

Flash flood hits bus carrying teens

3 dead, 7 missing in church bus mishap

The Secret Is Out

Golfer Doug Carroll of Amarillo takes a few practice shots before teeing off on Pitman Municipal Golf Course early Saturday morning. Carroll was one of 68 Pantex employees playing a tournament at the local course this weekend. Golf Pro Mike Horton says it is not unusual for area golfers to choose the Hereford course and that an average weekend will see 100 out-of-town golfers on the course each day. It is clear that the secret is out about Hereford's beautiful golf course. Several local benefit tournaments are scheduled here soon.

COMFORT, Texas (AP) — Rescue workers held little hope of finding seven missing youths alive today as crews prepared to scour the Guadalupe River downstream from where floodwaters swept away vehicles carrying 43 people, killing three.

"It just may be some false hopes" that they survived in the churning, debris-choked waters, Department of Public Safety Sgt. Charles Seale said. "I don't believe there's any survivors."

Authorities said the body of a third teen-ager was found today as the search for survivors resumed.

Department of Public Safety trooper Frank Phelps said today the body of Michael O'Neal, 16, of Balch Springs, was discovered early this morning.

The search, which was suspended because of darkness Friday night, was scheduled to resume at daybreak, Seale said.

Rescue workers plucked several screaming, horror-stricken youths from tree branches and the muddy waters after the 7 a.m. Friday accident occurred as the group from Seagoville Road Baptist Church in Balch Springs was leaving the Pot O' Gold Ranch campsite about a mile west of here.

Two other buses had successfully passed the low-water crossing through about a foot of water, but a third bus carrying 32 passengers stalled in the wake of its predecessor, Seale said.

That bus couldn't back up because a church van was following too closely, said Richard "Whitey" Koons, 26, the church's youth minister who was driving the bus.

Panic mounted as a flash flood suddenly sent walls of water rushing at the vehicles, quickly rising as high as the bus' steering wheel, and Koons told the teen-agers to get out and form human chains in an effort to scramble to shore.

But the swift currents, laden with tree limbs and other debris, sucked the bus and van away and scattered the youths, sweeping some downstream as others frantically

Iran-Contra: Poindexter says Meese assured him 'no criminal problem' involved in affair

WASHINGTON (AP) — Adm. John Poindexter says that when he was asked to resign last November, Attorney General Edwin Meese III indicated to him that there were no "criminal problems" resulting from the Iran-Contra affair.

But when pressure soon mounted for a criminal probe by an independent counsel, Poindexter said he decided not to discuss his role even with President Reagan, thus keeping the country waiting until this week to learn the extent of the president's knowledge of the operations.

Poindexter appeared before congressional committees investigating the Iran-Contra affair for a third day Friday for testimony described by Senate committee chairman Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii, as "incredible, mindboggling, chilling." Reagan's former national security adviser returns to the witness table Monday.

Constantly puffing on his pipe, always speaking in a monotone,

Poindexter steadfastly insisted that Reagan would have approved the diversion of Iran arms sales profits to the Nicaraguan Contra rebels if he'd been asked.

But the White House stood by chief spokesman Marlin Fitzwater's statement earlier this week that Reagan "has said on past occasions that had he been told, he would not have allowed, and he should have been told."

Poindexter testified, "I would have expected him to say that. That's the whole idea of deniability."

The admiral was quizzed by Sen. Warren Rudman, R-N.H., about the crucial events of Nov. 25, 1986, the day Poindexter's resignation was accepted by Reagan, and Meese went on television to announce the discovery that Iran arms sales profits were diverted to the Contras.

Three days earlier, Meese's investigators had discovered a memo in the office of Poindexter aide Oliver L. North which mentioned the diversion and led to the unraveling of the secret Contra operation run out of the National Security Council offices. The Iranian arms sales had been exposed Nov. 4 in an article in a Middle East publication.

Poindexter said he met with Meese about 7:30 a.m. on the 25th, and "he indicated to me that he didn't think that there were any criminal problems. He did say that his people were still looking into it, but at that point he didn't see any problem, and we really didn't have any other discussion."

Earlier, Poindexter had said he made a mistake resigning.

Justice Department sources, speaking only on condition of anonymity, have in the past confirmed that Meese had not decided the morning of Nov. 25 on a criminal investigation.

The sources have said that the criminal division had not yet produced the necessary memo with suggested avenues of criminal prosecution. The memo was completed that evening, hours after Meese had gone on television, and a criminal investigation was launched. The FBI was brought in the next day, Nov. 26.

Those events had an effect on Poindexter's decision to hire counsel and keep silent on the central question of the affair: whether Reagan knew of the diversion plan, which occurred while the Boland Amendment prohibited government aid to Nicaragua's Contras.

"What I don't understand is why it took us so long to get to where we got," in learning of Reagan's knowledge, Rudman said, noting that Poindexter revealed to the nation for the first time last Wednesday that he never told Reagan about the diversion.

"As one who did not feel he was acting as a criminal, as one who was carrying out the policies that he believed his commander-in-chief wanted, why, before you left your assignment, you did not say to the President ... I want you to know ... that what I did, you did not authorize me to do, and I take responsibility for it?" Rudman asked.

Poindexter responded, "The problem was that there was pressure in the media and from the Congress to establish an independent counsel. I don't think I had anticipated that. That put the whole situation in a different light and ... the talk of that made me realize that I really should retain counsel, and after that I did take their advice."

Reagan, Thatcher urge UN role in war

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan and British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher are asking the secretary general of the United Nations to take a personal role in settling "the bloody and senseless" Iran-Iraq conflict.

The two leaders, at the end of a two-hour round of talks at the White House on Friday, issued a stern call for an end to the attacks on international shipping that have plagued the Persian Gulf during the 7-year-war.

"It is time for an immediate end to the Iran-Iraq war, and we believe the United Nations secretary general should personally undertake a mission to achieve that end," Reagan declared, seeking Javier Perez de Cuellar's personal involvement.

Perez de Cuellar and Vernon Walters, the U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, held discussions about the Iran-Iraq war last week.

"If either or both of the warring parties refuse the United Nations call for a cessation of the fighting, an arms embargo should be brought to bear on those who reject this chance to end this bloody and senseless conflict," Reagan said.

Walters, speaking with reporters after conferring with Perez de Cuellar, said there now was "a golden opportunity for the U.N. to do what it was created to do — stop a war."

"I expect the resolution will put an end to the war," he said.

Besides seeking the U.N. role, the Reagan administration has gone ahead with plans to put U.S. flags and captains on 11 Kuwaiti oil tankers and supply U.S. Navy protection for the ships. Members of Congress have said the "reflagging" begins on Wednesday.

Reagan and Mrs. Thatcher said they supported the move to get two U.N. resolutions to bring an end to the conflict.

The first resolution calling for the cease-fire is tentatively scheduled to be debated in the U.N. Security Council on Monday, with Secretary of State George P. Shultz leading the U.S. delegation.

The second measure, on which a consensus has been difficult to reach, would impose an arms embargo against both Iran and Iraq if they refuse to stop fighting.

HOF Rodeo draws 12 local cowgirls

A trick roper show and a barbecue dinner are added attractions to the 1987 Hall of Fame All Girl Rodeo, set for July 31-Aug. 2.

Twelve local cowgirls will join rodeo riders from nine states for the competition at the Circle A Arena, 8 miles west of Hereford.

Performances are set for 7:30 p.m. that Friday, at 3 p.m. Saturday and 2 p.m. on Sunday for the roping, riding, and rough stock events.

Tickets are $4 for adults and $1 for children.

Joan Wells, today's Women's World Champion Trick Roper, will be performing at the rodeo. Wells is recognized as one of the top rope spinning artists in the business. She performs the intricate butterfly routines, horseback roping, double tricks, Ocean Wave, horse catches, Texas Skip and Turn, running skip and multiple turns.

The barbecue dinner will be served at 5 p.m. at the rodeo concession stand, following the Saturday performance. Caviness Packing has supplied the beef for the pit barbecue meal, which is supervised by Clay Mitchell. Advance tickets, $3 each, are available at the Cowgirl Hall of Fame, Boots and Saddle and Hereford State Bank.

Attending the rodeo again is Miss Rodeo Texas, Stacy Woods, the 1987 title holder and 1986 runner-up, is from El Paso. She made her first appearance as Miss Rodeo Texas in Hereford on June 27 and returns for the rodeo.

Another sideline attraction is the dance, set for Saturday, Aug. 1, in the KC Hall from 9 p.m. until 1 a.m. Tickets are $6 each or $10 per couple. The Clyde Logg Band from Amarillo is providing music.

The 91 riders to compete at the rodeo are from Montana, Wyoming, Oklahoma, Idaho, Kansas, Arkansas, Colorado, New Mexico and Texas.

Hometown cowgirls signed up are Tammy Donnell, Marcy Smith, Jennifer Smith, Donna Curtis, Debbie Lewis, Mica Harland, Carey Smith, Chasity Rickman, Debbie White, Stephanie Major, Jackie Winter and Kim Lindsey.

Drug 'busts' costly, as big operation here proves

By DEBE GRAVES
Staff Writer

City and County officials voted recently to support local participation in a regional law enforcement drug unit for the Panhandle area. The unit, officed in Amarillo, will be applying for grant money to finance its first year of operation and, according to law enforcement officials, should be able to support itself financially through proceeds from confiscated vehicles and property taken during drug busts.

The business of financing undercover drug operations is an expensive one as evidenced by the $35,851.45 spent on a massive operation in Hereford in 1986. The 10-month operation netted 95 total cases against 77 people involved in using and selling illegal drugs and was a joint effort between the City of Hereford, Deaf Smith County and the Amarillo Metro Unit.

An accounting of the joint venture, provided by Lieutenant David Wagner of the Hereford Police Department, shows Amarillo Metro contributed $2,790 to the project, the wages for an undercover operative totaled $21,086 over the 10-month period and the city and county split a $11,975 bill for other expenditures.

A breakdown of the additional expenditures shows $3,789 was spent on entertainment. Wagner, who was responsible for direct day-to-day contact with the agent, explains entertainment expenditures include gasoline, club or bar memberships where contact was made with suspects, beer, pool parties and other money deemed necessary to create the image of a person with money to spend on drugs.

The agent, Raul Sanchez, rented an apartment at the Quality Motel during his stay in Hereford. Cost for rent was $1,771. Meal tickets for Sanchez, Sheriff Joe Brown and Wagner totaled $146. Wagner says the meals were charged to the department when one of the trio was out of town investigating or reporting some aspect related to the operation.

A used orange-colored Gremlin was purchased for Sanchez to drive during the operation. Cost of the pur-

Brooks named as Brand editor

John Brooks, editor of The Castro County News the last three years, has been named managing editor of The Hereford Brand, it was announced Saturday by Publisher Speedy Nieman.

Brooks, 31, will assume his duties Monday. He succeeds Jeri Curtis Shire, who resigned recently to enlist in the U.S. Army. Mrs. Shire had served as editor since February 1985 and had previously been a reporter for The Brand in 1981-83.

Before going to work at the Dimmitt newspaper, Brooks had been news director at KKYN Radio in Plainview for two years. He worked for KDHN Radio in Dimmitt for about eight years and was news director and program director part of that time. He earned broadcast awards for best spot news stories and best newscasts for four consecutive years.

At the Castro County News in 1985 and 1986, Brooks won Panhandle Press awards for best news writing, feature stories, front-page layout, and spot news photographs. Brooks is currently a member of the Journalism Advisory Board at West Texas State University. He is a past president of Dimmitt Kids, Inc., a past president of Dimmitt United Lions Club and a past zone chairman and deputy district governor of Lions, and a member and past president of Dimmitt Booster Club.

A graduate of Dimmitt High School in 1973, Brooks attended Central Arizona College and Hardin Simmons University, and is a graduate of Elkins Institute of Dallas. He is single and a member of the Baptist Church.

"We feel fortunate to have a man with John's experience coming to manage our news staff," said Nieman. "In addition, we have someone who is very familiar with the area and its people. We think he will be a great asset to our newspaper."

Mrs. Shire is a director of the Deaf Smith County Child Welfare Board, a former member of the Crimestoppers' Board, served on several chamber of commerce committees, and has been active in the Church of Nazarene.

She will enter the army as a private first class and take basic training at Ft. Jackson, S.C. Advanced training in the field of tactical satellite microwave systems repair is scheduled at Ft. Gordon, Ga. Entry date is set for Oct. 6.

Varoom!

This speedster enjoys a chance to drive on a really fast course during the annual Lions Club Carnival held in Hereford this week. Area residents turned out in large crowds to enjoy the fun which was capped off by a free concert on Friday night. The carnival featured the Pride of Texas show owned by Ed Berlingame and ran through Saturday night.

Iran accuses diplomats of spying, surround embassy

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iranian police have surrounded the French Embassy in Tehran and will arrest some of those inside it as spies, Iran's official news agency reported today.

The report came a day after France broke relations with Iran over the refusal by the Iranian Embassy in Paris to hand over for questioning an Iranian allegedly implicated in terrorist bombings in the French capital.

Iran reciprocated by declaring relations severed.

The Islamic Republic News Agency quoted Interior Minister Hojatolislam Ali Akbar Mohtashami as saying "members of the French embassy in Tehran have acted as a connecting bridge to help counter-revolutionaries escape abroad, and also to help link splinter groups inside Iran."

"Therefore the French embassy is at present surrounded by the police and the spies will be arrested and handed over to the judiciary for Islamic justice," he was quoted as saying by the agency, which is monitored in Nicosia.

About 15 French nationals are inside the French Embassy compound in Tehran. Eight of them have diplomatic status.

Mohtashami, who was addressing senior officials in Tehran, said "the Muslim people of Iran will never allow a handful of people to commit crimes and espionage acts under the pretext of diplomacy," according to IRNA.

Iranian television reported Friday that the French Consul in Tehran, Paul Torri, would be required to appear before an Islamic revolutionary court to face charges of espionage and drug smuggling.

Iran has five diplomats and about 35 other embassy employees in Paris.

It was not clear from Mohtashami's statement how many of the French diplomats or embassy employees he was accusing of espionage. IRNA quoted him as saying Iran had evidence of the diplomats' alleged crimes.

A lawyer representing the Iranian government in France said Friday that the rupture of diplomatic relations could provoke an Iranian mob to invade the French Embassy in Tehran and take diplomats hostage.

Lawyer Christian Bourguet said in a radio interview that French Embassy personnel could suffer the same fate as the Americans taken hostage when the U.S. Embassy in Tehran was overrun in November 1979.

"The risk now is that people in Iran, the crowds, learning about the rupture in diplomatic relations, do something of the type that happened to the Americans," Bourguet told Radio Monte Carlo. "That is to say a veritable invasion of the embassy."

In Paris on Friday, police increased surveillance of the Iranian Embassy, which has been ringed by security forces since June 30.

Iranian Embassy employee Wahid Gordji, who took refuge inside the mission, is wanted for questioning about five Paris bombings.

Pregnant wife beat

Aggravated assault charges have been filed against a 21-year-old man who beat his wife late Friday night. The man pulled her hair and hit her with his fists before kicking her and threatening her with a knife held to her face, she is nine months pregnant. The man left the home and officers of the Hereford Police Department apprehended him and arrested him on charges of D.W.I., evading arrest and second offense of no insurance. The Domestic Violence Center was notified of the incident and provided assistance for the woman.

Another woman reported to police that she has taken her baby and left her husband and she needed advice concerning custody of the child.

Other arrests include a 20-year-old male for failure to pay fines, no driver's license and no insurance; and a 46-year-old male was arrested for D.W.I.

Officers discovered a Ford van on Dairy Road which had been reported as stolen from Ohio and are investigating an incident where witnesses saw a juvenile suspect slash a tire on a vehicle parked near the Bull Barn.

Juveniles reported as suspiciously looking around a house were questioned. They carried large trash bags and were collecting aluminum cans. Pizza Hut reported a suspicious vehicle lurking around the area of the business. Upon investigation officers could not locate the vehicle.

Custom Cleaners reported that three male suspects came to pick up some laundry and were staring at the cash register while conducting a conversation in Spanish. The clerk thought they were plotting to steal money but the men left the store without incident.

Bikes were reported stolen on Ave. C and on North Schley. A watch was taken from a glove box of a car on Beach and Winn's Store caught two juveniles stealing cigarette lighters.

A woman reported neighborhood children had sprayed clothes she had hanging on a line with water. A man complained about large trucks being parked in his neighborhood and a woman filed charges on her neighbor for letting his pit bull dog run loose and for peeping in her windows at night.

No accidents were reported and eight citations were issued. Firemen received one call to the scene of a gas leak on West Fourth.

chase and needed repairs totaled $952.

City and County funds also contributed $5,308 to Metro's $2,790 for the purchase of drugs. According to Wagner drugs purchased included marijuana, cocaine, heroin, LSD, and a simulated controlled substance which, though not a drug, was sold as cocaine or heroin.

"After each buy Sanchez would contact me and we would meet so he could give me the drug to be taken to a lab and then used as evidence," recalls Wagner. "Once when I got this detailed lab report back on a chemical structure I didn't recognize as being a drug I called the lab and asked what the substance was they told me it was a powder used to treat venereal disease."

Purchasing potentially deadly chemicals misrepresented as drugs and the chance of capture are two of the many problems a drug addict faces. An undercover agent also faces problems. He lives with the danger of being exposed by drug users and killed. He faces legal problems which may hamper his effectiveness as a witness and he faces a criminal justice system which neither the drug offender nor the law enforcement officer always finds to be just.

(In the next of this series of articles, The Brand will explore the complexities of fighting drug addiction as well as a number of questions which local residents and the American Civil Liberties Union have raised about the 1986 drug bust in Hereford. We will also delve into inequities in the justice system and into answers some Hereford residents are finding in terms of prevention of drug abuse.)

to testify before Congress, asserting his Fifth Amendment right against self-incrimination, and said he had no further meetings with the president. He is testifying now under a grant of limited immunity that protects his words from being used against him in a criminal case.

On another key point, Poindexter said he withheld information from Congress last fall because "I simply didn't want any outside interference" in the secret program of support for the Contras.

He said he feared revealing the truth to Congress would have destroyed the ability to secretly provide assistance to the Contras and could provoke further legal restrictions on aid.

Poindexter denied, however, that he was attempting a cover-up last November when he destroyed a key document Reagan signed that authorized the sale of U.S.-made Hawk missiles to Iran in November 1985 as a straight arms-for-hostages deal. Poindexter said he tore up the document, which seemed to contradict Reagan's assertion of broader goals in the dealing, because he viewed it as politically damaging if revealed.

In a CBS News-New York Times poll released Friday, 53 percent of those questioned said they think Reagan was lying when he said he didn't know about the diversion, while 34 percent said he was telling the truth. And 47 percent said Poindexter was lying when he said he didn't tell Reagan, while 33 percent believe the aide's story. The rest had no opinion.

The telephone poll was conducted Thursday, with interviews of 665 people nationwide and a statistical margin of error of plus or minus 4

Survivors recall horror of bus tragedy

COMFORT, Texas (AP) — Water was only about a foot deep when the church youth minister tried to follow other buses over a low-water crossing of the rain-swollen Guadalupe River.

But before he could get across, a wave of water from the preceding bus stalled his vehicle in midstream. Then, seconds later, he said, a wall of water "came from nowhere."

"I'm happy to be alive," Richard "Whitey" Koons, 26, youth minister of the Seagoville Road Baptist Church of Balch Springs, said Friday.

"I tried to back up and our van, behind us, was already halfway under water. It came from nowhere," Koons said. Within minutes both vehicles were under water.

Melissa Henderson, 17, of Mesquite said teen-agers screamed and prayed as they were ordered to get out of the two vehicles and into the river.

"Everyone that I heard yell said, 'Hey, we're OK. God saved us and we're all on our way to Heaven if we don't make it,'" said Miss Henderson, whose father, the Rev. Preston Henderson, is the church's pastor.

In the moments that followed, at least three people among the 43 campers aboard the bus and van died in the cold, swirling waters of the river. Seven others were still missing today as search efforts resumed, and officials said hopes were slim of finding any of them alive.

A 14-year-old girl died when she fell 100 feet from a rope dangled from a helicopter, and the body of a 13-year-old girl was found three miles down river.

Miss Henderson said she and others found knee-deep water once they got outside the submerged vehicles, and linked hands as they turned toward the bank. They didn't make it to shore.

"A big old gush of water went and there was no land," she said. "Everybody went under water. We were in trees across from each other. One kid went by (in the water), and she was screaming. There wasn't anything we could do."

"As they tried to walk through that, they could not just hold up against the water," said the Rev. Paul McBroom, a minister from Center Point, a small town near Comfort. McBroom, who went to Comfort Community Hospital after hearing of the accident, spent much of Friday comforting survivors.

Scott Chapman of Seagoville, who was aboard the bus, said he and others watched as several girls were swept away by the raging torrents.

"Some of us guys started swimming after them, but we couldn't ever catch them," Chapman said.

Some survivors spent three hours or more trapped in the protective branches of trees, often with only their arms and heads above water. Helicopters plucked at least nine youths from trees they were clinging to in the water.

"I thought I was going to drown fast," said Jason Hernandez, 13, of Mesquite. "My whole life, it just kind of went before me. It was scary."

"The tide started getting strong and it took me off, I'm just not sure, about a half-mile down stream," Hernandez recalled after he had been plucked from the river.

Like many of his friends, Hernandez grabbed frantically at tree limbs as the river's current took hold of him.

"It tried to pull me under," he said, describing how he grabbed one limb only to have it break. "The water went over my head, and then I grabbed another limb and that broke."

"Then the third one. That held." He and a friend, Mike O'Neil, held onto tree limbs until an Army helicopter crew rescued them.

Gene Marsh Jr., 14, had been in the van and was sucked into a stand of trees as he tried to escape. Then he watched upriver as the flood-driven bus began to loom closer to him.

"The bus was floating down the river. It hit the tree, and it turned around, and it hit me," he said.

The impact cracked four ribs, but he held on, alone and frightened.

"I was up in the tree for 3½ hours before they came to get us. I just stayed there and yelled. I was yelling for somebody to help me," he said.

Children came out of helicopters wrapped in blankets, some without shoes and their clothes tattered.

Chamber cautions : beware of solicitors

During this time of the year there are a number of out of town firms soliciting local firms and residents with many types of goods and services.

The Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce would urge all residents to know who they are dealing with and take time to know what item or service they are purchasing. Be sure that the company you are dealing with is reputable and can be contacted in case of a question or problem you may have.

Do not be pressured into a "chance of a lifetime" or a "good deal." Always feel free to check on the company you're talking to.

The Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce would ask that our residents remember: "Buyer Beware." Many of the sales promotions that are now taking place will take many dollars out of the community. Therefore, we urge local residents to evaluate the service or items to be sold, know who your dealing with, determine if you need the product or will use it. Then make your decision to purchase or pass. If you do purchase an item, the law provides you the right to return it for a full refund within three day sof the purchase.

If the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce may be of further assistance please call us at 364-3333.

Delta faces new charges

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Aviation Administration, already investigating five unusual incidents involving Delta Airlines flights, says it is looking into a sixth in which a Delta pilot took off without proper clearance.

The Thursday night incident at Boston's Logan Airport came a day after the FAA began a review of Delta's training procedures because of a rash of pilot mistakes in recent weeks.

FAA officials, responding to an inquiry, said Friday that the Delta pilot was directed onto the runway and told to hold, but then took off as another jetliner belonging to USAir was preparing to cross the same runway.

When a controller noticed the departure of the Delta plane, Flight 670 bound for Montreal, he directed the USAir pilot not to proceed.

A Delta spokesman, Jim Ewing, described the incident as a pilot's "misunderstanding" of a controller's direction. "We're confident he had the authority to take the airplane off."

ALICE BROWN
July 17, 1987

Alice G. Brown, 95, died Friday afternoon in Deaf Smith General Hospital after a brief illness.

Services were to be held at 2 p.m. Saturday in Rose Chapel of Gilliland-Watson Funeral Home with Dr. Ron Cook, pastor of First Baptist Church, officiating. Graveside services will be at 2 p.m. Monday in Longton Cemetery at Moline, Kan.

Mrs. Brown, born at Guilfoyl, Pa., moved to Hereford from Oklahoma in 1972. She was married to Roland Brown in 1917. He died in 1947. She was a member of First Baptist Church.

Survivors include two daughters, Mary Harman of Hereford and Ruby Baker of Baton Rouge, La.; a brother, Richard Payne of Hutchinson, Kan.; three grandchildren and six great-grandchildren.

The family suggests memorials to the Hereford Senior Citizens Association or the American Heart Association.

grasped at trees in an effort to stay afloat.

One girl — Melanie Finley, 14, of Mesquite — died after what started as a spectacular air-lift rescue ended in tragedy when she fell 100 feet from a rope dangled by a DPS helicopter, Seale said.

"She couldn't hold on. She apparently was too weak to hold on. She had the rope around her properly, but she couldn't hold on," he said.

The body of the second victim — Tonya Smith, 13, of Scurry — was found a short time later tangled in a wire-mesh fence.

"We had come up here to learn about God, and we sure did," said Melissa Henderson, 17, of Mesquite. "I have never been so scared in my life. The worst thing was hearing your friends screaming for help and not being able to do anything about it."

Of the survivors, only two were still hospitalized late Friday, one in guarded condition and the other in stable condition.

Officials said they had called camp supervisors between 3 and 4 a.m. Friday to warn against crossing the swollen river.

CRP signup begins Monday

The fifth Conservation Reserve Program CRP sign-up period begins Monday and runs through July 31, according to officials at the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service.

CRP offers farmers cost sharing and annual rental payments to convert highly erodible cropland to permanent vegetation, a chance to bypass expensive conservation treatment and to retain eligibility for USDA programs.

In the last four sign-ups, farmers submitted bids on a total of 2.3 million acres in Texas.

Under CRP, farmers receive cost sharing to establish grass, trees or wildlife plantings on highly erodible cropland, up to 50 percent of eligible costs of establishment. Annual rental payments are bid by the farmer and extend for 10 years, the length of the CRP contract.

"Everybody down the river was notified that the river was on the rise," said Kendall County Sheriff Lee D'Spain Jr. "I couldn't say for certain, but I think that would be right that it could have been avoided if they would have taken notice of the warning."

The children were setting out for a rafting expedition and were not being evacuated, Koons said.

"It was just the normal time to leave camp, just after breakfast," Koons said. "We were going to New Braunfels and heading back to Dallas."

The empty, twisted, moss-covered bus was found as the flood waters began to recede late in the day, but the van was still somewhere under water, officials said.

The accident occurred in an area that received almost a foot of rain early Friday, causing the worst flooding of the Guadalupe River at nearby Hunt since 1932, the National Weather Service said. The river had risen to 28.4 feet, 16 feet above flood stage by 4 a.m. Friday, prompting deputies to evacuate hundreds of residents along the river.

Charles Daggett, a member of the Comfort Volunteer Fire Department, said one of the survivors told him they tried to form a human chain to get to the bank.

"She said they were all holding hands like a chain and maybe work themselves up back to the pavement," Daggett said. "She said then a wall of water came so fast that it kind of broke them up, and that the bus started floating and that a lot of them stayed with the bus, but then it started going down river."

Jason Hernandez, 13, of Dallas, said a friend rescued him by using a branch to pull Hernandez to a tree. "He saved my life. I said several prayers," Hernandez said. Many of the children suffered bruises and small cuts on their arms and legs from clinging to trees, said Betsy Cox, a nurse at Sid Peterson Memorial Hospital in nearby Kerrville who was at the scene.

Gov. Bill Clements called out the National Guard to help search for the missing teen-agers and to help transport about 260 people, mostly children, from other youth camps in the area.

DPS trooper Tom Mobley said investigators will determine next week whether any charges should be filed against the bus driver.

"If there is ample evidence that he (the driver) is guilty or could be charged or should be charged, I'm sure the county attorney or district attorney will take appropriate action," Mobley said.

Nuptials planned by Powell, Brockman

Mr. and Mrs. J.E. Powell of Enterprise, Ala., announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Vickie Lynn Powell, to Cpt. Gregory Allan Brockman, son of Mrs. Donna Brockman of Hereford and the late Allan Brockman.

The couple will be wed Sept. 19 at 2 p.m. in the 5th Avenue Chapel at Ft. Rucker, Ala., with the reception immediately following at the NCO Club. Miss Powell is a 1982 graduate of Enterprise High School and is currently a member of the Alabama Army National Guard.

Brockman, a 1982 graduate of Westpoint, is currently stationed at Ft. Hood, Texas.

All friends and relatives are invited to attend the nuptials.

Women's Health

Most girls look forward to their first period as a sign that they are indeed "grown-up." They also may feel a bit fearful because they don't understand menstruation fully or are worried about the changes it will bring. Fortunately, it's rare today for a girl to be taken by surprise by her first period and think that she is injured or ill, as happened to some of our grandmothers.

You can start menstruating anytime from age 10 to age 16, but the average is around age 12. In the two years before that first period, your body starts releasing hormones that cause you to mature sexually. These are the same hormones that control your menstrual cycle and other parts of your reproductive system. Your breasts and hips begin to grow, you develop pubic hair, and the organs inside your body begin to change so you can have children.

The uterus (womb), a pearshaped organ low in your abdomen, is where a baby grows during pregnancy. On each side of the uterus are the almond-sized ovaries which contain thousands of eggs; and the two fallopian tubes, narrow tubes through which the eggs travel to reach the womb.

The menstrual cycle, which is about a month long, begins with one egg maturing in an ovary. Two weeks later it bursts out of the ovary and travels to the tube. In the meantime, the womb has been building up a spongy bloodrich lining. If the egg unites with a man's sperm—fertilization—it will continue to the womb and grow into a baby. When the egg isn't fertilized, it dissolves, and on about day 28 of your cycle, the lining is shed and that is called menstruation.

Every woman's menstrual cycle is different. Your cycle—the time between periods—may range from 23 to 35 days, and the flow may last from 3 to 7 days. It may take a while for your periods to follow some kind of schedule, and some women never develop very regular periods.

When your periods begin, you are physically able to have babies. It also brings other changes. The monthly changes in hormones may affect your moods, and it's not unusual to have physical symptoms such as sore breasts or increased acne before your period. Many girls and women get menstrual cramps—pain in the lower abdomen—just before their period. A heating pad and aspirin will help mild cramps; your doctor can prescribe medication for more severe pain.

That feller on Tierra Blanca Creek says there's nothing wrong with having a difference of opinion with your wife, as long as you don't tell her about it.

Advertising a seminar on "What Makes a Happy Marriage?" a poster in a women's club inquired: "What do you have in common with your husband?"

Beside it someone had written: "We both got married on the same day."

Speaking on the Superconducting Supercollider project, Congressman Beau Boulter of Amarillo was recently quoted in the Congressional Record as saying: "I give my unequivocal support to the SSC effort, and recommend and encourage its location in the Panhandle of Texas where, as we like to say, on the eighth day, the good Lord created the Panhandle of Texas for the location of the SSC."

Here is a tongue-in-cheek outline of the six phases of implementing a new program: (1) Enthusiasm, (2) Disillusionment, (3) Panic, (4) Search for the guilty, (5) Punishment of the innocent, (6) Praise and honor for the non-participants.

New medical evidence suggests that the best cure for a snakebite could be as close as your car, boat, or any engine with spark plugs, according to an article in the June issue of Outdoor Life. The cure is electric-shock therapy!

Fred Fox of Hereford brought us a copy of the article. The idea of treating bites with a DC charge is said to have originated from a newspaper report in Illinois about a farmer who was hyperallergic to bee stings and found that a high-voltage, low-amperage DC shock to the sites of his stings prevented his usual severe reaction.

The scientific disclosure of the therapy, according to the article, started with a casual conversation two years ago in London between an American missionary physician and two tropical disease experts. Dr. Ronald H. Guderian, a missionary-physician based in Ecuador, described his experiments with the electric-shock therapy on poisonous insect bites and then on snakebites.

The doctor further told how the practice of snakebite victims attaching a wire (which normally carries electricity from the coil of an engine to a spark plug) to the area of the bite has become a standard folk remedy in the jungle.

It was stressed that the type of current used is DC (direct current), produced by alternators and generators that are commonly installed on gas-using engines to produce electricity. Not used is AC (alternating current), commonly used in houses and offices.

The article states that: "The treatment defies scientific explanation, but it is now undergoing extensive laboratory testing in the United States and England; a modified version is being used in clinics and hospitals in three countries, and successful treatments have been written about in one of the world's leading medical journals."

The suggested method of treatment consists of the bitten area being electrically grounded as close as possible to the bite and current applied for one or two seconds, in four or five treatments spaced about five to 10 seconds apart. The article reports the modified version, called a "stun gun", is being used by some clinics and hospitals. It has a nine-volt battery to deliver a DC pulse of around 12 kilovolts at less than one milliampere.

Dr. Jeffrey F. Williams of Michigan State University and Dr. Charles D. MacKenzie, London School of Hygiene and Tropical Medicine, collaborated with Dr. Guderian on a formal report which was accepted and printed in the July 26, 1986 issue of the medical journal "The Lancet", published in London.

Other physicians say they consider the treatment experimental until confirming reports are published, but doctors in three countries have used it successfully, according to the Lancet article.

Dr. Williams and other researchers at Michigan State are reported to be planning more research on the technique, which now may become known as the Guderian method. Still a mystery to doctors and scientists is how and why the shock-treatment works.

AIDS AND IRONY

We are in a near state of panic about AIDS. We should be concerned, of course, as this could be more serious than the plague if it is unchecked.

I wonder if the panic is not almost as bad as the disease. The other night in New Jersey a referee for a prize fight was required to wear gloves during the fight as a protection against AIDS. The announcers said it was to be a regular requirement. It will not be long before they will wear masks and surgical gowns.

Baylor Dental school will require masks and gloves for anyone working on a patient beginning this term. It may not be long before masks and surgical gowns will be the regular attire for anyone who is going to contact anyone.

I am not knocking practicing safety. Nor do I think there is anything funny about AIDS. AIDS is as serious as death. There is, however, a great deal of irony in the whole AIDS thing. Irony is sort of a back-door humor deal. Irony is a cross between, "Well, I guess we deserve this" and "What is going to happen next?"

It is ironic that just about the time we finally get comfortable hugging one another, we get a disease that makes us afraid to get near enough to be breathed on. Hugging did not happen to me with any ease, I learned it and I learned it slowly. I came from the old school that said you did not touch a woman other than your wife, and you did not make too much of a habit of touching your wife. Any other approach was being too familiar. Finally we get over our upbringing and Boom! It is back to the "no huggie, no touchee."

It is ironic that every time mankind gets the least bit cocky about how smart we are and how great is our technology, we bump up against something that lets us know we are really not as smart as we thought. All of the research, all of the scientists, and all of the computers stand helpless and desperately look for some cure. It is humbling to say the least.

It is ironic that we have to face the fact that we are not going to live forever. No matter how smart we become, no matter what discoveries we make, no matter what we do, we are designed to die, and we are going to do so. Maybe we should spend a little more time on that reality instead of so much time trying to think maybe we won't kick off after all.

Ain't it funny how I slip sermons in? You can take the preacher out of the pulpit, but it is hard to get the pulpit out of the preacher.

Myths about minimum wage

By Robert L. Martin

Legislation that would dramatically increase the federal minimum wage is moving rapidly through Congress. Throughout deliberation on Capitol Hill, it has been clear that important decisions are being made based on a series of myths. In an effort to shed some light on the realities of this important issue, the following clarifies a number of commonly held fallacies about minimum wage workers and the minimum wage rate.

Myth: The typical minimum wage earner is a head of household supporting a family. Reality: The typical minimum wage employee is young, single, resides at home and works part-time. More than one third of all minimum wage earners are teenagers, with 60 percent under the age of 25, and 59 percent are single. About half are both single and reside in a household with a relative earning substantially more income.

Myth: Raising the minimum wage has no negative impact on employment. Reality: Reports by the Minimum Wage Study Commission invariably show that increases in the minimum wage result in a loss of jobs. The debate centers around how many jobs are lost rather than whether there is a job loss. Commission studies show that each 10 percent increase in the minimum wage results in the loss of up to 240,000 jobs for teenagers. In addition, studies show the number of jobs lost by adults is far greater. For example, one study for the Commission reported a 10 percent increase in the minimum wage could wipe out 2.7 million jobs for adults.

Myth: A minimum wage increase is essential to welfare reform. Reality: Only 16 percent of household heads below the poverty level work at a full-time job on a year-round basis. Raising the required wage payment for those with few skills decreases their likelihood of employment, resulting in more pressure on the welfare system. While the recent elimination of taxes on the working poor has removed the disincentives they faced in getting jobs, a minimum wage increase would destroy many of these entry-level jobs.

Myth: Raising the minimum wage will encourage the low-skilled and unemployed to seek jobs. Reality: Increasing the minimum wage does not guarantee a wage increase to the least skilled. Rather, it may cost them their jobs. The low-skilled are the first to lose their jobs when the minimum wage is raised. New entry-level jobs are not created when labor costs go up. Where are the plentiful gas station attendants and department store clerks of ten years ago? Those jobs fell victim to the last minimum wage increase.

Myth: Raising the minimum wage is a way to reduce poverty. Reality: A July 1986 Congressional Budget Office study showed more than 80 percent of minimum wage workers did not fit the profile of the working poor, defined as heads of households below the poverty level who work full-time to support a family of three or four. Seventy percent of minimum wage workers live in a family where at least one other member of the family holds a job.

Myth: Raising the wage floor will affect only those employees currently at the minimum wage. Reality: The Minimum Wage Study Commission reported that wage increases for those above the minimum wage are more costly to employers than the legislated increase of the minimum wage. An increase in the minimum wage will ripple through the job market and increase wages for skill- and experienced employees without corresponding increases in productivity. The result is wage-driven inflation.

Myth: Business can offset higher labor costs through price increases to consumers. Reality: Some higher labor costs can be offset by higher prices. However, higher prices are met with consumer resistance. The result is a lessened demand for services and fewer workers and firms in those industries. To the extent that higher wages are offset by higher prices, minimum wage employees are back where they started. They only way wages can be increased in real terms is for workers to acquire new skills through training and education.

Myth: A rise in the minimum wage has no impact on competitiveness with foreign businesses. Reality: Minimum wage increases will hurt further the ability of some low-wage manufacturing industries to compete. These are the same industries that already have been hurt, such as shoes, textiles and apparel. As these industries and others are forced to raise their basic labor rates, entire wage structures ratchet upward. The effect on international competition is obviously harmful.

A close review of the issues surrounding the minimum wage debate shows that a higher minimum wage rate will cause more problems than it solves. Before arbitrarily raising this rate, Congress needs to review carefully the impact of such actions and weigh the cost of lost jobs and inflation against higher pay for workers at the minimum wage.

Sports medicine researchers at Penn State University have discovered that cyclists pedal differently with each leg, according to the Reebok Aerobic Information Bureau. Some bicycle racers produce as much as 30 percent more power with one leg than the other.

For most normal children, hearing is most acute at about age 10. It takes about 30 to 40 years before any noticeable change occurs. Higher-pitched sounds fade first. But many people in their 70s and beyond retain the ability to hear conversation at a normal pitch.

On North's support

No one should be offended or surprised. This course of events is as natural as the sun rising in the East. Those who do not share Lt. Col. Oliver North's opinions and positions have every right to counterattack as vigorously as the colonel attacked.

It is a measure of just how much impact on the public North is judged to have had to see the fierce blossoming of criticism that started Sunday and has reached new heights each day since. There seems to be a sense that if North's apparent credibility and image aren't breached, his side will carry the day and the republic will be endangered.

...Both sides are trying to frame the terms of the debate. One wants it to be about the dangers of communist penetration of the hemisphere, never mind the procedures. The other wants it to be about the procedures, never mind the communist penetration.

The public is not served either way. And surely the public is not served if things get too passionately adversarial on this point.

Sales tax structure

Attention has focused on the sales tax in Texas because it apparently will play a key role in any legislative effort to unravel the state's current financial crisis.

In the midst of this discussion, State Comptroller Bob Bullock is issuing warnings that Texas is headed toward having one of the most complicated and confusing sales tax structures in the nation.

Among the 10 largest states, Texas has by far the most complicated sales tax structure.

It is important that our system not be made more complicated.

In addition, it indicates the importance of studying other solid means of getting revenue for state and local governments.

Bootleg Philosopher

Editor's note: The Bootleg Philosopher on his Johnsongrass farm on Tierra Blanca Creek gets fooled by an article on taxes.

Dear editor:

According to an article I read the other day while it was taking Oliver North fifteen minutes to answer yes or no to a question, the country's state legislatures and governors are up in arms over the Federal government's plans to raise taxes on gasoline, cigarettes and alcohol.

At first I thought, well, the states are finally looking out for their citizens, especially in their opposition to the Federal government's raising the gasoline tax. The Federal tax is now 9 cents a gallon and Congress is considering raising it now 9 cents a gallon and Congress is considering raising it 10 cents more, to 19 cents, which not too many years ago was the total price of a gallon of gas, and the station attendant pumped it for you.

However, during the next long answer, I read more of the article and discovered the reason the states don't want the Federal government to raise those taxes is that they want to raise them.

State officials argued that if the Federal government jumps it and raises those taxes, there won't be anything left for the states to raise.

This seems to be unfair. A compromise ought to be worked out. Congress could raise taxes in even years, the states in odd years.

When the tax on gasoline reaches $2 a gallon, invest in a lively stable.

Yours faithfully,
J.A.

LIFTING OTHERS

"By looking for the best, love lifts to the best."—Henry F. Cope, Chicago Tribune, March 25, 1906.

"The love that lifts lightens its own load."—Cope, June 24, 1906.

TODAY'S INSIGHT:

A person worthy to have the love of Christ in his heart is motivated by the Holy Spirit to look for the best in others. He can be further motivated to help others, to bear another's burdens, thus lightening his own load of burdens.

In contrast, the person of selfishness can only see bad in others. He concentrates so much on what he thinks is negative in others, that he becomes prone to the temptations of gossip and criticism. As a result, he seems to desire to tear down people—something he will usually deny that he is doing.

A person who lifts others with the love of Christ is comforted by the Holy Spirit during his own trials and tribulations, whether they be major tribulations or minor ones. But he who tears down others with gossip and criticism constantly adds to the burden of sin and misery in his own life.

Despite much time spent on bench

Rookie likes playing with Rangers

By CHARLES RICHARDS
Associated Press Writer

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Whenever he starts getting frustrated about the time he spends in the Texas Rangers' dugout, Bob Brower remembers his senior year in high school when he tried out for football for the first time since junior high.

Already a star in basketball, baseball and track, Brower said he agreed to play football "because all my friends were going out, and my track coach was the running back coach."

"I was second-team tailback all year. I never started a game," he said. But off the bench, he was devastating — carrying the ball 120 times for 1,200 yards for James Madison High School at Vienna, Va., a Washington, D.C., suburb, to gain all-region honors and a football scholarship to Duke.

And lately, even as a rookie and role player off the Rangers' bench, Brower has shown signs of potential greatness.

The 27-year-old Brower, 6 feet tall and 190 pounds, last month became the first player in Rangers history to hit an inside-the-park grand slam home run. In other recent appearances, his sprinter's speed has enabled him to chase down several flies that would have fallen for hits against most outfielders.

"I'd be a liar if I said it didn't bother me, sitting on the bench. It's tough. What I have to realize is that I'm not the first to do it. I'm a rookie. I just need to keep my consistency, my mechanics, and keep developing my whole game," Brower said.

At Duke, Brower lettered four years in baseball and three years in football. It was after his junior year in 1981, when he led the nation in triples, that he decided to pursue a pro baseball career.

When no major league baseball teams drafted him, Brower got a tryout with the Rangers and was told to report to the team's rookie league franchise at Sarasota, Fla., coached by Tom Grieve, now the Rangers' general manager.

After five years of laboring in the minor leagues, Brower has finally worked his way up to the majors.

That's more exciting to him, he says, than the Most Valuable Player award he won last year in the American Association, playing for Oklahoma City; the MVP award he received last winter in the Dominican Republic; or the day in 1983 when he got six hits in one game, earning a promotion from Burlington, Iowa, to Tulsa, Okla.

"The individual achievements, I don't think they are as satisfying as just being here. Just knowing that all the years I was in the minor leagues, with the confidence I had, that I finally made it," Brower said.

"I have nothing against any of the minor league cities I played in (Sarasota, Burlington, Tulsa and

Charity golf tournament planned for August 1-2

The third annual V.F.W. Post 4818 charity golf tournament is scheduled on Aug. 1-2 at Pitman Municipal Golf Course.

Proceeds from the tournament will go to the post's charity fund for local charities. Entry fees are $75 per player and include carts.

The tournament will be a four-man scramble, with prizes to be awarded for the top four finishers in each flight.

A supper will be served on Saturday, Aug. 1, and a breakfast will be served on Sunday, Aug. 2.

Men and women are invited to participate in the tournament. To enter, contact the Pro Shop at the golf course at 364-2782.

Oklahoma City). My days were centered around being at the ballpark, and I loved it all. But this is where the recognition is and where everyone strives to be."

Rangers coach Joe Ferguson, who managed the team Brower played for in the Dominican Republic, said one of the biggest adjustments Brower will have to get used to spending more time on the bench.

"He's always gotten to play every day. Now, he has to sit and be mentally ready when he does get in. But he's handled it very well. He's a good student of the game and a pleasure to work with," Ferguson said.

"He's doing very well for his first full year in the big leagues. He's been an outstanding contributor off the bench for us. He's had the big base hits, the stolen bases, good defense," Ferguson said.

"Most teams don't have the luxury of a good pinch-runner on the bench, and he can play all the outfield positions, plus he's a good batter. He gives us a little more versatility in role players off the bench," Ferguson said.

Chick Hafey, one of the first major-league players to wear glasses, had a lifetime batting average of .317.

In 1951, Randy Turpin of England held the world middleweight title for slightly over two months. He won it from Ray Robinson in London July 12 and lost it back to Ray in New York Sept. 12.

Key Club golf tournament is Friday

The second annual Key Club Golf Tournament is scheduled for Friday, July 24, beginning at 1 p.m.

The tournament will be a four-man scramble. Proceeds from the event will go to the Senior Citizens Center and to the Big Brothers-Big Sisters organization.

Entry fees for the 18-hole tournament are $25 per golfer, with an entry deadline of Thursday, July 23. The entry fees includes the green fee.

All teams will be formed by the Pitman Municipal Golf Course pro according to handicaps.

Prizes for the tournament have been donated by area merchants.

In addition to the four-man scramble, there will be a juniors two-man low ball tournament. The entry fee for the juniors event is $12 per person.

To enter either tournament, or for more information, contact the Pro Shop at the golf course at 364-2782.

Watch out Barky Cotton - they're after you.
A group called the Barky Cotton Research Task Force has released a pamphlet called "You Can Reduce the Chances of Barky Grades - Here's How". Organized through the Plains Cotton Growers, Inc., Lubbock, TX, and Cotton Incorporation, the group has as its goal to reduce the annual cost of barky grades. Chairman of the task force, Don Bell is quoted as saying in years when the bark problems are particularly severe, the cost to producers in West Texas, alone, can be as high as $20 million. The pamphlet was put together through the efforts of scientists, farmers, machinery manufacturers, government entities and educators. Listing 25 do's and don't's, it is believed the pamphlet can be of great help in helping farmers reduce the barky cotton which costs when the cotton is graded. Along with increasing producers awareness of pregrinning practices, the group is encouraging research into ginning and machinery technology that will assist spinning mills in producing better products from cotton. The pamphlet can be obtained from PCG, gins, and county Extension agents.

Down on the FARM WATCH UP FOR POWER LINES

Power lines can be dangerous.

Touching irrigation pipe to a power line can divert the electricity through the pipe . . . and to anyone in contact with it. In this part of the country, this is the leading cause of farm injuries and deaths in electricity-related accidents. Any equipment of unusual height represents a potential danger. Lift arms on field equipment, combine auger spouts and even radio antennas can cause serious injury or death if they, and you, make contact with a power line.

Keep an eye up for power lines. Watch up, for safety's sake.

In The First Place...

Steve Olson and his family live on a farm just outside Hereford toward Dimmitt. They've got 1200 acres of prime Panhandle farm land and grow some of the finest corn around.

When Steve graduated from Texas A & M and moved back to Hereford in 1974 to start his own farm, he needed help. "People at the First National Bank stuck their necks out for me then, and they've been with me ever since."

Steve spends a lot of time farming, but even more important to him are Ginger, his wife of thirteen years, and his three children. Steve knows we will always be there for his family and his farm.

Steve Olsen is a good husband and father, as well as a successful farmer. He makes a difference in Hereford and at The First National Bank.

Sunlight can overload air conditioning

The pleasant warming sunlight that streamed in your windows last winter can easily become a costly overload on your air conditioning this summer, said an energy specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

"The best way to reduce unwanted solar heat gains is to block the sun before it enters your home," said Weedon Echols, energy specialist. Shading windows with remote, external, or internal devices offers a variety of solutions.

Echols noted, remote shading uses objects that are not part of the building to provide shade. Trees, shrubs, vines and walls can be used to block the low morning and evening sun from the east and west surfaces. She said deciduous trees are particularly good for shading south-facing windows because they provide shade in the summer and shed their leaves to admit sunlight in the winter.

When building a house orientation is critical to minimize summer heat gain, maximize summer ventilation potential, and maximize winter solar gain, Echols warned. A building elongated along the east-west axis will have less surface area to the east and west to minimize solar gain. East and west walls should have no windows. She noted, a light colored roof will reflect solar radiation that would be absorbed by a darker roof.

Exterior and interior shading, devices also provide a good way to block the summer sun. Exterior shading devices can prevent up to 95 percent of the sun's heat from reaching the interior of the home, said Echols. Overhangs, porches, carports, awnings, trellises, shutters, solar screens, and roll shades are examples of effective exterior shades that are attached to buildings, she said.

Modest fixed overhangs are effective in blocking direct solar radiation from entering south-facing windows. However, diffuse and reflected solar radiation may still account for a significant portion of the unwanted heat reaching the window. She noted, additional forms of shading, such as blinds or shades, are required.

Very wide overhangs, such as carports, porches or awnings, are effective in reducing solar heat gains through windows of any orientation. Echols warned that awnings and similar devices should be ventilated near the top to prevent a buildup of excessively hot air that may add to the heat load.

Interior shades provide an easily controlled last line of defense against unwanted solar heat, said Echols. Blinds, shades and drapes will reflect 20 to 50 percent of the sun's radiant energy back through the glass. Performance improves with opaque materials, lighter color reflective backings, and shades that fit close to the glass.

She warned that interior shading is not as effective as exterior shading because some of the heat escapes into the house instead of being reflected back to the outside. Echols noted, for best results use interior shading as well as exterior shading.

The trend, however, could reverse a slide in homeownership rates that has been taking place since 1982.

ON THE HOUSE

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Space is where you find it. If you look over the possible places in your house where there is space to be utilized, the one location unlikely to get your attention is a closet. It is a rare closet indeed that isn't already jam-packed and seemingly unsuitable for expansion.

Actually, most closets have space waiting to be filled. Some of it is under the hanging garments. Some of it may be over the usual one shelf. And some of it may not be readily visible until there is a complete rearrangement of the hanging and holding equipment.

If you are handy with basic tools, so much the better when it comes to getting more space in your closet. But this is by no means necessary. There are so many products on the market designed specifically for the purpose of utilizing the capacity of a closet that you can handle the job yourself even if you can do little more than use a hammer, a screwdriver and perhaps a portable electric drill, a power tool no more difficult to use than some kitchen machines.

Entirely aside from such things as special shelves and wall hooks, there are complete closet expansion kits with everything you need, including instructions and ideas. Should you elect to obtain more space in this fashion, decide exactly how you want to utilize the space in your closet and then go shopping for the kind of kit that will best fill your needs. Some feature shelves, some drawers and some give you a variety of options.

The shelf in your clothes closet can be moved just a little higher or it can be left where it is and a second shelf installed above it. Look at how far down your present garments hang. If there is almost enough space to hang a second set of garments beneath the first, moving the shelf a little higher, along with the rod under it, will enable you to place a second rod lower in the closet for the hanging of shorter garments. In some arrangements, the second rod is installed only halfway across the closet to allow space for the hanging of longer garments, such as evening dresses. Use your imagination or get a closet kit that will enable you to handle your problem almost automatically.

An alternative is to place a second shelf across the closet about a foot higher than the present one. This is an excellent place to store seasonal items, the kind that have to be taken down only once or so a year. However, before you make such a change, be sure there is enough working room so that whatever you are going to store can be put up that high and later removed. A neighbor of mine who made such an alteration discovered later his particular closet would not permit anything to be taken down from the high shelf. Another neighbor had no such problem.

Many people utilize the space just inside the door for hanging robes or belts or other things that will hang easily on hooks. And don't forget that the backs of doors in most closets will usually hold towel bars or some kind of narrow shelving. Should you do this, you can strengthen the door so that it can handle the extra weight by installing a third hinge midway between the two already there.

If you have a walk-in closet, you are fortunate. But walk-in closets especially have lots of wasted space that can be used. Here, too, you can make your own arrangement on the way in which to reorganize the closet or you can get an interior setup designed especially for walk-ins.

The bottom of a closet often serves as a catch-all for shoes and other small items. You can end the clutter by using a shoe rack that fits on the floor, a shelf or even a bag. Everything not only will look neater, but you'll have an easier time cleaning the closet floor.

Whether it is a closet or any other storage area, it can be kept in control if you make periodic checks. If something has not been used in two years, it may be time to throw it out or give it away.

(Do-it-yourselfers will find much informative data in Andy Lang's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," which can be obtained by sending $2 to this newspaper at Box 5, Teaneck, NJ 07666.)

Tax reform may level homeowner distribution

COLLEGE STATION, Texas - Families with lower incomes may find the American Dream—owning a home—more attractive as a result of income tax reform. However, homeowners in higher income brackets will see a reduction in tax benefits.

"Tax reform will tend to produce a more uniform distribution of homeowners across the income range," says Dr. Jack Harris, associate research economist for the Real Estate Center at Texas A&M University.

A number of factors point to this leveling effect.

—Lower marginal tax rates and a higher standard deduction will dilute the value of deductions for property taxes and mortgage interest. For people in higher income brackets, deductions that were worth 50 cents for every dollar spent are now worth only 28 to 33 cents.

—Interest rates are expected to decline because investors will require lower before-tax rates to receive the same after-tax yield. For people in lower income brackets, this is especially good news because interest payments compose the major portion of house payments.

—Less generous depreciation schedules and limits on tax deductions for losses by rental housing owners will lead to an estimated 15 percent increase in residential rents if interest rates decline. If they do not, rents may rise as much as 25 percent. This increase will make homeownership more attractive.

If these changes take place, Harris' analysis shows that based on financial incentives alone, homeownership rates would reach record highs.

Currently, 63 percent of U.S. households own homes. That figure could reach 66 percent in several years if rents increase 15 percent and interest rates decline. This would create a need for more than two million new homes nationwide.

But Harris says the rise in homeownership will be seen as a gradual trend instead of as a sudden change.

"Renters might be low to realize any increased advantages of homeownership," he says. "Defections from the ranks of current homeowners would be expected to be slower than indicated."

Forms available for regulation review

The Federal Home Loan Bank Board has imposed stricter regulations on member institutions regarding their real estate appraisals.

Each member institution must now carefully review its real estate appraisals for conformity to the new FHLBB rules, according to Deborah J. Deane, president of the Accredited Review Appraisers Council (ARAC). Special forms have been developed for the review.

The new forms allow reviewers to check each item required by the FHLBB against the real estate appraisals presented to the institution.

The forms are to provide guidance for stricter guidelines from such agencies as Freddie Mac, Fannie Mae, the Veterans Administration, and FHLBB.

A free sample of the forms is available from the ARAC, 303 West Cypress, San Antonio, Texas, 78212, or by calling (512) 225-2897.

Way to finance investments changing

WASHINGTON - Tax reform is changing the financing of investment real estate. According to a National Association of Realtors' spring 1987 survey of commercial transactions, investors are returning to "economic fundamentals," and are borrowing less and using more of their own money to buy investment properties.

The overhaul of federal tax laws curtailed the tax shelter advantages of purchasing commercial real estate, and implemented provisions that force investors to set investment goals around properties that generate income.

"There is no question that investments are being evaluated based on the actual worth of the real estate itself, and on its immediate return," said Harrell S. Hayden, first vice president of the Society of Industrial and Office Realtors, an NAR-affiliate.

"We are seeing top prices still being paid for office buildings and shopping centers in major cities on the West Coast and Northeast, where the market is hot," Hayden said.

According to the NAR survey, conducted by the forecasting and policy analysis division, commercial office properties were sold for the highest average sales price of all types of investment properties. The average sales price was $1.613 million, with an average down payment of $573,000.

Industrial buildings sold for an average of $1.41 million, including a $622,600 down payment. The average sales price of multifamily apartment or condominium projects was $1.25 million, including a $622,600 down payment.

Survey results showed that 30 percent of the properties sold were multifamily projects, accounting for 23 percent of the total dollar volume. Retail properties made up 21 percent of the sales and 22 percent of the dollar volume; office properties, 16 percent of the sales and 22 percent of the dollar volume; industrial, 15 percent of the sales and 15 percent of the dollar volume; land, 16 percent of the sales and 12 percent of the dollar volume; and hotel-motel, 2 percent of the sales and 6 percent of the dollar volume.

"Investors are taking a closer look at profits. The bottom line is more important now. Investments are becoming much more equity-oriented. People are putting more of their own money into purchases, and are avoiding things that are highly leveraged," explained Frank H. Livingston, president of the Institute of Real Estate Management, another NAR-affiliate.

The Tax Reform Act of 1986 caused a substantial loss in tax savings benefits for investors who are not actively involved in property operations. According to the act, "passive losses" (expenses and depreciation from passive investments) can be deducted only against "passive income" (income generated from passive investments.) The regulations apply to purchases made on or after Oct. 22, 1986, the date the act was signed into law. For previous purchases, the law phases out passive loss deductibility against non-passive income over a five-year period.

"Under the old tax laws, a lot of people invested only for tax breaks. They figured they could base their profits on projections for occupancy and rising values, even if the project wasn't turning a profit for them," Livingston said.

The relatively lower interest rates that prevailed for most of 1986 postponed the day of reckoning for many financially stressed properties," said Forrest W. Pafenberg, NAR director of economic analysis.

"During the last two years, the interest rate for commercial real estate has fallen more than 200 basis points." (One hundred basis points equals 1 percent.)

"This decline in interest rates has allowed many new projects that were leasing slowly to survive. It has induced refinancing of those projects that had no prepayment clauses, and has generated positive cash flow for many projects originally constructed as tax shelters," Pafenberg said.

The survey reported an overall average interest rate of 9.53 percent for first mortgages and 9.94 percent for second mortgages for investment financing, with payment terms lasting about 19 years and 11-and-a-half years, respectively.

For retail properties, the first mortgage terms were 18.7 years at a 9.71 percent rate. For office properties, first mortgage terms were 17.7 years at a 9.57 percent rate. For multifamily properties, first mortgage terms were 21.8 years at a 9.71 percent rate. For industrial properties, first mortgage terms were 15.5 years at a 9.44 percent rate.

Nearly 60 percent of the transactions reported in the survey were financed solely with a first mortgage; 20 percent involved a first and second mortgage. Multifamily purchases were the most likely to involve two mortgages, with the second mortgage rate averaging 9.68 percent. About 2 percent were financed with three mortgages. An additional 20 percent were all cash arrangements, with industrial projects the most likely to be purchased without mortgage financing.

More than 60 percent of the first mortgages for investment properties were provided by commercial banks and savings and loan institutions. Industrial and office properties were most likely to be financed by commercial banks; while multifamily projects were most likely to be financed by S&Ls. Seller financing and assumptions accounted for 15 percent and 13 percent of first mortgages, respectively. Pension funds, life insurance companies, industrial revenue bonds, private investors and other sources comprised the remaining 10 percent.

Nearly 12,000 investment real estate specialists in SIOR, IREM, and another NAR-affiliate, the Real Estate Securities and Syndication Institute, were surveyed during March and April 1987 for the NAR report, yielding information on more than 700 transactions.

The Society of Industrial and Office Realtors, with 1,700 members, specializes in marketing industrial and office properties to clients worldwide. The Institute of Real Estate Management with about 7,600 members, offers training to advance professionalism in property management. The Real Estate Securities and Syndication Institute, with about 3,100 members, provides syndicators with tax updates, regulatory-legislative bulletins and syndication courses and publications, among other services.

Insect info stored on TAES computer

Are insects giving you trouble?

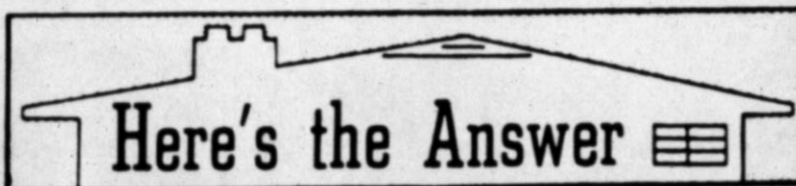

A computer with the Texas Agriculture Experiment Station now has information on insect control through the TAES Entomology Information System. Dr. Jerry Michels, an entomologist with the TAES, developed the system and has computer access open around the clock, seven days a week.

Results from insect surveys, messages, and other computer related subjects will be available. Specific questions directed to Michels will be answered as soon as he returns to his office. Users can also direct questions or send information to other users on the system.

The Bulletin Board System (BBS) is open to any interested person. To use the system, a computer and a modem is needed. The BBS will accept transmission speeds of 300 or 1200 baud. The message system and insect control recommendation aspect of the BBS will work with any computer, including IBM, IBM clones, Apple, Commodore, and CP/M machines such as Kaypro and Osborne. Other computer related aspects of the BB, may not support all machines but any computer which can handle a standard text file (ASCII text files) will work.

A detailed set of user instructions is available from Dr. Jerry Michels, TAES, P.O. Drawer 10, Bushland, TX, 79012. The instructions are free and will explain all aspects of the system.

Q. — We have a bedroom where the door to the clothes closet always seems to be in the way when it is opened. We have been advised that replacing the regular door with a sliding door will solve the problem, but the people who gave us that advice did not know what conditions had to be met. Is there some way to find out? We intend to hire a carpenter.

A. — The simplest way is to let the carpenter decide whether there is sufficient space in the wall to permit the door to slide. The amount of space required is from 33 to 40 inches, depending on the size of the door. Incidentally, should there not be sufficient space, it may be that an accordion folding door will do the job without requiring the extra wall space.

Q. — We have a dent in a bedroom bureau. Can it be removed by wetting the area until it expands enough so that it cannot be seen?

A. — Yes, although not all of the time. However, it works only when done on wood which has no finish on it. If you tried it, you would have to take off the finish first. If it failed to work, as is sometimes the case, you might have to use some kind of wood filler, such as wood putty, water putty, plastic wood or one of the other compounds made especially for the purpose. Whichever method you choose, or regardless of which kind of filler is used, it is a precision job and, if it is an extra fine piece of furniture, might require professional treatment.

Q. — I want to apply enamel to wood paneling with some knots in it. These knots appear to be defects and are not the kind you see in regular knotty woods, such as pine. Will the knots bleed through after a period of time?

A. — You can keep the knots under control if you first coat the wood with a solution of half shellac and half denatured alcohol. After the shellac has been applied, allow it to dry for several hours or overnight, then sand very, very lightly. From there on you have a choice of methods. Some finishers put on a light undercoat (try to get one of the same brand as the enamel), followed with two coats of enamel, spaced about 16 hours apart. Some skip the undercoat and go ahead with a coat of enamel to which 50 percent of thinner has been added, then a final coat of enamel. As with any finish where there is a possibility the final coat will be too glossy, consider the use of pumice powder and oil to cut down the gloss.

Q. — I see the term move-up market in relation to real estate, but can't find a definition for it. What does it mean?

A. — A move-up market is one in which most of the home purchasers are people who are selling their present homes to buy new ones. Move-up buyers are the direct opposite of first-time purchasers. Since they are obtaining money from the sales of their present homes, they usually are able to put down larger down payments and afford more expensive homes.

(The technique of using varnish, shellac, lacquer, stain, bleach, remover, etc., are detailed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Wood Finishing in the Home," which can be obtained by sending 50 cents and a large, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, NY 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column.)

Mortgage Protection Plans

Pat Newton
Asst. Vice President &
Mortgage Loan Officer
Hereford State Bank

Mortgage life insurance has been in existence for many years, but today's insurance marketplace offers a great variety of mortgage protection plans. Mortgage life plans are generally designed to pay the mortgage loan balance in full upon the death of the insured. This product can be issued as single coverage on one homeowner or as joint coverage on two homeowners. The term of insurance is usually the term of the mortgage's loan or upon reaching age 75 or 80 whichever comes first.

Mortgage accidental death insurance is designed to pay off the mortgage balance as date of death of the insured if the insured's death is due to accident. This coverage is also typically a decreasing term plan.

Mortgage disability insurance pays the insured's monthly mortgage payments for a designated period should the insured become disabled or unable to work.

Mortgage unemployment insurance is a relatively new product on the market. It is designed to cover an insured's monthly mortgage payments for a specified period if the insured becomes unemployed.

Variations exist on the above mentioned plans and other products area available. Mortgage protection insurance can be obtained from any life/health insurance agent or in many instances, your lender.

Hund, Birkenfeld recite vows in afternoon ceremony

Mary Ann Hund of Canyon and Phillip Henry Birkenfeld of Amarillo exchanged wedding vows in a mid-afternoon ceremony Saturday in St. Anthony's Catholic Church of Hereford. The couple's parents were also married at the church.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Hund of Route 4, Hereford, and the groom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Carol Birkenfeld of Nazareth.

The ceremony was officiated by the Rev. Cletus McGorry, pastor.

Bouquets of white gladioli and rose stephanotis, flanked by two spiral candelabra in the arched background decorated the main church altar. Side altars were accented by baskets of raspberry silk roses, white roses and rose stephanotis. The white unity candle was nestled in a bed of white roses, raspberry stephanotis and ribbon streamers.

Donae Parker served as maid of honor and Wade Durbin was best man.

Bridesmaids included the bride's sisters, Angela and Patricia Hund, and the groom's sister, Patsy Birkenfeld. Groomsmen were the groom's uncle, Ronald Fetsch; the bride's brother, Charles Hund; and the groom's brother, Patrick Birkenfeld.

Escorting guests were the bride's brother, James Hund Jr.; the groom's uncles, Lewis and David Fetsch; and the groom's brother, Paul Birkenfeld.

The bridal couple's sisters, Christy Birkenfeld and Carol Hund, served as flower girls. Ring bearer was Christopher Birkenfeld, son of Mr. and Mrs. Carol Birkenfeld, and lighting candles were Rose Marie Hund and Linda Birkenfeld.

Musical wedding selections included "Ave Maria", "Trumpet Voluntary" "Be Not Afraid" and "On Eagles Wings." Ralph Detten, was the featured vocalist and Cheryl Betzen provided accompaniment.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal-length gown of white crystal taffeta featuring a high neck with a collar of Alencon lace and hand-sewn pearls and sequins. The fitted basque bodice dipped to points at the front and back with appliques of lace, hand-sewn pearls and sequins forming a border from the point up and over the shoulders to the gown's back.

The sleeves were fitted to the elbow where they formed a full gathered pouf of embroidered Alencon lace with pearls and sequins. The full skirt was accented with appliques of lace, pearls and sequins and featured a wide scalloped lace border forming the hem. It swept into a cathedral-length scalloped train adorned with three teardrop inserts with lace edging and appliques of lace, pearls, and sequins.

To complete her ensemble, the bride wore a two-tier bridal illusion veil attached to a wreath of tiny white silk roses and adorned with lace, hand-sewn pearls and sequins and pearl sprays. She also wore pearl earrings.

She carried a bridal bouquet of white silk roses accented with dusty rose stephanotis and baby's breath in a bed of lace enhanced by white and dusty rose ribbon streamers.

Bridal attendants wore tea-length raspberry brocade taffeta dresses fashioned with square necklines, brocade bodices, and wide sashes accenting the waistline and marked by bows at the backs. They each carried a long-stem dusty rose silk rose tied with ribbon streamers.

Candlelighters were attired in tea-length pink satin dresses designed with full skirts, full elbow-length sleeves and bows marking the shoulders and V-necklines.

Donae Parker invited guests to register at the reception held in the Knights of Columbus Hall.

Phyllis Duncan, Debbie Fetsch and LaVerne Kearns served the three-tiered white wedding cake which was surrounded by four satellite cakes decorated with miniature flower baskets and single long stem roses. The cake was also designed with stairways extending from the main cake to two chocolate groom's cakes at the bottom. Miniature bridal attendants figurines decorated the stairways.

Leaving for a wedding trip, the bride wore a cream-colored lace skirt and matching sweater with a lace collar.

The bride, a Hereford High School graduate, is presently working at the registrar's office at West Texas State University.

The groom, a graduate of Nazareth High School, is now attending WTSU and is employed for Corporate Systems of Amarillo.

Special meeting set for Tuesday by Legion

A special meeting of the American Legion and Auxiliary has been announced by Miles Caudle, Commander. The joint meeting will be held Tuesday evening, July 21 at 7:30 p.m. at the Post Home, Veteran's Park.

A dinner will be served. Meat and dessert will be provided; members may bring a salad if they wish.

The purpose of the meeting will be to have as special guests the two girls who attend Girls State and the two boys who attended Boys State this year. They will report on their activities and their families are also invited to be guests of the American Legion and Auxiliary.

The two girls who attended Girls State are: Karla Fry, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dwayne Fry and Kim Emerick, daughter of David Emerick and Sylvia Emerick. The two local boys who attended Boys State in June at the University of Texas Campus in Austin are Shaun Moore, son of Mr. and Mrs. Troy Don Moore, and Russell Brownlow, son of Mr. and Mrs. Johnny Brownlow. Moore is a second generation participant in Boys State; his father also attended when he was in high school.

All four youths will be seniors at Hereford High School during the coming school year. "Each has already made a number of outstanding personal achievements and we look forward to hearing from them," said Caudle.

Jerkey, or jerked beef, is a corruption of the Chilean word "Charqui," meaning meat cut in strips and dried in the sun.

All family members of the Legion and Auxiliary along with guests and other interested persons are invited to attend.

Deadline to register for kids cooking school July 22

Mary Blinderman, home economist for Southwestern Public Service, will instruct the Kids Cooking School July 28 in the SPS Reddy Room.

Reservations for the free program will be accepted through July 22. There will be two sessions and parents should register their 6-8 year-olds for the 10-11 a.m. session and 9-12 year-olds for the 2-3 p.m. session.

Reservations are on a limited basis and may be made by calling the Deaf Smith County Extension Office at 364-3573.

The program will include kitchen safety, hints on summer meals, and snacks and correct food preparation. It will also feature hands-on experience and testing of the food prepared. Those attending will receive a free recipe book.

Saturday nuptials unite Shook, Cox

MRS. JIMMY LYNN COX
...nee Alicia Karol Shook

Alicia Karol Shook of Copperas Cove became the bride of Jimmy Lynn Cox, also of Copperas Cove, during an afternoon wedding ceremony held Saturday in the First United Methodist Church of Hereford.

Officiant was Rev. Bob Huffaker, pastor of the Church of the Nazarene, Hereford.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Shook of Hereford and the parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Lynn Cox of Copperas Cove.

The front of the church was decorated with two brass spiral candelabra holding 15 white tapers entwined with fresh English ivy. Brass candle aisle markers bedecked the pews, as did white candles, bows, and English ivy. A white and dusty rose colored unity candle sat atop a brass stand, accompanied by white family candles.

The altar rail was adorned with English ivy and brass votive candles while the altar table contained a gold cross and a contemporary arrangement of white and dusty-rose flowers accented with black feathers in a white basket.

Serving as the bride's honor attendant was Penny Olson of Amarillo. Best man was Dewayne Jones of Austin.

Bridesmaids included Laurie Wood of Copperas Cove; Shea Woodard of Amarillo; Kristi Hollingsworth of Hereford, sister of the bride; and Kaye Holman of Iowa Park, also a sister of the bride.

Groomsmen were Howard Hornsby of Pasadena, Texas; Mike McFalls of Fisher; Bruce Cox of Copperas Cove, brother of the groom; and Lynn Cox of Copperas Cove, father of the groom.

Ushering in guests were Greg Holman of Iowa Park, brother-in-law of the bride; Kent Hollingsworth of Hereford, also a brother-in-law of the bride; and Ray Sefcik of Iowa Park, a cousin of the bride.

Distributing programs were Jill Laing and Heather Hodges.

The musical selections of "Bless This House", sung by Jana Ford, Amy Ford, and Corey Ford of Canyon accompanied the candlelighting performed by Tonya Sefcik Beneath My Wings", sung by Amy Ford, accompanied by Linda Ford, served as a tribute to the couple's parents. "All in His Own Sweet Time, a meditative piece, was vocalized by Melanie Davis of Amarillo and Joe Carroll Kunkel of Copperas Cove, accompanied by Jan Walser. During the lighting of the unity candle, "Only God Could Love You More" was performed by Melanie Davis accompanied by Jan Walser.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore an ultra-formal gown designed by William Cahill, Ltd. It was fashioned of white silk taffeta, ornamented with heavily beaded Alencon lace appliques. The scoop neckline and fitted bodice were heavily appliqued with beaded laces also. Long Tulle sleeves with a taffeta puff at the shoulder sprinkled with beaded lace appliques accented the gown as a full skirt and extended Cathedral-length train were also adorned with Alencon lace appliques, seed pearls, and crystal iridescence. The hemline in front was completed with a Venetian lace edge and the gown's extended Cathedral train was complemented with a soft crystal pleated flowing ruffle.

To complete her ensemble, the bride wore a fingertip-length veil of illusion lace attached to a bend of pearls, iridescent beads, and white silk roses. It was further enhanced by a gathered pouf at the top of the veil.

She carried an arm bouquet of white silk roses accented with dusty rose flowers and English ivy.

As something borrowed, she wore pearls from her paternal grandmother, something blue was a garter; something new were the pearl earrings which were a gift from the groom; and something old was a lace handkerchief carried in her mother's wedding.

Bridal attendants wore tea-length black crystalline skirts topped with a black lace bodice. The gowns were completed with black cummerbunds and bows.

The bridal attendants carried arm bouquets of dusty-rose and white flowers accented with black ribbon, lace, and feathers.

A reception followed in the fellowship hall of the church. Presiding at the registry was Pam Cox of Copperas Cove, sister-in-law of the groom. Others assisting included Mr. and Mrs. Ed Lemons, Mr. and Mrs. Rocky Lee, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Birdwell, Mr. and Mrs. Wendell Clark, all of Hereford; Mr. and Mrs. Roland Hairgrove of Sweetwater; and Mr. and Mrs. Joe Cashon of Josephine, Texas.

The bride's table was adorned with white lace trimmed in black bows and white silk roses, the bride's bouquet, and crystal appointments. The cake was a white three-tiered hexagon enhanced by a silk bouquet of dusty rose, white, and black flowers. Topping the baked creation was an Iardo bride and groom.

The groom's table was topped with white cloth complemented with a black swag. Silver appointments and an arrangement of dusty rose, white, and black flowers bedecked the table. A chocolate hexagon-shaped cake carried out the theme of the groom's hobby of scuba diving as "Scuba for two" scuba divers topped the cake.

Servers for the reception included Becky Ford of Canyon, Sharon Self of Hereford, Darlene Hardy of Amarillo, Becky Roberts of Iowa Park, Renee Smith of Lubbock, Rhonda Campsey of Texline, Karen Compton of Dallas, and Cristie Fielding of Amarillo.

Departing for a wedding trip to Jamaica, the bride's traveling costume consisted of a black dress trimmed in white, complemented by a corsage of white glameillas.

The couple will be at home in Copperas Cove after August 1.

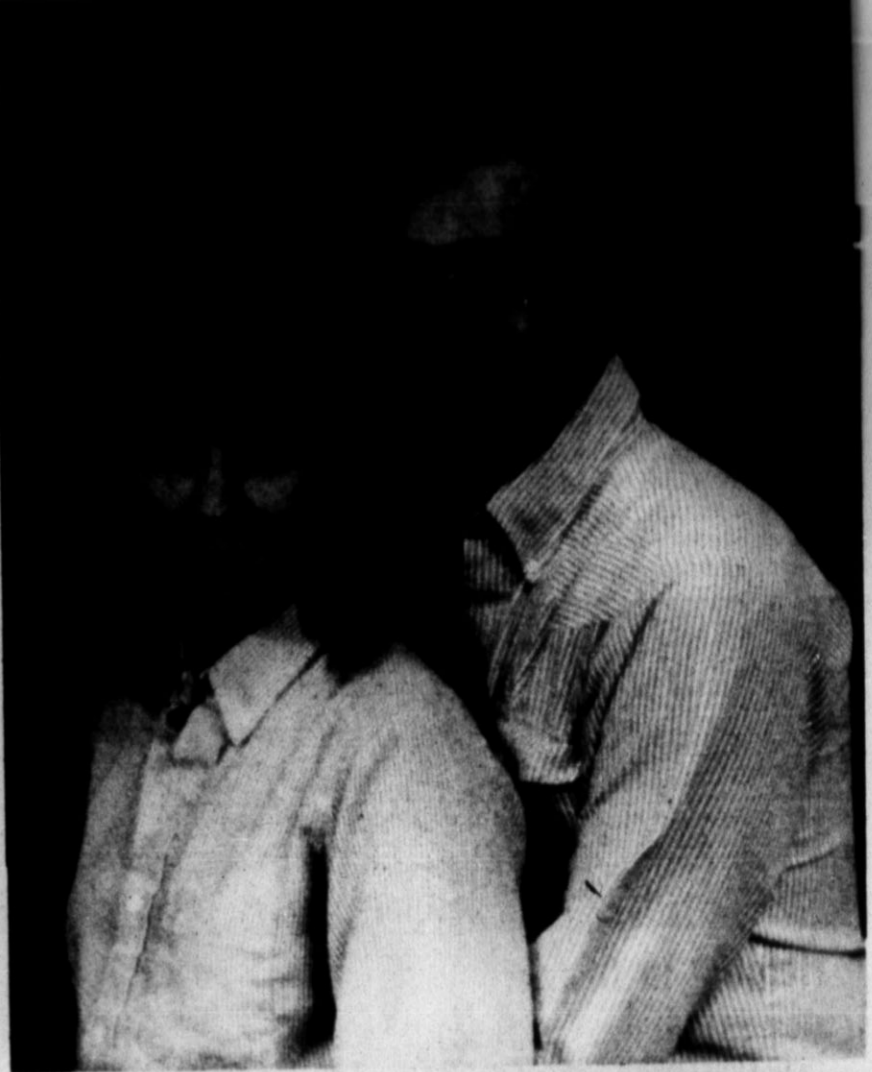

The bride, a graduate of Hereford High School and West Texas State University, teaches at Copperas Cove. The bridegroom, a graduate of Copperas Cove High School and Southwest Texas University, also teaches at Copperas Cove.

Special guests in attendance for the wedding included the bride's grandparents: Mr. and Mrs. W.R. Shook of Denver City and Mr. and Mrs. R.C. Sefcik of Iowa Park.

Pre-nuptial celebrations included the rehearsal dinner, which was an out-door cookout at the home of Terri and Randy Laing hosted by the bridegroom's parents. Assisting were Messrs. and Mrs. Edgar Lemons, Rocky Lee, Howard Birdwell, and Steve Hodges. A bridal brunch Saturday was held in the home of Helen Lee, assisted by Lois Lemons and Billie Birdwell.

JULIE CAROL CRAWFORD, DAVID MCKAY

August wedding set date

Julie Carol Crawford of Hereford will become the bride of David James McKay, also of Hereford, on Aug. 21 in the Church of the Nazarene.

The bride-elect is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Ed Crawford of 118 Beach and the prospective bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jim McKay of 345 Willow Lane. Miss Crawford is a student in Hereford High School and will be a candidate for graduation in 1988. She works part-time in the family business.

McKay, a 1986 graduate of Hereford High School, is currently employed by Bill Urbanczyk, who is engaged in farming.

Annual cowboy camp slated July 23

The Tenth Annual Mesa Redondo Cowboy Camp meeting is scheduled for Thursday, July 23, through Sunday noon, July 26. Final plans are being made by the various committees under the leadership of Darrell Farmer, President of Tucumcari, N.M.

The campsite is located on the Bowe-Farmer Ranch near Tucumcari. From Tucumcari, go 11 miles south on Highway 18, or from Ragland, go 14 miles north on Highway 18. Turn east at the big sign and travel 2 1/2 miles southeast to the camp. It sets at the foot of the historic and majestic Mesa Redondo in a secluded canyon.

Camp pastors for this year are Bill Sessom and Wayne Stockstill. Music minister is Paul Biggs and youth minister will be Jonathan Stockstill. Bible studies are taught twice daily, and there are worship services both morning and night.

All camp ministers are on the camp grounds and will be available for ministering in counseling, as well as preaching and teaching.

Bible classes are taught and activities planned for the various age groups. Mary Ann Cortese of Fort Sumner is youth coordinator. In addition to the Youth Roundup on Saturday, activities are planned during the entire camp. Field and Sharon Irwin of Fort Sumner will lead the 6th through 8th grades; Linda Teakell of Clovis, and Harold and Blanche Hill of Fort Sumner, will lead the 1st through 5th grades; Mitzi Brace of Conchas Dam will lead the 3 and 4 year olds. A nursery will be available during the worship services.

The first activities of the camp will begin at 5 p.m. on Thursday, July 23, with prayer meeting. Men and boys meet under the prayer tree, women and girls meet in the 'storytelling' corral. Supper will be served at 6:30 and the evening worship service will begin at 8 p.m. A campfire fellowship under the leadership of Allen Edwards of Clovis, will follow the evening services each night. Three meals a day are served 'chuckwagon style' on Friday and Saturday, and breakfast and dinner on Sunday.

Mesa Redondo is a member of the Ranchmen's Camp Meeting Association in the Southwest. The association now has nine camps in five states during the summer circuit. It is an interdenominational outreach and provides "A Christian Camping Experience For All Ages."

Everyone is welcome to attend the camp activities. For those who camp, there is ample space. For those who drive out for any of the services and meals, they will find this a unique experience and well worth the drive.

For further information, you may contact any of the following: Darrell Farmer, President of Tucumcari, ph. 505-458-6205; Wesley Grau, Vice-President, of Grady, ph. 505-355-8265; Lou Ann Cortese of Fort Sumner, ph. 505-355-2254; and Wilma Fulgham, Secretary, of Clovis, ph. 505-763-6262.

Helping In Chapel

Russell Backus, left, and Chris Bullard help rearrange pews and other furnishings of the Deaf Smith General Hospital chapel. The $2,500 renovation project is being sponsored by the youth group of St. Anthony's Catholic Church and should be finished in August. Anyone wishing to contribute financially to the project may contact Judy Detten at 364-2700; Loretta Urbanczyk, 276-5303; or St. Anthony's Catholic Church at 364-6150.

Names in the News

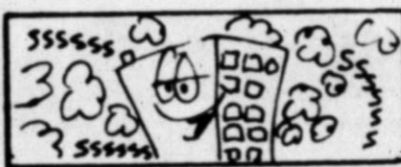

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Sylvester Stallone, star of the "Rambo" and "Rocky" movies, has filed for divorce from his wife, Brigitte Nielsen, citing irreconcilable differences.

Stallone has separated from Miss Nielsen, spokesman Paul Bloch said. The divorce petition, filed Monday in Superior Court, said there was a prenuptial agreement for division of property. The details weren't disclosed.

Miss Nielsen, a 6-foot Danish beauty, made her screen debut in "Red Sonja" and starred with Stallone in "Rocky IV" and "Cobra."

They were married in December 1985. He was divorced from his first wife, Sasha, earlier that year. He has two children by his first marriage.

NEW YORK (AP) — Former heavyweight boxing champion Muhammad Ali may undergo a new type of brain surgery in Mexico City this week, a surgeon says.

The first steam-heated building in the United States was the Eastern Hotel in Boston, 1845.

The surgery would be to help alleviate symptoms of Parkinson's syndrome, Mexican neurosurgeon Dr. Ignacio Madrazo told ABC's Monday Sportsnite.

The surgery will depend on tests on Ali to be performed this week, Lourdes Ortiz, a spokeswoman at Humana Hospital in Mexico City, said.

The surgery involves transplanting cells from the adrenal glands into the brain.

A TYPICAL BAD DAY

Does it ever seem as though the whole world is out to get just you?

Everyone experiences a bad day now and then and minor incidences escalate into major annoyances. When I have one of these black days it is all I can do to not pack my bags and go live in a cave.

Here's a blow-by-blow account of the disaster:

6:45 a.m. - I wake up an hour late because there was a power failure during the night causing my electric alarm clock to be on the blink.

7 a.m. - Because I'm an hour late, I have to take a number and stand in line at the bathroom door so I can take a shower.

7:20 a.m. - I forgot to hang up my freshly laundered pantyhose the previous night and wear the damp things to work.

7:45 a.m. - I have spent 15 minutes ironing a 'no-iron' skirt and then notice after I put it on I have raveled out the hem with my high heels.

8 a.m. - I'm greeted at work by an employee who asks me if I remembered to bake the boss's birthday cake. I didn't.

9 a.m. - I have called the same person three times to check on the spelling of a name and I'm put on hold for five minutes. He doesn't have elevator music.

10:15 a.m. - I'm called to the front desk to pick-up a dozen roses that have been delivered to me to find that there has been a mistake and someone else is the recipient. I sheepishly go back to my desk.

10:30 a.m. - My only relief of the day was going to visit the dentist and having a little laughing gas. The doctor had to practically pry me out of the chair as I just wanted one last sniff.

Noon - At home for a 'restful' lunch, I washed a load of clothes to discover that my son now owned three pair of underwear in assorted rainbow colors of pink, blue and green. (My daughter forgot to take her eye shadow out of her skirt pocket before I washed it.)

12:45 p.m. - My brand new 100 percent cotton skirt shrank three sizes after drying it on a high temperature setting.

1:10 p.m. - I am late for work because I got a ticket for not having an updated car inspection sticker on the window. I thought the grace period was seven days, not five.

1:45 p.m. - The nurse called to remind me that my appointment for my yearly checkup was at 9 a.m. The doctor will work me in after 5 p.m.

2 p.m. - I am leaving the Hereford Country Club after photographing a group of visiting dignitaries only to idly glance in my rearview mirror and discover a dark green piece of spinach lodged between my front teeth. If that's not enough, I then become aware of the major run in my now dry pantyhose.

2:30 p.m. - I've been appointed to accept an award for The Brand only to be publicly humiliated because the speaker calls me Cindy Pinkey, not Sandy Pankey.

3:45 p.m. - I rush to pick the children up from school and realize it's teacher in-service day.

4:55 p.m. - My neighbor calls to say that she has called the police to report that my garage door had opened and there was no one at home. I break speed limits home to be told by an officer that my electronic door must have been triggered by a truck CB radio or low-flying aircraft.

5:10 p.m. - I'm late for the doctor's appointment.

5:15 p.m. - The nurse has recorded my weight. The doctor comes in, glances at the chart, notes my weight, and slowly shakes his head disapprovingly from side to side, remaining silent.

5:30 p.m. - I'm having company for dinner and go to the grocery store to pick up a few items. I'm blocked in between two shoppers who refuse to budge until they have read every label on every coffee can in existence.

5:45 p.m. - Although I'm still behind schedule, I am optimistic as I begin to put the groceries in my car. At that moment, a strong gust of wind blows the grocery cart over and my roast rolls beneath a parked car that contains five small, screaming children. I wait for an eternity for the owner to drive away so that I can retrieve my potential evening meal.

7:30 p.m. - I have outdone myself with my culinary skills and my roast is perfectly cooked and ready to be served. Just as I start to slice it, my dinner companion proclaims that he has become a vegetarian since he last saw me.

9:30 p.m. - My son announces that we are out of toilet tissue just as I'm ready to collapse for the night.

10:10 p.m. - After dashing into a local convenience store, I have returned home with two sacks of groceries and realize I forgot the toilet tissue.

10:30 p.m. - I fall into bed giving thanks that I made it through the day without having a nervous breakdown. Maybe tomorrow will be better. Maybe tomorrow I won't forget the toilet tissue.

Costume Winners

The final Tuesday event held for local youngsters at the Deaf Smith County Library provided several winners in a costume contest. The event was based on the summer reading program theme of "Animal Antics," in which 948 children were enrolled. Prizes awarded were toy animal noses while runners-up received foam rubber pet alligators. In the top photo, from left, is Andrew Carr, age 7, 1st place, mule costume; Amber Vasek, age 7, 2nd place, tiger; Kevin Henke, age 10, 2nd place, eagle; Brenden Lee Galan, age 11, 1st place, turtle; Nora Niedzielski-Eicher, age 8, 2nd place, zebra; and Adriana Villarreal, age 9, 1st place, dragon. In the bottom photo, from left, are Shannon Revelle, age 6, 2nd place, dog; Bryan Vasek, age 4, 2nd place, dinosaur; Holly Weishaar, age 7, 1st place, Sylvester the cat; Jessica Weishaar, age 4, 1st place, Tweety-Bird; and Tyler Rector, age 4, 1st place, bat. These winners are entitled to ride on the library float to be entered in the August Town and Country Jubilee.

Joint installation held in Hereford Tuesday

Joint installation of officers was held in Hereford Tuesday evening for Hereford Odd Fellow Lodge No. 476, Hereford Rebekah Lodge No. 228, Friona Odd Fellow Lodge No. 203 and Friona Rebekah Lodge No. 308.

District Deputy Grand Master George Reed of Friona I.O.O.F. and District Deputy President Ursalee Jacobsen of Hereford Rebekah Lodge conducted installation in an impressive ceremony. Deputy Grand Marshall Ben Conklin and Deputy Marshall Kee Ruland, both of

Hereford, conducted new officers into their respective chairs. Noble Grands taking office were Anthony Irlbeck, Hereford 476; Anna Conklin, Hereford 228; George Reed, Friona 203; and Wilma Wise, Friona

308. Fifty-one members had guests were present for the covered dish supper and open installation hosted by Hereford lodges.

People once believed agate stones could render them invisible.

Military Muster

S.F.C. Esau Villegas, son of the late Ben Villegas Sr., and Gudelia Villegas of 245 Catalpa, has retired from the U.S. Army on Jun 30, 1967, after serving the Army for 23 years.

He was honored with a swimming party in celebration of his retirement and birthday. He listed in 1964 at the age of 18.

Villegas went overseas to Germany, Korea, and Vietnam, then retired in Ft. Huachuca, Ariz.

His wife, Raquel, and children, Esau Jr., Mario, Yvette, and Veronica, will make their home in El Paso.

Army National Guard Private Tony L. Donham, son of James E. Donham of Roxton, and Mary P. Lacombe of 606 Ave. K, has completed basic training at Fort Dix, N.J.

During the training, students received instruction in drill and ceremonies, weapons, map reading, tactics, military courtesy, military justice, first aid, and Army history and traditions.

ESAU VILLEGAS

Support group to be formed in Hereford

In an effort to help Hereford residents who care for elderly family members in the home, a support group is being formed. An organizational meeting will be at 1:30 p.m. Sunday, July 26, at King's Manor Home.

Rev. Lanny Wheeler, chaplain at King's Manor, is organizing the group with Joyce Lyons, administrator, and Frances Moritz, gerontology consultant. No obligations to King's Manor are expected and there will be no fees for the group.

Although it is the first such group he has organized, Wheeler was part of a support group during a ministerial internship in Kansas City. He said the emphasis will be to help teach caregivers to deal with the situation. Meetings may deal with sharing of ideas, learning coping skills, finding resources through films, speakers, and books, plus be a channel to find local help through Senior Citizens or other organizations.

Wheeler noted that family members often feel isolation, frustration and depression when confined to a residence to give care to the elderly. "In some cases it is the stress of not having any control over the condition," Wheeler said. "Somebody else is controlling your life, and that someone isn't even able to control theirs."

The chaplain assures that all those feelings are natural, including resentment, anxiety, and the thought that nobody knows how it feels. Drawing together people who do know how it feels can help in emotional support for caregivers, he says.

Ideas on how to care for a patient is a great need, according to Lyons. Using the support group as a referral point to other resources is greatly needed, she says, because many people do not know where to go. How to treat a bed sore, where to obtain nursing supplies, or how to find help in giving care for the incontinent may be frustrating for the lay person.

In addition to sharing ideas and resources, Wheeler plans to have the group call in special speakers or have educational films.

He also hopes the group will spark friendships so that members may learn there is someone who cares. "No one understands unless they have been there," he said.

For information, contact Wheeler at 364-0661.

Not all conservation efforts are in the wild. The peregrine falcon, an endangered species, was introduced successfully into several cities in the U.S., where it could nest on building ledges and prey on the large pigeon population.

TAMMY WHIPPLE, CLINT THOMPSON

Couple to wed

Wedding vows will be exchanged by Tammy Lynn Whipple of Lubbock and Clinton Brion Thompson of Amarillo Aug. 22 in the J.A. Hill Chapel on the West Texas State University campus. A reception will follow in the Fellowship Hall in Canyon.

The bride-elect is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Glenn M. Perkins of Lubbock and the prospective bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J.B. Thompson of 507 Ave. J.

Miss Whipple is a 1981 graduate of Monterey High School in Lubbock. She has a seven-year-old daughter, Jennifer Dawn.

Thompson, a 1977 graduate of Hereford High School, is employed in Amarillo with Southeastern TeleCom.

Accent on Health

If there is any good news associated with AIDS (acquired immune deficiency syndrome), it may be that the ways in which the HIV (human immunodeficiency virus) travels from one person to the next are limited.

According to the Texas Department of Health (TDH), research on the thousands of reported cases of AIDS has traced the transmission of the virus to two types of contact with HIV, sexual and "blood-to-blood."

Christie Reed, AIDS Surveillance Coordinator for the TDH Bureau of Epidemiology, said, "The contagiousness of AIDS is often misunderstood, and nearly always exaggerated to the general public. HIV passes from an infected person to another only in blood, semen, and to a lesser extent, vaginal fluid—not by casual contact or the environment."

Sexual transmission can be heterosexual or homosexual, but can usually be prevented by use of condoms.

Blood-to-blood transmissions most often occurs when infected persons share hypodermic needles and syringes with others. Some infants born to infected mothers also have been infected.

In the U.S., blood and blood products used for transfusions and in medicine have been screened since the spring of 1985. Health care workers and others routinely exposed to blood are specially trained to use appropriate precautions.

Laboratory tests and environmental research show no evidence that HIV is spread through drinking water, in the air, or by mosquitoes, as are some other viruses.

Reed said that 97 percent of the AIDS cases reported in Texas are the result of the patient having had sex with an infected person, having shared contaminated I.V. drug equipment, or having received infected blood. "That percentage would probably be higher, if we had more information about the remaining three percent. We are uncertain how a few people have contracted the disease, only because those people either refused to disclose important details, died before enough information could be collected, or did not know if their sexual partners had been exposed to HIV."

Reed said public concern about AIDS is intense because the relatively new disease is considered always fatal. No vaccine for AIDS has been found, and possible treatments are only now being tested. "Being concerned should be different from being hysterical," Reed said. "The fact is, AIDS can be prevented. The public needs to exhibit less fear, and exercise more caution."

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Your column has given me a good many laughs over the years and I want to give you one, for a change. You might even print it and spread the fun around. This story was told to me by a police officer in Muskogee, Okla.;

Two women accidentally ran over a cat in the parking lot of a local shopping center. Not wanting to leave the dead cat on the pavement, they put it in a shopping bag and placed it in their car. While parking away, one of the women turned around just in time to see a middle-aged lady reach through the open car window and grab the shopping bag. The thief hurried into the shopping center unaware that she had been observed.

The thief stopped at a diner for a cool drink and a quick look at her loot. She opened the bag and promptly fainted.

An employee called an ambulance. When the thief was placed on the stretcher someone put the bag on the stretcher beside her. The woman regained consciousness, saw the shopping bag and fainted again.

I'm not signing my name. Just call me—The Okie

DEAR OKIE: An experience like that is enough to straighten out a person for life. Thanks for letting the cat out of the bag.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My husband is a recovering alcoholic. He is in his second year of sobriety after putting our entire family through hell for 20 years.

The problem is this: When we are out socially, my husband always requests something non-alcoholic. Invariably, he will be questioned. "You don't drink? Not at all? Why not?" Or worse yet, "Oh, come on. One won't hurt."

Is there an answer that doesn't sound defensive? I've suggested that he say, "I used to drink but I discovered I can't handle it so I quit." Or, "I'm a recovering alcoholic, and I can't drink."

My husband says alcoholism is still considered a character flaw and he is afraid it might cost him his job, so he doesn't want to admit he has a problem.

Is there a better response, Ann? One that doesn't make the refuser sound like he or she is hiding a guilty secret?—His Wife in Roanoke, Va.

DEAR WIFE: What makes you think your husband has an obligation to respond to such questions? He owes neither an explanation nor an apology. A simple "I prefer carbonated water or tomato juice" is sufficient.

Drinkers who urge others to join them are usually over-imbibers who feel uncomfortable around non-drinkers. No well-meaning person would try to push a drink on anyone. Wise up your husband, dear.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Two years ago I worked with a woman who, at first, was hostile and cold. Sensing she was lonely I was especially nice. Slowly she melted and I became her best (and only) friend.

Now her invitations come much too close together and she is trying to take over our lives. My husband finds her dull and depressing. All she talks about is how lonely she is and how much she wants a man in her life.

She is a decent person but I feel trapped in this boring relationship. What can I do?—Too Close for Comfort in Canada

DEAR T.C.: This mustard plaster is not going to let you out of her life gracefully. Prepare for the worst.

Red Cross Update

Special thanks to the water safety instructors and aides teaching swimming classes. Those instructors are Janet Coleman, Cindy Duncan, Dalene Burns, Nell Culpepper, Virginia Griffith, Donnie Tice, Chuck Rodriguez, Susan Rodriguez, Sonny Brush, Tracie Brush, and Jennifer Scott.

The uniformed volunteers met for their regular noon luncheon Thursday. Ruth King was elected chairman; Leta Eubanks, vice-chairman; and Alice Gilleland, secretary. Plans were made for the Jubilee float and activities in the park. Those present for the meeting were Lottie Wertemberger, Audine Dettmann, Bertha Dettman, Lupe and Janie Chavez, Margaret Gamez, Sally Walker, Ruth King, Mildred Brown, Olivia Brown, and guests Becky and Kiry Eubank and Aron Gilleland.

The board of directors will meet Tuesday at the Red Cross office. The meeting will be held at 7:30 p.m. and election of officers for the board will be held.

The volunteers doing physical therapy at Westgate Nursing Home will meet with the physical therapist Tuesday at 10:30 a.m. at Westgate.

Paula Martin, field service manager in Amarillo, reports that the chapters in Borger and Pampa are currently doing disaster assistance to families who were the victims of the storms Tuesday evening. Pampa has about 27 families who will need assistance and the number in Borger will be much higher because of the severe hailstorm. Further reports on the disaster work in those areas will be available through our office.

The water safety class will begin Aug. 3 at 1 p.m. at the city Pool. The class will last until 9 a.m. Monday with a supper break. The class will continue Tuesday through Friday-6:30 to 9 each evening. Debbie Black Davis will be the instructor. Please call our office to register for the class.

The Deaf Smith County Chapter of the American Red Cross is a United Way Agency.

The state song of Virginia is — surprise! — "Carry Me Back to Old Virginia."

Briggs, Landers vows recited

Carol Jean Briggs of Ames, Iowa, and former Hereford resident, Gary Marshall Landers, also of Ames, were married recently in the University Baptist Church in that city. Officiating was the Rev. John Hamilton of the church.

The bride is the daughter of Merwin and Francis Briggs of Davenport, Iowa and the bridegroom is the son of Roy and Pauline Landers of Hereford.

Nancy Briggs of Boone, Iowa served her sister-in-law as matron of honor and Larry Don Landers of Amarillo was his brother's best man.

The groom's sister, Glynda Landers Whartenby of Louisville, Ky., was bridesmaid and Mark Felderman of Cozad, Neb. was groomsmen.

Guests were escorted by the bride's brothers, John Briggs of Derwood, Md., and Robert Briggs of Boone, Iowa. Candles were lit by the groom's niece and nephew, Shawna and Shane Whartenby of Louisville, Ky.

Ellen Church of Ames, Iowa provided musical accompaniment for Steve Meyer of Ames who sang "Wedding Prayer" and Donna Spanaus-martin of Ames who vocalized "Come With Me." Given in marriage by her father, the bride was attired in a formal-length gown of ivory bridal satin styled with a fitted basque bodice which dipped to points in front and back. Venise lace appliques, reem-broidered with seed pearls, detailed the bodice and puffed sleeves. The sweetheart neckline had elastized ruffles at the shoulders and the soft, full skirt extended into a chapel-length train.

She also wore a small satin hat trimmed with silk flowers and simulated pearl sprays which featured a net pouff at the back. She carried a cascading bouquet of burgundy and white alstromeria, white roses, gardenias and baby's breath.

Her jewelry consisted of a pearl necklace and earrings.

The groom's sister-in-law, JoElyn Landers of Amarillo, invited guests to register at the reception held in the Siggins Fellowship Hall of the church.

Cake was served by Connie Meyer and Virjama Hamilton of Ames and punch and coffee were poured by Keri Holmes and Rena Raper, also of Ames.

The five-tiered carrot cake, iced with white smooth satin fondant icing, was decorated with dainty pink marzipan flowers and tiny royal icing dots. Fresh flowers accented the top three tiers.

The couple resides at 633 7th St. in Ames.

The bride, a 1977 graduate of Central High School in Davenport, Iowa, is a 1981 graduate of Iowa State University with a degree in biochemistry. She is employed as a research associate in the biochemistry Department at Iowa State University in Ames.

The groom, a 1975 graduate of Hereford High School, is a 1979 graduate of Wayland Baptist College in Plainview with degrees in biology, chemistry and mathematics. He is currently completing his doctorate in biochemistry at Iowa State.

MR. AND MRS. GARY LANDERS

Health screenings to be held at hospital Monday

The Panhandle Health Care Coalition will be doing health screenings of various types throughout the Panhandle communities.

A local screening will be conducted from 10 a.m. until 3 p.m. Monday in Deaf Smith General Hospital. Screening will be for high blood pressure, cholesterol and diabetes.

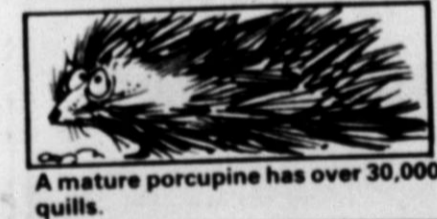

There will be a fee charged according to income. If a person would like one blood test, the charge is $3 or both blood tests for $5. If a person is unable to pay, there will be no fee charged. The blood tests require you do not eat or drink at least eight hours prior to the testing.

Resident published book

Mrs. H.E. Wester of Hereford has published a Bible study quarterly, "The Hand of God Touched Me."

Mrs. Wester received her books this week from Quality Publishers in Abilene. The company will market the book through bookstores.

Thirteen lessons for a weekly Bible study are in the book with emphasis on different scriptures.

WHAT'S IN A LABEL?

To attract health and weight conscious consumers, manufacturers often put all types of claims on labels. In an effort to help consumers decipher food labels, the Food and Drug Administration has come up with the following definitions of these health claims.

-"Natural" has no official definition. It signifies nothing more than the product "occurs in nature."

-"Sugar-free" products cannot contain any nutritive carbohydrate sweetener, such as sucrose, maltose, honey, fruit juice, molasses, etc.

-"Low-calorie" products contain no more than 40 calories per serving and no more than 0.4 calories per gram.

-"Low-sodium" products must contain less than 140 milligrams of sodium per serving.

-"Very low-sodium" products contain no more than 35 milligrams of sodium per serving.

-"Sodium-free" products contain less than 5 milligrams of sodium per serving.

-"No artificial flavors" means that the product does not contain any flavors which have been defined as "artificial."

-"No artificial coloring" means that any ingredient added to enhance the color of the product is considered "artificial."

-"...may contain one or more of the following" means the manufacturer will use whichever is available and is cheapest at time of production.

-"No cholesterol" means there is no cholesterol detectable by any present analytical methods.

-"Cholesterol-free" means that the product contains less than 2 milligrams of cholesterol per serving."

Between the Covers

By REBECCA WALLS

Week No More My Lady by Mary Higgins Clark leads the book selection this week. An exclusive, world famous beauty spa is the setting for the spine tingling novel.

Beautiful young Elizabeth Lange is haunted by the tragic death of her beloved sister, who plunged from the balcony of her New York penthouse under mysterious circumstances. Was she killed by her lover, or was it suicide? Did someone else kill her, but who would have harmed a young woman everyone loved and admired?

Here, in a place dedicated to health, beauty and the pursuit of youth, Elizabeth determines to find out exactly what happened, and in the process discovers the truth about her sister, her sister's friends, and herself.

Velda Johnston's book The House On Bostwick Square is the next title in our selection.

It was in the 1880's that Laura Harmon, adopted daughter of a Brooklyn evangelist, eloped with a young Englishman Richard Parrington. Richard, a high-spirited, & charming "remittance man," is paid a monthly sum by his rich London parents to stay out of England. As much as she loved him, Laura gradually sensed that some unnamed evil, something far worse than a compulsion to gamble, hovered over him and their otherwise happy marriage.

When Richard dies in a mysterious plunge from the tracks of an elevated Manhattan railway, Laura felt the shadowy evil had finally claimed him.

Alone in the world & unable to find a safe place to leave her daughter Lily while she worked at whatever low-paying jobs where open to her, Laura turns to Lily's grandparents for at least temporary refuge. From her meager funds she booked 3rd class passage for herself & Lily, and sent a telegram to Sir Joseph Parrington announcing their arrival. Unwanted & unwelcome, Laura is determined to survive & find the reason that lay behind her husband's exile & suicide, the secret that marks her for murder.

The Bill Schroeder Story by the Schroeder family, is a selection for the nonfiction reader. In November of 1984, William Schroeder was dying of heart disease. Without a miracle he would never have seen Christmas. But on Thanksgiving weekend, Bill received the Jarvik-7 artificial heart, and for the next 620 days he & his family made medical history.

Millions of Americans are familiar with Bill's jaunty smile, his upraised can of beer & his conversation with the President. We caught a glimpse of his triumph & crises of crippling strokes & amazing recoveries, & learned of the revolutionary ministrations of Dr. William DeVries & his fine surgical team. Most of us never really saw the family drama that unfolded behind the scenes, or the succession of ethical dilemma that confronted the Schroeder family throughout Bill's long battle for survival. Now we can read, for the first time, the family's own remarkable story.

Library events happening this week are children's story time at 10 a.m. Thursday.

SHERI GOULDY, STEPHEN ARTHO

Engagement announced

Sheri Loraine Gouldy of Amarillo and Stephen John Artho of Canyon have set Sept. 12 as their wedding date. The couple will exchange nuptials in St. Thomas The Apostle Catholic Church in Amarillo.

The bride-elect is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Gouldy of Wildorado and the prospective bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Artho of Hereford.

Miss Gouldy, a 1981 graduate of Vega High School, received an associates degree in basic business from West Texas State University. She is currently employed at Austin Dist. and Mfg. in Amarillo.

Artho, a 1980 graduate of Hereford High School, received an associates degree in computer technology from Amarillo College. He is presently employed with XL Datacomp in Amarillo.

Bicentennial committee to sponsor poster contest

The Hereford bicentennial community committee is sponsoring a poster contest with the theme "What Freedom Means To Me." Ruth Newsom is committee chairman and Jeanette Ramey is poster contest chairman.

Prizes will be awarded in two divisions: first, children up to 12 years of age; and second, ages 13-18. The winning posters will be displayed during the annual Town 'n' Country Jubilee celebration in August.

In each division, there will be a $15 for first place; $10, second; and $5, third.

Posters should be no larger than 2 ft. x 3 ft. and must be taken to the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce office by 5 p.m. Aug. 7.

RAPHAEL AND HIS CIRCLE

NEW YORK (AP)—The first major loan exhibition in America of the drawings of Raphael and his school will open at the Pierpont Morgan Library in October.

The exhibition, "Raphael and His Circle," will be shown Oct. 9-Jan. 3, 1988. The exhibition will consist of about 90 drawings by the 16th century Italian painter and his immediate followers.

The library says a group of more than 40 sheets by Raphael "documents virtually every important phase of his career and includes many of his most celebrated drawings."

Reunion scheduled

The annual Westway Reunion is scheduled for Sunday, July 26, in the Westway Community Center. All former and current residents are invited to attend.

Those planning to participate in the day's activities are asked to bring a basket lunch. Drinks and breads will be furnished.

A short program will be on the agenda. Also, special recognition will be given to the oldest and youngest persons in attendance and those who have traveled the farthest.

An honorary mayor will be named to succeed Helen Bishop, a 1986 honoree.

Blood drive set Wednesday

A blood drive will be held from 4-8 p.m. Wednesday, July 22, in the Community Center. It will be sponsored by the Women's Division of the Chamber of Commerce.

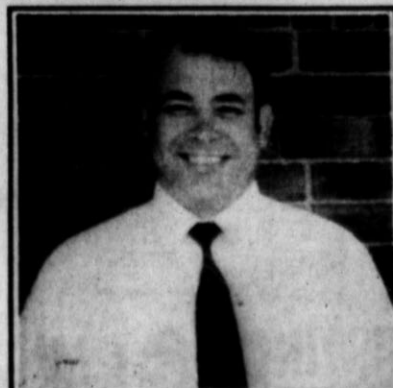

Of the 75 gifts of blood given during last month's blood drive, it is predicted that 300 different patients in 21 area hospitals will benefit.

A single bamboo root may produce as many as 100 stems.

DR. GOTT Tan safely with sunscreen

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Can I still get a nice tan if I use sunscreen? I want protection for my skin but would like a little color, too.

DEAR READER — Yes, you can tan with sunscreen. The most powerful screen, a No. 15, will prevent the sun's tanning rays from reaching your skin. However, sunscreen is marketed in weaker concentrations. Start with a No. 10 or 12; as your skin becomes adjusted, move down the number ladder. A No. 4 or 6 will probably allow you some tanning but will prevent burning or a deep tan.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I've been diagnosed as having a Baker's cyst in my knee. What is this and is surgery necessary?

DEAR READER — Each joint is covered by a thin, tough membrane called a synovium. The knee is no exception. However, at the back of the knee (the popliteal space), the synovial membrane is naturally weak. In some people, it can rupture or herniate, causing a squishy lump — called a Baker's cyst — that may or may not be painful. If the cyst is uncomfortable or so large that it interrupts blood return through the veins, it may have to be surgically removed. The operation is routine for orthopedic specialists. Not all Baker's cysts require surgery, but you may wish to consider an operation if the condition causes you to have symptoms.

DEAR DR. GOTT — When I was young, I evidently had a laceration of the penis that required stitches. When I became sexually active, problems arose. Before I quite reach the ejaculation stage, I develop severe pain and must withdraw. This has happened on each attempt. I can't discuss this with my parents or with a doctor without them finding out. What do you suggest?

DEAR READER — Of course, a doctor should find out. This is what doctors are for. Your old injury may have produced scar tissue that is painful at times. You should be examined by a urologist, who may be able to perform a simple operation to remove the scar tissue and enable you to enjoy relations.

A doctor is also trained in confidentiality, so your parents need not know. However, I would suggest that you overcome your embarrassment and talk to them about your problem. They may have information about the original injury that would help the doctor find an appropriate solution.

Dr. Gott's new Health Report on lung disease explains the causes and management of chronic lung problems. For your copy, send $1 and your name and address to P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3369. Be sure to ask for Dr. Gott's Health Report, LIVING WITH CHRONIC LUNG DISEASE.

The Newspaper BIBLE

"WE'VE SEEN STRANGE THINGS TODAY"

One day while Jesus was teaching, some Jewish religious leaders and teachers of the Law were sitting nearby. (It seemed that these men showed up from every village in all Galilee and Judea, as well as from Jerusalem.) And the Lord's healing power was upon Him.

Then--look! Some men came carrying a paralyzed man on a sleeping mat. They tried to push through the crowd to Jesus but couldn't reach Him. So they went up on the roof above Him, took off some tiles and lowered the sick man down into the crowd, still on his sleeping mat, right in front of Jesus.

Seeing their faith, Jesus said to the man, "My friend, your sins are forgiven!"

"Who does this fellow think he is?" the Pharisees and teachers of the law exclaimed among themselves. "This is blasphemy! Who but God can forgive sins?"

Jesus knew what they were thinking, and He replied, "Why is it blasphemy? Is it any harder to forgive his sins than to heal him?"

"Now I will prove My authority to forgive sin by demonstrating My power to heal disease." Then He said to the paralyzed man, "Get up, roll up your sleeping mat and go on home."

And immediately, as everyone watched, the man jumped to his feet, picked up his mat and went home praising God!

Everyone present was gripped with awe and fear. And they praised God, remarking over and over again, "We have seen strange things today."

MR. AND MRS. KRIS DEL BLACK

Vows exchanged by Myers, Black

Lamona Gay Myers of 504 Ave. I, Hereford, became the bride of Kris Del Black of Crawford, Okla., during an afternoon ceremony held July 11 in the home of her parents.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Myers of 504 Ave. I and the bridegroom is the son of Kenneth Black of Crawford, Okla. Officiant was Justice of the Peace Johnnie Turrentine.

The couple said their vows before a brass arched candelabra containing votive cup candles entwined with greenery accented with a large pink satin bow. Ficus plants flanked each side of the candelabra.

Flower girl was Konstanze Adair Vogel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Randy Vogel of Plainview. She wore a pink dotted Swiss dress topped with an organdy and lace collar. She carried a lace basket tied with pink satin ribbon and streamers.

The bride, given in marriage by her brother, Jeremy Myers wore a tea-length white linen dress with a pleated skirt, large collar enhanced by a lace border and insets at the collar and hem of the skirt. A pink satin ribbon bow tied at the waist adorned the dress.

She carried a bouquet of pink alstroemeria lilies, accented with baby's breath and leatherleaf, all tied with a pink satin bow and streamers.

To complete her ensemble, her jewelry included a gold and pearl pendant which belonged to her great-great-aunt, a single strand of pearls, and pearl and diamond earrings.

A reception followed with Tamara Vogel of Plainview, sister of the bride, serving cake and Michelle Black of Pampa, niece of the groom, serving punch and coffee.

The cake, a pink, three-tiered creation with sweetpeas draped over the side, sat atop an ecru embossed table cloth. Punch was poured from a crystal punch bowl set and was surrounded by a wreath of leatherleaf, baby's breath, and rose of Sharon blossoms.

Following a wedding trip to Monument Lake and other points in Colorado, the couple will be at home after July 16 in Crawford, Okla.

The bride, a 1982 graduate of Adrian High School, attended Clarendon Junior College and West Texas State University. She was formerly employed at Friona Farmers Coop Gin.

The bridegroom, a 1978 graduate of Groom High School, is engaged in farming and ranching at Crawford, Okla.

Out-of-town guests included Dr. and Mrs. Keith Black and Michelle of Pampa; Mrs. Connie Fulton, Stormi and Schyler of Pampa; Mr. and Mrs. Kyle Black, Kit and Millie of Amarillo; Mrs. Doyla Bell, also of Amarillo; and Mr. and Mrs. Randy Vogel and Konstanze of Plainview.

Consent for treatment important protection

By law, a physician cannot provide treatment or perform surgery unless consent is given by the patient or a person legally authorized to do so. To help make this decision, physicians are required to give patients the facts needed to make an intelligent choice. Planning ahead for consent of medical treatment can ensure patients that their wishes are clearly defined for the doctor, according to the July issue of Texas Medicine.

The article, in the official journal of the Texas Medical Association, explains that the three kinds of consent—written informed, express, and implied—apply in different situations.

In 1977, Texas law created a panel that identifies all medical treatments and surgical procedures for which patients should receive a written description of the risks and hazards. The consent for these procedures is called written informed consent. In emergency situations, consent is implied. This means that the patient does not have to give consent because his or her life may depend on immediate action by the doctor. Express consent involves deciding who can legally give consent on behalf of the patient. Different laws apply to adults and minors.

A minor is a person under the age of 18 who has never been married and who has never been declared an adult by a court. Usually, the minor's parents can give consent, and the law states that only one parent needs to give consent. If the parents are divorced though, the parent who has custody of the child during the week is the only parent who can give consent in non-emergencies.

If the parents of a minor cannot be contacted, then a grandparent, and adult brother or sister, or an adult aunt or uncle may consent for treatment, according to the article. And, by implied consent, "if medical treatment is needed for the preservation of life or limb of a child, then such attention should be given immediately regardless of whether consent has been received," writes Helene A. Alt, JD, assistant general counsel at TMA.

Sometimes, although the parents may refuse medical treatment for their child, a doctor can seek consent elsewhere. "Should a physician encounter a situation that is not an emergency but requires that prompt medical attention be given a child, then the physician should determine whether the need for treatment is such that he or she should contact the county welfare unit," writes Alt.

An adult patient usually gives his or her own permission unless an emergency warrants implied consent. However, a question arises as to the need for a spouse to approve certain operations such as sterilization procedures and abortions. The author explains, "The court states that a person does not fall within the classification of property, and, as such, a person has the right to consent to an operation if he or she chooses to do so without the consent of a spouse."

In any situation, to ensure that their wishes are understood, adult patients can designate someone to give or refuse consent on their behalf. Parents also should inform their doctor who may give consent for treatment of their child in case they cannot be reached.
