Texas wine isn't 'Chateau Bubba' anymore

By DEBE GRAVES
Staff Writer

The California and European wine makers are not calling Texas wines Chateau Bubba anymore.

Art Reinauer, owner of LaEscabarda XIT winery, said in reference to the acceptance Texas wines are gaining among wine growers, makers, lovers and drinkers at Lubbock's Fourth International Wine Classic recently.

Over 900 guests attended various aspects of the weekend event which included noteworthy speakers such as Stanley Dry, associate editor of Food and Wine magazine, and syndicated wine columnist Jerry Mead of San Francisco.

Dry, a Texas native, remarked on the current trendy interest in Southwestern and Texas cooking and on a growing interest in Texas wines. He said Texas wines, though popular, are difficult to find in New York City. On a walking and tasting tour of Pheasant Ridge Winery, located near Lubbock, he said their 1986 Sauvignon Blanc is "very nice—one of the best I've tasted."

"Texas wines compare very well to the California wines," he said. "It is still such a young industry in Texas that they can only get better and better."

Owned by the Robert Cox family, Pheasant Ridge is one of 16 commercial wineries winding their way through the state of Texas from Deaf Smith County to Del Rio. These and an array of other U.S. and non-American wines were participants in the Lubbock wine tasting which drew a crowd of around 900.

"Texas winemakers attribute much of their success to the research conducted in test plots in the early 70's," said Reinauer. He said that Llano Estacado Winery, near Lubbock, was started through the research efforts of Texas Tech professors and that Tech professors are now working to establish research centers for oenology, the study of wine making, and viticulture, the study of grape growing.

"In Texas we are gaining credibility as wine makers," Reinauer said. "We are proving we can make good wine, and we are proving this industry will work in Texas."

XIT's first wine crush, in August of 1985, yielded 200 cases of wine. In 1986, the yield increased to 600 cases and in 1987 to 1,500 cases. Reinauer said he expects to produce 2,000 cases in 1988 and then "level off for a couple of years while we concentrate on establishing our marketing concepts."

Reinauer began the project to establish an agriculture crop which is efficient in conservation of water, he said. "Drip irrigation is being used by several of my growers because they don't lose as much water to evaporation. In trying to conserve water and look to the future, drip irrigation is the most reasonable answer."

Bank deposits mixed

Deposits at Hereford's two banks totalled $141.5 million at the close of business Sept. 30, 1987, according to statements published by the financial institutions.

First National Bank showed deposits of $82,946,000 and loans totaling $47,514,000. These totals were both down in comparison to totals a year ago. Deposits were $84,063,000 and loans were $58,480,000 at FNB on Sept. 30, 1986.

Hereford State Bank showed deposits of $58,544,000 and loans of $38,170 in its recent report. Deposits were up more than $2 million from a year ago, while loans had increased almost $5 million.

Deposits at both banks were up about $3 million over the mid-year totals reported June 30, 1987. Peak deposits usually are reported at the close of business on Dec. 30.

Nice kitty

Passersby wave at a caged tiger Thursday at Hereford Bi-Products as the tiger, and several other animals, waited for a fresh meal. The tiger was part of a circus on its way to winter quarters in Florida that stopped at the local animal food processor to pick up food for the winter. Hereford Bi-Products officials said the animals eat about 1,000 pounds of food a day.

Joe received $10 too much on his paycheck but didn't say a word to anyone. The bookkeeper noticed the mistake the next week and deducted $10 from Joe's paycheck.

"Excuse me, sir," said Joe, "I'm short $10 this week."

"You didn't complain last week," said the bookkeeper.

"No, sir, I don't mind overlooking one mistake, but when it happens twice, then it's time to say something."

This week has been the observance of National Newspaper Week and we haven't "looted our horn" much, but today's issue carries a special page in tribute to our newspaper carriers.

These "little merchants" are vital to the success of the newspaper, as they serve to get our product to the homes in the community five days a week. We hope you'll look over the tribute to the carriers inside today's paper.

As another recognition, we offer the following tribute paid to carriers several years ago by Erna Bornbeck:

Dr. Henry Kissinger takes vacations. So does the president of General Motors. And George Mandy. And Dr. De Babay. And Mayer Lind-say.

But you don't know what "vital and indispensable" are until you're a newspaper boy looking for a sub to carry your route for a week while you go to camp.

I haven't heard so many excuses since I asked my best friend to carry a pregnancy for me.

"Did you ask Rick?" I asked my son anxiously.

"Yes, and he said no."

"Did you make the job sound attractive?"

"Sure. I told him it was a lot of laughs. You get up at 4 a.m., pick up a bundle of 48 papers for your 52 customers, pedal your bike ten miles, get bit by three dogs, run off the road by a milk truck and when you try to collect, get a clown who wants to know if you can break a $50."

"Did he laugh?"

"Not until I told him the salary."

"What about Gary?"

"He's allergic."

"To what?"

"Getting up at 4 a.m."

"And Mark?"

"He doesn't have a bike."

"Since when?"

"Since the last time he subbed for me and someone stole it."

"Surely Kenny would do it."

"He would, but he's too little to handle the Hernal Edition."

"What's the Hernal Edition?" I asked.

"The Sunday paper."

"Could the branch manager sub?"

"He's throwing two other routes."

"What about your father?"

"He burst the first gear out of his car the last time."

I called the paper. The circulation manager was at a convention in San Diego. The personnel director was ill. The managing editor was on special assignment and the publisher was on vacation.

My eyes glistened with pride. We elect a president every four years, but when you're a 18-year-old newspaperboy...it's easier to grow a new one than to replace the old one.

Local Roundup

County plans short agenda

Deaf Smith County Commissioners will face a seven-item agenda when they meet Monday at 10 a.m. at the courthouse in Hereford. The agenda includes health insurance bids, a vote on members of the Tax Appraisal District board; advertising for audit proposals; discussion of the 1985-86 audit; and a request by Contel to cross a county road.

School board meets Tuesday

The Hereford school board will meet Tuesday at 6 p.m. in the HISD Administration Building.

The agenda includes the high school remodeling project; report on bilingual education; a vote on members of the Tax Appraisal District board; a request for shortened class periods; approval of group health insurance; promotion and retention guidelines; a change in the curriculum guidelines; grade point classifications; career ladder procedures; and vocational computer bids.

The Wizard of Id

New comics will debut Tuesday

Five new daily comic strips will debut Tuesday in The Hereford Brand.

The new strips include "Blondie," "The Wizard of Id," "Marvin," "Barney Google and Snuffy Smith," and "Beetle Bailey."

Each of the new strips is ranked in the Top 30 in a recent nationwide readership poll. Only two of the Brand's current strips are ranked in the Top 20.

Along with the new strips, two new popular features will appear on a regular basis—"Hints from Heloise" and "Ask Dr. Lamb."

"Ask Dr. Lamb" is a consumer-oriented medical column that has appeared before in the Brand. "Hints from Heloise" is a potpourri of household ideas.

The Brand will continue its "Ann Landers" and several other regular features.

"We know that many of our readers were disappointed when we discontinued our Sunday color comics," said Brand Managing Editor John Brooks. "We feel that the new comics will make up for some of that disappointment."

"Many readers have mentioned that they liked the 'Ask Dr. Lamb' feature when it ran in the Brand before, and we're responding to those thoughts."

"Hints from Heloise" is in its third generation of 'Heloise' now. It's been a very popular feature for a number of years, and our readers should enjoy it."

Babbling Brooks

By JOHN BROOKS
Managing Editor

Tom Draper was insulted. Tom Draper is the man responsible for that sign on the highway south of town that says "Cat if by Day, Coon if by night."

Tom's a hunter, and a successful one.

You can tell Tom is successful because he has several dogs. If he weren't successful, he wouldn't have the dogs, because dogs are fun but Mark and Matthew and Sam and the rest do run up the feed bill.

Tom doesn't know for sure how many dogs he has, 'cause he says it's bad luck for a hunter to know how many dogs he has hangin' around and pinned up.

Tom's insulted because a racoon has left a telltale mark out by the tailwater pit, a bit of 'coon waste.

"That's just insultin' for a hunter," Tom told me Thursday. "Here, come on over here. You're able-bodied, let's see what's over here."

We walked down closer to the edge of the water in the pit, and Tom showed me what he meant by being insulted.

"This is an old 'coon track," he pointed out to my untrained eye. "Here's some fresher ones."

After Tom helped pull me out of some fresher-than-it-looked mud, he showed me the fresh 'coon tracks.

Tom, and Joe Henry, who farms his place about seven miles south of Hereford, have caught three 'coons recently in their home-made cage traps (don't worry, the coons don't get hurt), and Tom says there are more coons around than you might imagine.

He pointed off to an overgrown playa lake just down the road.

"You see that over yonder?" he asked. "That stuff is so thick I've had my dogs come out just beat up around the nose and throat because the vegetation is so thick."

"Yep, there are a lot of coons down there. Shoot, there's a bunch all over the place."

I've been snipe hunting—I was so naive when I was a kid I went three times before I caught on—but I've never been coon hunting.

Tom has promised to rectify that short-coming in my life, and I'm looking forward to it.

I'll let you know what happens.

There was a rumor going around town that Vice President George Bush cast the deciding vote Tuesday to fund Texas Rural Legal Aid for another year.

To my knowledge, there was no vote in the Senate concerning TRLA, its parent agency Legal Services Corporation, or anything besides watching the Bork vote on television.

Several folks took the story seriously enough to call Rep. Larry Combest's Washington office.

It's amazing how such stories are spread. They grow like a rose, and usually are nothing more than that fertilizer I was referring to a moment ago.

If you want a true story about Washington, here's one.

Rep. Combest was recently honored for helping to do away with a little extra something that was costing U.S. (that's US) taxpayers a few hundred thousand a year.

Seems the government was trying to lessen the unemployment rate by using elevator operators at government buildings.

For automatic elevators.

For the record, I want to say I am extremely appalled by a couple of bumper stickers, and something that was obviously done in Magic Marker, on the back of a few local vehicles.

It seems that some closed-minded folks have decided that their bumper, exposed to all, is theirs to display whatever words they want.

One in particular started, several years ago, with, "If you can read this, you're too close."

The bumper sticker then picked up a word between "too" and "close," then recently picked up an even stronger word in the same place.

Then it started calling me a name in another spot, then used another name in the bottom.

On top of everything else, they drive down the middle of the road, even on four-lane roadways in town, and drive so slowly that you have to follow too !—&?() close, as the sticker suggests you're doing, anyway.

I'm sure these )?&— don't read the paper, but I hope someone gets the message to them that their message is not appreciated by anyone.

bb

I also have to chuckle and wonder if these folks go to church in these cars.

I remember back to when I was a wee widdle kid, when my father had a pair of fuzzy dice hanging from the rear-view mirror of the family '53 Mercury back when it was sort of fashionable.

However, the dice came off when mama took us to church on Sunday.

It's certainly easier to take down the fuzzy dice than it is to remove Magic-Marked words from the trunk of the car.

Garms announces for state senate

Nancy S. Garms, an Amarillo attorney, this week announced her candidacy for State Senate, District 31, in the Democratic Primary.

At a news conference Wednesday in Amarillo, Garms said she would draw on her professional background as a teacher, small business owner and lawyer "to bring credibility to the Senate seat."

Garms is the current president of the Amarillo Bar Association, chairman of the Amarillo in Motion chamber of commerce campaign, an elder in the First Presbyterian Church, and a director of several other civic and professional boards.

Garms served as a legislative analyst for Gov. Mark White in 1983 and was an administrative assistant to Rep. Bob Simpson for the summer session of the legislature in 1984. A native of Quannah, she graduated from Abilene High School and Hardin Simmons University. She earned her master's degree at the University of Tulsa and a law degree at Texas Tech University.

Letters to the Editor

Dear editor:

Multiple Sclerosis is a disease that worries many people in the Texas Panhandle. The area has a very high incidence rate of M.S. Twenty five cases per fifty thousand people is the average south of the Mason-Dixon line, and yet, in Dumas alone (Pop. 13,515), we have over 20 known patients!

We have begun a search to find every M.S. patient in the Panhandle. Why? Because for each new case we can verify with statistics, we improve our chances of attracting national M.S. researchers to search our area for the elusive cause and cure of this affliction that strikes down so many young adults in the prime of life.

On Oct. 30 and 31, Dr. Thor Hanson, National Multiple Sclerosis Society president and chief executive officer, will be in Amarillo. At that time, we would like to present him with our survey statistics as proof that this area warrants national attention.

Because registering with the M.S. Society is strictly voluntary and doctors are prohibited from releasing any patient information, there is no accurate way to determine the exact number of area cases, unless we have the public's help.

We are searching for: Names and addresses of those with M.S. who lived in the Panhandle the first fifteen years of their lives (regardless of their present location); deceased M.S. patients who were reared in the area; those with M.S. living in the Panhandle who are not registered with the Amarillo M.S. office; anyone who lived in the Texas Panhandle for any substantial length of time and was diagnosed as having M.S.

If you have any information you feel would be helpful, please contact the Panhandle Chapter of the M.S. Society, 1418 West 8th, Amarillo, Texas 79101 (phone 860-373-4429), or write M.S. Search, Box 963, Dumas, Texas 79028. All information is confidential.

Thank you,
Dumas M.S. Patients

Boys Ranch to dedicate auditorium

A new fine arts building and auditorium complex for use by the young residents of Cal Farley's Boys Ranch will be dedicated on Oct. 21, at 1 p.m.

The funds for these two buildings were provided through the gifts of Mrs. Ned O. Miller of Amarillo and the Leroy E. and Lillian Dobkins estates of Fort Worth. Mrs. Miller provided funds for the auditorium in memory of her husband who knew Cal Farley in the Ranch's founding days and supported his philosophies of raising boys. The fine arts building was made possible by the Dobkins estates which provided finances specifically for such projects at the Ranch.

Construction of the 47,000 square-foot complex began in May, 1986 and was completed one year later. Designed by the architectural firm of Shiver and Megert, the general contractor for the project was the Page and Associates Construction Company.

The Dobkins Fine Arts Center will provide much needed space for the Boys Ranch band, choir and drama departments. These classes were once held in rooms which were not designed for music and drama. The new facility will improve conditions for these educations in a central location, and over 200 boys enrolled in these classes will benefit directly from the fine arts center.

The Ned O. Miller Auditorium includes a fully-equipped stage, lighting and sound system, with seating for nearly 1,000 people. The auditorium will accommodate Ranch school and community gatherings which used to be held in the chapel. The stage will offer facilities for school plays and concerts previously conducted in the Ranch dining hall.

The dedication ceremonies on Oct. 21 will coincide with the quarterly meeting of the Boys Ranch Board of Directors who will be recognized along with past directors of their families. Along with honoring the Dobkins and Miller estates, the facilities will be dedicated to the better educations of all the Ranch's boys. Presiding over the ceremonies will be Roy E. Turner, president of the Board of Directors and one of the Ranch's first nine boys in 1939.

A highlight of the celebration will be brief performances by the Boys ranch band, choir and drama team. A tour of the facilities will follow at 2 p.m.

Not lovable

At this writing (Friday), it appears that the nomination of Judge Robert Bork for the Supreme Court will be defeated in the U.S. Senate, or that he will withdraw his name from consideration.

All I know about the judge is what I've read since the hearings got underway and news released and editorial opinions that have been sent my way. Yet, I seriously doubt that he is as big a scoundrel as Ted Kennedy, Joe Biden and some more liberals make him out to be. Can you imagine the slander and nastiness Kennedy and Biden would have to face under similar hearings?

Paul Harvey may have hit the nail on the head in a recent newscast when he said: "Robert Bork is eminently qualified to sit as a supreme court justice, but he is not a lovable individual. But, had we needed a lovable individual on the supreme court, we would have picked someone like Elvis Presley."

Judge Bork is not the only qualified man for the job, but it's a shame he had to be exposed to the political rhetoric some of the senators used to take over the television spotlight. It may be difficult to find a lovable individual who is qualified for the supreme court seat.

Pay or stay

During the last session of the state legislature, the lawmakers attempted to relieve the overcrowding problems in county jails by changing the dollar credit for days served in jail. In the past prisoners were credited $15 toward their fines for each day that they served in jail. The legislators increased that credit to $45 per day.

On the face of it, the increase in jail time credit would be a way to move prisoners through the county jails faster. A $500 fine could be worked off with a little over eleven days jail time compared to over thirty days under the old system.

If a prisoner volunteers for the county work program, the credit for time spent in jail is doubled. Each day that the prisoner works he receives credit for two days time toward his sentence.

With the work credit applied to the increased monetary credit for jail time a convict can accumulate enough credit to work off a $500 fine in a little over a week of time in jail. By working for the county the prisoner is paid $90 per day toward his fines.

This is all fine and well for moving prisoners normally in the jail through the system quickly and freeing space for incoming convicts. The problems arise when people that normally paid their fines opt for jail time rather than the expense of the fine.

Very few people make $90 per day or $450 per week. The idea of serving a week in jail instead of paying a $500 fine will appeal to a percentage of those convicted of minor crimes. With the county, in effect, offering higher wages than a regular job, it would make good economic sense to serve jail time.

If a large number of people that currently pay the fines assessed choose to move into the county jail for a week, the population of Ochiltree county jail could quickly swell past the maximum allowed by the Jail Standards Commission. The county would then be required to move prisoners to other jails in the area.

The effect on the county budget would be twofold. First, the revenue from fines would drop dramatically if jail time was substituted for payment. Second, the county would be faced with increased costs in housing and feeding more prisoners and paying the charges for housing convicts at other jails.

Once again, the legislature in trying to solve a problem has created the conditions to actually aggravate the problem they originally set out to solve.

The prison problem

The announcement that state officials are planning to build twice as many low-risk prisons than originally planned indicates that someone is finally understanding the magnitude of the problem here in Texas.

Prisoner crowding and a lack of bed space has forced officials to create a revolving door situation in the Texas prison system. One prison board member acknowledged that as many as 19,000 new beds will be needed just to stay even with projected inmate growth.

He's right to point out that sentencing has become a joke in Texas. Inmates are serving an extremely small portion of their sentences, and good time is being used as a method of crowd control rather than what it was intended to accomplish.

The prison system originally had wanted to build two 1,250-inmate facilities, but settled on four 1,000-convict prisons.

This is a good start. ...

But there is a growing need for many more prison facilities. We can only hope this is just a start to an ongoing prison construction program.

Salinas good news

The selection of Carlos Salinas de Gortari as the next president of Mexico is good news for Mexico and the United States.

Salinas, only 39, is most likely to carry out the economic policies of President Miguel de la Madrid, the man who chose Salinas as his successor.

For the past five years, Salinas has quarterbacked de la Madrid's policy of austerity, a policy that Salinas researched and helped create.

That policy has started Mexico on the long road back to economic stability, even though it has been hard on everyone but the rich.

... If Salinas can stay the course, bring inflation under control and deal with the unions — a sector in which he has few friends or admirers — Mexico has a chance for economic stability and viability, both of which are important to the United States as well as Mexico and all the Americas.

Bootleg Philosopher

Editor's note: The Bootleg Philosopher on his Johnsongrass farm on Tierra Blanca Creek looks at one aspect of the football strike this week.

oob

Dear editor:

There's one thing the football strike has brought out about the players: the way they spend money they might as well be Congressmen.

For example, one striking player told a reporter: "I have enough money to make it to February, but after that I'll be broke." (Here Congress has the edge on him. It can raise the debt limit, he can't).

His salary, not counting bonuses, is $375,000 a year. That's a little more than $1,000 a day. You want to try scraping by on $1,000 a day?

Professional football players, it seems, are always buying more than they can pay for. They come out of college, get drafted and are paid a huge bonus. The first thing they do is buy the most expensive car they can find. No more ordinary ones like they were given in college. Then they make the downpayment on a half-million-dollar house. One player made the downpayment on two high-priced houses.

Then, as the season moves on and the money flows in, some of them get talked into buying restaurants or oil wells or real estate developments. Few such investments pan out. Sometimes of course there are other expenses for a few of them—like lawyer's fees for handling a drunken driving or dope charge.

That thousand-dollars-a-day player who's in financial trouble is one case. Another case is the player who has a contract paying him $4 million in the next four years, and he's in financial trouble too.

This is hard to understand. Looks like somebody who can learn a book-keeping assignment could learn how to handle money. Say out of that 4 million taxes will take 1 million. That leaves 3 million. Surely, if he clamps down, he can get by four years on 1 million. That leaves 2 million. If he put that into CDs at 7 percent, they'd be $140,000 a year in interest. On that he could live comfortable the rest of his life, un-worried and un-tackles.

Yours faithfully,
J.A.

The Penultimate Word

GOOD FOR EVIL

I do not know how the running feud between Clint Formby and I got started. I may have thrown the first punch. I do not know why I picked on Clint. Maybe it is because the target was so inviting I could not resist. Maybe it was because I knew Clint was one of those rare people who could take it as well as he could dish it out. Clint likes a joke on himself better than anyone I know. Whatever the cause, we have been going at it for several years now and, frankly, I have had great fun in the fray.

Clint harassed me about Christmas lights until I had to go to great time and expense putting up a rather elaborate display so he would shut up. Some may laugh at my calling one light on a pole an elaborate display but it took a great deal of time and thought to come up with just the right amount of light. I wanted it to be quietly understated. No garish splash of light. Just a hint of light. Of course the neighbors did not understand at all. They thought the thing looked like an obscene gesture. I told them it was symbolic of the one star of Bethlehem.

I could go on and on about the things the guy has done in retaliation to my gentle nudgings. The problem is I got myself into a situation. Clint got tickets for me to the Grand Ole Opry on short notice. I was so appreciative and so impressed with the clout of the man that I promised to never again say anything bad about him.

Well, after I announced the end of the feud as far as I was concerned Clint moved in. He announced on his morning show that I looked like Judge Bork. Now that hurt. What hurt even worse is both of his listeners agreed with him. But I shall not retaliate. I shall continue my admiration and praise of the man. I do not want anything to harm even one hair on his head. We must keep him well and happy. Who knows when we may need tickets to some big deal. Who else has the clout to get them for us. It feels great being able to say, "If you need tickets, call Clint. I have in mind maybe a ticket to one of the sky boxes in Texas Stadium when the Cowboys go back to work. Clint can do it."

So, I return good for evil. I turn the other cheek. I obey the golden rule. Now if the scripture about returning good for evil and heaping coals of fire on someone's head works, Clint should be at least smoking a little.

Campaign 'reform' bill does not reform

By Mick Staton

The United States Senate is considering a bill that would require every tax-paying American to contribute to the campaign treasury of every senator. Not only will the taxpayer be forced to pay, he will not even be able to designate which party he wishes to support, let alone which senator. If that is not enough of an insult, he also will have to support candidates opposing the one for whom he intends to vote.

Furthermore, this bill would radically inhibit challengers by equalizing the amount of campaign spending allowed without considering the advantages of an incumbent. If passed, it would reduce seriously the effectiveness and involvement of the one organization which has increased participation and interest in elections—the company-sponsored political action committee.

The bill in question is the Boren-Byrd Campaign Reform Bill, sponsored by Sens. David L. Boren, D-Okla., and Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va. According to the authors, the bill is needed because the large amounts of money which need to be raised distract Senators from their work, the present system of campaign financing favors incumbents and campaigns needs to be made fairer, too much money is being spent on campaigns and candidates have gotten away from the "grass roots" and instead rely too heavily on "special interests."

They say each of these programs can be solved simply by restricting contributions from political action committees and opening the federal treasury to candidates. The present system of taxpayer financing of presidential elections is often held up as a model. But is this the kind of "reform" the American people want?

It would be helpful to hear, just once, a rational explanation of why taxpayers do not support taxpayer campaign financing if it is such a fine idea. There appears to be no way to make it easier to indicate support. Consider taxpayer financing for presidential campaigns. There is a checkoff on every form 1040 tax return and a promise from the government of no cost to the taxpayer if the "yes" box is checked.

Even as simple as this procedure is, only an anemic 23 percent check the box marked "yes." Any senator worth his salt would recognize immediately that if he had only a 23 percent approval rating, his days in office would be numbered. Yet, incredibly, backers of this proposal continue to insist that the public wants taxpayer financing of elections.

Taxpayer financing is supposed to free candidates from fund raising duties and allow them more fully to inform the public about positions and ideas. Any observer of recent presidential campaigns must conclude that there is little difference in these campaigns and the campaigns of candidates for the House and Senate. Each uses television advertisements, direct mail, polling and all the modern methods to court voter turnout. Yet supporters of the bill claim this will be different. Candidates will discuss issues, have real debates and propose new ideas—all only if they don't have a fund-raising dinner to finance their campaigns.

It strains the credulity of the public to believe that senators are driven to give their opponents an opportunity to run a closer, more competitive race and thereby increase the incumbents' chances of being defeated. Suffice it to say that any senator who thinks an opponent is disadvantaged can cashew voluntarily such perquisites as franked mass mailings and staff assistance without raiding the federal treasury.

As for grass-roots support, if Boren-Byrd becomes law, some 5 million contributors to political action committees will become effect-tively disenfranchised. Some critics of the bill have pointed out accurately that most PAC contributions are from small contributors who generally do not write checks directly to candidates.

Senators uniformly deny that they are swayed by a PAC check—it is always someone else who, in an apocryphal story, is compromised. But nevertheless, they claim the public needs to be "protected" from special interests. Again, no senator yet has demonstrated that individuals in a particular industry who support candidates friendly to that industry pose any real threat to the republic.

It should not come as any great surprise that Boren himself receives substantial support from individuals in the oil industry. But he accepts no PAC funds. What is the difference between those persons contributing directly to Boren or those using a payroll deduction plan to make a contribution to a PAC that in turn contributes? Obviously, there is no real difference.

An essential part of campaigning for election is the garnering of support, including the money by which the campaign is financed. In order to secure support, a candidate usually must offer his views on issues of importance to the voters. If his positions are acceptable it is not uncommon for him to receive the support he seeks. Otherwise he will not.

The proposal short circuits this crucial connection by mandating that all taxpayers support all candidates, irrespective of views. Thus, it becomes the government in the role of chief campaign financial agent with the I.R.S. as the bag man. Does the Senate seriously believe Americans want this type of "reform?"

Our system of financing congressional elections is more open, informative and accessible to private citizens than ever before in our country's history. Most important, it is also voluntary. It clearly is not "broken" and should not be "fixed."

Florida follies

California has for decades enjoyed — or endured — universal recognition as the place where most of the truly bizarre, silly or zany trends in American life got started. Now, however, it looks as though Florida is bidding to wrest the laurels away from the Californians.

You may recall that Florida has been in headlines of late because of its disastrous decision to impose a sales tax on services. This has resulted in the state's losing millions of dollars' worth of business, and has prompted the governor — who came up with the bright idea in the first place — to call a special session of the Legislature to repeal the measure.

And now comes this: Thanks to a new law that just went into effect, any Floridian — unless he or she is a convicted felon or is incapacitated — can pack a concealed firearm ... or carry it around in plain sight ...

What exactly is Florida about? ... From here you can only wonder — and be grateful for the distance that separates stodgy, civilized old Texas from Florida's revival of Death Valley Days.

Hereford defeats Levelland, 28-6

First half wipeout propels Herd to victory

By GARY CHRISTENSEN
Sports Editor

LEVELLAND -- A Hereford wipeout of Levelland in the first half resulted in the Whiteface varsity football team scoring a 28-6 District 1-4A victory over the Lobos Friday night.

Hereford raced to a 21-0 lead in the first quarter and added a second quarter touchdown in defeating Levelland. The victory gives Hereford a 2-2 district record and a 2-4 overall record.

Levelland fell to 1-3 in the district and 2-4 overall. Hereford plays its homecoming game against Dumas next Friday at 7:30 p.m., and Levelland travels to Borger.

In other District 1-4A games Friday, Lubbock Estacado defeated Dumas 33-12 and Frenship beat Pampa 43-9. Borger was scheduled to play at Lubbock Dunbar on Saturday.

The Whitefaces scored in their first three possessions of the game Friday, including one possession that was the result of a Levelland turnover.

Marcus Brown returned the game-opening kickoff 25 yards to the Hereford 40, and the Herd needed just four plays to reach the end zone. Brown rushed 48 yards for the touchdown, with 10:03 left in the first period, and Tim Long kicked the extra point.

Brown began running up the middle, but darted out to the right where he found an opening and then outran several Lobo defenders for the touchdown.

In Levelland's second play of the game, Eddie Dent of the Lobos fumbled the ball and Hereford's Joe Medrano and Michael Phibbs surrounded the ball at the Levelland 27-yard line.

After a loss of yards in a first down rushing attempt by Brown, Jason Scott completed a 13-yard pass to Roger McCracken and a 15-yard pass

Clear Sailing For Marcus

Hereford Whiteface running back Marcus Brown has clear sailing for a six-yard touchdown run in the second quarter. It was Brown's third touchdown run of the game — the others were runs of 48 yards and five yards. No. 40 of Hereford is Tim Long, whose PAT after this touchdown gave Hereford a 28-0 lead enroute to a 28-6 victory over Levelland. (Brand photo by John Brooks)

"The senior citizens here are so valuable to this community. Their wisdom and pioneering spirit benefits us all," says Jonny Cloud, a Senior Citizens advisory board member and Senior Vice-President at the First National Bank.

The Senior Citizens of Hereford raised funds themselves to build a beautiful center that is now nearly three years old. More than 300 senior citizens are in and out of the center every day. "They visit, play dominos, knit, exercise; the activities are unlimited. When you're in there it's like a big family."

Without the Senior Citizens of Hereford we would not be here. They make all the difference in the world. Thanks Seniors, from the First National Bank.

to Rodney McCracken to help move the Whitefaces move to the five-yard line.

Brown was stopped for no gain in the first down play, but scored with a five-yard run in the second down play, with 6:56 remaining in the first quarter. Long was successful again in his extra-point attempt, and Hereford led 14-0.

Levelland lost eight yards in its next possession when Keith Brown tackled a Lobo running back for a loss and Russell Brownlow sacked the Lobo quarterback.

After Levelland punted, Hereford began its next possession at the Levelland 48-yard line. Keith Brown carried the ball in five of the next eight plays for gains of 32 yards.

In a third down-and-eight play at the 10-yard line, Scott found Rodney McCracken for a touchdown pass with 1:52 left in the first quarter. Long's PAT made Hereford's lead 21-0.

When the first quarter ended, Levelland had only two yards total offense, with only eight opportunities for offensive plays.

Hereford lost a fumble in the second play of the second quarter, but the Herd defense did not allow Levelland a first down. Marcos Marquez had a quarterback sack in the Lobos' second down play.

A 33-yard punt by Levelland put the Whitefaces at their own 12-yard line. Hereford moved 88 yards in 12 plays for a touchdown.

The big plays of the touchdown drive included a 39-yard run by Keith Brown, a 21-yard run by Glenn Parker, and a 19-yard pass from Scott to Keith Brown. Marcus Brown rushed for the last six yards for the touchdown, with 5:15 left in the first half.

Tim Long kicked the extra point, his 13th of the season in 13 attempts.

Levelland had the ball the rest of the half and threatened to score, but two great plays by Whiteface safety Clint Cotten thwarted the Lobos' scoring tries.

In a first down play by Levelland from the 18-yard line, Cotten knocked down a pass at the goal line. If he had not done so, Levelland appeared to have had a touchdown scored.

Three plays later, Cotten intercepted a pass at the one-yard line, with less than a minute left in the half. Cotten became the fifth Herd defensive player with two or more pass interceptions this season.

The second half was a defensive battle. The Hereford offensive unit could manage only one first down in the half. Levelland, going into its final possession of the game, had no passing yards and just 89 yards total offense.

The Lobos moved from their own 23-yard line to the Hereford 29 in their first possession of the second half, but a penalty and an incomplete pass forced them to punt from the Hereford 40-yard line.

In the third quarter, Herd linebacker Michael Phibbs tackled Lobo running backs two times for losses, and defensive end Brad Smith sacked the Levelland quarterback. Marcos Marquez had another quarterback sack in the fourth quarter.

Levelland began what would be its last possession of the game at its own 20-yard line, after a punt by Hereford's Chris Bullard went 48 yards into the end zone. Earlier in the game, Bullard kicked a 53-yard punt.

The Lobos moved all the way to the Hereford 15-yard line, where they had a first down with seven seconds left in the game. Big plays in the drive included an 11-yard run by quarterback Teddy Latham, and passes of 44 yards and seven yards from Lathan to Dennis Cunningham.

In that first down play from the 15-yard line, Jay Fortner was stopped at the six-yard line as time ran out, but a facemask penalty was called against Hereford.

That gave Levelland one more play, and Latham completed a pass to Cunningham for a four-yard touchdown pass. No extra point was attempted, because the referees declared the game over after the touchdown play took place.

Hereford had 264 yards total offense compared to 167 yards by Levelland. Rushing yardage totals were 200 yards by Hereford and 112 yards by Levelland.

Rushing leaders for Hereford were Keith Brown with 72 yards in 10 carries, Marcus Brown with 62 yards in six carries, and Glenn Parker with 72 yards in 10 carries.

Jason Scott completed five of six passes for 64 yards, including three to Rodney McCracken for 32 yards.

Cowboys' QB Danny White wants to play

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Quarterback Danny White said he is anxious to get back on the playing field during the replacement Dallas Cowboys' game Sunday against the Philadelphia Eagles, but coach Tom Landry said White won't start the game.

"Certainly I'd love to play, and I'd love to start. My feeling is that at my age (35), I've done about all the sitting I can do," White said. "But I understand what he's doing. And he's the boss."

White was held out of last week's game because of a sore shoulder that he said now is fine.

Landry rested his offensive veterans during last week's win over the Jets, but he said he will mix a field of veterans and free agents in Sunday's match against the underdog Eagles.

"I have to keep them sharp and being away from the game for three weeks they'll start to get rusty," Landry said. "I'll probably go ahead and start the rookies who did so well against the Jets."

The substitute Cowboys, one of the strongest free agent clubs put together after the NFL strike, are hosts to one of the worst in the Eagles on Sunday.

The 2-1 Cowboys are 11-point favorites over the Eagles, 1-2, who played before 4,074 fans in Veterans Stadium last Sunday.

The Cowboys have four veteran picket-line crossers on defense in Randy White, Don Snarek, Ed Jones, and Kevin Brooks and three starters on offense from the veteran ranks, quarterback Danny White, running back Tony Dorsett, and wide receiver Mike Renfro.

The Cowboys originally sold over 53,000 tickets for the noon game but thousands have cashed their tickets.

Officials said 42,151 people still held tickets Friday, after 1,023 tickets were sold and 973 were refunded for the day.

Bi-level, garage ideal for sloping lot

By W.D. Farmer, A.I.B.D. Entry from a covered stoop is into sloped ceiling foyer from which there is direct access through the atrium, accented by skylights, to the enormous combination living and dining room that can be used for expansion either way. Adjacent to the living and dining room is a spacious kitchen with an island work surface. A large open area leads to the spacious sloped ceiling family room with a corner fireplace. There is access to the rear sun deck from here. Also in view from the family room is an open rail stair that leads to the finished basement area. The master bedroom provides the luxury of a fireplace with a raised hearth. The master bathroom boasts an oversized garden tub and lavatory in the grooming area. There is a separate compartment area for the shower and commode. Another excellent feature of the master suite is the enormous walk-in closet.

The two remaining bedrooms are serviced by a centrally located hall bath. Another feature of this home is a large work and laundry area featuring a bonus pantry and a built-in desk area.

The plan is number 2648. It includes a total of 3,668 square feet of heated area. All W.D. Farmer plans include special construction details for energy efficiency and are drawn to meet all FHA and VA requirements. For further information write, W.D. Farmer, P.O. Box 450025, Atlanta, Ga. 30345.

It's YOUR Money

—by Alex Schroeter

THE 401 (K) STILL LOOKS GOOD

Though the new tax law stripped these company-sponsored savings plans of some of their most attractive features, the 401(k) remains one of the best tax shelters around. It offers tax deferral on current income and on what the savings plan earns, and qualified employees can put away and deduct from income more than the IRA ever allowed.

Some benefits have been trimmed: maximum annual contributions are down to $7,000 from the old $30,000 ceiling; it's not easy to get money out of the account; and companies have had to realign their plans to benefit employees more equally. Where withdrawals were once fairly simple, you now must pay 10 percent penalty—in addition to regular income tax—on any money you take out before you're 59½, and you can't touch earnings or company contributions until that time.

There's another plus: the salary-reduction feature of your 401(k) plan may even bring your income level low enough to enable you to qualify for a partial write-off on an IRA.

Bird cages latest thing in decorating

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

Observers have often noted that Americans love pets. But birdcages—a form of pet housing—recently have become fashionable decorative accessories.

The highly ornamental devices in wood and metal have been showing up in rooms pictured in decorating magazines. They also have been garnering spirited bidding at some auction sales.

For example, Ursula Hermacinski, a specialist in 19th century European decorative arts at Christie's East, the auction gallery in New York, said the most ornate 19th century bird cages are very saleable.

"They are being purchased by people who are thinking of them as decorative accessories, not because they actually need a cage for a bird," she added, noting that prices range from $200 to $2,000 depending more on decorative appeal than on age and rarity.

Actually, 19th century birdcages have been quietly popular for quite a few years among well-to-do fanciers of English antiques, according to Hermacinski. When the estate of Mrs. C.J. Devine Sr., was sold at auction in 1985, there were eight lots of birdcages among the antiques.

Since little is known about the history of birdcages, Hermacinski appraises and dates them by observing the materials used and the architectural styles employed. As decorative objects they were most likely designed to fit in with whatever style was ascendant at any particular time.

The evidence of paintings indicates that keeping birds in cages in the home goes back at least to the 16th century. They were particularly popular as household decoration during the 18th and 19th centuries in France and England. The late Victorian era, with its penchant for subduing nature to keep it in home conservatories, also contained a vogue for birds in cages.

Birdhouses for outdoor display also have captured the public's imagination. This year when the Parrish Museum in Southampton, N.Y., mounted an exhibition and auction of 55 birdhouses designed by eminent architects, the bidding was brisk. With a top price of $15,000 (for a birdhouse designed by Robert A.M. Stern), the museum was able to raise $145,000 from the sale, according to Trudy Kramer, director.

Kramer ties the enthusiasm to interest in landscaping and gardening. The idea for the birdhouse exhibition and sale developed out of a program begun several years ago to study American gardens at the turn of the century.

"We studied the great gardens and organized a lecture series on landscape history and design," she recalled. She pointed out that at the turn of the century, architects such as Stanford White, whose mansions dot the area, actually did design birdhouses.

While antique birdcages and ornamental birdhouses are valued for their decorative potential, live birds and cages in which to keep them also are enjoying renewed attention.

Ruth Hanessian of Rockville, Md., Washington-area coordinator for the American Federation of Aviculture, says keeping birds as pets is on the increase, even though it is not so popular as it was in the early part of the 20th century. Birds make good pets for individuals who travel a great deal or live in restricted quarters since they are easy to care for and take little room, she said.

The psittacines, a large and colorful group that includes budgerigars, macaws, parrots, cockatoos and cockatiels, are particularly popular, according to Lee Phillips, a past president of the American Federation of Aviculture. These birds were banned from importation for many years but improvements in breeding, nutrition and medicine have taken place, so that while some psittacines can't be imported other species of the same family can.

Those seeking a cage for a living bird have to be more careful about its safety than those who use cages purely decoratively, noted Hanessian.

Live birds need cages free of lead-based or any toxic paint, large enough to accommodate the bird comfortably, and easy to keep clean with easy outside access to food and water so these can be changed frequently.

Bars should be spaced closely so a bird cannot get its head caught between them and there should be more horizontal than vertical space since birds fly back and forth, not up and down. A variety of perches inside the cage is ideal. These should be thick enough so the bird's foot goes two thirds of the way around.

The first step in the repair of a bureau drawer that doesn't operate smoothly is to examine it and the runners on which it moves back and forth.

Remove the drawer and see how it is constructed, since that is the key to how it should be fixed. If anything is loose—the most common cause of trouble—tightening should be done in the manner of the original construction. For instance, if the parts were glued together, it is not wise to use either nails or screws to reattach anything that has become separated.

Only when it is impossible to follow the style of construction should you look for another way to handle the problem. Even then, it is all right to substitute glue for nails, not the other way around. This is especially true if nails have become loose, causing a dragging of the drawer against the sides and bottom.

A usual reason for drawer problems is a split bottom, the best way to handle this is to glue a narrow piece of wood or canvas across the split. If the bottom is pulling away from the frame or there is any other joint trouble, common sense will tell you to attempt a repair that will bring the drawer back to its original condition. Sometimes this can be done solely with glue, sometimes with nails and sometimes with both, but considering the use of clamps to hold everything together.

The runners on which the drawer slides may be out of line and usually can be set back into place, but when they are worn, they should be replaced. You can get the same kind or consider the use of more modern plastic or metal types, either with or without ball bearings. If you haven't had any experience with the runners and drawers, be sure you understand how they work before you leave the home center or other store.

One thing that should be avoided is a hasty removal of any wood that may be warped. When humidity conditions change, the drawer is likely to give you new troubles. But if some removal is required, do it carefully, testing constantly to be sure you do not overdo it.

When a drawer has to be lifted slightly to open all the way, it sometimes can be made to operate smoothly by placing a couple of thumb tacks in the runners at the front end. This will lift the drawer slightly to permit easier sliding.

When a drawer opens part way and will go no farther, don't see how strong you are by forcing it. You not only may damage the drawer further, you may brake the object that is causing the problem in the first place. Tug gently. If that doesn't work, try using something like a ruler to prod inside the drawer and dislodge the offending item.

If nothing works and you do not want to risk damaging either the drawer or its contents, take out the drawers below and above the blocked one and see if you can manage to free it from one of those spots. Sometimes you may have to take off the back of the furniture, which usually isn't as difficult as it sounds although it might be a little tedious.

If a drawer hits the back panel of the bureau, attach a small block of wood at the back of the runner to act as a stop. And when all repairs have been completed, apply a lubricant to the runners to keep things sliding smoothly.

Home centers and some hardware stores sell little glides that can be attached to the runners to help the operation of a drawer.

If you have taken off any wood to make a repair, be sure the exposed area is sealed to prevent future warpage. You can use any one of several sealants, including a 50-50 mixture of shellac and denatured alcohol.

Q.—I recently changed the washer in a leaky faucet. After I installed the new washer, the leak from the faucet opening stopped. Now a new leak has developed. This one is from the faucet handle itself and seems to be coming from the large nut that goes all the way round the handle. Before I start to take the faucet apart, can you tell me what I should know about this type of repair?

A.—This leak undoubtedly is coming from what is called the packing nut. The first thing to do is to tighten the nut with the proper wrench, placing some tape around the nut so that the finish does not get damaged. If the nut was loose, you will feel it immediately as you turn. Sometimes this is all that is necessary. But if the leak persists, unscrew the nut and replace the washer you will find underneath it. If there is no washer there, you will find a kind of stringlike substance called packing. You can buy some at any hardware store. When the new packing has been wound around the stem and the nut replaced, the leak will stop. Once in a while, the item underneath the nut will be some kind of rubber ring rather than conventional washer. If so, take it off and buy a replacement of the same size and composition. When you go to buy it, ask for an O-ring.

Q.—The drain in our kitchen sink works slowly. It always clears itself, but only after 15 or 20 minutes have passed. I would like to use a chemical cleaner and a suction cup, but my neighbor says I shouldn't do this. Is he right?

A.—They should not be used together. Use one or the other, as operating the plunger after you have used a chemical can result in an injury from the splashing. The best way is to use the suction cup and, if that does not work, then use the chemical. Or, use the chemical and forget about the plunger for the time being.

Q.—Our toilet tank sweats constantly in warm weather. I know this can be stopped by putting a fabric covering on the tank, but when I did that years ago, the fabric caused the toilet seat to slam down every once in a while. Is there some other way to stop the sweating?

A.—You can use an insulating material on the inside of the tank. This will prevent the outside of the tank from getting cold, which condenses the warm, humid air that settles on it. When the tank exterior is not cold, there will be no condensation. Or, you can have a plumber install a valve that will mix a little warm water with the cold water in the tank, again preventing the tank exterior from getting cold.

(Leaky faucets, balky toilet tanks, pipe leaks and tank condensation are among the topics discussed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Make Simple Plumbing Repairs," which can be obtained by sending 50 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington NY 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column.)

A HIGH-TECH INCINERATOR

BARTLESVILLE, Okla. (AP)—More than 3 million pounds of hazardous waste have been safely burned in a high-tech incinerator at its research center, says Phillips Petroleum.

The center is where the incinerator was invented and the disposal device is the first to get an operating permit under the Resource Conservation and Recovery Act. The act regulates hazardous waste disposal in the United States.

The incinerator converts flue gases into water vapor.

Bud to Blossom Garden Club members will be hosting a mini-standard flower show entitled "Earth's Extravaganza" from 2:30-5:30 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 15, at the National Cowgirl Hall of Fame and Western Heritage Center. This will be an open class in design and horticulture for all interested adults and youth who are not associated with the club. Additional information may be obtained by calling 364-3415 or 578-4342. Preparing for the show are (from left) Jane White, show chairman, and Wilma Bryan, club president.

Domestic violence discussed

Juliann Thompson of Domestic Violence Center in Hereford spoke to members of La Madre Mia Study Club Thursday at the home of Marline Watson with Betty Lady serving as co-hostess.

Thompson pointed out that the center mans a 24-hour hotline and that 15 volunteers are available at all times and can contact the appropriate people as needed. She also stated that there are three shelters located within 100 miles of Hereford where the battered woman can go. Also, arrangements are made for transportation for her to stay with relatives and individual counseling is provided.

The speaker informed the club that a support group was beginning in September where the woman can talk with other women that have been in the same situation. Thompson also makes referrals to other agencies which can assist the battered women.

When asked about her working schedule since the local center opened in May, Thompson replied, "I have seen 106 women since that time but it has leveled out to about a call a day now. July, however, was something else."

"One of every two women are physically abused by the man she lives with, according to an FBI national survey," she explained. "In 60 percent of the cases when the women are abused, so are their children."

Thompson announced that volunteer training will be conducted in January and that more volunteers are needed. She also stated that the center always needs more money to help the women help themselves.

A monetary contribution was made on behalf of the club by President Pat Walsh to the violence center in appreciation for the program.

Roll call was answered with ways to relieve stress with various answers given including talking, walking, exercising, reading, playing bridge, hot showers or baths, yard work and sneaking out late at night for a cigarette only to be stressed out for fear of cancer. Also, some of the members replied that they relieve stress by making long distance calls, sorting out laundry or playing with their pets.

During the business session conducted by Walsh, Lavon Nieman, Christmas home tour chairman, reported on the list of homes which will be shown on the tour planned Dec. 6 with proceeds going to various civic projects. Tickets for the 18th annual event will be on sale Nov. 12.

Refreshments of pie, nuts, coffee and cold drinks were served to a guest, Gloria Hubner and members: Joyce Allred, Carolyn Baxter, Ruth Black, Francyne Brownlow, Merle Clark, Sharon Hodges, Lady, Beverly Lambert, Gladys Merritt, Nieman, Nancy Paetzold, Susan Robbins, Tricia Sims, Mysedia Smith, Debbie Tardy, Betty Taylor, Walsh, Watson, Mary Beth White, and Judy Williams.

The club's next meeting will be held Oct. 22 in the home of Williams. Members will have a sealed bid party as a fund-raiser.

TCFA celebrating 20th with convention

Twenty years ago, 10 cattle feeders met in Amarillo to form an association dedicated solely to advancing the economic and political interests of cattle feeders. And thus, on May 18 1967, the Texas Cattle Feeders Association (TCFA) was born.

A lot has happened since then. Texas increased its production of fed cattle by 228%—from 1.6 million in 1967 to a record 5.26 million in 1986. And TCFA grew from a small association with barely enough budget to keep the doors open to an association with a budget of more than $2 million—the largest cattle feeders association in the country.

It's been an eventful 20 years in the cattle industry, and TCFA has been there at every turn. The events of the past 20 years will be relieved and an outlook for the next 20 years will be offered as cattle feeders from Texas, Oklahoma and New Mexico gather for the TCFA Annual Convention, Nov. 15 through Nov. 17. The Convention, with the theme "Vision 20/20", will be at the Westway Hotel in Corpus Christi.

Charles E. Ball, TCFA executive vice president, will kick off the Convention with "TCFA: The First 20 Years." Ball, who spoke at the first TCFA Convention 20 years ago and who has attended every one since, will look back at the eventful history of cattle feeding.

Zay Gilbreath, TCFA president, will assess the present state of cattle feeding and offer a few ideas on what the future may hold in his address titled "Cattle Feeding: The Next 20 Years."

The future of world events will be examined by Dr. Marvin Cetron, a forecaster-futurist and President of Forecasting International, in his speech titled "World Events: The Next 20 Years." Dr. Cetron successfully called such events as the 1973 Arab oil embargo two years before it happened, the fall of the Shah of Iran four years before it happened, and the nation's 1980 shift toward conservatism.

Other convention speakers include Ken Monfort, who heads Con-Agra Fresh Meats Companies. Monfort will speak on "The Meat Industry: The Next 20 Years." Three educational breakout sessions will feature Jo Ann Smith, chairman of the Beef Promotion and Research Board, speaking on the $1-per-head checkoff; Denise Bode and Bill McMillan, TCFA Lobbyists in Washington, D.C., speaking on "The Lobbying Game: How to Win in Washington"; and Becky Barker speaking on estate planning. A panel discussion on the outlook for the cattle market will round out the speaker slate.

But the TCFA Convention isn't all work. Attendees can polish their swing at the golf tournament at the North Shore Country Club. Those who prefer to see the sights can choose from three tours—the King Ranch, a ship tour of the Corpus Christi Port or salt water fishing.

The Texas Cattle Feeders Association represents cattle feeders in Texas, Oklahoma and New Mexico, an area which last year produced 24% of the fed cattle in the nation. More information on the TCFA Annual Convention is available from TCFA 5501 W. 1-40, Amarillo, Tx. 79106, phone (806)358-3681.

Dairy liquidation nearing end

Liquidation of the nation's cow herd may be drawing to an end and rebuilding may begin in 1988.

That was one of many ideas that came from a discussion between leaders of the Texas Cattle Feeders Association (TCFA) and 14 chief executive officers of major agribusinesses that serve the cattle feeding industry. The meeting in Amarillo brought leaders in cattle feeding and agribusinesses together to discuss issues facing the beef industry.

According to TCFA President Zay Gilbreath, beef cow numbers, at 33.9 million in 1987, are up nearly 1% from a year ago and beef replacement heifers, at 5.1 million, are unchanged. That indicates cow-calf producers are beginning to rebuild cow herds and suggests that cattle liquidation, which began in 1975, may be over. If that's the case, he said, retention of heifer calves that in years past have been put on feed will drop total beef production by 8% to 10%, from 24.4 billion pounds in 1986, to about 22 billion pounds in 1988.

Such a sharp drop in beef production is possible, he said, because this liquidation has been so severe. "The 1987 calf crop, at 23 million, is the smallest since 1961 and beef cow numbers, at 44.4 million, are the smallest since 1965," he said.

Speaking on beef promotion, TCFA President Elect Clark Willingham told the executives that many positive things are happening with the money being collected by the $1-per-head checkoff. "It appears that the industry's advertising, promotion and education efforts are right on target," Willingham said. "Consumers are changing their attitudes about beef. But more needs to be done. We must continue to promote beef's strength. And to do that, we must pass the referendum."

Speaking on beef safety and quality assurance, Wes Bonner, DVM, TCFA vice president, said the trend toward branded beef will put more pressure on the industry to verify that beef is safe and wholesome. Perceived quality is what branded beef is all about, he said, and, "You can't have a quality product without having a safe product."

TCFA, with its Quality Assurance Program, has taken the lead in establishing a producer-initiated program to assure consumers that cattlemen are making every effort to produce a safe and wholesome product. As more and more packers consider branded beef, the demand for cattle produced under a sound quality assurance program will likely increase, Bonner predicted.

TCFA initiated the "think tank" session in 1985 to stimulate dialogue between leaders in cattle feeding and chief executives of major agribusinesses. This year's session is the third such meeting to take place.

"Some of the best marketing minds in the country work for agribusinesses serving cattle feeding," said Charlie Bell, TCFA Executive Vice President. "We wanted to bring them all together to discuss ways producers and manufacturers can cooperatively resolve some of the issues facing the beef industry, such as food safety, the image of beef and strategies for passing the upcoming referendum."

Dryer management is essential

Good management of grain crops in storage will minimize quality deterioration after harvesting, says an agricultural engineer.

"When grain is harvested at a moisture content higher than that recommended for safe storage, mechanical drying must be done," notes Richard Withers with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. "The higher the grain temperature and moisture content, the quicker the grain must be dried mechanically to prevent mold.

"For example, when grain is at 90 degrees F, and has a moisture content of 18 percent, moisture content must be reduced to 15 percent within about seven days," explains the specialist. "If temperature is reduced to 70 degrees F, the allowable time to reduce moisture is about 30 days. Of course, we are assuming that grain is being aerated during this period."

Moisture content for safe storage varies with crops. Withers suggests these moisture percentages for safe storage: corn, 13; sorghum, 12-14; soybeans, 11-12; and wheat 12-14.

He points out that an aeration system for grain cooling and moisture migration control is needed if grain is stored more than two to three months, even if safe storage moisture requirements are met.

According to Withers, aeration systems for cooling grain and controlling moisture migration within grain should apply about one-tenth cubic foot per minute (cfm) of air flow per bushel.

"Fans must be designed to provide this flow rate against pressures developed in pushing air through grain. Higher air flow rates are required if the storage bin is also used for drying," points out the engineer.

Withers also suggests some simple precautionary measures before storing crops. Check potential sources of water leaks into bins and seal them with a good non-drying caulking compound. Also, make sure air vents are protected from blowing rain. Where rust spots exist on galvanized bin surfaces, clean the surface with a wire brush and apply a good quality zinc or rust inhibiting paint.

Finally, plan for alternatives in your harvest and storage operation in case emergency drying or insect protection are needed.

INS plans record looks

Most employers seem to be coping fairly well with the implementation of the Immigration Reform Act. Now they face the possibility of a records inspection.

As of Sept. 1, federal officials from either the Labor or the Immigration Department can legally visit a place of business to inspect records, specifically the I-9 forms required for each employee, points out Dr. Dick Edwards, an economist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System. Employers should have a handbook which includes a copy of the I-9 form and instructions for completing it. Any Texas Employment Commission office can provide information on how to receive a copy of the handbook.

Since immigration reform is an employment law, an employer must ascertain that all persons hired since Nov. 6, 1986, are either American citizens or aliens who have the legal right to work in this country, Edwards points out. He summarizes the law's provisions:

—An I-9 form must be completed on every person hired since Nov. 6, 1986.

An I-9 form must even be completed on a spouse or children hired for work. An employer must look at documents which "prove" identity and eligibility but need not judge their authenticity.

—The I-9 form must be completed within three working days of the starting date of employment. Persons hired since Nov. 6 who have yet to fill out an I-9 form should do so right away.

—No I-9 form is required for a person hired prior to Nov. 6, 1986. This does not mean they are legalized; it simply means that the employer is not liable for fines and sanctions covered by the law.

World cotton forecast up

WASHINGTON (AP) — World cotton production could reach 77.5 million bales in the 1987-88 crop year, Department of Agriculture analysts say.

That represents a slight upturn from last month when they issued a forecast 300,000 bales lower.

American production could be held to 12.8 million bales, the department said, a slight falloff. Foreign production could increase slightly to 64.7 million bales, USDA said.

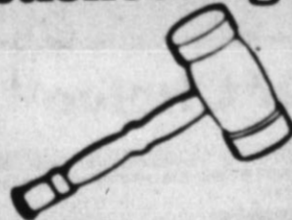

The Soviet Union should increase its production somewhat, as should Paraguay, according to the report.

World cotton consumption was forecast at 82.3 million bales, little changed from the August estimate.

Cattle feed not only costs but can also make the producer money - if monitored correctly. Doug Hixon, Extension beef cattle specialist, University of Wyoming, says "Feed to maintain the cow herd is the major cost of calf production. The objective of producers should be to optimize production, in order to maximize net dollar return... To do this, ranchers should analyze the nutritional needs of cows at various stages in the reproductive cycle. Next, determine how the available nutritional resources can be used to meet these needs. Annually analyze forages to determine nutritional content. Find supplements that will make up the difference in deficient nutrients. Price compare supplements based on the price per pound of the nutrition being supplemented. Cows nutritional requirements are the highest during the winter when feed is also the highest. However, experts say the cows' nutritional requirements must be met or problems will develop.

You will find a large variety of books for each reader in your family. Please don't miss this opportunity. All proceeds go to the support and enhancement of your County Library.

Norman Vincent Peale's Power of the Plus Factor is one of the new books coming out this Monday morning. Dr. Peale explains that the Plus Factor is that "something extra" within each of us which, when activated, brings to the surface our latent abilities and hidden potential. You are shown how to remove the hindrances that block this flow of power from your inner self. Learn how the Plus Factor can add vitality and excitement to every area of your life.

Dangerous Company gives you an inside view of the world's hottest trouble spots, with a Pulitzer Prize-winning war correspondent, William Tuohy. Here is some of the best writing about the hazards of being a foreign correspondent. You will have the opportunity to relive some of the fighting in Vietnam, ranging from Green Berets to river patrol boats, the battle for Hue, and the Siege at Khe Sanh.

In 1977 Tuohy, is at the point of the Israeli advance in to Syria in the Yom Kippur War. He was held hostage by the Palestinians in Jordan, arrested by Khomeini's secret police in Tehran, and caught between rioters and police in Belfast. Tuohy also introduces you to the lighter side of being a foreign correspondent, and backstage for insights into the world of newspapers, television, and news magazines as they cover the world's flash points.

Rage by Wilber Smith is presented this week for sheer entertainment. Two half brothers, Manfred De La Rey and Shasha Courtney are now ministers in a South African Government. This government is dedicated to a vision of the subcontinent in which people of all races would be free to develop and flourish separately. However, both men must confront the ugly reality of apartheid and their country's growing isolation in a cynical hostile world.

Wilber Smith's most powerful skills of storytelling are used in this sweeping adventure full of passion, danger and march of historic events during which the roots of the present-day crisis were formed.

I hope you enjoy the selection of books we have for you this week, and please remember the Book Sale coming soon.

Abundant Life

DAILY RESOLVE
By Bob Wear

The human experience can be and should be a reasonably happy and satisfying one, but will be, for each of us, something a bit short of the ideal, or the perfect. Even though we cannot attain perfection in the absolute sense, we can continue to let the best known ideals guide us, and be steadfast in honestly doing our best. In order to continue doing our best, there must be a daily resolve to do so.

Even when some things which concern us are not as they should be, or as we would like for them to be; we must continue with our daily resolve to do the best we can. Of course, there will be days when we seem to be moving backward. Nevertheless, we must maintain a forward view and make whatever progress we can. If it were necessary for us to have everything, with which we are concerned, just right all of the time, we would live with a sense of frustration and defeat. No one has everything just right all of the time, and we are wise not to be measuring ourselves by others.

A daily resolve to do our best will include our affirmative and constructive action and the wise acceptance of the things which cannot be changed, even while we are working to bring about the change we desire. Some failure is to be expected, but we must not permit it to happen because we did not do our honest best. All of us understand the value of perseverance in the living experience, and it is the 'daily resolve' that activates the spirit of perseverance.

For one reason or another, we may not be able to do some things; and we must take this possibility into consideration. We may not be capable, we may not manage well, we may not be as wise as we should be, we may not put forth the effort that is necessary, or there may be some other reason. All of this must be considered when we tally the score at the close of the day.

When the new day dawns, my 'daily resolve' can be 'I'll try to do better today'.

One termite queen produces about half a billion offspring during her lifetime.

Dr. Schuller set to speak at WT Tuesday

The Bea and Boone Pickens Distinguished Lecture Series will present Dr. Robert H. Schuller, founding pastor of the Crystal Cathedral and the "Hour of Power" television ministry, Tuesday in the Virgil Henson Activities Center on the West Texas State University campus.

Schuller, who promotes an inspiring positive faith he calls the theology of self-esteem, will speak on "Success is Never Ending, Failure is Never Final" beginning at 7:30 p.m.

Tickets to the lecture are complimentary and will be distributed on a first-come, first-served basis. Tickets are available through the Amarillo and Canyon Chambers of Commerce and West Texas State Communication Services. Written requests, accompanied by a self-addressed stamped envelope, should be mailed to Schuller Tickets, West Texas State University, Communication Services, Box 788, Canyon, Texas 79016.

The Bea and Boone Pickens Distinguished Lecture Series, designed to provide a positive enrichment experience for West Texas State University students and the surrounding community, was initiated April 9, 1987, with the bestselling author of Megatrends, John Naisbitt. Over 1,200 people attended the lecture. Because of the wide acceptance and participation, 5,000 tickets have been made available for the Schuller program.

West Texas State University President Ed D. Roach was inspired to establish the guest lecturer program while reading about the Lyceum Series in J.A. Hill's book, More Than Brick and Mortar. The Lyceum Series attracted such notable personalities as William Jennings Bryan to the WT campus during its first decades.

The series has been revived and named for Bea and Boone Pickens in recognition of their contributions to the University.

A generous donation has been arranged by Melvin and Mike Isley of the Amarillo Credit Association to cover the expenses of procuring quality lecturers.

For further information, contact Communication Services at West Texas State University at 806-656-2081.

American Legion Auxiliary conducts business meeting

The Hereford Unit of the American Legion Auxiliary met recently. In the absence of President Beverly Jesko, 1st Vice-President Clara Trowbridge conducted the business meeting.

Reports were heard from Community Service Chairman Lela Kemerer; assistance was requested for Thursday evening's King's Manor recreation party. The V.A. Medical Center report was also given and a group will go for the recreation party again Monday.

Trowbridge, membership chairman, reported that 1987-88 dues are payable; 51 are already paid. The 4th Division membership theme is "Red, White, and Blue Hearts Over Texas." The budget, $2,188.50, was approved for the following year.

The auxiliary will assist the Legion in cooking and serving a dinner honoring Hank Narmour of Lubbock, department commander, on Oct. 20 in the Legion Hall. Cmdr. Narmour's wife, Mary Lou, will also be a guest. Committees were appointed and a menu was discussed.

Following the business meetings, the Legion joined the Auxiliary for a program given by Betty Henson, director of the local chapter of the American Red Cross. Henson gave instructions of CPR for infants using mannequins. She also demonstrated the Heimlich Manuever to be used on choking adults.

The unit will also assist in cooking the beans for a barbecue to be served Nov. 11 when the VA hospital's new addition will be dedicated in Amarillo and also for the local celebration at the Post Home set for that same day.

WE HELP... WHEN HELP IS MOST NEEDED

The day a member of your family dies is the day you will need help of a special kind. Regardless of your grief there are a hundred details to face and decisions to make.

Suddenly you have many questions about such things as which funeral director to call, the cost of funeral services, which cemetery you should use. More questions about the time and place of services, flowers, pallbearers, newspaper notices, insurance. Anything more? Yes, much more.

It's the day when a funeral director from Rix can give you the answers you must have: Answers based on experience patiently repeated as many times as you need to hear them to make wise decisions. You will find that you may arrange all details at our office or in the privacy of your home.

When death comes to your family, as it does to every family, or when you know death is imminent, call us for any information you need. This creates no obligation. We will give you answers to your questions, and you may make your decisions based on facts.

We invite your call before the need arises when you can examine the facts calmly and make unemotional decisions.

Remember, we want to help you.

Yacht club reflects '20s

PORT ISABEL, Texas (AP) — White, stucco walls at the Port Isabel Yacht Club have witnessed much wheeling and dealing, beginning 60 years ago when it was established as a private meeting place for the self-appointed elite of the Rio Grande Valley.

Its now-public restaurant still provides a glimpse into that era.

The late 1920s were years when towns named after developers and their family members were just taking shape, while brush country around them was being converted into vast farms in an agricultural land rush.

It was a long drive to the fishing village of Port Isabel and the hideaway with its Spanish architecture, stucco walls, red terra-cotta roof and private marina that served as the headquarters for the ruling class of the remote province at the southern tip of Texas.

Then shortly after the Yacht Club celebrated its first regatta in 1929, attracting boaters from as far away as Florida, the Great Depression hit.

Developer John H. Shary seized the opportunity and bought it from the original organizers in 1931 by assuming the debt.

Blaine Holcomb, manager of the Shary Estate, remembers the place during his youth in Port Isabel during the 1930s.

"He (Shary) was the father of the citrus industry," Holcomb said. "In promoting different things, he would bring people down and entertain them at the Yacht Club. Investors from Chicago and the East would stay there."

Holcomb remembers visits by celebrities like Charles Lindbergh, Andrew Carnegie and members of the Rockefeller family.

"It's got a lot of history, if the walls could talk," Holcomb added.

Other developers who belonged to the club also used it as a tool in building their empires.

"They would take people to Port Isabel and buy them a fish dinner," Holcomb recalled.

It was sold and opened to the public in 1947, following Shary's death. Since then, it has gone through different periods of prosperity and decline.

Present owners Ron and Lynn Speier took it over in 1979, and have maintained the restaurant's reputation as a place worth visiting for the specialty red snapper and other seafood. The crowd on a given night might include area business and political leaders, hunters on their way to and from Mexico, college students on holiday and conventioners.

Holcomb said the dining room with its fireplace, red carpet, dark-beamed ceiling, white walls, paintings, old photos and trophy fish is much the same way as he remembers it 50 years ago when he would bring newspapers to the cook in exchange for a once-weekly pie.

There are some odd touches that are decidedly not from the early days, though. Christmas lights that decorate some of the dining room's windows and plastic, space-age design furniture on the picturesque outdoor veranda seem to detract from the building's antique-postcard elegance.

The 24 guest rooms feature basic motel furniture and wood paneling. Spacious suites with views of the marina start at $44, cheaper than most hotel rooms at South Padre Island. For the first time since its construction, telephones are planned for the Yacht Club's rooms.

It would be the only lodging to offer phones in this relaxed coastal town of 7,000. Lynn Speier says she has started shopping around for phones because she loses some business travelers who end up staying in the modern hotel towers across the Laguna Madre in South Padre Island.

She and husband Ron, both California expatriates, can be found at the Yacht Club or at another restaurant they own nearly every night.

"I do hostess at night, except my night off, Tuesday," said Mrs. Speier.

On weekend nights, and often during the week, the old dining room is usually full.

"That's a lot of fish," she said.

Some people don't watch TV

DALLAS (AP) — There's winter, spring, summer and fall. And then there's the year's most-awaited season — the new TV season, when more than 88 million Americans come inside early and reacquaint themselves with the Huxtables, ALF and Maddie Hayes.

Not everybody looks forward to the new fall schedule. Two percent of Americans — those who know no television set — don't know Maddie Hayes from Gabby Hayes. To them, Bill Cosby is an author, Santa Barbara a city. Living without television, says one non-viewer, is "like living in a foreign country in which you don't speak the language."

Leif Oines is one of those people. The 26-year-old Dallas computer programmer kicked the TV habit eight years ago and today, he says he's a little out of touch. "I always see something about 'Moonlighting' in the National Enquirer at the checkout, so I know it's out there," says Oines, "but I don't know what it is."

Oines grew up watching reruns of "Gilligan's Island" after school, but when he left home for college, he didn't pack a TV set. "I didn't miss it," he says, "and after I earned enough to buy one, there always seemed to be something more worthwhile to buy. TV is always trying to sell you an idea that's not fully developed or a thing you don't want or need."

"There's always something better to do."

For Elva Trevino, reading and exercise take the place of the TV viewing she gave up 15 years ago. "I find the TV sits me down," says the 27-year-old IBM saleswoman. "I didn't have TV until I was 14 or 15 — I grew up in South Texas and our family didn't own one — but sometimes I watched 'Pop-eye' at a friend's house."

Mary Beth Burns says cable television peddlers think she's lying when she tells them she doesn't own a TV. Mrs. Burns, 30, and her doctor husband, Steve, decided nearly five years ago not to waste their time on the tube. Instead, they renovated a house and became active in church work. Since the birth of her daughter two years ago, Mrs. Burns has become more determined that a TV set will not take root in a corner of her living room.

"It's not public enemy No. 1, but there's a lot on TV I wouldn't want my children to see," she says. "TV has changed a lot since I was a kid. I'm appalled at the language and what is shown. It presents things as the norm that aren't the norm."

And, she says, it sometimes takes the place of parents. "I'm sure I wouldn't play with my child as much if I were plugged into the TV instead of to the child," Mrs. Burns says. "And I can see how it would be tempting to let it baby-sit with your kids. But when you're watching TV, you're not interacting with each other."

Russell Hobbs, a Deep Ellum nightclub owner whose unmarried and childless lifestyle is very different from the Burnses', nevertheless agrees that television discourages interaction between people. "They stay in their gerbil boxes watching the same things on TV, hiding from each other, instead of socializing," he says. "We need to open up our hearts and be with people instead of being programmable objects."

Iran-Contra timing right for Michener

NEW YORK (AP) — For James Michener's purposes, the Iran-Contra scandal couldn't have come at a better time.

Michener, who once taught history before he turned to writing fat, popular novels, was looking for just the right angle last fall to approach a new book about the U.S. Constitution.

He tried fiction, then nonfiction, then fiction again. And then, just when he needed it, along came a bona fide constitutional crisis — the very lens he needed to gaze backward through 200 years of American history.

"You know, I've been down this road a lot in my life, and until I find a framework for a story I'm not happy," he said in a recent interview. "The framework is terribly important to me. And here came an almost ready-made framework."

Thus was born "Legacy," Michener's ode to the Constitution, a novel spanning eight generations of a fictional family whose members rub elbows with historical figures from George Washington to Lt. Col. Oliver North.

It's not an unusual format for Michener, who has blended history with fiction in such novels as "Hawaii," "Chesapeake," "Texas" and "Space."

What is unusual, for a man who has written most of his books as if he were getting paid by the page, is the length — a mere 176 pages, of which 28 are devoted to a reprint of the Constitution and the Bill of Rights.

Michener said he was tempted to write three or four times as much in several chapters, but was committed to keeping it short. He was between two larger books at the time and wanted something he could write relatively quickly. The fact that this year is the 200th anniversary of the Constitution never entered into it, he said.

"Legacy" is a revealing book that says nearly as much about its 80-year-old author as it does about the forging of the Constitution and the crises that shaped it.

The title refers to the legacy of the fictional Starr family, from Jared Starr, Revolutionary War hero and signer of the Declaration of Independence, to Norman Starr, Vietnam War hero and aide to Oliver North.

Norman, who narrates the novel, is in hot water because of his involvement in the Iran-Contra scandal. For most of the book, he tells the story of his Starr ancestors, who share an affinity for lost causes and a tendency to blindly follow men who are not always well-guided themselves.

Michener said he, too, shares these conceding just one minor problem: The hip sets off metal detectors at airports, not an infrequent annoyance for a peripatetic writer.

"I've been on the losing side a great deal in my life," he said. "I was one of the Democratic leaders in the constitutional convention that rewrote the laws of Pennsylvania, and everything that I fought for I lost in that convention. At the end of it, both sides agreed that I should be chairman of the committee that put it into effect, so I lost all the battles but sort of won the war."

He also sees himself as a follower of others, and refers to himself repeatedly in that vein — as "a Kennedy man," "a Lincoln man," "a Franklin Roosevelt man" and "a James Wilson man" — the Pennsylvanian who was among the Founding Fathers.

"I have that attitude. I was very similar to the military officers who are in trouble right now," he said.

"The hip operation is just a modern miracle!" he exclaimed,

Fields fields comedy roles

NEW YORK (AP) — Sally Field has fared well on the choppy sea of stardom, but she says it still takes guts to put her work before the public.

The productive Academy Award-winning actress is about to deliver a baby in December and has two new romantic comedies coming out: "Surrender," out this week; and "Punchline," out early next year.

"Some people say that comedy is harder," she said. "Probably it's harder because when you fall, you fall so broadly — without any sort of saving grace. When you fall in drama it seems a little more graceful. When you fall in comedy, you splat."

Names

WYTHEVILLE, Va. (AP) — Country singer Randy Travis has been admitted to a hospital for treatment of dehydration, a hospital spokesman said.

Travis was passing through with his band and crew when he became ill and was admitted Thursday, said Newell Wright of Wythe County Community Hospital. Wright said Travis was in stable condition.

MONTREAL (AP) — Actor Michael Caine says he's ending eight years of tax exile in Los Angeles and returning to England.

At a news conference at the Montreal Film Festival on Thursday, the 53-year-old Caine said Hollywood is a wonderful place.

"But I also remember what Orson Wells once said: 'I sat down in an armchair in Los Angeles when I was 23, and when I got up I was 61,'" he said.

"I found myself drinking Perrier with every meal. I was eating things which I don't know. They kept giving me salads with something called arugula. I didn't know what arugula was. I was also getting very homesick."

Caine was the subject of a tribute at the festival, where his latest film, "The Fourth Protocol," was given its North American premiere.

Arugula is a pungent salad green.

LONDON (AP) — Newly divorced Joan Collins says there's a new man in her life but no wedding bells.

"Obviously I like being married, but it has not worked for me," the four-times divorced star of TV's "Dynasty" said Friday. She was in London to publicize the British showing of her TV miniseries "Sins."

Miss Collins, 54, who was divorced from former Swedish pop star Peter Holm last month in a bitter case, said she is now involved with British property developer Bill Wiggins.

Such insight is squeezed from a lifetime spent in show business: as the daughter of Paramount actress Maggie Field Mahoney; the stepdaughter of Jock Mahoney, a star of Westerns and two Tarzan films; and now, as the wife of producer Alan Grelsman ("Fletch," "Modern Problems" and "Night, Mother.")

Field also seems entrenched in her domestic role with her close-cropped hair and casual maternity clothes — the flip side of her provocative pose on the cover of a 1986 Playboy magazine. Already the mother of Peter, 17, and Eli, 14, she plans to "play it by ear" about ending her next maternity leave.

"Even in the past, I would only do a picture every 1½ to two years," she said. "I did two pictures this year, which was unusual for me."

What's it like to go back onto the set after such a hiatus?

"It's always hard," she said. "And every actor I've ever talked to feels this way."

"You always, the first day of shooting, are a nervous wreck. You're trembling all over, because you're saying, 'I once knew how to do this but I've forgotten it now,'" she said. "Then you get up and you start to work and it sort of goes away."

Such admissions of human frailties have brought her grief in the past. Critics and fans alike groaned after she gushed during her 1985 Oscar acceptance speech: "You like me! You really like me!"

But in an August interview, Field's own favorite actress, Katharine Hepburn, expressed a similar revelation. Hepburn said she was surprised that the audience was not out to shoot her after she sang in the 1970 Broadway production of "Coco."

"It was a warm ... discovery to me. And I thought, 'They must like me. That's why they're here.'"

After hearing Hepburn's remarks, Field laughed heartily. "Aha! There it is! She said it much more clearly than I did. Had I said that, I wouldn't be in trouble."

The 40-year-old actress began her career in 1965 on television as the perky surfer in "Gidget." After soaring in her second silly sitcom, "The Flying Nun" (1967-70), Field longed for meatier roles. She spent several years unemployed. However, the wait proved to be worthwhile.

In 1976, she earned critical plaudits opposite Jeff Bridges in "Stay Hungry." That same year, she won an Emmy award for the TV movie "Sybil."
