it now. They are debating this very minute in Austin! It is not too late. You can stop this DOUBLE TAXATION. You can stop state government from unfairly taxing you for protecting your family and property.

Can you afford not to call?

CALL YOUR STATE SENATOR TODAY!

Tracking education

The biggest pressure group operating in Austin right now is the education lobby which is pushing hard for more money for the schools of this state, both public schools and universities.

The plea is made that Texas has been stingy in supporting education and that the future of the state lies with better educational facilities. This despite that more than half of all state funds now goes to support education in one form or another.

Education is big business in Texas. Higher education alone includes more than 800,000 students, faculty and employees. The physical plant represents an investment of $7 billion in higher education provided by the taxpayers of Texas.

How has Texas supported higher education?

In 1960 the state appropriated $70 million for higher education.

In 1985 the state spent $2.4 billion in general revenue funds on higher education, an increase of 3,000 per cent.

The number of college students rose by 423 per cent while the population in Texas grew 65 percent from 1960 to 1985.

There are 98 institutions of higher learning in Texas, including 37 universities, 49 community colleges, 4 technical institutes, and 6 medical institutes.

These 98 institutions are governed by 16 boards of regents and 49 boards of trustees.

In all, the system of higher education costs $4.5 billion per year to operate.

This is hardly a stingy support of higher education.

In 1985 the legislature named a Select Committee on Higher Education, composed of leading citizens, and asked them to make a real study of higher education.

The committee came up with a number of recommendations but few have been put into effect, mainly because every institution affected has full time public relations people to lobby against reductions in funding, construction or personnel.

The committee found that because construction funds were easier to get than operating funds, many of our colleges have overbuilt and now face a problem of empty classrooms. This situation is not being corrected and colleges are still building.

The committee took a look at the budgets of both universities and public schools, finding that in most cases much more than half of the operating funds goes to finance administrative and support personnel rather than teaching personnel.

Education is vitally important to the state, of course, and when it comes to financially supporting education on any level there is a certain element of emotion that comes into play.

But there should not be any sacred cows in this state. Education will have to stand the scrutiny of cost cutting if it comes to that.

Helping homeless

The problem of the homeless in Texas is one that requires compassion for the bottom rung of society, but it's also one that requires common sense and the realization that tax dollars aren't limitless.

We hope that those latter requirements are considered when a state district court in Dallas rules on a class-action lawsuit filed on behalf of 14,000 homeless people who claim that state law guarantees them housing.

... The implication behind this suit is that homeless people can demand housing from a county as some sort of legal right — whether or not they are long-term residents of that county and whether they have any intention of doing anything to improve their lot on their own, and we find that implication appalling.

Honoring the dead

Tragedy is striking hard at the 49th Armored Division of the Texas National Guard as it undergoes its summer training at Fort Hood. Eleven members of the unit have died within three days.

Whether the incidents were caused by human errors or were unavoidable accidents, the deaths no doubt will have dramatic impact on the other members of the unit as well as on the unit's ability to recruit others.

One thing that must be remembered is that the 10 who died in the helicopter crash and the one who died and the five injured in the tank firing incident were civilians, pursuing civilian careers.

... But at the time of their deaths, they were soldiers, just as surely contributing to the defense effort as the fellow soldiers who have made the military a full-time career.

... We're grateful they were willing to serve. We honor their patriotism. We mourn their deaths.

The Penultimate Word

WITH FREEDOM'S HOLY NIGHT

It is the Fourth of July and time for fireworks, speeches, warnings about driving too fast or too drunk, and warnings about the dangers of fireworks.

This is also the time for columns about how great this country is or was. It is the time for sermons about how we are losing all that made us great. I hope this does not turn out to be a sermon.

I watched a TV show last night that featured the candidates for the presidential race on the Democratic ticket. Each man in turn made a nice little speech about what this country needs. In each case, what the country needed was him in the White House. There was the usual rhetoric. Politicians must be experts at almost saying something. These guys were good at it. They said nothing, but they said it so well.

While they were talking, I wrote out what I think this country needs or more than needs, must have if it is to be around for the generations to come. More than anything else we need honesty. We need someone to tell us the truth. Truth sets people free. The lack of truth is bondage.

The most dangerous statement I have read in my lifetime came from John F. Kennedy. He stated that he would lie to the American people if he thought it was in their best interest. He was not the first president to believe this, he was just the first one to put it in open policy.

When it became clear that our own government would lie to us, then our own government lost some of its ability to govern. The result is Vietnam Wars that no one believes in, and unrest on almost every front because of a lack of faith.

If the second coming happened, the cabinet would meet and immediately try to decide how to put the "best face on the situation." Best faces on situations are about to kill us. Democracy is the grandest experiment ever tried, but it is also the most dangerous and demanding.

Dangerous because if it doesn't work, then we are left adrift. Demanding because it requires a certain kind of people. The people in a democracy must be basically honest or it won't work. The government must have the trust of its people or it can not exist.

We sing about Freedom's Holy light. This light burns on the oil of honesty, or it does not burn at all. Give us truth.

U.S. Chamber Voice of Business Congress betraying the public trust

By RICHARD L. LESHER
PRESIDENT

WASHINGTON — "Roll out the barrel," goes the old Beer Barrel Polka, "we'll have a barrel of fun."

We should change the beer to pork and make that tune the official theme song of Congress. In the face of massive budget deficits, Members of Congress continue to wallow in the pork, squandering our tax dollars as if there were no tomorrow, all the while insisting they have cut spending as much as they can and have no choice but to raise taxes.

The latest chapter in pork is a supplemental appropriations bill now working its way through Congress. It includes $8 million to set up a national center for the study of weeds and $750,000 for a public education program to promote the merits of eating fish.

This follows on the heels of two major appropriations bills for highways and water projects, both loaded with billions in wasteful pet projects our country doesn't need. President Reagan vetoed those bills but Congress trampled his vetoes underfoot in its mania to squander the public's money.

Every year Congress wastes from $2 billion to $5 billion maintaining military bases our Defense Department neither needs nor wants. Since 1977, Congress has made it so expensive and time-consuming to shut down unneeded bases that the Pentagon doesn't even bother trying. The reason is simple enough. The obsolete bases—like the center for the study of weeds and the silly water and highway projects—are pork for members of Congress to bring home to their constituents.

Meanwhile, House Budget Chairman William Gray III goes around the country selling people the federal budget is "like a sponge that is being wrung dry" by domestic spending cuts. In truth, domestic spending to aid the poor and elderly grew 24 percent from 1982 to 1987, from $356.7 billion to $465.3 billion. Even adjusted for inflation, it rose 9 percent. If politicians are held in low esteem by the American people, it is not without reason. Congress complains about the deficit, but continues its merry, free-spending ways as if the deficit did not exist. Like the lemmings of Norway that plunge to self destruction in the seas, congress clings to its "anything goes" mentality, oblivious to the consequences. When President Reagan tries to interrupt the stream of waste Congress overwhelms his vetoes and proceeds quickly to approve even more pork.

There are some members of Congress who speak and vote against this madness, but they are obviously in a minority in both houses. The predominant ethic of Congress today is one of cynical hypocrisy, in which words bear no relation to deeds. You and I know our government is living beyond its means, but the message has clearly not reached our representatives in Congress. Their irresponsibility knows no bounds. They are betraying the public trust.

Bootleg Philosopher

Editor's note: The Bootleg Philosopher on his Deaf Smith County grass farm tries to come to the rescue of Congress this week.

o0o

Dear editor:

When Congress paints itself into a corner, you need to bear in mind it's the public's paint and the public's corner.

A couple of years ago Congress, unable to bring itself to reduce the deficit by voting, figured out a method to do it without voting, sort of. It passed the Gramm-Rudman bill saying the deficit absolutely had to be reduced by so much each year till it was wiped out, makes no difference whose toes get stepped on or whose pork barrel stays empty.

Here it is two years later, the deficit by order of Gramm-Rudman is supposed to be reduced by $108 billion, and it isn't by a long shot. Congress, you might say, is in contempt of Congress.

There's a simple way for Congress to get out of the corner it has painted itself into.

It should now vote a new measure, to go into effect next year, requiring it absolutely to live up to the mandate of the Gramm-Rudman bill it passed two years ago. To avoid confusion about which bill it's avoiding, Congress should call the new bill the Rudman-Grannm bill.

It's easy to remember: the Rudman-Grannm bill requires the enforcement of the Gramm-Rudman bill, which requires Congress to reduce the deficit by $108 billion.

If that doesn't work, the next bill in line could be the Grannm-Grannm bill, followed, when that doesn't work, by the Rudman-Rudman bill. Each bill requires the enforcement of the previous bill. Absolutely. No fooling around.

That ought to get Congress well into the 1990's, when the paint has long since dried enough to walk out on.

Yours faithfully,
J.A.

Creative Insights for Daily Living

By GARY L. CHRISTENSEN

FAITH: "VISION PLUS VALOR"

"Faith means vision plus value — vision to see what one desires to do, and courage sufficient to rally all one's physical, mental, moral and spiritual powers to drive him forward with irresistible determination until his dream has come true."

—William T. Tew, Jr., East Central States Mission Bulletin, Louisville, Ky., May 1940.

"Faith, as the Scripture uses the term, is that faculty of spiritual discernment. It is a mode of vision, but a vision that glimpses realities that no process of argumentation is competent to lead us up to. ... Faith is the eye through which the soul looks in its search for, and discovery of, the things which the natural eye hath not seen, nor the natural ear heard."

—Charles H. Parkhurst, Methodist Review, July 1911.

"Faith is the soul's eye. Faith never looks at itself, but at God in Christ."

—George F. Pentecost, The Independent, New York, March 9, 1882.

"Faith is responsiveness to the divine nature. It is belief in operation and is shown by works. It is the living truth shining in the soul of man with a divine radiance. It is a light which lights the way to God."

—Charles Fry, Autumn Leaves, Lamoni, Iowa, February 1914.

TODAY'S INSIGHT: Faith is a vision of the glory of God, discerning what the Lord would have us do, plus spiritual courage to do His will. With the eye of faith, we respond to the divine nature and in turn seek to have the Holy Spirit as our guide. "But without faith it is impossible to please him: for he that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him." (Hebrews 11:6.)

Obedience to His will puts into effect the promise in Joshua 1:9: "Be strong and of a good courage; be not afraid, neither be thou dismayed: for the Lord thy God is with thee whithersoever thou goest." Also: "Therefore being justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ: By whom also we have access by faith into this grace wherein we stand, and rejoice in hope of the glory of God." (Romans 5:1-2.)

"The Lord is my light." (Psalms 27:1.) We rejoice in gratitude for the light of the glory of God that shines on the path we walk. "God is light, and in him is no darkness at all. If we say that we have fellowship with Him, and walk in darkness, we lie, and do not the truth." (1 John 1:5-6.)

He who does "walk in the light of the Lord" (see Isaiah 2:5), is he who "walk(s) humbly with ... God." (Micah 6:8.) As William M. Anderson, Sr. wrote, "Walking in the light is walking where the righteousness of God has broken the darkness of sin." (Dallas Morning News, Nov. 6, 1922.) Faith in Christ is faith in the "Light of the World," for as He said, "I am the light of the world: he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life." (John 8:12.)

Carnahan, Fowler recite wedding vows

Pink gladioli and greenery decorated the altar at St. Anthony's Catholic Church Saturday afternoon as nuptials were recited by Janette Marie Carnahan and Eric Lynn Fowler, both of Hereford.

The ceremony was officiated by Father Bernard McGorry of the church. Altar servers included the bride's sons, Martin and Jason Carnahan.

The bride is the daughter of Charles and Geraldine Schlabs of Route 2 and the bridegroom is the son of Jerry Fowler of Amarillo and Dorothy Brownlow of Hereford.

Susan Stubbs served her sister as matron of honor and Mark Fowler served his brother as best man.

Guests were escorted by David Carnahan, Rodney Strafuss, Chip Formby and Dale Kleuskens.

The bride's children, Kristin and Daniel Carnahan, were junior bridal attendants. Jessica Stubbs, daughter of Billy and Susan Stubbs, was flower girl, and ring bearer was the bride's son, Andrew Carnahan.

Principal wedding selections were vocalized by Laura Schlabs with accompaniment provided by guitarist, Shannon Wilburn, and Carolyn Evers. Musical numbers performed included "The Wedding Song", "All I Ask Of You", "The Gift Of Love", "On Eagle's Wings" and "I Could Never Promise You."

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was attired in a dark rose tea-length taffeta dress covered entirely by cream rose embroidered lace. It was fashioned with elbow-length sleeves, free standing collar and was trimmed with pearls at the yoke, collar and waist. She designed and made the dress.

Her hairpiece of roses was accented with baby's breath, pearls and ribbon. She carried a cascading arrangement of minuet roses entwined with baby's breath.

Bridal attendants wore dark rose taffeta tea-length dresses fashioned with matching tulle yoke trim and elbow-length sleeves.

Amy Horton invited guests to register at the reception held in St. Anthony's cafeteria.

Cake, punch and coffee were served by Jeanne Landers, Margaret Williams, Susan Brownlow and Becky Brownlow.

The wedding cake was the focal point of the refreshment table which was covered with a dark rose cloth and white lace overlay. It was appointed by a five-taper crystal candelabra.

The couple left for a wedding trip to Cancun, Mexico.

The bride is engaged in farming south of Hereford and the bridegroom is employed as an automotive technician at Stagner-Orsborn Buick-Pontiac-GMC.

Out-of-town wedding guests were Mr. and Mrs. Bud Pepper and Mr. and Mrs. Richard Best.

Preparing For Renovations

Brenda Martinez (front) and Trina Morgan began preparing for renovations on the chapel at Deaf Smith General Hospital. The girls are members of the Catholic Youth Organization at St. Anthony's Catholic Church. The summer project is aimed to redecorate the chapel with new carpet, wallpaper, stained glass windows, pews and cushions, an altar table and Bibles.

Hospital chapel to be transformed by youth

The youth group of St. Anthony's Catholic Church, the CYO, will be busy throughout the summer renovating the chapel of Deaf Smith General Hospital.

Letters were sent out by the youth last week to other Hereford churches soliciting aid for the $2,500 project through monetary donations. In the planning stage for the past two years, the youth hope to have renovation efforts completed sometime in August.

A plaque within the chapel will give recognition to all youth groups and/or churches who participate.

According to Judy Detten, Carmen Flood, and Loretta Urbanczyk, organizers of the project, several items will be added to the chapel including carpet, wallpaper, stained glass windows, pews and cushions, an altar table, and Bibles.

Anyone wishing to help with these efforts may contact Detten at 364-2700; Urbanczyk, 276-5303; or St. Anthony's Catholic Church at 364-6150. Deadline is July 15.

"Animal Antics"

The Deaf Smith County Library's Summer Reading Club entitled, "Animal Antics" is in full-swing. The program will continue until July 18th. We currently have over 830 children enrolled in the program.

On July 7th, we will be having our "Animal Antics" stamp program. It will begin at 10:00 a.m. in the parking lot of the library. Each child will get to create their own "animal antics" rubber stamp and create a rainbow colored paper sack with their animal.

Please remind your children to wear old clothes because we will be using paints. If you have any questions please feel free to call the library or come in for a visit.

When it comes to cattle, Melvin Cordray is one of the best. Melvin has spent the past 50 years in the cattle feeding business; 25 of that right here in Hereford. He has helped revolutionize the industry in this part of the country. And although he's now retired, his methods are still standard practice in the cattle feeding business.

Melvin now spends his time as a team roper on the oldtimer's rodeo circuit. He has a number of champion buckles and is considered "one of the youngest 75 year-olds you'll ever meet."

Melvin and his wife, Freda, have banked with us since the day they moved to Hereford. We are proud they chose the First National Bank and thankful for their contribution to the future of this area.

Tab Hathaway, Vince Castillo, Chris Vallejo, Tim Burkhalter, Ralph Holguin, Michael Cano. Manuel Cantu is the Ranger coach and Tony Castillo is assistant.

Davis' 9th-inning homer sparks Astros past Phillies

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Houston's Glenn Davis tried to be unemotional about his two-out, ninth-inning home run that snapped reliever Steve Bedrosian's major-league record save streak.

"I'm a power hitter, and he's a power pitcher," Davis said Thursday night after his three-run blow rallied the Astros to a 7-6 victory over Bedrosian and the Philadelphia Phillies.

"He just got one right over the plate," Davis said.

Bedrosian, too, took the cool approach.

"Those things happen," said the reliever, who was one out away from his 14th save in as many consecutive appearances.

"It was a fastball right down the middle," Bedrosian lamented. "I would like to have had it a little more outside."

"I'll just have to bounce back tomorrow (Friday), keep battling."

Davis came up in the top of the ninth, two runners on and the Astros trailing the Phillies 6-4.

Bedrosian threw one pitch and Davis hit it for his 15th home run of the season and a Houston victory.

The Astros' comeback snapped a three-game losing streak and ended Philadelphia's five-game winning string. Davis was asked what he was thinking as he stepped in against the streaking Bedrosian.

"I was trying not to think," the Houston first baseman said. "He throws hard. His fastball moves and he has a good breaking ball. He's been pitching well, doing something right."

Bedrosian last Monday broke the major-league record of 11 consecutive saves in as many appearances, set in 1973 by Sparky Lyle of the New York Yankees. Bedrosian followed that with his 13th.

Denny Walling started the Astros' ninth with a single. After Terry Puhl popped out, Bill Doran singled and Walling stopped at second. Kevin Bass fled out.

Davis then hit that first pitch over the left field fence for three runs and a 7-6 lead. The blow gave the Astros home runs in seven straight games, a club record.

Larry Andersen, 6-4, pitched the eighth to earn the victory. Reliever Dave Smith retired the Phillies in order in the ninth for his 15th save.

Bedrosian, 3-2, with an NL-tying 20 saves, suffered the loss.

It was Bedrosian's first loss since April 14 against the New York Mets. Davis' homer was the first given up by the right-hander since Alan Ashby hit one May 11 at Houston.

Houston Manager Hal Lanier scratched his head and commented, "There are not too many times that you're going to do that with Steve out there...."

"The odds were not too good in our favor the way Steve has been throwing. It's just one of those things that happen. With a lead in the ninth he'll usually close it down."

"This time our hitter won out."

From May 8 until Thursday, Bedrosian was 1-0 with 19 saves and an 0.91 ERA.

The Phillies knocked out Houston starter Bob Knepper in the fifth and took a 6-4 lead.

Saberhagen back on track as Royals roll over Twins

By KEN RAPPOPORT AP Sports Writer

Kansas City's Bret Saberhagen is trying to forget last season. He's doing a pretty good job so far of making everyone else forget it, too.

"It's a great feeling to go out there and pitch as consistently as I have so far," Saberhagen said after leading the Royals to a 10-3 victory over the Minnesota Twins Thursday night.

The triumph was the 10th straight at Royals Stadium for Saberhagen, who raised his major league-leading record to 14-2 while maintaining a solid 2.22 earned run average.

That's quite a change from last year's 7-12 record, and more like the 20-6 mark he recorded in 1985 while winning the American League Cy Young Award.

Saberhagen gave up nine hits, struck out five and did not walk a batter in gaining his 10th complete game, tops in the American League.

Saberhagen got offensive support from Jim Eisenreich, who hit a three-run homer and drove in a career-high four runs.

Indians 2, White Sox 1

Tony Bernazard had four hits, including a run-scoring single that broke a 1-1 tie in the bottom of the 11th.

Doug Jones, 1-1, Cleveland's fourth pitcher, pitched a perfect 11th to earn the victory.

Cory Snyder beat out an infield single against Bob James, 2-4, to start the 11th and moved to second on Chris Bando's sacrifice bunt. One out later, Bernazard singled home Snyder with the winning run.

Cleveland loaded the bases with none out in the bottom of the 10th but failed to score when Brook Jacoby hit into a third-to-home double play and Mel Hall popped out.

Julio Franco gave the Indians a 1-0 lead in the first with his fifth homer. The White Sox tied it on Ozzie Guillen's sacrifice fly in the fifth.

Mariners 5, Tigers 2

Lee Guetterman pitched a five-hitter and Phil Bradley and Dave Valle hit solo home runs for Seattle. Guetterman, 6-1, shut the Tigers down except for a two-run homer by Larry Herndon. The 28-year-old left-hander struck out five, walked two and recorded 14 groundouts.

Frank Tanana, 7-5, lost for the Tigers, allowing seven hits, striking out two and walking three in 7 1-3 innings.

The Mariners scored in the first inning on Valle's seventh home run of the year and in the third on Bradley's sixth homer.

The Tigers tied the score in the fourth on Herndon's fifth home run, following a walk to Alan Trammell. But the Mariners put the game out of reach in the fifth inning on an RBI double by Bradley, a sacrifice fly by Jim Presley and a run-scoring wild pitch by Tanana.

Athletics 5, Red Sox 3

Jose Canseco hit a tie-breaking leadoff home run in a three-run eighth inning and Joaquin Andujar pitched a six-hitter to pace Oakland.

Andujar, 3-1, pitched his first complete game since Sept. 27, 1986, walking two and striking out six.

Al Nipper, 7-7, gave up Canseco's 15th homer in the eighth. Reliever Calvin Schiraldi later uncorked a wild pitch for another Oakland run and then gave up an RBI single by Tony Phillips. Mike Greenwell cut Oakland's lead to 5-3 with his 10th homer in the ninth inning.

Trailing 2-0 in the fifth, the Red Sox tied the game when Marc Sullivan hit a two-run homer, only his second of the season.

Angels 9, Brewers 7

Rookie Mark McLemore hit his first major league home run, a two-run shot with two out in the bottom of the 13th inning for California.

The winning shot came on a 1-1 pitch from reliever Mark Clear, 5-4, who entered the game in the 13th. The victory went to Chuck Finley, 1-3, who pitched the last four innings, allowing one hit.

Navratilova wins battle of 'queens'

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — It was a Wimbledon semifinal between the two queens of tennis. And a real princess was there to see it.

Martina Navratilova and Chris Evert, rivals who have graced the Centre Court at Wimbledon for 14 years, came back for their 73rd career meeting Thursday and served up a tennis feast.

For just over two hours, they held a captive crowd, which included Britain's Princess Diana, spellbound.

At the end, both agreed they had produced something special.

"It might have been the best match we have ever played," Navratilova said after her 6-2, 5-7, 6-4 victory that sent her into Saturday's championship match against Steffi Graf, her heir apparent.

"It was certainly the best match the two of us have ever played on grass," Evert said.

The men's semifinals were to take center stage today, featuring two players who have been there many times and two relative newcomers to final four of the Grand Slam event.

Ivan Lendl, the world's No. 1 player but still searching for a Wimbledon title, was to go against Stefan Edberg of Sweden. They were to be followed by Pat Cash of Australia and American Jimmy Connors, gunning for his third Wimbledon title just two months short of his 35th birthday.

Lendl, winner of two U.S. Opens and three French Opens, was making his fourth Wimbledon semifinal appearance in five years. Edberg, a two-time Australian Open titlist, was in his first.

Connors, who came back from the brink of elimination in the fourth round and then breezed past Slobodan Zivjajnovic in the quarterfinals, was playing in the semifinals for the 11th time. Cash, who lost just one set in his first five matches, has been there once before, in 1984.

The winners meet for the title on Sunday.

The way Graf reached the final could not have been in sharper contrast as she took just 51 minutes to thrash Pam Shriver 6-0, 6-2.

At 18, Graf will displace Navratilova as No. 1 in the world if the West German wins on Saturday.

"Everyone wants to be No. 1 and I want it too," Graf said. "But I'm going to be in tennis a long time."

Navratilova, who has not won a tournament this year, said she could not remember the last time she played so well.

"I'm flying now," she said after beating Evert. "On a sustained level, this was the best I've played for a long time because I never let up."

The 30-year-old Czech-born American, going for a record sixth consecutive Wimbledon title, said she felt "as athletic as I have in a long time, quick and agile and eager."

She had to be, because Evert threw everything into the match.

"I can't play any better," the 32-year-old American said. "This is her best surface. I feel proud of myself. Today, I played really, really well and I can't ask more of myself."

Evert, who has hinted many times this year at retirement, said she also was disappointed not to have had the chance to win Wimbledon for a fourth time.

But, she said, she was satisfied with the way she lost.

Navratilova said beating Evert took the gloss off reaching the final.

"I had tears in my eyes at the finish but ... it was for Chris losing," she said. "I really wished she could win this tournament one more time."

Stretching her unbeaten streak to 45 unbeaten matches, Graf said she was surprised how easily she coped with her first Wimbledon semifinal.

"I thought I had a good chance but I never thought it would be this easy," she said.

Future Track Star

A familiar face at the Hereford Track Club workouts is Tavares Colvin, who will be three years old this month. Tavares is just tall enough to peer over a hurdle now, but he may be a track star of the future. The Hereford summer team will enter the TAAF Meet at Texas Tech July 11.

Softball tourney slated

The Vega Softball Tournament has been scheduled for July 11-12 for men's Class C and D teams. It was announced this week by tourney chairmen Jackie Mercer and Jimmy Ramirez of Hereford.

Deadline for entries is July 8 at 10 p.m. and entry fee is $100 per team. Team trophies will be awarded for the top four places, and individual trophies will go to the first and second-place most valuable players.

One division will be for Class C and D teams, and another for Class C (one homerun hitter). To enter or get more details, call 364-5962 or 364-6388.

Hereford YMCA to conduct week of tennis lessons here

A week of tennis lessons has been scheduled by the Hereford and Vicinity YMCA on Aug. 3-7, at the Hereford High School tennis courts.

There will be classes for boys and girls, and also classes for adults. Youth ages seven to 18 may sign up for the classes for boys and girls.

The instructor will be Ruben Vargas. Time schedules are 9 a.m. to 10 a.m. for the youth lessons and 7 p.m. to 8 p.m. for the adult lessons.

Registration deadline for the tennis lessons is July 31. Registration fees are $8 for YMCA members and $16 for YMCA non-members. For more information on the tennis lessons, contact the YMCA at 364-6990. Registration forms are available at the YMCA.

Entry deadline set for final junior rodeo series

Registration ends Aug. 13 for the concluding performances of the 1987 Hereford Junior Rodeo Series set for Aug. 14-15.

Performances are Friday and Saturday at 7 p.m. at the Hereford Riders Club Arena.

After the two performances, the trophy saddles will be awarded to the high point cowboy and cowgirl in the 8-18 age group. The high point winner in the under 7-years group will receive a breast collar.

Events, varied among age group and gender, are: barrel race, pole bending, flag race, calf riding, steer riding, steer daubing, bull riding, breakaway roping, ribbon roping, calf roping, steer roping, goat tying, goat undecorating and junior jackpot team roping.

Entry fees range from $5 to $20. Some events are not available to all age groups.

Each night the children six and under may try for a first place belt buckle in a stick horse race. No entry fee is charged.

Children 12-years-old and under can compete for $5 to be awarded each night.

Gate admission for each performance is $3 for adults and $1 for senior citizens.

Call-ins for entries are being taken at 276-5645.

Motorcycle training set at TSTI in Amarillo

AMARILLO -- Texas State Technical Institute will conduct Motorcycle Operator Training from 6 to 10 p.m. Fridays and from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturdays—July 10-11 and July 17-18.

Certified instructors provide classroom and on-cycle training in the 20-hour course. Motorcycles and helmets will be provided.

The course, which is approved by the Texas Department of Public Safety and the Motorcycle Safety Foundation, is required for 15 to 17 year olds prior to obtaining a license to operate a motorcycle in Texas. It is designed to teach safe and efficient operation of a motorcycle in traffic.

Eight hours of classroom instruction stresses protective equipment, basic operational procedures, safety habits and riding strategies. The 12 hours of on-cycle training helps develop basic operational skills such as braking, turning and hazard avoidance techniques.

Graduates receive a patch, a decal, a course completion certificate and insurance discounts at some companies.

Cost of the program is $40 per person. For additional information, contact Bert Pinales in the TSTI Special Program Office or call 335-2316 ext. 346.

Kiwanians Hear Buff Talk

An overview of the progress of the West Texas State University athletic program was presented to the Hereford Kiwanis Club Thursday by Bruce Grimes, athletic director. Visiting after the program were Bill Kelly, WTSU head football coach; Grimes, and Steve Nieman, program chairman and a past WTSU ex-student chairman.

Grimes praises commitment, integrity of Buff athletic staff

Bruce Grimes, vice president for external affairs and athletic director at West Texas State University, was guest speaker at the regular weekly luncheon meeting of the Hereford Kiwanis Club Thursday in the Community Center.

Grimes, accompanied by head football coach Bill Kelly, reviewed the things accomplished the past two years in the athletic program and praised the current staff as one "seeking a commitment to excellence and integrity."

Grimes pointed out that Kelly is the first WTSU grid coach in 15 years to put together back-to-back winning seasons. "His philosophy is that losing is no accident and neither is winning," said Grimes. Grimes added that the new basketball coach, Mark Adams, "brings a tremendous amount of respect to the program." He also praised new volleyball coach Kim Hudson as being "a fine addition and doing a great job recruiting."

Grimes also spoke briefly about the college being under investigation by the NCAA for basketball infractions. It will be the end of August before all the allegations are released, according to Grimes. "Whatever it takes, we will put everything on the table and deal with the problem," he said. He added that no individuals under investigation are still on the campus.

The athletic director announced that a Hall of Champions is to be installed at WTSU. "It's long overdue and we're starting this year. We will name 15 old timers, up to 1946, then we'll add more the following year." Grimes said the athletic stars will be required to be out of the university five years before becoming eligible for the Hall.

In other business at the club meeting Thursday, Key Club member Shawn Moore announced that the book, "Casey Wayne", is now available for distribution and sale. The book, written by Dorman Smith of Hereford, is about the tragic death of his son and how the family and friends coped with the trauma and grief.

The book will sell for $10, or three for $25, and all proceeds after printing costs will go to the Casey Smith Memorial Scholarship Fund. The book is on sale in several locations around Hereford.

Sindelar cards one-stroke lead in Canadian Open

OAKVILLE, Ontario (AP) — Joey Sindelar followed his game plan — a domination of the par-5 holes — to a one-stroke lead after the opening round of the $600,000 Canadian Open Golf Tournament.

"The key was that I hit my best tee shots on the par fives, which you kind of look to as the pick-up holes," the long-hitting Sindelar said after he shot a 4-under-par 68 in cold, misty weather Thursday.

Those big drives enabled him to hit irons to greens of all four of the long holes and he played those four holes five under par.

He had three two-putt birdies and rolled in a 25-foot eagle putt on the final hole that lifted him from one stroke behind to one in front of Tom Purtzer.

"You know that on a day like this — cold and windy and rainy — that half the field isn't going to play well," Sindelar said. "You know that you're not going to get around without making some mistakes, making some bogeys. So you look to the par fives to offset those mistakes."

Sindelar, winner of two titles in 1985, made his share of mistakes. He three-putted twice and on two other occasions he one-putted for bogey. But his domination of the par-5s — plus three other birdies — more than made up for it.

Purtzer, winner of two tournaments in a 12-year PGA Tour career, used a birdie-birdie finish for a 69 that left him alone in second.

But while Sindelar followed his plan — mistakes and all — to perfection, Jack Nicklaus was unable to make his scheme work.

Nicklaus, seven times a runner-up but not yet a winner of this national championship, came to the 18th tee at two under par and very much among the leaders.

He considered hitting a wood for his second shot, over water, to the par-5 finishing hole.

"Under the conditions, I figured it was a gamble, and not a good gamble," he said.

So he played it safe. But his 5-iron lay-up shot found the deep, wet rough. And he dumped his third shot, a wedge, into the lake. It led to a double bogey-7 and a par round of 72.

Leading the group at 70 was Richard Zokol, attempting to become the first Canadian to win this national championship since 1954.

"I just want to continue to play good, basic golf and try not to put too much pressure on myself," said Zokol, who was tied for third with defending champion Bob Murphy, Steve Pate and left-hander Ernie Gonzalez.

Hispanic cowboys modernize Old West

By CARLOS VIDAL GRETH Austin American-Statesman

RAYMONDVILLE, Texas (AP) — Antonio Salinas, a cowhand since he was 10, puts a modern twist on vaquero traditions. He favors a gimme cap over a straw hat. Instead of strumming an acoustic guitar by the campfire, he plays electric bass for a conjunto band in town.

His description of his job as foreman of El Devisadero Ranch in South Texas, however, proves that some things never change.

"A foreman has to know the land, cattle and most of all how to get vaqueros to work," said Salinas, 49. "You don't have to be tougher than they are. Just smarter."

South Texas Hispanic-owned ranches such as El Devisadero are worked by men who are heirs to a tradition dating to the 16th century, when Spaniards brought the first horses and cattle to the New World. Though today's vaqueros use the latest techniques, they are proud of their place in the history of ranching.

The 7,200-acre Devisadero Ranch is a remnant of a 584,496-acre land grant given to Narciso Cavazos in 1792 by the King of Spain. Francisco Yturria, ancestor of present-day administrator Martin Garcia, acquired part of the spread from Cavazos' heirs in 1868.

One of Garcia's favorite stories about Yturria involves a royal mix-up in sleeping accommodations. Yturria ordered a bed from France at the same time Emperor Maximilian of Mexico ordered a four-poster bed for his palace. When he uncrated the four-poster masterpiece, Yturria was surprised to see the archduke of Austria's coat of arms on the headboard. Though the coat of arms was sent to Maximilian, the bed has remained in the Yturria family to this day.

Garcia, a veterinarian who runs an up-to-date ranch, recalled a period in the 1960s when he experienced a touch of old vaquero ways. Six single hands were staying in the bunkhouse. Far from home and family, they picked tearful melodies on their guitars in the evenings.

"It was like a page out of J. Frank Dobie," he said. "There's not much of that lifestyle left. Today vaqueros have trucks. Town draws them like a magnet after the day's work is done. But they still prefer to live in the quiet of the ranch."

Garcia's foreman, Antonio Salinas, lives on the spread with his wife and six children. His eldest son, Antonio Salinas Jr., also works on El Devisadero. Like dad, Junior (as he is affectionately known) started riding and roping young.

A modern vaquero, Salinas, 27, is as good a mechanic as he is a horseman. He has won mud races in Edinburg, El Ranchito and San Benito with his custom four-wheel drive truck. "It can pull, boy," he said. "I've taken out tree stumps with it."

But he also enjoys more traditional vaquero activities. "We compete when we're working cattle to see who can tie a calf fastest. We don't bet because vaqueros never have any money."

Salinas would like to see his son Leroy, 7, go into ranching one day. "He's already roping goats," he said.

Vaqueros have no job security or career opportunities. But money isn't their primary motivation. Salinas' colleague, Jose Alderete, dropped out of the ninth grade 11 years ago to work as a vaquero. He supplements his meager income by breaking horses for area ranchers.

"I'm not planning to ever get married," he said. "I can't support a wife. Maybe that's why there aren't many like me. You can only find us on ranches like this or in bars like the Paradise in Raymondville."

Fausto Yturria, a direct descendant of Francisco Yturria, is a member of one of the few prominent Hispanic ranching families north of the Rio Grande. His brother, Frank, manages a 22,000-acre operation in Willacy and Kenedy counties. Their northern fence forms the south boundary with one of the King Ranch spreads.

"I've wondered how a man with a Spanish name could be so successful in the 1800s," said Fausto Yturria, 52. "Francisco Yturria counted among his friends (cattle barons) Capt. Richard King and Miffin Kenedy. I think it was because he judged people on an individual basis, no matter what their color."

He recalled four-day roundups on the ranch during the 1940s. The cooks grilled carne asada and brewed giant chaldrons of beans at the chuckwagons. Inevitably one vaquero would challenge another and soon there would be a mini-rodeo in the cattle pens.

"The vaquero was a folk hero who killed pumas and fought Indians with his bare hands," Yturria said. "There are still vaqueros today who play the part. Their high-heeled boots are made in Matamoros or Chihuahua. They listen to ranchero music, not George Strait."

But Yturria sees little romance in modern ranching. "These days roundups are accomplished with two 'copter pilots and two cowhands. It's cheaper to go to Whataburger in Raymondville. And the vaqueros get riled if they don't get their burgers in a few minutes. That's how life has changed, not just in ranching, but everywhere."

But there is a marked difference in style at Hispanic ranches. For example, at a roundup at the Guerra Brothers Ranch in Linn (north of Edinburg) two years ago, the ranchers included fajitas, mariachis and a pre-sale fiesta in the schedule. The brochure for the event had more photos of family and children than bulls and heifers.

The ranch was started by a merchant named Arcadio Guerra. His sons, Arcadio Jr. and Rafael, were the original Guerra brothers. Rafael recalled how the ranch got started:

"My father accepted livestock in exchange for store items. The place came to be known as La Reforma Ranch. Before that, most of the ranches were named after saints. My dad said he wanted to reform things, in the manner of the Mexican Revolution."

Today Rafael and Carmen Chapa Guerra's children run the 20,000-acre ranch, which has 1,500 head.

"Before the Depression, people in the Valley were happy," Guerra said. "They didn't realize they were poverty-stricken until Yankees told them they didn't have anything. People left the ranches for town because tortillas and chiles weren't enough any more."

He harbors some bitter feelings toward Anglo immigrants. "Anglos coming from other parts of the country thought we were peons. They wouldn't mix with us, except that most of their workers were of Mexican descent. It wasn't as bad as apartheid in South Africa, but it was bad."

Guerra, 72, said there's no such thing as an "old vaqueros home." The retired vaquero doesn't have a pension and never made enough money to put aside for retirement, so he must rely on his family for support.

"Put out to pasture, an old vaquero doesn't last long," Guerra said.

Agriculture

Lending practices for farmers to be surveyed

COLLEGE STATION — Upcoming surveys of Texas producers and agricultural lenders are aimed at learning more about current lending practices as well as farmers' attitudes on risk management strategies.

The two surveys are a cooperative effort of staff members of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service and the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station and should provide the basis for future programming efforts to help producers deal with such key issues as diversification, competitiveness and profitability, and financial planning and management.

A special grant to the Texas A&M University System is supporting the two surveys.

Questionnaires will be sent to some 500 agricultural lenders and to about 2,500 producers in these production regions: Panhandle, Cross Timbers, Central Texas Blacklands, Upper Coast and Coastal Bend. Although the Cross Timbers Region is being surveyed now, the survey of the remaining regions is scheduled to begin about July 10.

"The surveys are aimed at obtaining current information regarding lending policies and producers' attitudes about alternative risk management strategies," points out Dr. Ashley Lovell of Stephenville, Extension Service economist who is assisting with the study.

"We want to determine the extent to which lenders influence the decision-making process of agricultural producers," notes Lovell. "To what extent are lenders' policies limiting the amount of funds provided for buying inputs such as fertilizer, herbicide, insecticide, seed and crop insurance? Policies regarding forward contracting or hedging the selling price of commodities as well as emphasis on enterprise diversification and farm program participation also enter into the total risk management picture."

According to Lovell, the array of risk management choices that some producers have are dependent upon lender policies, and these policies have a major impact on how successful farm managers are in earning profits to handle debt for financing their operations. And due to the risk associated with increased use of debt, many agricultural lenders are continuing to review and modify their policies.

"It's important that we get a better understanding of the perceptions as well as the realities of producers' and lenders' roles in risk management choices so that we can better direct educational efforts toward assisting both of these groups," says Lovell.

Information from the producers' survey should help producers in the use of alternative risk management strategies, the economist points out. On the other hand, the results of the lenders' survey should contribute to a better understanding of lending policies in the current agricultural climate and emerging changes in lending practices.

Agricultural businesses to gather

LUBBOCK — International trade and agricultural exports will be the focal point of this year's Texas Agricultural Forum here July 13. The forum, an assembly of leaders from agriculture, agribusiness and government, will be at the Holiday Inn-Civic Center, 801 Avenue Q.

Featured speakers will include U.S. Rep. Glenn English of Oklahoma and Ann Veneman, assistant administrator of the Foreign Agricultural Service.

Area producers and businessmen are invited to attend the forum and share information.

English will present a Congressional perspective on international trade. Veneman will discuss multilateral trade negotiations in Uruguay.

Other speakers include Dr. Mechele S. Paggi, Texas Agricultural Extension Service economist in international trade, discussing the current status and related issues in agricultural exports. Ed Jaenke, president of E.A. Jaenke and associates, Washington, D.C., will discuss the U.S. agricultural stake in the Third World. The role of state governments in trade will be presented by Paul Lewis, director of foreign exports for the Texas Department of Agriculture, Austin.

The Texas Agricultural Forum provides an opportunity for producers, agribusiness representatives, government officials and community leaders to come together and examine issues affecting the vital industry of food and fiber production and distribution, said Clemon L. Montgomery, executive vice president of the Texas Cotton Seed Crushers Association and chairman of the Forum. The programs each year are held at various locations throughout the state to encourage broad participation.

Wet weather may have brought murky problems to soybeans. Many farmers are noticing germination problems with the 1987 soybean crop. It seems the wet 1986 fall may have produced a fungus known as phomopsis or pod and stem blight. This condition can seriously reduce the germination and early vigor of soybeans used for seed. Experts say the only way a farmer can know for certain the condition of his soybean seeds is to have them laboratory tested for germination. If tested below 85%, they urge buying seed from a commercial seed company. However, the farmer must also inspect the commercial seeds. Bagged beans may also be plagued with pod and stem with some companies bagging seed below the 85% germination. Happily for all of us soybean users, seed companies are required to state the germination factor on each bag. Experts believe spending the extra care in choosing soybean seeds can guarantee over 90% germination on all leading varieties.

Device Increases Gas Mileage By 22%

With the oil glut worse than ever and OPEC wringing its hands, on July 11th, the government awarded National FuelSaver Corp. $22,000 for developing a simple automotive accessory that increases gas mileage by 22 percent.

Called the Platinum GasSaver, it injects microscopic quantities of platinum into the airstream entering the engine.

The injector itself only takes minutes to install, while the platinum entering the engine increases the percentage of each gallon burning in the engine from the normal 68 percent to 90 percent.

Normally that 22 percent would only burn when it came in contact with the platinum-coated surfaces of the catalytic converter. But with the GasSaver introducing the platinum into the engine, platinum catalysis can now burn that fuel in the engine where the release of that heat and energy is harnessed to drive that vehicle.

With 22 percent more of each gallon burning in the engine, 22 percent fewer gallons are required.

The process works on both leaded and unleaded gasoline, and meets EPA and California standards.

Federal Judge Walter J. Skinner concluded the five-year administrative procedure studying the GasSaver by stating, "Independent testing shows greater fuel savings with the GasSaver than the 22 percent claimed by its developer, National FuelSaver Corp."

In another study concluded recently, the government confirmed that the Platinum GasSaver raises the octane of gasoline, eliminating the need for premium gasoline.

Joel Robinson, the developer, commented, "We've already sold over 70,000 GasSavers. Ironically, we find more people buying the GasSaver for its third benefit of extending engine life, than buy it for fuel savings or octane boosting. Ever since our economy became battered by OPEC in 1973, we were convinced it would be a small company like ourselves that would reverse the trend of higher fuel costs."

Poultry boycott urged by group

WASHINGTON (AP) — A consumer group is asking for a nationwide boycott of poultry to protest the spread of food poisoning organisms in the nation's food supply, just as millions of families look forward to backyard Fourth of July barbecues.

Rodney E. Leonard, head of the private, non-profit Community Nutrition Institute, called for the boycott.

A broiler industry spokesman called the boycott plan "irresponsible and a gross disservice to the consumer."

Chicken is "safe, wholesome, nutritious and low-cost," said Mahlon Burnette, a food scientist and technical adviser for the National Broiler Council. The boycott planned by Leonard got no support from other consumer groups, which "have been trying to talk him out of it," said Burnette.

"He asked all these other groups to support him on the boycott and they all told him he was crazy... They've been trying for the last week to talk him out of it. He's going to take an action which the legitimate consumer community does not support," Burnette said.

The exact extent of bacterial contamination in poultry is unclear. However, estimates have ranged from 35 percent to 60 percent nationally. Salmonella and other organisms can be spread when slaughtered birds are put through eviscerating machines and contents of intestines are spilled.

Industry officials say the microorganisms exist in nature and are found in all raw animal products. Proper cooking takes care of the problem, they say.

Meanwhile, a coalition of 21 consumer organizations — which did not include CNI — urged in a letter to the Agriculture Department that all fresh poultry and meat be labeled with cooking and handling instructions to reduce the risk of illness from salmonella and other microorganisms that cause food poisoning.

The coalition proposed that labels state:

"Notice: This food may be contaminated with harmful bacteria. Cook thoroughly. Wash hands, dishes and implements with soap and water immediately after contact with raw product."

Michael Jacobsen, executive director of the Center for Science in the Public Interest, one of the groups in the coalition, said the first line of defense against food contamination should be clean farms and processing plants.

"But until we have that, we must activate the last line of defense: the consumer," he said. "Labels on poultry and meat would remind consumers when they are in the kitchen of the need for extra care."

A report by the National Research Council, part of the National Academy of Sciences, said in May that poultry is nutritious and constitutes a valuable part of the diet. But it also warned that so many of the 4 billion chickens eaten by Americans each year are carriers of food poisoning organisms that the federal inspection system cannot provide effective health protection to consumers.

One of the recommendations of the council, later supported by USDA officials in congressional hearings, was to put warning labels on chickens to tell shoppers how to cook the birds properly, thus avoiding possible ill effects.

Sheila Foley, a CNI spokeswoman, said Leonard and others decided to go "right to the source of the problem" of salmonella contamination in poultry by calling for a boycott.

"Obviously, we believe that any steps that will keep people from getting sick are important and that the labeling is a legitimate option," she said. "But we really feel that the burden of activity needs to be with the industry rather than with the consumer."

Burnette said the industry has been providing cooking and handling information in one form or another for about 15 years.

The council prefers using brochures and forms other than labels, which can be lost or overlooked in the kitchen mess of unwrapping chicken, he said. Even so, the council has approved a new voluntary program to help educate consumers about the proper handling of poultry, including informational labels or tags.

Management changes announced

Amarillo-based Friona Industries, L.P., one of the largest agribusiness operations headquartered in West Texas announced the new composition of its board and realignment of its senior management.

William L. Graham of Amarillo has been elected to the positions of Chairman and Chief Executive Officer for Cattle Resources, Inc., Friona's General Partner. Graham is a director of Texas Commerce Bank of Amarillo and is a Commissioner of the Texas Parks and Wildlife Commission. He is also a Trustee Emeritus of Ducks Unlimited. Graham previously served as Chairman of the Cattle Resources' Executive Committee.

A.B. Wharton, III of Vernon, Texas and Richard O. Harris, Jr., of Amarillo, have been newly elected to the Cattle Resources board. Wharton is Chairman of the Bank of Vernon and serves as a director of Republic-Bank Corporation and the Red River Authority. Harris is President of Amarillo-based ROH Equity, Inc., and was formerly President and CEO of Amarillo-based Plains Machinery.

Dennis R. Farley, Friona's President and Chief Executive Officer, continues to serve on the board as does Frederick B. Hegi, Jr.

Friona Industries, L.P., is the third largest cattle feedlot operator in the U.S. Friona also ranks third in the nation as a distributor of veterinary supplies and is the largest supplier of cattle feed supplements in the Texas Panhandle. In 1986 Friona generated revenues of approximately $300 million.

Temporary provisions available

Disabled and blind supplemental security income (SSI) recipients can now try to work without fear of losing all of their benefits, Jim Talbot, Social Security manager in Amarillo, said recently.

Temporary provisions designed to encourage disabled or blind recipients to attempt to work are now permanent parts of the Social Security law. The provisions provide for special cash benefits and continued Medicaid coverage to SSI recipients who work despite severe impairments.

"SSI cash payments may continue to disabled recipients while they attempt to work," Talbot said. The amount of the payment depends on the recipient's earnings—as earnings increase, the SSI payment decreases or stops. If the recipient finds his or her work attempt is unsuccessful, payments can be started again—often without filing a new SSI application.

Also, blind and disabled recipients can keep their Medicaid eligibility even when their earnings make their income high enough to stop cash payments. To keep Medicaid eligibility, a person must continue to be blind or disabled, meet all other non-earnings SSI eligibility requirements, depend on Medicaid coverage to continue working, and be unable to purchase similar medical care.

"To ensure that benefits are not going to recipients who have recovered medically, Social Security plans to review the disability status of all recipients who get benefits under the new provisions," Talbot added. However, Social Security will no longer consider how much a recipient earns in deciding if he or she is still disabled for SSI purposes.

Fashion Show Winners

4-H Fashion Show, judging held

To the strains of Deep in the Heart of Texas, Deaf Smith County 4-H'ers presented "Fashions in the Heart of Texas" at King's Manor Lamar Room recently.

Jeff Hicks introduced 4-H'ers who presented the program comprised of U.S. Pledge, 4-H Pledge and motto, the 4-H Creed and objectives of the Fashion Revue project.

Jennifer King, summer extension assistant, compiled and read the information and humorous Texas theme skits depicting the fashion home Houston to Hereford. Awards were presented by the fashion revue committee, Carrie Shirley, Chairman; Susan Hicks, Sue Powell and Martha Rickman; and extension agent, Beverly Harder.

4-H'ers were judged on construction and appearance earlier in the afternoon by Judy Barrett, Linda Cumpton, Charla Schlabs, and Christi Smith. Receiving construction awards were senior participant in non-tailored day-wear, Kristi Powell. Intermediates were Cheryl Schlabs, Jennifer Hicks and Trisha Teel in active, dressy and casual daywear. Junior winners were Karon Harder, Lee Harder, Susan Rickman and Sheila Teel in active, dressy, casual and specialty wear with alternates being Sarah Perrin, C.D. Shirley and Jami Parker.

Additional awards included Jill Dutton as Intermediate Consumer

Buying Division winner; Stephanie Wilson, Rookie Award; Tawanna Drager, Committee award; Cheryl Schlabs, Most Unique Award; Jennifer Hicks, Most Creative Award; and Kristi Powell, Cotton Award. The Texas Award winner was C.D. Shirley and Best Record Awards went to Sarah Perrin, Jill Dutton, and Kristi Powell.

Following the awards program, refreshments were served by the 4-H Fashion Show participants to guest and residents of King's Manor.

Others assisting and in the program were 4-H'ers Lori Urbanczyk, Maria Juarez, Gina Brisendine, and Adelita Banda.

Winners of the Construction and Buying Division will be traveling to the District Fashion Show Competition on July 27th in Borger.

Educational programs conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service serve people of all ages regardless of socio-economic levels, race, color, sex, religion, handicap, or national origin.

Poster contest planned

"What Freedom Means To Me" is the theme of a poster contest being sponsored by the Hereford bicentennial community committee. Ruth Newsom is committee chairman and Jeanette Ramey is poster contest chairman.

Prizes will be awarded in two divisions: first, children up to 12 years of age; and second, ages 13-18.

The winning posters will be displayed during the annual Town 'n' Country Jubilee.

In each division, there will be a $15 prize for first place; $10, second; and $5, third.

Posters should be no larger than 2 ft. x 3 ft. and must be taken to the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce office by 5 p.m. Aug. 7.

Legion to meet Tuesday

The American Legion and Auxiliary will meet at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in the American Legion Post located in Veteran's Park for their regular meeting and will conclude with an ice cream social.

Grant Hanna will present the program detailing World War II experiences including his story about being stationed in a prisoner of war camp near Hereford.

The public, along with all veterans, are invited to attend.

BRANDED Women

by
Sandy Pankey

DIETING

The average American woman has been brainwashed. It has been drilled into our heads that we must be almost anorexic to be appealing to the opposite sex.

Regardless of our height and bone structure, apparently we are all lumped into the same category and should weigh between 100-105 lbs. I, for one, look like a walking corpse at that weight, and I might add, feel like one.

Unfortunately, fate is against me when I go shopping for clothes. I can always find the cutest fashions on the sale rack but inevitably they are size 3s. First, I get indignant. How dare the fashion designers create clothes that mostly look good on the tall, slender woman! Then, the feeling of inferiority sweeps over me like a tidal wave. I'm fat. No, I must be obese. There's no choice but to AGAIN go on a diet.

Personally, I consider the term of dieting as distasteful and it should be banished from the English language. I hate the mere thought of counting calories. I turn from being a fairly reasonable human being into a starved maniac.

My children know when I'm dieting because there isn't a thing in the house to eat except chicken, fish, and vegetables. They consider this very unhealthy for their bodies. They seem to have fits of withdrawal when there is no junk food available at their fingertips.

My fellow employees always know when I'm dieting by the scowl on my face as soon as I walk through the office doors. They tend to stay clear of me and are very cautious about asking if I would like a cinnamon roll at break time.

When dieting, my entire world suddenly revolves around the thought of food. The minute I open my eyes in the morning, the only consideration I have is what dietic goodies I can stuff into my mouth and still be ingesting less than 1,000 calories a day.

It's a rat race from the word go. I have tried probably 95 percent of the diets that have ever been published. My one real weakness is when I'm checking out at the grocery store counter and eye a copy of one of the scandal sheets. I see a picture of Dolly Parton looking thin as a rail. The accompanying story and diet are printed inside. So, I look around and make sure no one sees me actually pay money for this popular publication and rush home. I read the story, cut out her picture and place it on the refrigerator door. I stuck with this diet for three days and gained two pounds. I wonder how Dolly did it.

Speaking of diets, there are some real dandy ones. Once I lost 10 lbs. in four days. I ate three meals a day. The diet was so simple to remember and I didn't have to count calories. The only food allowed were bananas and hard-boiled eggs. I think the trick to that eating regimen had to be that, after the first day, I couldn't stand to look at another banana or egg and simply fasted. Bad news!

Oh, then there was the grapefruit diet. You had to eat half a grapefruit before each meal. If memory serves me correctly, I lost a couple of pounds and had terrific pucker power.

I have also tried the high protein diet. I bought a book saying that if you cut down on the starches and sweets and only eat protein foods you could lose weight drastically. Not me. I didn't read the book but scanned it. I love T-bone steaks, complete with untrimmed fat, so that's all I ate for a week. I gained six pounds.

How about the diet that says you can have all you want of one food each day? The first day I had two cherry cheese cakes; the next a salad; and the following day, a leftover cherry cheese cake. As you can readily see, I'm not a sensible person when dieting.

When you are a child, adults say how cute your little plump cheeks are. When you are a plump adult, they say how wide your 'little cheeks' are!

POLLY'S POINTERS Use canning jars for freezing food

By Polly Fisher

DEAR POLLY — Can glass canning jars be used for freezing? — A.L.J.

DEAR A.L.J. — Yes, standard home canning jars may be used for freezing. Just take care to allow some space for expansion of the frozen food to prevent breakage (although these jars are quite strong). Usually, the wide-mouth jars are the most desirable for freezing, since frozen contents can be slid out of the jars without completely thawing. Be careful of using commercial food jars that may not be as strong as canning jars, since expansion could break or crack them. Ideally, jars should be marked "freezer-proof."

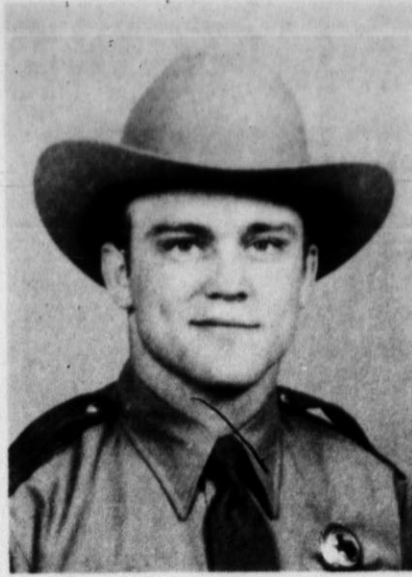

I'm sending you a copy of my newsletter "Freezing Fruits and Vegetables," which gives specific directions for freezing the most popular fruits and vegetables, including directions for dry, sugar, syrup and juice pack for fruits and blanching times for vegetables. Others who would like a copy of this issue should send $1 for each copy to POLLY'S POINTERS, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 93863, Cleveland, OH 44101-5863. Be sure to include the title. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — My secret to successful potato salad was learned from my grandmother. Always cook the potatoes the day before you plan to make potato salad and let them cool off overnight. The potatoes will be solid and easy to cube after removing the skins. The eggs, too, can be boiled the day before and refrigerated. I always receive compliments on my potato salad, especially if I thin down the mayonnaise and salad dressing with some sweet pickle juice. I add celery, onion, salt and maybe a bit of paprika on top — and basically that's it! — MARY

DEAR MARY AND FRIENDS — Although Mary's original letter recommended letting the potatoes sit overnight at room temperature, it is much safer to refrigerate them overnight. The texture should not be affected. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — To make a plastic cutting board that can be washed in the dishwasher (to eliminate food remnants that could breed bacteria), cut the edge off an ice-cream pail cover. The disc will last a long time, but when you finally do have to replace it, it won't cost you more than the ice cream! Takes virtually no space in my drawer or the dishwasher, and the best part is that when it's full of cut-up items, I can bend it into a sort of funnel to guide the food into the pan or bowl.

After cutting off the rim of the cover for your cutting board, you can

Former Hereford resident, Trooper Galen Russell Garrett, 24, has recently graduated from the Department of Public Safety Training Academy and has been assigned to the Highway Patrol Service in Wellington. He is one of 80 cadets recently commissioned as state troopers in graduation ceremonies in Austin.

Garrett is the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. O.A. Smith of 204 Aspen. He is a graduate of Altus High School in Altus, Okla. and a 1986 graduate of Southwestern Oklahoma State University with a bachelor of science degree in education and a bachelor of science degree in business administration.

In 1934, bank robber Charles "Pretty Boy" Floyd was discovered and shot to death by federal agents at an Ohio farm.

Make fast food good food

"It's too hot to cook," is heard more and more as summer temperatures climb, and people turn to convenient fast food restaurants. Fortunately, smart consumers can find good nutritional values in their quest to beat the heat.

"The restaurant industry is responding to the consumer demand for more nutritional and lower calorie meals," says Dr. Dymple Cooksey, a nutritionist with the Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service. "Fast food chains are especially making an effort to attract health conscious people."

Many fast food chains are trying to improve the nutritional value of their products by cutting back on sodium and fat. A few chains have even switched to using polyunsaturated fats in their deep fryers in efforts to gain public approval and patronage, Cooksey points out.

"One of the most popular trends in fast food nutrition is the salad bar," says the specialist. "Salad bars are featured in many chains to complement the existing menu and to attract the health conscious. These salads can be an excellent source of nutrition, and contain few calories, if you go easy on the croutons, cheese and dressing."

"Pizza also is a good choice. Its combination of cheese, tomato sauce, and crust make it a low-fat source of carbohydrates, vitamins, calcium, and protein. But be careful, you can run up calories here too by adding sausage, pepperoni, and other high calorie toppings," remarks Cooksey.

Ethnic fast foods can add variety and nutrition, the specialist says. Those types of Mexican food which aren't deep fried and feature lettuce, tomatoes, small amounts of meat, and beans are a good fast food choice. Chinese food also offers nutritional entrees based mainly on vegetables and rice, providing vitamins, protein and fiber.

According to Cooksey, "Eating fast food doesn't have to be a high-calorie, fatty experience. There are many readily available alternatives to deep fried, high fat-content foods. Fast food can be nutritious food if you make smart choices."

MacArthur to star in hit comedy

The Country Squire Dinner Theatre celebrates its 11th year in Amarillo with the opening of Larry Shue's Broadway hit comedy, "The Foreigner," Tuesday. James MacArthur will star as "The Foreigner". Audiences will remember him as "Dano" from the television series "Hawaii Five-O." He is the son of famous parents, actress Helen Hayes, and the late newspaperman-playwright Charles MacArthur. Audiences will remember Bee Vary, who returns to play Betty Meeks, as the warm, loveable Veta Mae in "Harvey." An Amarillo favorite, Steve Berrier, who wowed audiences in the Woody Allen comedy, "Play It Again, Sam", will appear onstage as the Reverend David Lee. Stan Norman will make his first appearance on the Country Square Dinner Theatre Stage as Owen Musser. Kyle Page, a favorite Country Rogue, will appear as Ellard Simms. Fleur Fox, daughter of Producer Peter Fox, will make her stage debut as Catherine Simms. Steve Jones, who put audiences on the floor with his dual female portraits in "Dirty Work at the Crossroads," returns as Froggy

LeSueur. Jack Booc, who has directed celebrities on stage, in films and television around the world returns to direct this wonderful comedy. His previous visits to the Country Squire include the direction of Larry Linville in "Lunch Hour" and Patrick Wayne in "Alone Together." "The Foreigner" will run through the end of August. By GAYE B. REILY
Staff Writer

When Margarite Gamez is not decorating cakes, polishing her spoon and bell collection, or doing volunteer work, she keeps a watchful eye over the family farming operation which supplies jumbo carrots to the Campbell Soup Company.

"When my husband, Isaias, better known as 'Chi,' died four years ago and left the farm to me, I knew nothing about the business. My children came back to help but I turned it over to my son-in-law and he has done quite well with it. Our farm is the only one in Deaf Smith County that has a contract with Campbell Soup for the jumbo carrots, which are sweeter and a brighter orange than most carrots," she said.

Mrs. Gamez speaks softly about her late husband and it is evident that she misses him but keeps an optimistic attitude and lives life to the fullest. "Chi (pronounced Shy) was active in the Baptist Church, the Lion's Club, and a farmer's group while I stayed at home. I enjoyed those years of being a homemaker, but after Chi passed away, I decided to get involved in the community myself," she says.

The lively mother of six is a member of the Sweet 'N' Fancy Cake Decorating Club and other ladies' clubs and works as a volunteer for the local chapter of the Red Cross. She is an active member of the San Jose Catholic Church. She is well-known for her beautifully decorated cakes and donates them to several organizations. "If I can do it, I like to get involved, but if someone wants me to do something I can't, I don't mind saying no."

Even a severe bout with arthritis has not slowed her down. "I walk four miles a day five days a week—I feel alot better and have more energy since I started two or three years ago." She is still an avid collector of spoons—300 in all—and some 70 bells. "No one wants to inherit my collections because of the polishing and dusting required," she laughed.

Being with her family is one of the most important aspects of her life. It becomes apparent that her children are a source of joy and pride when one talks to Mrs. Gamez. "Our children range in age from 15 to 31 and the youngest still lives with me. She is involved in several different extracurricular activities, so she keeps me pretty busy."

Debbie, the eldest, works at Hereford State Bank and is married to Armando Gonzales, who does the family farming; Eleanor is a Hereford housewife; Horace, the only son, attends the University of Texas in Austin to become a lawyer and works for the Internal Revenue Service; Sylvana, married to a serviceman, lives in England; Bernadina works at the state capitol in Austin and attends UT with hopes of becoming a court reporter; and Yvonne, (Vonnice), the youngest, will be an 11th grader in Hereford High School.

"I also have four granddaughters who keep me busy," said the energetic, bubbly lady. "Although my father has passed away, my mother and sisters all live here and we enjoy each other's company."

Born and raised in San Angelo, she and her parents moved in 1950 to Hereford. Her father, Fred Gonzales, was the first Mexican-American to serve as a deputy in the Deaf Smith County Sheriff's Department as well as being the first Mexican-American employed by the local radio station, KPAN. He, along with his wife, also managed the Texas Theatre and some apartments.

"We all look forward to getting together July 4; we are going to have fun!"

½ C. chopped pecans
1-4% oz. instant pudding (chocolate)
1½ c. half and half
Layer chopped pecans on bottom of pie shell and cook. Mix pudding with half and half. Fill pie shell with pudding and chill. Garnish with Cool Whip or fresh strawberries dipped in chocolate.

COOL PINEAPPLE CAKE

1 box yellow cake mix
Filling: 1-20 oz. can crushed pineapple
2 Tbsp. cornstarch
½ C. sugar for taste (optional)
Mix and bake the cake according to directions on the box. Simmer the filling until it boils. After the cake has cooled, pour the filling over the cake and chill. Ice the sides of the cake with Cool Whip.

Shook honored with bridal shower

The home of Lois Lemons was the setting for the bridal shower recently in honor of Karol Shook, bride-elect of Jimmy Cox.

The honoree's chosen colors of white and black, accented by dusty rose, were used through the house and on the registry table, where Jane Gulley invited the guests to sign the guest book.

Guests were welcomed in the dining room by Kaye Holman and Kristi Hollingsworth, sisters of the bride-elect, and Penny Olsen. They were served refreshments from a table decorated with a centerpiece designed by Helen Lee. It featured dusty rose votive candles looped with pearls and rose flowers and highlighted with a Precious Moments figurine, on white lace topping the rose tablecloth.

Guests were shown gifts for the couple in adjoining bedrooms.

Cullen Davis willing to settle

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Cullen Davis will settle out of court to resolve civil suits accusing him of a shooting rampage at his Fort Worth mansion that left two dead and two injured, said his attorney.

But the lawyer, Steve Sumner, said Davis would not do so if the settlement were considered an admission.

"I know Cullen, and that's the last thing he would ever do if it was considered an admission of guilt," Sumner said.

But such an admission is a key point in ex-wife Priscilla Davis' new offer to settle her multimillion-dollar claim that Davis shot her and killed her 12-year-old daughter.

"It simply gets down to resolving the matter without having to go to the expense of another trial," Sumner told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram. "I have said if there is any way these cases could be settled, then they should be settled."

Mrs. Davis' new attorney, David Burrows of Dallas, said Monday that he would seek an out-of-court settlement as a sufficient admission of guilt for the slayings of Priscilla's daughter, Andrea Wilborn, and boyfriend, Stan Farr.

Mrs. Davis and a mansion guest, Gus "Bubba" Gavrel Jr., were wounded in the shootings around midnight Aug. 2, 1976. Gavrel's suit against Davis was settled out of court, and its terms were not revealed.

A $16.5 million wrongful-death and personal injury suit filed against Davis by Mrs. Davis and her former husband, Jack Wilborn, ended in a mistrial June 22 in a Fort Worth courtroom.

A jury deadlocked 8-4 in Mrs. Davis' favor. Agreement by at least 10 jurors is required to reach a verdict.

Visiting State District Judge Claude Williams, who presided over the trial, said numerous attempts were made to settle out of court until the last week of the trial.

"I encouraged them to settle all the way through," Williams said.

"We made what we believed to be a reasonable offer to the plaintiffs, and they rejected it," Sumner said.

Attorneys for Wilborn, meanwhile, said they may have new evidence to bolster their case if it goes back to court.

"You're always looking and evaluating evidence, but it's really not anything we can talk about," attorney Hal Monk said. "I've interviewed folks who we might use as witnesses — a couple who we didn't know about before."

Clouding the issue of any potential settlement is a federal bankruptcy ruling that took control of the troubled Kendavis Industries International Inc. away from Davis and one of his brothers, Kenneth Davis.

Cullen Davis once was estimated to be worth $106 million, but he said recently that he probably has less than $1 million. The bankruptcy court could put a hold on all civil suits, Sumner said.

Davis' legal troubles continued Monday when Galveston Judge Ed Harris found the oil heir in contempt of court and ordered him to turn over a list of certain assets by July 16 or face three days in jail and a $500 fine.

JUMPING JACKKNIVES

SAN DIEGO (AP) — At the San Diego Zoo, 64 man-made boulders and 15 tons of natural stone were used to create the African Rock Kopje, a half-acre walk-through exhibit that opened last year, reports Animal Kingdom.

Among the residents of this rocky oasis are klipspringers — dwarf antelopes about twice the size of hares. When frightened, they often bound away with jackknife leaps as high as 10 feet straight up. Their hooves are rubbery for sure footing.

WWII veteran tells of life among Italian prisoners

By GAYE B. REILY
Staff Writer

"I drove down Hereford's main street in 1943 when the population was 2,300, and I said that nothing could make me live there!" laughed Grant Hanna, a veteran of World War II.

Yet 44 years later, he is still here. Now a retired farmer, he and his wife, Troyce, are the parents of two daughters and one granddaughter. He served in the U.S. Army as a staff sergeant and was stationed in the Italian prisoner of war camp located four-and-a-half miles southwest of Hereford.

"I was the mess sergeant—I've dealt with food all my life," said the Nebraska native. "I had 25 Italian prisoners and 10 American soldiers serving K.P. under me. I had to have an interpreter help me with the language barrier."

The camp was created once the U.S. Secretary of War condemned the land. Approximately 750-1,000 U.S. military personnel served there while 5,000-10,000 Italian prisoners were held. In addition, 1,000 German prisoners were incarcerated for 24 hours, then shipped out.

"Hereford really boomed when

Jones family holds reunion

The Jones family of Hereford gathered June 27 for a family reunion. Those present included 41 offspring, 16 of whom are Hereford residents.

The Jones family came to the Panhandle in the mid-1920s when the head of their clan, Hiram "Papa" Jones, came to look around but stayed in Hereford after seeing the town and surrounding farm country.

One of his sons, William Oren and his wife, Agustua "Gussie", were the parents and grandparents of this reunion group.

Present from Hereford included: Leabert and Katherine Jones Hubbard; Billy and Bonnie Hubbard; Johnny and Linda Hubbard and daughters, Shelly and Jennifer; Paul and Julia Hubbard with children, Rene, Dustin and Darla; and Kathy Hubbard Wyssmann and children, Melissa, Stacey, and John.

Also attending were Murrell and Juanita Jones Brown Ivey, Glen and Elaine Brown Deavers with son Matt from Amarillo; Tommy and Pat Brown with granddaughters, Summer and Ivory and Gary and Sherrill Brown Thornton of Austin;

Also, Mrs. Vivian Jones Arnold and son, Brian Arnold and daughters, Victoria Arnold, Suzie Arnold Sprock, and Carolyn Arnold Rombaez and sons, Tom and Mike, all from the Detroit, Mich., area; Jo Ann Arnold Glass and sons, Billy, Greg, and Tim, all from St. Louis, Mo.; and Lt. Col. Dr. Franklin Del and June Jones of Washington, D.C. Also present were five guests of the family.

NOTHING WASTED

GLOSTER, Miss. (AP) — Nearly 98 percent of a harvested tree can be used to manufacture useful products, according to Georgia-Pacific Corp.

After lumber, paper plywood and other primary products are made, the resultant byproducts are used in such diverse products as pharmaceuticals, sandwich bags, baby food and football helmets.

The only parts of a tree ordinarily not used are roots, branches and sawdust, which are left at the harvest site to replenish soil nutrients, the firm said.

this facility was created," remembered Hanna. "When I came to town, you could get a good T-bone steak for $1.50; a month or two later, the same steak cost $2.50 to $3."

The townspeople were not too crazy about us being here at first," Hanna continued. "They worried about their daughters, etc., but everyone felt safer once the M.P.s arrived." When the war ended, Hanna, along with fellow POW camp personnel Bill Phipps, Jimmy Mercer, and Waylon Smith, all married local girls and settled in Hereford.

Hanna remembers that times were extremely hard for Hereford residents, as gasoline, food, and other commodities were rationed and in short supply. Farmers had a hard time finding laborers to harvest crops, so Italian prisoners were paid 10 cents a day to work—under the watchful eye of armed guards.

"The Italians mainly harvested potatoes and shocked feed," said Hanna. "They even had their own garden inside the compound."

"We certainly treated these prisoners alot better than our soldiers were treated in enemy camps," Hanna reflected. "Once the train let the prisoners off in Summerfield, we would march them to camp. They always sang the Italian version of 'Roll out The Barrels! Most people didn't know it, but we didn't even have any ammunition when the camp first began."

The Italian prisoners had recreation time where several beautiful paintings and other crafts were created. "Most of the Italians were devout Catholics, so they painted one religious work that now hangs in the Catholic chapel in Umbarger."

Hanna remembers that the prisoners who worked with him on K.P. duty were excellent workers that kept the mess hall immaculately clean. "They scrubbed and bleached the wooden floors until they looked white. They enjoyed K.P. duty since they got to eat with the Americans."

Sugar and raisins disappeared in large amounts and Hanna informed his foreign workers that he "just has to find out where all that stuff is going." The Italians then pointed to the attic and explained to him in their broken English that they were making wine, but it was "not" ready yet, two more weeks." Following work one night, they popped it open and the prisoners and Americans who were on K.P. shared the wine. "They had been prisoners for three to four years and that potent brew really hit them. We had to help them back to their barracks," laughed Hanna.

Posing With Prisoners

Yet not all of the Italians were contented prisoners. "We were playing baseball in camp one day when one of our players ran to retrieve a foul ball and discovered an underground tunnel. Apparently the POWs had been working on it for the past six months; it was head-high and 20-30 feet in length. In another two weeks, it would have extended past the fence."

Other escape attempts occurred when the POWs would hide a fellow prisoner in a shock of feed. "We knew something was up when the prisoners would return from farm work and we'd be missing one of them," said Hanna. "But the hidden POW always returned soon or later; there was no place for him to go."

Hanna, an easygoing man with a quick smile, has related his wartime experiences to various study clubs and other local organizations, and was featured in an Italian documentary made for television. He will relive these experiences Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. as the keynote speaker for the American Legion meeting set for the American Legion Post in Veteran's Park. The public, in addition to all veterans, are invited to attend.

More than 3,000 stag heads and skulls festoon the ballroom of the Mar Lodge near Braemar, Scotland, says National Geographic.

Displayer Of The Month

B.J. Messer, 14-year-old daughter of Jacky and Johnnie Messer of Hereford, has her collection of horses on display at the Deaf Smith County Library. She began collecting the miniatures at the age of five. B.J. is the retiring queen of the Hereford Riders Club.

Picnic planned Tuesday

The quarterly meeting of the Women's Division of the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce will be held at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at the home of Ruth Newsom, 150 Liveoak.

The main event of the gathering will be a picnic in the back yard. Each member is asked to bring a covered dish and a guest. Meat and desserts consisting of ice cream, cakes, and cookies will be provided for the potluck affair.

A short business meeting will be held and details of the upcoming regional meeting will be discussed.

Door prizes will be awarded to one guest and one member.

Reunion canceled

The Curtsinger-Cocanougher family reunion scheduled for July 12 has been canceled due to unavoidable circumstances.

Clay's compromise

Sen. Henry Clay's famous compromise of 1850 admitted California into the Union as the 31st state, and banned slavery in the state. It made Utah and New Mexico territories, with no decision made on slavery.

Super-Glue For Families

All kinds of families comprise our society. Headlines tell us that our families are doomed. We read that husbands are abusive, that children are abused, that divorce dilutes marriage values, that the aged are becoming a pervasive problem, that values are non-existent. Unfortunately these headlines do reflect a part of American family living.

But let's look at these headlines from another perspective. For instance, if one out of three marriages ends in divorce, there are two marriages that appear to be surviving. Two-thirds of the married couples have found some ways and reasons to stay together. What is the "glue" that holds families together?

Four receive degrees

More than 1,500 students at Texas Tech University received degrees in 1987 spring commencement exercises.

Degree recipients from Hereford included Mike Steven Caudle who received a bachelor of science degree in mechanized agriculture; Beverly Kelly McMeen Harder, master of science degree in home economics; Rodney Neumayer, bachelor of business administration degree, marketing; and Aubrey Richburg, bachelor of business administration degree in marketing.

Killer whales and dolphins are mammals that have exceptionally large brains in proportion to their bodies. A seven-ton elephant has a brain of only about 12 pounds, but Moby Doll, a young killer whale in the Vancouver aquarium, topped the scales at slightly more than one ton — while his brain weighed 14 pounds.

Families which survive have many of the following characteristics:

1. Every family needs a leader, someone to follow, to model oneself after. This can be anyone within the family who has earned the respect of other family members.

2. Every family needs a family historian. This person collects photographs, writes down facts and dates about family happenings, and corresponds with family members.

3. Families need eccentricities. Most of us don't choose our relatives but even the most eccentric one can be a blessing, for that eccentric is a bond of memory for all relatives.

4. Families need to be open and generous. Neighborliness is a hallmark of the healthy family.

5. Families need interest outside the home as well as inside it. Busy parents and children are good for each other.

6. Families need traditions. Traditions associated with Christmas, Thanksgiving, birthdays are important. But more than that, we need everyday kinds of rituals. We don't need to inherit these rituals, we can make them.

7. Families need to be affectionate. Touching, hugging, smiling, and winking are all types of affection. Although you may not be a "touchy-feely" family, the approving, comforting hand on the arm or shoulder and the shared smile can carry a wealth of affection.

8. Families need a sense of place. This is a place where one's memories belong. It can be your childhood home or your grandparent's home. In our mobile society, treasured photographs, prized family mementos or a battered rocking chair can provide that special place.

9. Families need elders—the keepers of our yesterdays. The older people worthy of honor and respect. They provided our beginnings.

10. Families need children, one's own children, grandchildren, even borrowed children. A child is a vision of tomorrow we may not have.

These are just some of the characteristics that bond (or glue) family members together. Shared memories, shared frustrations, shared beginnings, shared history, shared traditions, shared generations are here for all of us — rich and poor.

Red Cross Update

Special thanks to the volunteer that donated the clothing racks to be used in the clothing room. We really needed the extra space.

The Uniformed Volunteers will meet for their regular luncheon meeting Thursday, July 9, noon, at the Red Cross office. Election of officers will be held and plans for the Jubilee will be made.

Registration for the second session of water safety classes will be held Saturday July 11 with classes beginning Monday, July 13. Cost of the classes will be $3.50 pool fee. The instructors are volunteers. A babysitter is needed along with instructors and aides. If you would like to help, please call the Red Cross office at 364-3761.

The Water Safety Instructors class has not been definitely scheduled yet. Please call the Red Cross office if you are interested in teaching swimming and water safety. These skills are lifesaving skills and greatly increase the enjoyment a person can have around the water and in the water.

Young Artists At Work

Approximately 300 children met this week at the Deaf Smith County Library parking lot to create sponge art paintings. In the top photo, youngsters stand in line to get their sponges and paint and in the bottom photo they are shown concentrating on making designed stationery. The sponges were made in shapes of penguins, elephants and giraffes and were furnished by library employees. The event was just one segment of the library's annual summer reading club's program which has a theme of "Animal Antics." On Tuesday, a special activity is planned for reading club members beginning at 10 a.m.

John Streun performs at recent youth conference

BROWNWOOD — The Texas Baptist All-State Youth Choir spent a week at Howard Payne University, June 22-26, as they rehearsed in preparation for performances at the 1987 Youth Evangelism Conference, which was held in Dallas' Reunion Arena, June 26-27.

Among the approximately 50 band members was John M. Streun of Temple Baptist Church in Hereford. He is the son of Murlene Streun of Hereford.

Members of the choir were selected through auditions held in January at various locations across the state. They represented more than 200 Texas Southern Baptist churches.

"We greatly enjoyed having these young people on our campus," said HPU President Dr. Don Newbury. "They were an extremely talented group and represented well the Southern Baptist youths of our state."

The General Assembly of the United Nations meets in regular sessions and in special sessions when necessary. Special sessions are convoked by the UN's secretary-general at the request of the Security Council or a majority of members of the organization.

King's Manor News

Our recent King's Manor benefit dinner was very successful and proceeds went to the Lamar Garden Room carpet fund. The goal of $2,000 was reached.

Care and concern for others was warmly demonstrated by our community June 28 as scores of persons were involved in the project.

Bar G Feed Yard and Caviness Packing furnished the meat. Roger Williams donated fresh potatoes; Save & Gain Grocery donated food stuffs; and The Country Store gave a much reduced price on barbecue sauce.

Bill Walden was supervisor of the cooking of the meat with a host of friends doing other preparations and serving. Many other friends furnished salads and desserts and other trimmings for the good meal. A volunteer clean-up crew put the finishing touches to a most successful, cooperative project.

Our local news media was so cooperative. King's Manor is most fortunate to be located in Hereford, Texas!

Some exposure to sun good for mental attitude

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Thousands of people will flock to the beaches this summer and while dermatologists warn against the sun's damaging rays, a researcher says the sun's good for you.

Dr. Russel J. Reiter, professor of neuroendocrinology at the University of Texas Health Science Center, says exposure to the sun is good for everyone.

"Certainly sunlight justifiably has gotten a bad rap in terms of its effects on skin cancer," Reiter said. "Positively, however, sunlight generally seems to improve mood, sexual performance, possibly, and general attitudes."

Reiter is an internationally known expert on the pineal gland, which produces the hormone, melatonin, in the brain. The hormone is made mostly during darkness, and too much of it can lead to depression, Reiter said.

The answer, he suggests, is more exposure to sunlight or, in the workplace, better and more abundant lighting.

More than 500,000 people each year are diagnosed as having skin cancer and about 7,800 die annually from the disease, according to the American Cancer Society.

Reiter said, however, people can reap the benefits of the sun without being exposed to it.

"You can wear a long-sleeve shirt. You can wear a hat and keep it off your face, go for a noon walk and get its physiological effects," he said.

"Sunlight is very good for us, but we have misused it. Dermatologists are opposed to sunbathing, but it's the American way. It's something we're going to do," he said.

Reiter has written six books and edited 22 others on the pineal gland, since he began researching it in 1964.

Biologists once thought the pineal gland was an inoperative organ, he said. Through tests on animals and humans during the past 20 years, however, researchers have come to realize the gland's importance, he said.

The pineal gland is connected to the eyes and the sunlight it receives inhibits the production of melatonin, the professor said.

During winter months when the skies are gray some people are afflicted with "seasonal affective disorder," a depressive, lethargic condition caused by too much melatonin, Reiter said.

"There are people in this world who take light and darkness for granted. It's not innocuous. It impacts all aspects of our life."

In the workplace, more lighting can combat the depressive problem and should help increase productivity, he said.

Most offices and recreation facilities now use cool, white fluorescent bulbs, but Reiter predicts that within 20 years light bulbs giving off sunlight-like illumination will be more common.

"Studies are being done to show that individuals who have windows to the outside in their offices seem to make fewer mistakes. They seem to perform better," Reiter said.

"Light can be used as a drug in various types of depression. What is more convenient and what is more non-invasive than light? You don't have to take anything internally," Reiter said.

He said dairy cattle in the North were the subject of one study on pineal glands and productivity. Generally, milk production decreases during the winter months, but when the lights in the barn were turned on at night, the cows produced more milk, the study showed.

Reiter, who is on numerous talk shows throughout the year, said about 500 scientists now are studying the pineal gland.

"Too much time in subdued lighting is just not conducive to our well-being," Reiter said. "We are just beginning to learn why we feel bad."

SPECIAL TREATMENT MAY HELP TASTE OF YOUR TAP WATER

WATERLOO, Ontario (AP) — It doesn't make economic sense for cities to carbon-filter their entire water supplies to potable quality when less than 1 percent is used for drinking and cooking, says Lou J. Smith, executive director of the Canadian Water Quality Supply Association.

"Municipal water systems do little or nothing to remove the hundreds of organic compounds that may make water taste or smell less than perfect," Smith says. "When over 99 percent of it is used for flushing toilets, washing cars, fighting fires, watering lawns and the like, why should they?"

Smith advises consumers who are unhappy with their tap water to have it analyzed by a water treatment specialist to determine what, if any, special treatment is necessary for the small amount of water they use for drinking and cooking.

You can get antique gold and silver finishes in most hardware stores and home centers, but they also are sold in stores that deal with artists, who use the finishes for frames.

Insects abundant this year

Mosquitos, cockroaches, fleas and ticks are all in abundance across Texas this summer. A wet spring, combined with mild winters the last two years, has resulted in large insect populations, according to Texas Christian University entomologist Dr. Nick Wilson.

"Mosquitos will be one of the more noticeable insects this summer," said Wilson. "Anytime you are in an urban area, mosquitos will turn out to be a big problem because they are blood suckers, and they readily attack human beings."

Another concern is the cockroach. The mild weather has caused greater over-wintering, so Wilson warned that the number of cockroaches in and around the home will be greater.

"The critical thing for any household in the controlling of roaches is good sanitation and housekeeping," Wilson pointed out. "This will do more to control cockroaches than any other thing."

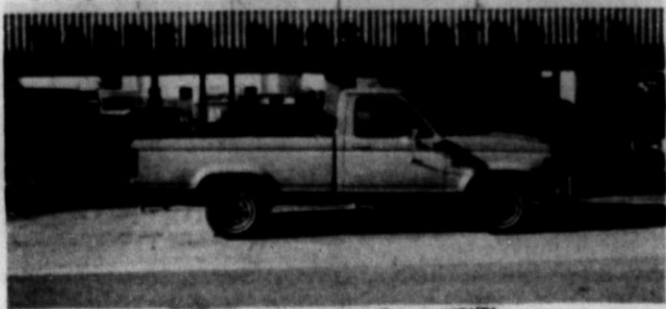

Pet owners will find the same tactics hold true in the control of fleas and ticks. Wilson advised homeowners to clean up weeds and brush that collect around the house and are a normal habitat for these pests.

One last insect to be on the lookout for this summer is the scorpion. Scorpions will become a problem when it gets very hot outside, said Wilson.

"They will feel the coolness of the air conditioning coming under the door, and they will move in for that coolness," the TCU professor added.

Commercial real estate market overbuilt, prof says

"We overbuilt in the commercial real estate market and now have a problem absorbing what's already built, even though, we're absorbing faster than any market in the United States," says Paul Geisel, professor of urban studies at UT-Arlington.

"We're absorbing at a net rate of 2.7 percent of commercial property in urban centers per year; that's 27-30 percent a decade. But in five years we built 50 percent. If we don't start building now in a better way, by 1995 we'll be short of property. We must rethink what we're building."

Geisel's comments were made during the recent annual convention of the Texas Association of REALTORS in Arlington.

"In order to improve our commercial market, we're going to have to do things differently. There are some myths we will have to get rid of. We need to do more research. We need to get away from the mentality that says traffic flow equals potential," said Geisel. When many people drive past a location daily, there is no guarantee they will also stop and shop at a retail center built there.

Geisel believes the market in Texas can improve. "We need to take a lesson from properties that continue to prosper in spite of the flea market. We need to study these areas and find out what they're doing right, then do it," he said.

One of the problems with our commercial real estate market is that we don't do enough research before we start a project, Geisel said. We are building properties in the wrong places with the wrong businesses in them. Instead of filling our retail strip centers with locally-based, home-grown entrepreneurial businesses, we have franchise heaven. We have cities where there are fifteen conveniently located record stores that all offer the exact same merchandise—and only one shoe shop.

Geisel said that Texas has had fairly steady growth rate since World War II, with the population doubling almost every decade since then. At the same time our population shifted. In 1970, 14 percent of those living in the urban areas lived in multifamily rental housing. In 1980, this portion increased to 20 percent, and in 1986, it jumped to 45 percent, a result of tremendous immigration of Northerners and rural Texans to the urban areas. This group is now ready to buy single family homes.

The Texas Association of REALTORS is the largest trade association in Texas comprised of more than 50,000 members of the real estate community.

Home financing in spring was affordable in spite of rates

WASHINGTON — Home loan financing remained affordable in April, in spite of higher mortgage interest rates, according to the National Association of Realtors.

"I think the rise in mortgage interest rates probably caused a lot of rate-watchers to make their move," said William M. Moore, NAR president.

"The people who are putting off buying now may look back in a few years and wish they had," Moore said.

The association's Housing Affordability Index, which measures the economic feasibility of home buying, was 110.9 in April, up slightly from the March measurement of 110.7. April's index denotes that a family earning the national median income of $29,633 for that month would have 110.9 percent of the income needed to qualify for a conventional loan covering 80 percent of the April's national median home price of $85,400.

A March-to-April comparison shows a $200 dip in the national median home price, and a $108 increase in the national median income, as well as a five-basis-point rise in the mortgage interest rate. One basis point equals one-hundredth of a percentage point. NAR's chief economist, Dr. John A. Tuccillo, pointed out that the lower median price and the minor rise in income helped keep the affordability rating high.

"A combination of a decline in prices and an increase in income was enough to neutralize the increase in interest rates in April, and maintain the index at its current level," Tuccillo said. April's rating was "an insignificant increase" over the March rating, he added.

The interest rate used to gauge affordability in April was 9.14 percent, compared with the 9.09 percent rate used in the March index. The index rate is the average effective interest rate of loans closed for the purchase of existing homes. It is a composite of rates for fixed-and adjustable-rate mortgages, and includes loan discount points paid at closing.

April's mortgage rate, reported by the Federal Loan Bank Board, was the lowest since December 1977. But, it applied to loans closed early in the month, and is not indicative of the larger rate increases by the end of April and in May.

"We expect that the increase in rates seen through May will cause a decline in the index in May and June," Tuccillo said.

At 100, the Housing Affordability Index means that the median family income equals the qualifying income. According to April's index, the qualifying income for a median-priced home was $26,717. Loan applicants with that income who made a 20 percent down payment on a home priced at the $85,400 national median would generally qualify to borrow the remaining $68,300 needed to buy the home.

The Housing Affordability Index has remained above the 100 mark since June 1986. The NAR is currently predicting that the affordability measurement will be 106.6 for 1987, up from 105.7 for 1986.

By April's affordability statistics, a buyer with a $20,000 annual income would qualify to buy a $65,000 home. A family with a $30,000 income would qualify for a $97,500 home; one with a $40,000 income would qualify for a $130,000 home. A family with a $50,000 income would be able to afford a $162,500 home.

April's 110.9 index was 9.6 points above the April 1986 index of 101.3. Since a year ago, the median home price has risen $5,200; the median income has risen $1,155; and the mortgage interest rate for the index has dropped 1.23 percentage points.

The monthly principal and interest payment on a $68,300 mortgage (80 percent of the $85,400 median home price) would be $557, comprising 22.5 percent of the April median monthly income. The monthly payment was $2 higher than that recorded for the March index. In April 1986, the monthly payment was $581, taking 24.7 percent of the median monthly income.

The National Association of Realtors is the nation's largest trade association, representing about 750,000 members involved in all aspects of the real estate industry.

Q. — I have some furniture painted white in what seems to be some kind of low-gloss tone. I intend to finish it over without taking off the old paint. A light pink will be used. I recently used an enamel and like the kind of high gloss it has. Can I apply the enamel directly over the paint or must the paint be removed? The enamel won't have any bad effect on the paint, will it? Years ago I applied lacquer over varnish and got a mess.

A. — While lacquer can soften varnish, enamel will create no problem when applied over paint. Of course, any time one finish is applied over another, the life of the top coat will depend on the life of the bottom coat.

Q. — We have moved into a house which has some kind of resilient tiles on the kitchen floor. It is in good condition and we do not intend to do anything with it, but we don't like the color of the baseboard molding, which seems to be something that resembles or is rubber. Can we paint this molding and, if so, what kind of paint should we use?

A. — Painting the molding, which quite probably is rubber, would be quite a job and might not come out the way you plan. A better idea would be to take off the molding, which can be pried up, and replace it with a similar molding of the exact color you want. This type of molding is sold wherever resilient floor tile is available.

Q. — I plan to install a brick floor on the patio in the rear of our house. I originally planned to lay the bricks in sand without using mortar, but I now want to use the mortar. Is there any special way this can be done?

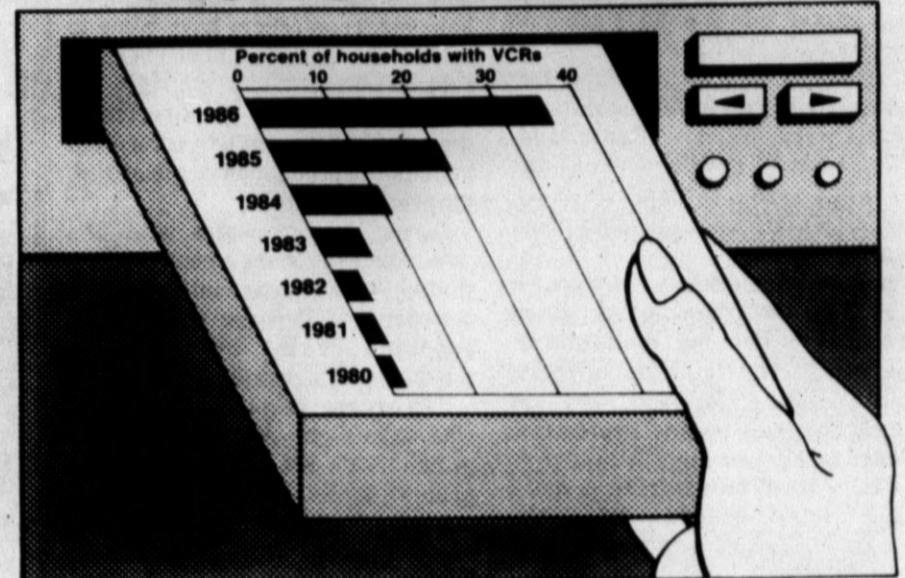

A. — Do as you would have done with the sand. Spread the dry mortar into the joints, brush off the excess and sprinkle the joints with water. Wait about 20 minutes, then sprinkle again. Examine the joints and see whether any more mortar is required. If not, let the whole thing alone and it will harden overnight. Sprinkle the patio lightly at least once a day for five or six days.

Q. — What does "milking" the color of a wood finish mean?

A. — It refers to the addition of white to a color to make it a bit lighter.

(The techniques of using varnish, shellac, lacquer, remover, bleach, stain, etc., are detailed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Wood Finishing in the Home," which can be obtained by sending 50 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P. O. Box 477, Huntington, NY 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column.)

Fixed rate loan plans dominate choices

WASHINGTON — Less than a decade ago, shopping for a home loan was fairly simple. A fixed-rate mortgage, with predictable monthly payments, historically topped the list of home buyers' financing choices.

When interest rates are favorable, fixed rate plans continue to dominate mortgage market activity, according to the National Association of Realtors. "A lot of people feel more secure with set monthly payments. They know what their payments will be over the loan's term, and they don't have to worry about the interest rate going any higher," said NAR President William M. Moore.

An NAR survey shows that in spring 1987, when rates reached an eight-year-low, 88 percent of the first mortgages originated had fixed-rate terms. Statistics for March and April indicated that the average interest rate for fixed-rate, 30-year conventional mortgages was 8.87 percent. Those guaranteed by the Veterans Administration averaged 8.63 percent; and for fixed-rate loans insured by the Federal Housing Administration, the average interest rate was 8.58 percent.

Because the interest on fixed-rate mortgages is set, lenders do not have the flexibility to raise the loans' interest rates in the future to generate a higher yield. So, even when overall lending rates are down, fixed-rate loans generally carry relatively higher interest rates than other types of mortgage financing, such as adjustable-rate (ARMS). During March and April, conventional ARMs were offered at an average rate of 7.69 percent.

"If they can get the house they want with a fixed-rate mortgage, they will grab it (that type of financing)," said Stan H. Sabin, chairman of NAR's Real Estate Finance Committee. "If it means they might not be able to afford the house they are looking to buy, then some buyers will turn to an adjustable-rate. But as a rule, when rates are down, people prefer fixed-rate loans."

ARMs accounted for 8 percent of the mortgage market activity in April, according to the NAR survey. Other mortgage instruments, including buy-down plans, graduated payment mortgages, and wrap around mortgages were used less frequently, comprising about 4 percent of the loans originated.

Although use wanes when fixed-rate mortgage rates are favorable, ARMs and other mortgage financing methods fill the affordability gap for buyers who cannot afford fixed-rate loan payments. Generally, the main advantage of alternative financing is a lower interest rate than a fixed-rate mortgage, either during the loan's initial years or permanently. This lower rate allows buyers to qualify to purchase houses with loans they could not afford at a higher interest rate.

The following are other mortgage options:

-Buydown plans: Using a buydown, a seller, buyer, or third party will make a lump sum payment to the lender at closing to lower the quoted interest rate paid on the loan by the borrower. Interest rate buydowns can cover the first few years of the loan's term, or in some cases, they may lower the interest rate for the full term.

-Graduated payment mortgages: This plan helps borrowers qualify for loans by basing repayment schedules on salary expectations and anticipated house price appreciation. With this type of mortgage, the initial interest rate, maturity, and a schedule of monthly payment adjustments are set at loan origination.

-Wraparound mortgages: A wraparound mortgage covers the balance on the existing mortgage owed by the seller plus an additional amount to make up the difference between the existing loan and the purchase price. The interest rate charged for the portion of the loan covering the difference is generally offered at a higher rate than the one on the existing mortgage. But that rate, combined with the rate on the existing loan, usually results in a rate that is lower than what would be charged for a whole new loan covering the entire amount. Wraparound loans can be made to the borrower by the seller or another party, including a lender. This party continues to pay off the existing mortgage, while receiving payments on the wraparound loan from the borrower.

Second mortgages and assumptions: A second mortgage involves the seller or another party lending the buyer enough money to make up the difference between the purchase price (minus the buyer's down payment) and the first mortgage balance. Repayment terms on the second mortgage, including the interest rate, are based on an agreement between the borrower and the lending party. Usually, second mortgages have relatively short terms, perhaps from five to 10 years.

WEED OUT CRABGRASS

SOMERVILLE, N.J. (AP) — The two most prevalent weeds affecting American lawns are the dandelion and the less noticeable but far more destructive crabgrass.

"If left unchecked, crabgrass can take over 80 to 90 percent of your lawn," says Dr. Henry W. Indyk, an extension specialist in turfgrass management at Cook College-Rutgers University.

"A smart approach to controlling crabgrass is to specifically target the weed," he says. "Wait until the crabgrass starts coming up strong, usually in midsummer, and then use a post-emergence product to deal directly with the problem."

ON THE HOUSE

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Planning to paint the outside of your house? Remember the truism that no paint is better than the surface underneath it. If the surface isn't properly prepared, it makes very little difference how skillful the painter is.

Surface preparation is the name of the game. Neglect it and you are half way to poor results. The trouble usually shows up in the form of blistering, peeling, alligatoring, checking or flaking — sometimes all of them.

While paint failures generally are attributed to poor paint or the failure of the painter to handle the brush or roller properly, both of which sometimes occur, water or moisture usually is the major culprit.

If water gets behind the paint — whether because of faulty gutters, openings in the roof or walls, or through interior passageways — it lifts the exterior coat. For instance, excess moisture in the house that can't escape can seep through the interior walls to the outside. That's why peeling sometimes occurs on the outside wall of a house adjacent to the kitchen or another room from which moisture is generated.

A vapor barrier is needed to stop the moisture from getting outside. This barrier can be placed inside the outer wall. Some interior wall paints are formulated to act as a barrier. Vents in the outside wall can prevent the trouble, or a kitchen exhaust fan that draws out moisture.

When latex paint is applied over an oil paint designed to chalk, it may not bond properly. An oil-based primer should be applied before the latex. In most cases the surface should be dry, but that's not necessary if a latex paint designed for damp surfaces is used. Blistered, peeled or alligatored surfaces must be scraped and sanded before repainting the outside of a house. Professionals may use a torch or strong chemical, but extreme care should be taken.

Moisture is but one reason why exterior house paint can be problematic. Applying a second coat before the first dries and using non-compatible primers and top coats are two others. If different brand primers and paints are used, read the labels carefully and get the dealer's advice.

The two aforementioned problems create what is called checking or alligatoring, so-named because the surface resembles the skin of an alligator. Checking is a milder form of alligatoring.

If exterior wooden shakes or shingles are stained once, continue to stain them. If you want to change to paint, a priming is essential. Be sure of what you want because removing paint from shingles and shakes is a messy procedure.

Surface preparations for painting include caulking gaps where rain can enter, preceded by a thorough check of areas around doors and windows, utility outlets and exhaust pipes. Also make sure to remove mildew, dull glossy spots and steel-wool loose rust before painting.

Getting your house ready to paint usually takes more time than painting it.

(All matters pertaining to painting your house are included in Andy Lang's booklet, "Paint Your House Inside and Out," which can be obtained by sending 50 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, NY 11743.)

Low interest loans available for home repair projects

Guadalupe Economic Services Corporation, through grants from the Farmer's Home Administration, has established a program to provide low interest loans for home repairs.

Funds are available for major repairs such as roofing, structure, wiring, plumbing and handicap accessibility.

The maximum loan allowed is $5,000.00. Income, credit history, need for repairs and ability to repay will all be considered. Income limits will be based on family size and combined yearly income. Loans are repaid at 5 percent interest, with length of time for repayment to be on a sliding scale.

Priority will be given to elderly, handicapped and to low income individuals. Each applicant should bring proof of home ownership such as the Deed (must have been living in home for one year immediately prior to applying); income verification for 1986, such as W-2 or Social Security determination letter and, Property Tax Receipts (taxes must be current).

High humidity tough on RVs

COLLEGE STATION — High humidity can be particularly destructive to recreational vehicles such as motor homes and travel trailers, says an official with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

A large number of RVs use a paper or plastic covering pasted over the ceilings and walls, often in the form of a wood grain or wallpaper type design. High humidity sometimes causes the bonding agent or glue to loosen its grip and causes wrinkles or air pockets to form, points out John Cockran, an agricultural engineer. Sometimes this is due to wood expanding or swelling as it takes an additional moisture.

One way to prevent and sometimes correct these wrinkles or air pockets is to leave a lamp with a 60 to 100 watt bulb burning continuously in the RV. The lamp heat should remove a great deal of the excess moisture. After several days, check to see if any wrinkles are still evident.

If loose covering or wrinkles still exist, try pressing them gently with a folded cloth to re-stick the material, recommends Cochran. Do not use a sharp object that may tear the covering. If the covering will not re-stick, "super glue" injected with a disposable syringe does wonders.

Inject small amounts of glue in the wrinkle or air pocket and smooth it out with a cloth. The tiny hole left by the needle is not visible, and excess glue is removed by the cloth, Cochran notes. This practice also keeps glue off the fingers.

DR. GOTT Navel may be infected

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Is a constant navel discharge serious in a 74-year-old person?
DEAR READER — In an adult, a navel discharge usually signifies chronic skin infection. The skin of the navel is dark and warm and may remain moist, providing an ideal environment for yeasts and bacteria to grow.
 Although a navel infection is usually not serious, it can be extremely annoying and unpleasant because of itching, odor or pain. A culture of the area will enable a doctor to pinpoint the cause and suggest appropriate treatment.
DEAR DR. GOTT — My husband, 33, has one extra vertebra on his right side only. Arch supports don't help his back pain. Would surgery to remove the vertebra help?
DEAR READER — A partially undeveloped vertebra in the back can cause pelvic tilt and back pain, as a person attempts unconsciously to compensate for the abnormality. A lift in the shoe may restore normalcy. Surgery is rarely necessary but may be recommended if pain cannot be relieved by less drastic methods.
DEAR DR. GOTT — I'm 51, on my feet eight hours a day and do hard physical labor in a plywood mill. Does this meet the exercise requirements to keep a healthy body? My wife and I walk on weekends.
DEAR READER — Without following you around and watching what you do, I can't say whether the amount of physical labor required by your job is healthy. There is no universally accepted "exercise requirement" for adults. In fact, experts are divided about how much physical activity is appropriate for middle-aged adults.
 The combination of walking and physical labor is probably giving you all the strenuous activity you need. Don't smoke, reduce fats in your diet, stay trim and ask your doctor for specific advice.

WANT ADS DO IT ALL!
YOU WANT IT YOU GOT IT
CLASSIFIED
364-2030
ADDRESS: 313 N. LEE

CLASSIFIED ADS
Classified advertising rates are based on cents a word for first insertion ($2.00 minimum), and 10 cents for second publication and thereafter. Rates below are based on consecutive issues, no copy change, straight word ads.

TIMES	RATE	MIN.
1 day per word	.14	2.00
2 days per word	.24	4.00
3 days per word	.34	6.00
4 days per word	.44	8.00
5th day FREE

Ten days (1 free) is $15.00 minimum; 15 days (3 free) is $23.00 minimum; one month is $31.00 minimum.

CLASSIFIED DISPLAY
Classified display rates apply to all other ads not set in solid word lines—those with captions, bold or larger type, special paragraphing, all capital letters. Rates are $3.95 per column inch; $3.25 an inch for additional insertions.

LEGALIS
Ad rates for legal notices are 14 cents per word first insertion, 10 cents per word for additional insertions.

ERRORS
Every effort is made to avoid errors in word ads and legal notices. Advertisers should call attention to any errors immediately after the first insertion. We will not be responsible for more than one incorrect insertion. In case of errors by the publishers, an additional insertion will be published.

Legal Notices

NOTICE TO BIDDERS

Sealed proposals addressed to Mr. John Fuston, President of the Board of Trustees for the Hereford Independent School District for General Construction Work (including mechanical, plumbing and electrical) for Addition and Alterations to the Hereford Senior High School to be constructed in Hereford, Texas will be received until 4:00 P.M. Thursday, July 16, 1987 in the School Administration Building.

Bids will be publicly opened and read aloud promptly at the stated time. Any bid received after opening time will be returned unopened. No oral, telegraphic or telephone bids will be accepted.

A cashier's check, certified check, or bid bond, payable without recourse to the Owner of not less than five percent (5%) of the largest possible total bid must accompany each bid as a guarantee that if awarded the Contract, the bidder will enter into a contract and execute a bond acceptable to the Owner within ten (10) days from the date of notification of the award of the Contract. The Owner shall have a period of thirty days to accept or reject any proposal submitted for the project.

The successful bidder will be required to enter into a contract with the above named Owner, and furnish performance and payment bonds in the amount of one hundred percent (100%) of the Contract price.

The Owner reserves the right to waive all formalities, to reject any or all bids, and in case of ambiguity or lack of clearness in stating price in the proposal, the Owner reserves the right to adopt the most advantageous construction thereof or to reject the proposal.

Plans and specifications will be on file at the locations of F.W. Dodge Plan Rooms in Lubbock, Amarillo, Dallas, and Abilene, and in the A.G.C. Plan Rooms in Lubbock and Amarillo. Plans and specifications may be obtained at the office Tom Mills-Architect, 8008 Slide Road, No. 20, Lubbock, Texas. A deposit of $50.00 will be required as a guarantee of their safe return and is refundable for ten days from time of final bid opening shown herein. Individual sheets of the drawings may be obtained by payment of reproduction cost.

WOULD YOU LIKE TO TOUR THIS CITY?

And I, John, saw the Holy City, the new Jerusalem, coming down from God out of heaven. It was a glorious sight, beautiful as a bride at her wedding. (Revelation 21:2)

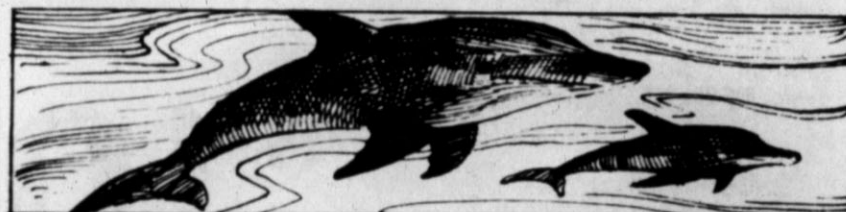

The city itself was pure, transparent gold like glass! The wall was made of jasper, and was built on twelve layers of foundation stones inlaid with gems:

- The first layer with jasper;
- The second with sapphire;
- The third with chalcedony;
- The fourth with emerald;
- The fifth with sardonyx;
- The sixth layer with sardus;
- The seventh with chrysolite;
- The eighth with beryl;
- The ninth with topaz;
- The tenth with chrysolite;
- The eleventh with jacinth;
- The twelfth with amethyst.

The twelve gates were made of pearls--each gate from a single pearl! And the main street was pure, transparent gold, like glass.

No temple could be seen in the city, for the Lord God Almighty and the Lamb are worshiped in it everywhere. And the city has no need of sun or moon to light it, for the glory of God and of the Lamb illuminate it. Its light will light the nations of the earth, and the rulers of the world will come and bring their glory to it. Its gates never close; they stay open all day long--and there is no night! (Revelation 21:18-25)
