

Greenawalt begins HISD duties

By SPEEDY NIEMAN
Editor-Publisher

Charles W. Greenawalt assumed his duties as superintendent of the Hereford Independent School District Monday, stressing that "whatever decisions I make will be based on what's best for the children."

Greenawalt succeeds Dr. Harrell Holder and comes here from Joshua, a Class 4-A district between Fort Worth and Cleburne. The 40-year-old educator had been superintendent there since 1982. Joshua has a population of about 1,500 but the school district has an enrollment of 3,041.

"I'm excited about being here and I think a school system can always improve. I will present a five-year plan to the trustees and will update the goals each year," said Greenawalt. "I am proud of my profession, and I want the system's administrators, teachers and all employees to be proud of this school system. My philosophy is to have a system where we make things happen," he added.

The new superintendent said he was negotiating for a lease-purchase contract on a home in Hereford and hopes to have his family here by Aug. 10. He and his wife, Barbara, have three children. Brenda, 16, will be a junior in high school this fall; Robert, 14, will be a freshman; and Laura, 13, will be in the seventh grade.

Greenawalt commended the Hereford School Board for the manner in which it conducted the search for a new superintendent. "They used a very detailed and thorough process," he pointed out. The board signed Greenawalt to a three-year contract at $62,000 a year. The school district will also provide a car and personal and family insurance benefits. His selection here was announced on June 14.

Greenawalt was born in Pecos on March 2, 1947. He graduated from Port Lavaca High School and earned his bachelor and master's degrees at Texas A&I University in Kingsville. He has 27 additional hours in education administration at Texas A&M and earned a superintendent certificate there in 1977.

After teaching the 7th and 8th grades at Alice High School in 1970-1973, Greenawalt became assistant coordinator of community education as well as director of educational television at Alice. In 1975, he was named coordinator of community education. In 1978, he accepted the principal's job at A&M Consolidated High School in College Station. He accepted the superintendent's post at Joshua in 1982.

Greenawalt has served on the board of the Joshua Area Chamber of Commerce, and was a director for the American Heart Association of Johnson County and the American Cancer Association. The family is affiliated with the Church of Christ.

The new administrator said he believes communications is a vital part of his job and he will set up and chair four committees to assure a better understanding of the system and to keep the lines of communication open. These include a superintendent's communication council, which will have a teacher from each grade level; a curriculum council, and auxiliary personnel committee, which would include representatives of the cafeteria, custodial and maintenance employees; and a student liaison committee, which would include students from each campus.

While most school districts are having financial problems, Greenawalt said "there are two ways to improve the system without spending money." He said he would take a look at how the district is spending money now and evaluate the financial picture.

"I won't be coming in and making a lot of changes. Our five-year plan will have many of the changes we feel are necessary," he added.

"My goal is to use the talents and creativity of our people to do an even better job," Greenawalt concluded.

Mobile home park project draws ire of city residents at commission meeting

By DEBE GRAVES
Staff Writer

So large was a group of petitioners opposed to a proposed mobile home park north of Hereford, that the commissioners had to bring in more chairs for their meeting Monday night in City Hall.

Development planner Melvin Weber, representing his father Merlin Weber, plans to plat land just north of the city into lots to sell for the purpose of building homes. He also plans to use a portion of the land to create a mobile home park which would house approximately 30 trailers.

Since the subdivision is within a five-mile boundary of the city, Weber must comply with city regulations or obtain variance approval from the commissioners.

Charles Cabbiness, spokesman for the opposition group, told commissioners that landowners in the area have some concerns about the proposed project because of a desire to keep the area in good condition. "We would just like to be on record as being opposed to it at this point," he stated. Prior to the meeting commissioners had been provided a petition signed by 88 individuals opposed to the project.

Commissioners, acting on the advice of City Attorney Ernest Langley and City Manager Darwin McGill, advised Weber that they would have to see a formal plat including provisions for streets and water before they could approve the project.

On the advice of Mayor Wes Fisher the opposition group and Weber retired to the city manager's office to iron out some of the confusion and differences related to the project. Of the private meeting Cabbiness said, "We are getting some answers and trying to mediate some type of agreements."

Also related to mobile homes, commissioners unanimously approved a recommendation by the zoning commission to rezone 609 Austin Avenue from a two-family district to a mobile home district. Applicants Loyd and Pauline Bridges appeared before the commission with their request citing they had previously lived in a mobile home on their property and had returned to Hereford with the intent of retiring on the lot they still own.

The couple provided pictures of the lot showing the upkeep and landscaping they had performed and listed planned improvements. After some discussion relating to setting precedence with spot zoning, Commissioner Bud Eades stated he had viewed the lot and that he was in favor of approving the zoning request.

"We should take each case on its own merit," he said. "That's why I went and looked it over." Stating there were already a number of mobile homes in place in the area and that the neighborhood would not be adversely effected by the addition of the Bridges' home, Eades moved the area be re-zoned.

It was questioned and noted that no neighbors had provided any opposition to the matter before commissioners voted on the issue.

A second ordinance related to assessing property owners for paving improvements was passed. The improvements were to North 25 Mile Ave. and it was decided that an assessment of $5.40 per front foot as charged by the State of Texas would be passed on the the property owners.

Certified letters will be mailed out this week to 28 property owners of (See CITY, Page 2)

Pierson takes WDIC post

Diane Pierson has been named as assistant director for the Socio-economic Assessment being conducted by the Waste Deposit Impact Committee (WDIC). Her duties begin July 13.

As assistant director, she will be responsible for the design and implementation of the program for measuring and monitoring socio-economic impacts which result from Deaf Smith County being designated for repository site characterization.

Pierson has been employed by the Deaf Smith County Library since 1978, her last six years as director. She also has worked for the Texas Employment Commission.

She has an English and speech degree from West Texas State University. She has been active in the Hereford Chamber Singers, the YMCA, and church. She was recently honored in the Who's Who for Texas for the Sesquicentennial Year. Her family has farmed in the county for several years.

Pierson was selected from a field of 28 candidates after extensive evaluation.

Sole survivor of boxcar may have been alien smuggler

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — The sole survivor among 19 illegal aliens trapped in a sweltering boxcar while being smuggled across Texas may have been a smuggler himself, a Mexican official says.

Some relatives of the dead told authorities that Miguel Tostado Rodriguez had recruited their kin to make the clandestine trip from central Mexico, said Benito Lopez Dominguez, undersecretary for the state of Zacatecas.

"There are indications he was a human smuggler," Lopez said Monday at the Mexican consulate here.

He said the relatives' accounts don't indicate whether the survivor rounded up the men for money, companionship or free passage to Dallas for himself from smugglers aboard the train.

"These facts I don't have," Lopez said.

Eighteen men died between the time the boxcar left an El Paso freight yard Wednesday night and when it was inspected 14 hours later 90 miles to the east by Border Patrol agents conducting a routine check.

Only Tostado, 21, was alive when agents opened the boxcar Thursday morning.

Of the 17 identifications made to date, seven of the men were from the state of Aguascaliente. Tostado and six of the dead were all from the town of Pabellon de Arteaga in Aguascaliente. The others were from Zacatecas state.

Lopez said relatives of some of the men from Pabellon told him "Tostado was the one who invited them (their kin) to try to go to the border and go across."

William Harrington, assistant chief of the El Paso Border Patrol sector, said investigators are looking at all angles of the case and are not ruling out the possibility Tostado was a recruiter.

Tostado was being held as a material witness by the Border Patrol at its detention center here.

Harrington said he did not know details of investigators' questions to Tostado, and that the survivor was being held "because we don't know if he has information or testimony that we need."

Authorities said two of the men who died were smugglers, and one has been identified as Rafael Zamarron Torres of El Saucito, Zacatecas, said Heriberto Spindola of the Mexican consulate.

The other smuggler has not been identified, Spindola said.

Authorities say the 19 men were locked into the Missouri Pacific boxcar by a third smuggler known only as "the Grasshopper." He is believed to have fled to Mexico.

The 18 bodies were still in El Paso this morning as mortuary workers attempted to finish embalming the last two for the trip south to Central Mexico.

Spindola said the bodies would not cross the border until a plane was ready to pick them up in Juarez for the trip to either Aguascaliente or Zacatecas.

A government plane flying up from the capital in Mexico City will take the bodies home in two trips — one each to Aguascaliente or Zacatecas, Spindola said.

"We want to do at least one trip today," he said.

Spindola said the one unidentified

How characterization is perceived depends on how run

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the second in a three-part series concerning testimony on a nuclear waste project which a DOE official presented last week to a U.S. Senate committee.)

Site characterization is the next step in the Department of Energy's search for the nation's first high-level radioactive nuclear waste repository, a DOE official told the Senate committee on Energy and Natural Resources, and he added that "we believe how well this project is perceived will depend on how well it is operated."

Jeff Neff, Salt Repository Project manager for the Hereford office, gave the committee an overview of the project design. "The repository system itself is being designed and will be operated to prevent contamination of surface water or ground water. Waste brought to a repository would be in solid form and in heavily-shielded casks. Waste packages would be emplaced 2,500 feet below the surface in a stable salt formation."

Neff said the rock strength and very low permeability of this formation will be verified during the five to seven years of site characterization. "Multiple barriers will contain the waste's movement. Engineered barriers—including an insoluble waste form, a corrosion-resistant metal container, repository backfill material, and shaft seals—will be added to the natural barriers of the rock at extreme depth."

The DOE official pointed out that the Dockum aquifer is more than 1,500 feet above the proposed depth of a repository, and the Ogallala aquifer is approximately 2,000 feet above the proposed repository. He added: "In general, our analyses show that the pressure for the aquifer in the vicinity of the Texas site decreases with depth. This creates the potential for ground water at repository depth to flow down to the deeper saline aquifers rather than upward toward the Ogallala and Santa Rosa aquifers."

Neff said the concern is that the Ogallala and Dockum aquifers could be contaminated during construction of shafts for site characterization. "This will be avoided through the use of a proven (over 100 years old) ground-freezing technique which is widely used for digging tunnels and mine shafts where water is anticipated. For example, shafts for mines in Saskatchewan, Canada, have successfully penetrated major aquifers with ground freezing during shaft construction. This method is being tested during construction of the repository in Gorleben, Germany."

Neff also explained how DOE will manage excavated salt at the Deaf Smith County site: "Salt management procedures during the construction of an exploratory shaft for site characterization—and the repository will be similar to those commonly used in the mining industry. The amount of salt excavated for site characterization will be far less than the amount for the repository. A combination of water spraying (resulting in the salt crusts over), retention ponds, impermeable liners, runoff control structures, and monitoring of soil and crop conditions are proven techniques for effectively reducing the possibility of soil or water contamination from the excavated or blowing salt."

The DOE official explained that two exploratory shafts to conduct more detailed studies at depth will be constructed. "Prior to the mining of salt and any storage on the surface, DOE plans to conduct laboratory-scale experiments on wind dispersal of salt and on dust formation. These data will be evaluated against actual salt pile experience at several locations in the country and against actual site meteorological data. Based on these evaluations, a decision will be made whether to store the salt on site, either covered or uncovered, or to ship it off site."

The statement continues: "If the excavated salt is stored temporarily on the surface, it would be in a pile less than 50 feet high, covering less than 5 acres, and containing about 100,000 tons of salt. Most of the salt would be used for backfill if the site

North says he assumed Reagan approved diversion of funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lt. Col. Oliver North testified today that he "never personally discussed" the diversion of Iranian arms sales profits to Contra rebels with President Reagan, but said he assumed — without being told — that Reagan had approved.

But in dramatic testimony before congressional committees, North said Reagan told him in a telephone conversation on Nov. 25: "I just didn't know."

Testifying in a calm, even voice, the former National Security Council aide also candidly admitted shredding documents as the Iran-Contra affair began unraveling last October when a plane carrying American mercenary Eugene Hasenfus crashed in Nicaragua. He said the shredding continued through last November, as Justice Department officials began investigating the affair.

"I think I shredded most of that," he said in response to a question about memos on the diversion of funds. "Did I get them all? I'm not trying to be flippant. I tried to destroy all references to covert operations."

North first raised his hand and swore to tell the truth, then vowed to tell congressional investigators "the good, the bad and the ugly" about his role as point man in the Iran-Contra affair and the cover-up that followed.

North began his long-awaited testimony after his attorney made a futile last-minute effort to block the appearance.

His testimony, carried live by the major television networks, was delayed by fresh wrangling between attorney Brendan Sullivan and the House and Senate Iran-Contra investigating committees.

Camper's body found after two day search

Authorities discovered the body of Richard "Ricky" Lupton Jr., 40, of Amarillo Sunday at the bottom of a 100-foot cliff in Montezuma Canyon near Las Vegas, N.M., two days after he wandered from church camp. He is survived by several Hereford residents.

Lupton, who suffered from Downs Syndrome, left a Christian Life camp at El Povernir about 5:30 p.m. Friday, according to a spokesman for the San Miguel County Sheriff's Department. He was attending the camp with a church group from Amarillo.

Sheriff's department officials said about 70 searchers, including teams from New Mexico and southern Colorado, New Mexico National Guard, and Cannon Air Force Base, looked for Lupton. Local law enforcement and medical officials late Sunday night were trying to determine the exact time of death.

Rosary for Lupton will be recited at 8:30 p.m. today in Rix Funeral Chapel of Hereford. Services will be at 10 a.m. Wednesday in St. Anthony's Catholic Church with the Rev. Cleatus McGorry, pastor, and the Rev. George Huseman of Lugton, Kan., officiating. Burial will be in St. Anthony's Catholic Cemetery under the direction of Rix Funeral Directors of Hereford.

Lupton, born at Littlefield, had lived in Amarillo two years, moving from Lubbock. He attended WETC Training Center of the Amarillo State Center. He was a member of St. Anthony's Catholic Church at Hereford. A sister, Pam Clark, died in 1981.

Survivors include his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Lupton Sr. of Hereford; a brother, Tony Lupton of Hereford; and four sisters, Mrs. Larry Alley and Mrs. Ralph Diller, both of Hereford, Mrs. Red Maddux of Euless and Mrs. Fran Jackson of Phoenix, Ariz.

The family will be at 317 Elm Street.

The family requests that memorials be made to volunteer search and rescue teams of Colorado and New Mexico in care of the Hereford State Bank.

record. The letters will advise the property owners of the assessment and of an Aug. 3 hearing set to review the procedure with owners and interested parties. According to Langley, the owners at the time the ordinance was passed, July 6, 1987, will be responsible for payment of the assessment.

Assessments range from $4 to $5,632 and may be paid in full or on a payment plan provided for by state law.

Fisher reported on the Panhandle effort to attract the Department of Energy's proposed Superconducting Super Collider contract to a site near Dimmitt. Fisher said that the state has estimated $447,000 will be needed to provide a "world class" proposal for developing the Panhandle site.

The state will pay $250,000 of the needed funds and will require the Panhandle area to provide an additional $140,000 over the $45,599 Amarillo has already contributed.

Based on population and tax levy, each area has been allocated a dollar amount of requested contribution. The cities of Amarillo, Plainview, Hereford, Canyon, Dimmitt, Tulia, Hart, Kress, Happy and Nazareth have been asked to contribute as well as the counties of Potter, Randall, Hale, Deaf Smith, Castro and Swisher.

If attracted to the area, the SSC would bring in 56,000 jobs over a six-year period. Fisher stated, "In terms of what this project could do for our area this would be the find of the century."

Commissioners unanimously agreed to provide the requested $9,157 to the project. Deaf Smith County will be asked to provide an additional $19,348. Amarillo will provide $164,553 and Potter and Randall Counties will each provide $72,000.

In the final matter of their agenda commissioners agreed to participate in the formation of a regional law enforcement drug unit in the Panhandle.

Chief Don. Brush and David Wagner of the Hereford Police Department presented information pertaining to the possibility of obtaining federal grant monies to partially fund the unit.

Ann Landers Retirement not planned

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'm sure I speak for millions when I say I am sorry you have decided to retire. You've done a wonderful job all these years and deserve the freedom that retirement will offer. Goodbye and God bless.—C.D.R., Cleveland

DEAR CLEVE: Retire? Who, me? Surely you jest. I can't imagine anything less appealing. I plan to appear in this space as long as the good Lord gives me the strength to belt out the column. Thanks for caring.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I know you've read a great many sad letters over the years, but this one will be one of the most heartbreaking. I hope you will print it because it points out how unnecessary some tragedies are.

A young couple's wedding day ended in sorrow when their limousine was broadsided by a car as they were turning into the reception parking lot.

The groom and the best man (brothers) were killed instantly, and the bride and her maid of honor (sisters) are in critical condition.

The best man left a wife and two small children. The bride's leg had to be amputated two days ago. Yesterday they buried both the young men.

How did this terrible accident happen? Two wild kids were drag-racing on the highway. One was going 85 m.p.h. when he plowed into the limo.

My own darling daughter was married three months ago and when I think that this could have happened to her I want to scream. I hope every reader who has attended a wedding in the last six months will put herself or himself in the place of the parents of those maimed and killed.

Something must be done to get the maniacs off the streets and highways. Any suggestions?—Heartsick in Long Island

DEAR L.L.: And I am Heartsick in Chicago. What a story.

We need more police on the lookout for the lunatics, and when they are caught they must be made to put in several hundred hours of community service, pay a stiff fine, attend rehabilitation sessions that involve viewing films of similar crashes.

They should be taken to hospital emergency rooms and forced to look at victims who are brought in after other car crashes. In my opinion this approach would be a great deal more effective than sending the culprits to jail.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: This is in response to your recent column about the 13-year-old boy who was short for his age.

My son at 13 was also the runt of his class and the butt of many jokes. His tall father felt it was a reflection on his genes. Over my objections he dragged the boy to an endocrinologist. Thank God he was a sensible and caring doctor and refused to give the boy shots. He said, "Leave him alone. Give him time to grow normally." (Actually our son was not tiny, just a bit undersized compared to most boys his age.)

Two years later my husband died. My son started to catch up on his 15th birthday and kept growing until he was 21. The "runt" is now 31 and over six feet tall.

Your advice to the other boy's mother was excellent, but my letter goes one step further, I urge parents to accept your sons just as they are—short, tall, skinny, whatever. Give them loving support, and let them know you love them just as God made them.—H.H. in New York

DEAR H.H.: May I grab your coat-tails and add one more thought? Children (girls as well as boys) should be loved for what they are, not how they look. Entirely too much emphasis is placed on beauty, the ideal figure and other superficial garbage that doesn't amount to a hill of beans in the long run. Thanks for saying it so well.

CONFIDENTIAL TO ANXIOUS AND MORTIFIED IN CENTURY CITY: Stop sweating. I received all four of your Mailgrams and that letter will NOT appear in the paper. Before your messages arrived, I tried to clean it up for publication, but it was impossible.

DR. GOTT No surgery for astigmatism

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT — What is the cause of astigmatism? Can it be surgically corrected?

DEAR READER — Astigmatism is an abnormal eye condition in which the curve of the cornea is unequal. This irregularity prevents light from being clearly focused on the retina; blurred vision and eyestrain result.

Most forms of astigmatism are inherited. In almost all cases, vision can be corrected with eyeglasses or contact lenses. Surgery is usually not necessary.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Every month, before my period, I get a craving for starch and eat it directly out of the box. Will this harm me?

DEAR READER — You are describing pica, the abnormal ingestion of unusual substances. The craving to eat laundry starch, clay, chalk, glue, dirt or ice can lead to dietary deficiencies and malnutrition. For unknown reasons, people with pica may already have iron deficiency. Laundry starch is a carbohydrate with very low iron content, so doctors are often unsure which comes first: the pica or the mineral deficiency. Because eating laundry starch is inappropriate — and may cause iron deficiency — you should check with a doctor for an examination and blood test. Pica is seen in people with inadequate diets and mental disorders, as well as pregnant women. You need medical attention.

DEAR DR. GOTT — My son is behaving strangely. He keeps a wet washcloth in the car and cleans it all the time. He holds the cloth between doors and his hand, and he uses a clean towel every time he washes his hands. He even washes the inside of his shoes. He's 25 and this has been getting worse since his father died when he was 14.

DEAR READER — Your son is exhibiting obsessive-compulsive behavior. In most cases, this reflects a fundamental and unresolved emotional problem. Try to get your son to agree to psychological counseling, which can help him to address the underlying problem and give up his repetitive and ineffectual routine.

To give you more information about emotional problems and counseling, I'm sending you a free copy of my Health Report on MENTAL AND EMOTIONAL ILLNESS. Others who want a copy of this Health Report should send $1 and their name and address to P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3369. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I'm 23 and had open-heart surgery in 1977 and 1980. I have a plastic mitral valve that clicks (I can hear it). I saw the valve working on the monitor while I was in the hospital, and I think it's neat. Who invented it and how successful has it

DEAR READER — Prosthetic (artificial) valves are truly one of the miracles of modern science. Several types are widely used; I do not know the specific brand you have, but they all work on pretty much the same principle. The valve is a caged-ball device that replaces the diseased valve, blocks the valve opening and prevents backflow of blood. The Starr-Edwards prosthesis was one of the earliest and most successful artificial valves. Porcine valves are often implanted in humans whose hearts are malfunctioning because of valvular disease. I am sure that your cardiac surgeon or cardiologist would be willing to sit down with you, show you a valve similar to yours and explain much of the fascinating technical history of these remarkable inventions.

DEAR DR. GOTT — My son, 2, enjoys biting whenever anything is taken away from him. We've tried many different kinds of punishment, but he laughs, throws something or bites back. I know about the "terrible 2s," but this is ridiculous.

DEAR READER — Youngsters often take great delight in exploring their environments, "flexing their muscles" — and getting a rise out of adults. Think of it. Here's a 2-year-old who automatically becomes the center of attention by chomping at will. Of course, biting is inappropriate behavior, yet consider the amount of re-

DEAR DR. GOTT — Why is water more beneficial than juices and soft drinks?

DEAR READER — When our thirst center tells us to drink, it is responding to water depletion of our systems. Therefore, water is what we need. Juices contain fruit sugar (and vitamins) as well as water. Unless a person is overweight, I believe that juice is an appropriate substitute. However, soft drinks contain many ingredients, some of which — like caffeine and other additives — are not beneficial to health. Colas are OK as a snack but, technically, they are non-nutritious "food." You would do better to slake your thirst with water — or juice — and leave the soft drinks for a treat.

The general meeting of the Womens Missionary Union of First Baptist Church met Wednesday in the church fellowship hall for a business meeting and program.

Bonnie Sublett, president, opened the meeting by asking Ella Oglesby to voice the prayer for the concerns of the group. Sublett also led in the reading of the watchword. Actors earn most money from commercials

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Cliff Robertson ran through the reading for the third time on Stage 11 at the Culver Studios.

"Let's do it again," said the director. On the fourth try, Robertson stumbled over a word! A woman standing by the director held a stop watch. On the next reading, the director still wasn't satisfied, but agreed that Robertson had the right pace.

Robertson had just flown in from Canada for three long days of filming and sound recording commercials for AT&T. A limousine was waiting outside to take him to the airport for a flight to London.

Several times, people walked onto the stage during recording despite the red warning light. Robertson shook his head in disbelief. "The light doesn't stop them," he said. "It used to be sacrosanct. Everybody kept quiet."

Although Robertson is a major star and appears regularly in motion pictures and television, a substantial part of his income comes from his commercials for AT&T.

In 1985, actors working in film earned $287 million, or approximately half of all their income, from commercials, said Mark Locher, a spokesman for the Screen Actors Guild. A large percentage of the commercials are made in New York, the only area of production where New York is ahead of Los Angeles.

"Commercials are really the bread and butter of the working actor," said Locher.

They are also the caviar of many stars. Figures are hard to come by, but multimillion-dollar contracts are common.

Pop star Michael Jackson has made millions for his commercials for Pepsi Cola. "Moonlighting" star Bruce Willis has a multimillion-dollar contract with Seagrams for wine cooler commercials.

John Wayne reportedly received $2 million for his spots for a savings and loan company. Henry Fonda once said he made more from commercials filmed in five days than from all the rest of his movies that year.

Bill Cosby is probably the star seen most often in current TV commercials. His spots for Jell-O seem to be everywhere, frequently run with his top-rated series on NBC, "The Cosby Show."

Marty Ingels, the first and the biggest of the "celebrity brokers," persuaded stars to do commercials after setting up his company in 1976.

"You see stories about Michael Jackson or Alan Alda signing $5 million contracts, but those are for four or five years, with yearly options," he said. "The big money is there, but it's spread over a number of years."

Ingels said the fees paid to stars are going up for some, but they are falling for others because of an oversupply of celebrities.

The United States, with about 240 million people and about 130 million autos, has the most cars per capita of any major nation in the world. Mainland China, on the other hand, with more than 1 billion people and only 100,000 registered cars, has the fewest automobiles per capita.

The "Truth in Mileage Act" was recently signed into law which increased fines and penalties for rolling back odometers.
The law requires mileage readings to be recorded at the time of vehicle transfer following a sale, and prohibits a vehicle from being registered in any state unless mileage can be verified. The law also requires leasing companies with long term leasing contracts to disclose mileage when the vehicle is sold. Auction houses will also be required to maintain mileage records on any used vehicles they sell.

Porsche owners primp, vie for car trophy

EULESS, Texas (AP) - Abandoned in the outdoors for a quarter century, a restored one-of-a-kind Porsche race car made the finals of the Concours d'Elegance, a beauty contest for the German sports car.

Ray Knight of Jeffersonville, Ind., bought the car in 1962; it had been custom-built for a German businessman during the early 1950s.

Knight, a doctor who said he owns "a couple or three" other Porsches, spent four years and 4,000 hours restoring the race car. He said he has no idea of its worth.

"I'd always wanted a really old, funky car," Knight said. "It's an awful lot of fun to show it and have people see it because it's really of historical significance."

Knight and some 70 Porscheophiles from around the world displayed their beloved automobiles Monday before more than 1,200 people at the highlight of the 32nd Porsche Parade, the annual gathering of the Porsche Club of America. Officials from the Porsche factory in Germany said the cars were in better condition than when they were sold off the showroom floor.

Knight's silver "Sauter Racer" was one of eight Concours finalists arrayed on the fairway of an airport hotel golf course. Tom Scott's white 1977 Porsche 924 was another.

Scott, who owns a securities transfer firm in Denver, finished second in the Concours for the past two years with his tan '66 911. He said he decided to show the 924 because "people were getting tired of seeing" the other car.

Scott said it took him two years to get the sports car ready.

"You take the car apart almost completely, clean and polish nearly every part," he said. "The basis for judging is condition - it has to be absolutely perfect - and cleanliness - not a speck of dirt on it."

"It's a show car, pure and simple," he said.

Dale Miller of West Palm Beach, Fla., one of the judges, says this year's Concours is as good as any anywhere in the world.

"Even the Porsche factory people have commented that the level of restoration is absolutely superb," said Miller, who is PCA historian and manager of an antique automobile museum.

With a membership of 25,000 families, the PCA is the biggest single make car club in the country, Miller said, and nearly as big as the more broad-based Sports Car Club of America.

"I think we just feel that the car is in the absolute elite of automobiles," said Miller, who characterized PCA membership as a "good cross-section."

"A lot of our members are professional people, but a lot just bought 356s years ago and never lost their love affair with Porsches," he said.

The 356 model is the original Porsche; it was built beginning in 1948, he said.

Most PCA members who own more than one Porsche tend to have older models, Miller said. They do most of the restoration themselves, sometime even using cotton swabs for polishing and swathing the tires in booties to save on wear, he said.

Scott, who owns two other Porsches and a Subaru, says he started out with a Speedster that he restored and won fourth place in his first year of competition.

"Money can't be much of a consideration in this event when you're talking about the hundreds of hours you spend getting the car ready," Scott said.

In addition to the Concours, PCA members are engaged in rallies and autocross events along with trading information and parts during the six-day Porsche Parade. There were a total of 585 Porsches at Monday's gathering.

Organizers expect more than 1,600 people from all over the world by the time the event winds up Friday.

Haigime Yamamoto, who flew in from Japan, owns four Porsches and says he wouldn't own a Japanese car because they're not made as well as the German-built car.

It's brief respite from daily explosions

NEW YORK (AP) — A calendar change can mean a big change in economic thinking, and if you don't think so, you might consider consulting your daily newspaper.

The big calendar change of the moment is the economy's entrance into the second half of the year, accompanied by the views of all those economists and securities analysts who issued poor forecasts last January.

In the interim, many of these forecasters have been assailing the populace with alarming commentaries about what might happen in the next day or week in the bond or stock markets, or to interest rates and prices.

Now, at midyear, their thinking suddenly becomes more long-range, and all the worries that had occupied them day by day and week by week fall back into perspective, where they belonged all the time.

No longer does it appear that the Japanese will take over America by means of economics, or that stocks will explode to 3,000 points or fall to 1,500 points on the Dow Jones industrial average. Or that bonds will collapse.

Long-range views usually call for a continuation of existing levels of activity, since change is almost impossible to see. A six-month forecast is not treated lightly because, unlike daily forecasts, it cannot be fixed quickly.

It is also impossible these days, when nobody really understands the economic world, to do anything but take the safe stance, which is to assume that all forces currently acting on the economy will remain as they are.

For a short time, therefore, the excitement might abate and you might become accustomed to stories that suggest economic stability, or at least a continuation of what serves as stability these days.

The notion that the Japanese will take over America by economic power will be debunked. Replacing it will be accounts of why Japanese investment is needed in order to maintain economic stability.

The decline of the dollar, which had caused almost daily hysteria during the first half of the year, will be assessed as having done much to strengthen the American economy and, perhaps, even the economies of Japan and Europe.

The stock market, which by the day seems to create more excitement than the baseball boxscores, will, in the perspective of six months, be seen as rather drab. For a while, all those daily upheavals that portended disaster or a new record or a fabulous fortune will be seen as squiggles that had little meaning.

Do you recall the inflation scare? Two months ago, inflation was on the mind of everyone with the least interest in the economy. Looking back, it was a mere episode. Looking forward, few forecasters expect anything big on the subject. And neither do they see a lot of action on the interest rate front.

This temporary complacency about events might, while generally welcome, unfortunately might have a negative aspect to it.

Since the budget deficit, for example, the uncollectable loans to Third World nations and the overspending of the typical American household failed to produce debacles, there might be a tendency to discount them as problems.

One trait that has developed in six-month forecasters over the past decade or so is to place a great deal of faith in the theory of muddling through, or of somehow evading the logical consequences of economic misdeeds.

In that perspective, explosive problems are seen as fireworks without wicks. But after the daily fireworks of the past six months, most people might welcome a little midyear peace even if it isn't earned.

CBS cancels contract with Nielsen

NEW YORK (AP) — CBS, like ABC, has canceled its contract with the A.C. Nielsen Co. over the introduction by the TV ratings service of "people meters" in the fall.

David Poltrack, CBS vice president for research, said Monday the network might still sign with Nielsen before the new season starts in September, but the notification of cancellation was necessary to avoid automatic renewal of the contract.

ABC canceled its contract with Nielsen earlier this year.

None of the big three networks has signed with Nielsen for the new season because of concern that people meters, hand-held devices for measuring viewership, will distort ratings when they go into use in the fall.

However, all three networks are continuing to negotiate with the company.

Helpful Hints For Your Yard & Garden!

- Check the mowing heights on your cool season grasses; mow Bluegrass at 3-3 1/2" and Fescue at 3 1/2". Mow your warm season grasses; Bermuda at 1 1/2" and Buffalo at 2".
- Also try to mow regularly, so that mowing does not remove more than 1/3 of the blade at one time.
